What Reyne can hold hirnous Wickedness,
When downe the Hill he holds his fierce Carriage?
We may as boostfull spend our valiue Command
Upon th'engraven Souldiers in their speyle,
As send Precepts to the Lewisian, to come a-shore.
Therefore, you men of Harlesw,
Take pitty of your Towne and of your People,
While yet your Souldiers are in my Command,
Whiles yet the coole and temperate Wind of Grace
Oblows the filthie and contagious Clouds
Of headly Murther, Spoyle, and Villany,
If not: why in a moment tooke to see
The blind and bloody Souldier, with foule hand
Desire the Locks of your thrills-finkling Daughters:
Your Fathers taken by the filver Beards,
And their moost tearend Heads dash'd to the Walls:
You naked Infants fitton upon Pykes,
While the mad Mothers, with their howles confund'd,
Do breake the Clouds up, and the Wines of Iewry,
At Herods bloody-hunting daunger-men.
What say you? When will you yeeld, and this auoyd?
Or vnguile in defence, be thus deftroy'd.

Enter Gourder.
Gourder. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dolphin, whom of Successe we entreated,
Returns vs, that his Poweres are yet not ready,
To rayle so great a Siege: Therefore great King,
We yeeld your Towne and Lives to that soft Mercy:
Enter our Gates, dispose of vs and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.
King. Open your Gates: Come Vuckle Exeter,
Goe you and enter Harlesw: there remaine,
And fortifie it strongly' gainst the French:
Vie mercy to them all, for vs deare Vackle.
The Winter comming on, and Sickleew growing
Upon our Souldiers, we will retire to Calis.
Tonight in Harlesw will we be your Guest,
To morrow for the March are we addreth.
Flourish, and enter the Towne.

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman.
Kath. Alice, in are offe in Angleterre, & in bien parlay le Language.
Alice. En peu Madame.
Kath. Le prie m'enignisz, je faut que je apprend a parler:
Comment appelez vous le main en Anglez?
Alice. Le main s't appel le Hand.
To buy a Dobby and a dusty Farne
In that neke-shotten Ille of Albion.

Conf. Dies de Battallis, where have they this mettell?
Is not their Cymasce foggy,raw, and dull?
On whom, as in delight, the Sunne lookes pale,
Killing their Fruit with frownes. Can sodden Water,
A Drench for furn-eys'd Iades, their Batly broth,
Decoct their cold blood to fuch valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood,spried with Wine,
Scenned the 2. Or, honor of our Land,
Let vs not hang like roping Jyckles
Upon our Houres Thatch, whilsts a more friolite People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poor we call them, in their Natuie Lords.

Dolphi. By Faith and Honor,
Our Madames mock at vs, and plainly say,
Our Mettell is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the Luff of English Youth,
To new-store France with Ballad Warriors.

Brit. They bid vs to the English Dancing-Schooles,
And teach Lowsities high, and Swift Carronet,
Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heels,
And that we are most lotter Run-awayes.

Rong. Where is Montoy the Herald, sped him hence,
Let vs to France, and with our Horse defiance,
Vp Princes, and with spirit of Honour edged,
More sharper then your Swords,high to the field:
Charles de Robreth, High Constable of France,
You Dukes of Orleance, Barkon, and of Berry,
A. Allen, Braban, Bar, and Burgenie,
Louris Castillon, Ramurter, Fundemex,
Montoy, the excellent Princes Bardolphs of Roan,
Loy, Leflrate, Buicapul, and Charsley.
High Dukes, great Princes, Baron, Lords, and Kings;
For your great Seats,now quit you of great Shames:
Barre Harry England, that you steepes through our Land
With Penons painted in the blood of Harpew:
Ruth on his Horse, doth melt the melted Snow
Upon the Valleys, whole low Valfall Seat,
The Alps doth Git, and void his thewse upon.
Goe downe upon him, you haue Power enough,
And in a Captive Chariot, into Roan
Bring him your Prisoner.

Conf. This becomes the Great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His Souldiers sick, and famifie in their March:
For I am sure, when he shall fee our Army,
Heelle drop his heart into the lack of scare,
And for thevtechement,esier vs his Ranfome.

King. Therefore Lord Constable, haft on Montoy,
And let him say to England, that we fend,
To know what willing Ransome he will give.
Prince Dolphi, you shall try it with vs in Roan.
Dolphi. Not so, I doe beseech your Maiestie,
King. Be patient, for you shall remaine with vs.
Now forth Lord Constable, and Princes all,
And quickly bring vs word of England fall.

Enter Captaine, English, and Welch, Gower and Fluellen.

Gower. How now Captaine Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?
Flu. I assure you there is very excellent Services commanded at the Bridge.
Gower. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?
Flu. Ths Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Aga-

Flu. Here is the man.

Psal. Captain, I thee beseech to doe me favour:
the Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.
Flum. I prays God, and I have merited some loue at his hands.

Psal. Bardolph, a Souldier firme and found of heart, and of bosome valour, hath by cruell Fate, and giddie Fortunes furious fickle Wheels, that Goddefe blinde, that stands upon the rolling restlesse Stone.

Flu. By your patience, amnicht Psall. Fortune is pained blinde, with a Muffer afore his eyes, to signifie too, that Fortune is blinde; and Fortune is painted also with a Wheel, to signifie to you, which is the Morall of it, that Fate is turning and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, looke you, is fixt upon a Spherical Stone, that rolleth, and rowlere, and rowlere;
in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description of Fortune: Fortune is an excellent Morall.

Enter Captaine Psall, I doe partly understand your meaning.

Psal. Why me reioyce therefore.
Flu. Certainly Amnicht, it is not a thing to reioyce at:
for, if youk, you were my Brother, I would define the Duke to vie his good pleasire, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be vifed.
Psal. Dye, and be damned, and frye for thy friendship.
Flu. It is well.

Psal. The Figgie of Spaine.
Lit. Very good.

Gower. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Raflall, I remember him now: a bawd, a Gut-purse.

Flu. It affore you, a wicked as prause words at the Bridge, as you shall fee in a Summers day: but it is very well what he ha's spokto me, that is well I warrant you,
when time is seere.

Gower. Why 'tis a Guilla, Foole, a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Wares, to grace himselfe at his returne into London, under the forme of a Souldier: and such fellowes are perfec in the Great Commanders Name, and they will learne you by rote where Servises were done; at such and such a Scene, at such a Breach, at such a Convoy: who came off brashly, who was ftoet, who disgraced,what termes the Enemy flood on: and they come perfecly in the phraze of Ware; which they tricke up with new-tuned Oaths: and what a Beard of the Generals Cut, and a horrid Suite of the Campe, will doe among fomong Bottles, and Ale-wafth Wits, is wonderfull to be thought on: but you must learne to know such flanders of the age, or else you may be marcellously mislooked.

Flt. I tell you what, Captaine Gower: I doe perceiue he is not the man that bee would gladly make them to the World bee is: if I finde a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my minde: hearke you, the King is comming, and I must speake with him from the Pridge.

*******

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and his poore Souleides.

Flt. God pleafe your Maiestie.

King. How now Fluellen, canst thou from the Bridge?

Flt. I do pleafe your Maiestie: The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintaine the Pridge; the French is gone off, loose you, and there is gallant and most prauie pasages: marry, that atheruere was haue possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retyre, and the Duke of Exeter is Maiest of the Pridge: I can tell your Maiestie, the Duke is a praue man.

King. What men have you loft, Fluellen?

Flt. The pertition of that atheruere haue beene very great, reasonable great: marry for my part, I thinke the Duke hath loft neuer a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maiestie know the man: his face is all bubeckles and whealke, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lipes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coale of fire, some times plew, and some times red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

King. Wee would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrie, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pay'd for: none of the French vprayed or abused in dildainfull Language; for when Lestie and Crueltie play for a Kingdom, the gentle Gameletter is the foolisht winner.

Flt. Enter Mountjoy.

Mountjoy. You know me by my habit.

King. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mountjoy. My Maiesties mind.

King. Unfold it.

Mountjoy. Thus saith my King: Say thou to Harry of England, though we flewe'd dead, we did but sleepe: Advantag is a better Soultier then all. Tell him, wee could have rebuked him at Hastings, but that wee thought not good to bruife an innocient, till it were full ripe. Now we speake upon our Q, and your voyce is imperial: England shall repent his folly, fee his weake-nerfe, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore confider of his randome, which must proportion the losse we have borne, the subiects we have lost, the disgrace we have digg'd; which in weight to re-awante, his pettinefe would bow ynder. For our losse, his Exchequer is too poore; for the effusion of our blood, the Moffer of his Kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his owne person kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worth-leffe satisfaction. To this adde deffeance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose commision is pronounc'd: So farre my King and Maiest, so inuch my Office.

Mountjoy. What is thy name? I know thy qualitie.

Mountjoy. King. Thou doo't thy Office fairely, Turne thee back, and tell thy King, I doe not fecke him now, but could be willing to march on to Callice, Without impeachment: for to say the truth, 'tis no wildome to conquifie so much Vnto an enemy of Craft and Vantage, My people are with ficknefe much embesseled, My numbers lefser'd: and those few I have, Almost no better then so many French: Who when they were in health, I tell thee Heralds, I thought, upon one payre of English Legges Did march three Frencemen. Yet forgive me God, That I doe bragge thus: this your syre of France Hath blowne that wise in me. I musit repent; Goe therefore tell thy Maiest, here I am;

My Ransome, is this frayle and worthleffe Tranke; My Army, but a weake and sickly Guard:
Yet God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himselfe, and such another Neighbor Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountjoy, Goe bid thy Mafter well aduife himselfe.

If we may paffe, we will: if we be hindred,
We shall your tannie ground with your red blood Discolour: and to Mountjoy, face you well.
The summe of all our Answer is but this: We would not fecke a Battali as we are, Nor as we are, we say we will not than it:
So tell your Maiest.

Mountjoy. I shall deliver so: Thanks to your Highnes.

Glosse. I hope they will not come upon us now.

King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, nor in theirs: March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night, Beyond the River we'll encamppe our felues,
And on to morrow bid them march away, Extant.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Rambour, Ordinance, Dolphins, with others.

Conf. Tut, I have the best Armour of the World: would it were day.

Ordeance. You haue an excellent Armour: but let my Horfe haue his due.

Conf. It is the best Horfe of Europe.

Ordeance. Will it never be Morning?

Dolph. My Lord of Ordinance, and my Lord High Constable, you talk of Horfe and Armour?

Ordeance. You are as well prouided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horfe with any that treads but on fourre postures: ch'a: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrails were hayeres: le Chenaud volanta, the Pegatis, ob the marines de feu. When I bestride him, I loake, I am a Hawke: he trots the syre: the Earth fings, when he touches it: the baseft horfe of his hoofe, is more Musickall then the Pipe of Hermes.

Ordeance. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perfons: hee is pure Ayre and Fire; and the effential Elements of Earth and Water neuer appear in him, but onely in patient fillinesse while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horfe, and all other Jades you may call Beasts.
The Life of Henry the First.

Conf. Indeed my Lord, it is a most absolute and excellent Horse.

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orleance. No more Cousin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot from the riling of the Larke to the lodging of the Lambe, variue deferred prayse on my Palfray: it is a Theame as fluent as the Sea. Turne the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subiect for a Soueraigne to reason on, and for a Soueraigne Soueraigne to ride on: And for the World, familiar to vs, and vkwonowe, to lay apart their particular Functions, and wonder at him, once write a Sonnet in his praise, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I haue heard a Somn begin so to ones Mistreffe.

Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my Cousier, for my Horse is my Mistreffe.

Orleance. Your Mistreffe bears well.

Dolph. Me well, which is the preffcript prayse and perfection of a good and particular Mistreffe.

Conf. Nay, for me thought yesterdye your Mistreffe shrewhly shooke your back.

Dolph. So perhapes did yours.

Conf. Mine was not bullied.

Dolph. O then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode like a Serue of Ireland, your French Horse off, and in your first Stroffers.

Conf. You have good judgement in Horseman-ship.

Dolph. Be won'd by me then: they that ride so, and ride not wantily, fall into foule Boggs: I had rather have my Horse to my Mistreffe.

Conf. I had at late haue my Mistreffe a Tail.

Dolph. I tell thee Confiable, my Mistreffe weares his owne hayre.

Conf. I could make as true a bault as that, if I had a Sow to my Mistreffe.

Dolph. Le chien est retourne, je m'en servis au besoin.

Conf. In this case an hour should make as much of any thing.

Conf. Yet doe I not warie my couple for my Mistreffe, or any thing Proverb, so little kin to the purpole.

Remb. My Lord Confiable, the Armour that I saw in your Tent to night, are thefe Stannes of Sunnes upon it.

Conf. Stare my Lord.

Dolph. Some of them will fall to morrow, I hope.

Conf. And yet my Sky shall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you bear a many superflu-ously, and there more honore were away.

Conf. Even as your Horse bears your prayses, who would trott as well, were some of your braggis dismoun-ted.

Dolph. Would I were able to loose him with his de- fect. Will it scarce be day? I willt trott to morrow a mile, and my very selfe be paied with English Faces.

Conf. It will encrea multiply, for there should be face out of my way, but I would it were morning, for I would finebe about the faces of the English.

Remb. Who will goe to hazarde with me for twentie Prisoners?

Conf. You must stauffe goe your felle to hazarde, ere you haue them.

Dolph. This Mid-night, he goe some my felle.

Orleance. The Dolphine songs for mourning.

Ramb. He longs to eate the English.

Conf. I think he will eate all he kills.

Orleance. By the white Hand of my Lady, hee's a gallant Prince.

Conf. Swear by her Foot, that she may tread our the Oath.

Orleance. He is simply the most aduiz Gentlemen of France.

Conf. Doing is actitious, and he will still be doing.

Orleance. He neuer did harme, that I heard of.

Conf. Nor will doe none to morrow: hee will keep that good name still.

Orleance. I know him to be valiant.

Conf. I was told that, by one that knowes him better then you.

Orleance. What's hee?"
Orchide. Now entertain't conteitice of a time, When creeping Murmurre and the poring Darke Falls the wise Visells of the Vintners. From Camp to Camp, through the foule Womb of Night The humme of eyer Army Philip sounds; That the five Centurias almost receive, The secret Whispers of each others Watch, Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames Each Battale fees the others victors face. Steed threats Steed, in high and boatfull Neighs Piercing the Nights dull Ear: and from the Tents, The Armourers accomplishing the Knights, With buske Hammers coldly headers vp, Glue dreadfull noise of preparation, The Country Cocks doe crow, the Cocks doe towle: And the third hoorve of drowse Morning mannd, Proud of their Numbers, and segure in Soule, The confident and outer-luffe French, Doe the low-rated English play at Dice; And chide the treple-tardy-gasted Night, Who like a foule and ougly Witch doth limpe So tedious away. The poore condemned English, Like Sterfices, by their watchfull Fires Sit patientely, and only ruminate The Mornings danger: and their felace fail, Iuetting lank-leane Checkess, and Waste-worne Costs, Prefented them into the gazing Moon. So many horrid Ghosts. O now, I will behold The Royall Captain of this rustfull Band. Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent, Let him cry, Prayle and Glory on his head: For forth he goes, and visits all his Host. Bids them good morrow with a meddle Smyle, And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countrymen. Upon his Royall Place there is no note, How dreed an Army hath enroosed him; Nor doth he dedicate one int of Colour. Vnto the warrie and all-watchted Night: But freshely lookers, and outer-beates Attaint, With chearefull semblance, and sweet Maecielie: That every Wretch, pining and pale before, Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Lookes, A laughe without fail, like the Sunne, His liberal Eyes doth give to every one, Thawing cold fears, that means and gentle Behold, as may vnworthinesse define. A little touch of Harry in the Night, And so our Scene mutt to the Bataille flye: Where, O for pity, we shall much disgrace, With frome or fine most vile and ragged joyful, (Right ill dispos'd, in bravile ridiculous)

Achus Tertius.

The Life of Henry the Fist.

1st. but the English are thorough out of Beef. Concl. Then shall we finde, morrow, they have only flankers to esce, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm our selves, shall we about it? Orclude. It is now two Clock: but let me see, by ten Wee shall have each a hundred English men, Execut.

The Name of Agincourt: Yet fit and fee, Minding true things, by what their Mockries bee. Exie.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucester.

King. Glofler, tis true that we are in great danger, The greater therefore should our Courage be. God morrow Brother Bedforl: God Almighty, There is some foule of goodnesse in things euill, Would men obtrusingly dishill it out. For our bad Neighbour makes us easily flitter, Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry. Besides, they are our outward Conferences, And Preachers to vs all; admonifhing, That we should drefle vs fairly for our end. Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed, And make a Morall of the Duelle himselfe.

Enter Englands.

Good morrow old Sir Thomas Englands: A good lost Pillow for that good white Head, Were better then a churchfull curse of France. Erping. Not to my Liege, this Lodging likes me better, Since I may lay, now byt I like a King.

King. 'Tis good for men to lose their present paints, Upon example, so the Spirit is eas'd: And when the Mind is quickned, out of doubt The Orains, though distant and dead before, Break vp their deuice Grace and newly moue With called flouge, and first ilegetie.

Lend me thy Cloake Sir Thomas: Brothers both, Commend me to the Princes in our Campes; Doe my good morrow to them, and anon Desire them all to my Pavillion.

Gloufher. We shall, my Liege, Erping. Shall I attend your Grace? King. No, my good Knight: Goe with my Brothers to my Lords of England: I and my Boforme must debate a while, And then I would no other company.

King. God a mercy old Heart, thou speakest cheerfully. Enter Piffall.

Piff. Can you say it? King. A friend. Piff. Discurfe unto me, art thou Officer, or art thou bale, common, and popular? King. I am a Gentleman of a Company. Piff. Tray'll thou the purisant Dyke? King. Elen fo: what are you? Piff. As good a Gentleman as the Emperor. King. Then you are a better than the King. Piff. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold, A Lad of Life, an Impe of Fame, of Parents good, of Fift most valiant I kife his dudgeio Face, and from heart'ring I love the lovely Bully. What is thy Name? King. Harry the Rey. Piff. Le Rey's Cornish Name; art thou of Cornish Crew? King. No, I am a Welshman. Piff. Know'th thou Gwelben? King. Yes.

Piff. Tell him Ile knock his Lecke about his Paste upon S. Douwe day. King. Doe not you wear your Dagger in your Cappe that day, leat he knock that about yours.

The Life of Henry the Fift.

Pep. Are thou his friend?
King. And his kinsman too.
Pep. The Fleepe for thee then.
King. I thank you: God be with you.
Pep. My name is Fleepe Child.
Exit. King.
It forts well with your fierce nesse.

Enter Flourish and Gower.

Gower. Captaine Flamell.

Flour. 'So, in the name of Jefus Chrift, speake fwerer: it is the greateft admiration in the univerfl World, when the true and anfracent Prerogatives and Laws of the Warres is not kept: if you would take the pains but to examine the Warres of Pompas lhe great, you fhall finde, I warrant you, that there is no fiddle tone nor pufible baile in Pompas Camp: I warrant you, you fhall finde the Ceremonies of the Warres, and the Cute of it, and the Formes of it, and the Subfie of it; and the Modelle of it, to be otherwife.

Gower. Why the Enemy is lowed, you hear him all Night.

Flour. If the Enemy be an Affe and a Foole, and a prafting Coxcombe; is it meet, think you, that wee fhould alfo, looke you, be an Affe and a Foole, and a prafting Coxcombe, in your owne conftance now?

Gower. I will fpeakfe lower.

Flour. I pray you, and beleech you, that you will. Exit. King.
Though it appeare a little out of fafion, There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter three Souleiers, John Bates, Alexander Courts, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the Morning which breakes yonder?
Bates. I think it be, but wee have no great caufe to defire the approach of day.
Williams. Wee fee yonder the beginning of the day, but I think wee fhall never fee the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A Friend.

Williams. Vnder what Captaine ferve you?
King. Vnder Sir John Erpingham.
Williams. A good old Commander, and a moft kinde Gentleman: I pray you, what thinkes he of our estate?
King. Even as men wrack upon a Sand, that looke to be walk off the next Tyde.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King.

King. No: mor it is not meet he fhould: for though I fpeak it to you, I think the King is but a man, as I am; the Violet smels to him, as it doth to me; the Element fhews to him, as it doth to me; all his Senses have but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies layd by, in his Nacked he appears but a man: and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they floape, they floape with the like wing: therefore, when he fees the raiion of fears, as we do; his fears, out of doubt, be of the fame raiion as ours are: yet in reason, no man fhould poffeffe him with any appearance of fear; left he, by fhewing it, fhould dis-hearten his Army.

Bates. He may flow what overward courage he will: but I beleue, as cold a Night as this, hee could with himsfelfe in Thames up to the Neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, fo we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will fpeak my conftance of the King: I thinke bee would not with himfelfe any where, but where hee is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alones, so he fhould be sure to be rafonned, and a many poor men lyes faued.

King. I dare fay, you loue him not fo ill, to wit him here alone: howioever you fhpeak this to feele other mens minds, me thinkes I could not dye any where fo contented, as in the kings company, his Caufe being laufi, and his Quarell honorables.

Williams. That is more then we know.

Bates. For more then wee fhould fecke after, for we know enough, if wee know we are the Kings Subjects; if his Caufe be wrong, our obedience to the King wipe the Cryme of it out of vs.

Williams. But if the Caufe be not good, the King himself hath a heauen Reichonning to make, when all thofe Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chopp'd off in a Batallie, fhall joinne together at the latter day, and cry all, Wee dyed at fuch a place, fome fwearinge, some crying for a Suf- fume; fome upon their Wifes, left poore behind them; fome upon the Debas they owe, fome upon their Children fairly left. I am afear'd, there are fewe dye well, that dye in a Batallie. But how can they chauncely difpose of any thing, when Blood it their argument? Now, if their men doe not dye well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it; who to difobey, were against all proportion of subiection.

King. So, if a Sonne that is by his Father fent about Merchandize, doe finfully miftake upon the Sea; the imprefion of the wicked caufe, by your rule, fhould be impofed upon his Father that fent him: and a Servant, under his Masters command, transporting a fumme of Money, be affayled by Robbers, and dye in many ineconct Inquiries; you may call the bufineffe of the Matter the author of the Servants damnation: but this is not fo.

The King is not bound to anfwer the particular endings of his Souleiers, the Father of his Sonne, nor the Master of his Servant; for they purpofe not their death, when they purpofe their fervices. Besides, there is no King, be his Caufe never fo spotles, if it come to the attignment of Swords, can trye it out with all vertifed Souleiers: some (peraduenture) have on them the guilt of premeditated and condured Murder; fome, of befugg- ing Virgins with the broken Scales of Fortune; fome, in making the Warres their Subwarke, or if by fome re- gled the gentle Bofome of the are with Pallage and Robber- rie. Now, if these men iue defeated the Law, and out- runne Nature punifhment; though they can out-fripe men, they have no wings to flye from God. Warre is his Beadle, Warre is his Vengeance: fo that here men are punifhed, for before break of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrell: where they fteened the death, they have borne life away; and where they would be safe, they perifh. Then if they dye unprompted, no more is the King guiltie of their damnation, then hee was before guiltie of those Impieties, for the which they are now vifted. Every Subiefts Dutie is the Kings, but every Subiefts Soule is his owne. Therefore fhould every Souleier in the Warres doe as every fick man in his Bed, with every Man Moth out of his Confequence: and dying fo, Death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was bleffedly loft, wherein fuch preparation was gayered: and in him that escapes, it were not finne to thinke, that making God fo free an offer, he let him outlive that day, to fee his Greatnesse; and to teach others how they fhould prepare.
The Life of Henry the First.

IV. i. 200—329

Enter Epiphanium.

Erp. My Lord, your Nobles jealous of your absence, Seek ye through your Campe to find you:

King. Good old Knight, collect them all together

At my Tent: I'll be before thee,

Erp. I shall do't, my Lord.

King. O God of Dauntles, free my Soulsiders hearts,
Poffeile them not with faire: Take from them now

The fence of reckning of th'opposed numbers:
Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord,
O not to day, thinke not upon the fault
My Father made, in compaing the Crowne.

I Richards body have interred new,
And on it he bellowed more contrite tears,
Then from it flowed forceful drops of blood.

Five hundred poore I have in yeerly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold vp

Toward Heaven, to pardon blood:
Aid I have built two Chaunties,
Where the sad and solene Priefts sing still
For Richards Soule. More will I doe:

Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth;
Since that my Penitence comes after all,
Imploiring pardon.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. My Liege.

King. My Brother Gloucester's voice? I:

I know thy errand, I will goe with thee:
The day, my friend, and all things stay formed.

Exit.
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Enter the Dolphin, Orleance, Ramurres, and Beaumont.

Orleance. The Sunne doth gild our Armour vp, my Lords.
Orleance. Ob'raute Spirit.
Dolph. Fa'let yer et terre.
Orleance. Run pas se air de feu.
Dolph. Cein, Couin Orleance. Enter Confiable.

Now my Lord Confiable?
Conf. Hearke how our Streedes, for present Service neig.
Dolph. Mount them, and make junction in their Hides,
That their blood may spin in English eyes,
And doubt them with superfluous courage sa ha.
Ram, What wil you have them weep our Horiz blood?
How shall we then behold their natural teares?
Enter Melfong.

Melfong. The English are embattail'd, you French Peers.
Conf. To Horiz you gallant Princes, straight to Horiz.
Doe but behold yond peare and letter Band,
And your faire swall shew lack away their Soules,
Leaving them but the skiles and huskes of men.
There is not warke enough for all our hands,
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly Veines,
To giue each naked Courage a flame.
That our French Gallants shhall to day draw out,
And sheath for lack of sport. Let vs but blow on them,
The vapour of our Valour will o'retume them.
Tis positio against all exceptions, Lords,
That our superfluous Laequies, and our Peants,
Who in vanncelliarion action warwe
About our Squares of Battale, were enow
To purge this field of such a bloodling Foe;
Though we upon this Mountains Battay,
Tooke land for idle speculation:
But that our Honours muft not, What's to say?
A very little little let vs doe,
And all is done: then let the Trumpets sound
The Tucket Soundance, and the Note to mount:
For our approach shall so much dare the field,
That England shall couche downe in feare, and yeeld.
Enter Grandgrees.

Grandgrees. Why do you stay so long, my Lords of France?
Yond Iland Carrions, depreate of their bones,
Ill-favoredly become the Morning field:
Their ragt Curtains poorley are let loofe,
And our Ayre shakes them paffing scornfully,
Bigge MARS, stemes banquit out in their begger d Hoast,
And faintly through a ruffie Beater peepes,
The Horsemen, for like fixed Candelstucks,
With Torches-braues in their hands: and their poore lades
Lob downe their heads, dropping the hides and hips:
The gummes downe roping from their pale-dead eyes,
And in their pale dull mouthes the Jynold Bitt
Lyes foule with chaw'd-graffe, still and motionleefe,
And their executors, the kaffush Crowes,
Flye of them all impatient for their howre.
Description cannot fite it felte in words,
To demonstrate the Life of such a Battale,
In life fo luicelife, as it fhev'es it felte.
Conf. They have paid their prayers,
And they fay fry for death.
Dolph. Shall we goe fend them Dinners, and feath Sutes,
And giue their fafting Horiz Prouender,
And after fight with them?
Conf. I fly but for my Guard: on
To the field, I will the Banner from a Trumpet take,
And we is for my haife. Come, come away,
The Sunne is high, and we out weare the day.
Exit.

Enter Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Erpingham with all his Hoast: Salisbury, and Woflermand.

Glou. Where is the King?
Bedf. The King himelfe is rode to view their Bataile.
Wofl. Of fighting men they haue three thousand.
Exe. There's five to one, besides they all are freeth.
Salb. Gods Arme strike with vs, its a fearfull odder.
God buy you Princes all; He to my Charge:
If we no more mett, till we meet in Heauen;
Then joyfully, my Noble Lord of Bedford,
My dear Lord Glouceter, and my good Lord Exeter,
And my kind Kniman, Warriors all, adieu.
Bedf. Farwell good Salisbury, & good luck go with thee;
And yet I doe thee wrong, to mind thee of,
For thou art fram'd of the firme truth of valor.
Exe. Farwell kind Lord: fight valiantly to day.
Bedf. He is as full of Valour as of Kindneffe,
Princely in both.
Enter the King.
Wesl. O that we now had here
But one thousand of trustie men in England,
That doe no worke to day.
Keg. What's he that wishes so?
My Cousin Woflermand. Nanny faire Cousin:
If we are marke to dye, we are now
To doe our Countrie loffe: and if to harr,
The fewe men, the greater flare of honour.
Gods would, pray thee with not one man more.
By Iove, I am not courteous for Gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my caft:
It yentes me not, if meu my Garments weare;
Such outward thinges dwell not in my defires.
But if it be a finne to courte Honor,
I am the most offending Soule alive,
No faith, my Couser, with not a man from England:
Gods peace, I would not looke to great an Honor,
As one man more me thinkes would flaire from me,
For the belf hope I have, O, doe not with one more;
Rather proclaine it (Woflermand) through my Hoast,
That he which hath no flomack to this fight,
Let him depart, his Pasport shal be made,
And Crownes for Comoy put into his Purse:
We would not dye in that mans companie,
That feares his fellowship, to dye with vs.
This day is call'd the Feast of Criptian:
He that out-lies this day, and comes safe home,
Will fland a tip-toe when this day is named,
And rowse him at the Name of Criptian.
He that shall fee this day, and live old age,
Will yeere orly on the Vigil feath his neighbours,
And fay, to morrow is Saint Criptian.
Then will be fripp his fleue, and thew his skates;
Old men forget, yet all shall be forgot:
But hee'll remember, with advantages,
What feasts he did that day. Then shall our Names,
Familiar in his mouth as houehold words,

Harry
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester, Be in their flowing Cups freely remembered.

This flow'ry shall the good man teach his sonne: And Cirse me Cuffion shall ye goe by, From this day to the end of the World, But we in it shall be remembered; We fea, we happy few, we band of brothers: For he to day that dyes his blood with me, Shall be my brother: be he're fo vile, This day shall gentlle his Condition. And Gentlemen in England, now a bed, Shall think the richness sects if they were not here; And hold their Manhoods cheape, whiles any speakeus, That fought with us upon Saint Crispen's day.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. My Swerceign Lord, bellow your felspe with speed: The French are bravenely in their bataile set, And will with all experience charge on vs.

King. All things are ready, if our minds be fo.

King. Thou doft not with more helpe from England, Cousin?

King. God's will, my Lige, would you and I alone, Without more helpe, could figh this Royall bataile.

King. Why now thou faint viniwhifte thee thousand men: Which likes me better, then to wifh vs one. You know your places: God be with you all.

Tucket. Enter Mowbray.

Mow. Once more I come to know of thee King Harry, If for thy Ranfome thou wilt now compound, Before thy moft aflured Queretowers; For certainly, thou art fo near the Gulfe, Thou need'st must be englutted. Befides in mercy The Conftable defires thee, thou wilt mind Thy fellows of Repentance; that their Soules May make a peacefull and a sweet retyre From off thefe fields where(wherettes) their poore bodies Muft lye and fete.

King. I pray thee bear my former Anfwers back: Bid them achttch me, and then fell my bones. Good God, why should they mock poore fellows thus? The man that once did fell the Lyons skin While the befit luf't, was kill'd with hunting him. A many of our bodies fhall no doubt Find Nathe Graues: upon the which, I troft Shall winne late in Braffe of this dayes worke, And tho'to that leave their valiant bones in France, Dying like men, though buryed in your Dunghills, They fhall be famd: for there the Sun fhall greet them, And draw their honors seeking vp to Heauen, Leaving their earthly parts to choose your Clyme, The fhew whereof shall breed a Plague in France.

Marke then abounding valour in our Englifh: That being dead, like to the bullets craffing, Break out into a fcond course of mufficfe, Killing in relapse of Mortalitie. Let me fpeake provedly: Tell the Conftable, We are but Warriors for the working day: Our Grenfull and our Gibbet all be murther With raynte Marching in the painfull field, There's not a piece of Feather in our Hoof: Good argument: (I hope) we will not flye: And time hath wrought vs into follemne.

But by the Maffe, our hearts are in the trim: And my poore Souldiers tell me, yet ere Night,

They'll be in brefter Robes, or they will pluck The gay new Coats of the French Souldiers heads, And turne them into Service. If they do this,

As if God pleas, they shall, my Ranfome then Will foon be leyued.

Herald, fawe thou thy labour: Come thou no more for Ranfome, gentile Herald, They fhall have none, I fware, but thefe my joynts:

Which if they have, as I will leave v'n them, Shall yeeld them little, tell the Conftable.

Mow. I fhall, King Harry. And fo fay thee well:

Thou neuer fhall hear Herald any more. Exit.

King. I fear thou wilt once more come againe for a Ranfome.

Enter Turke.

Turke. My Lord,moft humbly on my knee I begge The leading of the Vaward.

King. Take it, braue Turke.

Now Souldiers march away,

And how thou pleafest God, dispose the day. Exeunt.

Alain. Escourfants,

Enter Piffell, French Souldier, Boy.

Piff. Yeldl Curre,

French. Je prefe que vous efef le Gentilhomme de bon qua-litere.

Piff. Qualitie calme culture me, Art thou a Gentleman? What is thy Name? defcuife.

French. O Saigneur Dien.

Piff.* O Saigneur Deve should be a Gentlemens: perpeld my words O Saigneur Deve, and make: O Saigneur Deve, thou dyest on point of Fox , except O Saigneur thou doce give to me egregous Ranfome.

French. O prenez infercndec aye prie de moy.

Piff. May shall not lerne, I will have fortie Mynes: for I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in droppe of Creffon blood.

French. Eff il impossifble d'efchapper le force de ton bras.

Piff. Braffe. Cure thou damned and luxurious Moun-taine Goats, effe'tl me Braffe.

French. O perdone moy.

Piff. Say'ft thou me fo? is that a Tonne of Mynes? Come hither boy, ask me this flame in French what is his Name.

Boy. Enfant comment eftes vous appele?

French. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He fayes his Name is M.Fer.

Piff. M.Fer: ile fer me, and firke him, and ferret him: defcuife the fame in French into him.

Boy. I doe not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke.

Piff. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his threat.

French. Quoi dit il Monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande a vous dire que vous faie vous preuf, car ce coldat icy eff difpo'de de couper votre gorge.

Piff. Ovy, cuppele gorge permayfo peffant, vnfele thou glu me Crownes, braue Crownesor mangled fhal thou be by this my Sword.

French. O le vous faupre pour l'amour de Dieu ma par-donner, le fuit le Gentilhomme de bon maifon, gaude non vive, & le vous donneray devez cent avens.

Piff. What are his words?

Bay, He
Boy. He prays you to save his life, he is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his ransom he will give you two hundred Crownes.

King. Lives he good Nuncle; thrice within this house I saw him downe; thrice vp againe, and fighting, From Helme to the spurre, all blood he was.

Exe. In which array (brave Soldier) doth he ly, Larding the plaine: and by his bloody side, (Yorkes-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds) The Noble Earl of Suffolke all lyes. Suffolke first dyed, and Yorke all baged over Comes to him, where in gore he lay inflam'd, And takes him by the Beard, kisses the fagges That bloodyl did yawe upon his face. He eyes aloud; Tarry my Cofin Suffolke, My Soule shall thinke heeke company to heaven: Tarry (toret soule) for mine, then flye a-brest: As in this glorious and well-foughten field We kept together in our Chusrialie. Upon these words I came, and cheer'd him vp, He finil'd me in the face, raught me his hand, And with a feeble gripe, says: Deere my Lord, Command my servitute to my Soueraigne, So did he turne, and our Suffolkes necke He throwed his wounded arme, and kill his lippes, And to espoit's to death, with blood hee land A Testament of Noble-ending-loue: The prettie and sweet manner et forc'd Those waters from me, which I would have stop'd, But I had not so much of man in me, And all my mother came into mine eyes, And gave me vp to teares.

Boy. I blame you not, For hearing this, I must perforce conclud With mixful eyes, or they will influe to. But heare, what new alarmus is this fame? The French haue re-entered their foster'd men: Then evry fouldour kill his Prisoners, Give the word through.

Enter Cawfable, Oracie, Burnon, Dolphi, and Kamburs.

Can. O Diabe.

Orl. O signeuer the loor and perdice, tose and perdice.

Dol. Alas Damen ma se, all is confoundall, Reproach, and everlasting flame Sits mocking in our Plumes. A hort Alarmus. O me. Alas haste fortune, do not runne away.

Can. Why all our ranks are broke.

Dol. O perishable flame, let's stab our felows: But there the wretches that we plaid at dice for.

Orl. Is this the King we seek too, for his ransom? Bor. Shame, and eternall flame, nothing but flame, Let vs dye in once more backe againe, And he that will not follow Burnon now, Lechim go hence, and with his cap in hand Like a sad Pandar hold the Chamber doores; Whilst a bale flaye, no gentler then my dogge, His fairt daughter is contaminated.

Can. Disorder that hath spoyl'd vs, friend vs now, Let vs on heapes go offer vp our looves.

Orl. We are now yet living in the Field, To soother vp the Englishe in our throug, If any order might be thought upon.

Bor. The diuell take Order now, ile to the throng; Let life be short, the flame will be too long. Exit.

Armifer. Enter the King and his traine, with Prisoners.

King. Well haue we done, thrice valiant Countrimen, But all is not done, yet keep the French the field.

Exe. The D. of York commends him to your Maiestie.
The Life of Henry the First.

Km. I tell thee truly Herald, I know not if the day be ours or no, For yet a many of your horsemen please, And I gallop ore the field.
Her. The day is yours.
Km. Praised be God, and not our strength for it: What is this Cattle call’d that stands hard by.
Her. They call it Agincourt, King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Christ’s Crjstmas.
Fla. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an’t please your Majesty) and your great Uncie Edward the Placke Prince of Wales, as I have read in the Chronicles, fought a most proue battel here in France.
Km. They did Finshon.
Fla. Your Majesty savyes very true: If your Maiesties is remembred of it, the Welches did good service in a Garden where Leekes did grow, wearing Leckes in their Monmouth caps, which your Majesty know to this hour is an honourable badge of the feruce: And I do beleue your Majesty takes no scorn to weare the Lecke ypon S. Tanies day.
King. I weare it for a memorable honor: For I am Welsh you know good Countizman.
Fla. All the water in Wye, cannot wash your Maiesties Welth blood out of your body, I can tell you that: God pleffe it, and preferre it, as long as it pleaseth his Grace, and his Maiestie too.
Km. Thankest good my Countizmen.
Fla. By Ibelu, I am your Maiesties Countizman, I care not who know it: I will conffe it to all the Orid, I need not to be ashamed of your Maiestie, praiied be God so long as your Maiestie is an honett man.
King. Good keepe me fo.
Enter Williams.
Our Heralds go with him, Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hithe,
Exe. Souldier, you must come to the King.
Km Souldier, why wasn’t thou that. Glouces thy Cappe?
Exe. And I please your Maiestie, tis the gage of one that I should fight with half, I be alue.
Kin. An Englishman?
Wtl. And I please your Maiestie, a Rascal that wagge’d with me last night: who if alue, and ever dare to challenge this Glouce, I have sworn to take him a box half his head: or if I can see my Glouce in his cappe, which he wore as he was a Souldier he would weare(if alue) I will strike it out soundly.
Kin. What thinke you Captaine Flueiden, is it fit this souldier keepe his oath.
Fla. He is a Crazien, and a Villainne elle, and please your Maiestie in my confession.
King. It may bee, his enemy is a Gentleman of great fort quite from the answere of his degree.
Flu. Though he be as good a lenteeman as the dueel is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himselfe, it is necessarie (locke your Grace) that he keepe his vow and his oath: If hee bee periu’d (see you now) his reputation is as arrant a villainne and a lacke Lawe, as euer his blacke shoos trodd vpun Gods ground, and his earth, in my confession law
King. Then keep thee woy sirrah, when thou meett the fellows.
Wtl. So, I wil my Liege, as I lute.
King. Who for’t thou vnder?

A M a t i c. Enter King Harry and Barbon with pricers.

King. I was not angry since I came to France, Vntill this instant. Take a Trumpet Herald, Ride thou unto the Horsemen on yond hill: If they will fight with vs, bid them come downe, Or voyde the field: they do offend our fight, If they’d do neither, we will come to them, And make them skier away, as swift as fones Enforced from the old Affyrnian fings. Before, weill cut the throats of those we hate, And not a man of them that we shall take, Stall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter Mioncy.
Exe. Here comes the Herold of the French, my Liege
Glo. His eyes are humberl then they ve’d to be.
King. Now how, what meanes this Herald? Knowst thou not, That I have fin’d these bones of mine for ranfome? Com’t thou againe for ranfome?
Her. No great King: I come to thee for charitable Licenfe, That we may wander ore this bloody field, To booke our dead, and then to bury them, To fort our Nobles from our common men. For many of our Princes (wre the while)
Eye drawnd & foaked in mercurial blood: So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbes In blood of Princes, and with wounded bleededs First set-locche deepe in gore, and with wilde rage Juice out the armed heries at their dead matters, Killing them twicce. O grieve vs laue great King, To view the field in safety, and dispoze Of their dead bodiies.

IV. vii. 24—155

Will. Vnder Captaine Gower, my Liege.

Fla. Gower is a good Captaine, and is good knowledge and litertature in the Warres.

King. Call him hither to me, Souldier.

Will. I will my Liege.

Exit.

King. Here Fluellen, were thou this favour for me, and strike it in thy Cappe: when Alazon and my felle were downe together, I plucke this Gloue from his Helme: If any man challenge this, hee is a friend to Alason, and an enemy to our Prifoners; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, and thou do'st me,

Flu. Your Grace doe's me as great Honors as can be def'ed in the hearts of his Subjects: I would faine see the man, that he's but two legs, that shall find himselfe agree'ed at this Gloue; that is all: but I would faine see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see.

King. Know if thou Gower?

Flu. He is my deare friend, and please you.

King. Pray thee goe fecke him, and bring him to my Tent.

Exit.

Flu. I will fetch him.

Exit.

King. My Lord of Warwick, and my Brother Cliffor.

Follow Fluellen closely at the heeles.

The Gloue which I have given him for a favour. May haply purchase him a box of a 's ease.

It is the Souldiers; I by bargaining should Wear it my life. Follow good Cousin Warwick;

If that the Souldier strike him as he should.

By his bloud bearing, he will keep his word; Some sodaine mishief may arise of it:

For I doe know Fluellen valiant,

And toucht with Choler, hot as Gunpowder,

And quickly will returne an iniurie.

Follow, and see there be no harme between them.

Goe with you mee, Vvickle of Exeter.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to Knight you, Captaine.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Gods will, and his pleasure, Captaine, I befeech you now, come space to the King: there is more good toward you paranademe, then is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this Gloue?

Flu. Know the Glouet I know the Gloue is a Gloue,

Will. I know this, and thus I challenge it.

Strikes him.

Flu. Sblud, an arrant Traitor as anye in the Vnterfall world, or in France, or in England.

Gower. How now Sirr? you Villaine?

Will. Do you think it be forsworne?

Flu. Stand away Captaine Gower, I will glue Trefon his payment into gloves, I warrant you.

Will. I am no Traitor.

Flu. That's a Lyke in thy Throat. I charge you in his Maiesties Name apprehend him, he's a friend of the Duke Alaslass.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester.

Warn. How now, how now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, heere is praified be God for it, a molt contagious Trefon come to light, looke you, as you shall define in a Summers day. Heere is his Maiestie.

Enter King and Exeter.

King. How now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Liege, here is a Villaine, and a Traitor, that looke your Grace, he's shooke the Gloue which your Maiestie is take out of the Helmet of Alaslass.

Will. My Liege, this was my Gloue, here is the fellow of it, and be that I gave it to change, promis'd it wear in it his Cappe: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my Gloue in his Cappe, and I have been as good as my word.

Flu. Your Maiestie heere now, fauing your Maiesties Manhood, what an arrant rascally, beggerly, lowlie Knave is it: I hope your Maiestie is brace me testimonie and witness, and will auzuchement, that this is the Gloue of Alaslass, that your Maiestie is give me, in your Consciencenow.

King. Give me thy Gloue Souldier;

Lookke, here is the fellow of it:

Twas I indeed thow promis'd it to strike,

And thow halft given me most bitter terms.

Flu. And please your Maiestie, let his Neck anfwer for it, if there is any Marshall Law in the World.

King. How canst thou make me faint upon?

Will. All offences, my Lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your Maiestie.

King. It was our felle thou didst abuse.

Will. Your Maiestie came not like your selfe: you appear'd to me but as a common man: winitie the Night, your Garments, your Low linne: and what your Highness faide: I vnder that there, I befeech you take it for your owne fault, and not mine: for had you beene as I looke you tor, I made no offence: therefore I befeech your Highness pardon me.

King. Here Vvickle Exeter, fill this Gloue with Crownes, and give it to this fellow. Keppe it fellow, and wear it for an Honor in thy Cappe,

Till I doe challenge it. Give him the Crownes:

And Captaine, you must needs be friends with him.

Flu. By this Day and this Light, the fellow's ma- tell enough in this belly: Hold, there is twelve-pence for you, and I pray you to ferue God, and keepe you out of prawties and prubbles, and quarrels and discontents, and I warrant you it is the better for you.

Will. I will none of your Money.

Flu. An arrant good will: I can tell you it will serue you to mende your shooes: come, wherefore should you be so paffily, your shooes is not so good: 'tis a good filling I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter Hereald.

King. Now Hereald, are the dead numbed?

Hereald. Here is the number of the slaine French.

King. What Prisoners of good sort are taken, Vvickle?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleanc, Nephew to the King.

John Duke of Burbon, and Lord Beaupleal:

Of other Lords and Barons, Knights and Squires,

Full fiftie hundred besides common men.

King. This Note doth tell me of ten thousand French

That in the field ly'd slaine: of Princes in this number, And Nobles bearing Banners, there ly'd dead

One hundred twentie six: added to thefe,

Of Knights, Esquires, and gallant Gentlenen,

Eight thousand and foure hundred: of the which, Five hundred were but yesterday dub'd Knights.

So that in these ten thousand they zue lost,

There are but fiftie hundred Mercenaries:

The reft are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights, Squires,
And Gentlemen of blood and quality,
The Names of those their Nobles that lye dead:
Charles: Delabreth, High Constable of France,
Incaunt of Chatillon, Admiral of France,
The Master of the Croye-bowes, Lord Rambourgh,
Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dolphin,
John Duke of Alanson, Anthony Duke of Srbants,
The Brother to the Duke of Burgundie,
And Edward Duke of Bari: of Jaffie Earle, Grandpre and Laiffe, Fanscombe and Bynes, Beaumont and Marie, Vandonia and Lofinale.
Here was a Royal fellowship of death,
Where is the number of our English dead?
Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolke,
Sir Richard Kezz, Dass Cam Elifique;
None else of name: and of all other men,
But fine and twenty.
O God, thy Arme was here:
And not to vs, but to thy Arme alone,
Atribe we all: when, without stragagem,
But in plaine shock, and even play of Battallie,
Was euer knowne to great and little life?
On one part and on the other, take it God,
For it is none but thine.
Exe. 'Tis wonderfull.
King. Come, goe me in procession to the Village:
And be is death proclaim'd through our Hoall,
To boast of this, or take that praiseful from God,
Which is his onely.
Flu. Is it not lawfull and please your Maiestie, to tell how many is killd?
King. Yes Captain: but with this acknowledgement,
That God bought for vs.
Flu. Yet, my confidence, he did vs great good.
King. Doe we all holy Rights?
Let there be sung Now mon and Te Deum,
The dead with charitable eulogies in Clay:
And then to Callice, and to England then,
Where ne're from France ar'th'ld more happy men.
Exeunt.

Adus Quintus.

Enter Chorus.
Vouchsafe to thole that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them: and of such as hae,
I humbly pray them to admit th'excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life,
Be here presented. Now we brace the King.
Toward Callice: Grunt them there; there leene,
Heaue him away upon your winged thoughts,
Athrow the Sea: Behold the English beach
Pales in the flood; with Men, Wives, and Boyes,
Whole hounds & claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea,
Which like a magitie Whirlifor the King,
Seemes to prepare his way: So let him land,
And folomey fee him in the ation of London.
So swift a pace hath Thought, that euen now
You may imagine him upon Black-Heath:
Where, that his Lords desire him, to haue borne
His bruis'd Helmet, and his bended Sword
Before him, through the Citie: he forbids it, you to day a skirte of low degree. I pray you fall to, if you can make a Lecke, you can eat a Lecke.

Cur. Enough Captaine, you have altonish'd him.

Flm. I ray, I will make him eat some part of my lecke, or I will pece his pate four days; bite I pray you, it is good for your greene wound, and your pookie Coxcomb.

Pif. Must I bite.

Flm. Yes certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too and ambiguities.

Pif. By this Lecke, I will most horribly renouce I eate and eate I sweare.

Flm. Eate I pray you, will you have some more sauce to your Lecke: ther is not enough Lecke to sweare by.

Pif. Queasy thou Cudgell, thou dost fee I eare.

Flm. Much good do you feale, hailey, Nay, pray you throw none away, the skinner is good for your broken Coxcomb when you take occasions to fee Leeks hereafter, I pray you moack at'em, that is all.

Tul. Good.

Flm. 1, Leeks is good: hold you, there is a great to heal your pate.

Pif. Me a glass at.

Flm. Yes verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another Leek in my pocket, which you shall eare.

Pif. I take thy great in enearth of renouche.

Flm. If I once you any thing, I will pay you in Cudgell, you shall be a Woodmonger, and buy nothing of the but cudgell: God buy you, and keep you, & heal your pate.

Exit Tul. All hell shall flire for this.

Gam. Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly Knave, will you mock at an ancient Tradition begin vpon an honourable respect, and wore as a memorable Trophee of profecrated valor, and dare not shew in your deeds any of your words. I have seen geelleek & galley at this Gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speake English in thate garb, he could not therefore handle an English Cudgell; you finde it other wise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction, teach you a good English condition, faire ye well.

Exit Pif. Doeth fortune play the husband with me now? Newes have it that my Dolls is dead rith Spittle of a unlaydy of France, and therey my rendlesse is quite cutt off: Old I do waze, and from my wearie limbes honour is Cudgell. Well, Baud Ie turne, and something leave to Cut-purce of quicke hand: To England will I cleare, and there ile cleare:

And patches will I get vnto these cudgel lances, and I swore I got them in the Gallia warres.

Enter at one door, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Warwick, and other Lords. As another, Queen Isabel, the King, the Duke of Bourgony, and other French.

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met; vnto our brother France, and to your Sitter.

Wilk. And face time of day: toy and good wishes to our most faire and Princely Cosine Katherine: And as a branch and member of this Royalty, by whom this great assembly is contriv'd, we do salute you Duke of Burgone, and Princes French and Peeres health to you all.

Pur. Right joyous gae we to behold your face,
Not weary our brother England, fairly met,
Sare are Princes (English) every one.

Que. So happy be the ifue brother Ireland Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes,
Your eyes which hither have borne
In them against the French that met them in their bent,
The fatal Balls of morturing Battelikes:
The charmeome of this Leeks we foie hope
Have loft their qualite, and that this day
Shall change all griefes and quarrells into love.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appease.

Que. You English Princes all, I doe salute you.

Burg. My dutie to you both, on equall love.

Great Kings of France and England: hat I have laboured
With all my wits, my paines, and strong endevours,
To bring your most Imperial Lusties
Vnto this Barre, and Royall interview;
Your Mightineffe on both parts beft cannot witness.
Since then my Office hath so faire prey'd,
That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye,
You can contegetted: let it not disgree me,
If I demand before this Royall view,
What Reb, or what Impediment there is,
That your naked, poore, and mangled Peace
Dear Naurie of Arts, Prettyes, and joyfull Batres,
Should not in this belt Garden of the World,
Our fertile France, put vp her lovely Vifage?

Fla. Alas free hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her Husbandry doth lye on heapes,
Corrupting in it owne fertilite.

Her Vine, the merry clearer of the heart,
Vowed, Iyes: her Hedges even pleached,
Like Penionyes wildly out-grownne with hayre,
Put forth disorder'd Twigs: her fallow Leas,
The Darnell, Hembak, and ranke Fenery,
Don't roost upon, while that the Colter rules
That should deracinate such Sugarey;
The euin Mealest, that erst brought fuchly forth
The fickerd Cowflill, Burnet, and grente Clover,
Wanting the Spight, withall uncorded, rankes
Conceiued by ideness, and nothing serene,
But Indishead Docks, rough Thistles, Kk'Jyes, Burnes,
Loveline both beautie and vitulicie;
And all our Vineyards, Fallowes, Meales, and Hedges,
Deluche in their natures, grew to wildnettie.
Euen to our Houles, and our selues, and Children,
Hau not, or do not learnes, for want of time,
The Sciences that should become our Country;
But grow like Sausages, as Souldiers will,
That nothing doe, but meditate on Blood,
To Swanerding, and Royall Lookes, defat's Attys,
And every thing that scemes vanisual.

Which to reduce into our former favour,
You are assembled: and my speech entreats,
That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace
Should not expel their inconuences,
And blisse vs with her former qualities.

Eng. If Duke of Burgonie, you would the Peace,
Whoate want giues growth to th'impertections
Which you have citiz'd: you must buy that Peace
With full accord to all our iuif demands,
Whose Tenures and particular effects
You have esteemed'd briefly in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them to the which, as yet
And is in no anwer made.

Eng. Well then the Peace which you before for vrg'd, Lyes in his Answer.

France. 1.

V. i. 38—V. ii. 76
Exeunt Manet could norlhaie but le then mud dat Saint how will weare for moft To Any vnderf And me gaine thou will aske me, if I am not brokenly Faure, or that you have been in pretension; onely downe-right Oathes, which I never weill wrig'd, nor neuer brake for vrging. If thou canst loue a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth Sunne-burning that never looks in his Glaffe, for loute of my thing he fees there? let thine Eye be thy Cooke. I speake to thee plaine Souldier. If thou canst loue me for this, take me? not to faie to thee that I shall dye, is true, but for thy loue, by the L. No: yet I looke thee too. And while thou wilt, dear Kate, take a fellow of plaine and vncyonyed Confliance, for he perfore ce muft do thee right, becau he hath not the gift to roose in other places for these fellowes of infinit tongue, that can syme themselves into Ladies fauours, they doe alwaies receipt themselves our againe. Whate a speaker is but a pofter, a hymne is but a Ballad; a good Legges will fall, a short Backe will floope, a blacle Bedd will turne white, a curl'd Patre will grow bald, a faire Face will wither, a full Eye will wax hollow: but a good Heart, Kate, is the Sunne and the Moone, or rather the Sunne, and not the Moone; for it shines bright, and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou woulde bave such a one, take me? and take me, Kate, take a Souldier, take a Souldier, take a King. And what say’st thou then to my Loue? I speake my face, and fairely, I pray thee.

Kate. Is it possible dat I could lose de emenie of France?

King. No, it is not possible you should loue the Enemie of France, Kate; but in louing me, you should loue the Friend of France: for I loue France so well, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will have it all mine: and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours, then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kate. I cannot tell was is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue, like a new-married Wife about her Husbandes Neckes, hardly to be shocke off: Je quand sur le paffifm de France, & quand vous en es le paffifm de moy? Let me fee, what then? Saint Dennis bee my Speake) Done votre off France, & vous autre misere. It is as easy for me Kate, to conquest the Kingdome, as to speake fo much more French: I shall neuer moute thee in French vniſſele it be to laugh at me.

Kate. Sunt votre honoe, le francois qves vous parles, il & milieux que l’Anglais lequel il porte.

King. No, no honor, Kate; but thy speaking of my Tongue, and I thine, most cruelly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But Kate, doest thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love me?

Kate. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? Ile ask them. Come, I know thou loue me: and at night, when you come into your Cloths, you’r quesshow this Gentlewoman about me, and I know, Kate, you will to her dispaysre those parts in me, that you loue with your heart: but good Kate, mock me mercifully, the rather gentle Princeſſe, because I loue thee cruelly, if euer thou besh mine, Kate, as I have a saving Faith within me tell me thou that; I get thee with skambling, and thou must therefore needs prov'e a good Souldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denoe and Saint George, compound a Boy full French half English, that that shall goe to Confinatiple, and take the Turk by the Beard. Shall wee not? what sayst thou, my faire Flower-de-Luce.

Kate. I do not know dat.

King. No: this hereafter to know, but now to promise: doe but now promise Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a Boy; and for my English moytie, take the Word of a King, and a Battcheke. How answer you, La plus belle Katherine du monde non regret & demy deedy.

Kate. Your Maiestie swe swe true Frenche enough to decease de moit tage Damoisell dat is en Fraunce.

King. Now fe ye upon my faire Frenshe, bin mine Honor in true English, I loue thee Kate; by which Honor, I doe not sweare thou louest me, yet my blood begins to flatter me, that thou dost not, notwithstanding the poor and vittupering effect of my Vifage. Now beffrew my Fathers Ambition, hee was thinking of Cuiul Wares when hee got me, therefore was I creatted with a stubborne out-lide, with an apect of Iron, that when I come to wooe Ladies, I fright them; but in faith Kate, the eldest Lady of my Court, I flall appeare. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill Layter of Beauitie, can doe no more spoyle upon my Face. Thou haft me, if thou haft me, at the worst; and thou shalt weare me, if thou weare me, better and better: and therefore tell me, most faire Katherine, will you haue me? Put off your Maiden Blushes, aucthe the Thoughts of your Heart with the Looks of an Emprresse, take me by the Hand, and say, Harry of England, I am thine: when Ward thou shalt no longer bleff me mine Eare withall, but I will tell thee slowe, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speake it before his Face, if he be not fellow with the butt King, thou shalt finde the butt King of Good-fellowes. Come your Anwer in broken Mufick; for thy Voyce is Mufick, and thy English broken; Therefore Queene of all, Katherine, breake thy minde to me in broken English; wilt thou have me?

Kate. Dat is as it shal plesse de Rey mou pore.

King. Nay, it may please him well, Kate; it shall plesse him, Kate.

Kate. Den it fall also content me.

King. Upon that I kiffe your Hand, and I call you my Queen.

Kate. Laiffe mon Sieurier, laiffe, laiffe, mai far. Je ne vouo point que vous absoisse voctre grandeur, en bâissant le main d'une volta Sieurier oufice fournir ce que je vous supplie mon tres-pouissant Sieurier.

Then will I kiffe your Lippes, Kate.

Kate. Les Dames & Damoyeles pour effe baisser devront leur npecte il n'est pas le coutume de Fraunce.

King. Madame, my Interpreter, what sayes thee?

Lady. Dat it is not be de fashon pour le Ladies de Fraunce: I cannot tell was is buiffle en Angllis.

King. To kiffe.

Lady. Your Maiestee entende boste que moy.

King. It is not a fashon for the Maidis in Fraunce to kiffe before they be married, would the fay?

Lady. Ony vertugement.

Deare Kate, you and I cannot be confin'd within the weake Lyttl of a Courtyees fashon: wee are the maunders, Kate, and the liberty that follows our Places, flippes the mouth of all finde-faults, as I will doe yours, for vpholding the nice fashon of your Country, in denying me a Kiffe: therefore paitiently, and yeelding. You have Witch-craft in your Lippes.

Kate: there is more eloquence in a Sugar touch of them, then in the Tongues of the French Council; and they should sooner perishe as Harry of England, then a generall Petition of Monsachs. Here comes your Father.

Enter the French Power, and the English Lords.

Burg. God sauue your Maiestie, my Roayl Coyn, teach you our Princelesse English?

King. I would haue her learne, my faire Couyn, how perfefftly I loue her, and that is good English.

Burg. Is shee not apt?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condition is not smooth: To that hauing neyther the Voyce nor the Heart of Fiacerie about me, I cannot so conuere vp the Spirit of Loue in her, that hee will apprear in his true likenesse.

Burg. Pardon the frankneffe of my mirth, if I infuer you for that. If you would conuere in her, you must make a Circle: if conuere vp Loue in her ist his true likenesse, hee must apprear naked, and blinde. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet rost ouer with the Virgin Crimsof of Modellie, if shee deny the apperance of a nacked blinde Boy in her nacked seeing felle? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to confinge to.

King. Yet they doe wink and yeld, as Loue is blinde and eniores.

Burg. They are then executd my Lord, when they fee not what they doe.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Couyn to confent winking.

Burg. I will wink on her to confent, my Lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maides well Summer'd, and warme kept, are like Flies at Bartholomew-waye, blinde, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This Morall tyes me ouer to Time, and a hot Summer; and I shall catch the Flye, your Couyn, in the latter end, and thee must be blinde to.

Burg. As Loue is my Lord,before it loves.

King. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank Loue for my blindneffe, who cannot see many a faire French Citie for one faire French Maid that flands in my way.

French King. Yes my Lord, you see them perspectively: the Cities turn'd into a Maid; for they are all gyrdled with Maidens Walls, that Warre hath entred.

England. Shall Kate be my Wife?

France. So please you.

England. I am content, so the Maidens Cities you take of, may wait on her: so the Maid that stood in the way for my Wifhe, shall shew me the way to my Will.

France. We have consetted to all terms of reason.

England. It's so, my Lords of England?

The King hath granted every Article: His Daughter first; and in sequel, all, According to their famed proposed nations.

Extr. Only.
The Life of Henry the Fift.

End. Onele he hath not yet subscribed this:
Where your Majestie demands, That the King of France having any occasion to write for matter of Grant, shall name your Highness in this forme, and with this addition, in French: Nous troy cher fili, Henry Roy d'Angletere
Heretere de France: and thus in Latine: Proclamominus
Filii nostror heuereu Rex Anglia & Heres Franciae.
France. Nor this I have not Brother so deny'd,
But your request shall make me let it passe.
England. I pray you then, in love and dearer alliance,
Let that one Article rank'd with the rest,
And thereupon give me your Daughter.
France. Take her faire Sonne, and from her blood rayse vp issue to me, that the contending Kingdomes
Of France and England, whose very flowers looke pale,
With emy of each others happiness,
May ceale their hatred; and this dear Conjunction Plant Neighbour-hood and Christian-like accord
In their sweet Bosome: that neuer Warre advance
His bleeding Sword twixt England and faire France.
Lords. Amen.
King. Now welcome Kate: and bear me wittesse all,
That here I kiffe her as my Soueraigne Queene,
Flourish.
Queen. God, the best maker of all Marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your Realmes in one:
As Man and Wife being two, are one in love,
So be these twixt your Kingdomes such a Spoufall,
That never may ill Office, or fell Jealousie,
Which troubles oft the Bed of blest Marriage,
Thrust in betweene the Patience of these Kingdomes,
To make divorce of their incorporate League:
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receive each other. God speake this Amen.
King. Prepare we for our Marriage to morrow:
My Lord of Burgundy we'll take your Oath
And all the Peere, for suretie of our Leaguers,
Then shall I Iwete to Kate, and you to me,
And may your Oathes well kept and propretious be.
Sent.
Exeunt.

Enter Clowns.

Thus farre with rough, and all-vaible Pen,
Our bending Author hath pursu'd the Story,
In little roomie confuing mightie men,
Mangling by startes the full course of their glory.
Small time: but in that small, most greatly lisen
This Starre of England, Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds best Garden he achieved:
And of it left his Sonne Imperiall Lord.
Henry the Sixt in Infant Bands crown'd King
Of France and England, after this King succeed:
Whole State so many had the managing,
That they loft France, and made his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath showne; and for their sake,
In your faire minds let this acceptance take.

FINIS.

k 2 The
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Dead March.

Enter the Funeral of King Henry the Fifth, attended on by the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France, the Duke of Gloucester, Protector, the Duke of Lancaster, Sir Warkwyck, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Duke of Somerset.

Vng be heavens with black, yield day to night; Some impious change of Times and States, Brandish your Cynthia Trelles in the Sky, And with them shorten the bad reuailing Stars, That have contented into Henry's death:
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long, England hee left a Kings of so much worth. Gloucester England hee had a King vntill his time: Virtue he had, defending to command, His brandish Sword did blinde men with his beames, His Armes spred wider then a Dragons Wings: His sparkling Eyes, repliet with wrathfull fire, More dazled and drone back his Enemies, Then mid-dway S anne, fierce bent against their faces, That should I say his Deeds exceed all speech: Hee was a life vp his Hand, but conquered.

Exit. We mourne in blacke, why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead, and never shall reuene: Upon a Wooden Coffin we attend; And Drachs dishonourable Victorie, We with our flately professe glorie, Like Captives bound to a Triumphant Cart, What shall we curfe the Planets of Misloving, That plotted thus our Glories overthrow? Or shall we thinke the fabulous writen French, Conquerors and Sorcerers, that slipt from him, By Magicke Verities have corner'd his end. Whoch. He was a King, left of the King of Kings.

Vnto the French, the dreadfull Judgement-Day So dreadful will not, as was his fight, The Battales of the Lord of Holis Ie fought: The Churches Prayers made him to prosperous
Gloft, The Church? where is it?
Had not Church-men pray'd, His thred of Life had not so soune decay'd, None doe you like, but an exterminate Prince, Whom like a School-boy you may over-awe. Whch. Gloster, what ere we like, thou art Protector, And lookest to command the Prince and Realm. Thy Wife is proud, the holiest thee in awe, More then God or Religious Church-men may,

Gloft. Name not Religion, for thou lou'st the Flesh, And nee through all the yeere to Church thou go'st, Except it be to pray against thy foes, Bedecke, cease thy Jarras, & tell thy minds in peace: Let's to the Altar: Heralds way on vs; In stead of Gold, wee le offer vp our Armes, Since Armes assure not, now that Henry's dead, Politieer aitwait for wreathed yeeres, When at their Mothers mifformed eyes, Babes shall suck, Our Ile be made a Nourish of tall Teares, And none but Women left to weale the dead. Henry the Fifth, thy Ghost Linous are: Prosper this Realme, keep it from Cuill Broyles, Combat with aduerce Planetes in the Heavens; A faire more glorious Starre thy Soule will make, Then Infens afar, or bright---

Enter a Messenger.

Mesll. My honourable Lords health to you all: Sad tidings bring: I to you out of France, Of late the most famous and discomfiture: Guets, Champaignes, Richines, Outlance, Paris Grypowr, Poysiers, are all quite loit, Bedes.what by fit thou man, before dead Henry's Cause? Speake fully, or the loit of those great Townes
Will make him burth his Lead, and rie from death. Glost. Is Paris loit? Is Ross yealded vp? If Henry were recall'd to life againe, These news would cause him once more yeeld the Ghost. Exe. How were they loit? what treacherie was vs'd?

Mesll. No treacherie, but want of Men and Money.
Amongst the Soultiers this is muttered, That here you maintaine fourcull Factions: And whil a Field should be dispairest and fought, You are disputing of your Generals, One would have singing Varies, with little cost; Another would dye swift, but wanteth Wings: A third thinke, without experience at all, By guilefull faire words, Peace may be obtrayd. Awake, awake, English Nobilitie, Let not soule thorn your Honors, new begor; Crope are the Flower-de-Luces in your Armes Of Englands Coast, one halfe is cut away. Exe. Were our Teares wanting to this Finerall, These Tidings would call forth her flowing Tides. Bede. Me they concern, Regent I am of France; Give me my fleeced Coat, Ile fight for France. Away with these disguisefull waying Robes; Wounds will I lend the French in stead of Eyes, To wepe their intermediate Miseries.
Enter to them another Messenger.

MESS. Lords view the Letters, full of bad mischiefe. France is resoled from the English quite, Except some petty Townes, of no impor.
The Dolphin Charter is crowned King in Rhemens: The Baffard of Orleans with him is joyn'd:

Reynold. Duke of Anjou, doth take his part,
The Duke of Alenion flyeth to this fide.

Exit.

Exit. The Dolphin crownd King: all flye to him:
O whither shall we flye from this reprofe?

GLO. We will not flye, but to our enemies throw.

Bedfort, if thou be flacke, he fight it out.

Glo. Gad for, why doublift thou of my forwardneffe?

An Army hauie I muft'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter another Messenger.

MESS. My gracious Lords, to adore to your laments,
Wither which you now below King Henry heir:
I must informe you of a damnable right,
Between the long Lord Talbot, and the French,

Whence Talbot overcame, is to fto?

MESS. O no: wherein Lord Talbot was o'thrown:
The circumfance I tell you more at large,
The death of August lift, this dreadful Lord,
Retiring from the Siege of Orleans,
Having full feaue fix thousand in his troope,
By threes and twenty thousand of the French
Was round incompaft, and fet upon:
No layure he had to enraine his men.
He wanted Pikes to fet before his Archers:
In stead whereof,差tre Stakes pluckt out of Hedges
They pitch'd in the ground contadually,
To keep the Horfemen off, from breaking in,
More then three hours the fight continued:
Where valiant Talbot, shou'd humane thought,
Enacted wonders with his Sword and Lance.
Hundreds he fent to Hell, and none durft stand him:
Here, there, and euery where enrag'd, he flew.

The French exclaim'd, the Devill was in Armes,
All the whole Army Began aga'd on him.
His Souldiers fying his undaunted Spirit,
A Talbot, a Talbot, cry'd out amain,
And ran into the Bowells of the Bataile,
Here had the Conqueft fully been feth'd up,
If Sir John Falfeffe had not playd the Coudar.
He being in the Vauward, plac'd behind,
With purpose to relieue and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not hauing ftronge o'frankefto.
Hence grew the generall wrack and maflaftre:
Enclofed were they with their Enemies,
A bare Wallon, to win the Dolphins grace,
Thrift Talbot with a Spare into the Back,
Whom al France, with their chiefes asfembled strength,
Durf not proume to looke once in the face.

BEFF. 1 am Talbot blame these I will lay my felfe,
For hauing olye here, in pome and cafe,
Whilft fuch a worthy Leader, wanting hye,
Vno his difarray foe-men is betray'd.

MESS. O no, the liues, but it was Proifenor,
And Lord Scalier with him, and Lord Humferford:
Most of the refhaft'd, orroke likewise.
BEFF. His Ranzome there is none but I shall pay,
Ile hide the Dolphin headlong from his Thron,
His Crowne fhall be the Ranzome of my friend:
Foure of their Lords Ile change for one of ours.

Farwell my Maters, to my Tafe will I,
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George Feast withall.
Ten thousand Souldiers with me I will take,
Wholfe bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

MESS. So you had need, for Orleans is befeig'd,
The English Army is grown weake and faint:
The Earle of Salisbury craneh fupply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutinie,
Since they to few, watch eacuh a multitude.

MESS. Remember Lords your Oathes to Henry sworne:
Fuyth to quell the Dolphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

BEFF. I doe remember it, and here take my leave,
To goe about my preparation.

Exit Bedford.

MESS. He to the Tower with all the hilt I can,
To view th Artillie and Armition,
And then I will proclaime young Henry King.

Exit Gilder.

Exit. To Eitzam will I, where the young King is,
Being ordraw'd his peculiar Gouvernor,
And for his fafety there he left defigne.
Exit.

Thank you, his Place and Function to attend:
I am left out, for me nothing remains:
But long I will not be lack out of Office.
The King from Eitzam I intend to fend,
And fit at chiefift Scene of publique Wazle,

Exit.

Sound a Trumpet.

Enter Charles, Alaron, and Reiniger, Marching, with Drum and Souldiers.

Charles, enter his true meaning, even as in the Heavens,
So in the Earth, to this day is not knowne,
Lace did he thine upon the English face:
Now we are Victors, upon vs he smiles,
What Townes of any moment, but we have:
At pleasure here we lye, nere Orleans:
Otherwhiles, the famit English,like pale Ghofts,
Fainely befeige vs one houre in a moneth,

Alaro, they want their Poffedge, & their fat Bal thees:
Eyther they must be dyed like Males,
And haue their Prouenderyn's out of their mouths,
Or pitfeous they will looke, like drowned Mice.

Reiniger, Let's raife the Siege: why Luke we idle here?

Talbot is taken, whom we want to leaue:
Remayneth none but mad-braynd Salabury,
And he may well in fretting spend his gall,
Nor men nor Money hath he to make Warte.
Charles, Sound,found Alaron, we will ruff on them,
Now for the honour of the fafone French:
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he lesse me goe back one foot, or flye.

Here Alaron, they are beeaen back by the English,with great toffe.

Enter Charles, Alaron, and Reiniger.

Charles, Who ever saw the like?what men have I?
Doggies, Cawards, Daffards: I would we haue flid,
But that they left me midill my Enemies.

Reiniger. Salabury is a desperate Homicide,
He figheth as one weary of his life:
The other Lords, like Lyons wanting foode,
Doe rufh vp vn vs as their hungry prey.
The first Part of Henry the Six.

Alas! for Fosford, a Countryman of ours, records, England all Orients and Rosedale breeds, During the time Edward the third did reign: More truly now may this be verified; For note but Sampfons and Guelphs.

It fended forth to skirmish: one to one? Lange ran bod'fad Rafaela, who would e'ft suppo're, They had such courage and audacity! Charles. Let's leave this Towne, For they are hay're-bray'd Slaves, And hunger will enforce them to be more eas'er. Of old I know them; rather with their Teeth The Walls they le yeare downe, then for the Siege, Reigneir. I think by some odd Gimmres or Deuce Their Armes are set, like Crooks, still to strike on; Elfe ne're could they hold out for as they doe: By my consent, we're even let them alone.

Alas! for Fosford. Enter the Basford of Orleans.

Basford. Where's the Prince Dolphin? I hate newes for him. Basf. Basford of Orleans, prizce welcome to us, Basf. Me thinks your looks are sad, your chear app'd. Haste the late ouerthrow brought this offence? Be not dismay'd, for fucour is at hand: A holy Maid hither with me I bring, Which by a Vision sent to her from Heaven, Ordain'd is to rayse this tedious Siege, And drive the English forth the bounds of France: The spirit of deep Prophecy the bath, Exceeding the nine Sydy of old Rome: What's past, and what's to come, the can defery. Speake, shall I call her in? beleue your words, For they are certaine, and vnfallible. Basf. Go e call her in: but first, try her skill, Reigneir stand thou as Dolphin in my place, Question her proudyly, let thy Lookes be flenme, By this means shall we found what skill the hath.

Enter Isaac Puzel.

Reigneir. Faire Maid, is't thou wilt doe these wondrous feats? Puzel. Reigneir, is't thou that think'st to beguile me? Where is the Dolphin? Come, come from behind, I know thee well, though never seen before. Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me; In prizme will I talke with thee apart: Stand back you Lords, and giue vs leave a while. Reigneir. She takes upon her brayely at first fash. Puzel. Dolphin, I am by birth a Shepheard's Daughter, My wit vnstray'd in any kind of Art: Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd: To shine on my contemptible estate, Loe, whilst I weyted on my tender Lambs, And to bunnes parching heat display'd my checkes, Gods Mother design'd to appeare to me, And in a Vision full of Mairiele, Will durst to leave my base Vocation, And free my Country from Calamities: Her syde the promis'd, and shake flou'riece. In compleat Glory flou' relace'd her felie: And whereas I was black and stout before, With those clear Rayes, which shine infused on me, That breaste am I blest with, which you may fee.

Aske me what question thou canst possible, And I will answer unpremeditated: My Courage tire by Combat, if thou dar'st, And thou shalt finde that I exceed my Sex. Refole on this, thou shalt be forunate, If thou receiue me for thy Warlike Mate, Thou shalt affonish me with thy high terms; Onely this proofe, Ile of thy Valour make, In single Combat thou shalt buckle with me; And if thou vanquish'th, thy words are true, Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puzel. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd Sword, Deckt with fine Flowers-de-Luces on each side, The which at Touraine, in S. Katherine's Church-yard, Out of a great deale of old Iron, I chose forth. Delph. Then come a Gods name, I fee no woman, Puzel. And while I live, I'll ne're flye from a man, Here they fight, and hence do Puzel overcome.

Delph. Stay, stay thy hands, thou art an Amazon, And fight with the Sword of Deborah. Puzel. Crafts Mother helps me, else I was too weake.

Delph. Who e'ft helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me: Imperatily I burne with thy desire, My heart and hands thou haft at once fabdu'd, Excellent Puzel, if thy name be so, Let me thy fervant, and not Soueraigne be, 'Tis the French Dolphin sueth to thee thus. Puzel. I must not yield to any rights of mine, For my Propojition's far reste from above: Where I have chas'd all thy Foes from hence, Then will I think upon a reconempne. Delph. Meane time lookke gracious on thy profetare Thral.

Reigneir. My Lord I thinkes I'm very long in talke. Alas! with moste I finnes this woman to her smock, Elle ne'cres he so longe protract his speech. Reigneir. Shall we disturbe him, since hee keeps no mean's. Alas! he may meane more then we poor men do knowe, These women are fireuw temuers with their tongues, Reigneir. My Lord, where are you? What doyou you? Shall we give e'ft Orleans, or no? Puzel. Why no, I say; diffcultfull Recreants, Fight till the last galpe: He be your guard. Delph. What these sakes, Ile confine we'e fight it once. Puzel. Affign'd I am to be the English Scourge. This night the Siege squar'dly is rayse: Expect Saint Martin Summer, Helgyton days, Since I have entred into these Warres. Glory is like a Circle in the Water, Which never ceaseth to enlarge it selfe, Till by broad spreaching, it disperseth to naught. With Henry's death, the English Circle ends, Dispersed are the glories it included: Now am I like that proud insulting ship, Which Cesar and his fortune bare at once.

Delph. Was Diadem inspired with a Doue? Thou with an Eagle att inspired then. Helen, the Mother of Great Constante, Nor yet, 5. Philip's daughters were like thee. Bright Scare of Venus, faire downe on the Earth, How may I reverently worship the enough? a Alas! for Fosford. Leave off delays, and let vs rayse the Siege.

Reigneir. Wo-
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Regner. Woman, do what thou canst to serve our honors, Drive them from Orleans, and be immortal'd.

Dolph. Pretently we'll try: come, let's away about it, No prophet will I trust, if thee prove false.

Exit Glosier, with his Servant-men.

Glos. I am come to survey the Tower this day; Since Henry's death, I fear there is Conspicacy: Where be these Warders, that they wait not here? Open the Gates, its Glosier that calls.

1. Warder. Who's there, that knocks so imperiously? Glos. 1. Man. It is the Noble Duke of Glosier, 2. Warder. Who ere he be, you may not be let in.

1. Man. Villains, visit you for you the Lord Protector? 2. Warder. The Lord sets him, so we answer him, We do no otherwise then we are will'd.

Glos. Who willed you'd enter whole will'd bake? but mine?

There's none Protector of the Realm, but I: Break up the Gates, I'll be your warrantize; Shall I be bound thus with dunghill Groomes? Glosiers men rush in the Tower Gates, and Wooduelc The Lieutenant breaks within, Wooduelc. What noyse is this? what Traytors have we here?

Glos. Lieutenant, is it you whom voyce I hear? Open the Gates, here's Glosier that would enter. Wooduelc. Haue patience Noble Duke, I may not open, The Cardinall of Winchesters forbids: From him I have exprolile commandment, That thou not none of thine shall be let in.

Glos. Faint-hearted Wooduelc, prizest thouforme? Arrogant Wincheffter, that haughtie Prelate, Whom Henry our late Souveraine ere could brooke? Thou art no friend to God, or to the King: Open the Gates, or lie flint thee out shortly.

Warder-men. Open the Gates to the Lord Protector, Or we'll burn them up, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower Gates Wincheffter, and his men in Tawney Coats.

Wincheff. How now ambitious Primefr, what means this?

Glos. Priet'd Priest, don't thou command me to be shut out? Winn. I do, thou most injuring Prodior, And not Protector of the King or Realm.

Glos. Stand back thou manifest Conspiritor, Thou hast continued it to murther our dead Lord, Thou art guilty Whores Indulgence to sinne, Ile cannot thee in thy broad Cardinalls Hat, If thou proceed in this thy insolence. Winn. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot: This be Damascus, be thou curtied Coat, To flay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt. Glos. I will not fly thee, but I lie drue thee back: Thy Scarlet Robes, as a Childs bearing Cloth, Ile, to carry thee out of this place.

Winch. Doe what thou darst, I hear thee to thy face.

Glos. What am I darr'd, and heard to my face? Draw men, for all this priviledged place, Blew Costs to Tawny Costs. Priet, beware thy beard, I mean to tug it, and to cause thee foundly, Vnder my feet I stamp thy Cardinalls Hat:

In sight of Pope, or dignities of Church, Here by the Checkers ile drag thee vp and downe. Winn. Glosier, thou wilt anfwer this before the Pope, Glos. Wincheffter Goofe, tere, a Pope, a Pope, Now have thee hence, why do you let them stay? Thee ile chase hence, thou Woole in Sheepes array, Our Tawney-Coats, our Scarlet Hypocrite.

Here Glosiers men beat out the Cardinalls men, and enter in the hury, hury the Master of London, and his Officers.

Majc. Eye Lords that you being supreme Magistrates, Thus contumeliously should break the Peace.

Glos. Peace Majc, thou knowst little of my wrongs: Here's Steamford, that regards nor God nor King, Hath here drayn'd the Tower to his wife,

Winn. Here's Glosier, a bar to Citizens, One that still motions Warre, and neuer Peace, Or re-charging your free Purlates with large Fines; This sects to overthrow Resonon, Because he is Protector of the Realm; And would have Armour here out of the Tower, To Crowne himfife King, and suppreffe the Prince.

Glos. I will not anfwer thee with words, but blows,

Here they storm'd agane.

Majc. Naught relefs for me, in this tumultuous strife, But to make open Proclamation.

Come Officer, as lowd as e're thou canst cry:

All manner of men, assembled here in Armes this day, Against God, Peace and the Kings, we charge and command you, in his Highnes Name, to repayre to your several dwelling places, and not to warre, handle, or use any Sword, Weapon, or Dagger henceforward, upon paine of death.

Glos. Cardinall, he be no breaker of the Law: But we shall meer, and breaks our minds at large. Winn. Glosier, we're meet to thy coit, be sure: Thy heart-blood I will have for this dayes worke, Majc. Ile call for Clubs, if you will not stay; This Cardinall's more baugtie then the Deuill.

Glos. Majc farewell: thou dost not but what thou mayst.

Winn. Abominiabull Glosier, guided thy Head, For I intend to have it ere long.

Majc. See the Costt clear'd, and then we will depart. Good God, thse Nobles should such fomackes bese, I my felle figh not once in fowre yeares.

Enter the Master Gunner of Orleans, and his Boy.

M. Gunner. Sir, ha, thou knowst how Orleans is beleag'd, And how the English haue the Suburbs wonne. Boy. Father I know, and oft haue that at them, How're we unfortunate, I mis'rd my ayme.

M. Gunner. But now thou shalt not, Be thou told by me: Chiefle Master Gunner am I of this Towne, Something I must doe to procure me grace: The Princes espyalls have informed me, How the English, in the Suburbs close entrench, Went through a secret Grace of Iron Barres, In yonder Tower, to outer-peepe the City, And thence discover, how with most advantage They may ves vs with Shot or with Affault. To intercept this inconvenience, A Peace of Ordinance 'gainst I haue place'd,
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

And even these three days haue I watcht, if I could see them. Now dothou watch, for I can stay no longer. If thou livest any, runne and bring me word, and thou shalt finde me at the Governors. Exit.

Burt. Father, I warrant you, I take you no care, I never trouble you, if I may trye them. Exit.

Enter Salisbury and Talbot on the Turret, with others.

Sal. Talbot, my life is my joy, againe return'd? How went thou handle, being Prisoner? Or by what meanes got's thou to be releas'd? Disconcert I prethee on this Turret top.

Talb. The Earle of Bedford had a Prisoner,

Call'd the braue Lord Pontes de Sandrestye,

For him was I exchang'd, and ransom'd,

But with a better man of Armes by farre,

Once in contemp's they would have bate'd me:

Which I disdaining, scord'd, and craued death,

Rather then I would be foeld releas'd:

In fine, releas'd I was as I des'd.

But, O, the trecherous Faltaffe wounds my heart,

Whom with my bare fists I would execute,

If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tellst thou not, how thou wert entertain'd?

Talb. With scoffes and frowns, and contumelious taunts,

In open Market-place produc'th they me,

To be a publique spectacle to all:

Here, sayst thou, the Terror of the French,

The Scar-Crow that affrights our children too.

Then broke I from the Officers that led me,

And with my nails dugg'd ftones out of the ground,

To barle at the beholders of my shame.

My griffy countenance made others fye,

None durst come near, for feare of fudden death.

In fou Walla they dende'd me no socoure:

So great feare of my Name mongeth them were spread,

That they suppos'd I could rend Barres of Steele,

And spaire in pieces Pellets of Adamant.

Wherefore a guard of chosen Shot I had,

That walkt about me every Minute while:

And if I did but firre out of my Bed,

Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the day with a L. and R. necker.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torment's you endur'd,

But we will be reacon'd sufficiently,

Now it is Supper time in Oileantce:

Here, through this Grate, I count each one,

And view the Frenchmen how they fortie:

Let vs looke in, the fight will much delight thee:

Sir Thomas Garanesse, and Sir William Glanmfale,

Let me have your expresse opinions,

Where is best place to make our Battle next?

Glanmfaile. I thinke at the North Gate, for there stands Lords.

Glumpydale. And I heare, at the Bailwalkes of the Bridge.

Talb. For ought I see, this Citie must be famish'd,

Or with light Sarmattes encleab'd.

Sal. Here they foot, and Salisbury falls downe.

Garanesse. O Lord have mercy on vs, wretched sinners.

Glanmfaile. O Lord have mercy on me, woful man.

Talb. What chance is this, that suddenly hath croft vs?

Speak Salisbury; at leaft, if thou canst, speake:

How far it thou, Mirror of all Martall men?

One of thy Eyes, and thy Checkes fide struck off?

Accurr'd Tower, accurr'd fault Hand,

That hath contin'd this woeful Tragedie,

In thirtene Battallies, Salisbury o'ertake,

Henry the Fift be far tran'st'd to the Warres,

Whil'st any Trumpet did found, or Drum struck vp,

His Sword did ne'er leave stricking in the field.

Yet lift not thou Salisbury? though thy spech doth fayle,

One Eye thou haue to look to Heaven for grace.

The Sunne with one Eye vieweth all the World,

Heauen be thou gracious to none aloue,

If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands.

Besee his body, I will help to buie it.

Sir Thomas Garanesse, haft thou any life?

Speak vnto Talbot, may look vp to him.

Salisbury cease thy Spirit with this comfort,

Thou shalt not dye whiles

He beckens with his hand, and smiles on me:

As who should fay, When I am dead and gone,

Remember to auenge me on the French.

Plantaginet I will, and like thee,

Play on the Lute, beholding the Townes bunet:

Wretched fail France be onely in my Name.

Here an Alarum, and it Thunders and Lightnes.

What fire is this? what tumult's in the Heauens?

Whence commeth this Alarum, and the noyse?

Enter a Messinger.

Mes. My Lord, my Lord, the French have gather'd head.

The Dolphin, with one Ioane de Pascau boy'd

A holy Prophete, new rifen vp,

Is come with a great Power, to rafe the Siege.

Here Salisbury fifteth himselfe vp, and groans.

Talb. Haue, haue, how dyng Salisbury doth groane,

It like's his heart he cannot be reueng'd.

Frenchmen, be I a Salisbury to you.

Pascau or Pascau, Dolphin, or Dog, &c.

Your heart still flaie out with my Horces hecules,

And make a Quagmire of your mingled brains.

Conuey me Salisbury into his Tent,

And then wee le trv what thefe daftard Frenchmen dare.

Alarum. Exit.

Here an Alarum againe, and Talbros purseth the Dolphin,

And drawneth him: Then enter Ioane de Pascau, draving Englishmen before her.

Then enter Talbros.

Talb. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?

Our English Troupes retire, I cannot flay them,

A Woman clad in Armor chaffeth them.

Enter Pascau.

Here, here thee comes.
He haue a bowe with thee

Desult, or Deuils Dam, hee cometh thee,

Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch,

And bring awaye thy Soule to him thou feru'd,

Pascau. Come, come, this only I that must disgrace thee.

Here they fight.

Talb. Heauens, can you suffer Hell to prevaile?

My brief Ile burn with straining of my coura,

And from my shoulders crack my Armes sarder,

But I will chaffe this high-minded Strumpet.

They fight againe.

Pascau. Talbros farewell, thy house is not yet come,

I must goe Vindue Oileantce fortheith:

A short Alarums: then enter the Towne with Soldiers.

Enter a Sergeant of a Band, with two Sentinels.

Ser. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
If any noisier or souldier you perceive
Neere to the walls, by some apparant signe
Let vs have knowledge at the Court of Guard.
Sent. Sergeant you shall. Thus are poore Souldiers
(When others sleepe upon their quiet beds)
Constraining to watch in darknesse, raine, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burgundy, with scaling Ladders: Their drummers beating a
Dead March.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whole approach, the Regions of Artois,
Wallon, and Picardy, are friends to us:
This happy night, the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous'd and banquetted,
Embrace we them this oppurtunitie,
As fitting bell to quetsch: their decease,
Contriv'd by Art, and basefull Sorcerie.
Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his land,
Disparring of his owne armes for焗nte,
To joyn with Witches, and the helpes of Hell,
Bmr. Traitors have neuer other company,
But what's that Pucel whom they term'd to pure?
Tal. A Maid, they say.
Bmr. A Maid? And be in martial?
Bmr. Pray God the prove not masculine ere long:
If underneath the Standard of the French
She carrie Armour, as the hath begun.
Tal. Well, let them prate: and tonnesse with spirits,
God is our Fortresse, in whole conquering name
Let vs resolve to scale their flinty bulwarke.
Bed. Ascend braue Talbot, we will follow thee.
Tal. Not altogether, better fare I guesse,
That we do make our entrance euenter ways:
That if it chance the one of vs do faile,
The other yet may rise against their force.
Bed. Agreed, Ie to yon corne.
Bmr. And I to this.
Tal. And here we will Talbot mount, or make his graue.
Now Salisbury, for thee and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in dury, I am bound to both.
Sent. Arme, arme, the enemy doth make a Saul's
Cry, St. George, A Talbot.

The French leaue the walls in their spirites, Enter certain wayes, Bedford, Alenfon, Regnier, halflye ready, and halffyeready.

Alen. How now my Lords? what all uneasie to a
Sent. Veresday? and glad we feared so well.
Reg. Twas time (I trau'd) to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing Alarums at our Chamber doores.
Alen. Of all exploits once first I follow'd Armes,
Nere heard I of a warlike enterprise

The first Part of Henry the Sixth.
More venemous, or desperate then this.

Bast. I think this Talbot be a Fellow of Hell.

Reg. If not of Hell, the Heavens sure favour him.

Alasf. Here commeth Charles, I marvel how he sped?

Enter Charles and Joane.

Bast. Tut, holy Joane was his defense Guard.

Charles. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitfull Dame?

Didst thou at first, to slatter vs withall,

Make vs partakers of a little gayne,

That now our loafe might be ten times so much?

Joane. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my Power alike?

Sleeping or waking, must I still preasure,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?

Imprudent Souldiers, had your Watch been good,

This sudden Mischiefe never could have faile.

Charles. Duke of Alston, this was your default,

That being Captain of the Watch to Night,

Did look no better to this weightie Charge.

Alasf. Had all you Quarteres been as safely kept,

As that whereof I had the government,

We had not beene thus shamefully surprizd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reg. And so was mine, my Lord.

Charles. And for my selfe, most part of all this Night,

Within her Quarter, and mine owne Precinct,

I was impoy'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the Centurys,

Then how, or which way, should they first break in?

Joane. Question (my Lords) no further of the cafe,

How or which way, 'tis sure they found some place,

But weakely guarded, where the breach was made:

And now there rests no other shift but this,

To gather our Souldiers, faster'd and dispaire,

And lay new Plane-forms to endanger them.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter a Souldier, crying, a Talbot, a Talbot:

they fly, leaving them Clothes behind.

Sould. He be so bold to take what they have left:

The Cry of Talbot lures me for a Sword

For I coute lend me with many Spoyles,

Ving no other Weapon but his Name.

Exeunt.

Enter Talbot, Bedfor, Bagyanda.

Bast. The Day begins to break, and Night is fled,

Whose pitych Mantle ower-wray'd the Earth.

Here sound Retreat, and cause our hot pursuite.

Retreat, Taliot. Bring forth the Body of old Suffolk,

And here advance it in the Market-Place,

The middle Curret of this cursed Towne,

Now have I pay'd my Vow unto his Soule:

For every drop of blood was drawn from him,

There hath at least five Frenchmen dyed to night,

And that beforest Ages may behold

What ruine happened in revenge of him,

Within their chiefest Temple 11 eccles.

A Tombe, wherein his Corps shall be inter'd:

Upon that which, that every one may read,

Shall be engras'd the Face of Olsene,

The treacherous manner of his mournfull end,

And what a terror he had beene to France.

But Lords, in all our bloody Mafiacre,

I make we met not with the Dolphine Grace,

His new-comen Champion, venemous Lionne of Acre,

Nor any of his false Confederates.

Bast. Tis thought Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rows'd on the sudden from their drouble Beds,

They did amongst theire troops of armed men,

Leape o're the Walls for refuge in the field.

Jury. My selfe, as farre as I could well discerne,

For smoke, and duske vapours of the night,

Am sure I fear'd the Dolphin and his Trull,

When Arme in Arme they both came swiftly running,

Like to a payre of louing Turtle-Doves,

That could not huse anudder day or night.

After that things are set in order here,

We'll follow them with all the power we haue.

Enter a Messanger.

Mess. All hail, my Lords, which of this Princeley tranye

Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Acts

So much applaued through the Realme of France?

Talbot. Here is the Talbot, who would speak with him?

Mess. The venemous Lady, Countesse of Ouerpie,

With modifite admiring thy Renowne,

By me entreats (great Lord) thou wouldt vouchsafe

To visit her poor Caste where the lyes,

That thay may boast the bath beheld the man,

Whose glory fill the World with lowd report.

Jury. Is it ever so? Nay, then I see our Wares

Will turne vert a peacefull Comick sport,

When Ladys eyes can not be encountered with

You may not (my Lord) despite her gentle fuit.

Talbot. Ne're trust me then: for when a World of Men

Could not preusyse with all their Orators,

Yet hath a Woman kindnesse out-sald:

And therefore tell her, I returne great thankes,

And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your Honors bearre me company?

Bast. Too truly, ten more then munest will:

And I have heard it say'd, Unbidden Guardels

Are often welcommett when they are gone.

Talbot. Well then, alone (since there's no remedie)

I mean to prove this Ladies cumpass,

Cousin her Captaine, you perceive my minde.

Volunteers.

Capt. I doe my Lord, and meane accordingly.

Exeunt.

Enter Countesse.

Countesse. Porter, remember what I gave in charge,

And when you have done so, bring the Keyes to me.

Port. Madame, I will.

Exeunt.

Countesse. The Plot is luyed, if all things fall out right,

I shall be famous be this exploit,

As a Seychian Tempest by Cyprys death,

Great is the rumour of this dreadful Knight,

And his achivements of no leffe account:

Faine would mine eyes be witnesse with mine ears,

To give their tenours of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madame, according as your Ladyship desired,

By Messengers clad, so is Lord Talbot come,

Countesse. And he is welcome: what is this the man?

Mess. Madame, it is.

Countesse. Is this the Scurge of France?

Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad?

That with his Name the Mothers fill their Babes?

I see Report is fabulous and faile.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

I thought I should have scene some Hercules, A second Hector, for his grim appeare, And large proportion of his strong knit Limbes, Alas! this is a child, a silly Dwarfe: It cannot be, this weake and wittles Sirime Should strike such terror to his Enemies. Talk. Madame, I haue beene bold to troubl you: But since your Ladyship is not at juice, I haue some other time to visit you. Count. What means he now? Goe ask he, whether he goes? Meaf. Stay my Lord Talbot, for my Lady craves, To know the caufe of your abrupt departuare? Talk. Many, for that flew is in a wrong beleefe, I goe to conclude her Talbouts here, Euer Porter with Keyes. Count. If thau be he, then art thou Prisoner. Talk. Prisoner? to whom? Count. To me, blood-thristie Lord: And for that caufe I trayned thee to my Houfe. Long time thy shadow hath beene thrall to me, For in my Gallery thy Picture hanges: But now the substance hath endure the like, And I will change thefe Leges and Armes of thine, That haif by Tyrannie thefe many yeares Wafted our Country, blame our Citizens, And sent our Sons and Husbands captuarte. Talk. Ha.ha.ha. Count. Laugheth thou Wretch? Thy murther shall turne to moane, Talk. I haue to fee your Ladyship so fond, To think, that you haue caught but Talbots flidow, Whereon to pracie your feuerice. Count. Why art not thou the man? Talk. I am indeed. Count. Then haue I fubftance too. Talk. No, no, I am but shadow of my felfe: You are deceiu'd, my fubftance is not here: For what you fee, is but the fleafe part, And leaft proportion of Humane: 'Twill you Madame, were the whole Frame here, It is of fuch a spacious loftie pitch, Your Roofe were not fufficient to contain't. Count. This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce, He will be here, and yet he is not here: How can these contrarieties agree? Talk. That will I fliew you prefently. Winds his Horns, Drummes strike up a Peale of Ordinance: Enter Soldiers. How far thy Madame? are you now perfwad'd, That Talbot is but shadow of himfelfe? There are his fubftance, finewes, armes, and strength, With which he yoaketh your rebellious Neckes, Raeth your Cities, and subuerets your Townes, And in a momenr makes them defolate. Count. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abused, I finde thou art no leafer, nor thy fame hath brutted, And more then may be gathered by thy fhape, Let my prefumption not prouoke thy wrath, For I am forry, that with reveuerce I did not entertaine thee as thou art. Talk. Be not difmay'd, faire Lady, nor misconquer The minde of Talbot, as you did maffeke The outward compofition of his body. What you have done, hath not offended me: Not other fatisfaction doe I crave,
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

...The argument you held, was wrong in you; Inigne whereof, I pluck a white Rose too,

...Now Somerset, where is your argument?

...Here in my Scabbard, meditating, that Shall dye your white Rose in a bloody red.

...Meane time your cheeks do counterfeitt our Rose: For pale they looke with fear, as witnesing

...The truth on our side.

...No Plantagenet:

...Tis not for fear, but anger, that thy cheeks Blush for pure flame, to counterfeitt our Roses, And yet thy tongue will not confesse thy errest.

...Hath not thy Rose a Canker, Somerset?

...Hath not thy Rose a Thorne, Plantagenet?

...He, sharp and piercing to maintaine his truth, Whiles thy contaming Canker eats his falsehood.

...Well, Ile find friends to weare my bleeding Roses, That shall maintaine what I have saide is true, Where faile Plantagenet dare not be seene.

...Now by this Maiden Blossome in my hand, I scarce thee and thy fashion pleasant Boy.

...Turne not thy face this way, Plantagenet.

...Proud Poole, I will, and scarce both him and thee.

...Ile turne my part thereof into thy breast,

...Away, away, good William de la Poole, We grace the Yeoman, by conversing with him.

...Now by Gods will thou wrong'st him, Somerset:

...His Grandfather was Euyal Duke of Clarence,

...Third Sonne to the third Edward King of England:

...Spring Cretile Yeomen from to depeve a Root?

...He bears him on the place's Priviledge, Or durst not for his开an heart say thus.

...By him that made me, Ile maintaine my words On any Plot of Ground in Christendome.

...Was not thy Father, Richard, Earle of Cambridge,

...For Treson execused in our late Kings dayes?

...And by his Treson, stand it not thou strained, Corrupted, and exempt from ancient Gentry?

...His Trepay yet lyes giyne in thy blood,

...And till thou be refer'd, thou art a Yeoman,

...My Father was attactted, not attraite,

...Condemn'd to dye for Tiscation but no Traitor;

...And that Ile prove to better men then Somerset,

...Were growing time once ripened to my will.

...For your partake Poole and you your l interesse,

...Ile note you in my Booke of Memorie,

...To scourge you for this apprehension:

...Looketo it well, and say you are well warnd.

...Ah, thou shalt finde us readiness for thee fill,

...And know v, by these Colours for thy Foes,

...For these, my friends in sight of thee shall weere.

...And by my Soul, this pale and angry Rose,

...As Cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,

...Will I for ever, and my Faction weare,

...Untill it wither with me to the Grave,

...Or flourish to the height of my Degree.

...Goe forward, and be chock'd with thy ambition:

...And to farwell, untill I meet thee next.

...Have with thee Poole: Farwell ambitious Richard.

...How I am braud', and must perfourde et it?

...This blot that they obiect against your House,

...Shall be whip out in the next Parliament,

...Call'd for the Truce of Winchester and Gloucester:

...And if thou be not then created York, I will not live to be accounted Warricke.

...Meane time, in signall of my love to thee,

...Against proud Somerset, and William Poole,

...Will I upon thy partie wearre this Rose.

...And here I propheticke: this brawl to day,

...Grown to this Faction in the Temple Garden,

...Shall fent between the Red-Rose and the White,

...A thousand Souls to Death and deadly Night.

...Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you,

...That you on my behalfe would pluck a Flower.

...Ver. In your behalfe fill will I weare the fame.

...Lawyer. And so will I,

...Thankes gentle.

...Come, let vs touch to Dinner: I dare say,

...This Quartrell will drinke Blood another day.

...Enter Mortimer, brought on a Chariot,

...and Taylors.

...Mort. Kind Keepers of my weake decaying Age,

...Let dying Mortimer here rest himselfe.

...Even like a man new bailed from the Wrick,

...So fare my Limbes with long Imprisonment;

...And these gray Locks, the Puffins wantes of death,

...Now aged, in an Age of Care,

...Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.

...These Eyes, like Lamps, whose waving Oyle is spent,

...Waxe dimme, as drawing to their Exigent.

...Weake Shoulders, mure-born with balthening Griefe,

...And pyrple-leafe Armes, like to a withered Vine,

...That droptes his fappe-leffe Branches to the ground,

...Yet are these Feet, whose strength-leffe flay is numeare,

...Visible to support this Lumper of Clay.

...Swift-winged with desire to get a Grave,

...A writing I no other comfort hauie.

...But tell me, keeper, will my Nephew come?

...Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, any Lord, will come:

...We fente unto the Temple, into his Chamber,

...And answer was return'd, that he will come.

...Mort. Enough: my Soule shall then be satisfied.

...Poore Gentleman, his wrong doth equall nine.

...Since Henry Memon'st first began to reign,

...Before whole Glory was great in Armes,

...This loathsome sequestration haue I had;

...And even since then, hath Richard beene obfusc'd,

...Depeird of Honor and Inheritance.

...But now, the Arbitrator of Disparities,

...Just Death, kinds Vampyr of mens entitleys,

...With fweat enlargement doth dismist me henc:

...I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,

...That so he might recover what was lost.

...Enter Richard.

...Keeper. My Lord, your loving Nephew now is come,

...Mort. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he come?

...Richard. Noble Vnkle, thus I ought to vnder.

...Your Nephew, late defirid Richard, comes.

...Mort. Direct mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck,

...And in his Bosome spend my latter gaspe.

...Oh tell me when my Lippes due touch his Chekkes,

...That I may kindely give one fainting Kiss.

...And now declare weare stem from Yorkes great Stock,

...Why did thou say of late thou were defirid?

...Rich. Fuit.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Rich. First, I'll enquire thine aged Back against mine Arme, and in that case, I'll tell thee mine Dileasure.
This day in argument upon a Case, some words there grew out what affair for me: Among which treatises, he said his faulst tongue, and did virtually me with my Fathers death; which oblique let bosom before my tongue, Elfe with the like I had required him. Therefore good Vackle, for my Fathers sake, in honor of a true Plantagenet. And for Alliance sake, declare the cause. My Father, Earle of Cambridge, lost his head. More. That cause (sure Nephew) that imprison'd me, and hath desayd me all my thriving Youth, Within a loathsome Dungeon, there to yyne, was curst Instrument of his decease. Rich. Do consider at what large a cause that was, For I am ignorant, and cannot geffe. More. I will, if that my fading breath permit, and Death approach not, ere my Tale be done. Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King, Depose'd his Nephew Richard Edwardc Ston. The first begotten, and the Lawfull Heire Of Edward King, the third of that Defenc. During whose Reigne, the Persers of the North, finding his Vrappion most vniuit, Endeavor'd my advancement to the throne. The reason most thes Worlike Lords to this, Was for that (young Richard thus remov'd, Leaving no Heire begotten of his Body) It was the next by Birth and Paternage: For by my Mother, I deriv'd am. From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third Sonne To King Edward the third: whereas hee, From John of Gaunt doth bring his Pedigree, Being but fourth of that Heroick Lynce. But marke: as in this haughty great attempt, They laboure'd to plant the rightfull Heire, I lost my Liberie, and they their Lives. Long after this, when Henry the Fift (Succeeding his Father Bullyingbrook) did reigne; That Father, Earle of Cambridge, then deriv'd, From famous Edward Langler, Duke of Yorke, Marrying my Sister, that thy Mother was; and in pitty of my hard diffire, I issued an Army, wending to redeem me. And hauing intoll'd me in the Disaine: But as the rest, fo fell that Noble Earle, And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers, in whom the Tite rest'd, were supprr't. Rich. Of wch, my Lord, your Honor is the last. More. True: and thou feest, that I no illue haue, And that my fainting words doe warrant death; Thou art my Heire; the rest, I with thee gather: But yet be wary in thy fluous care. Rich. Thy grace a monstruous preuail with me: But yet me thinkes, my Fathers execution Was nothing lew'd then bloody Tyranny. More. With silence, Nephew, be thou pollutick, Strong fixt is the Houfe of Lancaster, And like a Mountain, not to be remov'd. But now thy Vackle is removing hence, As Princes doe their Courts, when they are clay'd With long continuance in a needless place, Rich. O Vackle, would some part of my young yeeres Might but redeem the passage of thy Age.

Mort. Thou do't then wrong me, as thou haist. Which gusest many Wounds, when one will kill. Mourn me, not, except thou forrow for my good, Onely give order for mine execution, And to farewell, and fare be all thy hopes, And prosperous be thy Life in Peace and Warre.
Lyce. Rich. And Peace, no Warre, hercall thy parting Soule. In Prayer shalt thou spend a Pilgrimage, And like a Hermit ouer- spill thy dayes, Well, I will locke his Countesse in my Breit, And what I doe imagine, let that rest. Keepers conuey him hence, and thy selfe, Will sce his Doytfull better then his Life. Here dyes the durske Torch of Montesor, Cloos'd with Ambition of the meaner fort. And for those Throes, thes bitter injuries, Which Somerzet hath offer'd to thy Houfe, I doubt not, but with Honor to redrecete. And therefore haffe I to the Parliament, Eyther to be retor'd to my Blood, Or make my will that dammidge of my good.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Flourn. Enter King, Exceor, Glacer, Winccester, Warwick, Somerzet, Saffils, Richard Plantagenet, Glacer offers to put up a Bill; Winccester offers, it is at your names. Winc. Can it thow with deep preechanized Linke? With written Pamplhets, studdously deu'd? Hamflery of Glacer, if thou canst accele, Or ought intend to lay into my charge, Doe it without intention, suddenly, As I with sudden, and extemporal speech, Purpose to answer what thou canst obiect. Cbe. Presumptuous Priest, this place comands my patience, Or thou shalt fit fiend thou hast dis-honor'd me. Thinkes not, although in Writing I prefer'd The manner of thy vile outrageous Crymes, That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Under-stand to rehearse the Method of my Punne. No Prelace, such is thy audazious wickednesse, Thy test, petiforous, and delentious prankes, As very Infants prattle of thy pride. Thou art a snott permittous Vunter, Froward by nature, Eneemie to Peace, Lascivious, wanton, more then well beames A man of thy Profession, and Degree, And for thy Treacherie, what's more manifest? In that thou lay'dst a Trap to take my Life, As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower, Befide, I fear me, if thy thoughts were fitt, The King, thy Soueraigne, is not quixt exempt From eneous mallice of thy swelling heart. Winc. Glacer, I doe defie thee, Lords vouchsafe To give me hearing what I shallfull reply. If I were courteous, amitious, or pueruse, As he will have me: how am I to poores? Or how haps it, I seek new to advance Or rayse my selfe? but kepe my wonted Calline. For and Diffention, who preferreth Peace More then I doe? except I be prouk'd. No, my good Lords, it is not that offend, It is not that, that hath incents the Duke: It is because no one shoulde sway but thee, No one, but thee, should be above the King; And that engenders Thunder in his breath,
And makes him rise these Accusations forth.
But he shall know I am as good.
Glo. As good?
Thou Baffard of my Grandfather.
Winb. 1, Lordly Sir: for what are you, I pray,
But one inopinsious in another's Throne?
Glo. Am I not Protestor, favorie Priest?
Winb. And am not I a Prelate of the Church?
Glo. Yes, as an Out-law in a Castle keeps,
And vouch it, to patronize his Thiefs.
Winb. Vouchsuerent Gloucester.
Glo. Thou art reverent,
Touching thy Spiritual Function, not thy Life.
Winb. Rome shall remade this.
Warw. Remove thither the Treason.
My Lord, it were your duty so forbear.
Sum. I see the Bishop be not over-borne:
Me thinks my Lord should be Religious,
And know the Office that belongs to fuch.
War. Me thinks his Lordship should be humbler,
It fitteth not a Prelate so to plead.
Sum. Yes, when his holy State is toueht to secure.
War. State holy, or villainlow'd, what of that?
Is not his Grace Peter to the King?
Rich. Plentegious I see must hold his tongue,
Lest it be said, Speake Sirrah when you should;
Must your bold Devicetenter talk with Lords?
Eliz. would I have a fling at Winchester.
King. Vackles of Glofier, and of Winchefter,
The speical! Watch-men of our English Weale,
I would preuyle, if Prayers might preuyle,
To layne your hearts in love and amite.
Oh, what a Scaudall is it to our Crownes,
That two fuch Noble Princes as ye should iare?
Beleeue me, Lords, my tender vceres can tell,
Cunful diffufion is a viperous Warne,
That gnawes the Bowels of the Common-wealth.
A warre within, Deuce with the Taryn-Conti.
King. What tumult's this?
War. An Vpcre, I dare warrant,
Began through malice of the Bishops men.
A warf against, Stones, Stones.

Enter Ezel Major.
Maier. Oh my good Lords, and veruus Henry,
Pitty the City of London, pitty vs:
The Bishops, and the Duke of Glofier men,
Forbad the Towne to gather any Weapon,
Have fill'd their Warders full of people, thenes;
And hauing made them fale in contrary parts,
Dread fcear at one another Partes,
That many haue their giddy braynes knockt oue.
Our Windows are brake downe in every Street,
And we know not, compell'd to fiue our Shops.

Enter to them with bloody Pates.
Mon. We charge you, en allegiance to our felle,
To hold and keep the driving bands, and keep the Peace:
Pray Vackles to rattle this fierce.
1. Serw. May we be forbidden Stones, weele fall
it with our Teeth.
2. Serv. Doe what ye dare, we are as refolute.

Glo. And the vaft parings of our Naves
Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.

Glo. Stay, stay, I say:
And if you loue me, as you fay you doe,
Let me perfwade you to forbear a while.
King. Oh, how this discord doth affaile my Soule,
Can you, my Lord of Winchefter, behold
My fighes and teares, and will not once relent
Who fhould be pitifull, if you be not?
Or who fhould ftrive to preterre a Peace,
If holy Churches-may delight in broyles?
Warw. Yeld my Lord Proteter, yeld Winchefter,
Except you meane with obfolute repuile.
To fly you Soueraigne, and defory the Realmes.
You fee what Mr Promtie, and what Mother too,
Hath beene enfafted through your enmities:
Then be at peace, except ye thirt for blood.
Winb. He fhall submit, or I will neuer yeeld.
Glo. Compaffion on the King commands me floupe,
Or I would fee his heart out, ere the Priet
Should ever get that prouidele of me.
Prot. Behold my Lord of Winchefter, the Duke
Hath band'd the moodle discontented furry,
As by his smoothed Browes it doth appeare:
Why looke you full to ferne, and tragical?
Glof. Here Winchefter, I offer thee my Hand,
King. Fer Vackles Benford, I have heard you præcha,
That Mallice was a great and grievous fame,
And will not you maintaine the thing you teach,
But pruent a cheife offender in the fame.
War. Sweet King! the Bishop hath a kindly gyrd;
For shame my Lord of Winchefter relent;
What, shall a Child infract you what to doe?
Winb. Well, Duke of Glofier, I will yeeld to thee.
Lone for thy Lone, and Hand for Hand I giue.
Glof. But I fear me with a hollow Heart.
See here my Friends and louing Counrymen,
This token feruenth for a Flagge of Truce,
Betwixt our fiefes, and all our followers:
So helpe me God, as I difemble not.
Winb. So helpe me God, as I entend it nor.
King. Oh, loyng Vackles, kindke Duke of Glofier,
How iroynefull and made by this Contraft,
Away my Masters, trouble vs no more.
But staye in friendship, as your Lordes haue done.
2. Serw. And to will.
3. Serw. And I will see what Physick the Tauerne affords.

Ends.

Warb. Accept this Scurwhole, most gracious Soueraigne,
Which in the Right of Richard Plenteagenet,
We doe exhiciate to your Maietie.
Glo. Wee well vrg'd, my Lord of Warwick; for sweet Prince,
And if your Grace marke every circonvenues,
You have great resolue to doe Richard rights,
Especially for those occations.
At Elizam Place I told your Maietie.

King. And

III. i. 40—155

460
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

King. And tho' those occasions, Vackle, were of force: Therefore my loving Lords, our pleasure is, That Richard be restored to his Blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his Blood, So still his Father's wrongs be recompense.

War. As will the rest, so will which Watchfuler.

King. If Richard will be true, not that all alone, But all the whole Inheritance I give, That doth belong unto the House of York, From whence you spring, by Linelill Defeint.

Rich. Thy humble servant vows obedience, And humble service, till the point of death.

King. Stoope then, and let your Knee against my Foot, And in regard of that durie done, I gyre thee with the valiant Sword of York: Riche Richard, like a true Plantagenet, And ris created Princeley Duke of York.

Rich. And to thriue Richard, as thy foes may fall, And as my dutie springs, so perish they, That grudge one thought against your Maiestie.

Ad. Welcome high Prince, the mighty Duke of York.

Cade. Now will it beft suit ye your Maiestie, To creste the Seas, and to be Crown'd in France: The presence of a King engenders love Amongst his Subiects, and his loyal Friends, As it dis-animates his Enemies.

King. When Cifler says the word, King Henry goes, For friendly counsail cut off many Foes.

Gloft. Your Ships atreade are in readiness, Stays. Flourish, Exeunt.

Manet Exeunt.

Exeunt. Iwe may march in England, or in France, Not seeing what is like to enufe: This late situation grovne between the Peers, Burns under fained aires of forf'd lour, And will at last break out into a flame, As furred members rot but by degree, Till bones and flesh and finewes fall away, So will this bafe and enuisant disord breed. And now I feare that lastall Prophecie, Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fift, Was in the mouth of euycking Ilabe, That Henry borne at Monmouth should winne all, And Henry borne at Windler, looke all: Which is to plane, that Exeunt death with, His days may finneth, ere that haplesse time.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pucell disguis'd, with some Souldiers with Sacks upon their backs.

Pucell. These are the Citie Gates, the Gates of Roan, Through which our Policy must make a breach. Take heed, be wary how you place your words, Talk like the vulgar sort of Market men, That come to gather Money for their Com. If we have entrance, as I hope we shall, And that we finde the flouthall Watch but weake, lie by a figne gue notice to our friends, That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.

Souldier. Our Sacks shall be a meane to sack the City, And we be Lords and Rulers over Roan, Therefore we'll knock. Knock:

Watch. Cis le.

Pucell. Pray you, look on the people de France, Poor Market folk who come to sell their Com. Watch. Enter, goe in, the Market Beel is rang.

Pucell. Now Roan, Ihe flake thy Bulweakes to the ground, Exeunt Enter Charles, Baffard, Afloaton, Charler. Saint Dennis biete this happy Stratageme, And once againe were'd Depeé sence in Roan.

Baffard. Here enterd Pucell, and her Prachmonts:

Now the is there, how will the specific? Here is the bafe and fiftt passage in. Reg. By thurfling out a Torch from yonder Tuer, Which once difcrim, fhowes that her meaning is, No way to that (for weakefire) which the entred. Enter Pucell on the top, thurfling out a Torch burning.

Pucell. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch, That togeth Roan into her Countreymen, But burning fatal to the Talboters.

Baffard. See Noble Charles the Beacon of our friend, The burning Torch in yonder Turret stands. Charler. Now shine it as a Commet of Reuenge, A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes. Reg. Defere no time, delays haue dangerous ends, Enter and cry, the Dolphin, preferably, And then doe execution on the Watch. Alarum.

An Alarum. Talbot in an Exeuffn.

Talk. France, thou shalt rue this Treson with thy tears, If Talbot but furinate thy Trecherie.

Pucell that Witch, that damned Sorceresse, Hath wrought this Helilith Mischief vnawares, That hardly we expt the Pride of France.

Enter Talbot and Burgonie without: within. Pucell.

Pucell God morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread? I think the Duke of Burgonie will fall, Before he be buy againe at such a rate. Two's full of Darnell: doe you like the taste? Enr. Scoffe on vyle Fried, and flanneleffe Curizan, I truft ere long to choske thee with thine owne, And make thee curfe the Hantel of that Com. Charles. Your Grace may flame (perhaps) before that time. Befi. Oh let no words, but dedes, seuenge this Treson.

Pucell. What will you doe, good gray-beard? Breake a Luunce, and summe-Tilt at Death, Within a Chayre.

Talk. Foule Fiend of France, and Hag of all despyt, Incompas'd with thy lyffalll Paramours, Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant Age, And euer with Cowardise a man halfe dead? Darnell, he have a bowe with you again, Or doe let Talbot perfeith with this flame.

Pucell. Are ye so hot, Sir yes, Pucell hold thy peace, If Talbot doe but Thunder, Raine will follow. They whisper together in counfel.

God speed the Parliament: who shall be the Speaker? 13 Talk, Dare.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Exit.

Enter, Exeunt, &c.

Seuca Tertia.

Enter Charles, Baffard, Alansou, Pucell.

Pucell. Difmay not (Princes) at this accident,

But grieve that Roan is so recovered.

Care is no cure, but rather corruftion,

For things that are undone be not remedied.

Let fairlie Taltob triumph for a while,

And by a Peacock swepe his altitude.

Wee'll pull his Plumes, and take away his Traine,

If Dolphin and the refl will be but rul'd.

Charles. We have been guided by thine hitherto,

And of thy Cunning had no difference,

But the Generall shall never breed difficult.

Baffard. Search out thy witt for secret policies,

And we will make thee famous through the World.

Alansou. Wee'll set thy Statute in some holy place,

And oute the reverent like a blest Saint.

Employ thee then, sweet Virgin, for our good.

Pucell. Then that it must be, this doth tisne devise:

By faire persuasions, mixt with sagred words;

We will entice the Duke of Burgonie.

To leave the Taltob, and to follow vs.

Charles. I marry Sweecting, if we could doe that,

France were no place for Heuenies Warriors,

Nor should that Nation boast it so with vs,

But be extirped from owr Pronounces.

Alansou. For entour shoule they be expuls'd from France,

And not have Title of an Exalted One.

Pucell. Your Honor's shall perceiue how I will worke,

To bring this matter to the wished end.

Dramme is to be play'd.

Hearte, by the found of Dramme you may perceiue

Their Powers are marching vnto Parisward.

Here is an English March.

There goes the Talbot, with his Colours flared,

And all the Troupes of English after him.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt. 109

French March.
Now in the Reversall comes the Duke and his:
For in his srow he makes him legge behind,
Summon a Parly, we will talke with him.
Trumpets sound a Parly.

Charles. A Parly with the Duke of Burgonie.
Burg. Who creates a Parly with the Burgonie?
Pucell. The Princeely Charles of France, thy Countryman.

Charles. Speake Pucell, and enchant him with thy words.
Pucell. Braue Burgonie, undoubted hope of France,
Stay, let thy humble Hand-maid speak to thee.
Burg. Speake on, but be not over-tedious.
Pucell. Look on thy Country, look on fertile France,
And see the Cities and the Townes defaet,
By wafting Ruines of the cruel Foe,
As lookest the Mother on her lowly Babe,
When Death doth cloe his tender-dying Eyes,
See, see the pining Maid of France:
Behold the Wounds, the most immensurall Wounds,
Which thou thyselfe hast given her wofull Birth.
On turne thy edged Sword another way,
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that helpe:
One drop of Blood drawnne from thy Countries Bosom,
Should giue thee more then fireames of forsake.
Returne thee therefore with a flood of Tears,
And waite away thy Countries flayed Spots.

Burg. Either the hath bewitcht me with her words,
Or Nature makes me suddenly relent.
Pucell. Besides, all French and France exclaimes on thee,
Doubling thy brist and lawfull Progenie.
Who ioyneth thou with, but with a Lordly Nation,
That will not truft thee, but for profits fake?
When Talbot hath for fouling once in France,
And fafonsd thee this Inflammation of Ill,
Who then, but English Henry, will be Lord,
And thou be thrust out, like a Fugitive?
Call we to minde, and marke but this for proofe:
Was not the Duke of Orleans thy Foe?
And was he not in England Prisoner?
But when they heard he was thine Enemy,
They fet him free, without his Ransome pay'd,
In spight of Burgonie and all his friends.
See then, thou fightst against thy Countrymen,
And ioyn'th with them, will be thy slauhers-men.
Come, come, returne; returne thou wandring Lord,
Charles, and the rest will take thee in their armes.

Burg. I am vanquished:
These haughty wordes of hers
Hate basted me like coaring Cannon-flots,
And made me almost yeeld upon my knees.
Forgive me Country, and sweet Countrymen:
And Lords accept this haering kind embrace,
My Forces and my Power of Men are yours.
So farwell Talbot, lie no longer truft thee.
Pucell. Done, done like a Frenchman; turne and turne a-

Charles. Welcome braue Duke, thy friendship makes vs freth.

Ballard. And doth beget new Courage in our Breaths.

Alas! Pucell hath braily play'd her part in this,
And doth defend a Coronet of Gold.

Charles. Now let vs on, my Lords,
And toyne our Powers,
And feke how we may prejudice the Foe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Suffolk,
Somerset, Warwick, Exeunt: To them, with his Sonildaws, Talbot.

Talk. My gracioues Prince, and honorable Peeres,
Hearing of your arrivall in this Realme,
I have a while giuen Truce unto my Wasres,
To doe my dutie to my Soueraigne,
In figne whereof, this Arme, that hath reaquym'd
To your obedience, fiftie Fortrefles,
Twelue Cities, and feuen walled Townes of stregthe,
Before fute hundred Prifoners of effenece;,
Letts fall his Sword before your Highneffe feet:
And with subminifie loyalitie of heart.
Atribes the Glory of his Conquest got,
First to my God, and next unto your Grace.

King. Is this the Lord Talbot, Vnkle Gloucester,
That hath fo long beene resident in France?
Glouc. Yes, if it plaife your Maiestie, my Liege.

King. Welcome braue Captain, and victorious Lord.
When I was young (as yet I am not old)
I doe remember how my Father faid,
A flouter Champion never handled Sword,
Long fame we were refoluted of your truth,
Your faithfull ferteus, and your toyle in Warre;
Yet never haue you tafted our Reward,
Or beene reguerdond with fo much as Thanks,
Because till now, we never faw your face.
Therefore hand vp, and for these good deferts,
We here create you Earle of Shrewsbury,
And in our Coronation take your place.

Servants. Flowers.
Exeunt.

Manet Person and Baffes.

Vns. Now Sir, to you that were fo hot at Sea,
Disgracing of the Colours that I werte,
In honor of my Noble Lord of York?
Darst thou maintaine the former words thou spak'rt?

Baff. Yes Sir, as well as you dare patronage
The enuous backing of your fawce Tongue,
Against my Lord the Duke of Somerset.

Vns. Sir, the Lord I honour as he is.

Baff. Why, what is he? as good a man as York.

Vns. Heurle yet not fo: in warre take ye that,
Strike him.

Baff. Vaille, thou knowest

The Law of Armes is such,
That who so draws a Sword, doth preuent death,
Or else this Blowe should broach thy drawell Blood.
But I will to his Maiestie, and crave,
I may have libertie to venge this Wrong,
When thou shalt fee, I meere thee to thy coift.

Vns. Well miscreant, Ile be there as soonc as you
And after meet thee, sooner then you would.

Exeunt.
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter King, Gloucester, Winchester, York, Stafford, Somerset, Warwick, Talbot, and Governor Exeter.

Glo. Lord Bishop, set the Crowne upon your head.

Glo. Now Governor of Paris take your oath, That you elect to no other King but him;

Elseweaie none Friends, but such as are his Friends, And none your Foes, but such as shall pretend Malicious practices against his State: This shall ye do, to help you righteous God.

Enter Talbot.

Tal. My gracious Sovereaigne, as I rode from Calice, To halle you unto your Coronation;

A Letter was deliver'd to my hands, Writ to your Grace, from the Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy, and thee :

I wold (aske Knight) when I did meete the next,

To receaie the Garter from thy Cruens legge;

Which I haue done, because (unworthily)

That it is install'd in that High Degree,

Pardone me Princely Henry, and therewith:

This Dallard, at the battell of Poitiers,

When (but in all) I was fixe thousand strong;

And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met, or that a stroke was gien,

Like to a truite Squire, did run away.

In which affault, we lost twelue hundred men.

My felle, and divers Gentlemen beside,

Were there surprized, and taken prifoners.

Then judge (great Lords,) if I have done smifhe

Or whether that such Cowsards ought to weare

This Ornament of Knighthood, yes or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,

And ill befieemng any common man :

Much more a Knight, a Captain, and a Leader.

Tal. When first this Order was ordain'd my Lords,

Knights of the Garter were of Noble birt;

Valiant, and Vertuous, full of haughtie Courage,

Such as were growne to credit by the worthy:

Not fearing Death, nor thinkeing for Diftriefe,

But always resolute, in most extremes.

He then, that is not furnish'd in this fort,

Doth but where the Sacred name of Knight,

Prophaneing this most Honourable Order,

And shoud (if I were we rol by to be hudge)

Be quite degraded, like a Hedge-burne Swaine,

That doth presume to boast of Gentle blood.

R. Stame to thy Cormynren, thou haes't thy doom:

Be packing therefore, thou that was't a knight :

Henceforth we banne thee on paine of death.

And now Lord Protector, view the Letter

Sent from our Victull Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What means his Grace, that he hath charg'd his Sele.

No more but thinke and blush not? (Tell the King.)

Hath he forgetten his Sovereaigne?

Or doth this cattell Superfcription

Pretend some alteration in good will?

What's here? I have upon great deal confes,

Exhautd with cormonlions from Commotion wrecks,

Together with the pittifull complaints

Of such as your oppression feets upon,

For sake your permittious Patience,

And joynd with Charler, the rightfull king of France.

O monifirous Treachery: Can this be true?

That in alliance, amity, and oaths,

There should be found such false diffembling guile?

King. What doth my Vackle Burgundy reuel?

Glo. He doth my Lord, and is become your foe.

King. Is that the worst this Letter doth containe?

Glo. It is the worst, and all (my Lord) he writes.

King. Why then Lord Talbot there shal talk with him,

And give him chaffiment for this abufe.

How say you (my Lord) are you not content?

Tal. Content, my Lige? Yes: But I am preuented,

I should have begg'd I might have bene employd.

King. Then gather strength, and march into him straight:

Let him perceive how ill we broke his Treaty,

And what offence it is to flbout his Friends.

Tal. I go my Lord, in heart desiring still

You may behold confusion of your foes.

Enter Verneon and Berjei.

Ver. Grant me the Combatte, gracious Sovereaigne.

Baf. And me (my Lord,) grant me the Combatte too.

Ver. This is my Servant, heare him Noble Prince,

Some. And this is mine (sweet Henry) favour him.

King. Be patient Lords, and give them leave to speak.

Say Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaine,

And wherefore crase you Combatte? Or with whom?

Ver. With him (my Lord,) for he hath done me wrong.

Baf. And I with him, for he hath done me wrong.

King. What is that wrong, whereof you both complain

First let me know, and then Ile answer you.

Baf. Croffing the Sea, from England into France,

This Fellow heere with envious courting tongue,

Vpraised me about the Rule I weare,

Saying, the fomige colour of the Leues

Did represent my Masters blushing checkes;

When stubbornly he did repugne the truth,

About a certaine question in the Law,

Argued be the Duke of York, and him:

With other vile and ignominious teemes.

In confutation of which rude reproach,

And in defence of my Lords worthifulle,

I crave the benefit of Law of Armes.

Der. And that is my petition (Noble Lords)

For though he seeme with forged queint conceite

To fer a gloue upon his bold intent,

Yet know (my Lord,) I was prou'd by him,

And he first took exceptions at this badge,

Prnoncing that the paleneffe of this Flower,

Bewray'd the finnettie of my Masters heart.

York. Will not this miscle Somerset be left?

Som. Your private grudge my Lord of York will out,

Though it be cunningly you smother it.

King. Good Lord, what madefulle rules in braine-

When for fo flight and frivoulos a cause,

Such fictious simulations shall arise?

Good Cofines both of Yorke and Somerset,

Quiet your flouris (I pray) and be at peace.

York. Let this differtation first be tried by flight,

And then your Highness shall command a Peace.

Som. The quarterd tongues mine but we alone,

Betwixt our felicomen vs decide it then.

York. These is my pledge, accept it Somerset,

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.
Enter Talbot with Trumpet and Drumme, before Burdeaux.

Talb. Go to the Gates of Burdeau Trumpeter, Summonmon their Generall into the Wall. Sounds.

Enter General

English John Talbot (Captaine) call you forth, Servant in Armes to Henry King of England, And thus he would, Open your Citie Gates, be humble to vs, call my Sostraigne yours, And do him homage as obedient Subjectts, and Ie withdrew me, and my bloody power. But if you frowne upon this proffer'd Peace, You tempt the fury of my three attendants, Leane Famine, quartering Steele, and climbing Fire, Who in a moment, eaten with the earth, Shall lay your lasty, and appareling Towers, If you forcile the offer of their love.

Cep. Thou ominous and fearfull Owle of death, Our Nations terror, and their bloody scourge, The period of thy Tyranny approacheth, On vs thou canst not enter but by death: For I protest we are well forfifted, And strong enough to influe out and fight. If thou retare, the Dolphin well appointed, Stands with the share of Warre to sangle thee. On either hand thee, there are squadrions pitcht, To wall thee from the liberty of Flight; And no way canst thou turne thee for redripe, But death doth from thee with apparant foyle, And pale destrution meets thee in the face: Ten thousand French haue taken the Sacrament, To ryse their dangerous Artillery Upon Christian foule but English Talbot: Loc, there thou foundd a breathing valiant man Of an invincible vnconquer'd spirit.

This is the latest Glorie of thy praise, That I thy enemy dew thee withall: For ere the Glasse that now begins to rumme, Finish the proesse of his familie house, Their eyes that see thee now well coloured, Shall fee thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

Enter the Prince, for he is thereto.
Enter Somerset with his Arme.

Soms. It is too late, I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted. All our general force,
Might with a fall of the very Towne,
Be buckled with: the outer daring Talbot
Hath full'd all his gloste of former Honor
By this vnheedfull, desperate, wilde adventure:
York let him on to fight, and dye in flame,
That Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.
Cap. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our one-match forces forth for aye.
Soms. How now Sir William, whether were you fent?
Luc. Whether my Lord, from bought & sold L.Talbot,
Who ring'd about with bold audacia,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beare sflaying death from his weake Regions,
And whiles the honourable Captain there
Drops bloody fores from his warre-wearied Limbs,
And in advantage lingking lokes for revenge,
You his false hopes, the truth of Englands honor,
Kepee off aloe with worthless emulation:
Let not your private discord keeepe away
The leued succours that should lend him aye,
While he renowned Noble Gentleman
Yeld vp his life into a world of oddes.
Orleance the Battard, Charles, Dargwelles,
Alfonse, Reipourd, compasse him about,
And Talbot perished by your default.
Soms. Yorke set him on, Yorke should have sent him aye,
Luc. And Yorke as fall vp on your Grace exclamies,
Sweating that you with-hold his leade host,
Collected for this expedition.
Soms. Yorke lyes: He might have fent; & had the Horfe:
I owe him little Dutie, and lefle Lone,
And take foule forfee to fame on him by sending.
Lw. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now inrapt the Noble-minded Talbot:
Neuer to England shall he bear his life,
But dies betraid to Fortune by your fritte.
Soms. Come go, I will dispatch the Horfemen strait:
Within five hours, they will be at his aye.
Lw. Too late comes rescue, he is rane of flaine,
For fly he could not, if he would have fled:
And fly would Talbot never though he might.
Soms. If he be dead, brace Talbot then advise.
Lw. His fame lived in the world: His Shame in you.

Enter Talbot and his Sowne.

Tal. O young John Talbot, I disdend for thee
To touter thee in frayragens of Warr.
That Talbots name might be in thee reuid,
When fapfel Age, and weake vnacible Limbs
Should bring thy Father to his drooping Chaire.
But Omalignant and ill-boarding Starres,
Now thou art come into a Feast of death,
A terrible and vnauoydéd danger:
Therefore deere Boy, mount on my fwiseft horse,
And Ile direct thee how thou shalt escape
By fafaine flight. Come, dally not, be gone.
John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your Sowne?

The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

1. York. Are not the speedy scouts returned againe,
That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?
2. Mfs. They are returned my Lord, and gile it out,
That he is march'd to Bordeaux with his power.

Enter another Messenger.

Soms. Thou Principall Leader of our English strenghe,
Never to needfull on the earth of France,
Sperre to the rescue of the Noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waft of Iron,
And hent about with grim destrucction:
Tp Burdeaux warlike Duke, to Burdeaux Yorke,
Ellie farwell Talbot, France, and Englands honor.

Tal. O God, that Somerset who in proud heart
Doth hop my Cornets, were in Talbouts place,
So should we have a valiant Gentleman,
By forsteying a Traitor, and a Coward:
Madr ire, and waftfull fury makes me wepe,
That thus we dye, while remiffe Traitors flepe.

Mfs. O fend some succour to the disstrust Lord.
Tal. He dier, we looke: I brake my warlike word:
We mount, France smiles: We loofe, they dayly get,
All long of this vile Traitor Somerset.

Mfs. Then God take mercy on brave Talbots soule,
And on his Sonne yong fawb, who two hours since,
I met in troueble toward his warlike Father;
This fuen yeere did not Talbot fee his fonne,
And now they meeke where both their lines are done.

Tal. Alas, what joy fhall noble Talbots have,
To bid his yong fonne welcome to his Graue:
Away, vexation almost stoppeth my breath,
That fanned friends greeete in the house of death:
Lance nor Arme, no more my fortune can,
But curfe the caufe I cannot ayde the man.
Mfs. Thus while the Vulture of fedition,
Feedes in the bones of such great Commanders,
Sleeping neglection does betray to lofe:
The Conquest of our fave-cold Conqueror,
That we may beginne our ventures in France.

Enter Talbot and his Sowne.

Shall
The first Part of Henry the SEXT.

And shall I flye? O, if you love my Mother, Dishonour not her Honorable Name, To make a Bastard, and a Slave of me: The World will say, he is not Talbott's blood, That baptism fled, when Noble Talbott fled.

Talk. Flye, to reuenge my destitute, I'll be flame.

John. He that flies so will, no more return again.

Talk. If we both fly, we both are sure to dye.

John. Then let me stay, and Father doe you flye: Your loyfe is great, so your reward should be; My worth willed to be knowne, no loyfe is knowne in me, Upon my death, the French can little boast; In yours they will, all your hopes are loft.

Flights cannot staye the Honor you have wonne, But mine it will, that no Exploit have done.

You fled for Vantage, every one will sweare: But if I bow, they tell it was for fear.

There is no hope that ever I will fly, If the first hour I flanke and run away.

Here on my knee I begge Mortallity, Rather then Life, perish'd with Infame.

Talk. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tombe? John. I rather then life he frame my Mothers Wombes, Talk. Upon my Blessing I command thee goe.

John. To fight I will, but not to flye the Poe.

Talk. Part of thy Father may be found in thee.

John. No part of him, but will be flame in mee.

Talk. Thou hast doe, what I never could not doe it.

John, Yes, your renowned Name, shall flight abuse it?

Talk. Thy Fathers charge that cleare thee from the flame.

John. You cannot witness for me, being flame.

If Death be so apparant, then both flye.

Talk. And leave my followers here to fight and dye? My Age was never tainted with such flame.

John. And all thy Youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can be feared from your side, Then can your selfe, your cell in swaine divide;

Stay, goe, doe what you will, the like doe I;

For lye I will not, if my Father dye.

Talk. Then here I take my leave of thee, faire Sonne, Borne to eclipse thy Life this afternoone:

Come, hide by hide, together line and dye,

And Soule with Soule from France to Heavens flye. Exit.

Alarum, Excursions, Enter old Talbot lid.

Talk. Where is my other Life? mine owne is gone.

O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John?

Triumphant Death, mete'd with Captivity,

Young Talbot Valour makes me smile at thee.

When he perceiued he shrinke, and on my Knee,

His bloody Sword he brandish'd over mee,

And like a hungry Lyon did commence,

Rough deeds of Rage, and ferne Impatience:

But when my angry Guardian drownd alone,

Tending my rime, and alias'd of none,

Dizziness Feare, and great rage of Heart,

Suddenly made him from my side to start

Into the eflurbing Battale of the French:

And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench

His ouer-mounting Spirit; and there did

My scarce, my Blossome, in his pride.

Enter with John Talbot, faire.

Sire, O my dear Lord, locate where your Sonne is borne.

Talk. Thou antique Death, which laugh'st vs here to scorn,

Anon from thy intolling Tyrannye,

Coupled in bonds of perpetuitie.

Two Talbots winged through the lither Skie,

In thy despart shall escape Mortallity.
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

O thou whose wounds have made a bloody day,
This day to speak of thee, and to thee yeald thy breath,
Thou art the cause of death by speaking, whither he will or no:
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy Foe.
Poore Boy, he faileth, he thinkes, as with a Fovt should say,
 Had Death been French, then Death had dyed to day.
Come, come, and lay him in his Fathers armes,
Whose sin can no longer bear these harms.
Souldiers, aduise: I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are yong. John Talbot's graue,

Enter Charles, Alenfon, Burgundie, Bourbon, and Race.

Char. Had Yorke and Somersey brought reuce in,
We should /ave found a bloody day of this,
Baff. How the yong whelp of Talbot raging wood,
Did fleth his pumice-sword in Frenchmen's blood.
Puc. Once I encountered him, and thus I taid:
Thou Maiden youth, be vanguitst by a Maide.
Burt. But with a proud Maitescall high flame
He answer'd thus: Yon yong Talbot was not borne
To be the pillow of a Gigot Wench:
So rumbling in the bowels of the French.
He left me proudly, as vnworthy fight.

Burt. Doubtlesse he would hawe made a noble Knight:
Where he yere inhered in the arms
Of the most bloody Nuflle of his harmer,
Baff. He tow them to pieces, hack their bones alunder,
Whole life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.
Char. Oh no forbeare: For that which we have fled
During the life, let vs not wrong it dead.

Enter Lucie.

L. W. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Text,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.
Char. On what false subtile meitle ag thou feft?
Lucy. Submisyon Dolphin! Tis a more Fewords:
We English Warrours were not what it meanes,
I came to know what Prisoners thou haft taine,
And to seuey the bodies of the dead.
Char. For prisoners seft thou? Hell our prison is,
But tell me whom thou feckst?
Luc. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot Earl of Shewsbury?
Created for his rare succeffe in Armes,
Great Earl of Walforde, Waterford, and Valence,
Lord Talbot of Guinness and Richfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmore, Lord Vermon of Alien,
Lord Framwell of Wingfield, Lord Farnham of Sheffield,
The three vicinous Lord of Falkhorshe,
Knight of the Noble Order of S. George,
Worthy S. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,
Great Marlborow to Henry the fist,
Of all his Warrs, with in the Realm of France.
Par. Here's a filly forte that invade;
The Tike that two and fiftie Kingdomes hath,
Writers not to redinus a Stile as this.
Him that thou magniffit with all these Tides,
Sunking and fly-blowne yere here at our feetes.
Lucy. 1st Talbot's fame, the Frenchmen only Scourge,
Your Kingdomes terror, and blacke Nemesis?
Oh were mine eye-balls into the Bullers turn'd,
That I might might float them at your faces.
Oh, that I could but call these dead to life,
It were enough to fright the Realm of France.
Were but his P澹6ce left among you here,

It would amaze the prowdes of you all.
Giveme their Bodys, that I may bear them thence,
And givem them Burial, as beuences their worth.
Pucell. I think this yfpart is old Talbouts Ghost,
He speakes with such a proud commanding spirit:
For Gods sake let him haue him, to keepe them here,
They would but flinke, and purfifie the ayre.
Char. Go take their bodys hence,
Lucy. He beare them hence but from their ashes shall be read
A Phoenix that shall make all France affear'd.
Char. So we be rid of them, do with him what I wilt.
And now to Paris in this conquering vaine,
All will be ours, new bloody Talbot's Blaine.

Exit.

Scena secunda.

SENET.

Enter King, Glauceller, and Exeter.

King. Have you perus'd the Letters from the Pope,
The Emperour, and the Earle of Armynack?
Gla. I have my Lord, and their intent is this,
They humbley fawe unto your Excellency,
To have a gandy peace concluded of,
Betweene the Realmes of England, and of France.
King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?
Gla. Well (my good Lord) and as the only means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And habish quietesse on every die.
K. g. I marry Vackle, for I always thought
It was both impious and unsatral,
The irk immynity, and bloody strife
Should reigne among Proflitees of our Faith.
Gla. Bede me Lord, the sooner to effect,
And furter binde this knot of anistie,
The Earl of Armynacke nere kisht to bearies,
A man of great Authoritie in France,
Proferes his onely daughter to your Grace,
In marriage Vackle: Altis my yeares are young;
And fiter is my studie, and my Books;
Thane wanton dalliance with a Paramour,
Yet call th Embassadors, and as you please,
So let them haue their answeres every one:
I shall be well content with any choyce
Tends to Gods glory, and my Countries weale.

Enter Wincefeft, and three Ambassaders.

Exit. What, is my Lord of Wincefeft infall'd,
And call'd into a Cardinall degree?
Then I perceive, that will be verified
Henry the Pifie did sometime propheticke,
I once he come to be a Cardinall,
He'll make his cap coequall with the Crowne.
King. My Lords Ambassadors, your severall suites
Have bin confider'd and debated on,
Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
And therefore are we cerryly resolve'd,
To draw conditions of a friendly peace,

Which

IV. vii. 23—V. i. 38

468
The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Which by my Lord of Wincheste we meane
Shall be transported prefently to France.

Gl. And for the proffer of my Lord your Maiest,
I have inform'd his Highnesse to at large,
As liking of the Ladies vertuous gifts,
Her Beauty, and the valet of her Dowr.
He doth intend she shall be Englands Queene.

King. In argument and prooffe of which concur,
Beside her this Jewell, pledge of my affection,
And to my Lord Protector let them guarde,
And safely brought to Dowr, wherein shal'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

Exeunt.

Win. Stay my Lord Legate, you shall first receiue
The funne of money which I promis'd
Should be deliver'd to his Holinesse,
For cloathing me in these grave Ornaments.

Legat. I will attend upon your Lordships pleasure,
Now Wincheste will not submit, I trost,
Or be inferior to the proudtf Peere.

Humfrey of Gloffter, thou shalt well perceive,
That neither in birth, or for authority,
The Bishop shal be over-borne by thee:
He either make thee floope, and bend thy knee,
Or facke this Country with a mutiny.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alarfon, Bayfard,
Eigneur, and those.

Char. These newes (my Lords) may cheere our drooping spirits:
This said, the stout Parifians do retort,
And turne againe within the warlike French.

Alarfon. Then march to Paris Royall Charle of France,
And keepe out baffle your powres in dailiance.

Puccl. Peace be amone them if they turne to vs,
Else suue combate with their Palleces.

Enter Scouts.

Scout. Succeede vnto our valiant Generall,
And happinesse to his accompies.

Char. What tidings send our Scouts?I prithee speake,

Scout. The English Army that diuided was
Into two partie, is now coniug'd in one,
And meanes to give you barcell presently.

Char. Somewhat too fcondaine Sirs, the warning is,
But we will preficte prouide for them.

Bar. If truth the Ghost of Tadow is not there:
Now he is gone my Lord, you neede not feare.

Puccl. All basee pajions, France is most affick.
Command the Conquest Charle, it shall be thine:

Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.

Char. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate,

Enter the de Puccl.

Puccl. The Regent conquers, and the Frenchmen flye.
Now helpe ye charming Spelles and Peraps,
And ye choife spirits that admonifh me,
And give mesfiges of future accidents.

Vnder the Lordly Monarch of the North,
Appeare, and ayde me in this enterprize.

Exeunt.

This speedy and quicke appearance argues prooffe
Of your accufion'd diligence to me.
Now ye Familiar Spirits, that are call'd
Out of the powerfull Regions vnder earth,
Help me this ouce, that France may get the field.

They make, and speake not.

Oh hold me not with silence ouer-long:
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
Ile top a memer off, and give it you,
In earneft of a further benefite:
So you do condidenc to helpe me now.

They facke their heads,
No hope to have redresse: My body shal.
Pay recompence, if you will graunt my fuite.

They facke their heads,
Cannot my body, nor blood-lacrifice,
Intreate you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my foule; my body, foule, and all,
Before that England and the French the foyle.

They depar.

See, they forsack me. Now the time is come,
That France must vale her lofty plum'd Creft,
And let her head fall into Englands lappe.
My ancient Incantations are too weake,
And hell too strong for me to buckle with.
Now France, thy glory droopeth to the duff.

Exeunt.

Enter Scouts. Burgundie and I take fight hand to hand, French flye.

Tourke. Damfeff of France, I think I have you faft,
Vncheate your spirits now with spelling Charmes,
And try if they can graze your liberty.

A goodly prize, fit for the duels grace,
See how the ugly Witch doth bend her browes,
As if with Cercle, she would change my fhape.

Puccl. Chang'd to a worfer fhape thou canst not be:

Tourke. Oh, charle the Daphine is a proper man,
No fhape but his can please your dainty eyes.

Puccl. A plaguing milfoole light on Charles, and thee,
And may ye both be fominly surpriz'd
By bloudy hands, in sleeping on your beds.

Tourke. Fell bannning Haggie, Inchantreffe hold thy tongue.

Puccl. I prithee give me leave to curse awhile.

Tourke. Curse Mifcreant, when thou confef to the flake.

Enter Alarfon. Enter Sufflake with Margaret in his hand.

Suff. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prifoner.

O fairest Beautie, do not fafe, nor flye:
For I will touch thee but with reverend hands,
I kiffe these fingers for eternall peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender fide.

Oh fairest, beauteous, for I may honor thee.

Char. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King,
The King of Naples, who so eft thou art.

Suff. An Earlie I am, and Suffolke am I call'd.
Be not offender Nature's myracle,
Thou art allotted to be tame by me:

Thou shalt:

Oh stay;
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

Keeping them prisoner vnderneath his wings:

Yet if this foule vage once offend,
Go, and be free again, as Suffolkes friend,
She is going
Oh stay: I have no power to let her passe,
My hand would free her, but my heart sayes no,
As playes the Sunne vpon the glasse fireames,
Twinkling another counterfeited beame,
So seemes this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes,
Paine would I woe her, yet I dare not speake:
Ile call for Pen and Ink, and write my mindes:
Eye De la Pole, dible not thy felde:
Haste not a Tongue? Is she not here?
Wilt thou be daunted at a Woman fight?
I: Beauties Princely Maiesty is such,
Confounds the tounge, and makes the senes rough.

Mar. Say Earle of Suffolke, if thy name be to,
What ranomue I playe before I pall?
For I beseeme I am thy prisoner.

Suf. Why canst thou tell thee will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her lone?

Mar. Why speakest thou not? What ranomue must I pay?
Suf. She is beautifull, and therefore to be Wood:
She is a Woman; therefore to be Wonne.

Mar. Will thou accept of ranomue, yea or no?
Suf. Pond man, remember that thou haft a wife,
Then how can Margret be thy Paramour?
Mar. I were belte to lease him, for he will not heare.
Suf. There is all mar d: heere lies a cooling card.
Mar. He talleth at roand: for the man is mad.
Suf. And yet a diftabation may bee had.
Mar. And yet I would that you would answer met
Suf. He win this Lady Margaret. F it whom?
Why for my King: Tuft, that's a woodden thing.
Mar. He talleth of wood: it is faire Carpenter.
Suf. Yet to my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace established between these Realmes.
But there remains a scruple in that too:
For though her Father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poore,
And our Nobility will foreme the match.

Mar. Heare ye Capsten? Are you not at leyure?
Suf. It shall be so, dissemble they're too much.

Henry is youthfull, and will quickly yeeld.
Madam, I have a secret to reuelse.

Mar. What though I be intarled, he seems a knight
And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouche safe to vntell what I say.
Mar. Perhaps I shall be refud by the French,
And then I need not crase my curtse.
Suf. Sweet Madam, give me hearing in a cause.
Mar. Tuft, women have bene capacitae ere now.
Suf. Lady, wherefore talke you so?
Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quod for Quo.
Suf. Say gentle Princeffe, would you not suppose
Your bondage happy, to be made a Queene?
Mar. To be a Queene in bondage, is more vile,
That's a fluze, in base fertality:
Princes should be free.
Suf. And to shall you,
If happy Englands Royall King be free.

Mar. Why what concerns his freedome vnto thee?
Suf. He vnderstakke to make thee Henrys Queene,
To put a Golden Scepter in thy hand,
And set a precious Crowne vpon thy head,
If thou wilt condemne to be my ——

Mar. What?
The first Part of Henry the Sixth.

But Madame, I must trouble you again.
No louing Taken to his Malfie.
Maer. Yes, my good Lord, a pure unpointed heart,
Neuer yet tainted with lout, I fend the King,

Soft. And this withall. /Nifheth.

That for thy felf, I will not so preface,
To fend fuch peevish tokens to a King.

Soft. Oh vew thou for my felfe: but Soufflige flay,
Thou myfelfe not wander in that Labyrinth,
There Minotours and egly Trefons lurke,
Sollicite Henry with her wonderous prafie.

Bethink thee on her Vertues that fomount,
Mad naturall Graces that extingui fh Art,
Repente their famblance on the Seas,
When that thou comitt to kneele at Heavies feete,
Thou myfelfe because of his wifs withoat.

Exit Torke.Harriwcke, Shephard, Poetst.

Tor. Being forth that Sorrowfet condemn'd to burne.
Sho. At loves, this kills thy Fathers heart out-right,
I howe I fought every Country farte and nere,
Now and it is my chance to finde thee out.
Muff I behold thy timelife cruel death:
Ah love, (tooze daugther love, I die with thee.
Soft. Decreet Mifer, fableigne Wretch, I
I am defended of a gentiler blood.

This no Father, no Mother, nor Wife.

Sho. Ouf, our, my Lords, and pleafe, 'tis not so
I did beget her, all the Parrish knowes:
Her Mother lineath yet, can teefe thee.
She was the first fruit of my Bache-fhip,
War. Gracelefle, wilt thou deny thy Parentage?

Torke. This argues what her kind of life hath beene,
Wicked and vile, and fo her death concludes.

Sho. Eye love, that thou wilt be fo oldfeale:
God knowes, thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy like hauo I flud many a teare:
Deny me not, I praythee, gentle love.

Pencle. Peaceantuant. You have suborn'd this man
Of parpole, to obfoure my Noble birth.
Sho. Their true, I gaue a Noble to the Prieff,
The morne that I was wedded to my Noble mother,
Kneele downe and take my bleffing, good my Gytle.
Wilt thou not floue? Now can I be the time
Of thy Satyte: I would the Mulke
Thy mother gaue thee when thou fook'ft it her breft,
Had bin a little Rus-fane for thy fake.
Or elfe, when thou didst keepe my Lambs a-field,
I with fonme ravenous Wolfe had eaten thee,
Doeft thou deny thy Father, curfed Drab?
O burn thee, burn thee, hangling is too good.

Exit Torke. Take her away, for the hath lid too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.

Pur. First let me tell you whom you haue condemned;
Not me, begotten o a Shephard Swaine,
But ifled from the Progeny of Kings.
Veritous and Holy, choien from above,
By inspiration of Celestial Graces,
To weake exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked Spirits.
But that you are pollutted with your lustes;
Stained with the guiltifleede blood of Innocents,
Corrupt and taint'd with a thousand Vice's:
Because you want the grace that others hau;
You live after a straight a thing impossible
To compass Wonders, but by helpe of diuels.
It shall be with such strict and severe Courousaas,
As little shall the Frenchmen gainsie thereby.

Enter Charles, Marshal, Biflord, Requiror.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peacefull truce shall be proclaimed in France,
We come to be informed by your seules,
What the conditions of that league must be:

Turks. Speake Wincklefter, for boyling choller chokes
The hollow passage of my poynson'd voyce,
By fhye of these our bailefull enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That in regard King Henry giues content,
Of meece compaffion, and of lenity,
To eafe your Courtrye of diiftrefful Warre,
And suffer you to breathe in full peace,
You shall become true Liegemen to his Crowne.
And Charles, vpon condition thou wilt trrue
To pay him tribute, and submit thy feile,
Thou shalt be plac'd as Viceroy under him,
And full enjoy thy Regall dignity.

Altan. Must he be then as freeholder of himselfe?
A dorne his Temples with a Coronet,
And yet in subulance and authority,
Retaine but privdidgel of a private man?
This proffer is abfull, and reasonable.

Char. This knowe you already that I am poiffed
With more then halfe the Gallias Territories,
And therein renuered for that lawfull King:
Shall I for lucce of the self vn-vanquift,
Detraa so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but Viceroy of the whole?
No Lord Ambasclador, Ie rather keepe
That which I have, than courting for more
Be call'd from possibility of all.

Turks. Infalting Charles, hath thou by secret means
V'd interceffion to obtaine a league,
And now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'thou aloofe vpon Compaffion.
Either accept the Tidle thou v'rpft,
Of benefit proceeding from our King,
And not of any challenge of Dextor,
Or we will plague thee with incensel Warres.

Reg. My Lord, you do not well in obligatory,
To comm in the course of this Contract:
If once it be neglet'ted, ten to one
We shall not finde like opportunity.

Altan. To fay the truth, it is your policie,
To raise your Subiects from such mesacrse
And ruffiaf'laughters as are daily leene
By our proceeding in Hohility,
And therefor take this compact of a Truce,
Although you brake it, when your pleasure ferves.

War. How fayes thou Charles?
Shall our Condition stand?

Char. It Shall:

Onely refer'd, I claim no interef
In any of our Townes of Garlon.

Turks. Then trrue the Allegiance to his Maiesty,
As thou art Knight, tenter to disobey,
Not be Rebellious to the Crowne of England,
Thou not thy Nobles, to the Crowne of England;
So, now dismiufe your Army whifey prays;
Hang vp your Ensignes, let your Drummes be still,
For betre we enterraine a solemne peace.

Enter Saffolck in conference with the King, Gloucefer, and Ester.

King. Your wondroues rare description (noble Earl)
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish't me;
Her vertues grased with externall gifts,
Do breed Loues Iettled passions in my heart,
And like as vigour of tentenulous gutes
Provokes the mightief Chatle against the tide,
So am I driv'n by breath of her Renowne,
Either to suffer Shipwraske, or starue.
Where I may have fruition of her Loun.

Saff. Tuff thy good Lord, this superfussiall tale,
Is but a preface of her worthy praffe;
The cheefe perfection of that Louely Dame,
(Had I sufficiens skill to utter them)
Would make a volume of stinging lines,
Ably to raife any dull conceit,
And which is more, she is not fo Diutin,
So full replete with choice of all Delights,
But with as humble lowliness of minde,
She is content to be at your command:
Command I meant, of Verueous chaile intents,
To Loue, and Honor Henry as her Lord.

King. And otherewife, will Henry nowe preface
Therefore my Lord Pretecho, gine contentes,
That Margaret may be Englands Royall Queene.

Saff. So should I gine content to flatter fortune,
You know (my Lord) your Highnesse is betroath'd
Vnito another Lady of vtilitee,
How shall we then dispesne with that contra,?
And not decaye you Honor with reproach?

Saff. As doth a Ruler with unlawfull Oather,
Or one that at a Triumph, hating yow'd
To try his strength, forlacketh yet the Littes
By reason of his Adversaries oldes.
A poore Earles daughter is veinqual oldes,
And therefore may be broke without enetence,
Gloucefer. Why what (I praye) is Margaret more then this?

Her Father is no better than an Earle,
Although in glorious Titles he excell.

Saff. Yes my Lord, her Father is a King,
The King of Naples, and Jerusaleem,
And of such great Authoritie in France,
As his alliance will confrrme our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glou. And to the Earl of Arminacke may doe,
Because he is nexte Kinfman unto Charles.

Exm. But his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,
Where Requiror loomet will receive, than glue.

Saff. A Dowre my Lord? Disgrace not to your King,
That he should be so obiecte, base, and poore,
To choose for thenet, and not for perfect Loue.

Henry. Is able to enrich his Queene,
And not to fexe a Queene to make him rich,
So worthie Pennan bargaine for their Wives,
As Magallen men for Oxen, Sheetes, or Hore.

Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Then to be dealt in by Attorney-ship:
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,

V. iv. 114—V. v. 57

472
The firft Part of Henry the Sixt.

Mufh be companion of his Nuptiall bed:
And therefore Lords, once he s Elects her most,
Mofl of all thefe reasons bindeth ws,
In our opinions thef should be preferre'd.
For what is wedlocke forfake but a Hell,
An Age of difcord and continual strife,
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliffe,
And is a patttern of Celestiall peace.
Whom fhould we match with Henry being a King,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a King:
Her peaceable feature, loyed with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a King.
Her valiant courage, and undauncted spirit,
(More then in women commonly is seen)
Will anfwer our hope in like of a King.
For Henry, fonne vnto a Conqueror,
Is likely to beget more Conquerors,
With a Lady of fo high refolar,
(As is faire Margaret) he be lik'd in love.
Then yield my Lords, and here conclude with mee,
That Margaret fhall be Queene, and none but fhee.
King, Whether it be through force of your report,
My Noble Lord of Suffolk: Or for that
My tender youth was never yet attaine
With any paffen of inflaming love,
I cannot tell: but this I am aflert'd,
I feele such sharpe diflention in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Feare,
As I am fick with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore fhipping, polle my Lord to France,
Agree to any conditions, and procure
That Lady Margaret do yowghtife to come
To croffe the Seas to England, and be crown'd
King Henry faithfull and anointed Queene.
For your expences and fufficient charge,
Among the people gather vp a tenth,
Be gone I fay, for till you do returne,
I reft perplexed with a thousand Cares.
And you (good Vnkle) banifh all offence:
If you do cenfure me, by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excufe
This fudden execution of my will.
And fo conduct me, where from company,
I may reuife and ruminate my greafe.

FINIS.

HV MFREY.

Aulus Primus. Scena Prima.

Fleurish of Trumpets: Then Hubayes.

Enter King, Duke Humphrey, Salisbury, Warwick, and Beaumonde on the one side.
The Queen, Suffolk, York, Somerset, and Buckingham, on the other.

Suffolk.
Such by your high Imperial Majesty,
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As Proctor to your Excellence,
To marry Princes Margaret for your Grace;
So in the Famous Ancient City, Tours,
In presence of the Kings of France, and Sicil,
The Dukes of Orleans, Calhier, Brissigny, and Alazon,
Seven Earles, twelve Barons, & twenty reverend Bishops
I have perform'd my Task, and was espous'd,
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In fight of England, and her Lordly Princes,
Deliver vp my Title in the Queene
To your most gracius hands, that are the Substance
Of that great Shadow I did represent;
The happy Gift, that ever Marguerite gave,
The Pairest Queene, that ever King receiv'd,
King. Suffolk, assemble. Welcome Queene Margaret,
I can express no kinder signe of Love
Then this kind Queene: O Lord, that lends me life,
Lend me a heart repose with thankfulness;
For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If Sympathy of Love raise our thoughts,
Queene. Great King of England, & my gracious Lord,
The mutual conference that my mind us'd had,
By day, by night; wakings, and in my dreams,
In Courtly company, or at my Beater,
With you mine Adler is my Soueraigne,
Makes me the bolder to salute my King,
With ruder terms, such as my wits afford,
And over my heart is minister,
King. Her fight did rankish, but her grace in Speech,
Her words ycad with wife'somes Masterly,
Makes me from Wondring, fall to Weeping joyes,
Such is the Fullest of my hearts content.
Lords, with one chearful voice, Welcome my Queene.
Adieu. Long live Que. Margaret, England's happiness,
Queene. We thank you all.
Flourish

Suf. My Lord Protector, most please your Grace,
Here are the Articles of contracted peace,
Between our Soueraigne, and the French King Charles;
For eighteen months concluded by content.

Glo. Read's, Imprints, It is agreed between the French K. Charles, and William de la Pole Marquess of Suffolk, Ambassadors for Henry King of England; That the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter and Heiress King of Naples, Sicil, and Jerusalem, and Crown her Queene of England, on the thirtieth day next ensuing.

Item, That the Dutie of Annes, and the County of Main, shall be released and demitted to the King her father.

Pardon me gracious Lord,
Some sudden qualmes hath strucke me at the heart,
And dad mine eyes, that I cannot see further.

King. Vinkle of Winchelsea, I pray read on.

Win. Item, It is further agreed between them, That the Dutie of Annes and Maine, shall be released and demitted over to the King her father, and she sent over the King of England some proper Cofl and Charges, without bating any Dowry.

King. They please vs well. Lord Marques kneel down,
We here present the first Duke of Suffolk,
And give thee with the Sword, Coasne of Yorke,
We here discharget your Grace from being Regent 1st parts of France, till termes of Eighteen Moneths
Be fullly expir'd. Thanks Vinkle Winchelsea, Gloffer, Yorke, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick.

We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my Princely Queene.
Come, let vs in, and with all speede proceed
To see her Coronation be perform'd.

Exit King, Queene, and Suffolk.

Music the rest.

Glo. Brave Peeres of England, Pillars of the State,
To you Duke Humphrey must unfold his Greefe:
Your greefe, the common greefe of all the Land.
What did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people in the warres?
Did he so often lodge in open field?
In Winters cold, and Summers parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford royle his wits,
To keepe by policy what Henry got:
Have you your felues, Somerset, Buckingham,
Braue Torke, Salisbury, and viciosus Warwicke
Receivd deepse fates in France and Normandie:
Or hath mine Vnkle Desanford, and my selfe,
With all the Learned Counsell of the Realme,
Studied fo long, fat in the Councell house,
Early and late, debating too and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe,
And hath his Highnesse in his infancy,
Crown'd in Paris in despit of foes,
And all their Labours, and these Honours dye?
Shall Henrys Conquell, Bedford's vigilance,
Your Deeds of Warre, and all our Counsell dye?
O Peeres of England, thatenfull is this League,
Fatail this Marriage, cancelling your Fame,
Blotting your names from Bookes of memory,
Racing the Charactres of your Renowne,
Defacing Monuments of Conquer'd France,
Vindewing all as all had neuer been.

Car. nephew, what means this passionate discours?
This preperation with such circumference:
For France, its ours; and we will keep it still.
Glo. I Vnkle, we will keepe it, if we can:
But now it is imposible we shou'd,
Suffolke, the new made Duke that rules the rold,
Hath guen the Dutche of Answ and Hugene,
To the greatest King, Regenier, whole large style
Agree not with the Juneelle of his purfe.

Sal. Now by the death of him that dyed for all,
Their Countrie were the Keyes of Normandie:
But wherefore weepes Warwick, my valiant frond?
War. For greefe that they are paft recouerie.
For were there hope to conquer them againe,
My sword shou'd shed hot blood, mine eyes no teares.
Anson and Maine? My felfe did win them both:
These Provinces, their Armes of mine did conquer,
And are the Citiees that I got with wounds,
Deline'd vp againe with peacefull words?

Mart. Diesu. Torke.
For Suffolkes Duke, may be he fuffocate,
That dim the Honor of this Warlike lfe:
France shou'd have horne and rent my very hart,
Before I would have yeelded to this League.
I never read but Englands Kings have large fumnes of Gold, and Dowerie with their wifes,
And our King Henry glues away his owne,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Hum. A proper left, and neuer heard before,
That Suffolke should demand a whole Fifteenth,
For Costs and Charges in transporting her:
She shou'd have flaid in France, and staid in France before.

Car. My Lord of Glofters, now we grow too hot,
It was the pleasure of my Lord the King.

Hum. My Lord of Wincheltor, I know your mind.
Tis not my speoches that you do mislike:
But its my presence that doth trouble ye,
Rancour will out, proud Prelate, in thy face
See thy furie: If longer stay,
We shall begin in our ancient bickerings:
Rendings farerwell, and fay when I am gone,
I prophesied, France will be loffe for long, Exit Humfray.

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage:
Tis knowne to you he is mine enemy:
Nay more, an enemy vnto you all,
And no great friend, I fear me to the King;
Consider Lords, he is the next of blood,
And heyre apparent to the English Crown:
Had Henry got an Empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the West,
There's reafon he should be displeased at it:
Looke to it, Lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts, be wise and circumfert.
What though the common people fownd him,
Calling him, Humfrey the good Duke of Suffolk,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce,
Jes maintaine your Royall Excellence,
With God preferr the good Duke Humfrey:
I fear me Lords, for all this flattering gloffe,
He will be found a dangerous Protector.

War. Why should he then protect our Sovereigne?
He being of age to gouerne of himfelfe.
Coun of Somerset, Ioyne you with me,
And al together with the Duke of Suffolk,
We'll quickly hoyde Duke Humfrey from his feast.
Car. This weighthy businesse will not brookes delay,
Let to the Duke of Suffolkle presently. Exit Cardinal.
Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humfray's pride
And greateffe of his place be greefe too,
Yet let vs watch the haughty Cardinal,
His infolence is more intolerable.
Then all the Princes in the Land before,
If Gloftor be diplaid, he'1 be Protector.

Car. Or thou, or I Somerfet will be Protectors, Depifie Duke Humfrey, or the Cardinal.

Exit Buckingham, and Somerfet.

Sult. Pride went before, ambition follows him.
While these doe labour for their owne preferveme,
Behoues it vs to labor for the Realme.
I neuer faw but Humfrey Duke of Gloftor,
Did b rave him like a Noble Gentlemen:
Oft have I f teen the haughty Cardinal,
More like a Soulthren then a man o'fh Church,
As fliut and proud as he were Lord of all,
Sware like a Ruffian, and demeaned himfelfe
Unlike the Ruler of a Common-wealth.
Warwick my fonne, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainence, and thy houfe-keeping,
Hath wonne the greateft favour of the Commons,
Excepting none but greate Duke Humfrey.
And Brother Yorke, thy fads in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil Discipline:
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert Regent for our Soueraigne,
Hau'e made thee fear'd and honord of the people,
Ioyne we together for the publike good,
In what we can, to bride and tuppiffle
The pride of Suffolk, and the Cardinal,
With Sompertons and Buckinghames Ambition,
And as we may, cherish Duke Humfrays deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the Land.

War. So God helpe Warwick, as he loves the Land,
And common profit of his Country.

Tor. And fo fayes Yorke,
For he hath greateft caufe.

Sallibery. Then lets make bafe all,
And looke into the mains.

Warwick. Vnto the mains? Oh Father, Maine is loff,
That Maine, which by maine force Warwick did winne,
And would have kept, so long as breath did left:
Main-chance fatter you meant, but I meant (Maine),
Which I will win from France, or else be blame.
Exit Warwick, and Salisbury.
Maine Yorks.
York, Aven and Maine are given to the French,
Paris is lost, the state of Normandie.
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
Suffolk concluded on the Articles,
The Petes aged, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two Duke-domes for a Duke's fair daughter.
I cannot blame them all, what is to them?
'Tis thine they give a way, and not their owe.
Pirates may make cheap peny-worths of their pillage,
And purchase Franks, and give to Currizans,
Still reveling like Lords till all be gone,
While the silly Owner of the goods
Weepes over them, and wrings his hapless hands,
And makes his head, and troubling lands aloofe,
While all is shai'd, and all is borne away,
Ready to fteuce, and dare not touch his owne.
So Yorke mutt fit, and freat, and bite his tongue,
While his owne Lands are bargain'd for, and fold:
Me thinks the Realmes of England, France, and Ireland,
Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fallat brand of Atheus burn,
Where the Princes of Caduan:
Aven and Maine both gien unto the French:
Cold newses for me: for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile Englandes fpole.
A day will come, when Yorke fhall claim his owne,
And therefore I will take the Nemis parts,
And make a fhow of love to proud Duke Hunfry,
And when I fpy advantage, claim the Crown,
For that's the Golden mark I feake to hit:
Nor flall proud Lancaster vpore my right,
Nor hold the Scepter in his childifh frit,
Nor weare the Diadem upon his head,
Whole Church-like humoris fift not for a Crowne.
Then Yorke be fitt a while, till time do fere:
Watch thou, and wake when others be ifleepe,
To prie into the fecrets of the State,
Till Avenie fperating in joyes of fount:
With his new Bride, & Englands deere bough Queen,
And Hunfry with the Peeres be faine at iares:
Then will Iaffe aloft the Milke-white-Roie,
With whole white fmeill the Ayre fhall be perfumed,
And in my fandard bear the Armes of Yorke,
To grapple with the house of Lancater,
And force perfere Ie make him yend the Crowne,
Whole bowche, bath pul'd England downe.

Exit York.

Enter Duke Hunfry and his wife Eleanor.

Elius. Why droope my Lord like over-rigent'd Coin,
Hanging the head at Ceres plentiful load?
Why doth the Great Duke Hunfry knit his browes,
As frowning at the Favouris of the world?
Why are thine eyes five to the fallen earth,
Gazing on thifh Rule which feemes to fhaire thy fight?
What feefs thou there? King Henry Diadem,
Incnead with all the Honors of the world?
If to, Gaines on, and growell on thy face,
Vntill thy head be circled with the fame.
Put forth thy hand, reach out the glorious Gold.
What, is't too short? Ie lengthen it with mine,
And having both together head it up,
We'll both together on our head's to happen,
And never more shall our fght follow,

As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Hun. O Ne, Sweet Ne, if thou doft love thy Lord,
Banifh the Canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my King and Nephew, vertuous Henry,
Be my laf breathing in this mortall world.
My troublous dreams this night, doth make me sad.

Eili. What dreams did my Lord, tell me, and Ie require it
With sweet rehefalt all of my morning's dream?

Hun. Me thought this faffe mine Office-badge in Court
Was broke in twaine by whom, I hate forgot,
But as I think it, was by th' Cardinal,
And on the peeces of the broken Wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmond Duke of Somerfet,
And William de la Pole thift Duke of Suffolke.
This was my dreame, what it doth bode God knowes.
Eius. Tut, this was nothing but aargument,
That he that breaks a fickie of Glofters grous,
Shall loafe his head for his prefumption,
But lift to me my Hunfry, my sweete Duke:
I me thought I fate in Seate of Maiefty,
In the Cathedral Church of Welfmim-fetter,
And in that City where Kings & Queens are crowd,
Where Henry and Dame Margaret lived to me,
And on my head did fet the Diadem.

Hun. Nay Eleanor, then muft I chide outright:
Presumptuous Dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor,
Art thou not second Woman in the Realme?
And the Protecrors wife beloue of him?
Halt thou not worldly pleafure incommand,
Above the reach or compaffe of thy thought?
And wilt thou full be hammering Treachery,
To tumble downe thy husband, and thy fife,
From top of Honor, to Disgrace, fffeet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Eius. What, what, my Lord? Are you so chollicke:
With Eleanor, for telling but her dreame?
Next time Ie keepe my dreames vnto my felfe,
And not be check'd.

Hun. Nay be not angry, I am pleas'd againe.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. My Lord Protecrors, his his Highnes pleafure,
You do prepare to ride vnto S. Albans,
Where as the King and Queene do meane to Hawke.

Hun. I go, Come Nei thou wilt ride with vs?
Eius. Yes my good Lord, Ie follow prefently.

Hun. But by the grace of God, and Humes advice,
Your Grace Title fhall be multiplied.

Eius. What fay thou man? Hafl thou as yet conferd
With Margerie lordane the cunning Witch,
With Roger Bollingbroke the Comuter?
And will you undertake to do good or ill?
This they have promis'd to sweeve your Highnes
A Spirit-race'd from depth of under ground,

That
The second Part of Henry the Sixte.

That shall make answer to such Questions.
As by your Grace shall be proppounded him.

Eliz. It is enough, I'll think upon the Questions.
When from Saint Albans we doe make residence,
Wee see these things effectuated to the full.
Here Hume, take this reward and make merry man
With thy Confederates in this weightie cause.

Exit Eliz.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Dukeัส Gold.
Marry and all; but how now, Sir John Hume?
Scale vp your Lips, and give no words but Hum.
The busi sulphet intera terece.
Dame Eliz. gives Gold, to bring the Witch.
Gold cannot come amisse, were it a Deall,
Yet have I Gold eyes from another Cost.
I do not say to the rich Cardinal,
And from the great and now-made Duke of Suffolk;
Yet I doe make use for to be phine,
They (knowing Dame Eliz.aspiring humor)
Have hyed me under mine the Duchease,
And buzz the thee Comotions in her brayne.
They say, A crafty Knaves doe need no Brokers,
Yet am I Suffolk and the Cardinells Broker.
Hume, if you take no heed, you shall see me.
To call them both a preyre of craftie Knaves.
Well, so it stands; and thus I fear at last.
Knave. Knaves; will be the Duchease Wacke,
And her Atainture, will be Humpreys fall.
Sure how it will, I shall have Gold for all.

Exit

Enter three or some Petitioners, the Armours.
Man being one.

1. Pet. My Masters, let's fland close, my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then wee may deliver our Supplications in the Quill.
2. Pet. Marry the Lord protect him, for he's a good man, tell him of mee.

Enter Suffolk, and Queen.

Peter. Here a comest me thinker, and the Queen with him. He be the first bite.

Suff. How now fellows, would it any thing with mee?

Queen. To my Lord Protector? Are your Supplications to his Lordship? Let me see them: what is there?
2. Pet. Mune is, and please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinals Man, for keeping my House, and Lands, and Wife and all from me.

Suff. Thy Wife too? that's some Wrong indeed.
What's yours? What's here? Against the Duke of Suffolk, for encloasing the Commons of Melford. How now, Sir Knaue?

Peter. Against my Master Thomas Fower, for saying, That the Duke of York was rightful Heire to the Crowne.

Queen. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of York say, he was rightful Heire to the Crowne?

Peter. That my Master was? No forsooth; my Master said, That he was, and that the King was an Vn正品s.

Suff. Who is there?

Enter Servant.

Take this fellow in, and fend for his Master with a Purveyor prently: we'll be here more of your matter before the King.

Queen. And as for you that love to be protected
Under the Wings of our Protectors Grace,
Begin your Suites anew, and sue to him.

Tear the Supplication.

Away, barke Callions; Suff. I'll then goe.

All. Come, let's be gone.

Queen. My Lord of Suffolk, why is this the guise?
Is this the Fashions in the Court of England?
Is this the Government of Britaines He?
And this the Royaltie of Albions King?
What, shall King Henry be a Pupill still,
Vnder the fouly Glidesft Governance?
Am I a Queene in Title and in Stile,
And must be made a Subject to a Duke?
I tell thee Dukes, when in the Cutie Tours
They ran't a tilt in honor of my Love,
And hol' away the Ladies hearts of France;
I thought King Henry had refembled thee,
In Courage, Courtship, and Proportion;
But all his minde is bent to Holinelle,
To number Acts Moines on his Bodes:
Hi. Champions, are the Prophets and Apostles,
His Weapons, holy Swords of Sacred Writ,
His Studie is to fill the Land, and his Love
Are brazen Images of Canoned Saints,
I would the Colledge of the Cardinalls
Would chuse him Pope, and carry him to Rome,
And let the Triple Crowne upon his Head;
That were a State fit for his Holinelle.
Suff. Madame be parent: as I was cause
Your Highness came to England, so will I
In England make your Grace full content.
Queen. Beside the haughtie Protector, have we Beauchamp
The imperious Churchman, Sayers, Buckingham,
And grumbling Tylke, and not the least of thieves,
But can doe more in England then the King.
Suff. And he of these, that can doe most of all,
Cannot doe more in England then the Amenis:
Suff. A fairnesse and wise, no more a Fauolyer.
Queen. Not all these Lords doe vex me halfe so much,
As that proud Dame, the Lord Protector's Wife
She tveepest it through the Court with groups of Ladies
More like an Empresse, then Duke Humphreys Wife.
Strangers in Court, doe take her for the Queene;
She bears a Dukes Reuenews on her backe,
And in her heart she coloured with Pride:
Shall I not be to be aunged on a Conspicuois base-born Callus as she is,
She waunted 'mongst her Minions other day,
The very trayne of her worst wearing Gowne,
Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands,
Till Suffolk gave two Duckedomes for his Daughter,
Suff. Madame, my selfe have lynd a Bush for her,
And plac'd a Quiet of such enticing Birds,
That she well light to listen to the Layers,
And nevermore to trouble you againe.
So let her rest: and Madame lett to us,
For I am bold to counsafe you in this.

Entr. Although we fancie not the Cardinall,
Yet must we oweyn with him and with the Lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.
Enter the King, Duke Hamfray, Cardinall, Buckingham, Talbot, Salisbury, Warwick, and the Duke of.

King. For my part, Noble Lords, I care not which, Or Souerain, or Turk, all's one to me.

Turke. If Turk have ill demand'd himselfe in France, Then let him be desty the Regent-ship.

Souerain. If Souerain be unworthy of the Place, Let Turk be Regent, I will yield to him.

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yes or no, Dispute nor that, Turk is the worthy.

Card. Ambitious Warwick, let thy better's speake.

War. The Cardinall's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy better's Warwick.

Warr. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Salis. Peace, Sonne, and thee some reason Buckingham.

Why Souerain should be prefer'd in this?

Queene. Because the King fortooth will haue it so.

Humf. Make way, the King is old enough himselfe.

To give his Censure: These are no Women's ship.

Queene. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be Protecor of his Excellence?

Humf. Madame, I am Protecor of the Realme, And at his pleasure will reigne my Place.

Suff. Resigne it then, and leaue thine influence.

Since thou wert: Kings as who is King, but thou?

The Common-wealth hath daly run to rack,

The Dolphin hath presuyd beyond the Seas,

And all the Peres and Nobles of the Realme

have beene as Bond-men to thy Soueraigne.

Card. The Commons hath thou rackt, the Clergies Bags Are lanke and leaue with thy Extortions.

Somm. Thys famious Buildings, and thy Witiues Attyre

Hau been a madde of publike Treasurie.

Buck. This, Toy Crueltie in execution

Upon Offenders, hath exceed Law,

And left thee to the mercy of the Law.

Queene. Thy tale of Offices and Townes in France,

If they were knowne, as the fupject is great,

Would make thee quickly hop without thy Head.

Humf. Take him away.

Queene. Give me my Fame: what, Mycion, can ye not?

She gives the Duke some box on the ear.

I cry thee mercy, Madame?was it you?

Duch. Wast 17? year, it was proud French-woman:

Could I come neere thy Beautie with my Nayles, I could see thy ten Commandements in thy face.

King. Sweet Aune be quiet, was against her will.

Duch. Against her will, good King, locke not in time,

Sheelle banster thee, and dandle thee like a Baby:

Though in this place most Matter weare no Breachos,

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor vnrequeng'd.

Exit Eleanor.

Buck. Lord Cardinall, I will follow Eleanor,

And listen after: Hamfray, how he procedes

She's tickled now, her Fume needs no spurs,

She'll gallop faster enough to her destruction.

Exit Buckingham.

The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Humf. Now Lords, my Choller being over-blowne,

With walking once about the Quadrangle,

I come to take of Common-wealth Affairs.

As for your spightfull falle Objections,

Prowe them, and I lyce open to the Law:

But God in mercie so deale with my Soule,

As I in dutie loue my King and Countrie.

But to the matter that we haue in hand:

I say, my Souerain, Turk is meete man

To be your Regent in the Realme of France.

Suff. Before we make election, give me leave

To shew some reason, of no little force,

That Turk is most vnmeet of any man.

Turke. I tell thee, Suffic, why I am vnmeet.

First, for I cannot flatter thee in Pride:

Next, if I be appointed for the Place,

My Lord of Souerain, wilt keep me here,

Without Discharge, Money, or Furniture,

Till France be wonne into the Dolphins hands:

Last time I danc't attendance on his will,

Till Paris was befeg'd, famish'd, and lost.

War. That can I winneffe, and a fouler fact

Did never Tryator in the Land commit.

Suff. Peace, here, the Duke Warwick.

War. Image of Pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Armorer and his Man.

Suff. Because here is a man accused of Treacon,

Pray God the Duke of Yorkie excuse himselfe.

Turke. Both any one accuse Turk for a Tryator?

King. What mean'th it, Suffic? tell me, what are these?

Suff. Please it your Maiestie, this is the man

That doth accuse his Master of High Treacon;

His words were these: That Richard, Duke of Yorkie,

Was rightfull Heire into the English Crowne,

And that your Maiestie was an Usurer.

King. Say maniere these thy words?

Armorer. And shall please your Maiestie, I never sayd nor thought any such matter: God is my witneffe, I am falsely accused by the Villaine.

Petir. By these tbene bones, my Lords, hee did speake them to me in the Garret one night, as we were lcowing

my Lord of Yorkers Armor.

Turke. Safe Dunghill Villain, and Mechanicall,

He bare thy Head for this thy Tryator's speche.

I doe beseech your Royall Maiestie,

Let him baue all the rigor of the Law.

Armorer. Alas, my Lord, hang me if ever I spake

the words; my accuser is my Prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vowe upon his knees he would be true with me: I have good witneffe

of this: therefore I beseech your Maiestie, do not eft away an honest man for Villaines accusation.

King. Vnkle, what shall we dase to this law?

Humf. This doone, my Lord, if I may judge:

Let Souerain be Regent o're the French,

Because in Turk this breedes sullipition;

And let thee have a day appointed them

For single Combat, in convenient place,

For he hath winneffe of his servantes malice:

This is the Law, and this Duke Hamfray's doome.

Semi. I
Enter the Duke of York and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon those Traytors, and their trait'ish Beldam: I think we watch you at an ync; What Madame, are you there? the King & Commonwealth Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains; My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, See you well guarded for these good deferts.

Elianor. Not halfe so bad as thine to Englands King, Injurious Duke, that threst at whose no cause, Buck. True Madame, none at all: what call you this? Away with them, let them be clapt vp close, And kept sunder: you Madame shall with vs, Stafford: take her to thee.

We'll see your Trinkets here all forth-coming, All away. Exit. York, Lord Buckingham, me thinks you watch her well: A pretty Plot, well choen to build vp. Now pray my Lord, let's see the Details Writ. What have we here? Reads. The Duke yet lovers, that Henry shall depose: But him out-line, and dye a violent death, Why this is jest, As A Tarquins Romanes vincere poffe, Well, to the rest: Tell me what fate aows the Duke of Suffolk? By Water shall he dry, and take his end; What shall beute the Duke of Somerset? Let him licorne Cathles, Safer shall he be upon the sande Plains, Where Cathles mounted stond, Come, come, my Lords, These Oracles are hardly attaing, And hardly underflood. The King is now in progeffte towards Saint Albans, With him, the Husband of this lowly Lady: Thither goes thefe Newes, As fast as Horfe can carry them: A lorry Breakfast for my Lord Protector. Bock, Your Grace fhall give me leave, my Lord of York, To be the Poffie, in hope of his reward, Yorks. At your pleasure, my good Lord, Who's within the there, here's: Enter a Strivingmen.

Inuite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick To fuppe with me to morrow Night. Away. Exit. Enter the King, Queene, Protetor, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Fancklers halloeing.

Queene. Beleeue me Lords, for flying at the Brooks, I faw not better fpot thefe feven yeares day: Yet by your leave, the Winde was very high, And ten to one, old Joane had not gone out. King. But what a point, my Lord, your Fauclon made, And what a petich the few about the reft: To fee how God in all his Creatures works, Yea Man and Birds are fyne of climbing high. Swif. No maruell, and it like your Maietie, My Lord Protectors Hawkes doe towre so well, They know their Mafter loyes to be aloft, And bears his thoughts about his Fauclons Pitch. Giff. My Lord, tis but a base ignoble minde, That mounts no higher then a Bird can fete.
Enter the Mayor of Saint Albans, and his Brother, bearing the man between two in a Cloake.

Card. Here comes the Towne, men, on Proceediment, To present your Highness with the man.
King. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale, Although by his fight his sinne be multiplied.
Glof. Stand by, my Masters, bring him here the King, His Highness pleasur is to talk with him.
King. Good-fellow, tell vs here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord.
What, haue they beene long blinde, and now restor'd?
Simpe. Borne blinde, and prays for your Grace.
Wife. I induce was he.
Suff. What Woman is this?
Wife. His Wife, and like your Worship.
Glof. Hadst thou beene his Mother, thou couldst have better told.
King. Where were thou borne?
Suff. At Barbick in the North, and like your Grace.
King. Poor Soul.
Gods goodnesse hath beene great to thee:
Let never Day nor Night unhallowed passe,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.
Queene. Tell me, good-fellow, Canst thou here this shine, or of Detourn,
To this holy Shrine?
Simpe. God knowes of pure Devotion,
Being call'd a hundred Times, and oftner,
In my sleepe, by good Saint Alphonz:
Who said, Simpe, come come offer at my Shrine,
And I will help thee.
Wife. What? Mistris,ATEST, etc.; And many time and of my selfe have heard a Voyce,
To call him so.
Card. What, art thou lame?
Simpe. I, God Almighty helped me,
Suff. How canst thou so?
Simpe. A fall off of a Tree.
Wife. A Plum-tree, Master.
Glof. How long haue thou beene blinde?
Simpe. O borne so, Master.
Glof. What, and wouldst climbe a Tree?
Simpe. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.
Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very deare.
Glof. Maffe, thou loudst Plunmes well, that would it ventur so.
Simpe. Alas, good Master, my Wifedesired some Damous, and made me climbe, with danger of my Life.
Glof. A subtile Knave, but yet it shall not serue:
Let me see thine Eyes; winke now, now open them,
In my opinion, yet thou feest not well.
Simpe. Yes Master, clear as Day, I thank God and Saint Alphonz.
Glof. Sayst thou me so: what Colour is this Cloke of?
Simpe. Red Master, Red as Blood.
Glof. Why that's well said: What Colour is my Gowne of?
Simpe. Black forsooth, Coale-Black, as Jet.
King. Why then, thou knowest what Colour Jet is of?
Suff. And yet I think, Jet did he never see.

Glof. But
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Of Lady Eleanor, the Protectors Wife,
The Ring-leader and Head of all this Rout,
Hauing pradis'd dangernously against your State,
Dealing with Witches and with Conjurers,
Whom we haue apprehended in the Fact,
Raying vp wicked Spirits from under ground,
Demanding of King Henries Life and Death,
And other of your Highnes Privie Council,
As more at large your Grace shall understand,
Card. And to me your Lord Protecter, by this means,
Your Lady is forth-coming, yest at London,
This Newes I think haue turn'd you Weapons edge;
'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keep your house,
Card. Ambitious Churchman, I have to affift my heart.
Sorrow and griefe have vanquished all my powers,
And vanquished as I am, I yeld to thee,
Or to the meanef Groome.
King. O God, what mischiefes work the wicked ones!
Thro'ing confusion on their owne heads thereby.
Queen. Glitter, see here the Tainture of thy Neft,
And looke thy selfe be faultleffe, thou wast best.
Card. Madame, for my selfe, to Heaven I doe appeale,
How I haue fou'd my King, and Common-weale:
And for my Wife, I know not how it stands,
Sorry I am to heare what I haue heard.
Noles there is: but thence have forgot.
Honor and Virtue, and conquer't with such,
As like to Pyrche, defile Nobilitie;
I banish her my Bed, and Company,
And give her as a Prey to Law and Shame,
That hath dis-honored Glitter, honest Name.
King. Well, for this Nighte we will repose vs here:
To morrow toward London, back againe,
To looke into the Buttifie thoroughly,
And call their foule Offenders to their Answeres,
And paye the Caufe in Judicce equal Scales,
Whole Beante stands sure, whole righteous caufe prevails.
Flourish. Exeunt.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now my good Lords of Salisbury & Warwick, Our simple Supper ended, giue me leaue,
In this clofe Walke, to satisfy my selfe,
In a great opinion of my Title,
Which is infullible, to Englands Crowned.
Salib. My Lord, I long to heare it at full,
Warw. Sweet Torke begin, and if thy clayne be good,
The Newes are thy Subjects to command.
Torke. Then thus:
Edward the third, my Lords, had feuen Sonnes;
The first, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales;
The second, William of Hainfet; and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom,
Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;
The fift, was Edward Leofrey, Duke of York;
The fift, was Thomas of Woodflock, Duke of Glofter;
William of Windsor was the fourth, and left,
Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father,
And left behinde him Richard, his onely Sonne,
Who after Edward the third's death, raigned as King,
Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eliſt Sonne and Heire of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the Name of Henry the fourth,
Seiz'd on the Realme, depos'd the rightfull King,
Sent his poore Queen to France, from whence the came,
And

Gloft. But Cloakes and Gownes, before this day, a many.
Wife. Neuer before this day, in all his life,
Gloft. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?
Simpe. Alas Mafter, I know not.
Gloft. What's his Name?
Simpe. I know not.
Simpe. No indeede, Mafter.
Gloft. What's thine owne Name?
Simpe. Sawdler Simpeower, and if it please you, Mafter.
Gloft. Then Sawnder, sit there,
The lying A Knace in Chriftendome.
If thou hadst beene borne blinde,
Thou mightst it as well haue knowne all our Names,
As thus to name the feuerall Colours we doe weare.
Sight may dilinguifh of Colours;
But suddenly to nominate them all,
It is impossible.
My Lords, Saint Albot here hath done a Miracle;
And would ye no think it, Cumming to be great,
That could reftore this Cripple to his Legges againe.
Simpe. O Mafter, that you could?
Gloft. My Masters of Saint Albot,
Have you not Bedeug in your Towne,
And things call'd Whippers?
Major. Yet, my Lord, if it please your Grace.
Gloft. Then rendt for one prefently.
Major, Sirrha, goe fetch the Beadle hither straight.
Exit.
Gloft. Now fetch me a Stoole hither by and by,
Now Sirrha, if you mean to face your felle from Whipping,
Leape me over this Stoole, and runne away.
Simpe. Alas Mafter, I am not able to flande alone;
You goe about to torture me in vaine.

Enter a Beadle with Whippers.

Gloft. Well Sir, we must haue you finde your Legges.
Sirrha Bedeug, whippe him till he leape ouer that lame Stoole.
Bedeug. I will, my Lord.
Come on Sirrha, off with your Doublets, quickly.
Simpe. Alas Mafter, what shall I doe? I am not able to flande.
After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leapes over the Stoole, and runnes awaie: and they follow, and cry, A Miracle.
King. O God, hadst thou this, and beare it fo long?
Queen. It made me laugh, to see the Villaine runne.
Gloft. Follow the Knace, and take this Drab away.
Wife. Alas Sirrha, we did it for pure need.
Gloft. Let the be whips through every Market Towne,
Till they come to Barkwicke, from whence they came.
Exit.
Card. Duke Hemfry ha's done a Miracle to day.
Suff. True: made the lame to lape and flye awaie.
Gloft. But you have done more Miracles then I:
You made in day, my Lord, whole Townes to flye.

Enter Buckingham.

King. What Tidings with our Cousin Buckingham?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold:
A forte of naughtie persons, Lewdly bent,
Vnder the Countenance and Confederacie
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
Harmeleffe Richard was murthered traitorously.

For, Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the House of Lancaster the Crown.

Torke. Which now they hold by force, and not by right:
For Richard, the first Sonne Heire, being dead,
The Issue of the next Sonne shoulde have reign'd,
Salib. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heire,

Torke. The third Sonne, Duke of Clarence,
From whose Line I cayme the Crowne,
Had issue Philip, a Daughter,
Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earle of March:
Edmund had issue, Roger, Earle of March;
Roger had issue, Edmund, and Eleanor.

Salib. This Edmund, in the Reigne of Bullegreke,
As I haue read, layd clayne vnto the Crowne,
And but for Owen Glendower, had beene King;
Who kept him in Captaines, till he dyed,
But, to the rest-

Torke. His eldest Sitter, Anne,
My Mother, being Heire into the Crowne,
Married Richard, Earl of Cambridge,
Who was to Edmund Langley,
Edward the third, fift Sonne Sonne;
By her I clayne the Kingsdome.
She was issue to Roger, Earle of March,
Who was the Sonne of Edmund Mortimer,
Who married Philip, sole Daughter
Vnto Lionel, Duke of Clarence.
So, if the Issue of the elder sonne
Succeed before the younger, I am King.

Warw. What paine proceedings is more plain then this?

Henry doth clayne the Crowne from John of Gaunt,
That he, and his Sonne, Torke claymes it from the third:
Till Lionel's issue failles, his should not reigne.

It failes not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy Sonnes, faute flippes of such Stock.
Then Father Salisbury, kneele we together,
And in this privy Plot be we the first,
That shall salute our rightfull Soueraigne.

With honor of his Birth-right to the Crowne.

Torke. We thankke you Lords:
But I am not your King, till I us Crow'd,
And that my Sword be shew'd
With heart-blood of the House of Lancaster:
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with advice and silent secrecy.

Do you as I doe in these dangerous days,
Winke at the Duke of Suffolkes insolence,
At Beaufortes Pride, at Somerset Ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the Crowe of them,
Till they have fear'd the Shepphaed of the Flock,
That vertuous Prince, the good Duke Humfry:
Tis that they seekke; and they, in seeking that,
Shall find their death, if Torke can prophesie.

Salib. My Lord, break we off; we know your minde at full.

Warw. My heart assoures me, that the Earle of Warwick
Shall one day make the Duke of Yorkes a King.

Torke. And Nemel, this I doe assoure my selfe,
Richard shall liue to make the Earle of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the King.

Enter.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King and State, with Guard, to benigne the Dunciakes.

King. Stand forth Dame Eleanor Cobham,
Glousters Wife:
In sight of God, and vs, your guilt is great,
Receiv the Sentence of the Law for sinne,
Such as by Gods Booke are asshed to death.

You foure from hence a Prifon, back againe;
From thence, unto the place of Execution:
The Witch in Smithfield shall be bunt to ashes,
And your three shall be hanged on the Gallowes.
You Madame, for you are more Nobly borne,
Delipoyed of your Honor in your Life,
Shall, after three days open Penance done,
Lye in your Country here, in Banishment,
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Eleanor. Welcome is Banishment, welcome were my steps.

Glof. Eleanor, the Law thou hast hath judg'd thee,
I cannot infifie whom the Law condemnes;
Mine eyes are full of teares, my heart of griefes.

Ah Humfry, this diffurther in the case,
Will bring thy head with ferrow to the ground.
I believe your Maiestie gaue me leave to goe;

Nowrow would I justice, and mine Age would eie.

King. Stay Humfry, Duke of Gloffer,
Ere thou goe, giue vp thy Staffe,
Henry will to hisfelfe Protector be,
And God shall be my hope, my stay, my guide,
And Lanthome to my feete;
And goe in peace, Humfry, no leffe belou'd,
When then thou went Protector to thy King.

Glof. I fee the reason, why a King's yeeres
Should be to be pretended like a Child.

God and King Henry governe Englands Realme:
Give vp thy Staffe, Sir, and the King his Realme.

Glof. My Staffe? Here, Noble Henry, is my Staffe:
As willingly doe I the lame reigne,
As ere thy Father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feete I leave it;
As others would ambitiously receiv'e it.

Well come good King: when I am dead and gone,
May honorable Peace attend thy Throne.

Exeunt Glousters.

Queen. Why now is Henry King, and Margaret Queen,
And Humfry, Duke of Gloffer, secure him selfe,
That beares to throwd a name:
Two Pulls at once;
His Lady banished, and a Limbe loft off
This Staffe of Honor raught, there let it stand,
Where it beft fitte to be, in Humfry hand.

Suff. Thus droops this lobbie Pyne, & hangs his prayers,
Thus Eleanor Prize dyes in her youngell days.

Torke. Lordes, let him goe. Please it your Maiestie,
This is the day appointed for the Combat,
Andready are the Appellante and Defendant,
The Armorer and his Man, to enter the Lifts,
So please your Highnesse to behold the fight.

Queene. I good my Lord: for purposely therefore Left I the Court, to fee this Quarrel try'd.

King. A Gods Name see the 1.yl, and all things fit,
Here let them end it, and God defend the right,
Torke. I never saw a fellow worse bestead,
Or more afraid to fight, then is the Appellante,
The terrour of this Armower, my Lords.

Enter.
Enter at one Door the Armorer and his Neighbours, drinking to him, so much, that he is dronk; and he enters with a Drumme before him; and his Staffe, with a Sack-bagge fastened to it: and at the other Door his Man, with a Drumme and Sand-bagge, and Prentices drinking to him.

1. Neighbour. Here Neighbour Harner, I drink to you in a Cup of Sack; and fear not Neighbour, you shall doe well enough.

2. Neighbour. And here Neighbour, here's a Cuppe of Charme.

3. Neighbour. And here's a Pot of good Double-Breere Neighbour, drink and fear not your Man.

Armorer. Let it come yfaith, and I leade you all, and a ffige for Peter.

1. Peter. Here Peter, I drink to thee, and be not afraid.

2. Peter. Be merry Peter, and fear not thy Master, Fight for credit of the Prentices.

Peter. I thank you all, I drink, and pray for me, I pray you, for I think I have taken my last Drinke in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Aporne; and Will, thou shalt have my Hanger: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord bleffe me, I pray God, for I am never able to deal with my Master, he hath learnt to much fience already.

Salib. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blowes. Sirrah, what's thy Name?

Peter. Peter Forthope.

Salib. Peter, what more?

Peter. Thumpe.

Salib. Thumpe? Then fee thou thumpe thy master well.

Armorer. Masters, I am come hither as it were upon my Mans instigation, to prove him a Knave, and my felfe an honest man: and touching the Duke of Yorkes, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queene: and therefore Peter have at thee with a downs-right blow.

Toke. Dispatch, this Knaves tongue begins to double. Sound Trumpets, Alarm to the Combatants.

They fight, and Peter Strokes him downe.

Armorer. Hold Peter, hold, I confesse, I confesse Treaf.

Toke. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thank God, and the good Wine in thy Masters way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine Enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast proued th'right.

King. Go, take hence that Traitor from our sight, For by his death we doe perceiue his guilt, And God in Justice hath reueld to vs The truth and innocenc of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murther'd wrongfully. Come fellow, follow vs for thy Reward.

Sound a flourish. Exit.

Enter Duke Humfrey and his Men in Mourning Cloathes.

Glof. Thus sometimes hath the brighteft day a Cloud: And after Summer, euermore fucceeds Barren Winter, with his wrathfull nipping Cold: So Carees and loves abound, as Seafons feet.

Sir, what's a Clock?

Sera. Time, my Lord.
Why yet thy scandall were not wip't away,
But I in danger for the breach of Law.
 Thy greeseft helpe is quiet, gentle Ned:
I pry thee fort thy hearty to patience,
That fewe days wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majestie Parliament,
And laden at Burry, the first of this next Moneth.
Gloft. And my concerngethe ask'd herein before?
This is clofe, dealing. Well, I will be there.--
My Ned, I take my issue: and Master Sherif.
Let not her Penance excede the Kings Commision.
My Grace, Enfent her not the worfe; in that I pray.
You wise thee, the world may laugh againe,
And I may like to doe you kindnesse, if you doe it her.
And so, Sir John, farewel.

Elacom. What, gone my Lord, and bid me not farewel?

Gloft. Witnesse my teares, I cannot stay to speake.

Elacom. Art thou gone to? all comfort goe with thee.
For none abides with me: my joy, is Death;
Death, at whose Name I oft haue beene afeard,
Because I wish'd this Worlds eternity.
Stanly. I prethee goe, and take me hence,
I care not whither, for I begge no faune;
Onely conuey me where thou art commanded.
Stanly. Why, Madame, that is to the lie of Man,
There to be vs'd according to your State.

Elacom. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I then be vs'd reproachfully?

Stanly. Like to a Duchesse, and Duke Humfray's Lady,
According to that State you shall be vs'd.

Elacom. Sherif fairewel, and better then I fare,
Although you haft bene Conduit of my flame.
Sherif. It is my Office, and Madame pardon me.
Elacom. If I farewel, thy Office is dishong'd:
Come Stanly, if I live we goe?

Stanly. Madame, your Penance done,
Throw off this Sheet, and goe we to attyre you for our journey.

Elacom. My shame will not be hitfed with my Sheet:
No, it will hang upon my shafft Robes,
And heare it fell, attyre me how I can.
Goe, leade the way, I long to see my Prison,

Sound a Street. Enter King, Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk,
York, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick, to the Parliament.

King. I mufe my Lord of Gloftor is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
What e're occasion keepes him from vs now.

Queen. Can you not feel or will ye not obserue
The Vngenerall of his alterd Countenance?
With what a Mafiifie he bears himselfe,
How influent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptorie, and unlike himselfe,
We know the time since he was milde and affable,
And if we did but glasse a face out of Looke,
Immediately he was upon his Knee,
That all the Courts admird him for submission.
But meet him now, and be in the Morne,
When every one will giue the time of day,
He knitts his Bow, and shews an angry Eye,
And palfeth by with blisse unbownd Kneese,
Disdaining dutie that to vs belongs.
Small Curres are not regarded when they gyrne,
But great men tremble when the Lyon rores,
And Humfray is no little Man in England.
First note, that he is nearer you in affect,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me feemeth then, it is no Pollicie,
Respecting what a rancorous mirde he beares,
And his advantage following your decease,
That he should come about your Royall Person,
Or be admitted to your Highnesse Council.
By flatterie hath he wonne the Commons hearts:
And when he pleace to make Commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
Now'z the Spring, and Weeds are shalloon-rored,
Suffer them now, and they'll e're growe the Garden,
And choake the Herbes for want of Husbandry.
The reuerent care I bare vnto my Lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the Duke,
If it be fond, call it a Woman's fear:
Which fear, by better Reasons can supplant,
I will subscende, and lay I wrong'd the Duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and Yorke,
Reproue my alllegation, if you can,
Or else conclude my words effectuall.

Niff. Well hath your Highnesse scene into this Duke:
And had I frist bene put to speake my minde,
I think I should have told you your Graces Tale.
The Ducheese, by his subordination,
Upon my Life began her dullish pratifies:
Or if he were not privote to those Faults,
Yet by repute of his high diuert,
As next the King, he was successfull Heire,
And such high vaunts of his Nobilitie,
Did infrigate the Bediam braine-fick Ducheese,
By wicked meanes to frame our Soueraigne fall.
Smooth runnes the Water, where the Briske is deep,
And in his topfe flew he harbours Treason,
The Fox barkest not, when he would itale the Lambe.
No, no, my Soueraigne, Gloster is a man
Unbalanced yet, and full of diuete deceit.

Card. Did he not, contrary to forme of Law,
Deuice strange deaths for small offences done?
Yorke. And did he not, in his Protectrship,
Lene great summes of Money through the Realme,
For Subjectes pay in France, and never sent it?
By meanes whereof, the Townes each day resolvd.
Buckl. Tush, these are petty faults to faultes unknowne,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humfray, King.
My Lords at once: the care you haue of vs,
To mowe downe Thrones that would annoy our Foot,
Is worthy prayse: but shall I speake my confience,
Our Kinman Gloster is as innocent,
Free from meaning Treason to our Royall Person,
As is the fucking Lamby or hamelishe Doue:
The Duke is vertuous, milde, and too well gluene,
To dreame on stiull, or to worke my downerfall.

Qu. Ah what's more dangerous, then this fond affiance?
Secouse he a Doue? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's dispoused at the hatefull Rauen.
Is he a Lambe? his Skine is surely lent him,
The Second Part of Henry the Sixth.

For hee's enclin'd as is the ravenous Wolves.
Who cannot fleepe a shade, that means deceit?
Take heed, my Lord, the welfare of vs all,
Hangs on the cutting short that fraughtfull man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious Soueraigne.

King. Welcome Lord Somerset: What News from France?

Som. That all your Interests in those Territories,
Is ytterly bereft you: all is lost.

King. Cold News, Lord Somerset: but Gods will be done.

Cor. Cold News for me: for I had hope of France,
As halfe as I hope for honest England.
Thus are my Bloudsomen blasted in the Bad,
And Caterspillers case my Leaves away:
But I will remedy this griefe ere long,
Or fell my Tides for a glorious Grazur.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. All happinesse unto my Lord the King:
Pardon, my Liege, the Errors that are done long.
Suff. Nay Gloucester, know that thou art come too soone,
Vulnere than were more loyal then thou art:
I doe arrest thee of High Treason here.

Glo. Well Suffrague, thou hast not seen me blushed,
Not chang'd my Countenance for this arrest:
A Heart unspotted, is not easily daunted.
The purest Spring is not to free from muddle,
As I am cleare from Treason to my Soueraigne.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guiltie?

Tyr. Thus thought my Lord, That you took Bribe of France,
And being Protector, hy'd the Soulers pay,
By meanes whereof, his Highnesse hath lost France.
Glo. Is it but thought so?

What are they that thunteir?
I neuer rob'd the Soulers of their pay,
Nor euer had one penny Bribe from France,
So helpe me God, as I have watch't the Night,
I, Night by Night in studing good for England,
That Doyts that ere I wrant'd from the King,
Or any Great I hoarded to my vie,
Be brought against me at my Tryall day.
No: many a Pound of mine owne proper flore,
Becau'e I would not take the needes Commons,
Have I dispus'd to the Gardians,
And neuer ask'd for reflation,
Card. It serves you well, my Lord, to say so much.
Glo. I say no more then truth, to helpe me God.

Tyr. In your Protectorship, you did deserve
Strange Tortures for Offenders, neuer heard of,
That England was defam'd by Tyrantise.

Glo. Why is it well known, that whiles I was Protector,
Purie was all the fault that was in France:
For I should me't at an Offenders trees,
And lowly words were Rantime for their faults:
Vulnerre it were a bloody Murtherer,
Or foule felonious Thieves, that fle'd poor passengers,
I never gau' them condigne punishment.
Murther in deed, that bloodie finne, I twart'd
About the Fenon, or what Trepas elle.

Suff. My Lord, thee selfe was safe, quickly answer'd:
But greater Crimes are lay'd vnto your charge:
Whereof you cannot easily purge your selfe,
I doe arrest you in his Highnesse Name,
And here commit you to my Lord Cardiassal
To keepe, vntill your further time of Tryall.

King. My Lord of Gloster, is this speciall hope,
That you will clear your selfe from all foulesence,
My Confidence tells me, you are innocent.

Glo. Ah gracious Lord, these dayes are dangerous:
Vertue is choset with foule Ambition,
And Chrstie chas'd hence by Rancours hand;
Foule Subornation is predominant,
And Equitie exil'd your Highness Land.
I know, their Complot is to have my Life:
And if my death might make this Island happy,
And prouce the Purtury of their Tyrannies,
I would expend it with all willingnesse.
For mine is made to the Prologue to their Play:
For thousands more, that yet suspeet no pruell,
Will not conclude their plotted Tragedie.

Brearsford red sparkling eyes blaz his hearts mallice,
And Suffielk cloudie brow his stormie hate;
Sharpe Buckingham wirethens with his tongue,
The envious Load that lies upon his heart:
When his head is rose, that reaches at the Moone,
Whose over-weening Arme I have pluckt back,
By faile accufe doth jelous at my life:
And you, my Soueraigne Lady, with the reft,
Cautelless have lay'd disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeoue have first'd vp,
My lief't Liege to be mine Enemy:
I, all of you hate lay'd your heads together,
My felle had notice of your Conspicicles,
And all to make away my guidelie Life.
I shall not want faile Witsinelle, to condemme me,
Nor faire of Treasons, to augment my guilt:
The ancient Proberbe will be well effect,
A Staffe is quickly found to beat a Dogge.

Card. My Liege, his sayling is intolerable.
If those that care to keepe your Royall Person
From Treasons secret Knife, and Trayers Rage,
Beside the unstaid, and rued ar,
And the Offender granted scope of speech,
'Twill make them coole in zaze unto your Grace.
Suff. Hath he not twit our Soueraigne Lady here
With ignominious words, though Clarkelye caught?
As if she had fuborned some to invente
Falce allegations, to o'rethrow his face,
Or. But I can give the loyer leave to chide.
Glo. Forre truer spoke then meant: I lofe indeede,
Befew the victors, for they play'd me faile,
And well such lofers may have leave to speake.

Buck. He'll wreath the frame, and hold vs here all day.

Lord Cardinall, he is your Prioner.

Card. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him sure.

Glo. Ah, thus King Henry throwes away his Crutch,
Before his Legges be firm to beare his Body.
Thus is the Shepherd beaten from thy side,
And Wolves are gazing, who shall grave thee first.
Ah that my feare were false, ab that it were:
For good King Henry, thy decay I feare.

Exit Gloster.

King. My Lords, what to your wishomes seemeth biff,
Doe or vndoe as if our felle were here.

Queen. What, will your Highnesse leave the Parliament?

King. I/bar gernt: my heart is drown'd with griefe,
Whole foule begins to flowe within mine eies:
My Body round engyrt with unsyre:

n 2 For

III. i. 78—200

485
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Queen. Three Noble Suffolks, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suff. Not resolute, except so much were done.

For things are often spoke, and seldom meant,

But oft my heart accordeth with my tongue.

Queen. Seeing the deed is meritorious,

And to preferre my Sovereign from his Foe,

Suff. Say but the word, and I will be his Prieft.

Card. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk.

Queen. Any of them may take due Orders for a Prieft:

Card. You say, and enflure well the deed,

And I think you did not make it

Tis not at all, which impugnes our doome.

Enter a Poffe.

Suff. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come amaine,

To signifie, that Rebels there are vp,

And put the Englishmen into the Sword.

Send Succours (Lords) and stop the Rage betime,

Before the Wound doe grow vncurable;

For seeing there, is great hope of helpe,

Card. A Brench that craves a quick expedient flopp.

What counfale give you in this weightie caufe?

Torke. That Somerset be sent as Regent thither.

Tis meet that lackie Ruler be implo'd,

Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If Torke, with all his Barre-fe Morall,

Had bene the Regent there, in stead of me,

Henry had long, was froze in France for long.

Torke. No, not to lufe it all, as thou hast done.

I rather would have loll my Life becomes,

Then bring a burthen of dis-honour home.

By flaying there so long, till all were loft.

Snow me one skarre, character'd on thy Skimmie,

Mens fifh prefer'd do for whoole, doe seldome winne.

Exe. Nay then, this spake will prove a raging fire,

If Wind and Fuelle be brought, to feed it with:

No more, good Torke, Sweet Somerset be still.

Thy fortune, Torke, hadst thou bene Regent there,

Mighty happlie hau'de prou'd faire worse then his.

Torke. What, worse then naught? say, then a shame take all.

Somerfet. And in the number there, that will fleffe frame.

Card. My Lord of Yorke, trie what your fortune is:

The Icnuill Ierse of Ireland are in Armes,

And temper Clay with blood of Englishmen.

To Ireland will you leade a Band of men,

Collected choicely, from each Countie home,

And trie your hap against the Infirm?

Card. I will, my Lord, to please his Majestie.

Suff. What! you are the Author of this means,

And what we doe eflablifh, he confirms:

Then, Noble Torke, take thou this Taska in hand.

Fortune. I am content: Provide me Souldiers, Lords,

Whiles I take order for mine owne affaires.

Suff. A charge, Lord Torke, that I will see perform'd.

But now returne we to the faile Duke Humphrey.

Card. No more of him; for I will deal with him,

That henceforth he shall trouble us no more:

And so breake off, the day is almost spent,

Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that even.

Torke. My
The Second Part of Henry the Sixth.

The Duke of Suffolk, within fourteeene dayes At Brillow I expect my Soulard, For there he shalme them all for Ireland.

Suff. I do truly command, my Lord of Yorke, Exeunt.

Enter Torke.

Torke. Now Torke, or neuer, feele thy fear full thoughts, And change midfofte to refolution; Be that thou holp't to be, or what thou art; Reserve to death, it is not worth thy enjoying; Let pale-fac'd fear keepe with the meaner-born man, And finde no harbor in a Royall heart.

Falter the Spring, time flowes, comes thought on thought, And not a thought, but thinkes on Diggery.

Say, how can he doe it? and shal I doe it? My Brayeyes, more bulke then the laboring Spider, Weanes tedious Snares to trap mine Enemies. Well Nobles, well; his politlye done, To fende me packing with a Heavit of men: I feare me, you but warme the famous Snape, Who cherisht in your breasts, will flinge your hearts. Twas men I lack, and you will glume them me; I take it kindly: yet be well affaid, You may shbrace Weapons in a mans hands Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mightie Band.

I will trefire vp in England some black Storme, Then blowe ten thousand Soules to Heaven, or Hell: And this tell Tempelt shall not cease to rage, Vntill the Golden Circuit on my Head, Like to the glorious Sunnes transparent Besees, Doe calme the fuste of this mad-brayd Flame. And for a minifter of my intent, I have found a head-brayd henniftman, John Cade of Afthord, To make Commotion, as full well he can, Vnder the Title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland haue I feene this hussbone Cade Oppose himfelfe again A Troupe of Kernes, And fought fo long, till all his rigues with Darts Were almoft like a sharpel quild Portепtine: And in the end being rebuke, I haue leene Him capre vpright, like a wilde Monjtre, Shaking the bloody Darts, as he his Belts.

Full of men, like a fhag-hayr'd dracthe Korne, Hath he conuerde with the Enemy, And vndiscount'd, come to me again, And geve me notice of their Villanies. This Denuill here shall be my Subfurrite; For that Iohn Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in pate, in speech he doth reftume, By this, I shall perceiue the Commons minde, How they affect the House and Clayme of Torke.

Say he be taken, rack, and tortured; I know no paine they can inflit upon him, Will make him say, I moud him to those Armes.

Say that he trie, as tis great like he will, Why then from Ireland come I with my strength, And riste the Harwelt which he now fellowd. For humfrey, being dead, he shall be, And Henry put aparts: the next for me. Exit.

Enter two or three running over the Stage, from the Marcher of Dicky Humfrey.

1. Runne to my Lord of Suffolk: let him know We haue dispatcht the Duke, as he commanded.

2. Oh, that it were a mad-haue we done? Didst ever heare a man so pertinent? Enter Suffolk.

Suff. Now Sirs, have you dispatcht this thing?

1. I my good Lord, he's dead.

Suff. Why that's well said. Go, get you to my House, I will reward you for this venorous deed.

The King and all the Peeres are here at hand.

Have you lads faire the Bed? Is all things well, According as I gaue directions?

1. Tis, my good Lord.

Suff. Away, be gone.

Exeunt.

Sound Trumpetts. Enter the King, the Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, Somerset, &c.

Exeunt.

King. Go call out our Vackel to our presence strait: Say, we intend to try his Grace to day, If he be guilty, as'tis publisht.

Suff. He call him presently, my Noble Lord. Exit.

King. Lords take your places: and I pray you all Proceed no strifter against our Vackel Glofier, Then from true eidence, of good elligence, He be a prou'd or pracie culpable.

Queen. God for my Maffe should presyue, That faultleffe may condemne a Noble man: Pray God he may acquit him of inquisition.

King. I thanne fte Nef, thefe words content me much.

Enter Suffolk.

How now? why look it thou pale? why trembleft thou?

Where is our Vackel what's the matter, Suffolk? Suff. He is dead in his Bed, My Lord; Glofier is dead.

Queen. Haue mercy God forfend. Card. Gods secret judgement: I did dreame to Night, The Duke was rumb'd, and could not speake a word.

King. Speake.

Ou. How fares my Lord? Helpes Lords, the King is dead.

Som. Rere vp his Body, wring him by the Neck. Ou. Runne, goo, heppe, hepe; O Henry ope thine eyes.

Suff. He did not reuie againe, Madame be patient.

King. Oh Heavenly God.

Ou. How fares my gracious Lord? Suff. Comfort my Sovereigne, gracious Henry comfor-

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a Raens Note, Whole diffimulat tune bereit my Vitall powres: And thinke, he, that the chirping of a Wren, By crying comfort from a hollow breaste, Can chafe away the fright conceiued sound? Hide not thy poyson with such fngred words, Lay not thy hands on me: forbeare I say, Their touch affrightes me as a Serpents fting,

Thou balefull Meffenger, out of my sight:

Vpon thy eye-ball, murderous Tyrannie Sits in grim Maietie, to frighte the World. Looke not on me, for thine eues are wounding;

Yet do not goe away: come Bulifike,

And kill the innocent gazer with thy figh:

For in the fhaide of death, I hall finde joy;

In life, but double death, now Glofier's dead.

Queen. Why do you rase my Lord of Suffolk thus?

Although the Duke was enemie to him,

Yet he moft Chriftian-like lamentes his death:

And for my fette, For as he was to me,

Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groanes,

Or blood-consuming fighes recall his Life;
I would be blind with weeping, fieck with groans,
Looke pale as Pnim-tofe with blood-drinking fighes,
And all to have the Noble Duke alive.
What know I how the world may deeme of me?
For it is knowne we were but hollow Friends:
It may be jug'd I made the Duke away,
So thall my name with Slanders tongue be wounded,
And Princes Courts be fill'd with my reprooion:
This get I by his death: Aye me vnshippie,
To be a Queene, and Crownd with inuiie.
King. Ah woe is me for Glofier, wretched man.
Queene. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is,
What, Doft thou turne away, and hide thy face?
I amno loathfome Leaper, looke on me.
What? Art thou like the Adder waxen deafe?
Be poyonous too, and kill thy forlorne Queene.
Is all thy comfort fuit in Glofier Tombe?
Why then Dame Eliauer was neere thy joy.
Erect his Statue, and worship it,
And make my Image but an Ale-houfe figne,
Was I for this ynie wrack'd upon the Sea,
Andtwice by awkward winde from Englands banke
Droue backe againe into my native Clime.
What boased this? but well fore-warming winde
Did feeme to fay, fecke not a Scopions Neil,
Nor yet no footong on this ynnikde Shore.
What did I then? But curft the gentle gull,
And he that loo'd them forth their Brazen Cauer,
And bid them blowe towards Englands blefed Shore,
Or turne our Sterne upon a dreadfull Rocke:
Yet Æolus would not be a murtherer,
But left that hateful office unto thee.
The pretty vailing Sea refus'd to drowne me,
Knowing that thou wou'dft haue me drown'd on shore
With tears as falt as Sea, through thy vnkindneffe.
The fplittide Rockes crou'd in the finking lands,
And would not dafte me with their ragged fides,
Because thy fliynte heart more hard then they,
Might in thy Paffe, perifh Eliauer.
As faire as I could ken thoy Chalky Cliffe's,
When from thy Shore, the Tempeft beare vs backe,
I flood vpon the Hatches in the storme:
And when the duskie sky, began to rob
My earneft-gazing-fight of thy Lands view,
I tooke a coldly Jewell from my necke,
A Har t was {idt in with Diamonds,
And threw it towards thy Land: The Sea receuil'd it,
And do I with'd thy body might my heart:
And even with this, I looft fare Englands view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my Heart,
And call'd them blinde and duskie Spectacles,
For looing ken of Albions withid Cofle,
How often have I tempted Sulepftes tongues:
(The agent of thy foule incoffufion)
To fit and watch me as Ascanius did,
When he to madding Dido would vanfild
His Fathers At's, commenc'd in burning Troy.
Am I not wifhe like her? Or thou not faifie like him?
Aye me, I can no more: Dye Eliauer,
For Henry weeps, that their foill live fo long.

Nofi without. Enter Warwick, and many Comment.

War. This reported, mighty Soueraigne,
That good Duke Humphrey Traenterously is murdred
By Suffolk, and the Cardinal Bremfores meanes:
The Commons like an angry Hue of Bees
That want their Leader, fatter vp and downe,
And entre not who they think in his reigne.
My fife have calm'd their unpleasant mutine,
Vntill they heare the oder of his death.
King. That he is dead good Warwick, 'tis too true,
But how he dyed, God knowes, not Harry:
Enter his Chamber, view his blincheffe Corper,
And comment then vpon his fadaine death.

War. That fhall I do my Liege; Stay Salsburie
With the rude multitude, till I returne,
King. Oh thou that judgeth all things, thy thoughts:
My thoughts, that labour to perfuade my foule,
Some violent hands were laid on Humfray life:
If my fuppete be fälle, forgive me God,
For judgement onely doth belong to thee:
Faine would I goe &he his pale lips,
With twenty thoufand kife, and to drain
Vpon his face an Ocean of falt teares,
To tell my loue vpon his dumbe deafe tranke,
And with my fingers feel his hand, vnderfelct:
But all in vaine are these meanes Obiqueues,
Bed post forth,
And to fourke his dead and earthly Image:
What were it but to make my fcarrow greater?
War. Come hither gracious Soueraigne, view this body.
King. That is to fee how depee my grace is made,
For with his foule fled all my worldly folace:
For feeing him, I feee my life in death.
War. As surely as my foule intends to live
With that dread King that take us oute vpon him,
To free vs from his Fathers wrathfull curfe,
I do beleue that violent hands were laid
Vpon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.
Suf. A dreadfull Oath, ftorne with a folene tongue:
What infalliance gies Lord Warwick for his vow.
War. See how the blood is fteald in his face.
Ouir hau I fene a timely-parted Groft,
Of ahy femeblance, meazer, pale, and bloodleffe,
Being al defended to the labouring heart,
Who in the Confict that it holds with death,
And the tale of the fate for aynting the enemy,
Who with the heart there cooles, and ne're returneth,
To blafi and beautifie the Checke againe.
But fee, his face is blacke, and full of blood:
His eye-balls further out, than when he liued,
Staring full gefly, like a frangled man:
His hauere preac'd, his noiftills freftch with frigling:
His hands abound dispaly'd, as one that graffe,
And rugged for Life, and was by strength subdue.
Nake on the fheets his hair (you fee) is fickling,
His well proportion'd Beard, made ruffle and ragged,
Like to the Summers Corne by Tempeft lodged:
It cannot be but he was murdred here,
The leaft of all thefe fignes were probable.
Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the D.to deeth?
My felle and Bremfores had him in protection,
And I hope Sir, are no murthere.
War. But both of you were vowe D. Humfrays fotts,
And you (for quick) had the good Duke to kepe:
Tis like you would not feath him like a friend,
And 'tis well fene, he found an enemy.
Queen. Than you beleue fuppete thefe Noblemen,
As guilty of Duke Humfray timelie deeth.

War.
Dread Lord, the Commons send you word by me,
Vivæste Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished faire Englands Territories,
They will by violentte tear him from your Pallace,
And torture him with grievous lingering death,
They say, by him requeing of a scorneful Beate:
They say, in him they feare your Highnesse death;
And more intinct of Loue and Loyaltes,
Free from a stubborne opposite intent,
As being thought to contradite your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his Banishment.
They say, in care of your most Royall Person,
That if your Highnesse should intend to sleepe,
And charge, that no man should disturb your rest,
In paine of your dislike, or paine of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait Edict,
Were there a Serpente scene, with forcked Tongue,
That flyly plagued towards your Mieselte,
It were but necessarie you were wake:
Leaf being suffer d in that harnefull number,
The mortall Worne might make the sleepe eternal.
And therefore doe they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, where you will goe,
From such fell Serpentes as false Suffolk is:
With whole incenmed and listall fling,
Your louing Vnckle, wintente times his worth,
They say is thanefully bereft of life.

Commons within. An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury.
Suff. This like the Commons, rude vpoplistif Hinde,
Could send such Meffage to their Soueraigne:
But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd,
To shew howe quent an Orator you are,
But all the Honor Salisbury hath wonne,
Is, that he was the Lord Embassador,
Sent from a fорт of Tinkers to the King,
Worrie. An answer from the King, or we will all breake in.
King. Goe Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender louing care;
And had I not benne cited fo by them,
Yet did I purpose as they doe entreat:
For sure, my thoughts doe hourly prophesie,
Mifchance vnto my State by Suffolkes means.
And therefore by his Mieselte I sweares,
Whose farre-vnworthie Deputie I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this ayre,
But three days longer, on the paine of death.

Que. Oh Henry, let me pleade for gentil Suffolk.
King. Vngentile Queene, to call him gentil Suffolk,
No more I say: if thou do'lt pleaide for him,
 Thou wilt but adde encreafe vnto my Wrath,
Had I but sayd, I would have kept my Word;
But when I sweares, it is irreuocable:
If after three dayes space thou here bee'lt found,
On any ground that I am Rules of.
The World shall not be Ransome for thy Life,
Come Warwick, come good Warwick, goe with mee,
I have great masters to impart to thee.
Exit.
Q. Mischance and Sorrow goe along with you,
Hearts Diftarct, and Souere Aircraft,
Be play-fellows to keep you companie:
There's two of you, the Deuill hath a third,
And three-fold Vengeance tend upon your steps.

Suff. Cease, gentle Queene, these Executions,
And let thy Suffolk take his heauen leaue.
Queen, Tey Coward woman, and lost bands wretch,
Half thou not spirit to curse thine enemy.

Suf. A plague upon them: wherefore should I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the Mandrakes groane,
I would invent a bitter searching terme,
As curse, as harsh, and horrible to bear,
Deter'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signifies of deadly hate.

As Jeane-fa'd envoy in her loathsome case.
My tongue should tumble in mine earthen words,
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beated Flint,
Mice hair be first an end, as one disfract;
I, every loyst should fecme to curse and ban,
And even now my brother's heart would break.
Should I not curse them? Poftyon be their drink.
Gall, wafore then Gall, the daintieft that they call:
Their sweetesi shads, a groupe of Cypresse Trees:
Their cheefeft Propofel, morded Ring Baflikes:
Their fofteft Touch, as smart as Lyncrds rings:
Their Muficke, frightfull as the Serpents hife,
And boading Screech-Owle, make the Comfort full.
All the soule terrors in darke fear'd hell-
Though fweeter Suffolke, thou torment'd thy felfe,
And thofe dear fultes like the Sunne' gainst glaffe,
Or like an over-charged Gun, recoile,
And turns the force of them upon thy felfe.

Suf. You bad me ban, and will you bid me leave?
Now by the ground that I am banifi'd from,
Well could I curse away a Winter night,
Though standing naked on a Mountain top,
Wherebying cold would neuer let grace grow,
And think it but a minute spent in poore.

Qu. Oh, let me intreat thee once, give me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mounfull tea:
Nor let the raine of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woefull Monuments.
Oh, could this knife be pric'd in thy hand,
That thou might'st think of thee by the Scale,
Through whom a thoufand lights are breath'd for thee.
So get thee gone, that I may know my greefe,
Tis but farmiz'd, whils thou art standing by,
As one that furtles, thinking on a want:
I will repel thee, or be well affur'd,
Adventur to be banifi'd my felfe:
And banifi'd am I, if but from thee
Go, speake not to me; even now be gone.
Oh go, go yet. Even thus, two friends condemn'd,
Embrace, and fife, and take ten thoufand leaves,
Leather a hundred times to part then dye;
Yet now farewell, and fare well Life with thee.

Suf. Thus is poore Suffolke ten times banifi'd,
Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee.
Toome the land I care for, won't thou thinken,
A Widemtrick is populous enough,
So Suffolke had thuy heavy company:
For where thou art, there is the World it felfe,
With every fuearel pleasure in the World:
And where thou art not, Defolation,
I cannot more. Live thou to toy thy life;
My felfe no joy in mought, but that thou lookest.

Enter Pauke.

Queen. Whether goes Pauke fo falt? What newes I pricke?
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

I. Combe doth not his haire: looke, looke, it flows upwright.
   Like Lime-sticks set to catch my winged soule:
   Give me some drinke, and bid the Aparcieare
   Bring the strong poynson that I bought of him.
   King. Oh thou eternal mother of the heauen,
   Looke with a gentle eye upon this Wretch,
   Oh beate away the buli medling Fiend,
   That lays strong siefe into this wretches soule;
   And from his boleome purge that blacke-dispace.
   War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.
   Sal. Disturbe him not, let him passe peaceably.
   King. Peace to his soule, if Gods good pleasure be.
   Lord Cardmal, if thou thinkst on heauens blisse,
   Hold vp thy hand, make signall of thy hope.
   He dies and makes no signe: Oh God forgive him.
   War. So bad a death, argues a monstrous life.
   King. Forbear to lorde, for we are sinners all,
   Clope vp his eyes, and draw the Curtaine clofe.
   And let vs all to Meditation.

   Exeunt.

   Actum. Fight at Sea. Ordinance goes off;

   Enter Lieutenant, Suffyke, and others.

   Lieu. The gaudy blabbing and remorfefull day,
   Is crept into the boosome of the Sea,
   And now loud holling Wulves streufe the Jades
   That dragge the Tragick melancholy night.
   Who with their drowie, flow, and flagging wings
   Clape dead-men graves, and from their milky laws,
   Break foule contagious darknesse in the ayre:
   Therefore bring forth the Souldiers of our prize,
   For whilst our Pinnace Anchored in the Downes,
   Here be they make their ranflome on the fund,
   Or with their blood flaine its discoloured shore,
   Maifer, this Prisoner freely glue I thee,
   And thou that art his Mate, make boote of this:
   The other Walter Whitmore is thy faire.

1. Gent. What is my ranfome Maifer, let me know.
   Ast. A thousand Crownes, or else lay down your head
   Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.
   Lieu. What thinke you much to pay 5000 Crownes,
   And bear the name and part of Gentleman?
   Cut both the Villains throats, for you shall:
   The lies of thofe which we have loft in fight,
   Be counter-poes'd with such a pettie summe.

2. Gent. I gleue it fit, and therefore spare my life.

2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.
   Whim. I loft mine eye in laying the prize aboord,
   And therefore to revenge it, floth thou dye,
   Or so thou thefe, if I might have my will.
   Lieu. Be not for thats, take ranfome, let him live.
   Suf. Look at me George, I am a Gentleman,
   Rate what thou wilt, thou shalt be payed.
   What. And so am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now why flars thou; what doth death affright?

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whole found is death:
   A cunning man did calculate my birth,
   And told me that by Water I should dye:
   Yet let not this make thee be bloodly-minded,
   Thy name is Gualtire, being rightly founded.

Suf. Gualtire, or Walter, which it is I care not,
   Neuer yet did base dishoure blurre our name,
   But with our iword we wip'd away the blot.

   Therefore, when Merchant-like I fell reuenge,
   Broke be my word, my Armes tooke and dejoind,
   And I proclain'd a Coward through the world.

   Suf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Prisoner is a Prince,
   The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

   What. The Duke of Suffolk, muffled vp in raggges?

   Suf. 1, but these raggges are no part of the Duke.
   Lieu. But issue was newer flaine as thou shalt be,
   Obfcurc and lowtie Swaine, King Henrik blood.

   Suf. The honourable blood of Lancaster
   Must not be flied by foule breded in Groome:
   Haft thou not kiff thy hand, and held my ftrapp?
   Bare-headcd plodded by my foint-clotch Mule,
   And thought thee happy when I flroke my head.
   How often haft thou waitd at my cup,
   Fed from my Trencher, knecl'd dounce at the board,
   When I have flcased with Queene Margaret?
   Remember it, and let it make thee Crefl-faine,
   1, and slay this thy borruitc Pride:

   How in our voyding Lady bob his fround, &
   Duly waied for my comming forth?

   This hand of mine hath writh in thy behalfe,
   And therefore flall it charge thy riotous tongue.

   What. Speak Captain, flall I flab the foemen Swain.
   Lieu. First let my words flab him, as he hath me.

   Suf. Bale flawe, thy words are blunt, and fo art thou.

   Suf. Comney him hence, and on our long boats hide,
   Strike of his head. Suf. Thou dar'ft not for thy owne.

   Lieu. Poole, Sir Poole Lord,
   I kennell, puddle, finke, whose filth and dirt.
   Troubles the fluer Spring, where England drinks:
   Now will I dam vp this thy yarning mouth,
   For twallowing the Treasure of the Realme.

   Thy lips that flit the Queene, flall sweepes the ground;
   And thou that flill dit at good Duke Henries death,
   Againf the fenleffe windes flall grin in vain,
   Who in contemplation baffe at thee amen,
   And weded be thou to the Haggles of hell,
   For daring to affay a mighty Lord

   Vnto the daughter of a worthiefull King,
   Having neythcr Subject, Wealsh, nor Diadem:
   By dueillfull polcy art thou growne great,
   And like ambitious Sylla ouer-gord'd,
   With goblets of thy Mother_bleeding heare.

   By thee Aquitaine and Maime were told to France,
   The falle revoluing Normans thorough thee,
   Diffalne to call vs Lord, and Percevalle,
   Hath fliene their Gourmerc, surpriz'd our Forts,
   And fent the ragged Souldiers wounded home.

   The Princeely Warwicke, and the Nevil acrall,
   Whole dreadfull swords were never dready in vaine,
   As hating thee, and risng vp in armes,
   And now the Houle of Yorkes threat from the Crowne,
   By shamefull murther of a guilflefe King,
   And lofty proud incroaching tyranny,
   Burns with reuening fire, whose hopeful colours
   A duance our halfe-fac'd Sunne, fhining to fhine;

   Vnder the which is writ, jndita nudhus.

   The Commons here in Kent are vp in armes,
   And to conclude, Reproach and Beggerie,
   Is crept into the Pallace of our King,
   And all by thee: away, comency him hence.

   Suf. O that we were a God, to foone forth Thunder

   Vpon thefe paltry, fente, abief Drudges:

   Small things make base men proud. This Villaine heere,
   Being Captain of a Pinnace, threatens more

   Then Bacchus the strong Illiacian Pyrate.

   Drones froke not Eagles blood, but rob Bee-huies:

   It is impoffible that I should dye
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

By such a lowly Vassall as thy selfe.
Thy words mote Rage, and not remove in me:
I go of Mellige from the Queene to France:
I charge thee wait me safely cross the Channell.

Lent. Water: W. Come Suffolke, I must waft thee to the Seale syde.

Suff. Pinge felice timer occupant sentus, it is thee I fear.
Well thou shalt haue cause to feare before I leaue thee,
What, are ye danced now? Will now ye floope,
Suff. Suffolke Imperiall tongue is sterno and rough:
Ye's to command, vnaught to please for fauour.
Farre be it, we shoulh honor such as thefe
With humble fufe: no, rather let my head
Stoope to the blocks, then thefe knees bow to any,
Sauce to the God of heauen, and to my King:
And forow dance your bloody pole,
Then flant vnconuect to the Vulgar Grooms.
True Nobility, is exempt from feare:
More can I beare, then you dare execute.

Lent. Hail him a way, and let him talke no more:
Come Souldiers, shew what cruelty ye can.
Suff. That this my death may never be forgot,
Great men oft dye by vilde Bezonions.
A Romane Sworder, and Bandetto shone
Murder'd sweet Tuly. Brimm Ballard hand
Stab'd Inou Cæsar. Savage Ilanders
Pompy the Great, and Suffolke dyes by Pyrrus.

Lent. And as for thefe who ranonance we have fet,
It is our pleasure one of them depair:
Therefore come you with vs, and let him go.

Exit Lieutenant, and the rest.

Captain the first Gent. Enter Walter with the body.

Walt. There let his head, and linelefe bodie lye, Vntill the Queene his Miftris burn it. Exit Walter.

1. Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle,
His body will I bear unto the King:
If he reuenge it not, yet will his Friends,
So will the Queene, that liuing, held him deere.

Enter Benes, and John Holland.

Benes. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a
Lath, they have bene vp these two dayes.

Hol. They have the more neede to sleepe now then.

Benes. I tell thee, Lucky Cade the Clothier, meanes to drefle the Common-wealth and turne it, and set a new nap upon it.

Hol. So he had need, for its thred-bare. Well, I say, it was never merrie world in England, since Gentlemen came vp.

Benes. O miferable Age: Verue is not regarded in Handy-crafts men.

Hol. The Nobilitie thinke forone to goe in Leather
Apron.

Benes. Nay more, the Kings Council are no good Workemen.

Hol. True: and yet it is said, Labour in thy Voci-tion: which is as much to say, as let the Magistrates be labouring men, and therefore shoulde we be Magistrates.

Benes. Thou haft hit it: for there's no better signe of a braue death, then a hard hand.

Hol. I fee them, I fee them: There's Tofts, Sonne, the Tanner of Wingham.

Benes. He shall have the skinnes of our enemies, to Cade. Here's a Villaine.

Gay. His a Bookie in his pocket with red Letters in't.

Cade. Nay then he is a Conjurier.

But. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: unless I finde him guilty, he shall not die.

Come hither strarr, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clearke. Emanual.

But. Thy voice to write it on the top of Letters: Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone; Dost thou voice to write thy name? Or hast thou a mark to thy felle, like a honest plain dealing man?

Clearke. Sir, I thanke God, I have bin so well brought vp, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confest: away with him the's a Villaine and a Traitor.

Cade. Away with him I say: Hang him with his Pen and Inke-horne about his necke.

Exit one with the Clearke.

Enter Michael.

Miche. Where's our General?

Cade. Here I am, his particular fellow.

Miche. Fly by, By, Sir Humfrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cade. Stand villaine, fan, or he fell thee downe: he shall be encountered with a man as good as himselfe. He is but a Knight, is he not?

Miche. No.

Cade. To equal him I will make my selfe a knight presently: Rife vp Sir John Marmister. Now hau'e at him.

Enter Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brother with Drum and Soldiers.

Staff. Rebellion Hinds, the fifth and actum of Kent, Mark'd for the Gallow: Lay your Weapons downe, Home to your Cottages: forsake this Groome. The King is merciful, if you return.

Bro. But angry, wrathfull, and inclin'd to blood.

If you go forward: therefore yeld, or dye.

Cade. As for these silk'en-coated flaus I paff not, it is to you good people, that I speake, Ouer whom (in time to come) I hope to regaine: For I am rightfull yere to thet Groome.

Staff. Villaine, thy Father was a Playlister, And thou thy felle a Sheareman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmund Mortimer Earl of March, married the Duke of Clarence daughter, did he not?

Staff. I lis.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's false.

Cade. I, there's the question; But I say, tis true: The elder of them being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman flone away, And ignorant of his birth and parentage, Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age.

His ione am I, deny it if you can.

But. Nay, tis too true, therefore he shall be King.

Cade. Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, & the bricks are blue at this day to testifie it: therefore deny it not.

Staff. And will you credit this bas Drudges Winder, that speaks he knows not what.

All. I marry will we therefore get ye gone.

Bro. Take Cade, the Duke York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lies, for I ineinted it my selfe. Go to sir Rial, tell the King from me, that for his Fathers sake Henry the fifth, (in whose times, boyes went to Spain-counter for French Crownes) I am content he shall raigne, but he be Protecor over him.

Butcher. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord Sayes head, for selling the Duke of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England main'd And faine to go with a staffe, but that my puissance holds it vp. Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that that Lord Say hath gelled the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: & more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he's a Traitor.

Staff. O groffe and miserable ignorance.

Cade. Nay answer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: ogo too then, I ask but this: Can he that speaks with the tongue - ran enemy, be a good Councellour, or no?

All. No, no, and therefore we'll have his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not perswade, Affaire them with the Army of the King.

Staff. Herald away, and throughout every Towne, Proclaime them Traitors that are vp with Cade,

That those which flye before the battell ends, May even in their Wines and Childrens fight, Behal'd vp for example at their doores: And you that be the Kings Friends follow me.

Exit.

Cade. And you that have the Commons, follow me: Now shew your felues men, tis for Liberty.

We will notleave one Lord, one Gentleman: Spare none, but such as go in cloathed shoon, For they are thirsty hostill men, and such.

As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

But. They are all in order, and march toward vs.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

Alarum to the sight, wherein both the Staffords are slaine. Exit Cade and the rest.

Staff. Where's Dickie, the Butcher of Ashford?

Bro. Here's Sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheepe and Oxen, & thou behaued's thy selfe, as if thou badde beene in thine owne Slaughter-house: Thereupon thus will I reward thee, the Lend shall bee as long againe as it is, and thou shall have a Licence to kill for a hundred lacking one.

But. I define no more.

Cade. And to speake truth, thou deserv'st no leafe. This Monument of the victory will I beare, and the bodyes shall be dragget at my horse heelees, till I do come to London, where we will have the MAiors sword born before vs.

But. If we meane to thrive, and do good, breake open the Gaules, and let out the Prifoners.

Cade. Fear not that I warrant thee. Come, jet's march towards London.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queen with Bishop Falkes head, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queen. Oft haue I heard that greenes softens the mind, And
And makes it fearsfull and degenerate,
Think therefore on reuenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep, and (ook on this,
Here may his head lye on my throbbling brest:
But where's the body that I should imbrace?

Enter.
What answr makes your Grace to the Rebels
Supplication?

King.
Ile send some holy Bishop to intreat:
For God forbid, so many simple foules
Should perfili by the Sword. And I my selfe,
Rather then bloody Warre shall eat them short;
Will parley with Jacke Cade their Generall,
But stay, Ile read it over once again.

Qn. Ah barbarous villaines: Hath this louly face,
Rul'llike a wandering Plancke over my,
And could it not informe them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same.

King. Lord Say, Jacke Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say.
I, but I hope your Highnesse shall have his,
King. How now Madam?
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolkes death?
I feare me (Loue) if that I had beene dead,
Thou woul'dst not haue moun'd so much for me.

Qn.
No my Loue, I should not mourne, but dye for thee.

Enter a Mefenger.

King.
How now? What newes? Why cant't thou in such haste?

Mef. The Rebels are in Southwache: Fly my Lord:
Jack Cade proclamest himselfe Lord Mortimer,
Defended from the Duke of Clarence house,
And call's your Grace Viscount, openly,
And vowes to Crowne himselfe in Westminister.
His Army is a ragged multitude
Of Hines and Peazzants, rude and mercifull:
Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brothers death,
Hath given them heart and courage to proceede:
All Schollers, Lawyers, Courtiers Gentlemen,
They call false Casterpiller, and intend their death.

Kw. Oh gracefull men: they know not what they do,

Back. My gracious Lord, retire to Killingworth,
Vntill a power be rais'd to put them downe.

Qn. Ah were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,
These Kentish Rebels would be sonic speed's.

King. Lord Say, the Traitors hasten thee,
Therefore away with vs to Killingworth.

Saw. So might your Graces person be in danger:
The fight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this City will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Mefenger.

Mef. Jacke Cade hath gotten London Bridge,
The Citizens flye and for trie their houfes:
The Ruffell people, thrililing after prey,
Joyne with the Traitor, and they joyfully sawse
To appoyle the City, and your Royall Court.

Bro. Then linger not my Lord, away, take horce.

King. Come Margaret, God our hope will succour vs.

Say. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

King. Farewell my Lord, tryst not the Kentish Rebels.

Say. That tryst I haue, is in mine innocence,

And therefore am I bold and refolute.

Enter Lord Scales upon the Tower walking. Then enter
two or three Citizens below.

Scales.
How now? Is Jacke Cade (Daine)?
1. Cit. No my Lord, not likely to be flaine:
For they haue wonne the Bridge,
Killing all those that withold them:
The L. Major causes ayd of your Honor from the Tower
To defend the City from the Rebels.

Scales. Such ayd as I can spare you shall command,
But I am troubled here by them they, but,
The Rebels haue affay'd to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Gaffe,
Fight for your King, your Countrie, and your Lives,
And so farwell, for I must hence again.

Enter.

Scales. Enter Jacke Cade and the rest, and strikes his flage on London Stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer Lord of this City,
And herefittting upon London Stone,
I charge and command, that of the Cities rest
The pilling Conduit run nothing but Clarret Wine
This fiftt year of our Raigne.
And now henceforward it shall be Treson for any,
That calles me other then Lord Mortimer,

Enter a Soldier running.

Soul. Jacke Cade, Jacke Cade.
Cade. Knocke him downe there.
They kill him.

But. If this Fellow be wife, he'll neuer call ye Jacke
Cade more, I thinke he hath a very faire warning.

Dicky. My Lord, there's an Army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then let's go fight with them:
But first, go and see London Bridge on theire,
And if you can, hurre downe the Tower too.
Come, let's away.

Enter another Mefenger.

Alar.
Mathew Gaffe is flaine, and all the rest.
Then enter Jacke Cade, with his Company.

Cade. So far: now goe some and pull downe the Savoy:
Others to the Innes of Court, downe with them all.

But. I have a suite unto your Lordship.

Cade. Bee it a Lordshippe, then shal have it for that word.

But. Onlye that the Lawes of England may come out of your mouth.

John. Masfe 'twill be fose Law then, for he was thruff in the mouth with a Speare, and his not whole yet.

Smith. Nay John, it will be flinking Law, for his breath
flinkes with eating toaste Chesse.

Cade. I haue thought upon it, it shall bee fo.
Away, but let all the Records of the Realme, my mouth shall be

John. Then we are like to haue biring Statutes
Vnlike his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in Common.

Enter a Mefenger.

Mef. My Lord a prize, a prize, heres the Lord Say, which fold the Townes in France. He that made vs pay one and twenty Fifteenes, and one shilling to the pound, the last Subside.

IV. iv. 2—IV. vii. 25

494
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Enter George with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, hee shall be beheaded for it ten times: As thou say, thou Surge, say thou backram Lord, now are thou within point-blanke of our Jurisdiction Regall. What canst thou answere to my Maistie, for giving vp of Normandie vnto Moultre Sacham, the Delphine of France? Be it knowne vnto thee by the presence, even the presence of Lord Martynor, that I am the Bosome that must swepe the Court cleane of such filth as thou art: Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the Realme, intereting a Grammar Schoole: and where as before, our Fore-fathers had no other Bookes but the Score and the Tally, thou hast causd printing to be vs'd, and contrary to the King, his Crowne, and Dignity, thou hast built a Paper-Mill. It will be prov'd to thye Face, that thou hast men about thee, that wholly talke of a Nowre and a Verbe, and such abominable wordes, as no Christian ear can endure to heare. Thou hast appoincted Justices of Peace, to call poor men before them, a bout matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou haft put them in prison, and because they could not reade, thou haft hang'd them, when (indeed) only for that cause they haue been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-clout, doft thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let such horses weepe a Cloake, when honest men then thou goe in their Hooke and Doublettes.

Dick. And workes in their shirt to, as my selfe for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent.

Dick. What say you of Kent.

Say. Nothing but this: This bona terra, male gent.

Cade. Away with him, away with him, he speaks Latine.

Say. Heare me but speake, and beare mee where you will:

Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ: I seem'd the duell' place of all this Ile: Sweeter is the Country, because full of Riches, The People Liberally, Valiant, Achiue, Wealthy, Which makes me hope you are not void of piety, I fold not Mamme, I loof not Normandie, Yet to recover them would beeke my life: Injustice with favour haue I alwayes done, Prayers and Teares haue mould me, Gifts could never. When haue I ought exalted at your hands?

Kent to maintaine, the King and the Realme and you. Large gifts haue I befolow'd on learned Clearkes, Because my Booke pretend'mt me to the King. And seeing Ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to heauen. Vnlestie you be possesst with diuellish spirits, You cannot but forbearre to murther me: This Tongue hath partlied into Forraine Kings.

For your bieoffes,

Cade. Tun, when struckt thou once blow in the field?

Say. Great men haue reaching hands to hauing I struck those that I never saw, and strikke them dead.

Geo. O monstrous Coward! What, to come behinde Folkes?

Say. These checkers are pale for watching for your good Cade. Give him a boxe o'th ear, and that will make'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poore mens caufes, Hath made me full of recknelle and diverses.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen Candle then, & the help of hatchet.

Dick. Why doth thou quieter man?

Say. The Paple, and not fearr provokes me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at vs, as who should say, Ile be even with you. Ile fete his head will stand redder on a pole, prises: Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein haue I offended most?

Hau I afficted wealth, or honor? Speake.

Are my Cheffes fill'd vp with extorted Gold?

Is my Apparrel uncomely to behold?

Whom haue I inflid, that ye feeke my death?

These handes are free from guillotie bloodsleeding,

This breath from hauing sent out deceitfull thoughts.

O let me live.

Cade. I feel in my selfe with his words: but Ile bridle it: I shall dye, and Ile be for but for pleading to well for his life. Away with him, he's a Familiar under his Tongue, he speaks not a Gods name. Goe, take him away I say, and strikke off his head presently, and then breake into his Sonne in Lawes houre, Sir James Cromer, and strikke off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.

Add. It shall be done.

Say. Ah Countremiens: If when you make your prair's, God should be so obdurate as your feline:

How woul'd it fare with your departed soules,

And therefore ye retent, and faue my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye: the prudent Peere in the Realme, shall not wear a head on his shoulard, vnlesse he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but the shall pay to me her Maydenhead ere they haue it: Men shall hold of me in Capre. And we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dick. My Lord,

When shall we go to Cheapside, and take vp commodities vnpon our biles?

Cade. Marry presently.

Add. O brave.

Enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braver:

Let them kisse one another: For they lould well

When they were alue, Now part them againe,

Least they confute about the giving vp

Of lome more Townes in France. Soldiers,

Determine the spoile of the Cittie vnstill night.

For with these borne before vs:in fleet of Maces,

Will we ride through the streets, & at every Corner

Hauie them kisse. Away.

Exit

Alarmes, and Retreat. Enter against Cade, and all his rabblemoues.

Cade. Vp Fyfth-streete, downe Saint Magnes cornet, kill and knocke downe, throw them into Thames:

Sound a parley.

What noise is this I hear?

Dare any be bold to found Retreat or Parley

When I command them kill?
Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Buck. There they be: that, dare and will disturb thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambassadors from the King
Into the Commend, whom thou hast misled,
And heere pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will farewell thee, and go home in peace.
Clif. What say ye Countriemen, will ye relent
And yield to mercie, whilst it is offered you,
Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths.
Who loves the King, and will embrace his pardon,
Pling vp his cap, and say, God save his Majesty.
Who hater him, and honors not his Father,
Henry the fift, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at vs, and paffe by.

All. God save the King, God save the King.

Cade. What Buckingham and Clifford are ye to brace?
And you base Peazants, do ye beleive him, will you needs be hang'd with your Pardons about your neckes? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White-heart in Southwark.
I thought ye would never lose giv'n out these Armes till you had recovered your ancient Freedom. But you are all Reckants and Dallards, and delight to live in flourrie to the Nobility. Let them break your backes with butt-then, take your houres out your heads, robb your Wives and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one, and to Gods Curfie light upon you all.

All. We'll follow Cade.
Wec'll follow Cade.

Clif. Is Cade the sonne of Henry the fift,
That thus do exclaim you! go with him.
Will he conduc't you through the hear of France,
And make the meaneff of you Earle; and Dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly too:
Nor knowes he how to live, but by the spoyle,
Voleffe by robbing of your Friends, and vs.
We'r a not a flame, that whiff you live at iarre,
The fearfull French, whom you are vanquished
Should make a fift ore-les, and vanquish you?
Me thinkes alreadie in this ciuille broyle,
I see them Lording it in London firecees,
Crying Village vnto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-borne Cades misfarr,
Then you should slope vnto a Frenchmans mercy.
To France, to France, and get what you have loft:
Spare England, for it is your Natue Coast:
Henry hath mony, you are strong and manly:
God on our side, doubt not of Victoria.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford.
We'll follow the King, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever Feather so lightly blowne too & fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fift, hailes them to an hundred mischiefes, and makes them leave mee desolate.
I fee them lay thei, heades together to surprize me.
My sword make way for me, for heere is no lying:
in delight of the diewes and hell, haue through the verie middatt of you, and heauens and honor be wrestled, that no want of resolution in mee, but onely my Followers base and ignominious treasons, makes me breake mee to my heeres.

Exit Buck, What is he fled? Go some and follow him,
And he that brings his head vnto the King,
Shall have a thousand Crownes for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.]

Follow me soldiers, we'll deuise a meane,
To reconcile you all vnto the King.

Enter Ambassadors. Enter King, Queen, and Somerset on the Terras.

King. Was never King that joy'd an earthly Throne,
And could command no more content then I?
No sooner was I crept out of my Cradle,
But I was made a King, at nine months old,
Was never Subject long'd to be a King,
As I do long and wish to be a Subject.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buck. Health and glad spidings to your Majesty.

King. Why Buckingham, is the Traitor Cade surpris'd?
Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter Multitudes with Halter's about their Neckes.

Clif. He is fled my Lord, and all his powers do yield,
And humbly thus with halter's on their neckes,
Expect your Highnesse doome of life, or death.

King. Then heauen set ope thy euell gating lisses,
To entertaine my voices of thankes and praise.
Soldierr, this day have you redeem'd your lues,
And shew'd how well you love your Prince & Country. Continue full in this to good a minde,
And Henry though he be unfortunate,
Affure your felves will never be vnkinde:
And fo with thankes, and pardon to you all,
I do disimiss you to your severall Countries.

All. God save the King, God save the King.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Please it your Grace to be aduentured,
The Duke of Yorkes is newly come from Ireland,
And with a poffent and a mighty power
Of Gallow-glasses and flour Kerne,
Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And still proclaimeth as he comes along,
His Armes are onely to remove from thee.
The Duke of Somerset, whom he armes a Traitor.
King. Thus stands my fate, 'twixt Cade and Yorks I difciffle.
Like as a Ship, that having reaped a Tempeft,
Is fraught with calme, and boored with a Pyraste.
But now is Cade driven backe, his men dispers'd,
And now is York in Armes, to second him.
I pray thee Buckingham go and meete him,
And ask him what's the reafon of these Armes:
Tell him, I'll send Duke Edmonde to the Tower,
And Somerset we will committ thee thither,
Vntill his Army be disimiss from him.

Somerset. My Lord,
I yeeld my felfe to prifon willingly,
Or vnto death, to do my Country good.

King. In any cafe, be not to rough in termes,
For he is fierce, and cannot brooke hard Language.
Buck. I will my Lord, and doubt not to doe,
As all things shall redound vnto your good.

King. Come wife, let's in, and learne to govern better,
For yet may England curse my wretched raigne.

[Flourish.]

Exeunt.

IV. viii. 7 — IV. ix. 49

496
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Eye on Ambitions; sic on my selfe, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famih. These siete daies hau I hid me in these Woods, and durst not prepe out, for all the Country is laid for me: but now am I hungry, that if I might have a Lease of my life for a thousand yeares, I could stay no longer. Wherefore on a Brickle wall hau I climbed into this Garden, to see if I can eate Grasse, or pick a Sallet another while, which is not amisse to coole a man from eske this hot weather: and I think this word Sallet was borne to do me good: for many a time but for a Sallet, my braine-pan had bene clef with a brown Bill; and many a time when I have beene dry, & brauely marching, it hath serv'd me instead of a quart pot to drink in: and now the word Sallet must iresue me to feed on.

Enter Iden.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoyle in this Court, And may enjoy such quiet walkes as these? This small inheritance my Father left me, Contenteth me, and worth a Monarchy. I seeke not to waxe great by others warning, Or gather wealth I care not with what envy: Sufficeth, that I have maintaines my flate, And spends the poure well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here is the Lord of the foil we came to seaze me for a fray, for entering his Fee-fimple without lease. A Villaine, thou wilt betray me, and get a 1000. Crownes of the King by carrying my head to him, but Ile make thee care Irae like an Offridge, and swallow my Sword like a great pin ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why rude Companion, whatsoeuer thou be, I know thee not, why then should I betray thee? It is not enough to breake into any Garden, And like a Thief to come to rob my grounds: Climbing my walls inspite of me the Owner, But thou wilt braue me with these swifie terms? Cade. Brave thee? I by the best blood that euer was broach'd, and beare thee to. Looke on mee well, I haue not no more these swifie daies, yet come thou and thy swieu men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a doe naile, I pray God I may never eate grasse more.

Iden. Nay, it shall nere be said, while England stands, That Alexander Iden an Esquire of Kent, Would offer his effects to compleat a familie man. Oppose thy fildes gazinge eyes to mine, See if thou canst out-face me with thy looks: Setlimbe to limbe, and thou art farre the leffer: Thy hand is but a finger to my fist, Thy legge a fiddle compared with this Truncheon, My foote shall fight with all the strength thou haist, And if mine armes be heased in the Ayre, Thy graue is digg'd already in the earth: As for words, whoe greateste peace answere words, Let this my sword report what speech forbeares.

Cade. By my Volue: the most compleate Champion that ever I heard. Steele, if thou turne the edge, or cut not out the burly bon'd Clowne in chines of Beefe, ere thou sleepe in thy Sheath, I beleech Ioue on my knees thau mayst be turn d to Hobnailler.

Here they Fight.

O1 am flaine, Famine and no other hath flaine me, yet ten thousand diuellcs come against me; and givens me but the ten meales I have lothd, and I doe defire them all. Whither Garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that doe dwell in this houfe, because the unconquered soule of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I haue flain, that monftrous traitor? Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deede, And hang thee o're my Tombe, when I am dead. Ne're shall this blood be wiped from thy point, But thou shalt weare it as a Heralds coate, To emblaze the Honour, that thy Master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell, and be proud of thy victorie: Tell Kent from me, the hath lost her beft man, and exhouct all the World to be Cawords: For I that ne'er feared any, am vanquished by Famine, nor by Valour.

Iden. How much thou wrong't me, heauen be my judge; Die damned Wretch, the curse of her that bare thee: And as I thouft thy body in with my sword, So with I. I might thy foul to hell. Hence will I dragge the headlong by the heele, Ynto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave, And there cut off thy might vngracious head, Which I will bear in triumph to the King, Leaving thy trunke for Crowes to feed upon.

Enter York, and his Army of Britis, with Drum and Colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right, And plucke the Crowne from feeble Henry's head, Ring Belles owld, burne Bonifies clere and bright To entertaine great Englands lawfull King. Ah Sanfaa Maboul: who would not buy thee dese? Let them obey, that knowes not how to Rule, This hand was made to handle nought but God, I cannot giue dace action to my words, Except a Sword or Sceptral bal lance it. A Sceptral flall it hau, hau I a foule, On which Ieoffe the Fleur-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom haue we here? Buckingham to disturbe me? The king hath sent him sure: I must defembles.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

Tor. Dimmy of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting, Art thou a Meffenger, or come of pleasure.

Buck. A Meffenger from Henry, our dread Liege, To know the reafon of these Armes in peace. Or why, thou being a Sublieft, as I am, Against thy Oath, and true Allegiance sworn, Should raifie so great a power without his lease? Or dare to bring thy Force to meet the Court?

Tor. Searfe can I speake, my Choller is so great. Oh I could hew vp Rockes, and fight with Flint, I am so angry at these shield earers. And now like Aeneas Telamonius,

On Sheeo or Ozen could I spend my furie, I am farre better borne then is the king: More like a King, more Kingly in my thoughts. But I must make faire weather yet a while, Till Henry be more weake, and I more strong. Buckingham, I prethee pardon me, That I have giuen no answer all this while: My minde was troubled with deep Me lancheolly, The caufe why I haue brought this Armie hither.
The second Part of Henry the Sixt.

Is to renown proud Somerfet from the King,
Seditions to his Grace, and to the State.

But, this is too much presumption on thy part,
If thy Armes be to no other end,
The King hath yeelded unto thy demand:
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.
Yorke. Upon whom Honor is the Prisoner?

But. I will have mine Honor.

Then Buckingham I do dismiss my Powres,
Souldiers, I thank you all; disperse your felves,
Meet me to morrow in S. Georges Field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my Soueraigne, vertuous Henry,
Command my dearl fonne, nay all my fonnes,
As pledges of my Feale and Loe,
He fend them all as willing as I live:
Lands, Goods, Horfe, or any thing I have
Is his to vfe, to Somerfet may die.

But, Yorke, I commend this kinde submiffion,
Wetwaine will go into his Highneffe Tent.

Enter King and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth Yorke intend no harme to vs
That thus he marcheth with thee arme in arme?
Yorke. In all submiffion and humility,
Yorke doth prefent himfelle into your Highneffe.
X. What then infists these Forces thou doft bring?
Tar. To heave the Traitor Somerfet from hence;
And fight againft that monflyou Rebell Cafe,
Who since I heard to be defcomfited.

Enter Iden with Cadis head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of fome meane condition
May passe into the prefence of a King:
Loe, I prefent your Grace a Traitors head,
The head of Cadis, whom I in combat flew.

King. The head of Cadis; Great God, how wilt thou act thus?
Oh let me view his Viage being dead,
That living wrought me lach exceeding trouble.
Tell me my Friend, art thou the man that flew him?
Iden. I was, an't like your Maifey.
King. How art thou call'd? And what is thiy degree?
Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name,
A poore Eluire of Kent, that loves his King.
But, So please it you my Lord, I was not an affife
He were created Knight for his good Service.

King. Iden, kneale downe, rife vp a Knight;
We give thee for reward a thoufand Markes,
And will, that thou henceforth attend on vs.

Iden. May Iden have to merit such a bountie,
And never veue but true into his Liege.

Enter Queene and Somerfet.

Som. See Buckingham, Somerfet comes with th' Queene,
Go bid her hide him quietly from the Duke.

Q. For thousand Yorke he shall not hide his head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.
Tar. How now is Somerfet at libertie?
Then Yorke vnlooseth long imprifoned thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thine heart,
Shall I endure the fight of Somerfet?

Baile King, why halft thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brooke abuse?
King did I call thee? Nor thou art not King:
Not fit to gouerne and rule multitudes,
Which dar ft not, nor canst not rule a Traitor.

That Head of thine doth not become a Crowne:
Thy Hand is made to grasp a Palmers staffe,
And not to grace an awefull Princeley Scepter.
That Gold, mulf round engirt these brows of mine,
Whofe Smife and Frowne, like to Achilles Spear
Is able with the change, to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a Scepter vp,
And with the same to afe controlling Lawes
Gieue place: by heauen thouft lawe rule no more
O're him, whom heauen created for thy Ruler.

Somerfet. O monflyou Traitor! I arret thy Yorke
Of Capitall Trefain gainft the King and Crowne:
Obey audacious Traitor, kneele for Grace.

Tarf. Wold's haue me kneele? First let me ask of thee;
If they can brooke I bow a knee to man:
Shreah, call in my fonne to be my bale:
I know ere they will haue me go to Ward,
They'll pawns their fwords of my infranchiment.

Q. Call bither Clifford, bid him come amaine,
To-day, if that the Baffard boyes of Yorke
Shall be the Surety for their Traitor Father.

Tar. O blood-beffotted Neapolitan,
Out-cuff of Naples, Englandes bloody Scourge,
The fonnes of Yorke, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their Fathers baile, and bane to thofe
That for my Surety will refufe the Boyes.

Enter Edward and Richard,

See where they come, he warrant they'll make it good,
Enter Clifford.

Q. And here comes Clifford to deny their baile.

Cliff. Health, and all Happine to my Lord the King,
Tar. Ithanke thee Clifford: Say, what newes with thes?
Nay, do not fright vs with an angry looke:
We are thy Soueraigne Clifford, kneele againe;
For thy miltaking fo, We pardon thes.

Cliff. This is my King Yorke, I do not mifiake,
But thou miffakes me much to think I do,
To beleeve with him, is the man growne mad.

King, Clifford, a Bedlem and ambitious humor
Makes him oppofe himfelle againft his King.

Cliff. Heis a Traitor, let him to the Tower,
And chop away that fatical pare of his.

Q. He is atrefled, but will not obeie:
His fonnes,(he fayes) thrill their words for him,
Tar. Will you not Somerfet?

Edw. I Noble Father, if our words will ferve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our Weapons fhall
Cliff. Why what a brood of Traitors have we here?

Tar. Look in a Glasfe, and call thy Image fo.

I am thy King, and thou a falfe-heart Traitor:
Call lither to the flake my two brave Beares,
That with the very flaking of their Chaine,
They may affonish their fell-lurking Currees,
Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the Earles of Warwick, and Salisbury.

Cliff. Are these thy Beares? We'll have thy Beares to deale,
And maufelet the Berard in their Chaine,
I thou darft not bring them to the baying place.

Rich. Oft haue I fearne a hot ore-wening Curre,
Run backe and bite, because he was with-held.
Who being fuffer'd with the Beares fell paw,
Hath clapt his tale, betweenne his legsges and cride,
And such a piece of feruice will you do,
Clrt. Hence heape of wrath, foule indigested lumpes, As cackled in thy manners, as thy fpe.

Thou, Nay we shall hate you the rowdyly an.ou.

Clrt. Take heedle leat by thy heare yon burne your soules:

Why Warwicke, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salbury, flame to thy bluer haires, Thou mad mildeater of thy braine-ficie forme, What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Ruffian? And feele for sorrow with thy Spectacles? Oh where is Faith? Oh, where is Loyalty?

It be benefit from the frostie head, Where shall it finde a harboure in the earth? Wilt thou goe digge a grave to finde our Warre, And flame thine honourable Age with blood? What ar thou old, and want?e experience?

Or wherefor doest abuse it, if thou haft it? For thynne in diciue bend thy knee to me, That bowes into the grave with tickle age.

Sal. My Lord, I have confidered with my felie

The Title of this most renowned Duke,

And in my confidence, do repose his grace

The rightfull heyre to Englands Royall state.

King. Hal thou not sworne Allegiance unto me?

Sal. I haue.

King. Can I, thou dost disperse with heaven for such an eath?

Sal. It is great finne, to sweare ane faine:

But greater faine to keepe a finfull eath:

Who can be bound by any soleman Vow

To do a murdrous deede, to rob a man,

To force a spotlesse Virgins Chastifie,

To reuse the Orphan of his Patrimone,

To wring the Widow from her cuckold right,

And haue no other reaon for this wrong,

But that he was bound by a soleman Oath?

Clrt. A subtle Traitor needs no Sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him ame himselfe.

Treyke, Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou haft,

I am resolvd for death and dignities.

Old Clrt. The first I warrant them, doth deserve true War.

Clrt. You were bent to goe to bed, and dreames againe,

To keepe thee from the Tempeft of the field.

Old Clrt. I am resolvd to beares a greacer frowne,

Then any thou canst conjure up to day:

And that Ie write vpon thy Burgonies,

Might I but knowe thee by thy houted Badge.

War. Now by my Fathers badges, old Nemis Cefli,

The rampant Beare chain'd to the ragged blafe,

This day Ie were softe my Burgonie,

As on a Mountaine top, the Cedars fweres,

That keepes his leaues infpight of any frowne,

Even to affrighte thee with the view thereof.

Old Clrt. And from thy Burgonie Ie rend thy Beare,

And treat it vnder foot with all contempt,

Delighting the Bearnad, that protects the Beare.

Thou Cleft. And to thine venerable Father,

To quell the Rebels, and their Complacs.

Ric. Fie, Chastifie for thynne, speak not in sight,

For you shall fap with fels Chrift to night.

Clrt. Foule flygmatheke that's more then thou grant tell.

Ric. If not in heauen, you' lye surelly fap in hell.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, tis Warwicke calleth:

And if thou dost not hide thee from the Beare,
The second Part of Henry the Sixth.

Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerset to fight.

Rich. So dye thou there; For underneath an Ale-house pauly fight; The Castle in S. Albans, Somerset Hath made the Wizard famous in his death: Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathful still! Priestspray for enemies, but Princes kill.

Exit Richard, Somerset, and Exeunt.

Enter King, Queen, and others.

Q. Away my Lord, you are slow, for shame away, King. Can we outrun the Heavens? Good Margaret say.

Q. What are you made of? You'll nor fight nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wifedom, and defence.

To guide the enemy way, and to secure us

By what we can, which can no more but flye.

If you be tame, we then should see the bottom

Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,

(As well we may, if not through your neglect)

We shall to London get, where you are loy'd,

And where this breach now in our fortunes made

May readily be stopp'd.

Enter Clifford.

Cliff. But that my hearts on future mischeefe set,

I would speake blasphemy ere bid you flye:

But flye you must: Vindicabile diçcensitate

Reignes in the hearts of all our present parts.

Away for your secure, and we will live

To fee their day, and them our Fortune glowe.

Away my Lord, away.

FINIS.
The third Part of Henry the Sixth, with the death of the Duke of Yorke.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Plantagenet Edward, Richard, Northumberland, Warwick, and Souldiers.

Worlde. Wonder how the King escap'd our hands? Pl. While we pursu'd the Horsemen of North, He slipp'd away, and left his men: Whereas the great Lord of Northumberland, Whose Warlike cause could never brooke retreat, Chear'd the drouging Army, and himselfe, Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-brest Charg'd our maine Battalies from: and breaking in, Were by the Sweats of common Souldiers flame, Edm. Lord Stafford, Father, Duke of Buckingham, Is either flame or wounded dangerous, I cleft his Escut with a downward blow: That this is true (Father) behold his blood, Mount. And Brother, here's the Earl of Wiltshires, Whom I encounters as the Battalies joyn'd, (blood, Rich. Speake thou for me, and tell them what I did, Plsnt. Richard hath bell defend'd of all my forces: But your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset? Nor. Such hope have all the fine of Essex of Gust. Rich. Thus do I hope to shoke King Henry's head, Warw. And doe I, victorious Prince of York, Before I see thee feast in that I throne, Which now the House of Lancaster shalp, I yow by Heastes, these eye's shall never cloke, This is the Palace of the fearefull King, And this the Regall Seat: postpon it York, For this is thine, and not King Henry's Heires, Plant. Affit me then, sweet Warwick, and I will, For hither we have broken in by force, Norf. We're all affit you: he that flies, shall dye. Plant. Thankes gentle Norfylke, stay by me my Lord, And Souldiers stay and lodge by me this Night. They goe vp. Warw. And when the King comes, offer him no violence, Vnlesse he seekes to thrust you out perforce. Plant. The Queene this day here holds her Parliament, But little thinkes we shall be of her counsale, By words or blowes here let vs winne our right. Rich. Arr'd as we are, let's stay within this House. Warw. The bloody Parliament shall this be call d, Vnlesse Plantagenet, Duke of Yorke, be King, And bathfull Henry depos'd, whose Cowardize Hath made vs by vs. do to our enemies. Plsnt. Then leaue me not, my Lords be resolute, I meanes to take possifion of my Right, Warw. Neither the King nor he that loues him best, The prouddefh hee that holds vp Lancaster, Dares firte a Wing, if Warwick shak his Bells, He plant Plantagenet, root him vp who dares: Resolute thee Richard,clayme the English Crowne.

Flouris. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberlond, Welfeldmond, Exeter, and the rest.

Henry. My Lords, looke where the furdige Rebell sits, Even in the Chayse of State: belike he meanes, Backt by the power of Warwick, that false Peere, To aspire vnto the Crown, and reignes as King, Earle of Northumberlond, he flwy thy Father, And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both haue vow'd revenge On him, his sonnes, his favoristes, and his friends, Northumberland. If I be not, I heauen be resou'd on me. Clifford. The hope thereof, makes Clifford mourne in strees.

Westm. What, shall we suffer this? les pluck him down, My heart for anger bernes, I cannot brooke it. Henry. Be patience, gentle Earl of Welfeldmond, Clifford, Patience is for Poultrones, such as he: He durft not fit there had your Father liv'd, My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament Let vs affayle the Family of York, North. Well sait thou spoken, Cousin be it so, Henry. Ah, know you not the Citie favours them, And they have troupe of Souldiers at their beck? Westm. But when the Duke is slaine, they're quickly flye. Henry. Farre be the thought of this from Henry's heart, To make a Shambles of the Parliament House, Cousin of Exeter, browes, words, and threats, Shall be the Warre that Henry meanes to vfe, Thou fadious Duke of Yorke defend my Throne, And kneele for grace and mercie at my feet, I am thy Soveraigne. York. I am thine. Exet. For shame come downe, he made thee Duke of York. Yorke. It was my Inheritance, as the Earledome was. Exet, Thy
The third Part of Henry the Sixt.

Exst. Thy Father was a Traytor to the Crown.
War. Exst. thou art a Traytor to the Crowne,
In following this vurprising Henry,
Clifford. Whom should he follow, but his natural King?
And that the Lord of Westmerland shall continue: War. And Warwick shall dispute it. You forget,
That we are those which chas'd you from the field,
And flew your Fathers, and with Colours spread March through the Cities to the Palace Gates. Northumb. Yes Warwick, I remember it to my grief;
And by his Soule, thou and thy Houfe shall rue it. Wofien. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy Sonses,
Thy Kinmen, and thy Friends, Ile have more lies
Then drops of blood were in my Fathers Veines. Cliff. Vege it no more, lest that in stead of words,
I lead thee, Warrick, such a Meffinger,
As shall revenge his death, before I tire. Poor Clifford, how I scorn his worthless Threats.
Plant. Will you we fly our Tide to the Crowne?
If not, our Swords shall pleade it in the field. Henry. What Tide hast thou Traytor to the Crowne?
My Father was as thou art, Duke of Yorke,
Thy Grandfather Roger Mortimer, Earl of March. I am the Sonne of Henry the Fat,
Who made the Dolphin and the French to hape,
And fea'd upon their Townes and Provinces. War. Talk not of France, fith thou haft loit it all. Henry. The Lord Protector left it, and not I:
When I was crown'd, I was but nine moneths old. Rich. You are old enough now,
And yet me thinks thou looke:
Father yeare the Crowne from the Vfurers Head. Edward. Sweet Father doe to, let it on your Head.
Coun. Good Brother,
As thou loit't and honoroff Armes,
Let's fight it out, and not stand caiting thus. Richard. Sound Drummes and Trumpes, and the King will flye.
War. Plantagenet shall speake first: Hear him Lords,
And be you silent and attentive too,
For he char interrupts him, shall not live.
Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my Kingly Throne,
Wherein my Grandire and my Father fat?
Nooffish shall Warre vpepeople this my Realme;
I, and their Colours often borne in France,
And now in England, to our hearts great sorrow,
Shall be my Winding-sheet. Why faint you Lords?
My Title's good, and better fare than his.
War. Prove it Henry, and thou shalt be King,
Hen. Henry the Fourth by Conquest got the Crowne.
Plant. Twas by Rebellion against his King. Henry. I know not what to say, my Titles weake:
Tell me, may not a King adopt an Heire?
Plant. What then?
Henry. And if he may, then am I lawfull King:
For Richard, in the view of many Lords,
Reign'd the Crowne to Henry the Fourth,
Whole Heire my Father was, and I am his.
Plant. He rose against him, being his Soueraigne,
And made him to resign his Crowne perfore.
War. Suppofe, my Lords, he did vnceonefay'd,
Think you he were prejudicial to his Crowne?
Exst. No: for he could not to resign his Crowne,
But that he next Heire should succeed and reigne,
Henry. Art thou against vs, Duke of Exeter?
Exst. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.
Plant. Why whisper you, my Lords, and answr not?
Exst. My Conference tells me he is lawfull King.
Henry. All will resolute from me, and turne to him. Northumb. Plantagenet, for all the Clayne thou lay'rs,
Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.
War. Depos'd he shall be, in dispight of all.
Northumb. Thou art deceu'd:
'Tis not thy Southern power
Of Effex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptous and proud,
Can fet the Duke vp in dispight of me,
Clifford. King Henry, be thy Title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vouches to fight in thy defence;
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that flew my Father.
Henry. Oh Clifford, how thy words reuine my heart.
Plant. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy Crowne.
What matter you, or what confpire you Lords?
War. Doe right vnto this Princely Duke of Yorke,
Or I will fill the House with armed men,
And ouer the Chayre of State, where now he fits,
Write vp his Title with spurling Blood.
He rampes with his foot, and the Soullards flew themselues.
Henry. My Lord of Warick, hear but one word,
Let me for this my life time reign as King.
Plant. Confirm the Crowne to me and to mine Heires,
And thou shalt reigne in quiet while thou liv'st.
Henry. I am content: Richard Plantagenet
Enjoy the Kingdome after my deceas.
Clifford. What wrong is this vnto the Prince, your Sonne?
War. What good is this to England and himselfe?
Wofien. Base, carefull, and despaying Henry. Clifford. How haft thou injur'd both thy felle and vs?
Wofien. I cannot stay to hear these Articles.
Northumb. Nor I.
Clifford. Come Cousin, let vs tell the Queene these News.
War. Farwell faint-hearted and degenerate King,
In whose cold Blood no skire of Honor bides.
Northumb. Be thou a prey vnto the House of Yorke,
And dye in Bands, for this vnmanly deed.
Clliff. In dreadful Warre may't thou be overcome,
Or live in peace abandoned and despoyled.
War. Turne this way Henry, and regard them not.
Exst. They feake truenesse, and therefore will not yeeld.
Henry. Ah Exeter.
War. Why shou'd you fish, my Lord?
Henry. Not for my felle Lord Warick, but my Sonne,
Whom I naturally shall dispose.
But be it as it may: I here entaye
The Crowne to thee and to shine Heires for ever,
Conditionally, that heere thou take an Oath,
To ceafe this Cintil Warrs: and whilft I live,
To honor me as thy King, and Souersaigne;
And neithy by Tresion nor Hoffilitie,
To seeke to put me downe, and reigne thy selfe.

Plut. This Oath I willingly take, and will performe.

Henry. And long live thou, and these thy forward Sones.

Plant. Now Tyrk and Lancaster are reconcile'd,
Exst. Accurst be he that seekes to make them foes.

Souns. Here they come downe.

Plut. Farewell my gracious Lord, Ile to my Cafile.

Warw. And Ile keepe London with my Souldeiers.

Nor. And I to Norfolke with my follower.

Mont. And I unto the Sea, from whence I came.

Henry. And I with griefe and sorrow to the Court.

Enter the Queene.

Exst. Here comes the Queene.

Whole Lookes be wreath your anger:
Ile reale away.

Henry. Exst to will I.

Queene. Nay, gое not from me, I will follow thee.

Henry. Be patient gentle Queene, and I will stay.

Queene. Who can be patients in such extremities?

Ah wretch'd man, would I had dy'd a Maid?
And never seen thee, never borne thee Sonne,
Seeing thou hast proud'ly unnatural a Father,
Hath he defier'd to loose his Birth-right thus?
Hadst thou but loyal'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that paine which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood;
Thou wouldst have left thy desart about the heart;
Rather then haue made that saucy Duke thy life, I fear,
And dis-inherit thee onely Sonne.

Prince. Father, you cannot dis-inherit me?

If you be King, why should not I succeede?

Henry. Pardon me Margaret, pardon me sweet Sonne,
The Earl of Warrick and the Duke enforc't me.

Queene. Enforc't thee? Art thou King, and wilt be for't?
I shame to hear thee speake so timorous Wretch,
Thou hast vndone thy selfe, thy Sonne, and me,
And giv'n unto the House of Tyrk such head,
As thou shalt reigne but by their sufferance.
To castelle him and his Heires unto the Crowne,
What is it, but to make thee Subject,
And crepe into it faire before thy time?

Warwick is Chancellor, and the Lord of Callice,
Sterne soluble commands the Narrow Seas,
The Duke is made Protector of the Realme,
And yet shalt thou be safe? Such safetie finds
The trembling Lame, injur'd with Wolves.
Had I bene there, which am a filly Woman,
The Souldeiers should haue to'dd me on their Pikes,
Before I would haue granted to that A.C.
But thou pretend'st thy life, before thine Honor.
And seeing thou do'st, I here divorce my selle,
Both from thy Table Henry, and thy Bed,
Vntill that A.C. of Parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my Sonne is dis-inherited.

The Northern Lords, that have forsworne thy Colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:
And spread they shall be, to thy foule disgrace,
And vnter ruine of the House of Tyrk.

Thus doe I leave thee: Come Sonne, let's away,
Our Army is ready; come, wee le after them.

Henry. Stay gentle Margaret, and hear me speake.

Queene. Thou hast spake too much already: get thee gone.

Henry. Gentle Sonne Edward, thou wilt flame?

Queene. I, to be mother'd by his Enemies.

Prince. When I returne with victorie to the field,
I shall see your Grace: till then, Ile follow her.

Queene. Come Sonne away, we may not linger thus.

Henry. Poor Queene,

How longe to me, and to her Sonne,
Hath made her breake out into terms of Rage,
Reueng'd must be on that basefull Duke,
Whole haughty spirit, wings: I with desire,
Will cull my Crowne, and like an empie Eagle,
Tyre on the left of me, and of my Sonne.
The tols of those three Lords torment my heart:
Ile write vnto them, and entreat them faire;
Come Comin, youhall be the Meffenger.

Exst. And I, I hope shall reconcile them all.

Flourish. Enter Richard, Edward, and Amonacqes.

Edward. No, I can better play the Orator.

Mont. But I haue reasons strong and forceable.

Enter the Duke of Tyrk.

Tyrk. Why how now Sonne, and Brother, at a suitue?
What is your Quarrel? how began it first?

Edward. No Quarrel, but a light Contention.

Tyrk. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and vs,
The Crowne of England, Father, which is yours.

Tyrk. Mine Boyl not till King Henry be dead.

Richard. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.

Edward. Now you are Heire, therefore enjoy it now:
By giving the House of Lancaster leave to breathe,
It will out-runne you Father, in the end.

Tyrk. I tooke an Oath; that hee should quietly reigne.

Edward. But for a Kingdome any Oath may be broken:
I would breake a thousand Oaths, to reigne one yeere,

Richard. No: God forbid your Grace should be forsworne.

Tyrk. I shall be, if I climate by open Warre.

Richard. Ile proue the contrary, if you hear mee speake.

Tyrk. Thou canst not, Sonne; it is impossible.

Richard. An Oath is of no moment, being not tooke
Before a true and lawfull Magistrate,
That hath authoritie over him that sweares.

Henry had none, but did wipare the place.
Then seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vaine and frivouls.

Therefore to Armes: and Father doe but thinke,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a Crowne,
Within whose Circuit is Elysium,
And all that Perets faine of Blisse and Joy.

Why doe we linger then? I cannot tell,
Untill the White Rose that I wear, be dy'd
Even in the luke-warme blood of Henrys heart.

Tyrk. Richard enough: I will be King, or dye.

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this Enterprise.
The third Part of Henry the Sixth.

Clifford. How now! is he dead already? or is it fear, that makes him close his eyes? It seems to me, that yet he cannot die.

Edward, So looks the pensive Lyon o'er the Wreth, That trembles under his desouling Paws: And to he walks, infulting o'er his Prey, And to he comes, to rend his Limbs stainer. Ah gentle Clifford, kill me with thy Sword, And not with such a cruelly threatening Looko. Sweet Clifford hear me speak, before I dye: I am too means a faubise for thy Wrath, Be thou requir'd on men, and let me live. Clifford. In vaine thou speakest, pitre Sir: My Fathers blood hath fipt the paffage: Where thy words should enter. Rudland. Then let my Fathers blood open it againe, He is a man, and Clifford cope with him. Clifford. Had I thy Brethren here, their lives and thine Were not trouege sufficient for me: No, if I digg'd vp thy faue-fathers Graues, And hung their rotten Coffins vp in Cheyne, It could notlake flame in, nor eat my heart. The fight of any of the House of Tork, Is as a furie to torment my Soule: And till I root out their accursed Line, And leave not one alive, I live in Hell. Therefore——

Rudland. Oh let me pray, before I take my death: To thee I pray, sweet Clifford pity me. Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapers point affords, Rudland. I never did three barmes, why will thou slay me?

Clifford. Thy Father hath. Rudland. But twas eoe I was borne, Thou haft one Sonne, for his fake pitty me, Least in reuenge thereof, thy God is full, He be as miserably blaine as I, And when I give occasion of offence, Then let me dye, for now thou haft no caufe. Clifford. No caufe? thy Father flew my Fathers therfore dye. Rudland. By facetiousness I am j�nt to my aun. Clifford. Plantagenet, I come Plantagenet: And this thy Sonnes blood cleaning to my Blade, Shall ruff upon thy Weapon, till thy blood Congeall'd with this, doe make me wipe off both. Exit.

York. The Army of the Queene hath got the field: My Vaccles both are flaine, in rescuing me; And all my followers, to the eager foe Turne back, and Iye, like Ships before the Winds, Or lothes purled up by hunger-flamed Wolves, My Sonnes, God knowes what hath bechanche them: But this I know, they han'e demesned themselves Like men borne to Renowne, by Life or Death. Three times did Richard make a lane to me, And thrice cryde, Courage Father, right it out: And full as ofte came Edward to my side, With purple Fauclion, panned to the Hilt, In blooded throfe that had encounterd him: And when the hardyff Warriors did retire, Richard cryde, Charge, and give no foot of ground, And cryde, A Crown, or else a glorious Tombe,
The third Part of Henry the Sixth.

A Scepter, gean. Earthly Sepulchre.
With this we charg'd againe: but out alas,
We boddy's againe, as I haue seene a Swain
With bootlefe labour swimme against the Tyde,
And spend her strength with over-matching Waves,
A forts Alascon within.

Ah hearke, the farall followers doe pursue,
And I am fain, and cannot flye their furie:
And were I strong, I would not flonne their furie,
The Sands are numbred, this makes vp my Life;
Here muft I fly, and here my Life muft end.

Enter the Queene, Clifford, Northumberland, the young Prince, and Conduitts.

Come bloody Clifford, though Northumberland, I dare your quencheffe furie to more rage:
I am your Bat, and I stubbe your Shot.

Northumb. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet, Clifford. I to fuche mercy, as his quencheffe Arme
With downe-right payment, thou'd vnto my Father,
Now Passoer hath tumbl'd from his Carre,
And made an Evening at the Noode-tide Prick.

Tyrke. My fables, as the Phoenix, may bring forth
A Bird, that will revenge vpon you all:
And in that hope, I throw mine eyes to Heaven,
Scotning what euer you can afflante me with.
Why come you not? what multitudes, and feaue?
Cliff. So Cowards fight, when they can flye no further,
So Diuers doe prickt the Falcons piercing Talons,
So desperate Theues, all hopelesse of their Lives,
Breaste our inuincible gainft the Officers.

Tyrke. Oh Clifford, but bethinke thee once againe,
And in thy thought on-er-run my former time:
And if thou canst, for blushing, view this face,
And bire thy tongue, that flanders him with Cowardice,
Whole frowne hath made thee feaine and flye er this,
Clifford. I will not budge with thee word for word,
But budge with thee blowes twice twicce for one.

Queene. Hold vallant Clifford, for a thoufand caufe,
I would prolong a while the Traytors Life;
Wrath makes him deaf; speake thou Northumberland.
Northumb. Hold Clifford, does not honor him fo much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart,
What valour were, when a Cure doth grove,
For one to thruft his Hand between his Teeth,
When he might fume him with his Foot away;
It is Wares prize, to take all Vantages,
And tenne to one, is no impleach of Valour.

Clifford. I, I, fo fliues the Woodcocke with the Gyne,

Northumb. So doth the Connie struggle in the Net.

Tyrke. So triumph Theues vpon their conquer'd Booty,
So True men yeeld with Robbers, fo o're-match.

Northumb. What would your Grace have done into him now?

Queene. Brave Warrillers, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him fland vpon this Mole-hill here,
That rau'd at Mountains with out-directed Armes,
Yet partd but the floodow with his Head.
What, was it you that would be Englands King?
Was't you that roueld in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Defcent?
Where are your Meffe of Sons, to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the turfie George?

And where's that valiant Crook-back Pouligie,
Dike, your Boy, that with his grumbling voce
Was wont to clear his Dad in Mutinies?
Or with the reft, where is your Darling, Ralph?
Looke Tyrke, I play'd the part, with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his Rapiers point,
Made fliue from the Bosome of the Boy:
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I giue thee this to driy thy Checkes withall.
Alas poor Tyrke, but that I hate thee deadly,
I should a nonst thy mirifable fate.
I pray thee grieue, to mace me merry,Tyrke.

What, hath thy hirfe heart so parch'd thine eareay,
That not a Tearc can full, for Englishs death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad:
And, to make thee mad, doe mock thee thus.
Stamp, rau'e, and fete, that I may finge and dance,
Thou 'ould'lt be fee'd, I fee, to make me sport:

Tyrke cannot speak, unlesfe he werea Crowne.

A Crowne for Tyrke; and Lords, bow lowe to him:
Hold you his hands, whileI do fet it on,
I marry Sir, now lookes he like a King;
I this is he that toake King Henrys Chaire,
And this is he was his adopted Heire.

But how is this, that great Plantagenet
Is crownd to soone, and broke his folemn Oath?
As I bethinke me, you should not be King,
Till our King Henry had fhone hands with Death.
And will you pale your head in Henrys Glory,
And robhis Temples of the Difarme,
Now in his Life, against your holy Oath?
Oh 'tis a fauc: too too unparnoble,
Off with the Crowne; and with the Crowne,his Head,
And whilft we breathe, take time to doe him dead.

Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers fake.

Queene. Nay flye, let's hear the Orizons hee makes.

Tyrke. Shee-Wolfe of France,
But worse then Wolues of France,
Whofe Tongue more payoys then then the Adders Tooth:
How ill-beleeming is in thy Sex,

To triumph like an Amazonian Trull,
Vpon their Woes, whom Fortune captiues
But that thy Face is Vizard-like,vnchangeing,
Made impudent with vie of euill deeder.
I would alway proude Queene, to make thee blufh.
To tell thee whence thou cam'st,of whom deriv'd,
Were flame enough, to shame thee,
Wert thou not frameleffe.

Thy Father bears the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem,
Yet not so wealtih as an English Yeoman.
Hath that poore Monarch taught thee to infult?
It needes not, nor it bootes thee not, proude Queene,
Vnlefe the Adage must be verifie d,
That beggers mounted, unne their Horfe to death,
'Tis beautifie that doth oft make Women proud,
But God he knowes,yeare there of is small.

'Tis Verue, that doth make them most dam'd

The contrary, doth make thee wonder'd at,
'Tis Government that makes them freme Divine,
The want thereof, makes thee abominable.
Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are vnto us,

Or as the South to the Septentrion.
Oh Tygres Heart, wrapt in a Woman Hide,

How
The third Part of Henry the Sixt.

Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The heat all aloofe, and Burke at him.
So far'd our Father with his Enemies,
So fled his Enemies my Warlike Father:
Me thinkes 'tis prize enough to be his Sonne:
See how the Morning opes the golden Gates,
And takes her fairwell of the glorious Sunne,
How well reenblest it the prime of Youth,
Trimm'd like a Yonge, prancing to his Lune?

Ed. Dazzle mine eyes, or doe I see three Sunnes?
Rich. Three glorious Sunnes, each one a perfect Sunne,
Not seperated with the racking Clouds,
But feuer'd in a pale clear shinning Skye.
See, see, they ioyne, embrace, and feeme to kiss,
As if they vow'd some League inviolable.
Now are they but one Lampe, one Light, one Sunne:
In this, the Heauen figures some event.
Edward. 'Tis wonders strange,
The like yet never heard of.
I think it cies vif (Brother) to the field,
That wee, the Sonnes of brave Plantagenet,
Each one alreadie blazing by our meede,
Should not withstanding ioyne our Lights together,
And oure-shine the Earth, as this the World.
What ere it bodes, hence-forward will I beare
Upon my Target three faire shining Sunnes,

Richard. Nay, beare three Daughters:
By your leave, I speake it,
You loue the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter one blowing.

But what are thou, whose heauie Looks fore-tell
Some dreadfull story hanging on thy Tongue?
Moff. Ah, one that was a woeful looker on,
When as the Noble Duke of Yorke was slain,
Your Princely Father, and my louting Lord,
Edward. Oh speake no more, for I have heard too much.

Richard. Say how he dy'd, for I will hear it all.
Moff. Emotioned he was with many toyes,
And long against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Grecians, that would have entred Troy,
But Hereafter himselfe must yould to oddes:
And many frowes, though with a little Axe,
Hewes downe and fells the hardelt-syderd Oake.
By many hands your Father was subdu'd,
But only slaughtred by the irefull Anne
Of van-renting Clifford, and the Queene;
Who crownd the gracious Duke in high delight,
Laugh'd in his face: and when with griete he wept;
The ruthfelfe Queene gaue him, to dry his Cheekes,
A Nappen, steeped in the warmeble blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Cliffordaine:
And after many scorne, many foule taunts,
They took his Head, and on the Gates of Yorke
They fete the fame, and there it doth remaine,
The faddest fpectacle that ere I view'd.

Edward. So sweet Duke of Yorke, our Prop to leane upon,
Now thou art gone, wee have no Staffe, no Stay.
Oh Clifford, boy'st thou Clifford, thou haft Staine
The flavine of Europe, for his Cheuslie,
And trecherously haft thou vanquish't him,
For hand to hand he would have vanquish't theet.
Now my Soules Palace is become a Prison
Any, would the breake from hence, that this my body

Might.
Might in the ground be closed vp intire:
For never henceforth shall I joy againe:
Neuer, oh neuer shall I see my Lord.

Rich. I cannot weep: for all my bodies moysture
Scourte feares to quench my Furnace-burning hart:
Nor can my tongue vnoad my hearts great butches,
For selfsame winde that I should speake withall,
Is kindling coales that fires all my brest,
And burns me vp with flames, that tears would quench.
To weepe, is to make left the depth of greate:
Tears then for Babes, Blowses, and Reuenge for mee.
Richard, I hear thy name, I vnde vnder thy death,
Or dye renominated by attempting it.
Ed. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee:
His Dukedome, and his Chaire with me is left.

Rich. Nay if thou be that Princeley Eagles Bird,
Shew thy descent by gazing 'gainst the Sunne:
For Chaire and Dukedome, Throne and Kingdome say,
Either that is shine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwicke, Marquess Mountague, and their Army.

Warwicke. How now faire Lords? What faire? What news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwicke, if we should recompt
Our balefull news, and at each words deliverance
Stab Poniards in our fleth, till all were told,
The words would add more anguish then the wounds:
O valiant Lord, the Duke of Yorkes is slaine.

Edw. O Warwicke, Warwicke, that Plantage
Which held thee deereely, as his Soules Redemption,
Is by the terme Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days agoe, I drown'd these news in tears,
And now to add more mesure to your woes,
I come to tell you thinges faine then before.
After the bloody Fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave Father breathed his laste gaspe,
Tydings, as swift as the Poffes could rume,
Were brought me of your Loife, and his Depart.
I then in London, keeper of the King,
Moulted my Soldiers, gathered flockes of Friends,
Marched toward S. Albans, to intercept the Queene,
Bearing the King in my belaie along;
For by my Scourge, I was submitt'd,
That fice was comming with a full intent
To daff our late Deece in Parliament,
Touching King Henrys Oath, and your Sucception:
Short tale to make, we at S. Albans met,
Our Battails joynd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldneffe of the King,
Who look'd till genty on his warlike Queene,
That ribb'd my Soldiers of their heart Spicene,
Or whether 'twas report of her successe,
Or more then common feare of Clifford Rigour,
Who thunders to his Captaines, Blood and Death,
I cannot judge: but to conclude with truth,
Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went:
Our Souldiers like the Night. Owes lazye flight,
Or like a lazye Thecher with a Flasie,
Fell gently downe, as if they fruck their Friends:
I cheare them vp with justice of our Cause,
With promise of high paye, and great Rewards:
But all in vaine, they had no heart to fight,
And we (in them) no hope to win the day,
So that we fled; the King into the Queene,
Lord George, your Brother, Norfolkie, and my Selfe,
In haile, poole haile, are come to ioyne with you:
For in the Marches here we heard you were,
Making another Head, to fight againe.

Ed. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwicke?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the Soldiers,
And for your Brother he was lately sent
From your kinde Aunt Dotscheffe of Burgundie,
With ayde of Souldiers to this needfull Warre.
Rich. Two oldsides belike, when valiant Warwick fled;
Of hauve I heard his praiies in Perfitone,
But ne're till now, his Scandal of Retire.

War. Nor now my Scandal Richard, dost thou hear:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine,
Can pluckle the Diadem from saint Henrers head,
And wring the awefull Scepter from his Fift,
Were he as famous, and as bold in Warre,
As he is famd for Mildnede, Peace, and Prayer.

Rich. I know it well Lord Warwick, blame me not,
Tis loue I bare thy glories make me speake:
But in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our Costes of Steele,
And wrap our bodies in blacke mourning Gownes,
Numb'ring our Ate-Maries with our Beads?
Or shall we on the Helmets of our Foes
Tell our Deuotion with reuengefull Ammunition?

War. Why therefore Warwick came to seek you out,
And therefore comes my Brother Fountayne:
Attend me Lords, the proud infulting Queene,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds,
Hawe wrought the easie-metling King, like Wax,
He frowre content to your Succession,
His Oath enrolled in the Parliament,
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his Oath, and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power (I think) is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the helpe of Norfolk, and my ielde,
With all the Friends that thou braue Earle of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen can it procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why Via, to London will we march,
And once againe, betride our foaming Steeds,
And once againe cry Charge upon our Fists,
But never once againe turne backe and flye.

Rich. I, now me thinks I heare great Warwick speake;
Ne'ere may he lease to see a Sun-shine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwick bid him spaie.

Ed. Lord Warwicke, on thy shoulder will I haue,
And when thou falt (as God forbid the houre)
Muff Edward fall, which perill heauen forefend,

War. No longer Earle of March, but Duke of Yorker
The next degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In evry Burrough as we passe along,
And he that throwes not vp his cap for joy,
Shall for the Faults make forfeit of his beaded:
King Edward, valiant Richard Fountayne:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renowne,
But found the Trumpets, and about Ours Taskes.

Rich. Then Clifford, were thy heart as hard as Steele,
As thou haile the wene it burnie by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to gaine thee mine.

Ed Then strike vp Drums, God and S. George for vs.

War. How now! what news now?

Mef. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me, That coming with a pious heart, He, and takes your company, for tender counsell.

War. Why then it forts, brave Warriors, let's away.

Exeunt Omnes.

Flour. Enter the King, the Queen, Clifford, Northumand Tong Prince, with Drumme and Trumpeters.

La. Welcome my Lord, to this braue town of Yorke, Yondres the head of that Arch-enemy, That sought to be incompait with your Crowne. Doth not the obieth chesse your heart, my Lord, X. I at the rockes chesse them that feare their wrench, To fee this fight, it likes my very soule: Who hold resence (dare God) yis not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infringed my Vow. Clif. My gracious Liege, this too much lenity And harmfull pitty must be layd aside: To whom do Lyons cast their gentle Lookes? Not to the Beaff, that would vlope their Den. Whose hand is that the Fortell Beare doth like? Not to the young, that in yonger before her face. Who speaks the lurking Serpents mortal fling? Not he that setts his foot upon her backe. The smalllest Wome will turne, being troden on, And Doves will pecke in safegard of their Brood, Ambitious Yorke, did leuell at thy Crowne, Thou smiling, while he knit his angry brower. He but a Duke, would have his Sonne a King, And make his issue like a loving Site. Thou being a King, blest with a goodly forne, Didst yeeld content to disinherit him: Which argued thee a mott volouing Father,Yearesfoole Creatures feed their young, And though mans face be fearfull to their eyes, Yet in protection of their tender ones, Who should bee defeate, but the young with bofe wings, Which sometime they have wizd with fearfull flight, Make warre with him that climb'd into their net, Offering their owne lives in your sons defence: For shame, my Liege, make them your Presidenc: Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy Should loose his Birth-right by his Fathers fault, And long hereafter fay into his childe, What my great Grandfather, and Grandifte gor, My careless Father fondly gave away, Ah, what a shame were this! Lookes on the Boy, And let his manly face, which promifeth Successfull Fortune fleche thy melting heart, To hold thine owne, and leave thine owne with him. Clif. Full well hath Clifford plaid the Orator, Inferring arguments of mighty force: But Clifford tell me, did it thonneuer chance, That things ill gor, had clee bad successe. And happy always was it for that Sonne, Whose Father for his hoarding went to hell; Ile leafe my Sonne my Vertuous deeds behinde, And would my Father had left me no more: For all the rest is held up as such a Race, As brings a thousand fold more care to keepe, Then in possession any jot of pleasure. Ah Cofin Yorke, would thy best Friends did know, How it doth greete me that thy head is here.

Qn. My Lord, choice vp your spirits, our forces are nye, And this most courage makes your followers faint:
You promife Kingdom to our forward Sonne, You with your sword, and dub him prettily. Edward, kneele downe.

King. Edward Plantagenet, arise a Knight, And learn this Leffon: Draw thy Sword in right.

Pret. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leaue, Ile draw it as Apparant to the Crowne, And in that quadrille, vie it to the death.

Clif. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mef. Royall Commandes, be in readynesse, For with a Band of thirty thousand men, Comes Warwick backing of the Duke of Yorke, And in the Toweres as they do march along, Proclames him King, and many flye to him, Darraine your battell, for they are at hand. Clif. I would you Hurisshee would depart the field, The Queene hath best successe when you are abient. Qn. I good my Lord, and leave vs to our Fortune, King. Why, that's my Fortune too, therefore Ile flye. North. Be it with resolution then to fight. Pret. My Royall Father, chere these Noble Lords, And hearen thole that fight in your defences Voluntheath your Sword, good Father: Cry S. George.

Edw. Now period Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace? And let thy Diadem upon my head? Or bide the mortall Fortune of the field. Qn. Go rate thy Minions, proud infulting Boy, Becomes it thee to be thus bold in termes, Before thy Soueraine, and thy lawfull King? Ed. I am his King, and he should bow his knee: I was adopted Here by his consent. Qn. See the Scene of his Cath is brake: for as I hear, You that are King, though he do wear the Crowne, Haue caus'd him by new Act of Parliament, To blot out me, and put his owne Sonne in. Clif. And reason too, Who should succede the Father, but the Sonne, Rich. Are you there Butcher? O, I cannot speake. Clif. I Croke-abe, here I stand to answer thee. Or say he, the pridefull of thy fort. Rich. Twas you that killed your Rurland, was it not? Clif. I, and old Yorke, and yet not satisfied. Rich. For Gods fake Lords giue signall to the fight. War. What say'th thou Henry? Wilt thou yield the Crowne? You speake.

Qn. Why now how long-tongue'd Warwick, dare When you and I, met at St. Albeau last, Your legges did better fextise then you hands, War. Then 'twas my turne to flye, and now its thine: Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled. War. Twas not your valor Clifford drove me thence, Nor, No, not your manhood that durft make you flye, Rich. Northumberland, I bold thee resolutely. Breake off the parliay, for scarce I can refaine The execution of my big solene heart.

Upon that Clifford, that cruel Child-killer. Clif. I flew thy Father, call'd thou him a Child?
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Rich. I like a Daffard, and a treacherous Coward, As thou didst kill our tender Brother Rutland, But ere Sunne, he made thee curse the deed.

King. Haue done with words (my Lords) and heare me speake.

Q. Deify them then, or els hold close thy lips.

Rich. I pryste gue no limits to my Tongue, I am a King, and priviledg'd to speake.

Q. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here, Cannot be cur'd by Words, therefore be still.

Rich. Then Executioner vnfitthast thy word:
By him that made us all, I am redu'd,
That Clifford Manhood, lives upon his tongue.

Ed. Say Henry, shall I have my right, or not?
A thousand men have broke their Falls to day, That ne's balle dine, vaille thou yield the Crown.

War. If thou deny, their Blood vpon thy head,
For Yorke in like part his Armour on.

Pr. Ed. If that be right, which Warwick saies is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

War. Who ever got thee, there thy Mother stands,
For well a question maturity thy Mothers tongue.

Ed. But these are not thy like Sire nor Damme, But like a foule much encrented Sycamorie,
Mask'd by the Definities to be avoided,
Asvonne Toades, or Lizardsdreadfull flings.

Rich. Iron of Naples hied with English gift,
Whole Father beares the Title of a King,
(As if a Channell should be call'd the Sea)
Shame it thou not, knowing where thou art extreague,
To let thy tongue deteck thy bate-borne heart.

Ed. A spray of flower were worth a thoufand Crowns, To make this nameless Calles know his felle.

Helen of Greece was fayer faire then thou,
Although thy Husband may be Afuseau.
And he's not Aszamenc Brother wrong'd
By that tale Woman, as this King by thee,
His Father reu'd in the heart of France,
And tam'd the King, and made the Dolphin floope:
And he had match'd according to his State,
He might have kept that glory to this day,
But when he took a beg in his bed,
And gave thy poore Sire with his Bradell day,
Even then that Sunne shin'd brew'd a showre for him,
That warft his Fathers torments fortoe of France,
And heap'd fediton on his Crowne at home:
For what hath broke this tumult but thy Pride?
Had it thou beene meeke, our Tittle full had kept,
And we in pitty of the Gentle King,
Had flip our Clame, with another Age.

Cl. But when we faw, our Sunne shone made thy Spring,
And that thy Summer bred vs an increase,
We faw the Axe to thy wuring Rooste:
And though the edge had iron ching hit our feltes,
Yet know thou, since we have begun to strike,
Wee never leave, till we have wone thee downe,
Or both thy growing with our heated bloods.

Ed. And in this recitacion, I defie thee,
Nor will ing any longer Conference
Since thou deni'st the gentle King to speake,
Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours waie,
And either Victorie, or else a Cruace.

Thy, Stay Edward.

Ed. No wrangling Woman, wee no longer day,
Thrice words will call ten thousand lives this day.

Exit women.

Alarum, Exeunt all. Enter Warwick.

War. Force-spent with Toile, as Runners with a Race,
I lay me downe a little while to breathe:
For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,
Hauve rob'd my strong kine finewes of their strength,
And spight of spight, needs must I left a while.

Enter Edward running.

Ed. Smile gentle heauen, or strike vngentle death,
For this worldfwrome, and Edward Sunne is clowded.

War. How now my Lord, what happe? what hope of good?

Enter Clarence.

Cl. Our hap is lose, our hope but faid dispair'd,
Our ranks are broke, and ruine followes vs.
What countaifle giue you? whether thall we flye?

Ed. Booleste is flight, they follow vs with Wings,
And weake we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwick, why haste withdrawn thy felle?
Thy Brothers blood the thirty earth hath drunk,
Breach'd with the Steely point of Chifforde Louance;
And in the very pangs of death, he cryde,
Like a distaff Clanger heed from farre,
Warwicke, reuenge; Brother, reuenge my death;
So vnderneath the belly of their Steeds,
That flain'd their Fedockes in his smocking blood,
The Noble Gentleman pase vp the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood;
He kill my Herif, because I will not flye :
Why if we like fortes hearted women heere,
Willing our loyfes, whiles the Foe doth Rage,
And looke upon, as if the Tragedie
Were plaide in lift, by counterreitng Actors,
Heree on my knee, I vow to God above,
He never pawne against, never (and till,
Till either death hath clos'd the eyes of mine,
Or Fortune guen me mesure of Reuenge.

Ed. Oli Warwickke, I do bend my knee with thine,
And in this vow do chaine my foule to thine:
And ere my knee rise from the Earths cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou fater vp, and plucker downe of Kings:
Befeeching thee (if with thy will it stands)
That to my Foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy broken gates of heaven may ope,
And giue sweat passage to my finall soule.
Now Lords, take leave till we meete againe,
Where ere it be, in heaven, or in earth.

Rich. Brother,
Give me thy hand, and gentle Warwicke,
Let me imbrace thee in my weary ames:
I that did never wepe, now melt with wo,
That Winter should cut off our Spring-time so.

War. Away, away:
Once more sweet Lords fauell.

Cl. Yet let vs altogether to our Troopes,
And giue them leave so flye, that will not flye:
And call them Pillars that will stand to vs:
And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As Victors were at the Olympian Games.
This may plant courage in their quailing breaths,
For yet is hope of Life and Victory.
The cold thineous drinke out of his Leather Bottle,
His wounded sleepe, under a freth trees shade,
All which secure, and sweetely he enjoyes,
Is faire beyond a Princes Delicates:
His Viands sparkling in a Golden Cup,
His bodie couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Misruff, and Treason waites on him.

Alarum. Enter a Saune that hath kill'd his Father, as one doore: and a Father that hath kill'd his Sonne at anotther doore.

Sen. ills blows the winde that profits no body,
This man whom hand to hand I flewe in right,
May be poufled with some flore of Crownes,
And I that (happe) take them from him now,
May yet (ere night) yeeld both my Life and them
To some man elle, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? Oh God! It is my Fathers face,
Whom in this Confi, (yowares) have kill'd:
Oh heavy times! begeting such Events.
From London, by the King was I pret forth,
My Father being the Earle of Warwickes man,
 Came on the part of York, prettly in the Mafter:
And I, who at his hands receiued my Life,
Have by my hands, of Life bereaued him.
Pardon me God, I knew not what I did:
And pardon Father, for I knew not thee.
My Teares shall wipe away towe bloody marks:
And no more words, till they have flow'd their fill.
King. O pittieous speach! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons Warre and bareails for their Denne,
Poore harmlesse Lambs abide their enmy.
Weepe wretched man: Ie ayde thee Teare for Teare,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Cinni Warre,
Be blinde with teares, and break o're-charg'd with grieue.
Enter Father seeing of his Saune.

Fad. Thou shalt to stoutly hast refildest me,
Ghee me thy Gold, if thou haft any Gold,
For I haue bought it with an hundred blows.
But let me fee: Is this our Foe-mans face?
Ah no, no, no, it is none onely Sonne.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw vp thine eye: see, see, what flowres arife,
Blowne with the winde Tempeft of my heart,
Upon thy woundes, that knifes mine Eye, and Heart.
O pitie God, this miserable Age!
What Straunge how felt how Butcherly?
Erroneous, mutuoun, and vmanatural,
This deadly quarrell daily doth begin.
O Boy! thy Father gane thee life to soone,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

King. Wo aboue wo!greefe, more the common greefe
O that my death would stay thee Rita fullf death deels:
O pity, pitty, gentle heauen pity:
The Red Rose and the White are on his face,
The tastful Colours of his flagging Hauits:
The one, his purple Blood right well resembles,
The other his pale Cheeks (me thinke) preteloth:
Wither one Rose, and let the other flourish:
If you content, a thousand lives mutt watter.

Sen. How will my Mother,for a Fathers death
Take en with me, and she be satisfi'd?

Fad. How will my Wife, for flainge of my Sonne,
Such feaes of Teares, and me be satisfi'd?

King. How will the Country, for these woful chances,
Milt-think e.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

Mut-thinke the King, and not be latisfied?

Som. Was ever sonne, so riev'd a Father's death?

Sad. Was ever Father to father so sonne?

Hau. Was ever sonne to father so sough to Subiects woe?

Much is your sorrow, Mine, ten times so much.

Sad. He beare thee hence, where I may weep my fill.

Sad. Thee or mine of mine shall be thy winding sheete.

My heart. (twee Boy) shall be thy Sepulcher.

For from my heart, thine Image ne'rr shall go.

My fighting brefl, shall be thy Funeral bell.

And so obillicitous will thy father be,

Men for the lofe of thee, bearing no more,

As Priam was for all his Valiant Sonnes,

He beare thee hence, and let them fight that will,

For I have murthered where I should not kill.

Men. Sad. I Heart-felt, much out gone with Care;

Hence fits a King, more wofull then you are.

A loud alarum. Enter Clifford Wounded.

Cliff. Hence burns my Candle out; I see it dies,

Which whiles it lafted, gave King Henry light.

O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,

Most of my Bodies past with my Soul: My Loie and Fase, glev'd many Friends to theer,

And now I fall. Thy sough Commissures melts,

Impairing Henry, strengthenings misprood Yorke; And whether fley the Gasts, but to the Sunne?

And who fines now, but Henries Enemies?

O Phoebe! had it thou never gien comfort,

That Phocion should check thy fieri Steeds,

Thy burning Care never had forth the mind.

And Henry, had it thou saw'd Kings should do,

Or as thy Father, and his Father did,

Givings no ground into the hoyle of Yorke,

They never then had sprung like Sommer; Flyes:

I, and ten thousand in this luckless Realme,

Had left no mourning Widowes for our death,

And thou this day, hast for thy Chaire in place,

For what doth cherish Weedes, but gentle ayre?

And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lomtly?

Bootlese are Plains, and Cearlese are my Wounds;

No way to flye, nor strength to hold out flight:

The Foe is merciless, and will not pitty;

For at their bands I have destru'd no pitty.

The ayre hath got into my deadly Wounds,

And much effate of blood, doth make me faint:

Come Tarlye, and Richard, Warniake, and the rem,

I stab'd your Fathers bullets; Split my brefl.

Ed. Now breath we Lords, good for, one bids us paufe,

And smooth the frownes of War, with peacefull looks.

Some Troopers purifie the bloody-minded Queen,

That led one Henry, thought we were a King,

As doth a Saile, fill'd with a fretting Guff,

Command an Argoffe to flee the Wares,

But shynke you(Lords)that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:

(For though before his face I speake the words)

Your Brother Richard mark's him for the Grane,

And wherfore he is, he is forryly dead.

Cliff. Whole foule is that which takes his heavy lease:

A deadly gone, like life and deaths departing.

See who it is.

Ed. And now the Battailie ended,

If Friend or Foe, let him be gently vied.

Rich. Reuoke that dounes of mercy, for this Clifford,

Who not contented that he lopp'd the Branch,

In hewing Rutland, when his leaves poure forth,

But let his murthering knifes into the Root;

From whence that tender spray did (weeke spring,

I meanes our Princeley Father, Duke of Yorke.

War. From off the gates of Yorke, fetch down ytself,

Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed thare;

In stead whereof, let thisupply the roomse,

Mesure for mesure, must be anwered.

Ed. Bring forth that fatten Schrecheowle to our house,

That nothing fang but death, to vs and ours:

Now death shall (lop his diffault threatening found,

And his ill-boading tongue, no more fpeakice:

War. I thinke is understanding it beffes:

Speak Clifford doft thou know who speaks to thee?

Darke cloudy death ore-fades his beams of life,

And he not sees, nor hearers vs, what we say.

Rich. O would he did, and so (perhaps he doth,

'Tis but his policy to counterfeite,

Because he would avoid such bitter taints:

What in the time of death he gave our Father.

Cla. If so thou thinkst,

Vex him with eager Words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtaine no grace.

Ed. Clifford, repent in boolesle penitence.

War. Clifford, deuise excuses for thy faults.

Cla. While we deuise fell Tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst't lose Yorke, and I am fento Yorke,

Ed. Thou pitied it Rutland, I will put thee.

Cla. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mock thee Clifford,

Swears as thou wostn't work.

Rich. What not an Oath! Nay then the would go's hard

When Clifford cannot spare his Friends an oath:

I know by that he's dead, and by my Soule,

If this right hand would buy two houres life,

That (in all deight) might rayle at him,

This hand should chop it off:

With the influing Blood

Stifle the Villaine, whose unflanched thift

Yorke, and young Rutland could not satifie

War. 1, but he's dead. Of with the Traitors head,

And reate it in the place your Fathers hands,

And now to London with Triumpht march.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

The Tyger will be milde, whiles the doth moure,
And Aire will be taint with remorse.
To hear and see her plaints, her Benifh Teares,
I, but she s e I come to begge, Warwicke to glue:
Shew on his left side, courting syde for Henry;
He on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
Shew Weepes, and fayes, her Henry is depos'd;
He Smiles, and fayes, his Edward is intufl'd;
That fierce (poore Wrench) for greene can speake no more:
Whiles Warwicke teizs his Title, smoothes the Wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion winnes the King from her,
With promife of his Sister, and what elle;
To strengthen and support King Edwards place.
O Margaret, thus'll we be, and thou (poore foule)
Art then forlorn, as thou wast forlorn.

Hun. Say, what art thou talk'tl of Kings & Queens?
King. More then I feene, and leffe then I was born to:
A man at leaft, for leffe I should not be:
And men may talk of Kings, and why not I?

Hun. I, but thou talk'tl, as if thou wert a King.
King. Why fo I am (in Minde) and that's enough.
Hun. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crowne?
King. My Crowne is in my heart, not on my head:
Not clo'd with Diamonds, and Indian warne;
Not to be seen; my Crowne, is call'd Content,
A Crowne it is, that fildome Kings enjoy.

Hun. Well, if you be a King crown'd with Content,
Your Crowne Content, and you, must be contented
To go along with vs. (for as we thinke)
You are the King; Edward hath depos'd
And we his Subjects, frowne in all Allegeance,
Will apprett you, as his Enemy.

King. But did you never swear, and break an Oath,
Hun. No, never such an Oath, nor will not now.
King. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?
Hun. Here, in this Country, where we now remaine.
King. I was appointed King at nine months old,
My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings:
And you were frowne true Subjects unto me:
And tell me then, have you not broke your Oathes?
Sin. No, for we were Subjects, but while you were King.
King. Why? Am I dead? Do I not breath a Man?
A simple men, you know not what you fwear.
Lookc, as I blow this Feather from my Face,
And as the Ayre blowes it to me againe,
Obeying with my winde, when I do blow,
And veilding to another, when it blowes,
Commanded always by the greater gulf:
Such is the lightnesse of you, common men.
But do not break your Oathes, for of that fame,
My inkle interest shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded,
And by you kings, command, and I obey.

Sucke. We are true Subjects to the king,
King Edward.

Sin. So would you be againe to Henrie,
If he were creat'd at King Edward is.

Sucke. We charge you in Gods name & the Kings,
To go with vs unto the Officers.

Kings. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obeyed,
And what God will, that let your King performe,
And what he will, I humbly yeld unto.

Enter K. Edward, Glofle, Clarence, Lady Gray,
King. Brother of Glofle, at S. Albans field.
This Ladies Husband, Sir Richard Grey was slain,
Her Land then seiz'd on by the Conqueror.
Her suit is now, to repoffe the Chiefs Lands,
Which wee in lufice cannot well deny,
Because in Quarrel of the House of York,
The worthy Gentleman did lose his Life.

Rich. Your Highnesse shall doe well to graunt her suit:
It were dishonor to deny it her.
King. It were no leffe, but yet I like a pause,
Rich. Yes, it is so:
I see the Lady hath a thing to graunt,
Before the King will graunt her humble suit.

Clarence. Hee knowes the Game, how true hee keepes the winde?
King. Widow, we will consider of your suit,
And come some other time to know our minde.

Wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brooke delay:
May it please your Highnesse to relive me now,
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.

Rich. 1 Widow? then Ile warrant you all your Lands,
And if what pleases him, shall satisfy you:
Fight euer, or good faith you're catch a Blow.
Clarence. I feare not, neither the cheene to fail.
Rich. God forbid that, for hee'take vantages.
King. How many Children haft thou, Widow? I tell thee,
Clarence. I think he meanes to begge a Child of her.
Rich. Nay then whip me: hee'l rather give her two.
Wid. Three, my most gracious Lord.
Rich. You shall haue toure, if you be'rul'd by him.
King. 'Twere pittie they should lose their Fathers Lands.

Rich. Be pittfull, dread Lord, and graunt it then.
King. Lords graue vs leave, Ile trie this Widoow with.
Rich. I good leave haue you, for you will hauue leave,
Till Youth take leave, and leave you to the Crutch.

King. Now tell me, Madame, doe you loue your Children?
Wid. I, as dearly as I loue my selfe.
King. And would you not doe much to doe them good?

Wid. To doe them good, I would suffyayne some harme.
King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to doe them good.
Wid. Therefore I came vnto your Maister.
King. Ile tell you how those Lands are to be got.

Wid. So shall you bind me to your Highnesse service,
King. What service wilt thou doe me, if I giue thee?
Wid. What you command, that refts in me to doe.
King. But you will take exceptions to my Boone,
Wid. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot doe it.
King. I but thou canst doe what I meant to aske.

Wid. Why then I will doe what your Grace commands.
Rich. Hee plyes her hard, and much Raine weares the Marble.
Clar. As red as fire? say then, her Wax must melt.

Wid. Why ploupes my Lord? I shall not heare my Taske?

King. An eafe Taske, its but to looue a King.
Wid. That's done perform'd, because I am a Subiect.

Rich. Then, thy Husbands Lands I freely giue thee.

Rich. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Rich. The March is made, these scales it with a Carfe,
King. But hey thee, 'tis the fruits of loue I meant.

Wid. The fruits of Loue, I meane, my loving Liege.
King. I, but I fear me in another fence.

What Loue, thinke'lt thou, I see so much to get?
Wid. My loue doth live, my humble thanks, my prayers,
That loue which Vertue begges, and Vertue grants.

King. No, by my troth, I did no: meane such loue.
Wid. Why then you meane not, as I thought you did,
King. But now you partly may perceive my minde,

Wid. My minde will never graunt what I perceive.
Your Highnesse synes at, if I syme aight.

King. To tell thee plainly, I syme to lyce with thee.
Wid. To tell you plainly, I had rather lyce in Prison.

King. Why then thou shalt not have thy Husbands Lands.

Wid. Why then mine Honofile shall be my Dower,
For by that laske, I will not purchase them.

King. Therin thou wrongst thy Children mightily,
Wid. Herein your Highnesse wrongs both them & me;
But mightie Lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the fadness of my fure.
Pleaze you difniffle me, eyther wish for no.

King. If thou wilt fay to i my request;
No, if thou do'ft fay No to my demand,

Rich. Then No, my Lord, my fuit is at an end.

Rich. The Widow likes him nor, shee knits her Browses.

Clarence. Hee is the bluntest Woor in Chriftendome.

King. Her Lookes doth argue her repeite with Modefly,
Her Words doth shew her Wit incomparable,
All her perfections challenge Soueraigne,
One way, or other, fie is for a King,
And thefe shall be my Loue, or elfe my Queene.
Say, that King Edward take thee for his Queene?

Wid. 'Tis better faid then done, my gracious Lord:
I am a subiect fit to beas withall,
But farse vafht to be a Soueraigne.

King. Sweet Widow, by my State I swear to thee,
I speake no more then what my Soule intends,
And that is, to enjoy thee for my Loue.

Wid. And that is more then I will yeld vnto:
I know, I am too meane to bee your Queene,
And yet too good to be your Concubine.

King. You cauull, Widow, I did meane my Queene,

Wid. 'Twill grieve your Grace, my Sonses should call you Father.

King. No more then when my Daughters
Call the mother.
Thou art a Widow, and thou haft some Children,
And by Gods Mother, I being but a Bachelor,
Have other-some, Why, 'tis a happy thing,
To be the Father vnto many Sonses:
Answere no more, for thou shalt be my Queene.

Rich. The Ghostly Father now hath done his Shift.

Clarence. When hee was made a Shriuer, itwas for thift.

King. Brothers, you mufe what Chat wee two have had.

Rich. The Widow likes it not, for shee looks very sad.

King. You'd think it strange, if I should marrie her.

Clarence. To who, my Lord?

Rich. Why Clarence, so my felle.

Rich, That.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Rich. That would be tenne days wonder at the least,
Clarence. That's a day longer than a Wonder lasts.
Rich. By much the Wonder is in extremest.
King. Well, jealt on Brothers; I can tell you both,
Her suit is granted for her Husband's Land.

Enter a Noble man.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Henry your Foe is taken,
And brought your Prisoner to your Palacie Gate.
King. See that he be convey'd into the Tower:
And give wee Brothers to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.
Widow give you along: Lords vse her honourable.

Mater Richard.

Rich. 1. Edward will vse Women honourably;
Would he were availed, Marrow, Bone, and all,
That from his Loynes no hopefull Branch may spring,
To cross me from the Golden time I looke for:
And yet, betweene my Soules desire, and use,
The fullfult Edward's Title bury'd,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his Sonne young Edward,
And all the vnlook'd d-for Lisue of their Bodies,
To take their Roomes, are I can place my selfe;
A cold premeditacion for my purpose.
Why then I doe but dreame on Sourcagntie,
Like one that stands upon a Promontorie,
And lyes a faire-off Short, where hee would tread,
Withing his feet were equal with his eye,
And chases the Sea, that funder him from thence,
Saying he'se lade it dry, to haue his way:
So dee I with the Crowne, bringing so faire off,
And sol i finde the meanes that keeps me from it,
And so (I say) Ile cut the Cauks off,
Flattering me with impossibilitie:
My Eyes too quicke, my Heart too-swenees too much,
Volett: my Hand and Strenghes could equal them.
Well, say there is no Kingdome then for Richard:
What other Plesure can the World afford?
He make my Heauen in a Ladies Lapp,
And deckt my Body in gay ornamentes,
And with my Loores Ladies with my Words and Looks,
Oh miserable Thought! and more wilckile.
Then to accomplish Showered Golden Crownes;
Why Louise forlorn I was in my Mothers Wombe:
And so I should not deale in her soft Laves,
Shee did corrupt fraile Nature with some Brites,
To Girinkle mine Arme vp like a witherd shrub,
To make an eminious Mountain on my Back,
Where fits Deformitie to looke my Body;
To make my Legges of an unequall fize,
To dis-proportion me in every part:
Like to a Chaos, or an vn-luck'd Bearer-wheele,
That caryes no impression like the Dane.
And if I am then a man to be beloud?
Oh monstrous fault, to haue borbur such a thought.
Then since this Earth affords no joy to me,
But to command to check, to order, bear fault,
As are of better: Perfon then my selfe,
Ie make my Heauen, to dreame upon the Crowne,
And whiles I live, account this world but Hell,
Vntil my miss-drop'd Trunke, that bears this Head,
Be round impaled with a glorious Crowne,
For many Limes stand betweene me and home.

And I, like one lost in a Thornie Wood,
That rents the Thorne, and is rent with the Thorne,
Seeking a way, and falling from the way,
Not knowing how to finde the open Ayre,
But toiling desperatly to finde it out,
Tomentum my selfe, to catch the English Crowne:
And from that torment I will free my selfe,
Oh how my way out with a bloody Axe,
Why I can smile, and mutter whiles I smile,
And ery Content, to that which griefes my Heart,
And weere my Cheekes with artificiall Tears,
And frame my Face to all occasions.
Hee drownes more Saylers then the Mermaid shall,
Hee flye more gazers then the BafHikte,
He play the Orator as well as Nero,
Decieme more flyly then Fisler could,
And like a Syren, take another Troy.
I can adde Colours to the Carmelion,
Change shapes with Prussian, for advantages,
And set the murderous Malmont to School;
Can I doe this, and cannot get a Crowne?
Tut, were it farther off, Ie plucke it downe.

Flourish.

Later Lewis the French King, his Sister Bona, his Admirall, called Bonner; Prince Edward,
Queen Margaret, and the Exile of Oxford.
Laein set, and righst vp agayne.

Lewis. Faire Queene of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit down with you: it ill bese thys State,
And Birth, that thou shouldt if stand, while Lewis doth sit.

Marg. No, mightie King of France now Margaret,
Mutterth she her stye, and leaue me a while to feare,
Where Kings command, I was (I must confesse)
Great Alibons Queene,inf endings Golden dayes:
But now mischance hath trode my Title downe,
And with dis-honor layd me on the ground,
Where I must take like Seat into my fortune,
And to my humble Seat conforming my selfe.

Lewis. Why say, faire Queene, whence springs this deppe dispaire?
Marg. From such a causse, as fills mine eyes with tears;
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.
Lewis. What erie it be, be thou still like thy selfe,
And sitt thee by our side.

Seate her by him;
Yeeld not thy necke to Fortunes yoke,
But let thy dauntlesse mind still ride in triumph,
Over all mischance.
Be plaine, Queene Margaret, and tell thy griefes,
It shall be said, if France can yeld relief.

Marg. Tho the spurious words
Reuise my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue ty'd bowles leave to speake.
Now therefore be it knowne to Noble Lewis,
That Henry, doth posseffion of my Lore;
Is of a King, become a banish't man,
And forc'd to live in Scotland and Foreinne;
While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of York,
Vnflirsh the Regall Title, and the Seet
Of Englands true anointed Lawfull King.
This is the causse that I, poor Margaret,
With this my Sonne, Prince Edward, Henries Heire,
Am come to cruse thy self and lawfull yeade:
And if thou failest vs, all our hope is done,
Scotland hath will to helpe, but cannot helpe.

Our
Our People, and our Peeres, are both mist-fed, Our Treasure feiz'd, our Soultours put to flight, And (as thou sees) our sufles in haute plight.

Lewis, Renowned Queen.
With patience calme the Storme, While we both think of a means to brake it off.

Marg. The more wee fly, the stronger grows our Fee.

Lewis. The more I fly, the more Ile succour thee.

Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow. And fee where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwicke.

Lewis. What's hee approacheth boldly to our presence?

Lewis. Welcome brave Warwicke, what brings thee to France?

For this is hee that bores both Wydes and Tyde.

Warw. From worthy Edward, King of Albion, My Lord and Soveraigne, and thy vowed Friend, I come (in Kindness, and vouchsaft Loue,) First, to doe greetings to thy Royall Person, And then to create a League of Amity: And lastly, to confirme that Amity With Nuptiall Knosi, thou vouchsafe to gran't That vertuous Lady Bossa, thy faire Sifter, To Englands King, in lawfull Marriage.

Marg. If that goe forward, Henry's hope is done.

Warw. And gracious Madame, Speaking to Bossa, In our Kings behalfe, I am comanded, with your leaue and favor, Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my Tongue To tell the passion of my Soveraigne Heart: Where fame, late entering at his headfull Eares, Hath plac'd thy Beauties Image, and thy Vertece.

Marg. King Lewis, and Lady Bossa, hear me speake, Before you and your Warwicke. His demand Springs not from Edwards well-meaned honest Loue, But from Deceits, bred by Neceffity. For how can Tyrants safely governe home, Villifies abroad, they purchase great allayance? To prove him Tyrant, this reason may suffice, That Henry loath'd will: but were hee dead, Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henrers Sonne.

Look therefore Lewis, that by this League and Marriage Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-honor: For though Vipers sway the rule a while, Yet Heads are dark and Time approdeth Wrong.

Warn. Injurious Margaretts.

Edw. And why not Queen?

Warw. Because thy Father Henry did usurp, And thou no more art Prince, then thee is Queen, Osy. Then Warwicke disaffils great Iohn of Gaunt, Which did subdue the greatest part of Spaine; And after Iohn of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth, Who'de whole World was a Mirror to the wiflet; And after that wife Prince, Henry the Fifth: Who by his Prowesse conquer'd all France: From there, our Henry lineally descends.

Warn. Oxford, how hap'st it in this smooth discourse, You told not, how Henry the Sixth hath loft All that, which Henry the Fifth had gotten:

Me thinkes these Peeres of France should smile at that, But for the reft, you tell a Pedigree Of threecore and two yeeres, a silly time To make preadigmation for a Kingdome worth, Osy: Why Warwicke, canst thou speake against thy Liege, Whom thou obey'dst (tho' thrice and fix yeeres, And not bewray this Treatise with a Bluff?

Warn. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right, Now buckler Falsehood with a Pedigree? For shame Leeue Henry, and call Edward King.

Osy. Call him my King, by whose inuious doome My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere Was done to death: and more then so, my Father, Even in the downe-fall of his mellow'd yeeres, When Nature brought him to the doore of Death? No Warwicke, no, while Life upholds this Arme, This Arme upholds the House of Lancaster, Warn. And I the House of York.

Lewis, Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford, Vouchsafe at our request, to stand aside, While I yeare further conference with Warwicke. They stand aside.

Lewis. Heau'n, graunt, that Warwicke words be with him not.

Lewis. Now Warwicke, tell me eu'n upon thy conscience Is Edward your true King? Or I were both To linke with him, that were not lawfull chosen, Warn. Therecon I pawne my Ct. it, and mine Honor.

Lewis. But is hee gracious in the Peoples eye?

Warn. The more, that Henry was unfortunate, Lewis. Then further: all diflembling set aside, Tell me for truth, the measure of his Loue Into our Sifier Bossa.

War. Such it beemes, As may beforme a Monarch like himselfe. My felle haue oftentimes heard him say, and swears, That this his Loue was an external Plant, Whereof the Root was fixt in Vertues ground, The Leaues and Fruit maintain'd with Beauties Sunne, Exempt from Envy, but not from Difdaine, Villiffe the Lady Bossa quit his pane.

Lewis. Now Sire, I wish this word to be resolute. Bossa. Your graunt, or your denyal, shall be mine, Yet I confesse, that often ere this day, Speaks to War. When I have heard your Kings defert recounted, Mine care hath tempered judgment to desire.

Lewis. Then Warwicke, thus:

Our Sifier shall be Edwards.

And now forthwith shall Articles be drawne, Touching the Ioynture that your King must make, Which with her Dowrie shall be counter-poys'd: Draw neere, Queen Margaret, and be a witnesse, That Bossa shall be Wife to the English King:

Pr. Edw. To Edward, but not to the English King.

Marg. Deceitfull Warwicke, it was thy deuice, By this alliaence to make void my fuit: Before thy comming, Lewis was Henrers friend.

Lewis. And fliil is friend to him, and Margaret, But if your Title to the Crowne be weake, As may appear by Edwards good successe; Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd From giving ayde, which late I promis'd.

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand, That your Efface requires, and mine can yield.

War. Henry now liues in Scotland, at his eale;
Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.
And as for you your selfe (our quondam Queene)
You have a Father able to maintain you,
And better 't were, you troubled him, then France.

_The_ Peace impudent, and shameless Warwicke,
Proud fetter vp, and puller downe of Kings,
I will not hence, till with my Talke and Tears
(Both full of Truthe) I make King Louis behold
Thy false connivance, and thy Lords false love,
Put blemishing a horne Within.

For both of you are Birds of selfe-same Feather.

_Loue._ Warwicke, this is some poete to vs, or thee.
Enter the Poete.

_Poete._ My Lord Ambassador,
Thefe Letters are for you.

_Speakers to Warwicke._
Sent from your Brother Marquess Montague.
Thefe from our King, into your Maiefty.
To _Loue._
And Madam, thefe for thee.
From whom, I know not.

_They all read their Letters._

_Oxf._ I like it well, that our faire Queene and Misrifs
Smiles at her newes, while Warwicke frownes at his,
Prince Ed. Nay marke how _Loue_ Rampes as he were Netted, I hope all for the best.

_Loue._ Warwicke, what are thy Newes?
And yours, faire Queene?

_Mar._ Mine such as fill my heart with vnhop'd joyes yet.
_War._ Mine full of sorrow, and hearts discontent.

_Loue._ What has your King married the Lady Grey?
And now to sooth your Forgeries, and his,
Sends me a Paper to periwade me Patience?
Is this the Alliance that he feakes with France?
Dare he preume to _forme_ vs in this manner?

_Mar._ I told your Maiefty as much before:
This proud Edward, Louis, and Warwicke honestly.
_War._ King Louis, I heere protest in fight of heauen,
And by the hope I haue of heavenly bllife,
That I am cleere from this mislene of _Edward_;
No more my King, for he diuhiors me,
But mott himselfe, if he could fee his flame.
Did I forget, that by the Houfe of Yorke
My Father came vngrily to his death?
Did I let paife th'abufe done to my Nece?
Did I impale him with the Regal Crown?
Did I put Henry from his Nation Right?
And am I guarnd at the left, with Shame?
Shame on himselfe, for my Defers is Honor.
And to repaire my Honor left for him,
I heere renounce him, and returne to _Henry_.
My Noble Queene, let former grudges paife,
And henceforth, I am thy true Seruant,
I will revenge his wrong to _Lady Bona_,
And replaunt Henry in his former flare.

_War._ Warwicke,
These words haue turn'd my Harte, to Loue,
And I forgue, and quite forget old faults,
And joy that thou becom'st King Henryes Friend.
_War._ So much his Friend, I, his unfained Friend,
That if King Louis vouchsafe to furnish vs
With some few Bands of choen Solidours,
I endeavoure to Land them on our Coaft,
And force the Tyrant from his fear by Warre:
Tis not his new-made Bride shall succour him,
And as for _Clarence_, as my Letters tell me,
He's very likely now to fall from him;
For matching more for whatten Luft, then Honor,

Or then for strength and safety of our Country.

_Bona._ Deere Brother, how shall _Bona_ be reveng'd,
But by thy helpe to this disrrted Queene?

_Mar._ Renowne Prince, how shall _Poore_ _Henry_ live,
Vnlefe thou refuse him from foule dispaire?

_Bona._ My quarrel, and this English Queene, are one.
_War._ And mine faire _Lady Bona_, joyne with yours.

_Low._ And mine, with hers, and thine, and _Margaret_.
Therefore, as I, I firmly am resolv'd
You shall haue as ye.

_Loue._ Let me give humble thankes for all, at once.
_Loue._ Then Englands Meffengers returne in Poete,
And tell male Edward, thy suppos'd King,
That _Loue_ of France, is sending our Maskers
To receuil it with him, and his new Bride.
They seft what a paff, goe feare thy King withall.
_Bona._ Tell him, in hope he'll proue a widower shortly,
I seare the Willow Garland for his sake.

_Mar._ Tell him, my mourning weeps are late deafe,
And I am ready to put Armor on.
_War._ Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore lle vn-Crowne him, cr't be long.
There's thy reward, be gone.

_Exit Pofte._

_Low._ But Warwicke,
Thou and Oxford, with fivte thouand men
Shall croffe the Seas, and bid false Edward battaile:
And as occasion ferves, this Noble _Queene_
And Prince, shall follow with a frefh Supply,
Yet ere thou go, but anwer me one doubt:
What Pledge have we of thy firme Loyalty?
_War._ This shall affure my constant Loyalty,
That if our Queene, and this young Prince agree,
ルーorne mine eldeft daughter, and my loy,
To him forthwith, in holy Wedlock bands.
_Mar._ Yes, I agree, and thank you for your Motion,
Some _Edward_, he is Exire and Vetricus,
Therefore delay not, gyue thy hand to Warwicke,
And with thy hand, thy faith irreuocable,
That once Warwicke daughter shall be thine.

_Exit Ed. III._

_Exit Ed. IV._

_Low._ Yes, I accepther, for shee does deferve it,
And heere to pledge my Vow, I gyue my hand.

_He gives his hand_ to _War._

_Low._ Why stay we nower? These foldiers shalbe legned,
And thou Lord _Bunbon_, our high Admiraile
Shall waft them over with our Royall Fleece.
I long till _Edward_ fall by _Warres_ mifchance,
For mocking Marriage with a Dame of France.

_Exit. Mar. and Warwicke._

_War._ I came from _Edward_ as Ambassador,
But I returne his Iworne and mortall foe:
Master of Marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadfull _Warre_ shall anwser his demand.
Had he none eile to make a faire but me?
Then none but I, shall tune his left to _Sorrow_.
I was the Cheefe that rais'd him to the Crowne,
And he Cheefe to bring him downe againe:
Not that I pitty _Henryes_ wilie,
But feake _Reuenge_ on _Edward_ mockery.

_Exit._

_Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerfet, and Montague._

_Rich._ Now tell me Brother _Clarence_, what thinke you
Of his new Marriage with the _Lady Gay_?
Hath not our Brother made a worthy choice?

_Cla._ Alas, you know, this arrie from hence to France,

How.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixt.

How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Sott. My Lords, forbear this tale here comes the King.

Flourish.

Enter King Edward, Lady Grey, Penbrooke, Stafford, Hasting: some stand on one side, and some on the other.

Rich. And his well-chosen Bride.
Clarence. I minde to tell him plainly what I thinke.

King. Now Brother of Clarence,
How like you our Choice,
That you hang penose, as halfe malecontent?
F ortune, as well as Lewis of France,
Or the Earle of Warwick,
Which are so weake of courage, and in judgement,
That they le take no offence at our abufe,
King. Suppose they take offence without a cause:
They are but Lewis and Warwick, I am Edward,
Your King and Warwick, and must have my will.
Rich. And shall have your will, because our King:
Yet I shall have my谟re, and some growth well.
King. Yea, Brother Richard, are ye offended too?

God forbid, that I should with them tester'd,
Whom God hath ioyn'd together:
I, and were pitable, to fonder them,
That youke to well togetherto.

King. Setting your skorne, and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reason, why the Lady Grey
Should not become my Wife, and Englandes Queene?
And you too, Somerset, and Moun感官,
Speake freely what you thinke.

Clarence. Then this is mine opinion:
That King Lewis becomes your Enemy,
And marrie the Lady Grey.

Of the Leafe Bome.

Rich. And Warwick, doing what you gaine in charge,
Is now dis-honored by this newe Marriage.

King. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By such inuention as I can devise?
Moun感官. Yet, to have ioyn'd with France in such alliance,
Would more have strength to cede our Commonwealth.
Gauft foraine force come, or any home-bred Marriage
Hait. Why, knowes not Moun感官, that oftens,
England is safest, if true within it selfe?
Moun感官. But the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.
Hait. 'Tis better vning France, then truffing France:
Let vs be back'd with God, and with the Seas,
Which he hath giuen for fence impossible,
And with these helps, onely defend our flaves:
In them, and in our fables, our faftye lyes.
Clar. For this one speech, Lord Hastings well deservs
To have the Heire of the Lord Hungerford.

King. I, what of that? it was my will, and grant,
And for this once, my Will shall stand for Law.

Rich. And yet me thinke, your Grace hath not done well,
To dishonour the Heire, and interest of Lord Scalts
Into the Brother of your loving Bride:
Shee better would have fittted me, or Clarence:
But in your Bredie you burie Brotherhood,
Clar. Or else you would not have bellow'd the Heire
Of the Lord Scalts? on your new Wifes Somme,
And leave your Brothers to gope speed elsewhere.

King. This is no brieve, but for a Wife
That those are malecontent, it will provoke thee.

Clarence. In chusing for thy felle,
You show'd your judgment:
Which being fallaw, you shall give me leave
To play the Broker in mine owne behalfe:
And to that end, I shortly minde to leave you.

King. Leave me, or cause, Edward will be King,
And not be tryed into his Brothers will.

Lady Grey. My Lords, before it please'd his Maiestie
To rafle my State to Title of a Queene,
Doe me but right, and you must all confesse,
That I was not ignoble of Deceit,
And meaner then my felle issue had like fortune.
But as this Title honours me and mine,
So you doth divers things, I am no pleasing,
Doth cloud my joyes with danger, and with borowe.

King. My Loeue, forbeare to favme open their frownnes
What danger, or what forrow can befal thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true Soueraigne, whom they mutt obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and lone thee too,
While they leke for hatred at my hands:
Which if they desire not, let it be as well:
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Rich. I heare, yet say not much, but thinke the more.

King. Now Messengers, what Letters, or what Newes
From France?

Paft. My Soueraigne Liege, no Letters, or few words,
But such, as I (without your speciall pardon)
Dare not relate.

King. Goe too, wee pardon thee:
Therefore, in briefe, tell me their words,
As seere as thou canst give them.
What answers he made him, to the Letters?

Paft. At my depart, the were his very words:

Goe tell falles Edward, the suppos'd King,
That Lewis of France is sending out Maskers,
To recall it with him, and his newe Bride.

King. Is Lewis so braves in which he thinkes me Henry?
But what said Lady Bona to my Marriage?

Paft. There were her words, writ't with mild disdaine:
Tell him, in hope he may prove a Widower shortly,
I heare the Willow Garland for his fake.

King. I blame not her; she could say little leffe:
She had the wrong. But what said Hounse Queene?
For I heare, that she was there in place.

Paft. Tell him (quoth he)
My mourning Weekes are done,
And I am ready to put Armour on.

King. Believe the minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Paft. He, more incendi against your Maiestie,
Then all the rest, discharge'd me with these words:
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore Ie uncrown him, eat'nt be long.

King. I haue sent the Tracer, and most of proud words?
Well, I will arme me, being thus fore-warn'd:
They shall have Warres, and pay for their presupmption:
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Paft. I, gracious Soueraigne,
They are so link'd in friendship,
That yong Prince Edward manyes Warwick Daughter.

Clarence. Believe the elder:
Clarence will have the younger.

Now
Enter three Watchmen to guard the King's Tent.

1. Watch. Come on my Master, each man take his stand, The King by this, is set him downe to sleepe.
2. Watch.

Why then, Jet's on our way in silent fort, For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George, Extant.

Applaud the Name of Henry, with your Leader. They all cry, Henry.

Enter Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George, Extant.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

K. Edw. Yes, brother of Clarence,
Art thou here too?
Nay then I see that Edward needs must downe.
Yet Warwick, in delight of all mischance,
Of thee thy selfe, and all thy Complices,
Edward will always bear himselfe as King:
Though Fortunes mallice overthrow my State,
My minde exceeds the compass of her Wheel.

Warw. Then for his minde, be Edward Englands King,
Take off his Crowne.

But Henry now shall weare the English Crowne,
And be true King indeed; thou but the shadow.
My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd
Vnto my Brother Arch-Bishop of Yorke:
When I have fought with Pembroke, and his fellows,
He follow you, and tell what answer
Lewes and the Lady Tansend to him.
Now for a while farewell good Duke of Yorke.
They take him very forcibly.

K. Ed. What Fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to refit both winde and tide. Exeunt.

E. R. What now remains my Lords for vs to do,
But march to London with our Soldiers?
Warw. I, that's the first thing that we have to do,
To free King Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the Regall Throne.

Enter Rivers, and Lady Gray.

Riw. Madam, what makes you in this fodain change?
Gray. Why Brother Rivers, are you yet to learn
What late misfortune is befalling King Edward?
Riw. What loffe of some pitch batell
Against Warwick?
Gray. No, but the losse of his owne Royall person.
Riw. Then is my Sovereigne slain?
Gray. I almost blame, for he is taken prisoner,
Either betrayed by fallhood of his Guard,
Or by his Foe surpriz'd at unawares;
And if I further haue to understand,
Is new committed to the Bishop of Yorke,
Fell Warwickes Brother, and by that our Foe.
Riw. These News I must confesse are full of griefe,
Yet gracious madam, beare it as you may,
Warwicke may looke, that now hath wonne the day.
Gray. Till then, your hope must hinder liues decay:
And I the rather waive me from dispaire
For loue of Edwards Offspring in my wome:
This is that makes me bridle paffion,
And bear with Mildnese my misfortunes croffe:
I, for this I draw in many a tear,
And flop the rifting of blood-foaking sighes,
Left with my fleshes or tears, I blast or drowne
King Edwards Fiuite, true byrte to th'English Crowne.
Riu. But Madam,
Where is Warwick then become?
Gray. I am informed he comes towards London,
To see the Crowne once more on Honor's head,
Gueffe thou the rest, King Edwards Friends must downe,
But to prevent the Tyrant in the same
(For trueth not him that hath once broken Faith)
Ile hence forthwith unto the Sanctuary,

To sue (at least the heire of Edwards right)
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud:
Come therefore let vs flye, while we may flye,
If Warwick take vs, we are sure to dye.

Ric. Now my Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley,
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this theatrell Theaters of the Parks.
Thus fland the case: you know our King, my Brother,
Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whole hands
He hath good visage, and great liberty,
And often but attended with weak guard,
Come hunting this way to dispost himselfe.
I have advetis'd him by secret messmes,
That if about this house he make this way,
Vnder the colour of his visuall game,
He shall here finde his Friends with Horse and Men,
To set him free from his Captuitive.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman with him.

Huntsman. This way my Lord,
For this way lies the Game.
King Edw. Nay this way men,
See where the Huntmen stand.
Now Brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to stale the Bishops Deere?
Ric. Brother, the time and there, requireth haile,
Your Horse stands ready at the Parke-corner.
King Ed. But whether shall we then?
Haut. To Lyn my Lord,
And shipt from hence to Flanders.
Ric. Weel guest beleue me, for that was my meaning
K. Ed. Stanley, I will require thy forwardnesse.
Ric. But wherefore is thy late to do talle.
K. Ed. Huntman, what say'st thou?
Wilt thou go along?
Haut. Better do so, then tarry and be hang'd.
Ric. Come then away, lest ha no more ado.
K. Ed. Bishoof farwell,
Sheild thee from Warwickes Crowne
And pray that I may re-poisifie the Crowne.

Exeunt.

Enter King Henry the fext, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Henry, Oxford, Montaigne, and Lieutenant.

K.Hen. M. Lieutenant, now that God and Friends
Hau' shak'n Edward from the Regall seat,
And turn'd thy captivitie slate to libertie,
My feast to hope, my sorrowes into joyes,
At our enlargement what are thy due Fees?
Lau. Subiects may challenge nothing of their Sou'rains
But, if an humble prayer may prevaile,
I then crave pardon of your Maiestie.
K. Hen. For what, Lieutenant? for well vifing me?
Nay, be thou sure, ile well require thy kindnesse.
For that it made my imprisonment, a pleasure:
1, such a pleasure, as incaged Birds
Conceive when after many moody Thoughts,
At last, by Notes of Hau'tfield harmonic,
They quite forget their lets of Libertie.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Enter a Page.

War. What news, my friend?

Page. That Edward is escaped from your Brother, And fled (as he heares since) to Burgundie.

War. Valuable news; but how made he escape?

Page. He was conveyd'by Richard, Duke of Gloucester, And the Lord Halyfry, who attended him.

In secret ambush, on the Forrest side, And from the Bishops Hunsfmen refued him:

For Hunting was his dayly Exercise.

War. My Brother was too carelesse of his charge.

But let us hence, my Sovereigne, to provide
A salve for any sore, that may betide.

Enter Somerset, Richmond, and Oxford.

Som. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edward:

For doubleflie, Burgundie will yield him helpe, And we shall have more Wares before long.

As Henrys late prefigring Prophecy

Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond:

So doth my heart mis-place me, in these Conflicts,

What may befall him, to his harms and ours.

Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,

Forwith wee lef send him hence to Britannie,

Till thsomes be past of Cuill Ermitie.

Oxf. My Lords, and you, the Bishops, and the Crowne,

Tis like that Richmond, with the rest, shall downe.

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Britannie,

Come therefore, let's about it speedily.

Exeunt.

Edw. Now Brother Richard, Lord Halyfry, and the rest,

Yet thus faire Fortune maketh vs amend,

And fayes, that once more I shal enterchange

My wained state, for Henrys Regall Crowne.

We halfe we pafs'd, and now re-pafs'd the Seas,

And brought defired helpe from Burgundie.

What then remaines, we being thus arriv'd

From Rauenspurge, Hauen, before the Gates of Yorkes,

But that we enter, as into our Dukedom?

Rich. The Gates made fast?

Brother, I like not this.

For many men that flumble at the Threhold,

Are well fore-foreld, that danger lurkes within.

Edw. Tuff man, obdurations must not now affright vs:

By faire or foule means we must entre in,

For either will our friends repaire to vs.

Haly. My Lord, the knacks once more, to summon them.

Enter on the Wall, the Cause of Yorkes,

And his Brethren.

Som. My Lords,

We were fore-warned of thy comming,

And that the Gates, for safety of our trues;

For now we owe allegiance to Henry,

Edw. But, Master, how fhen you be your King.

Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of Yorkes.

Som. True, my good Lord, I know you not leffe.

Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedom,

As being well content with that alone.
Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Noke,
Hee le finde finall meane to make the Body follow.
Hath. Why, Master Maior, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the Gates, we are King Henry's friends.
Mair. I say you so; the Gates shall then be opened.
He defends.

Act v. Sc. iii.

Enter the Maior, and two Aldermen.
Edw. So, Master Maior: these Gates must not be shut,
But in the Night, or in the time of Warre,
When, ife are not man, but yield me vp the Keys,
Takethin Keys.
For Edward will defend the Towne, and thee,
And all those friends, that dare to follow mee.

March. Enter Montgomery, with Drumme and Souldiers.
Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Our trustie friend, vnlike I be deceiv'd.
Edw. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Armes?

Mont. To helpe King Edward in his time of storme,
As every loyal Subiect ought to doe.
Edw. Thanks good Montgomery:
But we must forget our Title to the Crowne,
And only clayne our Duke,domes,
Till God please to fend the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, I will hence againe,
I come to serue a King, and not a Duke:
Drummer take vp, and let vs march away.

The Drumme begins to march.

Edw. Nay stay, Sir John, a while, and wee debate
By what safe meane the Crowne may be recover'd.

Mont. What talkes you of debating? in few words,
If you're not here proclaim your selfe our King,
He leave you to your fortune, and be gone,
To keepe them back, that come to haccour you,
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no Title?
Rich. Why Brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

Edw. When wee grow stronger,
Then wee make out our Clayme:
Till then, tves wildome to conceale our meaning.

Haft. Away with scrupulous Wit, now Armes must rule.

Enb. And fearlesly minds clyne soone into Crowns,
Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand,
The bruiter thereof, will bring you many friends.
Edw. Then be it as you will; for this my right,
And Henry but interposes the Diacome.

Mai, I now my Soueraigne feake hit like himselfe,
And now will I be Edward Champion.

Sup, Sound Trumpet, Edward thou be here proclaim'd:
Come, fellow Souldier, make thou proclamation.

Hear. Sound.

Soul. Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

Edw. And whose soe'ge gaineseyes King Edward's right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.

Throwes downe his Gavazzet.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth.

Edw. Thanks brave Montgomery,
And thanks unto you all.
If Fortune serue me, I'll requite this kindness.
Now for this Night, let a harbore here in York.
And when the Morning Sunne shall rayse his Carre
Above the Border of this Horizon,
We'll be forward towards Warriour, and his Mates:
For well I wot that Henry is no Souldier.
Ah Edward Clarence, how will it becometh thee,
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy Brother?
Yet as wee may, wee meeth both thee and warmeke,
Come on brave Souldiers: doubt not of the Day,
And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay.

Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter the King, Warriours, Montague,
Clarence, Oxford, and Somerset.

War. What counselle, Lords Edward from Belgis,
With hastie Germans, and blunt Hollanderes,
Hath pass'd in safetie through the Narrow Seas,
And with his troops doth march amaine to London,
And many giddie people flock to him.

King. Let's leue men, and beat him backe againe.
Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which being suffered, Riuers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,
Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in Warr,
Those will I muft vp: and thou Sonne Clarence,
Shall flite vp in Sudfoke, Norfoke, and in Kent,
The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee.
Thou Brother Montague, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find
Men well enclin'd to hearse what thou commandst.
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belou'd,
In Oxordshire shalt muft vp thy friends.
My Soueraigne, with the loving Citizens,
Like to his land, gyte in with the Ocean,
Or mockest Dyna, circled with her Nymphs,
Shall rest in London, till we come to him:
Faire Lords take leave, and stand not to reply.

Farewell my Soueraigne.

King. Farewell my Heitor, and my Troyes true hope.
Clar. Inigne of truth, I kisse thy Highnesse Hand.

King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.
Mont. Comfort, my Lord, and so take my true.

Oxf. And thus I feale my truth, and bid adieu.

King. Srect Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet Lords, let's meet at Coventry,

Exeunt.

King. Here at the Palace will I rest a while,
Cousin of Exeter, what thinkes thy Lordship?
Me thinkes, the Power that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.

King. That's not my seare, my meed hath got me fame:
I have not flipt mine cares to their demands,
Nor posted off their justices with false delays,
My pitie hath beene batme to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath alway'd their dwelling griefes,
My mercie day'd their waters flowing idles.
I have not beene devious of their wealth,
Nor much opprest with great Subsidies,
Nor forward of reuenge, though they much err'd.
Then why should they love Edward more then me?
No Exe', theire Grace's challenge Grace?
And when the Lyon fawes upon the Lambe,
The Lambe will never ceafe to follow him.

"Shew within, A Lancaster, A Lancaster."

Exit. Henrie, heare, my Lord, what Shouts are these?

Enter Edward and his Souldiers.

Edw. Seize on the fammead Henry, beare him hence, And once againe proclaime vs King of England. You are the Fount, that makes small Brookes to flow, Now flow thy Spring, my Sea shall fuck them dry, And swele so much the higher, by their ebbe. Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speaks, Exit with King Henry.

And Lords, towards Countrie bend we our course, Where Nestorian Warwick now remaines: The Sunne shines hot, and if we vfe delay,
Cold biting Winter mares our hop'd for Hay.

Rich. Away betimes, before his forces joynce, And take the great-grownie Traytor vnwares:
Braue Warriors, march againe towards Countrie, Exeunt.

Enter Warwick, the Major of Countrie, two Messengers, and others upon the wall.

War. Where is the Poit that came from valiant Oxford? How farre hence is thy Lord, mine honest fellow?
Mess. I. By this at Dunmore, matching hitherward.
War. How farre off is our Brother Mountague?
Where is the Poit that came from Mountague?
Mess. II. By this at Dainry, with a puifant troope.

Enter Somerset.

War. Say Somerset, what fayes my louing Sonne? And by thy guesse, how nigh is Clarence now?
Som. At Southiam I did leaue him with his forces, And doe expect him here fame two howres hence.
War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hearre his Drumme.
Som. It is not his, my Lord, here Southiam lyes:
The Drum your Honor heares, marcheth from Warwick.
War. Who shoulde that be belike vnlook'd for friends,
Som. They are at hand, and you shall quicly know.

Edw. Goe, Trumpet to the Walls, and found a Parle.
Rich. See how the fally Warwick mans the Wall.
War. Or vvidbid fpite, is fputfull Edward come? Where hept our Scouts, or how are they fuced,
That we could hear no newes of his repaire.
Now Warwick, with thouer the Citie Gates,
Spake gentle words, and humblely bend thy Knee,
Call Edward King, and at his hands begge Mercy,
And he fhall pardon thee Outrages.
War. Nay rather, with thou drawe thy forces hence, Confelle who fet thee vp, and plucke thee downe,
Call Warwick Patron, and be pentent,
And thou fhall ftill remaine the Duke of Yorke.
Rich. I thought as leaft he would have faid the King,
Or did he make the Leafe againft his will?
War. Is not a Duke done, Sir, a goodly gift?
Rich. I by my faith, for a poore Earle to give,
Ile doe thee ferruce for go good a gift.

War. Twa I that gave the Kingdome to thy Broth-her.
Edw. Why then itis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Ailas for so great a weight:
And Weaking, Warwick taketh his gift againe,
And Henry is my King, Warwick his Subieie.
Edw. But Warwickke King is Edwards Prisoner:
And gallant Warwickke, doe but answere this,
What is the Body, when the Head is off?
Rich. Alas, that Warwickke had no more force,
But whilles he thought to delve the fhine of Teu,
The King was fly fyinger'd from the Deck:
You left poore Henry at the Bifhops Pallace,
And tenne to one you meete him in the Tower,
Edw. Iis even fo, yet you are Warwickke full.
Rich. Come Warwickke,
Take the time, kneele downe, kneele downe:
 Nay when? Strike now, or else the Iron cooles.
War. I had rather chopp this Hand off at a blow,
And with the other, fling it at thy face,
Then beare fo low a fayle, to strike to thee,
Edw. Sayle how thou canft,
Hauke Winde and Tyde thy friend,
This Hand, fast wounde about thy coale-black hayre,
Shalfe, whiles thy Head is warme, and new cut off,
Write in the duft this Sentence with thy blood,
Wind-changing Warwickke now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Drummes and Colours.

War. Oh chearefull Colours, see where Oxford comes.
Rich. The Gates are open, let vs enter too.
Edw. So other foes may fet upon our backs.
Stand we in good array: for they no doubt
Will ifffe our synne, and bid vs battale;
If not, the Cutie being but of small defence,
We'll quicly rowe the Traitors in the fame.
War. Oh welcome Oxford, for we want thy helpe.

Enter Mountague, with Drummes and Colours.

Mount. Mountague, Mountague, for Lancaster.
Rich. Thou and thy Brother both fhall buy this Trefon
Even with the deare blood of thy bodies heare.
Edw. The hadder march, the greates Victorie,
My minde prefageth happy gaine, and Conquefte.

Enter Somerset, with Drummes and Colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster.
Rich. Two of thy Name, both Dukes of Somerset,
Hauie fold their Lubes unto the House of Tuke,
And thou fhalt be the third, if this Sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Drummes and Colours.

War. And loe, where George of Clarence sweepes along,
Of force enough to bid his Brother Battale:
With whom, in vpright zeale to right, preuailes
More then the nature of a Brotheres Loue,
Come Clarence, come: thou wilt, til Warwickke call.
Clar. Father of Warwickke know you what this means?
Looke here, I throw my infamie at thee:
I will not ruinate my Fathers Houfe,
Who gave his blood to lyne the fones together,
And fet vp Lancaster. Why, troweft thou, Warwickke,
That Clarence is fo harfth, fo blunt vnnaturall,
To bend the foul instruments of Warre

Against.
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Against his Brother, and his lawfull King. Perhaps thou wilt think this holy Oath, To keep that: Oath, were more impetue, Then Iproacheth, when he asf fid his Daughter. I am to forry for my Trelpass made, That to defend well at my Brothers hands, There proclame thyself thy mortall foe: With resolution, wherefore I meet thee, (As I will meet thee, if thou fhall abroad) To plague thee, for thy foule mis-leading me. And to proud-harted Warwicke, I defteer thee, And to my Brother turn my bluffling Checkes, Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends: And Richard, do not founce upon my faults, For I will hencefor to be more reverent.

Educ. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd, Then if thou never had felov'd our hate. Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like. War. Oh plagueft Traytor, petur'd and vnfruit, Educ. What Warwicke, Wilt thou leave the Towne, and fight ? Or fhall we bear the Stones about thine Eares? War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence: I will away towards Barnet prefently; And bid thee Batallie, Edward, if thou darft. Educ. Yes Warwicke, Edward dares, and leads the way: Lords to the field! Stay Garth and Victorie. Exeunt. March, Warwicke and his companie follows, Ast. Amen, and Exeunt. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwicke wounded, Edu. So, lye thou there: dye thou, and dye our fear, For Warwicke was a Bugge that fear'd us all. Now Montague is fall, I fecke for thee, That Warwicke's Bones may keep thine companie. Ext. War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe, And tell me who is Victor, Tarke, or Warwicke? Why ask I that ? my mangled body fhewes, My blood, my want of strength, my fickle heart fhewes, That I muff yeeld my body to the Earth, And by my fall, the conquest to my foe, Thus yeelds the Cedars to the Axed edge, Whole Armes gaufe ftill to the Princely Eagle, Vnder whose shade the ramping Lyon leapt, Whole top-branch over-peet's ioues spreading Truck, And kept low Shrubs from Winters pow'rfull Winde. Theirs Eyes, that now are dim'd with Deaths black Veyle, Have beene as piercing as the Mid-day Sunne, To search the fecret Treafons of the World; The Wrinkles in my Browes, now fill'd with blood, Were linc'd off to Kingly Sepulchers: For who lid King, but I could digge his Graue? And who duff smile, when Warwicke bent his Brow? Lo, now my Glory iemand in dust and blood, My Parkes, my Walkes, my Mannors that I had, Even now forlaid me; and of all my Lands, Nothing left me, but my body length, Why, what is Pompe, Rule, Reigne, but Earth and Dust? And live we how we can, yet dye we muft, Enter Oxford and Somerfet.

Some, Ah Warwicke, Warwicke, wert thou as we are, We might recouer all our Loffe againe:

In the Queen from France hath brought a puiffant power. Even now we heard the newest: ah, could thou dye, War. Why then I would not dye, Ah Montague, If thou be there, sweet Brother, take my Hand, And with thy Lippes keepe in my Soule a while, Thou lou'rt me not: for, Brother, if thou dyft, Thy tears would waft this cold congealed blood, That glaves my Lippes, and will not let me Speake. Come quickly Montague, or I am dead, Som' Ah Warwicke, Montague hath bread' his left, And to the laft gape, cry'd out for Warwicke: And Eud, Commend me to my valiant Brother. And more he would have faid, and more he spoke, Which founded like a Cannon in a Vault, That might not be diftinguifh'd: but at laft, I well might heare, deflorcurd with a groane, Oh fairewell Warwicke. War. Sweet left his Soule: Flye Lords, and fave your felues, For Warwicke bids you all fairewell, to meet in Heauen. Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queenes great power. Here they bearre away his Body, Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph, with Richard, Clarence, and the reft. King, Thus forte our fortune keeps an upwar'd course, And we are gratlid with wreaths of Victorie. But in the midft of this bright-flining Day, I fpy a black fupicious threatening Cloud, That will encounter with our glorious Sunne, Ere he advance his eafefull Welfare Bed: I meane, my Lords, tho's powers that the Queene Hath ra'd in Gallia, have arraigned our Costi, And, as we hear, march on to fight with vs. Clare. A little gale will foone difperfe that Cloud, And blow it to the Source from whence it came, Thy very Beaues will dry thofe Vapours vp, For every Cloud engenders not a Storme. Rich. The Queene is valued thirtie thouand strong, And Somerfet, with Oxford, feld to her; If the hauue time to breathe, be well fuff'd Her fortune will be full as strong as ours. King. We are aduerit'd by our loving friends, That they doe hold their course toward Tewksbury. We hauing now the beet at Barnet field, Will thither straight, for willinglynefle rides way, And as we march, our strength will be augmented: In every Countie as we goe along, Strike vp the Drums, cry courage, and away. Extant.

Flourish. March. Enter the Queene, young Edward, Somerfet, Oxford, and Saddlers. Qu. Great Lords, wife men ne'er fit and walle their loffe, But chearfully feake how to redrefle their harmes. What though the Muft be now blowne oute-boord, The Cable broke, the holding, Anchor loft, And halfe our Slayes swallow'd in the flood? Yet liues our Pilot fitll. Is't meet, that he Should leave the Helme, and like a carefull Lad, With tearfull Eyes addre Water to the Sea, And giue more strength to that which hath too mutch, Whiles in his moane, the Ship splits on the Rock, Which Indiftrie and Courage might have faid? Ah what a shame, ah what a fault were this: Say Warwicke was our Anchor, what of that? Q. 3 And

And Montague, our Top-Mait; what of him?
And our Sainted friends, the Tackles: what of these?
Why is not Oxford here, another Anchise?
And Somerset, another goodly Mait?
The friends of France our Shrews and Tacklings?
And though not fully, why not Nape and I?
For once all bold, a dastard Pilots Change.
We will not from the time, to sit and weep,
But keep our Course (though the rough Winds say no)
From Shakes and Rocks, that threaten as with Witch
As good to chide the Waits, as speaks them faire.
And what is Edward, but a toothless Sea?
What Clarence, but a Quick-sand of Deceit?
And Richard, but a ragged fatal Rocke?
All these, the Enemies to our poor Barke.

Sir you may swim, alas, but a while.
Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly sink,
Bedie the Rock, the Tide will wash you off,
Or else you夯实, that's a three-fold Death,
This speaks i' the Lords to let you understand.
If one save one of you would flye from vs,
These is no hope for Memory with the Brothers,
More then with ruthless Waits, with Sands and Rocks.
Why courage then, what cannot be avoided,
Twice childless weakness to lament, or feare.

Prince, me thinke, a Woman of this valiant Spirit,
Should, as a Coward heard her speake these words,
Influe his Brest with Magnamin,
And make him, make, sayle a man at Armes.
I speak not this, ye doubting any where;
For did I but suspect a heartfull man,
He would have leve to goe away betimes,
Least in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himselfe.
If any such be here, as God forbid,
Let him depart, both we need not heare.

Of Women and Children of strong a courage,
And Warrens fame, why 'twere perpetual shame.
Oh brave young Prince; thy famou Grandfather
Daie late againe in time; long may it thou live,
To bear his Image, and renew his Glories.

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
Goe home to Bed, and like the Owle by day,
If he awake, be mocked and wonder at.
Qu. Thou, gentle Somerset, I spoke Oxford thanks.
Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Miss. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand,
Reial to fight therefore be resolute.
Of. I thought no leete: it is his Policte,
To haffe thou fail to finde vs vanquished.
Som. But here's deuided, we are in readinesse.
Qu. This weighes my heart, to fee your forwardnesse.
Of. Here pitch our Battaille, hence we will not budge.

Enter Bracke followers, yonder stands the thorny Wood,
Which by the Heavens affiance, and your strength,
Might by the Roosts be the home of youe Night.
I need not addde more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot, ye blaze, to burne them out:
Give signall to the fight, and to i't Lords.

Qu. Lords, Knights, and Gentleman, what I should say,
My tears gain say, for every word I speake,
Ye see I drinke the water of my eye.
Therefore no more but this: Henry your Sovereigne
Is Prifoner to the Foe, his State-ship's.
His Realm a slaughters-house, his Subjects flaine,
His Statutes capell'd, and his Treasure spent.
And yonder is the Wele, that makes this spoyle.
You fight in justice, then in Gods Name, Lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

Edw. Retreat, Retreat, Retreat.

Flourish. Enter Edward, Richardson, Queens, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset.

Edw. Now here a period of tumultious Broyles.
Away with Oxford to Hamms Casilla straight.

For Somerset, with his sullie Head.
Goe beare them hence, I will not hear them speake.
Of. For my part, I lie not trouble thee with words.
Som. Not Lord, but speake with patience to the lowest,

Qu. So part we sadly in this troublous World,
To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

Edw. Is Proclamation made, that who finds Edward,
Shall have a high Reward, and he his Life?

Rich. It is, and loe where youthfull Edward comes.

Enter the Prince.

Edw. Bring forth the Gallant, let us heare him speake,
What? so to young: A Thorne begin to prick?
I award what satisfaction canst thou make,
For bearing Armes, for carrying vp my Subjectes,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to.
Prince. Speake like a Subject, proud ambition Yorke.
Suppose that I am now my Fathers Month,
Begine thy Chace, and where I stand, kneel thou,
Then will I propage the feate-same words to thee,
Which (Traytor) thou wouldst haue no answer to.
Qu. An, that thy Father had done to resolue.
Rich. That you oughtfull haue wonne the Bettle,
And never haue borne the Brequth from Lancaster.
Prince. Let it be put in a Winters Night,
His Currill Robin turnes not with this place.

Rich. By Heauen, Brat, I laye yege ye for that word.
Qu. I thow woulde borne to be a plague to men,
Rich. For Gods sake, take away this Captive Scold.
Prince. Nay, take away this folding Crooke-backe, rather.

Edw. Peace willfull Boy, ort will charne your tongue,
Clar. Vntur'd Lad, thou art too malapert.
Prin. I know your duty, you are all undoutefull:
Lachinious Edward, and thou persifl'd George,
And thou my shaven Dike, I tell ye all,
I am your better, Traytours as ye are,
And thou shoulde my Fathers right and mine.

Edw. Take that, the likenesse of this Rayler here.

Edw. Swapp't thou shoulde take that, to end thy agonie.
Rich. Shall I be?

Clar. And ther's for twitting me with persitance.

Rich. Shall I be?

Qu. Oh, kill me too.

Rich. Many, and shall.

Clar. Offer to kill me.

Edw. Held, & Richard, hold, for we have done too much.

Rich. Why
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth.

Rich. Why should thee live, to fill the World with words?

Edw. What? dost thee frown upon me for my recollection?

Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother:

He hence to London on a serious matter.

Edw. If ever I come there, I fear to hear some newnes.

Cia. What? what?

Rich. Tower, the Tower.

Qu. Oh Ned, Ned, Ned, speak to thy Mother Boy.

Canst thou not speak? O Traitors, Murthurers, Blamers!

They that flabb'd Cæsar, shed no blood at all:

Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame!

If this foulde deed be, to equal it,

He was a Man; this (in relapsed) a Child;

And Men, we're spend thy life on a Child.

What's worse then Marcher, that I may name it?

No, no, my heart will buffet, and if I speake,

And I will speake, that to my heart may buffet.

Butchers and Villaines, bloody Comboles,

How sweet a Plant have you vntimely crop't:

You have no children (Butchers) if you had,

The thought of them would have first'd vp remorse,

But if you ever chance to have a Child,

Lookst in his youth to hate him so cut off.

As death then you have rid this forester young Prince.

Eng. Away with her, go bear her hence perforce.

Qu. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me hence:

Here death thy Sword, lie pardon thee my death:

What wilt thou now? I then Clarence do it thou.

Cia. By heauen, I will not do thee so much cite.

Qu. Good Clarence do; sweet Clarence do it do.

Cia. Didst thou not hence me foresee I would not do it?

Qu. If, but thou seest to forswear thy life.

Twas Sir Edward, but now his Charity

What wilt thou? Where is that disdai'd butcher Richard?

Hard favour'd Richard; Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here; Murthurer is thy deed:

Petitioners for Blood, thou're put to backe.

Edw. Away I say, I charge ye bear her hence,

Qu. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince.

Exit Quene.

Ed. Where's Richard gone.

Quene. To London all in post, and 31 guns,

To make a bloody Supper in the Tower.

Ed. He's finde it a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence, discharge the common sort

With Pay and Thankes, and let's away to London,

And see our gentle Quene how well the fayres,

By this I hope, the hath a Sonne for me.

Enter Henry the first, and Richard, with the Lieutenant on the steps.

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what is your Booke so hard?

Hen. I my good Lord: my Lord I should say rather,

This in to flatter, Good was not little better;

'Good Golden, and good Deuell, were alike,

And both preposterous; therefore, not Good Lord.

Rich. Sirs, leave us to our felings, we must conferre.

Hen. So flies the weakliffe Sheepe from y' Wolfe

So first the harmliffe Sheepd doth yield his Fleece,

And next his Throatoe, into the Butchers Knife.

What Scene of death hath statt'd now to Ake?

Rich. Subsition aways haunts the guilty minde,
The third Part of King Henry the Sixth

And so I was, which plainly signified,
That I should, snare, and bite, and play the dogges;
Then since the Heavenes have flapp’d my Body so,
Let Him xdoo. crook my Mind, to answer it.
I have no Brother, I am like to no Brethren.
And this word [Loue] which Gray-beards call Divine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me. I am my selfe alone.
Clarence beware, thou keep it mee from the Light,
But I will fort a pitchy day for thee;
For I will beaze abroad those Propheties,
That Edward shall be fearfull of his life,
And then to purge his fear, hee by thy death.
King Henry, and the Prince his Son are gone,
Clarence thy turne is next, and then the reft,
Counting my selfe but bad, till I be best.
Ile throw thy body in another roome,
And Triumph Henry, in thy day of Doome. Exit.

Flourish. Enter King, Queen, Clarence, Richard, Hastings,
Nefte, and Attendants.

King. Once more we sit in Englands Royall Throne,
Re-purchas’d with the Blood of Enemies:
What villain Foe-men, like to Autumnes Corne,
Hauing we mow’d down some of all their pride?
Three Dukes of Somerset, threshold Renowne,
For hardly and un doubted Champions:
Two Cliftfords, as the Father and the Sonne,
And two Northumberlands: two brauer men,
Ne’re found their Courtiers at the Trumpets found.
With them, the two braue Beares, Warwick & Montague,
That in their Chaines fetter’d the Kingly Lyon,
And made the Forrest tremble when they roared.

Thus have we swepe. Suspicion from our State,
And made our Foote toole of Security,
Come hither Beff, and let me kisse my Boys:
Yong Ned, for thee, thinke Vnckles, and my selfe,
Hauing in our Armours watcht the Winter’s night,
Went all afoote in Summers sealding heare,
That thoy mightt bee presente the Crowne in peace,
And of our Labours thou shalt recepe the gaine.

Richard. I le blast his Haruef, if your head were laid,
For yes I am not look’d on in the world.
This shoulder was todrain’d fo thicke, to haue,
And haue to shal some weight, do break my backe,
Workes thou the way, and that shalt execute.

King. Clarence and Gifford, Ione my lovely Qwine,
And his your Princely Nephew Brothers both.
Clas. The duty that I owe unto your Maitely,
I Scale upon the lips of this sweet Babie,
Clas. Thankes Noble Clarence, worthy brother thanks.
Rich. And that I lose the tree frs whence I sprang:
Witness the loving kisse I giue the Fruite,
To sa the truth, so Iudas kile his master,
And cried all haile, when as he means all harme.

King. Now am I tastaed as my soule delights,
Hauing my Countries peace, and Brothers loves.
Clas. What will you Grace haue done with Margaret,
Reynard her Father, to the King of France,
Hath pawnd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither hauve they fent it for her ransom.

King. Away with her, and waft her hence to France:
And now what tefts, but that we spend the time
With lately Triumphes, mirthfull Comickke flawes,
Such as befits the pleasure of the Court.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, farewell lower anony,
For here I hope begins our lastling joy.

Exeunt omnes

FINIS.

V. vi. 76 — V. vii. 46

526
The Tragedy of Richard the Third: with the Landing of Earle Richmond, and the Battell at Bosworth Field.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloucester.

Now is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glorious Summer by this Son of Yorks:
And all the clouds that low'd upon our house
In the deepse bosome of the Ocean buried.
Now are our browses with Victorious Wreathes,
Our bruised armes hung vp for Monuments;
Our ferne Alarums chang'd to merry Meetings;
Our duskyl Marches, to delightfull Measures.
Grin-wag'd Ware, hath smooth'd his wrinkled Front:
And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds,
To fighte the Soules of fessfull Adversaries,
He capes nimbly in a Ladies Chamber,
To the laffleuing pleasing of a Lute.
But I, that am not fap'd for sportive tickes,
Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glasse:
I, that am Rudely stamp'd, and want loues Mafily,
To fruit before a woman ambling Nymph:
I, that am curtail'd of this faire Proportion,
Cheated of Feature by disssembling Nature,
Deform'd, vn-finish'd, fent before my time
Into this breathing World, scarce halfe made vp,
And that fo lamenly and unfrainious,
That dogges barke at me, as I halt by them.
Why I (in this weake piping time of Peace)
Have no delight to pull away the time,
Vnolese to fee my Shadow in the Sonne,
And defcant on mine owne Deformity.
And therefore, since I cannot prove a Louter,
To entertaine thefe faire well spoken Dayes,
I am determined to prove a Villaine,
And have the idle pleasures of these dayes,
Plots have I laide, inductions dangerous,
By drunken Prophefies, Libels, and Dreames,
To fet my Brother Clarence and the King
In deadly hate, the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and flue,
As I am Subtle, Fals, and Treacherous,
This day should Clarence cicely be mer'd vp:
About a Prophefie, which fays this G-,6
Of Edward hezys the murthrer fhal be.
Due thoughts downe to my foule, here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, and Brokenbury guarded.

Brother, good day: What meanes this armed guard
That waits upon your Grace?

Cla. His Maiestie sending my persons safety,
Hath appointed this Conduit, to agree me to th Tower
Rich. Upon what caufe?

Cla. Because my name is George.

Rich. Alacke my Lord, that fault is none of yours:
He should for that commit your Godfather,
O belike, his Maiestie hath some intent,
That you should be now Christned in the Tower.
But what's the matter Clarence, may I know?

Cla. Yes Richard, when I know: but I protest
As yet I do not: But as I can learnie,
He hearkens after Prophefies and Dreames,
And from the Croffe-row pluckes the letter G:
And fayes, a Wizard told him, that by G,
His ifue disinherit'd should be,
And for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought, that I am he.
Thence (as I learne) and such like toyses as these,
Hath mous'd his Highness to commit me now.

Rich. Why this it is, when men are rul'd by Women:
'Tis not the King that lends you to the Tower,
My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarence'z firs,
That tempts him to this harsh Extremity.
Was it not thee, and that good man of Worship,
Anthony Woodville his Brother there,
That made him fend Lord Hastings to the Tower?
From whence this presens day he is delivered?
We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.

Cla. By heauen, I thinke there is no man secure
But the Queene's kindred, and night-walking Haralds,
That trudge betwixt the King, and Miftris Shore.
Hear'd you not what an humble Suppliant
Lord Hastings was, for her deliverie?

Rich. Humbly complaining to her Delite,
Got my Lord Chamberlaine his libertie.

Cla. Ile tell you what, I thinke it is our way,
If we will keepe in favour with the King,
To be her men, and weare her Livery,
The lealous are-worne Widdow, and her felfe,
Since that our Brother did it none, Godly women,
Are mightie Gospis in our Monarchy.

Bro. I beleech your Grace both to pardon me,
His Maiestie hath straightly given in charge,
That no man shall have private Conference
(Or of what degree euer) with your Brother.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Ric. Even fo, and please your Worship Brakenbury, You may partake of any thing we say:
We speake no Treacon man; We sray the King
Is wise and vertuous, and his Noble Queene
Well strooke in yeares, faire, and not reallous.
We say, that Shore, Wife hath a pretty Foot,
A cherty Lip, a bonny Eye, a patting pleasing tongue:
And thou knowest, Quentes, Kindred are made gentle Folkes,
How say you fit? can you deny all this?

Dra. With this (my Lord) my life have nought to doo.

Ric. Naught to do with Mithris Shore?
I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her
(Excepting one) were beft to do it secretly alone.

Dra. What one, my Lord?
Ric. Her Husband Knave, wouldn't thou betray me?

Dra. I do beseech your Grace
To pardon me, and withall forbear
Your Conference with the Noble Duke.

Clu. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and wil obey.
Ric. We are the Quenes abjects, and mile obey.
Brother farewell, I will unto the King,
And whatsoe'er you will employ me in,
We will well. With King Edward Windo, Sister,
I will perfome it to infranchize you.

Meane time, this deeps disgrace in Brotherhoold,
Touches me deeper then you can imagine.

Clu. I know it pleache neither of vs well.
Ric. Well, your imprisonmeft shall not be long,
I will deliver you, or elle lyfe for you:
Meane time, have patience.

Clu. I must perfome Farewell.

Ric. Go tredde the path that thou shalt returne:
Simple plaine Clarence, I doe love thee so,
That I will shortly snde thy Soule to Heauens,
If soule then will take the present at our hands.
But who cometh here? the new deliuered Haffings?

Enter Lord Haffings.

Haft. Good time of day unto my gracious Lord.
Ric. At much unto my good Lord Chamberlaine:
Well are you welcome to this open Ayre,
How haft your Lordship brooke this imprisonmeft?

Haft. With patience (Noble Lord) as prisoners must:
But I shall haue (my Lord) to give them thankes,
That were the cause of my imprisonmeft.

Ric. No doubt, no doubt, and so farewell Clarence too,
For they that were your Enemies, are his,
And those the Enemies of so much on him as you,

Haft. More pity, that the Eagles should be mead d,
Wiles, Kites and Burdars play at liberty.

Ric. What newes abroad?

Haft. No newes so bad abroad, as this at home:
The King, is sickly, weake, and melancholly,
And his Physicians fear him mightily.

Ric. Now by St. John, that Newes is bad indeed.
O he hath kept an all night Diet long,
And as once much confirm'd has Royall Person:
'Tis very greasous to be thought upon.
Where is he, in his bed?

Haft. He is.

Ric. Go you before, and I will follow you.

Exeunt Haffings.

It is in to verge his hatred more to Clarence,
With Lyes well fledd with weighty Arguments,
And if I fail not in my deepe intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,
And leave the world for me to buifie in.
For then, Ile marry Warwicke yongtelf daughter.
What though I kill'd her Husband, and her Father,
The readie way to make the Wrench amends,
Is to become her Husband, and her Father:
The which will I, not all fo much for loue,
As for another secret slofe intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to Market:
Clarence still breathes, Edward still lives and raignes,
When they are gone, then muff I count my gaines. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Coate of Harvies the first with Halbard to guard it,
Lady Anne being the Measurer.

Anne. Set downe, set downe your honourable loud,
If Honor may be throwed in a Herse;
Whilft I a-while obliquely lament
Th' incommode ful of Vertuous Lancaster,
Poor key-cold Figure of a holy King,
Pale Athel of the House of Lancaster;
That bloodylt Remnant of that Royall Blood,
Be it lawfull that I immolate thy Ghod,
To heare the Lamentations of poor Anne,
With to the Edward, to thy slasted Sonne,
Stab'd by the falsefame hand that make those wounds.
Lo, in these windowes that let forth thy life,
I poure the helpless Balm of my poore eyes,
Occused be the hand that made those holes;
Curst be the Heart, that had the heart to do it:
Cursed the Blood, that let this blood from hence:
More diuerstail beside that hated Wretch
That makes vs wretched by the death of thee,
Then I can wish to Wolues, to Spiders, Toadse,
Or any creeping venom d thing that lies.
If heuer he have Childe, Abitture be ir,
Prodigious, and ytimely brought to light,
Whole ugly and vinarious Apekt
May thrift the hopefull Mother at the view,
And that be Hayse to his vulgaritie.
If heuer he haue Wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Then I am made by my young Lord, and thee.
Come now towards Chereby with your holy Lode,
Taken from Paulus, to be infected there.
And fill as you are weary of this wroght,
Refl you, whiles I lament King Harvies Cove.

Enter Richard Duke of Gloucester.

Ric. Stay you that beare the Coate, & set it down.
An. What blacke Magitian comires vp this Fendi,
To stop devoted charitable deeds &
Ric. Villanies set downe the Coate, or by S Paul,
Ile make a Coate of him that disobeys.

Exeunt.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Gen. My Lord stand back, and let the Coffin passe.
Rich. Vansanner'd Dogge,
Stand'rt thou when I command:
Advance thy Halbert higher then my breast,
Or by S. Paul I lie strike thee to my Foote,
And smurr upon thee Bagger for thy boldneffe.

An. What do you tremble? are you all auffer'd?
Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortall,
And Mortall eyes cannot endure the Diuell.
Antuand thou dreadfull miner of Hell;
Thou hadst had but power over his Mortall body,
His Soule thou canst not hate: Therefore be gone.
Rich. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not so touchy.
An. Foule Diuell,
For Gods sake hence, and trouble us not,
For thou hast made the happy earth thy Hell:
Fill'd in with cursing cries, and deep exclamations:
If thou delight to view thy heynous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy Butcherers.
Oh Gentlemen, see: see dead Heau'nt wounds,
Open their conceald mouthes, and bleed asfehe.
Blind,bluff'd, thou lumpe of foulw Deformitie:
For 'tis thy presence that excists this blood
From cold and empty Veines where no blood dwells.
Thy Deeds inhumanse, and vnnaturall,
Prouokes this Deluge mort vnnatural.
O God! which this Blood mad'rt, reuenge his death:
O Earth! which this Blood drink't, reuenge his death.
Either Haeu'n with Lightning strike the murther ter death:
Or Earth gape open wide, and eate him quicke.
As thou dost swallow up this good Kings blood,
Which his Heel-govern'd sorne hath butchered.
Rich. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,
Which renders good for bad, Blessings for Curses.
An. Villain thou knowft not law of God nor Man,
No Beast to fforce, but knowes some touch of pitty.
Rich. But I know none, and therefore am no Beast.
An. O wonderfull, when diuelts tell the truth!
Rich. More wonderfull when, Angels are so angry:
Vouchsafe (diuine perfection of a Woman)
Of these supposted Crimes, to give me leave
By circumstance, but to acquie my felfe.
An. Vouchsafe (defud's infedtion of man)
Of these knowne euils, but to give me leave
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed felfe.
Rich. Fairer then tongue can name thee, let me have
Some patient leyfure to excuie my felfe.
An. Fouler then heart can think thee,
Their whores can make no excuse current,
But to hang thy felle.
Rich. By fuch dispaire, I should acquie my felfe.
An. And by dispairing that thou hast excuied,
For doing worthy Vengeance on thy felle,
That did it unworthy laughter upon others.
Rich. Say that I flew them not.
An. Then say they were not blaine:
But they are, and diuellish flaye by thee.
Rich. I did not kill your Husband.
An. Why then he is alivne.
Rich. Nay, he is dead, and blaine by Edwards hands.
In thy foule throst thou Lyft,
Queene Margaret law
 Thy murde rous Faulcion smooking in his blood:
The which, thou once didst bend against her frett,
But that thy hane bestre fade the point.
Rich. I was proouked by her fland round tongue,
That laid their guilt, upon my guiltlesse Shoulder.
Rich. Thon was't provoked by thin bloody minde.
That neuer dreamt on ought but Butcherites.
Did it thou not kill this King?
An. Do I grant thee Hedge-bogge,
Then God graunte me too.
Thou mayst be durned for that wicked deeds,
O he was gentle, milde, and veruinous.
Rich. The better for the King of heauen that hath bin,
An. He is in heauen, where thou shalt never come.
Rich. Let him thanke me, that holpe to send him thilke:
For he was fitter for that place then earth.
An. And thou vnoi for any place, but hell.
Rich. Yes one place else, if you will heare me name it.
An. Some dungeon.
An. Ill refi betide the chamber where thou lyest.
Rich. So will it Madam, till I lye with you.
An. I hope fo.
Rich. I know fo. But gentle Lady Anne,
To leaze this keen encounter of our wistes,
And fall something into a flowre method,
Is not the causer of the talest deaths
Of thefe Plantagenets; Heinrich and Edward,
As blamfull as the Executioner.
An. Thou was't the cause, and most accurat effect.
Rich. Your beauty was the caufe of that effect:
Your beauty, that did hunte me in my sleepe,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one houre in your sweet bosome.
An. If I thought that, I tell thee Homicide,
Thefe Nailes shoulde rent that beauty from my Cheekes.
Rich. These eyes could not endure y beauties wrack,
You should not blinem it, if I flood by;
As all the world is cheared by the Sunne,
So I by that: It is my day, my life.
An. Blacke night ore-lyede thy day, & death thy life.
Rich. Curse not thy felfe faire Creature,
Thou art both.
An. I would I were, to be reueng'd on thee.
Rich. It is a quarrell mort vnnatural,
To be reueng'd on him that loueth thee.
An. It is a quarrell just and reasonable,
To be reueng'd on him that kill'd my Husband.
Rich. He that bereft the Lady of thy Husband,
Did it to helpe thee to a better Husband.
An. His better doth not breath upon the earth.
Rich. He lieth,that loves thee better then he could.
An. Name him.
An. Why that was he.
Rich. The selfe orname, but one of better Nature.
An. Where is he?
Rich. Here.

Spitt at him.
Why doth thou spit at me.
An. Would it were mortal poynson, for thy sake.
Rich. Neuer came poion from to sweet a place.
An. Neuer hung poion on a fowler Toade.
Out of my sight; thou doft infect mine eyes.
Rich. Thine eyes (sweet Lady) have infected mine.
An. Would they were Basiliskes, to thrike thee dead.
Rich. I would they were, that I might dye at once:
For now, they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine, from mine hauue dravne falt Teares;
Sham'd their Aspects with store of childish drops:
They, eyes which never tired remor'd full tears,
Now, when my Father York; and Edward wept,
To show the pious image that Rutland made
When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him.
Nor when thy warlike Father like a Child,
Told the sad story of my Fathers death,
And twenty times, made paufe to sob and weep:
That all the flanders by bad wet their cheeks
Like trees bedadj'd with raines. In that sad Time,
My manly eyes did come an humble state:
And what these forrowes could not thenere exhale,
Thy Beauty hast, and made them blinde with weeping,
I neuer fed to Friend, nor Enemy:
My Tongue could neuer learn sweet smoothing word.
But now thy Beauty is propos'd my Fee,
My proud heart fees, and prompts my tongue to speak.
She looks fearfully at him.

Teach not thy lip such Sceone for it was made
For Killing Lady, not for such Countal:
If thy rendeng full heart cannot forgive,
Low here I lend thee this sharpe-pointed Sword,
Which if thou pleases to hide in this true brest,
And let the Soule forth that adores thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly begge the death vpon my knee,
He lays the brest open the offer as with his sword.
Nay do not strive for; For I did kill King Henry,
But was thy Beauty that promok'd me.
Nay now dispatch: 'Twast i that flabb'd yong Edward,
But was thy Heauenly face that sette me on.
She falls the Sword.

Take up the Sword againe, or take up me,
An. Afrie Dismember, though I with thy death,
I will not be thy Executioner.
Rich. Then bid me kill my selfe, and I will do it.
An. I have already,
Rich. That was in thy rage:
Spearke it againe, and even with the word,
This hand, which for thy Loue, did kill thy Loue,
Shall for thy Loue, kill a faire truer Loue,
To both their deaths shalt thou be accesseary.
An. I would I knew thy heart,
Rich. Thy figure in my tongue.
An. I fear me, both are falls,
Rich. Then neuer Man was true.
An. Well, well, put vp your Sword.
Rich. Say then my Peace be made.
An. That finall thou know heerest,
An. All men I hope live so.
Vouchsafe to weare this Ring.
Rich. Look how my Ring incompan'd the thy Finger,
Even so thy Brest inclopeth thy poorer heart:
Weare both of them, for both of them are shine.
And if thy poore devout Servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracius hand,
Thou doft confirm his happinecke for ever.
An. What is this?
Rich. That it may please you leave there sad designer,
To him th' bath molt caudre to be a Mooster,
And presentely repaire to Cronie Hooke:
Where (after I have solemnly inter'd
At Chetsey Monastery this Noble King,
And wept his Graue with my Repentant Tears)
I will with all expedient duty fee you,

For dutes unknowne Reasons, I becometh you,
Grant me this boon.
An. With all my heart, and much it joyes me too,
To see you are become to penitent,
Trefel and Barkley go along with me.
Rich. But me farwell.
An. This more then you deserre:
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I haue fairewell already.

Exit two with Ames.

Cont. Towards Chetsey, Noble Lord?
Rich. Not to White Friars; there attend my comming

Exit Chetsey.

Was euer woman in this humour woo'd?
Was euer woman in this humour wonne?
Ille hauce her, but I will not keep her long.
What? I that kill'd her Husband, and his Father,
To take her in her hearts extremest hate,
With curtes in her mouth, Tears in her eyes,
The bliebling wintreke of my hatred by,
Having God, her Conference, and these bars against me,
And I, no Friends to backe my suit withall,
But the blaine Duell, and dissembling looks &
And yet to winne her? All the world to nothing.
Hah!
Hath she forger already that braste Prince,
Edward; her Lord, whom I (some three months since
Sad in my poynt, at Tenchesbury;
A sweeter, and a louer Gentleman;
Frain'd in the prodigality of Nature:
Yong, Valiant, \\
\(An.\)
With (and no doubt) bright Royal
The fpacious World cannot againe affoord.
And will she yet safye her eyes on me,
That crot the Golden prime of this sweet Prince,
And made her Widow to a weustall Bed?
On me, whole All not equals Edward's Mootie?
On me, that halts, and am unshapen thus?
My Dulcethome, to a Beggrerly denier.
I do mitigate my perfon all this while:
Vpon my life she finds (although I cannot)
My selfe to be a mirrefull proper man.
Ile be at Charges for a Looking-glaafe,
And entertaine a score or two of Taylors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with my selfe,
I will maintaine it with some little cost.
But first I turne you Fellow in his Graue,
And then returne lamenting to my Louce.
Shine out faire Sunne, till I have bought a glaafe,
That I may see my Shadow as I passe.

Scena Tertia.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Gray. No other harme, but losse of such a Lord.

Qu. The losse of such a Lord, includes all harms.

Gray. The Humours have blest you with so goodly Son,

To be your Comforter, when he is gone.

Qu. Ah! he is young and his minority

Is put into the trauel of Richard Gloster,

A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Qu. Is it concluded he shall be Protector?

Qu. It is determined, not concluded yet;

But to it must be, if the King miscarry,

Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Gray. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.

Bucc. Good time of day unto your Royall Grace.

Der. God make your Majestie joyful, as you have bin

The Countesse Richmond, good my Lo. Derby.

To your good prayer, w'll strictly say, Amen.

Yet Derby, withstanding thine is your wife, and

Loves not me, be you good Lord affir'd,

I hate not for your proud arrogancie.

Der. I do beseech you, either not beleue

The envious flanders of her false Accusers:

Or if the be accus'd on true report,

Bear with her weakneffe, which I thinkke proceeds

From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Qu. Saw you the King of York this day, my Lord of Derby?

Bucc. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,

Are come from visitinge his Majestie.

Qu. What likelyhood of his amendsment Lords.

Bucc. Madam good hope, his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Qu. God grant him health, did you confer with him?

Bucc. I madam, he defires to make atonement:

Betweene the Duke of Gloster, and your Brothers,

And bewteen them, and my Lord Chamberlaine,

And fent to warn them to his Royall presence.

Qu. Would all were well, but that will never be,

Ifear our happinesse is at the height.

Enter Richard.

Rich. They do me wrong, and I will not indure it,

Who is it that complaines into the King,

That I forsake him, and lose them not?

By holy Paul, they lose his Grace but lightly,

That fill his ears with such diffentious Rumors.

Because I cannot flatter, and looke faire,

Smile in mens faces, smooth, deceiue, and cogge,

Ducke with French nods, and Apith curtseie,

I must be hold a rancorous Enemy.

Cannot a plain man live, and thinke no harme,

But thus this simple truth must be abus'd,

With filken, flie, inunusting Lackes?

Gray. To who in all this preace speakes your Grace?

Rich. To thee, that hast not Honour, nor Grace:

When haue I must'd thee? When done thee wrong?

Or thee or thee, or any of thy faction?

A plague upon you all, His Royall Grace.

(Whose God prefere best then you would with)

Cannot be quiet, can he breathing while,

But you must trouble him with jeald complaints.

Qu. Brother of Gloster, you make the matter

The King on his owne Royall disposition,

(And not proof'd by any Suitor elde)

Ayming (belike) at your interior hatred,

That in your outward action shewes it selle

Against my Children, Brothers, and my Selfe,

Makes him to bend, that he may leane the ground.

Rich. I cannot rell, the world is grovne so bad,

That Weens make prey, where Eagles dare not petch.

Since euerie lacke became a Gentleman,

There's many a gentle person made a Jacke.

Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother.

You chuse my advancement, and my friends:

(Gloster) God grant we never may have neede of you.

Rich. Meane time, God grants that I have neede of you.

Our Brother is impri'm'd by your meanes,

My selfe disgrav'd, and the Nobilitie

Held in contempt, while great Promotions

Are daily gien to ennable thole

That fearie some two dayes since were worth a Noble.

Qu. By him that rais'd me to this carefull height,

From that contented hop which I enjoy'd,

I never did incerre his Maiestie.

Against the Duke of Clarence, but haue bin

An earneft advocate to plead for him.

My Lord you do me shamefull infirme,

Follie to draw me in these vile suspicio's.

Rich. You may deny that you were not the mean.

Of my Lord Hafings late imprisonment.

Rich. She may my Lord, for Rich. She may Lord Knows, who you knows not for?

She may do more for then denying that:

She may help you to many faire preferments,

And then deny her a-yding hand therein,

And lay choie Honors on your high defert.

What may the not, she may, I marry may the.

Rich. What mayry may the?

Rie. What marry may the? Marrie with a King,

A Batcheller, and a handfeome fitprising too,

I wis your Grandam had a worser match.

Qu. My Lord of Gloster, I haue too long borne

Your blunt vpbraidings, and your bitter scoffes:

By heauen, I will acquaint his Maiestie

Of thosse groffe tenaunts that oft I haue endur'd,

I will rather be a Countrie seruant maide

Then a great Queene, with this condition,

To be to bated, torn'd, and transformed as,

Small toy haue I in being Englands Queene.

Enter old Queene Margarett.

Mar. And leigned be that small, God I beseech him,

Thy honor, thee, and leate, is due to me.

Rich. What threat ye my comfort with telling of the King?

I will owne't in presence of the King:

I dare aduernure to be sent to the Tower.

Tis time to speake,

My paines are quite forgot.

Margarett. O Dutiell,

I do remember them too well:

Thou kild it my Husband Henry in the Tower,

And Edward my poor Son at Tewkesburie.

Rich. Ere you were Queene,

Or your Husband King.

Rich. I was a pailly horfe in his great affaires:

A weeder out of his proud Adversaries,

A liberall rewarder of his Friends,

To roylazie his blood, I spente mine owne.

Margarett. I and much better blood.

Then his, and thine.
Their Kingdoms loose, my woeful Basalming,
Should all but anfwer for that peevish Brat?

Can Curfes pierce the Clouds, and enter Heauen?
Why then gueue way dull Clouds to my quick Curfes,
Thus turned by Warters, by Surfeit dye thy King,
As ours by Murther, to make him a King.

Edward thy Sonne, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward our Sonne, that was Prince of Wales,
Dye in his youth, by like vnitime violence,
Thy felfe a Queene, for me that was a Queene,
Out-lie thy glory, like my wretched Telle :
Long may'st thou line, to wytie thy Childrens death,
And fee another, as I fee thee now,
Deck'd in thy Rights, as thou art flall'm in mine,
Long dye thy happy days, before thy death,
And after many length ned howres of grieue,
Dye neytber Mother, Wife, nor Englands Queene.

Rivers and Dyer, you were fadders by,
And degred to no good; when my Sonne
Was flab'd with bloody Daggers: God, I pray him,
That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some viflook'd accident cut off.

Riche Hau'd done thy Charrne, ftray'd hatefull with'd Hagge,
Q. M. And leave out thee? Stay Dog, for what I haue thee,
If Heauen haue any grievous plague in flore,
Ere thou bring about it, that I can with vпон thee,
O let them keep it, till thy felfe be ripe,
And then hurle downe their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poore Worlds peace,
The fame of Conscience still begnaw thy Soule,
Thy Friends feque, for Traytors while thou liu'ft,
And take deep' for Traytors for thy dearft Friends:
No fleep clofe vp that deadly Eye of thine,
Vntill e he beall gone; all tormenting.
Dream AFFlicts thee with a Hell of egally Devils.
Thou eaffit mak'd, aboruing rootine Hogge,
Thou that waft feall'd in thy Naturie
The fate of Nature, and the Sonne of Hell :
Tion flander of thy beauie Mothers Wombte,
Thou makeft Office of thy Fathers Loynes,
Thou cryftall of Honor, thou deteale—

Rich. Q. M. Magaret.
Q. M. Richard.
Q. M. I call thee not.

Rich. I cry thee mercie then: for I did thinke,
That thou had'st call'd me all these bitter names,
Q. M. Why fo I did, but look'd for no reply,
Or likneffe returne: I pr'ythee let me know,
Their Tis done by me, and ends in Magaret.
Q. M. Thus haue you breath'd your Curfe against your felf,
Q. M. Poor poor painted Queen, vain flourish of my fortune,
Why fhould it be or faue that Botrel's Spide,
Whole devilly Web en.Requires thee about?
Fool,foole, thou whilest a knife to kill thy felfe :
The day will come, that thou fhalt with for me,
To helpe thee curfe this poysonous Bunch-back Toade.
Haji, Faile boding Woman, and thy frantick Curfe,
Leaft to thy harme, thou moue our patience,
Q. M. Foulfe flame upon you, you have all moud'mine.
Rich. If were you well fended, you would be taught your duty,
Q. M. To ferue me well, you all fhould do me duty,
Thus to be your Queene, and you my Subjece,
O ferue me well, and truely perform thy felues duty.

Dorf. Dispute not with her, thine be lustakce.
Q. M. Peace Master Marquifte, you are malapert,
Your fire-new flame of Honor is fierce currant.
Enter Catsby.

Catsby. Madam, his Majesty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord.

Dr. Catsby, I come, Lords will you go with me.

Rich. We wait upon your Grace.

Exit all but Oliver.

Rich. I do the wrong, and first begin to bawl.

The secret Mischiefs that I feel in me,

I lay unto the generous charge of others.

Clarence, who I indeed have cast in darkness,

I do bewepe to many simple Galles,

Namely to Derby, Huyving, Buckingham,

And tell them 'tis the Queen, and her Allies,

That firre the King against the Duke my Brother,

Now they believe it, and willbell when me

To be resoug'd on Riuers, Deger, Gray.

But then I fight, and with an speece of Scripture,

Tell them that God bids vs do good for euill ;

And thus I cloath my naked Villanie

With olde old ends, stolne forth of holy Writ,

And seeme a Saint, when moft I play the deuill.

Enter two murderers.

But soft, beare down my Executioners,

How now my hardy flout ruelis Mates,

Are you now going to dispatch this thing ?

Oul. We are my Lord, and come to have the Warrant,

That we may be admist where he is.

Rich. Wee thought you'd, I have it heare about me,

When you have done, repayse to Crayle place ;

But bins be sodain in the execution,

Withall obdurate, do not heare him please ;

For Clarence is well spoken, and perhaps

May move your hearts to pitty, if you makse him.

Oul. Turtcut, my Lord, we will not stand to prate,

Talkers are no good doers, be allur'd ;

We goe to vie our hands, and not our tongues.

Rich. Your eyes drop Mill-stones, when Pooleys eyes fall Textes : I like you Lads, about your business straight.

Go go, dispatch.

Oul. We will my Noble Lord.

---

Scena Quarta.

Enter Clarence and Keeper.

Keep. Why looks ore Grace so heusely to day.

Oul. O I have paft a miserable night,

So full of terrefial Dremes, of ugy lights,

That as I am a Christian Faithfull man,

I would not spend another such a night.

Though twere to buy a world of happy daies,

So full of diuanl terror was the time.

Keep. What was your dream my Lord, I pray you tell me.

Oul. Me thoughts that I had brokenc from the Tower,

And was eembark'd to croffe to Burgundy,

And in my company my Brother Glover,

Who from my Cabin tempept me to walkes,

Upon the Hatches : There we look'd towards England,

And cist up a thousand heavy times.

Princes have but their Titles for their Glories, An outward Honor, for an inward Toyſe, And for vaſels Imaginations They often feele a world of reflefſive Careſe: So that betweene their Titles, and low Name, There's nothing differs, but the outward fame.

Enter two Mourners.

1. Mor. Ho, who's here?
Bra. What would it thou Fellow? And how can I thou hither.
2. Mor. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my Legges,
Bra. What to breathe?
1. 'Tis better (Sir) then to be tedious: Let him fee our Commission, and take no more. (Reads)
Bra. I am in this, commanded to deliver The Noble Duke of Clarence to your hands. I will not reason what is meant hereby, Because I will be guilteſſe from the viewing, There lies the Duke asleep, and there the Keyes, Ille to the King, and dignifie to him, That thus I have refign'd to you my charge.
Exit.
2. You may fir, 'tis a point of wisdom: Fare you well.
2. What, shall we stab him as he sleepes.
1. No: hee's lay'd was done cowardly, when he wakes
2. Why shall he never wake, untill the great judgement day.
1. Why then hee's lay'd, we stab'd him sleeping.
2. The vomit of that word Judgement, hath bred a kinde of remorse in me.
1. What sorte thou afraid?
2. Not to kill him, having a Warrant, But to be damn'd for killing him, from which the No Warrant can defend me.
1. I thought thou had fine holopet.
2. So I am, to let him live.
1. Ile backe to the Duke of Gloucester, and tell him so.
2. Nay, I prythee stay a little: I hope this passion is but a humor of mine, will change, It was wont to hold me but while one tels twenty.

1. How do't thou feel thyselfe now?
2. Some certain diegges of confidence are yet with in mee.
1. Remember our Reward, when the deed's done.
2. Come, he dies: I had forgot the Reward.
1. Where's thy confidence now.
1. How when she open his pursie to give vs our Reward, thy Confidence flyes out.
2. This is but matter; let it goe: There's few or none will entertaine it.

1. What if it come to thee againe?
2. Hee not meddle with this, it makes a man a Coward:
A man cannot fleſse, but he accurſeth him: A man cannot Swear, but it Checkes him: A man cannot lye with his Neighbour Wife, but it deſects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefull spirit, that mutinies in a mans boſome: It fills a man full of Obſtacles. It made me once retire a Purife of Gold that (by chance) I founds: It beggars any man that keeps it: It is turn't off of Townes and Cities for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well, endeavers to truft to himselfe, and live without it.

1 This
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

1. To even now at my elbow, perceiving me not to kill the Duke, that he avoided not me, 2. To take the duell in thy minde, and beleue him not: 3. To understand with thee but to make thee fight, 4. And I am strong fram'd, he cannot presale with me. 5. Spoke like a tall man, that respecteth thy reputation.

Come, shall we fall to workes? 1. Take him on the Court, with the bitter of thy Sword, and then throw him into the Malacie-Batte in the next room, 2. To excell-deuce, and make a stop of him, 3. Soft, he wakes. 4. Stirreth.

1. No, we'll reason with him. 2. Where art thou, Keeper? Give me a cup of wine. 3. You shall have Wine enough my Lord anon. 4. In Gods name, what art thou that?

1. A man, as you are. 2. But not as I am Royall, 3. Nor you as we are, Lorally.

1. My voice is now the Kings, my lookes mine owne. 2. Whose dirkly, and how deadly dost thou speake? Your eyes do menace me: why lookes you pale? Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

1. To go to. 2. To murder me? 3. Earl. 1. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so, and therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein my Friends have I offended you?

1. Observed vs you have not, but the King. 2. I shall be reconciled to him againe. 3. Never my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.

1. Are you drawne forth among a world of men to play the innocent? What is my offence? 2. Where is the Evidence that doth accuse me? 3. What lawfull Quest have given their Verdict, unto the frowning Judge? Or who pronounc'd the bitter sentence of poore Clarence death, before I be consist by course of Law?

1. To threaten me with death, is most unlawful. 2. I charge you, as you hope for any goodnese, that you depart, and lay no hands on me: the deed you undertake is damnable, 3. What we will do, we do upon command.

1. And he that hath commanded, is our King. 2. Erroneous Vassals, the great King of Kings Hath in the Table of his Law commanded That thou shalt do no murder. Will you then Spurne at his Edict, and fulfill a Man? Take heed: for he holds Vengeance in his hand, to hurle upon their heads that break his Law. 3. And that same Vengeance doth he hurle on thee, for fals combining, and for murder too? Thou didst receive the Sacrament, to fight in quarrell of the House of Lancaster, 4. And like a Traitor to the name of God, Didn't break that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade, Vongst the Bowels of the Sou' of Egypt, 5. Whom thou wert sworn to cherish and defend. 6. How couldst thou urge Gods dreadfull Law to vs, when thou hast broke it in such degree? 7. Alas! for whole sake did I that ill deed? For Edward, for my Brother, for his sake. He sends you not to murder me for this:

For in that fume, he is as deep as I. If God will be avenged for the deed, O know you not, he doth it privily. 2. Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm: He needs no indirect, or lawlesse course, 3. To cut off those that have offended him, 4. Who made thee then a bloody miniller? When gallant springing brasse Plantagenet, That Princeely Soulacke was thence dead by thee? 5. My Brothers love, the Duell, and my rage, 6. Thy Brothers Love, our Duty, and thy Faults, Prouoke vs hither now, to slaughter thee.

1. If you do love my Brother, hate not me: I am his Brother, and hate him well. 2. If you are hy'd for need, go backe againe, and I will tend you to my Brother Glouster: Who shall reward you better for my life, then Edward will for tyring of my death. 3. You are decei'd.

Your Brother Glouster hates you. 1. Oh no, he loves me, and he holds me deare: Go you to him from me.

1. I so we will. 2. Tell him, when that our Princeley Father Yorke, Bleth his three Sons with his victorious Arme, He little thought of this diuided Friendship: Bid Glouster think on this, and he will weep, 3. 1. Milltones, as he leffoned vs to weep. 4. O do not slander him, for he is kinde, 5. Right, as Snow in Harveet: Come, you deceive your fellow, 6. Thyse that sends vs to destroy you hearce, 7. It cannot be, for he bewept my Fortune, And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore with oaths, That he would labour my deliverie. 8. Why so he doth, when he delaieth you From this earths thraldom, to the toyes of heauen. 9. Make peace with God, for you must die my Lord. 10. Have you that holy feeling in your soules, To confute me to make my peace with God, and are you yet to your owne soules fo blinde, That you will warre with God, by mudring me, O firs confider, they that let you on To do this deeds, will hate you for the deede. 11. What shall we do? 12. Learn, and faze your soules: Which of you, if you were a Princes Sonne. Being pente from Liberty, as I am now, If two such murtherers as your felues came to you, Would not intrest for life, as you would begge Were you in my diffire. 13. Relent not: Tis cowardly and womanish. 14. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, dullhead: My Friend, I spy some pitty in thy lookes: O, if shine eye be not a Flatteer, 15. Come thou on my fide, and intreate for me, A begging Prince, what beggar pitties not. 16. Lookke behind you, my Lord. 17. Take that, and that, if all this will not do, Stand him. 18. He drawne you to the Malacie, But within.

A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd: How faint (like Fulate) would I wash my hands Of this most grievous murther. 19. How now? what mean'th thou that thou help't me not? By Heaven the Duke shall know how flake you have beene.
Enter Rackette, and Gifler.

Rich. Good morrow to my Sovereign King & Queen:
And Princeley Peers, a happy time of day.

King. Happy indeed, as we have spent the day:
Gifler, we have done deeds of Chastity,
Made peace of enmity, faire loue of hate,
Betwixt those twelling wrong incensed Peers.

Rich. A blestful labour to my most Sovereign Lord:
Amongst this Princeely heaps, many here
By faith intelligence, or wrong surmise.

Hold me a Foe: If I willyngly, or in my rage,
Hate ought committed that is hazly borne,
To any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile to his friendly peace
Tis death to me to be at enmity:
I hate it, and desire all good mens love.

First Madam, I intreate true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my dutifull service.
Of you my Noble Cousin Buckingham,
If ever any gredge were lodg'd betwixt vs,
Of you and you, Lord Rivers and of Dorset,
That all without decret have grown'd on me:
Of you Lord Woodville, and Lord Scele of you,
Dukes, Earles, Lords, Gentlemen,indeed of all,
I do not know that Englishman aile,
With whom my men are any warred at al,
More than the Infant that is borne to night:
In thankes my God for my Humilitie.

Qu. A holy day thall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God all strife were well compounded,
My Sovereign Lord, I do beseech your Highnesse
To take out Brother Clarence to your Grace.

Rich. Why Madam, haue I offred loue for this,
To be so ownd in this Royall presence?
Who knowes not that the gentle Duke is dead?
They You do him injurie to sorne his Coare.

Qu. And who knowes he is?

Rich. All-seeing heauen, what a world is this?

Buc. Louke I lo pale Lord Dorset, as the rest?

Rich. I my good Lord, and no man in the presence,
But harded colours hath forsooke his cheacks.

King. Is Clarence dead? The order was reheard.

Rich. But he (poore man) by your first order dyed,
And that a winged Mercurie did bearre,
Some tardie Crippe bare the Counterpart,
That came too late to sorge him buried.
God grant, that some lief ferte Noble, and lefte Loyall,
Neerer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Defence not worse then wretched Clarence did,
And yet go tsurrant from Suspicion.

Enter Earl of Derby.

Der. A boome my Sovereigne for my seruice done.

King. I prethee peace, my loue is full of love.

Der. I will not strike, welfare your Highness here me.
King. Then say at once, what is it thou request.

Der. The forset (Soveraigne) of my leasure life,
Who flew to day to Riuoust Gentleman,
Lately attandant on the Duke of Norfolk.

King. Haue I a tongue to doome my Brothers death?
And shall that tongue give pardon to a flawe?
My Brother kill'd no man, his fault was Thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Who came to me for him? Who (in my wrath) receipt’d me, and bid me be advis’d? Who spoke of Brother-hood? who spoke of love? Who told me how the poore fool did forake the mighty Warwicke, and did fight for me? Who told me, I in the field at Tewkesbury, when Oxford had me downe, he rescued me: And said dear Brother live, and be a King? Who told me, when we both lay in the Field, Frozen(almost) to death, how he did spare Euen in his Garments, and did glue himselfe (All thin and naked) to the numbe cold night? All this from my Remembrance, brutish wrath Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you Had no much grace to put it in my minde. But when your Carters, or your waying Vassails Have done a drunken Slaughter, and defac’d The precious Image of our deere Redeemer, You straight are on your knees for Pardon, pardon, And I (vniuall too) must grant it you. But for my Brother, not a man would speake, Nor I (vngracious) speake unto my selfe For him poore Soule. The proudest of you all, Have bin beholding to him in his life: Yet none of you, would once begge for his life. O God! I feare thy suffer ince will take hold On me, and you; and mine; and yours for this. Come Halftime helps me to my Cloflet. Ah poore Clarence. Exeunt_Some with K. & Queen.

Boyd. This is the fruits of rancins: Markes you not, How that the guilty Kindred of the Queene Look’d pale, when they did heare of Clarence death. Or they did weep’t full unto the King, God will reuenge it. Come Lords will you go, To comfort Edward with our company.

But. We wait upon your Grace. extant.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the old Duke of York, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell vs, is our Father dead? Dutch. No Boy.

Dutch. Why do weep so of? And bearce your Breath? And cry, o Clarence, my unhappy Sonne.

Boy. Why do you looke so vs, and flaske your head, And call vs Orphans, Wretches, Catehays, Whe if that our Noble Father were aline? Dut. My pretty Cofins, you mistake me both, I do lament the fanch of the King, As loath to lose him, not your Fathers death: It was left sorrow to wail one that’s loft.

Boy. Then you conclude,(my Grandam) he is dead: The King, mine Vnkle is too blame for it. God will reuenge it, whom I will importance With earnest prayers, alittle to that effect. Dutch. And to will I.

Dut. Peace children peace, the King doth love you wel. Incapable, and shallow innocents, You cannot gueffe who caus’d your Fathers death.

Boy. Grandam we can; for my good Vnkle Cloflet
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter Richard, Buckingham, Derby, Fastings, and Raisill.

Rich. Suffer haue comfort, all of vs haue cause
To waile the dimming of our shining Starre ;
But none can help us harmes by waiving them.
Madam, my Mother, I do cry you merrie,
I diue ete your grace. Humbly on my knee,
I crave your blesseing.

Dow. God bleesse thee, and put meeknes in thy breath,
Lowe Charity, Obedience, and true Dutie.

Rich. Amen, and make me die a good old man,
That is the butt-end of a Mothers blesseing ;
I maugre that her Grace did leave it out.

Ent. You clowdy-Princes, & hart-forrowinge-Princes,
That best this humane mutuell loades of Moane,
Now chere each other, in each others Lowe :
Though we have spent our Harret of this King,
We are to respe the Harret of his Sonne.
The broken ranccour of your high-swolne hates,
But lately spillett d, knit, and sowned together,
Mull gentely be preserued, therfore, and kept:
Me femeath good, that with some little Traine,
Fortiwith from Ludlow, the young prince be fent
Fisher to London to be crownd our King.

Ent. Why with some little Traine,
My Lord of Buckingham?

Buc. Marry my Lord, left by a multitude,
The new-hez'd wound of Malice shou'd break out,
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the efface is Greene, and yet vaguerum d,
Where everie Hoile bears his commanding Zone,
And may direct his course as pleace himselfe,
As well the hate of harme, as harme apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Rich. I hope the King made peace with all of vs,
And the compafs is firme, and true in me.

Ent. And lo in me, and fo (I think) in all.
Yet since it is but Greene, it shou'd be put
To no apparaunt likely-hood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be wrung d,
Therefore I fay with Noble Buckingham,
That it is meete to few should fetch the Prince.

Hap. And fo fay I.

Rich. Then be is fo, and go we to determine
Who they shall be that stand shall poffe to London.
Madam, and you my Sifter, will you go
To guse your cunfutes in this bullenfe.

Ent. Richard, Buckingham, and Richard.

Buc. My Lord, who euer Journeyes to the Prince,
For God sake let not vs too fay at home:
For by the way, Hee fortoyencion,
A Index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queenes proud Kindred from the Prince.

Rich. My other felle, my Counfayles Coniuynty,
My Oracle, My Prophet, my Siter Cofin,
Ias a child, will go by thy direcction,
Toward London town, for wee not fay behind.

Scena Tertia.

Enter one Citizen on one shore, and another at the other.

1 Cit. Good morrow Neighbour, whether away to.

2 Cit. I promise you, I feaely know my felf.

1 Cit. Hare you the news abroad ?

2 Cit. Yes, that the King is dead.

1 Cit. Ill news by ready, fome comes the better.

2 Cit. I hear, I hear, I fhall proue a giddy world.

Ent. Another Citizen.

3 Neighbours, God speed,

1 Cit. Give you good morrow fir.

2 Cit. Doth the news hold of good king Edwards death?

3 Cit. I fay, it is too true, God helpe the while.

2 Cit. Then Masters lookke to fee a troublous world.

1 Cit. No, no, by Gods good grace, his Son fhall reign.

2 Cit. Wee to that Land that's gouerd by a Child.

3 Cit. In him there is a hope of Government,
Which in his naught, confound vnder him,
And in his full and ripened yeares, humfelle.
No doubt fhaull then, and till then gouernme well.

1 Cit. So ftook the State, when Henry the fxt.

2 Cit. Was crowned in Paris, but in one months old.

3 Cit. Stood the State for Nau, no good friends, God wet.

2 Cit. For then this Land was famoufly enrich'd.
With politicke graue Counsell, then the King
Had vertuous Vnklees to protect his Grace.

1 Cit. Why fo hath this, both by his Father and Mother.

2 Cit. Better it were they all came by his Father:
Or by his Father there were none at all:
For emulation, who shall now be neereft,
Will touch vs all too near, if God present not.

3 Cit. O full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester,
And the Queene Sons, and Brothers, hauted and proud,
And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This fickly Land, might folace as before.

1 Cit. Come, come, we feare the world: all will be well.

2 Cit. When Clouds are leen, wilfemen put on their cloths,
When great leaues fall, then Winter is at hand ;
When the Sun fets, who doth not looke for night?
O whilome Horner, makes men expext a Draught,
All may be well, but if God forit it so,
'Tis more then we deferve, or I expert.

2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:
You cannot reafe ( almost) with a man,
That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3 Cit. Before the daies of Change, fill is it fo,
By a doune intenfly, mens minides multraft.

Scena. Exeunt.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Scene Quarta.

Enter Arch-bishop, young York, the Queen, and the Duke of Exon.

Arch. Last night I heard they lay at Stony Stratford; and at Northampton they do rest to night: To morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Date. I long with all my heart to see the Prince; I hope he is much grown; since last I saw him.

Q. But I hear no, she lay my sonne of York here; he's almost overtook him in his growth.

York. I Mother, but I would not have it so.

Date. Why my good Costin, it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night as we did sit at Supper, my Vnkle River talk'd of how I did grow:

Then more than my Brother: I quoth my Vnkle Gloufter, small Herbes have grace, great Weeds do grow space. And since, me thinke I would not grow so fast; Because sweet Flowers are low, and Weeds make haft.

Date. Good faith, good faith, the sayings did not hold: In him that did object the same to thee. He was the wretchedest thing when he was young, So long a growing, and so delaying; That if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

York. And so do I doubt he is, my gracious Madam.

Date. I hope he is, but yet let Mothers doubt.

York. Now by my troth, if I had beene remembered, I could have given my Vnkle Grace, a flower. To touch his growth, nearer then he touch mine.

Date. How my young York, I pray thee let me hear it.

York. Marry (they say) my Vnkle grew so fast, That he could grawe a crwft at two hours old, I was full two yeares ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have beene a bying left.

Date. If prythee prertty York, who told thee this?

York. Grandam, his Nurse.

Date. His Nurse? why she was dead, ere I was born, York. If twere not the, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. A parlous Boy do you see, you are too shrew d.

Date. Good Madam, be not angry with the Childe: Prickem but use care.

Enter a Messinger.

Arch. Here comes a Messinger: What News? Newes. Such newes my Lord, as greeues me to report.

Date. How doth the Prince?

Newes. Well Madam, and in health.

Date. What is the News?

Newes. Lord Kemer, and Lord Gers, are come to Pomfert, and with them, Sir Thomas Cloughe, Prifoner.

Date. Who hath committted them?

Newes. The mightie Dukes, Glaoufer and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence?

Newes. The sumne of all I ken, I have disclos'd: Why, or for what, the Nobles were committed, Is all unknowne to me, my gracious Lord.

Date. Aye me! I see the issue of my House; The Tyger now hath leif'd the gentle Hinde, Infiling Timonie begins to fur.

Yon the innocent and aellifie Thrice: Welcome Deftruction, Blood, and Malleace, I see (as in a Map) the end of all.

Date. Accursed, and vnquitt wrangling dayes, How many of you haue mine eyes beheld? My Husband lost his life, to get the Crownes, And often vp and downe my sonnes were soft: For me to joy, and wepe, their gaine and lose, And being fea'd, and Doneflieke broyles Cleanse over-blowne, themselfes the Conquerors, Make warre vpon themselfes, Brother to Brother; Blood to blood, selfs against selfs: O preposterous And franticke outrage, and thy damned spicene, Or let me dye, to looke on earth no more.

Date. Come, come, my Boy, we will to Sanctuary. Madam, far well.

Date. Stay, I will go with you.

Newes. You haue no cause.

Arch. My gracious Lady go, And therfore bear your Treasure and your Goodes, For my part, I leinge unto your Grace. The Scale I keepe, and fo别说e to me, As well I tender you, and all of yours, Go, hee conduct you to the Sanctuary.

Actus Tertius. Scene Prima.

The Trumpets sound.

Enter young Prince, the Dukes of Glaoufer, and Buckingham, Lord Cardinall, with others.

Dnc. Welcome sweete Prince to London, To your Chamber.

Rich. Welcome deere Cousin, my thoughts Soveraigne The wearie way hath made you Melancholy. Prim. No Vnkle, but our croses on the way, Have made it tedious, weareftome, and heaue.

Rich. I want more Vnkle heere to welcome me.

Rich. Sweet Prince, the entittled versus of your yeares Hath not yet diu'd into the Worlds deceit: No more can you distinguiish of a man, Then of his outward shew, which God he knowes, Selfdone or never lumpeft with the heart.

Those Vnkle which you want, were dangerous: Your Grace attended to their Sugred words, But look'd not on the payson of their hearts:

God keepe you from them, and from such fals Friends,

Prim. God keepe me from fals Friends, But they were none.

Rich. My Lord, the Maior of London comes to greet you.

Enter Lord Maior.

Mob. God bleffe your Grace, with health and happy dayes.

Prim. I thanke you, good my Lord, and thank you all:

II. iii. 43—III. i. 19
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

I thought my Mother, and my Brother York,
Would long ere this, have met vs on the way,
Fie, what a Slag is Hastings, that he comes not to tell vs, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Butk. And in good time, here comes the Swearing
Lord.
Prince. Welcome, my Lord: what, will our Mother come?

Hasty. On what occasion God he knowes, not I;
The Queene your Mother, and your Brother York,
Hath taken Sanctuary: the tender Prince
Would faine have come with me, to meet your Grace,
But by his Mother was perforce withheld.

Butk. Fie, what an indirect and fruitless course
Is this of hers? Lord Cardinal, will your Grace
Perfwadc the Queene, to send the Duke of York
Vnto his Princeely Brother presently?
If the denie, Lord Hastings, goe with him,
And from her jealous Arries pluck him perforce.
Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weake Oratorie
Can from his Mother winne the Duke of York's,
Anon expect him here: but if he be obstruue.
To milde entreaties, God forbid
We should infringe the holy Proviudeed
Of blessed Sanctuary: not for all this Land,
Would I be guiltie of fo great a fine.

Butk. You are too feneceleste oblitinate, my Lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditionall.
Weigh it but with the Groffete of this Age,
You brake not Sanctuary, in feining him:
The beneft thereof is always granted
To those, whose dealings have defend the place,
And those who have the wit to clayme the place:
This Prince hath neyther claymed it, nor defend'd it,
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it.

Then taking him from thence, that is not there,
You brake no Proviudeed, nor Chatther there:

Of has I heare of Sanctuary men,
But Sanctuary children, we're till now.

Card. My Lord, you fluell o're-rule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Prince. Good Lords, make all the freedie haft you may.
Say, Vuckle Gloster, if our Brother come,
Where shall we louierne, till our Coronation?

Glo. Where it think it beft vnto your Royall selfe.
If I may confaile you, some day or two,
Your Highfie flall repoye you at the Tower;
Then where you pleafe, and shall be thought meft fift
For your beft health, and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower of any place.

Did Julius Caesar build that place, my Lord?

Butk. He did, my gracious Lord, begin that place,
Which since, suceeding Ages hath re-celfily d.

Prince. Is it upon record? elle he reported
Succesfully from age to age, he built it?

Butk. Upon record, my gracious Lord.

Prince. But say, my Lord, were not rigitied,
Me thinkes the truth should live from age to age,
As i were retaile'd to all posterites.
Even to the general ending day.

Glo. So wife, fo young, they say she never liue long.

Prince. What say you, Vuckle?

Glos. I say, without Charters, Fame liues long.
Thus, like the formall Vice, Inquitie,
I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man,
With what his Valour did enrich his Wits,
His Wit fea downe, to make his Valour liue?
Death makes no Conquest of his Conqueror,
For he lives in Fame, though not in Life.
Ile tell you what, my Cousin Buckingham.

Butk. What, my gracious Lord?

Prince. And if I live, till I be a man,
Ile win our ancient Right in France againe,
Or dye a Souldier, as I liued a King.

Glo. Short Summers lightly have a forward Spring.

Enter young Yorks, Hastings, and Cardinal.

Prince. Richard of York, how fares our Noble Brother?

Butk. Well, my deare Lord, for my part I call you now.

Prince. I, Brother, to our griefe, as it is yours:
Too late he dy'd, that might have kept that Title,
Which by his death hath loft much Magestie.

Glo. How fares our Cousin Noble Lord of York?

Butk. I thank you, gentle Vuckle. O my Lord,
You said, that idle Weeds are falt in growth.
The Prince, my Brother, hath out-grown me faire.

Glo. He hath, my Lord.

Butk. And therefore is he idle?

Glo. Oh my faire Cousin, I must not faie fo.

Butk. Then he is more beholding to you, then I.

Glo. He may command me as my Soveraigne,
But you have power in me, as in a Kinman.

Butk. I pray you, Vuckle, give me this Dagger.

Glo. My Dagger, little Cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A Begger, Brother?

Butk. Of my kind Vuckle, that I know will glie,
And bring but a Toy, which is no gife to gine.

Glo. A greater gife then that, he gue my Cousin.

Butk. A greater gife? O, that's the Sword to it.

Glo. I gentle Cousin, were it light enough.

Butk. O then I fee,you will part but with light gifts,
In weightier thinges you'll faie a Begger say.

Glo. It is too weightie for your Grace to waer.

Butk. I weight it lightly, were it heaier.

Glo. What, would you have my Weapon, little Lord?

Butk. I would that I might thanke you, as, as you can.

Glo. How?

Butk. Little.

Prince. My Lord of Yorks will flill be croffe in talke;
Vuckle, your Grace knowes how to bear with him.

Butk. You meane to bear me, not to bear with me:
Vuckle, my Brother mockes both you and me.

Because that I am little, like an Ape,
He thinkes that you should bear me on your Shoulders.

Butk. With what a sharp dispraidd wit he reasones:
To misgiate the fcone he givs his Vuckle,
He proue, and aptly taunts himfelfe.
So cunning, and fo young, it wonderfull.

Glo. My Lord, wilt plesse youaffe along?
My iffe, and my good Cousin Buckingham,
Will to your Mother, to enteresse of her
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

Butk. What.

III. i. 20—139

540
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Ver. What will you goe into the Tower, my Lord? Prince My Lord Protector will have it so.
A Sent. Enter Prince, Verke, Hastings, and Dafiet.

Mars, Richard, Buckingham, and Catchby.

Back. Think you, my Lord, this little praying of Verke Was not incensed by his subtle Mother, To taunt and seeze you thus oppressively? Glo. No doubt, no doubt; Oh here's a perilous Boy, Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable: Here is all the Mothers, from the top to toe. Back. Well, let them rest. Come hither Catesby, Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend, As closely to conceal what we impute: Thou knowst if our reasons vse'd upon the way. What though it thou? is not an easy matter, To make William Lord Hastings of our mind, For the entailment of this Noble Duke In the Seat Royal of this famous Ie? Cates. He for his fathers sake followes the Prince, That he will not be wone to oaths against himselfe. Back. What think'dst thou then of Stanley? Will not he? Cates. Hee will doe all in all as Hastings doth. Back. Well then, no more but this: Goe gentle Catesby, and as it were tarde off, Sound thou Lord Hastings, How doe he stand affected to our purpose, And furnish him to morrow to the Tower, To fit about the Coronation. If thou dost finde him tractable to vs, Encourage him; and tell him all our reasons: If he be leade, vce, cold, vnwillin; Be too to rude, and so brake off the tale, And give vs notice of his inclination: For we to morrow bold Council, Wherein thy selfe shalbe highly employ'd. Rich. Commend me to Lord William: tell him Catesby, His ancient knot of dangerous Adversaries To morrow are to blood at Pomfret Castle, And bid my Lord, for joy of this good newes, Gieue Midhurst Shore one gentle Kille the more. Back. Good Catesby, goe effect this business_soundly. Cates. My good Lords both, with all the heed I can. Rich. Shall we heare from you, Catesby, ere we sleepe? Cates. You shall, my Lord. Rich. At Croisy House, there shall you find vs both. Exit Catesby.

Back. Now, my Lord, What shall wee doe, if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our Complots? Rich. Chop off his Head: Something wee will determine: And looke when I am King,clayme thou of me The Earledome of Hereford, and all the movables Whereof the King,my Brother, was possesse.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter Lord Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your Bore-speere man? Fears you the Bore, and goe for unprouised?

Stan. My Lord good morrow, good morrow Catesby: You may leaft on, but by the holy Reed, I do not like these federall Counsellors. 1

Hafl. My Lord, I hold my Life as deare as yours, And never in my days, I doe protest, Was it so precious to me? As now: Thynke you, but that I know our state secure, I would be for triumphant as I am? 2

Sta. The Lords at Pomfret, who they rode from London, Were locund, and suppos'd their faces were sere, And they indeed had no castle to mistit: But yet you see, how soone the Day of eceaff. This sudden flab of Rancour I misdoubt: Pray God (I say) I proue a neceffle Coward. What, shall we toward the Tower: the day is spent. 3

Hafl. Come, come, hau'e with you: Wot you what, my Lord, To day the Lords you talk of, are beleaued, Sta. They, for their truth, might better wear their Heads, Than form what have acuad them, wear their Hats. But come, my Lord, let's away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hafl. Go on before, Its tale with this good fellow. Exit Lord Stanley, and Catesby. How now, Sire? how goes the World with thee? Perfl. The better, that your Lordship please to ask. Hafl. I tell thee man, it is better with me now, Then when thou met't me last, where now we meet? Then was I going Prisoner to the Tower, By the suggestion of the Queene's Allies. But now I tell thee (kepe it to thy selfe) This day those Enemies are put to death, And I in better state then ere I was.

Perfl. God hold it, to your Honors good content. Hafl. Granermale fellow: there, drinke that for me. Throws him his Purse.

Perfl. I thank your Honors. Exit Pursuivant.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to see your Honors. Hafte. I thank thee, good Sire John, with all my heart. I am in your debt, for your last Exercise: Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Priest. He wait upon your Lordship.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a Priest, Lord Chamberlaine? Your friends at Pomfret, they doe need the Page, Your Honor hath no shining worke in hand. Hafl. Good faith, and when I met this holy man, The men you talke of, came into my minde, What, goe you toward the Tower? Buck. I doe, my Lord, but long I cannot stay there: I shall returne before your Lordship, thence. Hafl. Nay like enough, for I stay Dinner there. Buck. And Supper too, although thou know it not. Will you goe?

Hafl. I'll waie upon your Lordship.

Scene Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ratclife, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfret.

Ratcl. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this, To day shalt thou behold a brutish die, For Truth, for Dutie, and for Loyalty. Grey. God bleffe the Prince from all the Pack of you, A Knot you are, of damned blood-breakers. Caugh. You live, that shall cry woes for this hereafter. Ratcl. Dispatch, the limit of your Lives is one. Ratcl. O Pomfret! Pomfret! O thou bloody Priſon! Fatall and omnious to Noble Peeres: Within the giltie Cloſure of thy Walls, Richard the second here was hauks to death: And for more fluid to thy diſmal Seat, We give to thee one giltie blood to drink. Grey. Now Margaret Caple is fau'd upon our Heads, When these exclaimed on Halbergs you, and I; For haunding by, when Richard lab'd her Sonne, Enters. Then cut'd five Richard, Then cut'd thee Buckingham, Then cut'd thee Halbergs, Then cut'd thee Halbergs, Oh remember God, To heare her prayer for them, as now tor us: And for my Sister, and her Princeſly Sonnes, Be satisfie'd, dear God, with your true blood, Which, as thou know it, vniſually must be splitt. Ratcl. Make haste, the house of death is expire. Enters. Come Grey, come Vaughan, let us here embrace. Farewell, unti we meet againe in Heauen.

Exeunt.
Enter Buckingham, Darby, Halling, Bishop of Ely, Norfolk, Ratcliffe, Lunch, with others, at a Table.

Haft. Now Noble Peers, the cause why we are met, is to determine of the Coronation:

In God’s Name speak, when is the Royal day?

Buck. Is all things ready for the Royal time?

Darb. It is, and wants but nomination.

Ely. To morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the Lord Protector minds herein? Who is most inward with the Noble Duke?

Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest of your minde.

Buck. We know each other’s faces: for our Hearts, he knows no more of mine, than I of yours.

Or I of his, my Lord, then you o’re mine:

Lord Halling, you and he are near in love.

Haft. I thank my Grace, I know he loves me well:

But for his purpose in the Coronation, I have not found him, he did deliver’d

His gracious pleasure everywhere:

But you, my Honourable Lords, may name the time,

And in the Duke’s behalf I give my Voice,

Which I presume he’ll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happy time here comes the Duke himself.

Rich. Most Noble Lords, and Counsellors all, good morrow: I have been a long sleeper: but I trust,

My absence doth neglect no great designe,

Which by my presence might have beene concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your Q. my Lord,

Williams, Lord Halling had pronounced your part;

I mean your Voice, for Crowning of the King.

Rich. Then my Lord Halling, no man might be bolder,

His Lordship knows me well, and loves me well,

My Lord of Ely, when I was left in Holborne,

I saw good Strawberries in your Garden there,

I doe believe you, fend for some of them.

Ely. Mary and will, my Lord, with all my heart.

Exit Bishop.

Rich. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. Curteis hath founded Hallings in our business,

And finds the trusty Gentleman to be;

That he will lose his Head, ere give content;

His Matters Child, as worshipfully he teares it;

Shall lose the Royallie of Englands Throne.

Buck. Withdraw your ftele a while, Ie goe with you.

Exit.

Dark. We have not yet set downe this day of Triumph:

To morrow, in my judgement, is too sudden,

For I myself am not so well provid’d,

As else I would have, were the day prolong’d;

Enter the Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Gloster?

I have sent for these Strawberries,

His Grace looks cheerfully & smooth this morning.
that ye might well have signified the same unto the Citizens, who hastily may misconfer on him, and waylie his death.

[Enter, my good Lord, our Grace worlds fulle ferue,
As well as I had scene, and heard him (speake);
And doe not doubts, right Noble Princes both,
But Ie acquaine our disouis Citizens
With all your inst proceedings in this cafe,

[Exit.]

[Rich.]

[Exeunt.]

[The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham in rustick Armour,

Richard. Come Couthin,
Canst thou quake, and change thy colour,
Murther thy breath in middle of a word,
And then againe begin, and stop againe,
As if thou were distraight, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tur, I can counterview the deepes Tragedian,
Speake, and looke backe, and prye on euerie side,
Tremble and flite agast of a Straw:
Intending deepe suspition, gally Looken
Are at my feruice, like enforced Smiles; And both are ready in their Offices,
At any time to grace my Stratagemes.

But what, is Catesby gone?

Rich. He is, and, fee he brings the Maior along.

Enter the Maior, and Catesby.

Buck. Lord Maior.

Rich. Looko to the Draw-Stidge there.

Buck. Hearke, a Drumme.

Rich. Catesby, o'er-look the Walls.

Buck. Lord Maior, the reason we haue fent.

Rich. Looke back, defend thee, here are Enemies.

Buck. God and our Innocencie defend, and guard us.

The Maior and Catesby, with Hastings Head.

Rich. Be patient, they are friends: Raitcily, and Lionll.

Lionll. Here is the Head of that dyabol Traylor,
The dangerous and vnrightfuled Hastings.

Rich. So deare I wold, the man, that I must wepe:
I took him for the plainest harmeless Creature,
That breath'd upon the Earth; a Christia.
Made him my Booke, wherein my soule recorded
The Historie of all her secret thoughts.
So smooth he daw'd his Vice with flew of Verse,
That his apparent open Guilt omitted,
I meant, his Confrontation with Shores Wife,
He held from all attender of subjects.

Tark. Well, well, this was the coueri{d deizled Traylor
That every one.

Would you imagine, or almoft believe,
Were not, that he was at preent:
We live to tell it, that the subtil Traylor
This day had plotted, in the Counsell-Houfe,
To murther me, and my good Lord of Gloffor.

Maior. Had he done fo?

Buck. What thinkes you we are Turkes, or Infidels?
Or that we would, against the forme of Law,
Proceed thus rashly in the Villaines death,
But that the extreme peril of the cafe,
The Peace of England, and our Perions estate,
Enforced us to this Execution,

Maior. Now faire beafl you, he deferved his death,
And your good Grace both have well proceeded,
To warne the Tralyors from the like Attemps.

Buck. I neuer look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mafterlee Shore:
Yet had we not determ'd, if he should dye,
Vntil your Lordship came to see his end,
Which now the loaing hate of these our friends,
Something against our meaning, have prevented; Because, my Lord, I would have had you hear'd
The Traylor speake, and temporallly confesse
The manner and the purpuse of his Treasons:

Enter a Sermoner.

Ser. Here is the Indicnt of the good Lord Hastings,
Which in a fea Hand fairely is engross'd,
That it may be to day reade or in Paper.

And mark how well the fequest hanges together:
Eleuen hours I have pent to write it out,
For yeare-night by Catesby was it sent me,
That precedent was full as long a doing,
And yet within these few hours Hastings liu'd,
Vresaimed, reveres'd, free, at libertie.

Here's a good World the while.
Who is so groffe, that cannot see this palpayle deuise? Yet

The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Yet who so bold, but says he sees it not?
But is the World, and all will come to nought,
When all the dealing must be seen in thought. Exit.

Enter Richard and Buckingham at several Doors.

Richard. How now, how now, what say the Citizens?
Buck. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord,
The Citizens are mum, say not a word.
Richard. Touch ye the Baffardie of Edwards Children?
Buck. I did, with his Contract with Lady Lucy,
And his Conspicacy by Deputie in France,
This traitor greenneffe of his desire,
And his enforcement of the Cittie Water,
His Tyramie for Trifles, his owne Baffardie,
As being got, your Father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the Duke.
Withall, I did inferre your Lineaments,
Being the right Idea of your Father,
Both in your frame, and Noble will of Minde :
Lay open all your Victorics, and Richesse:
Your Discpline in Warrs, Wildom in Peace,
Your Bountie, Vertue, saile of Humilitie :
Indeed, I see nothing fitting for your purpose,
Virtuous, or fleightly handled in thineourse.
And when my Oracree shot toward end,
I bid them that did lose their Countries good,
Cry, God save Richard, Englands Royall King.
Richard. And did they so?
Buck. No, to God help me, they spoke not a word,
But like Dumbbe Statues, or breathing Stones,
Stand each on other, and look'd deadly pale:
Which when I saw, I reprehended them,
And ask'd the Major, what mean't this wilfull silence?
His answer was, the people were as vied
To be spoke to, but by the Recoreer.
Then he was voug'd to tell me his Tale again:
Thus sayth the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferred,
But nothing spoke, in warrant from himselfe.
When he had done, some followers of mine owne,
At lower end of the Hall, held vp their Caps,
And some tenne voices cry'd, God save King Richard:
And thus I tookook the vantage of those few.
Thankes gentl Citizens, and friends, quoth I,
This general applause, and chearefull flowt,
Argues your wildomse, and your love to Richard.
And even here brake off, and came away.
Richard. What tongue-leffe Blockes were they, that
Would they not speake?
Will not the Major then, and his Brethren, come?
Richard. The Major is here at hand: intend some feare,
Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:
And looke you get a Prayer-Booke in your hand,
And stand between two Church-men, good my Lord,
For on that ground Ie make a holy Decant:
And be not easily wonne to our requets,
Play the Maids part, till answer say, and take it.
Richard. I goe; and if you pleases well for them,
As I can lay thee to my felle, my Lord,
No doubt we bring it to a happy issue.
Richard. Go, go vp to the Leads, the Lord Maior knocks.

Enter the Maior, and Citizens.

Welcome, my Lord, I dance attendance here,
I thinke the Duke will not be spoke withall.

Enter Catesby.

Buck. Now Catesby, what sayes your Lord to my requent?
Catesby. He doth entreat your Grace, my Noble Lord,
To visite him to morrow, or great day:
He is within, with the two reverend Fathers,
Dissolutely bent to Meditation,
And in no Worldly suits would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy Exercit.
Buck. Returnes, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke,
Tell him, my selfe, the Maior and Aldermen,
In deepdes deuines, in matter of great moment,
No little importing then our general good,
Are come to have some Conference with his Grace.
Catesby. He signifieth so much unto him straight. Exit.
Buck. Ah ha, my Lord, this Prince is not an Edward,
He is not llur'd on a lowe Loue-Bed,
But on his Knees, as Meditation:
Not dallying with a Brace of Cirtizens,
But meditating with two deep Deuines:
Not sleeptime, to engroffe his idle Body,
But praying, to enrich his watchfull Soul.
Happie were England, would this braveous Prince
Take on his Grace the Soueraigne therself.
But sure I feare we shall not winne him to it.
Maior. Marty God defend his Grace should say us nay.
Buck. I feare he will: here Catesby comes again.

Enter Catesby.

Now Catesby, what sayes his Grace?
Catesby. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troopes of Citizens, to come to him,
His Grace not being ward'd thereof before:
He cares, my Lord, you meane no good to him.
Buck. Sorry Sir, my Noble Cousin should
Suspect me, that I meane no good to him:
By Heaven, we come to a him in perfect love,
And is once more return'd, and tell his Grace.
Exit.
Richard. When holy and devout Religious men
Are at their Beside, 'tis much to draw them thence,
So sweet is zealous Contemplation.

Enter Richard alio, betwene two Bishops.

Maior. See where his Grace stands, we see two Clergie men.
Buck. Two Props of Vertue, for a Christian Prince,
To stay him from the fall of Vaniety:
And see a booke of Prayer in his hand,
True Ornaments to know a holy man,
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious Prince,
Enduoraul care to our requets,
And pardon vs the interruption
Of thy Denouement, and right Christian Zeale.
Richard. My Lord, there needs no such Apolodle :
I doe before your Grace to pardon me,
Who earneth in the servise of my God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends,
But leaning this, what is your Graces pleasure?
Buck. Even that (I hope) which pleaseth God above,
And all good men, of this vngovern'd lie.
Richard. I doe fulfille I have done some offence,
That seeming disgracious in the Cities eye,
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

12

Buck, You

III. vi. 12—III. vii. 112

545
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Buck. You have, my Lord:
Would it might please your Grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault.
Of the Supreme Seat, the Throne Mosteely full,
The Sacred Office of your Ancients,
Your State of Fortune, and your Draw of Birth,
The Lineall Glory of your Royall House,
To the corruption of a blest Gift Stock,
Whiles in the mildnesse of your heele thoughts,
Which here we waken to our Countreys good.
The Noble He that want his proper Limes:
His Face defaced with Shames of Infamie,
His Royall Stock gralft with ignoble Plants,
And almost shoulterd in the swallowing Gulfe
Of dark Forgetfulness, and deep Oblision,
Which to restore, we earnestly solicite.
Your gracious fritte to take on you the charge
And Kingly Government of this your Land:
Not as Protector, Steward, Substitute,
Or lowly Factor, for another's gaine;
But as successely, from Blood to Blood,
Your Right of Birth, your Emprise, your owne.
For this, comforted with the Citizens,
Your valor, Worthy soul and loving friends,
And by their vehement indignation,
In this sull Calue come in to move your Grace.
Rich. I cannot tell if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speake in your reproude,
Helt fitteth my Degree, or your Condition;
If to answere, you might haply thinke,
Tongue-y'd Ambition, not replying yecleld
To breare the Golden Yoke of Sovereignity,
Which fondly you would here impose on me.
If to reprouce you for this fuit of yours,
So tofond with your faithfull loose to me,
Then on the other fides check'd my friends.
Therefore to speake, and so avoid the fuit,
And then in speacking, not to incure the least,
Definitely thus answer you,
Your hand deferres my thankes, but my defe
Vimentable, stamnes your high rekap.
First, if all Obstacles were cut away,
And that my Path were even to the Crowne,
As the ripe Reuenues, and due of Birth:
Yet so much is my pouerite of spirit,
So mightie, and so manie my defe
That I would rather hide me from my Greatnesse,
Being a Barke to brooke no mightie Sea;
Then in my Greatnesse couet to be hid,
And in the vapoure of my Glory mutheled.
But God be thank'd, there is no need of me,
And much I need to helpe you, were there need:
The Royall Treasur left vs Royall Fruit,
Which is gott by the bleeding bowres of time,
With spill, becom the Seat of Maiestie,
And make (no doubt) as happy by his Reigne.
On him I lay that you woll lay on me,
The Right and Fortune of his happy Starres,
Which God defend that I shoulde wong from him.
Buck. My Lord, this argues Confidence in your Grace,
But the repects thereof are nice, and trivial,
All engagements well considerd.
You say that Edward is your Brothers Sonne,
So say we too, but not by Edward's Wife:

For first was he contract to Lady Lewes,
Your Mother bate a Wifnesse to his Vow,
And afterward by substittute betold'd
To Donna, Sitter to the King of France.
Thefe both put of, a poore Petitioner,
A Care-cr added to many Somers,
A Beautie-winning, and disreftred Widow,
Even in the after-moone of her bed days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton Eye,
Seduc'd the pitch, and height of his degree,
To base declension, and loath'd Bigamie.
By her, in her unlawful Bed, he got
This Edward, whom our Manners call the Prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Such that for reverence to some alue,
I gave a sparing limit to my Tongue.
Then good, my Lord, take to your Royall selfe
This proffer'd benefit of Digestion:
If not to blesse vs and the Land, withall,
Yet to draw forth your Noble Ancifte
From the corruption of abusing times,
Vnfo a Lineall true derived coufre.

Maur. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entreat you,
Buck. Refute not, mightie Lord, this proffer'd love.
Catesb. O make them joyfull, grant their lawfull fuit.

The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Book. To morrow then we will attend your Grace, And do most joyfully we take our leave.
Riche. Come, let's to our holy Workes againe. Farewell my Cousins, farewell gentle friends.

Enter the Queen, Anne Duchiess of Gloucester, the Duchiess of York, and Marguerit Dorset.

Anne. God give your Grace both, a happy day. And a joyfull time of day.
Que. As much to you, good Sisters; whither away?
Anne. No farther then the Tower, and as I guess, Upon the like devotion as your felices, To gratulate the gentle Princes there.
Que. Kind Sister thanks, we're at enter all together.

Enter the Lieutenant.

And in good time, here the Lieutenant comes. Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the Prince, and my young Sonne of York?
Lieut. Right well, dear Madame: by your patience, I may not suffer you to visit them, The King hath fisrily charged the contrary.
Que. The King? who's that?
Lieut. I mean, the Lord Protector.
Que. The Lord protect him from that Kingly Title. Hath he fet bounds between their love, and me? I am their Mother, who shall scarce be from them?
Duch. Turke. I am their Fathers Mother, I will see them.
Anne. Their Aunt I am in law, in love their Mother; Then bring me to their sights, Ile bear thine blame, And take thy Office from thee, on my perill.
Lieut. No, Madame, no; I may not leave it to: I am bound by Oath, and therefore pardon me.
Exit Lieutenant.

Enter Stanley.

Stanley. Let me but meet you Ladies one howre hence, And Ie salute your Grace of Yorke: a Mother, And recount you looker on of two faire Queenes, Come Madame, you must straight to Westminister, There to be crowned Richd. Royall Queene.
Que. Alas, my Lance slinder, That my pen heart may have some scope to hear, Or else I swoone with this dead-killing news.
Anne. Despitfull tidings, O upbraiding newes.
Dorset. Be of good cheare: Mother, how fares your Grace?
Que. O Dorset, speake not to me, get thee gone, Death and Destruction dogges thee at thy heelles, Thy Mothers Name is ominous to Children.

If thou wilt our-stip Death, gae errose the Seas, And lie with Richmond, from the reach of Hell.
Que. Ily thee, hye thee from this slaughter-house, Left thou encreas the number of the dead, And make me dye the thrall of Margarets Curfe, Nor Mother, Wife, nor Englands countned Queene.
Stanley. Full of wife care, is this your counsafe, Madame: Take all the swift advantage of the hoovers, You shall have Letters from me to thy Sonne, In thy behalfe, to meet you on the way:
Be not to tarde by untune delay.
Duch. Turke. O till dispeering Vicnie of Miserie, O my accursed Wome, the Bed of Death! A Cockatrice halfl thou hast to the World, Whose vnaintoild Eye is murtherous.
Stanley. Come, Madame, come, I in all haste was sent.
Anne. And I with all wailing gresse will goe.
Que. Would to God, that the inclusive Verge
Of Golden Metall, that must round my Brow, Were red hot Steel, to seare me to the Braines, Anonyed let me be with deadly Venome, And dyre ere men can say, God saue the Queene, Que. Go! goe, goe, poure soule, I enue not thy glory, To feed my humor, with thy telle no harme.
Anne. No, why? When he that is my Husband now, Come to me, as I followd Henрес Curfe, When fierce the blood was well waists from his hands, Which issu'd from my other Angell Husband, And that deare Saint, which then I weeping follow'd: O, when I lay I look'd on Richard's Face, This was my Wifhe: 3be thou (quoth 1) accurfi,
For making me, fo young, fo old a Widow:
And when thou wentst, let sorrow haunt thy Bed; And be thy Wife, if any be for end, More miserable, by the Life of thee, Then thou halfe made me, by my deare Lords death.
Que. I can repeat this Curfe againe, Within so small a time, my Womans heart
Groffely grew captive to his honey words,
And proud the libicit of mine owne Souls Curfe, Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest:
But never yet one howre in his Bed
Did I enjoy the golden deaw of Eper, But with his timorous Dreams was still awak'd, Besides, he hates me for my Father Warrickes, And will (no doubt) shortly be rid of me.
Que. Poore heart adieu, I pritty thee complaining.
Anne. No more then, with my soule I mourn for yours.
Dorset. Farewell, thou sorrowfull welcomer of glory.
Que. Adieu, poore soule, that tak's thy leave of it.
Que. Go thou to Richmond, & good fortune guide thee,
Go thou to Richard, and good Angels tend thee, Go thou to Sanctuarie, and good thoughts positiue thee, To my Grace, where peace and rest lie with mee.
Eightie odd yeares of sorrow haue I fene,
And each howres joy wrackt with a wecke of tene.
Que. Stay, yet looke backe with mee unto the Tower.
Pitty, you ancient Stones, that are no more Babes,
Whom Euen hath immur'd within your Walls,
Rough Cradle for such little prettie ones,
Rude ragged Nurfe, old fullen Play-fellow,
For tender Princes: vie my Babes well;
So foolish Sorrowes bids your Stories farewell.

Exit.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Scena Secunda.

Sound a Serene. Enter Richard in pomp, Buckingham, Catesby, Ratcliff, Lowe.

Rich. Stand all apart, Cousin of Buckingham.

Buck. My gracious Sovereigne.

Rich. Give me thy hand.

Thus high, by thy advice, and thy applause,
Is King Richard feared:
But shall we waste these Glories for a day?
Or shall they laft, and we receive in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last.

Rich. All Buckingham, now doe I play the Touch,
To trie if thou be earnest Gold indeed:
Young Edward lives, thinke now what I would speake.

Buck. Say on my loving Lord.

Rich. Why Buckingham, I say I would be King.

Buck. Why so you are, my thrice-renowned Lord.

Rich. Ha! am I King? tis so; but Edward lives.

Buck. True, Noble Prince.

Rich. O bitter confection!

That Edward still should live true Noble Prince,
Cousin, thou wait not to be so dull!
Shall I be plain? I with the Battards dead,
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be briefe.

Buck. Your Grace may doe your pleasure.

Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all else, thy kindnesse freezes:

Say, haue I thy consent, that they shall dye?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pawfe, deare Lord,
Before I positively speake in this:

I will refuse you herein pretend.

Entr'acte.

Catesby. The King is angry, he gnaws his Lippe.

Rich. I will consuerre with Iron-witted Fools,
And unrespechue Boyes: none are for me,
That looke into me with considerate eyes,
High-reaching Buckingham growes circumpec't.

Rich. Know'lt thou not any, whom corrupting Gold
Will tempt into a false exploit of Death?

Page. I know a discontented Gentleman,
Whose humble manners match not his haughtie spirits:
Gold were as good as twenty Otors,
And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.

Rich. What is his Name?

Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tyrrel.

Rich. I partly know the man: guee call him hither,

Boy. Exit.

The deepe resolving within Buckingham,
No more shall be the neighbor to my confiders.
Haste he long held out with me, why'st thou,
And flope he now for breath? Well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanley, what's the news?

Stanley. Know my loving Lord, the Marquesse Dorset
As I breake, is fled to Richmond,
In the parts where he abides.

Rich. Come hither Catesby, rumor is afraid,
That Anne my Wife is very grievous sick.
I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some cheane poor Gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence Daughter:
The Boy is foolish, and I feare not him.

Looke how thou dream'tst: I say again, goe out,
That Anne, my Queene, is sicke, and like to dye.
About it, for it stands me much vpon
To stop all hope, whose growth may dammage me.
I must be married to my Brothers Daughter,
Or else my Kingdome standts on blitasse Glasse:
Murther her Brothers, and then marry her,
Uncertaine way of gaine. But I am so
In faire in blood, that sinne will pluck on sinne,
Tear-falling Pittie dwells not in this Eye.

Enter Tyrrel.

Is thy Name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

Rich. Art thou indeed?

Tyr. Proute me, my gracious Lord,

Rich. Dar'st thou reloue to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you:

But I had rather kill two enemies.

Rich. Why then thou haft it: two deepe enemies,

Foes to my Reit, and my sweete footsteps disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deale vpon:

Tyrrel, I mean those Battards in the Tower,

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And foone I tend you from the treare of them.

Rich. Thou fong'lt sweet Muzique:

Heare, come hither Tyrrel,

Goe by this token: rife, and lend thine Ear, Whispers.

There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will dispatch it straight.

Enter Buckingham.

Rich. My Lord, I have confider'd in my minde,
The late request that you did found me in.

Rich. Well, let that rest: Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Rich. I heare the newes, my Lord.

Stanley, hee is your Wives Sonne: well, looke vnto it.

Rich. My Lord, I shynme the gift, my dace by promife,
For which your Honor and your Faith is pown'd,
Th'Earledome of Hereford, and the mouchables,
Which you have promised I shall possesse.

Rich. Stanley looke to your Wife: if the councty

Letters to Richmond, you shall answere it.

Rich. What say'st thou to your Highnesse to my next request?

Tyr. I doe remember me, Henry the Sixth.

Did pronounce, that Richmond should be King,
When Richmond was a little poore boy,

A King perhaps.

Rich. May it please you to refuse me in my suit.

Rich. Thou troublest me, I am not in the vaine. Exit.

Rich. And is it thus? repayes he my deepe service
With such contempt? made I him King for this?
O let me thinke on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecon, while my fearfull Head is on.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody A3 is done,
The most arch deed of pittious malware

That

That ever yet this Land was guilty of: Digbyton and Forreath, who I did suborne
To do this piece of ruthless Butchery,
Albeit they were feteth Villaines, bloody Dogges, Melted with tenderneffe, and miltie communion,
Yet like to Children, in their deaths sad Story.
O thus (quoth Digbyton) say the gentle Babes: Thus, thus (quoth Forreath) girdling one another Within their Alabaster innocent Armes: Their lips were foure red Roses on a stalk, And in their Summer Beauty kiss each other. A Book of Prayers on their pillow lay, Which one (quoth Forreath) almost chang'd my minde: But oh the Duell, there the Villaine fopp: When Digbyton thus told on, we smothered The most repugnous sweet workes of Nature, That from the prime Creation ere the framed, Hence both are gone with Confidence and Remorse, They could not speake, and so I left them both, To beare this yeelding to the bloody King.

Enter Richard.

And heere he comes. All health my Sovereigne Lord: Ric. Kinde Turell, am I happy in thy Newes,
Tir. If to have done the things you gaue in charge, Beget your hapineffe, be happy then, For it is done. Rich. But didst thou see them dead. Tir. I did my Lord. Rich. And buried gentle Turell. Tir. The Chaplaine of the Tower hath buried them, But where (say the truth) I do not know. Rich. Come to me Turell, loue me, and after Supper, When thou shalt tell the proceffe of their death, Meane time, but thinke how I may doe the good, And be inheritor of thy desirs.
Farewell till then. Tir. I humbly take my leve.
Rich. The Sonne of Clarence have I pent vp close, His daughter meanly haue I marth'd in marriage, The Sons of Edward to Abrahams becomm'd, And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night, Now for I know the Britaine Richmond ysmes At yong Elizabeth my brothers daughter, And by that knot looks more strongly on the Crowne, To her go I joyfully whining woode.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord, Rich. Good or bad newes, that thou com't in so blundredly?
Rat. Bad news my Lord, Clarence is fled to Richmond, And Buckingham backt with the hardy Welfmen Is in the field, and kill his power entrecreseth, Rich. Eli with Richmond troubles me more neere, Then Buckingham and his rath leuat Strength. Come, I have learn'd, that fairefull commenting It leades feruitor to dull delay. Delay les impotent and Snaile-pac'd Beggery: Then stcie expedition on my wing, Ioues Mercury, and Herid for a king: Go rather men: My commodity is my Sheeld, We must be bleeve, when Traitors braue the Field.

Enter old Queen Margaret.

Mar. So now prosperity begins to mellow, And drop into the rotten mouth of death: Here in these Confines fally have I lunk, To watch the waming of mine enemies, A dire induction, an I wintette, And will to France, hoping the consequene Will prove as bitter, blacke, and Tragicall, Withdraw the wretched Margaret, who comes heere?

Enter Dutchesse and Queene.

Que. Ah my poor Prince! ah my tender Babes: My Vndow'd Flowers, now appearing sweetes: If yet your gentle foules flye in the Ayre, And be not fixt in doome perpetuall, Hower about me with your ayery wings, And hearre your mothers Lamentation.
Mar. Hower about her, say that right for right Hath dipt your Infant mame, to Aged night. Dut. So many misteries have cra'd my voyce, That my vve-weared tongue is still and mute. Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead? Mar. Plantagenet doth quith Plantagenet, Edward for Edward, payes a dyng debt. Que. Why didst thou, O God, flye from such gentle Lambs, And throw them in the inriles of the Wolfe? When dipt thou in that, when such a deed was done? Mar. When holy Harry dyed, and my sweet Sonne.
Dut. Dead life, blind fight, poore mortall living ghoul, Woos Scene, Worlds shame, Graces due, by life tirrupts, Briefe abstrakt and record of tedious dayes, Reft thy vrenel on Englands lawfull earth, Unlawfully made drunkne with innocent blood.
Que. Ah, that thou wouldst affronte aboord a Graue, As thou canft yield a melancholly feast. Then would I hide my bones, not leaff them heere, Who hath any cattle to mourne but we? Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reuuent, Gume the beneft of snergicke, And let thy greeues frowne on the vpper hand If sorrow can admit Society, I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him: I had a Husband, till a Richard kill'd him: Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him: Thou hadst a Edward, till a Richard kill'd him.
Dut. I had a Richard too, and thou did't kill him; I had a Rutland too, thou hop'dt to kill him. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, And Richard killed him.
From forth the kennel of thy wombe hast crept A Hell-hound that doth Hunt vs all to death: That Dogge, that had his teeth before his eyes, To worry Lambs, and lap their gentle blood: That foule defayer of Gods handy worke: That reigne in gauded eyes of weeping foules: That excellent grand Tyrant of the earth, Thy wombe let loose to chafe vs to our graves. O vpright, just, and true-disposing God.
How do I thanke thee, that this carnall Curte

The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Prayes on the issue of his Mothers body,
And makes her Puc-fellow with others mone.

Dut. Oh Harries wife, triumph not in thy woes:
God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Mar. Beare with me: I am hungry for retenge,
And now I play me with beholding it.

Thus Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward,
The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward:
Yong Yorke, he is but boote, because both they
Mach't not the high perfection of my loffe.

Thy Clarence he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward,
And the beholders of this franticke play,
Th'adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,Gray,
Vnlimely smother'd in their dusky Graues.

Richard yet lines, Hels blacke Intelligence,
Oney refer'd their Factor, to buy foules,
And send then thither: But at hand, at hand
Infus his pition and vnspilt end.

Earth gapes, Hell burnes, Friends roare, Saints pray,
To haue him sodainly cony'd from hence:
Cancell his bond of life, decree God I pray,
That I may live and say, The Dogge is dead.

To thou didst prophete, this time would come,
That thou woul'dst wish for thee to helpe me cure
That bottell'd Spider, that soule bunch'd back'd Toad.

Mar. I call'd thee then, vaine flourish of my fortune:
I call'd thee then, poore Shadow, painted Queen,
The presentation of but what I was;
The flattering Index of a direfull Pageant;
One head'd high, to be hur'd downe belowe:
A Mother onely mockt with two faire Babes;
A dreame of what thou wait, a garish Flugge
'To be the ayme of every dangerous Shite;
A signe of Dignity, a Breath, a Bubble;
A Queen in itself, onely to fill the Scene.

Where is thy Husband now? Where be thy Brothers?
Where be thy two Sone? Wherein dost thou Joy?
Who fees, and kneells, and sayes, God save the Queen?
Where be the binding Peeres that flatter'd thee?
Where be the thronging Troopes that followed thee?
Decline all this, and see what now thou art.

For happy Wife, a molt distrested Widow:
For joyfull Mother, one that wailes the name:
For one being fued too,one that humbly fees:
For Queene, a very Cassifile, crown'd with care:
For she that found me, now for'ud of me:
For the being feared of all, now fearing one:
For the commanding all, obey'd of none.
Thus hath the course of Justice whirl'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time.
Having no more but Thought of what thou waft.
To torture thee the more, being what thou art,
Thou didst viue thy place, and doth thou not
Viue the soult proportion of my Sorrow
Now thy proud Necke, beare, halfe my burden'd yoke,
From which, even here I lift my wearied head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farwell Yorke's wife, and Queene of my mischance,
That English want, shall make me faile in France.

O thou well skill'd in Curfe,s, day a while,
And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

For there to flepee the night, and full the day:
Compare dead hapinnesse, with living woe:
Thinkst thou thy Babes were fwear'd then they were,
And he that flw them fowler then he is:
Bestring thy loffe, makes the bad easier worke,

Resolving this, will teach thee how to Curse.

Quo. My words are dull, O quicken them with thine.

Mar. Thy woes will make them sharpe,
And pierce like mine.

Exit Margaret.

Dut. Why should calamity be full of words?

Quo. Windy Aturnuries to their Clients Woes,

Ayery succeders of meanstle joyes,

Poore breathing Orasors of miseries,

Let them haue scope, though what they will impart,
Help nothing els, yet do they ease the hart.

Dut. If so then, be not Tongue-ty digo with me,
And in the breath of bitter words, let's smother
My damned Son, that two sweet Sonnes fmother'd,
The Trumpet sounds, be copious in exclames.

Enter King Richard, and his Traine.

Rich. Who intercepts me in my Expedition?

Dut. O Que, that might have intercepted thee
By stranling thee in her accursed wombe,
From all the laughter(With'that thou haft done).

Quo. Had't thou that Forthead with a Golden Crowne
Where't should be branded, if that right were right?

The slaughter of the Prince that ow'd that Crowne,

And the dyre death of my poor Sonnes, and Brothers.

Tell me thou Vailine Que, where are my Children?

Dut. Thou Toad, thou Toad,
Where is thy Brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet his Sonne?

Quo. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan,Gray &

Dut. Where is kinde Hastings?

Rich. A flourisht Trumpeter, strike Alamarm Drummes:

Let not the Haunts hear thee Tell-tale women

Raile on the Lords Annointed, Strike I say,

Flourisht, Alamarmus,

Either be patient, and intreat me fayre,
Or with the clamorous report of Warre,

This will I drowne your exclamations.

Dut. Art thou so Queene?

Rich. L I thanke God, my Father, and your selfe.

Dut. Then patiently hear my impatiance.

Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,

That cannot breake the accents of reproofs.

Dut. O let me speake.

Rich. Do then, but let not your self.

Dut. I will be milde, and gentle in your words.

Rich. And briefly (good Mother) for I am in haft.

Dut. Art thou so haftye? I have ftaid for thee

Enraged, in torment and in agony.

Rich. And can I now at laft comfort you?

Dut. No by the holy Rood, thou know'st it well,

Thou can't on earth, to make the earth my Hell.

A greatre burthen was thy Birth to me,

Tetchy and wayward was thy Infancie.

Thy School-dates frightfull, deep're, wild, and furious,

Thy prime of Manhood, daring, bold, and venturous:

Thy Age confirm'd, proud, subtile, flye, and bloody,

More milde, but yet more harmfull: Kinde in hatred:

What comfortable, and what thou name,

That euer grace'd me with thy company.

Rich. Faith none, but Humphrey Hower,

That call'd thy Grace

To Breakfall once, forth of my company.

If I be to disgracefull in your eye,

Let me march on, and not offend you Madam.

Strike up the Drumme,

Dut. I prythee hear me speake,

Rich.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

Rich. You speake too bitterly.

Dott. Hears me a word:

For I shall never speake to thee againe.

Rich. So.

Dott. Either thou wilt dye by God's inf. ordinance
From this warre thou truely a Conqueror:
Or I with griefe and extreme Age shall perishe,
And never more behold thy face againe.

Therefore take with thee my most greuenesse,
Which in the day of Barzell yeere more then
Then all the complait Armour that thou west off.

My Prayers on the adverter party fight,
And there the little fouler of Edward's Children,
Whisper the Spirits of those Enemies,
And promis them Seraffle and Victory:

Bloody thou art, bloody will thy end:
Shame servest thy life, and doth thy death attend. Exit.

Qu. Though far more canst ye yet much liue, to curie
Abides in me, I say Amen too.

Rich. Stay Madam, I will take a word with you.

I have no more foules of the Royall Blood
For thee to laugher. For my Daughters (Richard)
They shall be praysing Name, not weeping Queens:
And therefore trie not to shut their Flag.

Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,

Virtuous and Faire, Royal and Glorious?

Qu. And must the dye for this? Olet her live,
And He corrupt her Manners, staine her Beauty,
Slander my selfe, as saffe to Edward bed:
Throw over her the vail of Infamy,
So she may live vnscarr'd of bleeding blood,
I will confesse she was not Edward's daughter.

Rich. Wrong not her Byth, she is a Royall Princesse,

To laue her life, He say she is not to.

Rich. Her life is safest only in her byth,
Qu. And only in that safety dyed her Brothers,
Rich. Lose at their Birth, good fairest were opposite.

Qu. No, to their hours, all friends were contrary,

Rich. All wanting is the doome of Deflany,
Qu. True; when unworldly grace makes Delfany,
My Babes were deuined to a fairer death,

If grace had bled thee with a fairer life.

Rich. You speake as if that I had slaine my Cofins?

Qu. Cofins indeed, and by their Vnkle couened,

Of-Comfort, Kindome, Kindred, Freedome, Life,
Whole hand forser lond 'thall their tender hearts,
They head (all indirecly) same direction.

No doubt the dreadful Kniffe was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy stone hard heart,
To retell in the teratels of my Lames.

But this fill of greene, makes wild greene same,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my Bivies,
Till that my Nayles were anchor'd in thine hands:

And in such a deep Seat of death,
Like a poore Birdke, of Care and troubling rest,
Rufi all to pieces on thy Rocky boosoms.

Rich. Madam, for thine I in my enminate
And dangerous face of bloody warrer,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Then ever you and yours by me were harm'd.

Qu. What good is couer'd with the face of heaven,
To be disconuert, that can do me good.

Rich. Th'還沒 of grateful and truckling gentle Lady,

Qu. Up to some Scaffold, there to lose their heads.

Rich. Into the dignity and height of Fortune,

The high Imperial Type of this earthy glory.

Qu. Flatter my sorrow with report of it.
Tell me, what State, what Dignity, what Honor,
Canst thou demyce to any child of mine.

Rich. Then all I haue and my life and all,
Will I withall ladow a child of thine:
So in the Lheet of thy slygy foe,
Thou drownest the fond remembrance of those wrongs,
Which thou supposst I have done to thee.

Qu. Be breve, least that the proceede of thy kindnesse
Last longer telling then thy kindnesse did.

Rich. Then know,
That from my Soule, I loue thy Daughter,

Qu. My daughters Mother thinkes it with her soule.

Rich. What do you think?

Qu. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soule,
So from thy Soules love diidst thou love her Brothers,
And from my hearts love, I do take thee for it.

Rich. Be not so hafty to confound my meaning:
I meant that with my Soule I loue thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queene of England.

Qu. Well then, who shall then staine her King,

Rich. Even he that makes her Queene:
Who else should bee?

Qu. What thou?

Rich. Even for: How thinke you of it?
Qu. How canst thou woo her?

Rich. That I would learne of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Qu. And wilt this learne of me?

Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Qu. Send to her by the man that flew her Brothers,

A pair of bleeding hearts: the one ingrate

Edward and York, then haply will the wepe:
Therefore present to her, as sometime Margerates
Did to thy Father, seepst in Pottland's blood,
A hand-kerccheefe, which fay to her did dreyne
The purple fappe from her sweet Brothers body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall.
If this inducement move her not to lour,
Send her a Letter of thy Noble deeds:
Tell her, thou madst away her Vnkle Clarence,
Her Vnkle Rivers, I (and for her fake)
Madd' a quick enconuansse with her good Aunt Anne.

Rich. You mack me Madam, this not the way
To win your daughter.

Qu. There is no other way,

Valuable thou couldst put on some other shape,
And not be Richard, that hath done all this.

Ket. Say that I did all this for love of her.

Qu. Nay then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee
Having bought love, with such a bloody payole.

Rich. Look what is done, cannot be now amended:
Men shall deale vnadversely sometime,
Which after-hours glues leysure to repent.
If I did take the Kingdome from your Sonnes,
To make amends, He gie it to your daughter:
I fll have keipt the issue of your wombe,
To quicken your enresse, I will begge
Mine yssue of your blood, upon your Daughter.
A Grandams name is little leffe in love,
Then is the dating Title of a Mother;
They are as Children but one steppe below,
Even of your metal, of your very blood.
Of all one paine, fyn for a nighte of groans
Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like forrow.
Your Children were vexation to your youth,
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

But mine shall be a comfort to your Age,
The loise you have, is but a Sonne being King,
And by that loise, your Daughter is made Queene.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept each kindness as I can.

Desire your Sonne, that with a faire full soule
Leads discontented Reppe in Fornaine soyle,
This faire Alliance, quickly shall call home,
To high Promotions, and great Dignity.
The King that calleth your beauteous Daughter Wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Desire, Brother:
Again shall you be Mother to a King,
And all the Ruines of diftressfull Times,
Repays'd with double Riches of Content;
What? we have many goodly days to see;
The liquid drops of Tares that you have seed,
Shall come again, transform'd to Orient Pearl,
Advantaging their Loue, with interest
Often-times double gaine of happinesse,
Go then (my Mother) thy Daughter go,
Make bold her bafefull yeares, with your experience,
Prepare her estes to hear a Woers Tale:
Put in her tender heart, th'afpiring Flame
Of Golden Sovereignty: Acquit the Princeffe
With the sweet silent hours of Marriage joyes:
And when this Arme of mine hath chastised
The petty Rebel, dull-brain'd Baylyham,
Before my Triumphant Garlands will I come,
And leade thy daughter to a Conquerors bed:
To whom I will retain my Conquest wonne,
And the faire sole Violcre, Caesar Caesar.

Q. What were it I beseech to thy Father Brothe
Would be her Lord? Or shall I say her Vnkle?
Or heath the word her Brothers and her Vnkle?
Vnder what title shall I was for thee,
That God, the Law, my Honor, and her Loue,
Can make feme pleasing to her tender estes?
Rich Inferre faire Englandes peace by this Alliance.

Q. Which the shall purchase with this lafiting ware.
Rich Tell her, the King that may command, interest.
Q. That as her hands, which the kings King forvs.
Rich Say she shall be a High and Mighty Queene.
Q. To the Tale, as her Macht doth authorize a
Rich Say I will loose her estes laftingly.
Q. But how long shall that title euer laft?
Rich Sweetly in force, vnto her faire loues end.
Q. But how long fairly shall her sweet life laft?
Rich As long as Heauen and Nature lengthen it.
Q. As long as Hell and Richard like of it.
Rich Say I her Sovereigne, am her Subiect low.
Q. But the your Subiect,clothes such Sovereignty.
Rich Be eloquent in my behalfe to her,
Q. An hometale speedes best, being plainly told.
Rich Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale.
Q. Plaine and not hometale laftingly a Bykle.
Rich Your Reasons are too shallow, and to quicke.
Q. Or my Reasons are too deep and dead,
Rich Say, I her Sovereigne, am her Subiect low.
Q. But the your Subiect,clothes such Sovereignty.
Rich Be eloquent in my behalfe to her,
Q. An hometale speedes best, being plainly told.
Rich Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale.
Q. Plaine and not hometale, to harsh a Bykle.
Rich, Your Reasons are too shallow, and to quicke.
Q. Or my Reasons are too deep and dead,
Rich Say, I her Sovereigne, am her Subiect low.
Q. But the your Subiect, clothe such Sovereignty.
Rich Be eloquent in my behalfe to her,
Q. An hometale speedes best, being plainly told.
Rich Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale.
Q. Plaine and not hometale lastingly a Bykle.
Rich, Your Reasons are too shallow, and to quicke.

Q. By nothing, for this is no Oath:
Thy George prophane, hath left his Lordly Honor;
Thy Garter blemish'd, pawn'd his Kingly Virte;
Thy Crowne vnder'd, disgrace'd his Kingsly Glory:
If something thou wouldst swear to be beleu'd,
Sware then by something, that thou haft not wrong'd.
Rich, Then by my Selle.
Q. Thy Selle is false, mis'd.
Rich, Now by the World.
Q. This full of thoy soule wrongs.
Q. Thy life hath it disforn'd.
Rich, Why then, by Heauen.
Q. Heavens wrong is most of all:
If thou didst feat to break an Oath with him,
The vntiety the King and my husband may cost
Thou hadst not broken, nor my Brothers died.
If thou hadst feard to break an oath by him,
Th'imperiall mettall, circling now thy head,
Had gras'd the tender temples of my Child,
And both the Princes had bene breathing here,
Which now two tender Bed-fellowes for duft,
Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormes.
What can't thou sweare by now.
Rich, The time to come.

Q. That thou haft wronged in the time ope-past.
For I my selfe have many teares to wash
Hereafter time, for time past, reproach'd by the,
The Children line, whose Fathers thou haft slau'd,
Vnguarded youth, to waile it with their age:
The Parents tears, whose Children thou haft brot her,
Old barren Plants, to waile it with their Age.
Sweet time not by time to come, for that thou haft
Mis'd ev're w'd, by times ill-w'd reap'd.
Rich As I intend to prosper, and repent:
So thistle I in my dangerous Affayres
Of hoftile Armes: My selfe, my selfe confound:
Heaven and Father made me happy hours.
Day,yeild me not thy lights, nor Night, thy reft.
Be opposite all Planets of good lucke
To my proceeding, if with deere hearts laue,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beautifull Princesly louer.
In her, consults my Happinesse, and thine:
Without her, followes to my selfe, and thee;
Her death, the Land, and many many Plantes,
Death, Desolation,Ruine, and Decay:
I cannot be auoys'd, but by this:
It will not be auoys'd, but by this.
Therefore desirous Mother(I must call you so)
Be the Attorney of my louer to ho:
Place what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my defects, but what I will deforme.
Vrge the Neceffity and State of times,
And be not peesifull, in great daynes.
Q. Shall I be tempted of the Diuell thus?
Rich, If the Diuell tempt you to do good.
Q. Shall I forget my felue, to be my felue.
Rich, If thy felues remembrance wrong thy selue.
Q. Yet thou didst kill my Children.
Rich, But in thy daughters wombs I bury them.
Where in that Neft of Spicery they will breed
Selues of themfelles, to your recomfort.
Q. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
Rich, And be a happy Mother by the deed.
Q. I go, write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me the mind.
Exit Q. Rich, Besee her my true louers keepe, and do farewel.
Relenting Foole, and slau'd-changing Woman.
The Life and Death of Richard the Third.

How now, what news?

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. Moth mightie Soueraigne, on the Welterne Coast
Raleigh a puissant Naue: to our Shore,
Throng many doubfull hollow-hearted friends,
Vraam, and woe was I'd to bear them backe.
'Tis thought, that Ricmond is their Admiral:
And there they stand, ever the side
Of Buckingham, to welcome them afoire.
Ric. Some light-foot friend pos't to the Duke of Norfolk:
Ratcliffe thy selfe, or Catsby, where is he?

Cat. Here, my good Lord.

Ric. Catsby, flye to the Duke.

Cat. I will, my Lord, with all convenient haste.

Ric. Catsby come hither, pos'te to Salisbury:
When thou com'st thither, Dull vnnindful Villain,
Why stay'st thou there, and go'st not to the Duke?

Cat. First, mighty Liege, tell me your Highnesse pleasure,
What from your Grace I shall deliver to Salisbury.

Ric. O true, good Catsby, bid him leaue straight
The greatest strength and power that he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury,

Cat. I goe.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I doe at Salisbury?

Ric. Why, what wouldst thou doe there, before I goe?

Rat. Your Highness told me I should pos'te before,
Ric. My minde is chang'd:—

Enter Lord Stanley.

Stanley, what newes with you?

Stan. None, good my Liege, to pleasure you with your hearing,
Nor none to bad, but well may be reported.

Ric. Hoyday, a Riddle, neither good nor bad:
What need it thou runne so many miles about,
When thon mayest tell thy Tale the nearest way?

One more, what newes?

Stan. Richmond is on the Seas.

Ric. There let him finde, and be the Seas on him,
Whose-liuter'd Runningate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mightie Soueraigne, but by guesse,
Ric. Well, as you guesse.

Stan. Stood vp by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,
He makes for England, here to clame the Crowne.

Ric. Is the Chayre empli'd in the Sword vnway'd?
Is the King dead? the Empire vnposset?
What Heire of York is there alue, but wee?
And who is England's King, but great York's Heire?
Then tell me, what makes he upon the Seas?

Stan. Vnlesse for that, my Liege, I cannot guesse,
Ric. Vnlesse for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot guesse wherefore the Welchman comes,
Thou wilt resole, and five to him, I feare.

Stan. No, my good Lord, therefore mistrust me not,
Ric. Where is thy Power then, to beat him back?
Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers?
Are they nor now upon the Welterne Shore,
Safe-conducing the Rebels from then Slippers?

Stan. No, my good Lord, my friends are in the North.

Ric. Cold friends to me; what do they in the North,
When they should ferue their Soueraigne in the Weft?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King:
Pleseth your Majestie to give me leave,
Ile muller vp my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where, and what time your Majestie shall please.

Ric. I, thou wouldst be gone, to lyone with Buckingham:
But he not truft thee.

Stan. Moth mightie Soueraigne,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubfull,
I neuer was, nor neuer will be faile.

Ric. Gooe then, and muller men; but leave behind
Your Sonne George Stanley: looke your heart be firme,
Or else his heads assuredness is but fraile.

Stan. So deale with him, as I prone true to you,

Exit Stanley.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My gracious Soueraigne, now in Deuonshire,
As I by friends am well advetis'd,
Sir Edward Courthерь, and the haughtie Prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder Brother,
With many more Confederates, are in Armes.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. In Kent, my Liege, the Armie of great Buckingham.
Riche out ye, Oliveres, nothing but Songs of Death,
He straketh him.

There, take thou that, till thou bring better newes.

Mes. The newes I haue to tell your Majestie,
Is, that by hidden Floods, and fall of Waters,
Buckinghams Armie is dispers'd and scatter'd,
And he himselfe wander'd away alone,
No man knowes whither.

Ric. I cry thee mercie:
There is my Purse, to cure that Blow of thine.
Hath any well-adviz'd friend proclaym'd
Reward to him that brings the Traytor in?

Mes. Such Proclamation hath been made, my Lord.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. Sir Thomas Luke, and Lord Marquessse Dorset,
'Tis said, my Liege, in Yorkshire are in Armes:
But this good comfort bring I to your Highness,
The Britaine Naue is dispers'd by Tempeff.

Richmond in Dorsetshire sent out a Boate
Vnto the shore, to take those on the Banks,
If they were his Affilinates, yes, or no?
Who answered them, they came from Buckingham.

Ric. Upon his parte: he misruffing them,
Hove a fayle, and made his course a gaine for Britaine.

Ric. March on, march on, since we are vp in Armes,
If not to fight with foreign Enemies,
Yet to beat downe those Rebels here at home.

Enter Catsby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the best newes: that the Earle of Richmond

Scena Quarta.

Enter Derby and Sir Christopher.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the flye of the most deadly Bore,
My Sonne George Stanley is frankt vp in hold:
If I resolt, off goes yong Georger head,
The fear of that, holds off my present ayde,
So get thee gone: commend me to thy Lord.

Withall say, that the Queene hath heartely confented
He should enpoyse Elizabeth her daughter.
But tell me, where is Princess Richmond now?

Chris. At Peenbrooke, or at Hertford Wett in Wale,
Der. What men of Name reftor to him.

Chris. Sir Walter Heron, a renowned Souldier,
Sir Galle Taffard, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, to doubtled Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Ricke of Thomas, with a valiant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.

Der. Will he ye thee to thy Lord: I kisse his hand,
My Letter will reflove him of my minde.

Farewell. \[Exeunt.\]

Altus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Buckingham with Hallernd, &c. to Execution.

Bec. Will not King Richard let me speake with him?
Sir, No my good Lord, therefore be patient.

Bec. Hoppings, and Edwards children, Gris & Tourns,
Holy King Henry, and day faire Some Edward,
Canyone, and all that have embroaird
By vnder-hand corrupled feule inaultice,
If that your moody difcontented foules,
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge make my deffination.
This is All-fooles day (Fellow, is it not?)

Sir. It is.

Bec. Why then All-fooles day, is my bodies doomsday
This is the day, which in King Edwards time
I wold might fall on me, when I was found
Falle to his Children, and his Wves Allies,
This is the day, whereon I wold to fall,
By the false Faith of him whom most I trusted.
This, this All-fooles day to my Restfull Soule,
Is the determination of my wrongs:
That high All-feer, which I dalieth with,

Hath turn'd my fained Prayer on my head,
And given in earnest, what I begge in leeff.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turne their owne points in their Masters boomes.
Thus Margaret curse falleth heavy on my necke:
When he (quoth he) shall split thy heart with forrow,
Remember Margaret was a Prophetess.
Come leade me Officers to the blocke of flame,
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.

Exeunt Buckingham with Officers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Richmond, Oxford, Blunt, Herbert, and others, with drum and colours.

Richm Fellowes in Armes, and my molt loving Friends
But to understand the caucas of Tyranny,
Thus faire into the bowels of the Land,
Hauwe we marcht on without impediment:
And here receive we from our Father Stanley
Lines of faire comfort and encouragement:
The wretched, bloody, and wurgling Beare,
That sport if your Summer Fields, and fruitful Vines
Swollent your warm blooke-like woule, and makes his trouch.
In your embowelles boomes:
This soule Swame is now even in the Centre of this Life,
Ne're to the Towne of Leicesters, as we learn:
From Tamworth in thither, but one days march.
In Gods name cherely on, confrongious Friends,
To recep the Pauell of perpetual peace,
By this one bloody tryall of harpe Warre.

Oxf. Entry mans Conference is a foulhard and Men,
To fight against this guilty Homicide.
Her, I doubt not but his Friends will come to vs.

Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for fear,
Which in his deere and wole will flye from him.

Richm. All for our vantage, then in Godes name march,
True Hope is for it, and flyes with Thee with Inge,
Kings it makes Gods, and the Soule creatures Kings.

Exeunt Omnes.

Enter King Richardus Armes with Norfolk, Ratcliffe, and the Earle of Saurrey.

Rab. Here pitch our Tent, when here in Bosworth field,
My Lord or Saurrey, why lacke you so fad?

Sir. My heart is ten times lighter then my looke,
Rab. My Lord of Norfolk.
Nor. Heree most gracionce Liege.
Rab. Norfolk, we must have knockes:
Ha, must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take my loving Lord.

Rab. Vp with my Tent, heree will I lye to night,
But where to morrow? Well all's one for that.
Who hath defined the number of the Traitors & Nor.
Sixe or seven thousand is their armed power.
Rab. Why our Barrailles troubles that account:
Befides, the Kings name is a Tower of strenght,
Which stonde into the aduerser Fuchon went.
Vp with the Tent: Come Noble Gentleman,
Let vs survey the vantage of the ground,
Call for some men of found discretion.

Let's
Enter Richard, Ratscliff, Norcliffe, & Catesby.

Rich. What is a Clocke? Cat. It is Supper time my Lord, it's nine a clocke.

King. I will not sup to night,

Give me some Bake and Paper:

What is my Beaver eather then it was?

And all my Armour laid into my Tent:

Cat. It is my Liege of his pride is in readiness.

Rich. Good Norfolk, yee thee to thy charge,

Vse carefull Watch, choos eus trullly Ceninels,

Nor. I goe my Lord.

Rich. Sit with the Lake to morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you my Lord. Exit

Eax. My Lord.

Rich. Send our Purfuitant at Armes

To Stanleys Regiment : bid him bring his power

Before Sun-rising, least his Sonne George fall

Into the blinde Caue of eternall night.

Fill me a Bowl of Wine : Give me a Watch,

Saddle white Scurry for the Field to morrow:

Look that my Stuarts be found, & not too heavy.

Ratscliff.

Cat. My Lord.

Rich. Swill ye the melancholy Lord Northumberland?

Cat. Thomas the Earl of Scurry, and himselfe,

Much about Cock-flute time, from Troope to Troope

Went through the Army, chearig up the Souldiers.

King. So, I am satisfied : Give me a Bowl of Wine,

I have not that Alacrity of Spirit,

Not cheere of Minde that I was wont to have.

Set it downe. Is Ink & Paper ready?

Cat. It is my Lord.

Rich. Bid my Guard watch. Leave me.

Ratscliff, about the mid of night come to my Tent

And helpe to arm me. Leave me I say. Exit Ratscliff.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his Tent.

Der. Fortune, and Victory sit on thy Helme.

Rich. All comfort that the darke night can afford,

Be to thy Perfon, Noble Father in Law.

Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother?

Der. I by Atouneye, bleffe thee from thy Mother,

Who prays continually for Richmondes good:

So much for that. The silent hours fieste on,

And flakie darknesse breaks within the East.

In breewe, for fo the feation bids us be,

Prepare thy Ratsellt early in the Morning,

And put thy Fortune to th'Arbitrement

Of bloody broches, and mortal flaring Warre:

I, as I may, that which I would. I cannot,

With Self deface we shall decease the cause.

As ayde thee in this doublefull shoole of Armes,

But on thy side I may not be too farward,

Left being freene, thy Brother, tender George

Be executed in his Fathers flight.

Farewell the leyfure, and the fearfull time

Carve of the ceremonious Vowes of Love,

And argue yerchange of sweete Dulcere,

Which so long digund Friends should dwelle upon:

God giue vs leyfure for these rites of Love.

Once more Adieu, be valiant, and speed well.

Rich. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment:

Lie truie with troubled note, to take a Nap,

Lefte leade thinke me downe to morrow,

When I should mount with winges of Victory.

Once more, good night kinders Lords and Gentlemen.

Exeunt. Mart Lipsham.

O thou, whose Captain I account my selfe,

Look on my Forces with a gracious eye :

Put in their handes thy blouding Irons of wrath,

That they may crush downe with a heavy fall,

The warping Helmets of our Adveraries :

Make vs thy ministers of Chastisement,

That we may praise thee in thy victorie :

To thee I do commend my watchfull loue,

Ere I let fall the winnowes of mine eyes :

Sleeping and waking, oh defend me full.

Enter the Ghost of Prince Edward, Sonne to

Henry the fift.

Oo to Ri. Let me fit heavy on thy foule to morrow:

Thynke how thou flabb'st me in my prime of youth

At Teneksbury : Dispaire therefore, and dye.

Ghost to Richm. Be chearefull Richmond,

All the Wronged Soules

Of butcherd Princes, fight in thy behalfe :

King Hearier tille Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of Henry the fift.

Ghost. When I was mortall, my Anointed body

By thee was punched full of hole.

Though on the Tower, and me : Dispaire, and dye,

Harry the fift, bids thee dispaire, and dye.

To Richm. Venous and holy be thou Conqueror:

Harry that prophesieth thou shouldst be King,

Doth comfort thee in sleepes : Live, and flourith.

The Life and Death of Richard the Third

1. Ghosts. Let us sit heavy in the bath to morrow. That was a watch to die with Fulfore Wine. Poor Clarence by thy guilt bespred to death. To morrow in the battell thinke on e, And fall thy edge the Sword, dispaire and dye.

5. Ghosts. Thine to-Carefaries and the bloody sword. I Saye, I am, and to thee I vouchsafe to speak. I am a Villaine; yet I Lye, I am not,

6. Richard. The bloody Sword. In the bloody Sword to thee.

7. Ghosts. To the bloody Sword. In the bloody Sword.

8. Richard. To the bloody Sword. In the bloody Sword.

The text is a fragmented and incomplete representation of a historical or dramatic script, possibly from Shakespeare's "Richard III." The script includes dialogue and monologues, typical of 16th century English prose. The text appears to be a transcription of a printed or manuscript page, with occasional abbreviations and signs of anachronistic modernization.
The Life and death of Richard the Third.

God, and our good cause, fight upon our side;
The Prayers of holy Saints, and wrong'd souls, Like high and valiant Bulwarkes, fluid before our Faces. (Richard except) those whom weight against, Had rather have vs win, then him they follow.
For, what is he they follow? Truly Gentlemen,
A bloudy Tyrant, and a Hodmacide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd; One that made menes to come by what he hath, And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him:
A base faule Stone, made precious by the toyle
Of England's Chaire, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever beene Gods Enemy.
Then if you fight against Gods Enemy,
God will in sundry wise your as his Soldiers.
If you do swear to put a Tyrant downe,
You keepe in peace, the Tyrant being slain:
If you do fight against your Countries Foes,
Your Countries Fire shall pay your paines the hyre.
If you do fight in safegard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the Conquerors.
If you do free your Children from the Sword,
Your Childrens Children quits it in your Age.
Then in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your Standards, draw your willing Swords:
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold Cooper on the earths cold face.
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt,
The least of you shall hare his part thereof.
Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldly, and cheerfully,
God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victory.

Enter King Richard, Ratchfafe, and Catesby.

K. What said Northumberland is touching Richmond? Rat. That he was never trained vp in Armes.
King. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then? Rat. He maile'd and said, the better for our purpose.
King. He was in the right, and so indeed it is.
Tell the clock there.
( clockes strike
Give me a Kalender; Who saw the Sunne to day?
Rat. Not i. my Lord.
King. Then he ditdaine to shine: for by the Book.
He should have heard the East an hour ago.
A blacked day will it be to somebody. Ratchfafe.
Rat. My Lord.
King. The Sun will not be fene to day,
The sky doth frowne, and lowre vnpon our Army.
I would the dewy teares were from the ground.
Not shine to day? Why, what is that to me.
More then to Richmond? For the felt-fame Heaven
That frownes on me, lookes fadly vppon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Atme, arme, my Lord: the foe vaunts in the field.
King. Come, buffe, buffe. Capition my horse.
Call vp Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will lead forth my Soldiers to the plaime, And thus my Bastell shall be ouer.
My Foreward shall be drawne in length,
Confident equally of Horse and Foot:
Our Archers shall be placed in the midle.
John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of the Foot and Horse.
They thus directed, we shall follow
In the maine Battell, whose puidance on either side
Shall be well-winged with our cheerfull Horfe:
This, and Saint George to boote.
What think't thou Norfolk.
Nor. A good direction warlike Soueraigne,
This found I on my Tent this morning:
Looke of Norfolk, be not too bold.
For Dickon my master t'be taught and teld.
King. A thing deointed be the Enemy.
Go Gentlemen, every man to his Charge,
Let not our babbling Dreames affright our soules:
For: Confidence is a word that Cowards vs,
Dow't at first to keep the strong in awe,
Our strong arms be our Conference, Swords our Law.
March on, joyne bruely, let vs too t'pell well,
If not to heauen, then hand in hand to Hell.
What shall I say more then I have inferre'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withall,
A port of Vagabonds, Rascals, and Run-wayes.
A team of Britains, and base Lackey Prizans,
Whom their o're-cloyd Country vomits forth
To desperat Advenctures, and affair'd Deffination.
You steeping fale, they bring you to vnrest.
You having Lands, and bleit with beseurous wives,
They would refrraine the one, disface the other,
And who does leade them, but a petty Fellow?
Long kept in Britaine at our Mothers coll,
A Make-up, one that never in his life
Felt to much cold, as ever showers in Snows.
Let's with these stranglers o'the Seas againe,
Laffhence thes over-wearing Bagges of France,
Their famifh'd Beggers, weary of their lines,
Who (but for dreaming on this fond explore)
For want of menes (poore Rus) had langed themselfes,
I fve be conquered, let men conquer vs,
And not these byard Britains, whom our fathers
Hau in their owne Land bearen, bulbul'd, and thump'd,
And on Record, left them the heirs of fame.
Shall these enjoy our Lands? lye with our Wives?
Rauft our daughters?
Drums a farre off
Hearke, I heare their Drumme,
Right Gentlemen of England, fight boldly yeomen,
Draw Archers draw your Arrows to the head,
Spurre your proues prest by, and ride in blood,
Amazze the welkin with your broken lauces.

Enter a Messenger.

What sayes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?
Afre. My Lord, he doth deny to come.
King. Off with his fame George head.
Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is past the Marsh:
After the batterie, let George Stanley dye.
King. A thousand heares are great within my bosom,
Advance our Standards, let upon our Foes,
Our Ancient word of Courage, faire S. George
Inpiffe vs with the spleene of fiery Dragons:
Vpon them, Victorie sies on our helps.

Alarums, excusant. Enter Catesby.

Cat. Rescue my Lord of Norfolk,
Rescue, Rescue:
The King enailes more wonders then a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger:
His horse is flaine, and all on foot he fights.
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Rescue faire Lord, else the day is loit.

Alarums.

Enter V. iii. 241—V. iv. 6

557
Enter Richard.

Rich. A Horse, my Horse, my Kingdom for a Horse.

Caste. Withdraw my Lord, Iie helpe you to a Horse

Rich. Slue, I haue let my life upon a caft,
And I will stand the hazard of the Dye:
I think there be fize Richmonds in the field,
Fife haue I flaine to day, in heed of him.
A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdom for a Horse.

Alas, Enter Richard and Richmond, they fight, Richard is slaine.

Retreat and Flourish, Enter Richmond, Derby bearing the Crown, with divers other Lords.

Rich. God, and your Armes
Be praising Victorious Friends;
The day is ours, the bloody Dogge is dead.

Der. Courageous Richmond,
Well haft thou acquit thee; Lo
Here these long viuped Royalties,
From the dead Templers of this bloody Wretch,
Haste I pluck'd off, to grace thy Brows withall,
Weare it, and make much of it.

Rich. Great God of Heauen, say Amen to all.

Buteftell mee, is yong George Stanley living?

Der. He is my Lord, and safe in Leicesters Towne,
Wither (if you please) we may withdraw vs.

Rich. What men of name are slaine on either side?

Dr. John Duke of Norfolke, Walter Lord Perris,

Rich. Interce their Bodies, as become their Births,
Proclaim a pardon to the Soldiers fled,
That in submission will return to vs,
And then as we haue taken the Sacrament,
We will vnite the White Rose, and the Red.
Smile Heauen vpon this faire Conjunction,
That long haue frown'd vpon your Enmity:
What Traitor heares me, and fayes not Amen?
England hath long bene mad, and fear'd her felfes;
The Brother blindeely flid the Brothers blood;
The Father, rashly flaughtered his owne Sonnes;
The Sonne compell'd, become Butcher to the Sire;
All this divid'd Youke and Lancaster,
Divided, in their dire Diuision.
Onow, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true Succeeders of each Royall House,
By Gods faire ordinance, conioyne together:
And let thy Heeres (God if thy will be so)
Enrich the time to come, with Smooth-fac'd Peace,
With fmalley Plant, and faire Prosperous dayes,
Abate the edge of Traitors, Gracious Lord,
That would reduce thei bloody dayes againe,
And make poore England weepes in Streams of Blood;
Let them not live to tale this Lands increafe,
That would with Treason, wound this faire Lands peace.
Now Chilli wounds are flapp'd, Peace lives a gaine;
That the may long live here, God fay, Amen.

FINIS.
The Famous History of the Life of King HENRY the Eighth.

THE PROLOGUE.

Come no more to make you laugh, Things now, That beare a Weight, and a Serious Brow, Sad, high, and working, full of State and Power: Such Noble Scenes, as draw the Eyes to view
We now present. Those that can fancy here, May (if they think it well) let fall a tear, The Subject will deserve it. Such as give Their Money out of hope they may become, May here find Truth too. Those that come to see Oney a show or two, and so agree, The Play may pause: if they be still, and willing,
He undertake may see away their shilling
Risky in two hours atone. Once they That come to hear a Merry, Bawdy Play, A novelty of Yore: or to see a Fellow
In long Motsey Coat, girded with Yellow,

Will he decay'd. For gentle Hearers, know To rank our chosen Truth with such a show
As Fools, and Eight is, beside forgetting
Our own Brains, and the Opinion we bring
To make that only true, we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding Friend,
Therefore, for Goodness sake, and as you are knowne
The First and Happiest Hearers of the Towne,
Be sad, as we would make eye. Thinkye see
The very Persons of our Noble Story,
As they were Living: Thankye you see them Great,
And follow'd with the general strong, and sweet
Of whatsoever Friends. Then, in a moment, see
How soon this Mightiness, meets Misery:
And if you can be ever then, lie flat,
A Month we were upon his Wedding day.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Duke of Norfolke at one door. At the other,
The Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord
Abingdon.

Buckingham.

Ood morrow, and well met. How haue ye done
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank you Grace,
Healthful, and our Forces fresh Admire.
Of what I saw there.

Back. An intemely Ague
Staid me a Prisoner in my Chamber, when
Thofe Sunnes of Glory, thofe two Lights of Men
Met in the vale of Andros.

Nor. 'Twixt Gnesys and Arde.
I was then present, loo the Prince on Horsebacks,
Reheild them when they liked, how they diu'd
In their Embrace, to as they grew together,
Which had they,
What foure Thron'd ones could haue weight'd
Such a compounded one?

Back. All the while
I was my Chambers Prisoner.

Nor. Then you left
The view of earthy glory: Men might say
Till this time Pompe was single, but now married
To one about it selfe. Each following day
Became the next dayes matter, till the left
Made former Wonders, it's. To day the French,
All Cinquant all in Gold, like Heathen Gods
Shone downe the English; and to morrow, they Made Britaine, India. Every man that flood,
Shew Alkia a Mine. Their Dwarfish Pages were
As Cherubins, all gift: the Madams too.
Not w'd to toyle, did almoost sweet to beare
The Pride upon them, that their very labour
Was to shew, as a Painting. Now this Maske
Was cry de incomparable; and then ensuing night
Made it a Foole, and Beggar. The two Kings
Equal in lufure, were now best, now worst.
At preface did present them: Him in eye,
Still him in praise, and being present both,
'Was said they saw but one, and no Diuerse
Durf wagge his Tongue in cenfure, when these Sunnes
(For to they phrase 'em) by their Heralds challeng'd
The Noble Spirits to Armes, they did perfom.
Beyond thoughts Compaus, that former fabulous Storie
Being now scene, possible enough, or credite
That Beau was beleu'd.

Nor. Oh you go farre.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and attend
For Honor, honestly, the trade of every thing,
Would by a good Discouerer loose some life,
Which Actions felle, was tongue too,

Buc. All was Royall,
To the dispofing of a sought rebell'd,
Order gave each thing view. The Office did
Difficul'tly his full Function; who did guide,
I meane who let the Body, and the Limbes
Of this great Sport together?

Nor. As you gufe.

One certe, that promiseth no Element
In such a businesse.

Buc. I pray you who, my Lord?

Nor. All this was ordred by the good Discretion
Of the right Reverend Cardinal of York.

Buc. The diuell f ted him: No mans Pye is freed
From his Ambitious fingers. What had he
To do in thofe ftrete Vainties? I wonder,
That he a Kechcan with his very bulke
Take vp the Rayes o' th'beneficall Sun,
And keepe it from the Earth.

Nor. Surely Sir,
There's in him fluffe, that pust him to thofe ends:
For being not propit by Ancefly, whole grace
Chaiakes Successfull their way; nor call'd upon
For high feats done to'th' Crowne; neither Allied
To eminent Affidants; but Spider-like
Out of his Selfe-drawing Web. O giues vs note,
The force of this owne merit makes his way
A guife that heazens giues for him, which buyeth
A place next to the King.

Nor. Why the Diuell,
Which this French going out, tooke he upon him
(Without the privity of this King) a Raptoft
Who should attend on him. He makes vp the File
Of all the Gentrey; for the moft part fuch
To whom as great a Charge, as little Honor
He meant to lay upon: and his owne Letter
The Honourable Board of Counsell, out
Muff fetch him in, or Papers.

Nor. I do know
Kindnes of mine, three at the leaft, that bane
By this, to ficken'd their Liftates, that never
They fbell abourd as formerly.

Buc. O many
Have broke their backes with laying Mannors on 'em
For this great Journey. What did this vanity
But minifler communication of
A molt preteft.

Nor. Or equally I think,
The Peace between the French and us, not valeves
The Coft that did conclude it.

Buc. Every man,
After the hideous forme that follow'd, was
A thing Inrip'd, and not confluting, broke
Into a generall Prophesie; That this Tempel
Dafting the Garment of this Peace, abouded
The lodai'breach out.

Nor. Which is budded out,
For France hath flaw'd the League, and hath attach'd
Our Merchants goods at Burdeus.

Nor. Is it therefore
Th' Ambaflador is fliene'd?

Nor. Marry is't.

Buc. A proper Title of a Peace, and purchas'd:
At a fuperfluous rate.

Buc. Why all this Businesse
Our Reverend Cardinall carried,
Nor. Like it your Grace,
The State takes notice of the private difference
Bewixt you, and the Cardinal. I aduife you
(And take it from a heart, that witifes towards you)
Honor, and plentiffous safety) that you reade
The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency
Together; To confider further, that
What his high Hated would effect, wants not
A Minifler in his Power. You know his Nature,
That he's Revengeful; and I know, his Sword
Hath a fharp edge: It's long; and may be fai'd
It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he dares it. Before vp my counfel,
You'll finde it wholefome. Lot, where comes that Rock
That I aduife your funning.

Enter Cardinall de Waffy, the Prince borne before him, certaine
Of the Guard, and two Serviciers with Papers: The Cardinal in his Palaffe, fixt his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of diftanee.

Car. The Duke of Buckingham: Surveyor? Ha?
Where's his Examination?

Secr. Here's to pleafe you.

Car. Is he in person? ready?

Secr. I pleafe your Grace.

Car. Well, we shall then know more, & Buckingham
Shall leffen this bigge looke.

Exeunt Cardinall, and his Train.

Buc. This Butchers Curre is venomm'd mouth'd, and I
Have not the power to muzzle him, therefore beft
Not wake him in his flumber. A Beggers booke,
Out-worths a Nobles blood.

Nor. What are you char'd?

Aske God for Temp'rance, that's th'appliance onely.
Which your difeafe requires.

Buc. I read'ms locks
Matter against me, and his eye reuid'd
Me as his abed obieft, at this instant
He bores me with fome tricke; He's gone to th'King:
He follow, and outlare him.

Nor. Stay my Lord,
And let your Reafon with your Chefer question
What 'tis you go about: to caufe fleepethillies
Requires flow pace at fift. Anger is like
A full hot Horie, who being allow'd his way
Selfe-mettle tyes him: Not a man in England
Can aduife me like you: Be to your felf,
As you would to your Friend.

Buc. He to the King,
And from a mouth of Honor, quite cry downe

This
This is which fellowes inolence; or &e greatest.
There's difference in his persons.
Nor. Be aduult.

But not a famice for your foe to hot
That'd do oon your selle. We may out-runne,
By violent wtwinne that which we run at;
And lose by ouer-running: know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till'ren ore,
In seeming to beguile it, with it: be aduult;
I say againe there is no English soule
More stronguer to threat you then your selle;
If but the swifte of treason you should quench,
Or but allay the fire of passion.

Buck, Sir, I am thankefull to you, and Hee goe along
By your preceptrion: but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flower of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions, by Intelligence,
And promes as cleere as Founts in July,
When Wee leech each graine of gruelly. I doe know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not treasonous.

Buck. To th' King Ile fay, & make my youth as strong
As shore of Rocke: attend. This holy Foke,
Or Wolfe, or both (for he is equal rauous
As he is subtile, and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform't) his minde, and place
Infecting one another, yes reciprocally,
Only to drow his pompe, as well in France,
As here at home, suggests the King our Master
To this last clift Treaty: the enteruie,
That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glasse
Did break'th in't wretchedning.

Nor. Faith, and for it did.

Buck. Pray giue me fauour Sir: This cunning Cardinall
The Articles oth' Combination drew
As himselfe pleasa'd and they were ratificated
As he cride thus let be, to as much end,
As giues a Cutch to th' dead. But our Count-Cardinall
Has done this, and is well: for worthy Wolfry
(Who cannot erre) he did it. Now this follower,
(Which as I take it, is a kinde of Puppie
To th' Old dam Tresfon) Chater the Emperour,
Vnder pretence to see the Queene his Aunt,
(For twas indeede his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolfry here makes visitation,
His fears were that the Interview betwixt
England and France, might through their amity
Bred him some preindide; for from this League,
Prep'd harms that menace'd him. Priuily
Deales with our Cardinal, and as I troa
Which I doe well: for I am sure the Emperour
Pased ere he promis'd, whereby his Sult was granted
Ere it was ask'd. But when the way was made
And paw'd with gold: the Emperour thus desir'd,
That he would peace to alter the Kings courfe,
And breake the forefaid peace: 'Let the King know
(As soone he shall by me) that thus the Cardinal
Does buy and sell his Honour as he pleases,
And for his owne advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could with he were Something misfaken in't.

Buck. No, not a sillye.
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proofe.
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Card. And for me, I have no further gone in this, then by a s genteel voice, and that not past me, but by learned approbation of the Judges, if I am traduced by ignorant Tongues, which neither know my faculties nor perilon, yet will be. The Chronicles of my doing: Let me say, 'Tis but the face of Place, and the rough Brake That Vertue must go through; we must not flint our necessary actions, in the fear. To cope malicious Centurions, which ever, as rauous Fishes does a Vessel follow That is new trim'd; but benefit no further Then vainly longing. What we oft do beft, By sike Interpreters (once vseke ones) is Not ours, or not allowed, as oft Hitting a groffer quality, is crise vp. For our bell Act: if we shall hand full, In fear our motion will be mock'd, or carp'd at, We shound take roote here, where we fit; Or fit State Statues only.

Kim. Things done well, And with a care, except themselves from fear: Things done without example, in their issue Are to be fear'd. Have you a President Of this Commission? I believe, not any. We must not rend our Subject from our Lawes, And.verify them in our Will. Six part of each? A trebling Contribution; why we take From every Tree, lop, bake, and part o'th' Timber: And though we leave our Peace this back, The Ayre will drank the Sep. To every County Where this is question'd, send our Letters, with Free pardon to each man that has deny'd The force of this Commission: pray look out'too; I put it to your care. Card. A word with you. Let there be Letters sent to every Shire, Of the Kings grace and pardon: the great Commons Hardly conceive of me. Let it be sound'd, That through our Intercessions, this Reckonment And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. Exit Secret. Enter Surveyor. Queen. I am sorry, that the Duke of Buckingham Is run in your displeasure.

Kim. It grieues many: The Gentleman is Learnt'd, a most rare Speaker, To Nature none more bound; his trayning fuch, That he my furnith and instruct'd great Teachers, And never seake for any out of himeselfe: yet see, When these to Noble benefits shall proue, Not well disposed, the mind growing once corrupt, They turn to vicious formes, ten times more vgy Then euer they were faine. This man so compleat, Who was soer'ds mongt'T breaths; and when we Almowt with rauiithing, could not finde His house of speech: a moniter: He, (my Lady) Hath into monituous habits, put the Grace That once were hit; and is become blacke, As if beft'mard in hell. Sit by you, you flats heart (This was his Gentleman in crut) of him Things to strike Honour sad. Bid him recount The fore-recited proues, whereof We cannot feele too little, heart too much.
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Card. Stand forth, & with bold spirit relate what you Moll like a careful Subject have collected Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

Kin. Speake freely.

Sur. First, it was visual with him; every day It would infect his Speech: That if the King Should without issue dye; heele-carry it to Make the Sceptre his. The very words I have heard him utter to his Sonne in Law, Last. Allurgy, to whom by oath he menace'd Revenge upon the Cardinall.

C. W. Pisse your Highnesse note. This dangerous conception in this point, Not franced by his with to Your High Person; His will is most malignant, and it stretches Beyond you to your friends. Queen, My trust'd Lord Cardinal, Delights all with Charity.

Kin. Speakes on.

How groundly he his Title to the Crowne Upon our fail, to this pleas hast thou heard him, At my time speake ought?

Sur. He was brought to this, By the heavenly Prophetic of Nicholas Henton. Kin. What was that Henton?

Sur. Sir, a Chorister Fryer, His Confessor, who fed him every minute With words of Sovereignty.

Kin. How knowst thou this?

Sur. Nor long before your Highnesse sped to France, The Duke being at the Rofe, within the Panish, Lawrence Pauliner, did of me demand What was the speech among the Londoners, Concerning the French Journey. I repulse, Men fear the French would prove pernicious To the Kings danger: presently, the Duke Said, 'twas the feare indeed, and that he doubted 'twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy Monke, that off, saies he, Faith sent to me, wishing me to permit John de la Care, my Chaplaine, a choyce howre To heare from him a matter of some moment: Whom after under the Commodious Scale, He solomnly had lornote, that what he spoke My Chaplaine to no creature living, but To me, shoulde vster, with demure Confidence, This paungly enfulde neither the King, nor's Heyres (Tell you the Duke) shall prether, bid him floure To the loue oth' Commonalty, the Duke Shall governs England.

Queen. If I know you well, You were the Dukes Surveyor, and loft your Office On the complaint oth' Tenants; take good heed You charge not in your slyene a Noble person, And give your noble Sonne, I say take heed; Yet, heartly be foreyou.

Kin. Let him on: Go forward.

Sur. On my Soule, he speake but truth, I told my Lord the Duke, by th'Diuel's illusions The Monke might be deceu'd, and that was dangerous For this to ruminate on this forare, vuitive It forg'd him some deligne, which being belieu'd It was much like to doe: He answer'd, 'Twas, It can doe me no dammage; adding further, That had the King in his fall Sicknelle faild, The Cardinals and Sir Thomas Longue heads Should have gone off.

Kin. He! What do you rank? Ah, ha, There's mischiefe in this man; canst thou say further? Sur. I can my Liedge.

Kin. Proceed.

Sur. Being at Greenwich, After your Highnesse had rejoynd the Duke About Sir William Ellisor. (Grant.) Kin. I remember of such a time, being my wonted last, The Duke recendi him hist. But on; what hence?

Sur. If (quoth he) I set this had beene committed, As to the Tower, I thought I would have plaid The Per my Father meant to act upon This Vesper Richard, who being at Saldbury, Made at to come in's presence, which it grantd, (As he made emblence of his duty) would Have put his knife into him.

Kin. A Gyant Trator.

Card. Now Madam, may his Highnesse live in freedome, And this man out of Prision.

Queen. God ment all. (sayt?)

Kin. There's somethings more would out of the, what Sur. After the Duke his Father, with the knife He trenched him, and with one hand on his dagger, Another spread o's back, mounting his eyes, He did discharge a horrible Oath, whole tenor Was, were he euald, he would outgoe His Father, by as much a a performance Do's an inefolit purpose.

Kin. There's his period, To threath his knife in w, he is attach'd, Call him to presently call, if he may Find mercy in the Law, to his, if none, Let him not fec't of w: By day and night He's Trator to th'height. Exeunt.

Scene Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlaine and L.Sandy.

L. Ch. Is't possible the spele of France should juggle Men into such strange mysteries?

L. San. New cutomes,

Though they be nother to ridiculous, (Nay let 'em be vummy) yet are follow'd, L. Ch. As farre as I teale, all the good our English Have got by the late Voyage, is but merely A fit or two o'th' face, (but they are thredwee ones) For when they hold 'em, you would seewe direcly Their very notes had beene Countcouncillors To Pepeir or Clotherm, they keepse State fo. L. San. They have all new legs, And lame ones, one would take it, That neuter see'em pace before, the Spanishe A Spring-laks rain'd among'em. L. Ch. Death my Lord, Their clothes are after such a Pigan cut too's, That sure th'hauw wonne our Ch (let them come how now) What newes, Sir Thomas Lasso?

Enter Sir Thomas Lasso.

Lasso. Faith my Lord, I hear of none but the new Proclamation, That's clapt upon the Court Gate.

Scena Quarta.

Hobbes. A formal Table under a State for the Cardinal, a larger Table for the Gentry, Then Enter Anne Boleyn, and divers other Ladies; or Gentlemen, as Guests at one Dinner; as at another Dinner enter Sir Henry Gifford.

S. Hen. Giff. Ladies,
A general welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all; This Night he dedicates
To faire content, and you; None here he hopes
In all this Noble Buoys, has brought with her
One care abroad: hee would have all as mett;
As first, good Company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people.

O my Lord, y'are sadly;
The very thought of this faire Company,
Clap wings to me,

Cham. You are young, Sir Henry Gifford.

San. Sir Thomas Long, had the Cardinal
But halfe my Lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should finde a running Banker, ere they reflekt,
I thooke would better pleafe em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of fine ones.

Lom. O that your Lordship were but now Confessor,
To one or two of these.

San. I would I were,
Thy should finde easie penance.

Low. Faith how easy?

San. As easy as a downe bed would affoord it.

Cham. Sweet Ladies will it please you Sir; Sir Harry Place you that side, he take the charge of this;
His Grace is ent raging. Nay, you must not freeze,
Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather;
My Lord Sandy, you are one will keepe em waking;
Pray fit betweene these Ladies.

San. By my faith,
And thanke your Lordship: by you leave sweet Ladies,
If I chance to talke a little while, forgue me:
That it is from my Father.

An. Sir. Was he mad Sir?

San. O very mad, exceeding mad, in loue too;
But he would bite none, suit as I doe now,
He would Kisse you Twenty with a breath.

Cham. Well (say my Lord;
So now y'are falsely feated: Gentlemen,
The penance bye: on you; if these faire Ladies
Part away frowning.

San. For my little Care,
Let me alone.

Hobbes. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, and takes his State.

Card Y'are well come my faire Gueells; that noble Lady
Or Gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my Friend: This to confirm my welcome,
And to you all good health.

San. Your Grace is Noble,
Let me have such a Bowlie may hold my cupke,
And faue me fo much talking.

Card. My Lord Sandy.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours: Ladies you are not merry; Gentlemen, Who are in this? Sun. The red wine must rise in their fair cheekes my Lord, then wee shall have 'em, take vs to solence. An, B. You are a merry Gambler my Lord Sanders. Sun. Yes, if I make my play. Heer's to your Ladship, and pledge it Madam: For to such a thing. An, B. You cannot throw me. Drum and Trumpet. Chambers discharge. Sun. I told you Grace, they would take an in. Card. What's that? Cham. Look out there, some of ye. Card. What would you like, And to what end is this? Nay, Ladies, fear not; By all the lawes of Warre you are pruined.

Enter a Servant. Cham. How now, what is't? Serm. A noble troop of Strangers, For so they seem; th'hau'e left their Barge and landed, And hither make, as great Embassadors from foreigne Princes. Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine, Go give'em welcome you can speak the French tongue And pray receiue'em Nobly, and conduct'em Into our presence, where this haunch of beauty Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him. All rise, and Tables remond. You have now a broken Banket, but we'll mend it. A good digestion to you all; and once more I thowre a welcome on ye: welcome all.

Hoboyes. Enter King and others as Masters, habited like Shepheards, after'd by the Lord Chamberlaine. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully fauour him. A noble Company: what are their pleasures? Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they paid To tell your Grace. That having heard by fame Of this so Noble and so faire assemblie, This night to meet here they could doe no leffe, (Out of the great respect they bear to beauty) But leave their Flockes, and under your faire Conduet Craue leve to view the Ladies, and entertain An hour of Revels with'em. Card. Say, Lord Chamberlaine, They have done my poor house grace: For which I pay'em a thousand thankes, and pray 'em take their pleasures. Choose Ladies, King and An Bullen. King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O Beauty, Till now I never knew thee.

Musick, Dance. Card. My Lord. Cham. Your Grace. Card. Pray tell'em thus much from me: There should be one amongst'em by his person More worthy this place then my selfe, to whom (If I but knewe him) with my love and duty I would surrender it. Whispers. Cham. I will my Lord. Card. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confesse There is indeed, which they would have your Grace Find out, and he will take it. Card. Let me see then, By all your good leauses Gentlemen; heere I make My royall choyce. Kin. Ye haue found him Cardinal, You hold a faire Affemblie; you doe well Lords. You are a Churchman, or late you tell you Cardinal, I should judge now unhappily. Card. I am glad Your Grace is grown so pleasanl. Kin. My Lord Chamberlaine, Prechee come hither, what faire Ladies that? Cham. An't please your Grace, Sir Thomas Bulleyn Daughter, the Viscount Rochford, One of her Highnesse women. Kin. By Heauen she is a dainty one, Sweet heart, I was vnmanerly to take you out, And not to kisse you, A health Gentleman, Let it go round. Card. Sir Thomas Long, is the Banket ready? Loo. Yes, my Lord. Card. Your Grace I fear, with dancing is a little heated, Kin. I feare too much. Card. There's frether syre my Lord, In then other Chamber. Kin. Lead in your Ladies eu'ry one: Sweet Partner, I must not yet for sake you: Let's be merry, Good my Lord Cardinal! I haue halfe a dozen healths, To drinke to th'flaire Ladies, and a measure To lewd'em once again, and then let's dreame Who's best in fauour. Let the Musicke knock it. Event with Trumpets.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemens. Scena Prima.

1. Whether away to fall? 2. O, God saue ye: Euen to the Hall, to hear what shall become Of the great Duke of Buckingham. 1. He saue you That labour Sir, All's now done but the Ceremony Of bringing backe the Prisioner. 2. Were you there? 1. Yes indeed was I. 2. Pray speake what ha's happen'd, 1. You may guesse quickly what. 2. Is he found guilty? 1. Yes truly is he, And condemni'd vpon't. 2. I am forry fort, 1. So are a number more. 2. But pray how past it? 1. Ile tell you in a little. The great Duke Came to the Bar; where, to his accusations He pleaded still not guilty, and alledged Many sharpe reasons to defeat the Law. The Kinges Attorney on the contrary, Vrg'd on the Examinations, proofs, confessions.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Of divers witnesses, which the Duke defir'd
To him brought ·vima socrco to his face;
At which appear'd against him, his SuorreySir Gilbert Peke his Chancellour, and John Car, Conferor to him, with that: Dinell Monk, Hugyon; that made this mischief.
3. That he was
That fed him with his Prophecies.
1. The fane,
All those accus'd him strongly, which he faine
Would have flung from him; but indeed he could not;
And fo his Peieres upon this evidence,
Have found him guilty of high Treafon. Mar He spoke, and learnedly for life: But all
Was either prifon in, or forgotten.
2. After all this, how did he beare h.mifelfe?
1. When he was brought aen to th' Bar, to hear
His Knell rung out, his judgement, he was flr'd
With fuch an Agony, he flw extremely,
And fomthing spoke in choller, ill, and halty;
But he fell to himfelf againfe, and fweetly,
In all the reft there was no fufpicion of Noble patience.
2. I do not think he fares death,
Sure he does not,
He never was fo womanilh, the caufe
He may a little grieve at.
3. Certainl,
The Cardinal is the end of this.
1. Is likeli,
By all confequences: Firft Kilares Attendure;
Then Deputy of Ireland, who remou'd
Erne Surrery, was then thither, and in haft too,
Leaft he should help his Father.
2. That tricke of State
Was a deepen envious one,
1. At his returne,
No doubt he will require it: this is noted
(And generally) who euer the King favours,
The Cardinal infantly will finde empoyment,
And farre enough from Court too.
3. All the Common
Hate him perniciously, and o' my Confequence
With him ten faddem deeper: This Duke as much
They lose and doare oncail him bounteous Buckingham,
The Mirror of all courtefe.

Enter Buckingham from his Arrangement, Tiffanes before him, the Aue with the edge towards him, Bradleys on each side, accompani'd with Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Faux, Sir Walter Sadi, and common people, &c.

1. Stay there Sir,
And fee the noble rain'd man you speake of.
2. Let's stand cleare and behold him.
3. All good people,
You that thus faire have come to pity me,
Hear what I fay, and then goe home and lofe me.
I have this day receiv'd a Traders judgement,
And by that name muft dye; yet Heauen beare witnesses,
And if I have a Conference, let it finne me,
Even as the Axe falls, if I be not faithfull.
The Law I beare no mallice for my death,
Thinks All good people, but lufluce.
But tho'fle that fought it, I could with more Christians:
(As what they will) I heartily forgive 'em,
Yet let en looke they glory not in mischief;
Nor build their efts on the grieves of great men;
For then, my guiltiefe blood must cry against 'em.
For further life in this world I fee no hope,
Nor will I live, although the King have merces
More then I dare make faults,
Ye few, that made this, And dare be bold to revenge for Buckingham,
His Noble Friends and Fellowes, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying:
Goe with me like good Angells to my end,
And as the long diuorce of Steele falls on me,
Make of your Prayers one sweet Sacrifice,
And lift my Soule to Heaven.
Lead on a Gods name,
Lowel. I doe beseech your Grace, for charity
If ever any malice in your heart
Were hid aganft me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lowel, I doe free forgive you
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberlefe offences
Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with:
No blacke Brandy shall make my Graue,
Commend mee to his Grace:
And if he speake of Buckingham; pray tell him,
You met him halfe in Heaven; my vows and prayers
Yet are the Kings; and till my Soule forfake,
Shall cry for bleftings on him. May he hure
Longer then I have time to tell his years;
Euer belou'd and lounging, may his Rule be;
And when old Time shall lead him to his end,
Goodnewe and he, fell vp one Monument.
Lou. To th' water for fure I muft conduct your Grace:
Then give my Charge vp to Sir Nicholas Oman,
Who vnderrates you to your end.
Vax. Prepare there,
The Duke is coming: See the Barre be ready,
And fit with fuch furniture as flutes
The GreatmifJe of his Perion,
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone, my State now will but mocke me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Conffable,
And Duke of Buckingham: now, smote Edward Bolan;
Yet I am richer then my bafe Accuters,
That never knew what I ruth meant: I now felle it;
And with that bloodl will make 'em one day grofte for.
My noble Father Henry of Buckingham,
Who firft rais'd head againft Vnpthing Richard,
Flying for succour to his Servants Benefier,
Being defir'd; was by that wretch betrayed.
And without Tryall, fell; Gods peace be with him.
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pittyng
My Fathers loffe; bade a most Roial Prince
Reffor'ne me to my Hons: and out of ruines
Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Sonne,
Buck. The Eight, he; Favour, Name and all
That made me happy; at one Brooke's he'taken
For euer from the World. I had my Tryall,
And muft needs fay a Noble one; which makes me
A little happier then my wretched Father;
Yet thus farre we are one in Fortunes,both
Bell by our Servants, by thofe Men we cou'd moft,
A most unramazal and faithfull Serveur.
How the Eight, I flc: ye, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receiv'd as certaine;
Where you are liberal of your loues and Counsels,
Be sure you be not loue, for thofe you make friends.

The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

And give your hearts to; when they once perceive the leaff rib in your fortunes, fall away. Like waves from ye, never found again. Where they mean to finke ye: all good people, Pray for me, I must now forsake you; the last hour of my long weary life is come upon me: Farewell; and when you lay something that is sad, I have done; and God forgive me.

Enter Duke and Traine.

1. O, this is full of pity, Sir; it calls I fear, too many curses on their heads; That were the Authors.

2. If the Duke be guilty, 'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inckling Of an ending eulil, if it fall, Greater then this.

1. Good Angels keepe it from vs: What may it be? you do not doubt my faith Sir? This Secret is so weighty, 'twill require A strong faith to conceal it.

1. Let me have it: I do not talke much.

2. I am confident; You shall Sir: Did you not of late days heare A buzzing of a Separation Between the King and Katherine? Yes, but it held not.

For when the King once heard it, out of anger He lent command to the Lord Mayor straight To stop the rumour; and alay those tongues That durt defiere it.

2. But that flander Sir, Is found a truth now; for it grows age Preter then else it was; and held for certaine The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinall, Or some about him nere, have out of malice: To the good Queen, pooffht him with a scripule That will enode her: To confirm this too, Cardinall Campeius is striud'd, and lately, As all thinke for this busines.

1. This the Cardinall; And merely to revenge him on the Emperor, For not beftowing on him at his asking, The Archbishopricke of Toledo, this is purpof'd. I think.

You have hit the marke: but is not cruell, that flie should feel the forme of this: the Cardinall Will have his will, and the muft tall.

1. Tis wifoll.

We are too open here to arguethis: Let's think in private more.

Exeunt.

Secunda.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine, reading this Letter.

My Lord, the Hier for your Lordship's fot for, with all the care I had, I sawe well chosen, richened, and furnifh'd. They were young and handsome, and of the best bred in the North, when they were ready to let out for London, a man of vs Lord Cardinals, by Commission, and maine power took them from me, with that reason your majesty would bee fomr whe-to a Subdit, if not before the King, which flap door mouths Sir.

I feare he will indeede; well, let him haste them; he will have all I thinke.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlaine, the Dukes of Northfalle and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met my Lord Chamberlaine.

Char. Good day to both your Grace.

Suff. How is the King imployd?

Char. I left him privale.

Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Char. It seems the Marriage with his Brothers Wife has crept too neere his Conference.

Suff. No, his Conference has crept too neere another Ladie.

Nor. This is the Cardinals doing: The King, Cardinall, That blinde Prieft, like the eldert Sonne of Fortune, Turns what he lift. The King will know him one day.

Suff. Pray God he doe.

Hee'll never know himselfe els.

Nor. How holily he works in all his businesse, And with what zeal? For now he has cract the League between vs & the Emperor (the Queens great Nephew) He dyes into the Kings Soules, and there (carriets Danger, Doubts, wunding or the Conscience, Feares, and despaire, and all thefe for his Marriage, And out of all thefe, to reflore the King, He counsells a Divorce, a loffe of her That like a Jewell, ha's hung twenty years About his necke, yet neuer loft her ifuflit; Of her that loues him with that excellence, That Angels lone good men with: Even of her, That when the greatest Stroke of Fortune falls With the King: and is not this cause pieus? Char. Heauen keep me from such counsel as most true These newes are euery where: euery tongue speakes them, And euery true heart weepes for it. All that daie Look into thefes affairs, fee this mane end, The French Kings Siffer. Heauen will one day open The Kings eyes, that so long haue slept upon This bold bad man.

Suff. And free vs from his flauery.

Nor. We had need pray, And heartily, for our deliuerance; Or his impiemous man will work vs all From Princes into Paights: all mens honours Lie like one lump before him; to be fpation'd Into what putch he pleafe.

Suff. For me, my Lords, I love him not, nor feare there's my Creede: As I am made without him, fo I ele fend; If the King pleafe: his Curfes and his feiftings Touch me alike; th're breath I not beleive in. I knew him, and I know him: fo I leaue him To him that made him proue; the Pope.

Nor. Let's in;

And with some other busineses, put the King From thefe sad thoughts, that work too much vp him: My Lord, you beare vs company?

Char. Excufe me, The King ha's sent me otherwhe: Befides You'll finde a moft writte time to disturbe him; Health to your Lordships.
Enter Gardiner.

Wol. Give me your hand: much joy & favour to you; You are the Kings now.

Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your Grace, whose hand he's rais'd me.

Kim. Come hither Gardiner.

Walker and whisperers.

Camp. My Lord of Turky, was not one Doctor Face
In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Camp. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Camp. Believe me there's an ill opinion spread then, Even of your selfe Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How? of me?

Camp. They will not fickle to say, you enuise him; And fearing he would rise (he was so vertuous) Kept him a forraigne manstill, which he gree'd him, That he ran mad, and died.

Wol. Heavens peace be with him.

That's Christian care enough for living Murrurers, There's places of rebuke. He was a Poole; For he would needs be vertuous. That good Fellow, If I command him follows my appointment, I will have none to neere elts. Learne this Brother, We live not to be grip'd by meaner perions.

Kim. Deliver this with modesty to the Queene.

Exit Gardiner.

The most convenient place, that I can think of For such receipts of Learning, is Black-Fryers: There ye shall meete about this wariey buines.

My Wolfsy, see it furnish'd, O my Lord, Would it not griene an able man to leaue So sweet a Bedellow? But Conscience, Conscience; O'tis a tender place, and I must leaue her. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Anne Batten, and an old Lady.

An. Not for that neither; there's the pang that pinsches, His Highness, having hie'd so long with her, and the So good a Lady, that no couer Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life, She never knew harme-doing; Oh,now after So many courtes of the Sun enthroned, Still growing to a Maiestie and pompe, the which To leaue, a thousandfold more bitter, then 'Tis sweet at first 'tis acquire. After this Processe. To give her the usuall, it is a pity Would move a Monfer.

Old La. Hearts of most hard temper Melt and lament for her.

An. Oh Gods will, much better She ne'er had knowne pumpe, though't be temporall, Yet if that quarel, Fortune, do disprise It from the bearen, 'tis a sufferrance, panging As soule and bodies fearing.

Old L. Alas poorer Lady, She's a stranger now again.

An. So much the more Muff pitye drop upon her, verily I sweare'tis better to be lowly borne, and range with humble lutes in Content,
Then to be perk'd up in a glibbering grieve;
And were a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best haging.

Anne. By my troth, and Maidenhead,
I would not be a Queen.

Old L. Butrew me, I would,
And venture Maidenhead for't, and so would you
For all this spice of your Haprocrie.
You that have to faire parts of Woman on you,
Have (too) a Woman's heart, which euer yet
Affected Enlissence, Weath, Soveraigny,
Which, to fooyoth, are Blessings; and which guifts
Suing your musing the capacity
Of your lost Chintreel Conference, would receiv;
If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth.

Old L. Yet troth, & troth; you would not be a Queen?
Anne. No, not for all the riches under Heuen.

Old L. Tis strange: three pence bow'd would hire me
Old as I am, to Queene it: but I pray you,
What thinke you of a Dutchesse? Have you limbs to bear that load of Title?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old L. Then you are weely made, plucke of a little,
I would not be a young Count in your way,
For more then blushing comes to: if your backe
Cannot vouchsafe this bushten, tis too weake
Euer to get a Boy.

Anne. How you doe talke;
I weare a gaine, I would not be a Queen,
For all the world:
Old L. In faith, for little England
You vntier an embalming: I my felte
Would for Curnarnamore, although there long'd
No more to th'o Clowne but that: Lo, who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlaine,

(know L. Cham.
Good morrow Ladies; what's worth to
The secreet of your conference?

Anne. My good Lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our Milits Sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle bunefele, and becoming
The action of good women, there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now I pray God, Amen.

Cham. You bear a gentle mickle, & heav'nly blessings
Follow such Creatures. That you may, faire Lady
Perceive I speake sincerel, and high notes
Tane of your many verrues; the Kings Mainly Commends his good opinion of you, to you; and Do's purposse honour in you so lesse flowing,
Then Marchioneel of Pembrroke, to which Title,
A Thousand pound a yeare, Asswllll Support,
Our of his Grace, he takles: Tho' so,

Anne. I do not know
What kindes of my obedience, I shoulde render:
More then my All, it Nothing: Nice my Prayers
Are not words delycely hallowed; nor my Witthe
More worth, then empty vanities i yet Prayers & Withis
Are all I can returne. Benech your Lordship,
Youthfully to speake my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a bluth nog Handmaid, to his Highness;
Whose health and Royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady's;
I shall not faile approue the faire conceit
The King hath of you. I have peruse her well;
Beauty and Honour in her are somningled,
That they have caught the King: and who knows yet
But from this Lady, may proceed a tempe,
To lighten all this lie. Ple to the King,
And Isy I spake with you.

Exit Lord Chamberlain.

Anne. My honrour'd Lord.

Old L. Why this is: See, see,
I have bene beggins eighteen yeares in Court
(An yet a Courtier beggerly) not could Come pat between too early, and too late
For any lant of pondists and you, (of sate)
A very freshe Fifth beere; eye, eye spon
This compelt fortune: have your mouth fild vp,
Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How taffs it? Is it bitter? Forty pettie no;
There was a Lady once (in a old Story)
That would not be a Queene, that would the not
For all the mud in Egypt: you have heard it?

Anne. Come you are pleasent.

Old L. With your Theame, I could
O'te-momt the Laskes. The Marchioneel of Pembrake?
A thousand pounds a yeare, for pure respect?
No other obligation? by my Life,
That promiseth no thousands: Honours traine
Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time
I know your backe will beare a Dutchesse. Say,
Are you not strong then you were?

Old L. With your Theame, I could
Make your felle mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being
If this salue my blood a lot; it faints me
To think what follows.

The Queene it comfortlese, and were forgetful
In our long absence: pray do not deliever,
What there ye'z haue heard to her.

Old L. What do you thinke me—  Ecenti.

Secona Quarta.

Trumpets, Sennet, and Cornet.
Enter two Verrys, with five flower mondles; next them two Strikes in the habite of Delfants after them, the Bishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Eliz., ReFORMANCE, and S. Aapo: Next them, with some small distance, follow a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the great Seal, and a Cardinals Hat. Then two Prifons, bearing each a Silver Cross: Then a Gentleman Flor berheaded, accompanied with a Surgeon at Arms, bearing a Silver Mace, and two Gentleman bearing two great
Silver Pilleris: After them, side by side, the two Cardinals,
Two Noblemen with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the Cloth of State. The two Cardinals fit under him at Judges. The Queen takes place some di-ference from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the Court in manner of a Confrere. Below them the Scribes. The Ladys fit next the Bishops. The rest of be Attendents floud in convenient order about the Stage.

Card.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Car. Whilt't our Commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

King. What's the need?
It hath already publiquely bene read,
And on all sides th'Authority allow'd,
You may then spare that time.

Car. Bee't so, proceed.

King. Heere.

Scrib. Say, Katherine Queen of England,
Come into the Court.

The Queene makes no answer, rises out of her Chaire, goes about the Court, comes to the King, and kneels at his Feet. Then speaks.

Sir, I desire you do me Right and Jusitice,
And to bellow your pitty on me; for
I am a moft poore Woman, and a Stranger,
Borne out of your Dominions: having heere
No Judge indifferent, nor no more affurance
Of equal Friendship and Proceeding. Also Sirs:
In what have I offended you? What cause
Hath you? what I have given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceede to put me off,
And take your good Grace from me? Heauen witness,
I have bene to you, a true and humble Wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Euer in earde to kindle your Dislike,
Yes, subiect to your Countenance: Glad, or forry,
As I saw it inclin'd? When was the hour
I hearre contradicted your Deire?
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your Friends
Have I not sueue to lose, although I knew
He were mine Enemy? What Friend of mine,
That had to him deriu'd your Anger, did I
Continue in my Liking? Nay, gave notice
He was from thence eliçher'd? Sir, call to minde,
That I have bene your Wife, in this obedience,
Vpon twenty yeares, and have bene blest
With many Children by you, If in the coune,
And prooue of this time, you can report,
And proue it too, against your Honor, ought.
My bond to Wedlocke, or my Luue and Dutie
Against your Sacred Person; in Gods name
Turne me away: and let the fowl'ft Contempt
Shut doore vp on me, and do gue me vp.
To the sharpe & kind of Justice. Please you, Sirs,
The King your Father, was reputed for
A Prince moxt Prudent: of an excellent
And vnmatch'd Wit, and Judgement. Ferdinond
My Father, King of Spaine, was reckon'd one
The wifel'ft Prince, that there had reigne'd, by many
A yeares before. It is not to be questioned,
That they had gather'd a wise Counsellor to them
Of every Race, that did debate this Benefite,
Who demand'd our Marriage lawful. Wherefore I humble
Before you Sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my Friends in Spaine, advis'd; whose Counsile
I will implore. If not thr'payne of God
Your pleasure be fulfill'd.

Wal. You have here Lady,
(And of your choice) these Reuerend Fathers, men
Of Empire, to regresse and Learning:
Yea, the eloquent Land, who are assembled
To please your Cause. It shall be therefore best to
That longer you define the Court, as well
Pursue your owne quiet, as to rectifie
What is vexed in the King.

Camp. His Grace
Hath spoken well, and iustly: Therefore Madam,
It's this Royall Seffion do proceed,
And that (without delay) their Arguments
Be now produce'd, and heard.

Qu. Lord Cardinal, to you I speake.

Wal. Your pleasure, Madam.

Qu. Sir, I am about to wepe; but thinking that We're a Queene (or long have dream'd to) certain
The daughter of a King, my drops of tears,
It ture to spakes of fire.

Wal. Be patient yet.

Qu. I will, when you are humble; Nay before,
Or God will punishe me. I do believe (Induc'd by potent Circumstances) that
You are mine Enemy, and make my Challenge,
You shall not be my Judge. For is my
Have blowne this Coale, betwixt my Lord, and me;
(Which Gods dew quench'd) therefore I say againe, I
Wittily abhorre: yes, from my Soule
Refuse you for your Judge, whom yet once more
I hold my selfe malicious For, and think not
At all a Friend to truth.

Wal. I do professe
You speake not like your selfe: who ever yet
Hau'e flood to Charity, and displayed th'effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisedome,
One topp'ng womans pow'r. Madam, you do me wrong
I have no Spicke me against you, nor induixe
For you, or any, how faire I have proceeded,
Or how faire further (Shall) be warranted
By a Commisision from the Conftitute.

Yes, the whole Conftituete of Rome. You charge me,
That I have blowne this Coale: I do deny it,
The King is proues: I'me be knowne to him,
That I gaines my Deed, how may he wound,
And wittily my Paleshood, yea, as much
As you have done my Truth. I know,
That I am free of your Report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lets to curse me, and the Cure is to Remoue these Thoughts from you. The which before
His highnesse shall speake in, I do beseech
You gravious Madam) to unthynke your speaking,
And to say to no more.

Qu. Your, Lord my Lord, my Lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weake,
Toppoyse your cunning, Yare meek, & humble-mouth'd
You figure your Pice, and calling, in full seeling,
With Meckenesse and Humilitie: but your Heart
Is cram'd with Arrogance, Spiceness, and Pride,
You hau'e by Fortune, and his Highnesse favours,
Gone highlie a'ere lowe Drugs, now are mouted
Where Powres are your Retainers, and your words
(Domestickes to you) ture your will, a'nt pleaseth
Your selfe pronounce their Office. I must tell you,
You tnder more your persons Honor, then
Your high proffession Spirituall. That agen
I do refuse you for my Judge, and heere
Before you all, Apothe into the Pope.
To bring my whole Cause there at Hallofice,
And to be judged by him.

She Carries to the King, and offers to depart.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Camp. The Queen is obstinate, Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse, and Disdaunfull to be trieble by't; as not well. She's going away.

Kyn. Call her again.

Cverst. Katherine, Q. of England, come into the Court, Gent. Mis'm. You are cold backed.

Ques. What need you now impell you keep your way, When you are cold returne. Now the Lord helpe,

They taue me past my patience pray you passe on; I will not tarry no, nor ever more.

Upon this bunnetle my appearance make,
In any of their Courts.

Exe. Queen, and her Attendants.

Kyn. Give thy ways, Kate,
That man is't in world, who shall report he's
A better Wife, let him on naught be trusted,
For speaking false in that, to be an alone
(If thy rate qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness Samlike, Write-like Government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy pass
Soveraigne and Proueicals could (speak thee out)
The Queen's earthly Queens: Shoe's Noble borne;
And like her true Nobility, she's Carried her feete towards me.

Well. Moll gracious Sir,
In humble manner I require your Highnes,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing
Of all these care (for where I am rob'd and bound,
There must I be valousd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfied) whether ever I did broach this businesse to your Highnes; or Land an enticement in your way whi brought Induce you to the question in'ton our part Hauet yoou, but with thanked to God for such A Royall Lady, space not, the least word that might
Be to the prejudice of her present State,
Or touch of her good Person?

Kyn. My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you, yes, upon mine Honour,
I free you from't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies that know not
Why they are so; but like to Villagge Curres,
Barke when their fellows dye. By some of these
The Queen is put in angerly are excuse'd.
But will you be more iustifi'd? You ever
Hauet with'd the sleeping of this businesse, neverdef'd
It to be fin'd; but off have hindered off,
The passages made toward is; on my Honour,
I speake my good Lord Cardinal, to this point;
And thus faire cleare him,
Now, what shou'd me too't,
I will be bold with you and your attention: (tont)
Then marke th'inducement. Thus it came; giue heede
My Conscience first receiv'd a sendence,
Scruple, and prickle, on certaine Speeches were'd
Byth' Bishop of Bapton shall becon Embassador,
Who had beene hiser seet on the debating
And Marriage' twixt the Duke of Orlesance, and
Our Daughter Alford: P'th' Progress of this businesse
Ere a determinate resolution, hee
(I mean the Bishop) did require a refpite,
Wherein he might the King his Lord aduertisie,
Whether our Daughters were legitimate,
Refpecting this our Marriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brotliers Wife. This refpite shoone
The bolome of my Conscience, enter'd me;
Yea, with a spitting power, and made to trouble
The region of my Breath, which for't such way,
That many maz'd confiderings, did throng
And prev'd in with this Caution. First, me thought I Sow'd not in the midle of Heaven, who had Commanded Natures would be
If the concei'd a male child by me, should Doe no more Office of life too; then
The Grate does to th' dead: For her Male Issue,
Or did where they were made, or shortly after
This world had a'th' them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a judgement on me, that my Kingdome
(Well worthy the beft Heye o'th World) Should not Be gladness in't me. Then follow'd, that I weigh'd the danger which my Realnes flood in
By this my Issue faille, and that gave to me
Many a groaning throw: thus helling in
The wild Sea of my Conscience, did there
Toward this remedy, whereupon we are
Now pretend here togetherthat's to say,
I meen'to rectifie my Conscience, which I
Then did feel full fetter, and yet not well,
By all the Reuerend Fathers of the Land,
And Doctours learn'd. First I began in priuate,
With you my Lord of Linclene, you remember
How under my oppressed I did recket
When I first mow'd you.

B. Luc. Very well my Lord.

Kyn. I have spoke long, be plea'd yoou felie to say
How farre you (extend me.

Luc. So plight your Highness,
The question did at first so flatter one,
Bearing a State of mighty moment in,
And conquence of dread, that I committed
The dauntick Counsil which I had to doubt,
And did extend your Highnes to this couer,
Which you are running here.

Kyn. I then mow'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got you leaue
To make this present Summons vnsolicit'd,
I left no Reuerend Perion in this Court;
But by particular content proceeded
Vader your hands and Seales; therefore goe on,
For no dislike t'be' world against the perion
Of the good Queene; but the sharpe thorny points
Of my allaged reasons, dreses this forward:
Proxe but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life
And Longly Dignity, we are contested
To a'ere our mortal State to come, with her,
(Katherine our Queene) before the pricem Creature
That's Pargg, and o'th World
Camp. So plight your Highnes,
The Queene being abient, 'ts a needfull finste,
That we aduance this Court till further day;
Meane while, must be an earnest motion
Made to the Queene, that back her Appeale
She intends into his Holiness.

Kyn. I may perceive
These Cardinals subtle with me: I abhor
This dilatory flush, and trickes of Rome.
My learnt'd and wellbeloved Seruant Cramer,
Prethee returne, with thy approch: I know,
My comfort comes slone: break up the Court;
I stay, let on.

Excuse, in manner as they enter'd.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Queen and her Women as at works.

Queen. Take thy Lute wench, my Soule grows sad with troubles, Sing, and discharge 'em if thou canst, leave working:

SONG.

O Silvers with his Lute made Trees, And the Mountain tops that freeze, Bear themselves when he did sing, To his Muses, Plants and Flowers Ever springing, in Sunse and Showers, There had made a lasting Spring. Every thing that heard him play, Even the Billowes of the Sea, Hung their heads, & then sat by. In sweet Mischike is such Art, Killing care, & griefs of hearts, Fall asleep, or hearing are.

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now? Gent. Andplease your Grace, the two great Cardinals Wait in the Chamber. Queen. Would they speak with me? Gent. They will me say to Madam. Queen. Pray their Grace To come nooere: what can be their busines With me, a poore weak woman, false from favour? I doe not like their comming; now I think on't, They should bee good men, their affairs as righteous: But all Hoods, make not Monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, Walsig & Capman. Wolf. Peace to your Highnesse. Queen. Your Grace find me here part of a Houfwife, (I would be all) against the worft may happen: What are your pleasures with my reuerent Lords? Wol. May it please you Neph Madam, to withdraw Into your private Chamber, we shall give you The full caufe of our comming.

Queen. Speake it here.

There's nothing I have done yet o' my Conscience Deferves a Corner: would all other Women Could speake this with as free a Soule as I doe. My Lords, I care not (so much I am happy Abone a number): if my actions Were to bee by every tongue, every eye saw'em. Envy and base opinion let against 'em, I know my life to euer. If your busines Seek me out, and that way I am Wife in; Out with it boldly: Truth looses open dealing. Card. Tanta e fuae mensae integritas Regina forensismis. Queen. O good my Lord, no Lim; I am not faith a Truete fince my comming. A ftrange Tongue makes my caufe more strange, fuppofe Pray speake in English; there are some will thank you, If you speake truth, for their poore Miftris fake; Beleeue me fine he's bad much wrong. Lord Cardinal, The willing'fine I ever yet committed, May be abolisht in English.

Card. Noble Lady.

I am sorry my integrity shoul breed, (And fervice to his Majefty and you) So deepes fupprefion, where all faith was meant; We come not by the way of Accufation, To take that honoure every good Tongue blesse; Nor beare you any way to forrow; You have too much good Lady: But to know How you stand minded in the weightie difference Between the King and you, and to deliver (Like free and honnet men) our iult opinions, And comfort to our caufe.

Camp. Most honour'd Madam, My Lord of York, out of his Noble nature, Zeale and obedience he still borie your Grace, Forgetting (like a good man) your late Centurie Both of his truth and him (which was too farre) Offers, as I doe, in a figne of peace, His Sence, and his Counsell.

Queen. To betray me. My Lords, I thank you both for your good wills, Ye speake like honnet men, (pray God ye prove fe) But how to make ye foddainly an Anfwere In fuch a point of weight, to neere mine Honour, (More neere my Life I feeare) with my wake wit; And to fuch men of gravey and learning; In truth I know not. I was let at worke, Among my Maids, full little (God knowes)looking Either for fuch men, or good busines; For her fake that I have beeene, for I feele The laft fit of my Greatnesse: good your Grace Let me haue time and Counsell for my Caufe: Als, I am a Woman frendlesse, hopefe. Wol. Madam. You wrong the Kings loue with these feares, Your hopes and friends are infinite. Queen. In England, But little for my profit can you thinke Lords, That any English man dare gie me Counsell? Or be a knowne friend gaine his Highnes pleasure, (Though he be growne to deprecate to be honett) And lisse a Subiect? Nay forfooth, my Friends, They that must weigh out my affilations, They that must truthfull growe to, like not heare, They are (at all my other comfortable) far hence In mine owne Country Lords, Camp. I would your Grace Would leaue your greeter, and take my Counsell, Queen. How Sit? Camp. Put your maine caufe into the Kings proteccion, He's louing and most gracious. 'Twill be much, Both for your Honour better, and your Caufe: For if the tryall of the I aw of once take ye, You'll part away disgraced. sol. He tells you rightly. Queen. Ye tell me what ye wish for both, my ruine: Is this your Christian Counsell? Out wpon ye. Heaven is abuse all yet; there fins a Judge, That no King can corrupt. Cam. Your rage misakes ye.

Queen. The more fame for yeholy men I thought ye, Vpon my Soule two reuerent Cardinal Verties: But Cardinal Sin, and hollow hearts I feare ye: Mend 'em for shame my Lords: Is this your comfort? The Cordillia that ye bring a wretche Lady? A woman lost among ye, laught at, scorn'd I will not with ye holdie my miseries,
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

As yours was, put into you, ever caft.

Such doubts as fälle, come from it. The King loves you, beware you love it not: For vs (if you please)

To truft us in your busines, we are ready.

To vie our vnoft Studies, in your feruice.

Qw. Do what ye will, my Lords;

And pray forgive me;

If I have vs drop felle vnmann'rly,

You know I am a Woman, lacking wit,

To make a femeily answer to fuch perfons,

Pray do my feruice to his Maiji;

He has my heart yet, and shall have my Prayers.

While I shall have my life. Come returne Fathers,

Below your Counsels on me. She now begges

That little thought when the fad footing here,

She should have bought her Dignities fo deere.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Now. If you will now write in your Complaints,

And force them with a Confinancy, the Cardinall

Cannot stand under them. If you omit

The offer of this time, I cannot promise,

But that you fhall futaine more new difgraces,

With these ye bearre alreadie.

Swr. I am joyfull

To meete the leaft occasion, that may give me

Remembrance of my Father-in-Law, the Duke,

To be reueng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the Peers,

Have uncontented gone by him, or at leaft

Strangely neglected? When did he regard

The fame of Noblenesse in any perfon

Out of himfelfe?

Cham. My Lords, you fpeak your pleasures:

What he defires of you and me, I know:

What we can do to him (though now the time Gives way to vs) I much fearre. If you cannot Barre his access to this King, never attempt

Any thing on him: for he hath a Witchescraft

Over the King in his Tongue.

Now. Of fearre him not,

His fpell in that is out: the King hath found

Mater againft him, that for ever marre

The Hony of his Language. No, he's feeled

(Not to come off) in his defpifure.

Swr. Sir,

I fhould be glad to hearfuch Newer as this

Once every houre.

Now. Believe it, this is true.

In the Difiouece, his contrarie proceedings

Are all vnoftled: wherefore he appears,

As it would withcheue Enemy.

Suf. How come

His praftices to light?

Suf. Moft strangely.

Suf. O how? how?

Suf. The Cardinalls Letters to the Pope mifcarried.

And
And came to th' eye with King, wherein was read
How that the Cardinal did interest his Holiness
To stay the Judgement of th' Disme; for if
It did take place, I do (quoth he) perceive
My King is tangled in affliction, so
A Creature of the Queues, Lady Anne Bullen,
Shall be the King this?
Saf. Believe it.
Sir. Will this worke?
Cham. The King in this perceives him, how he coasts
And hedges his owne way. But in this point,
All his trickers founder, and he brings his Physicke
After his Patietes death the King already
Har and made the faire Lady,
Saf. Would he had been.
Saf. May you be happy in your wish: my Lord,
For I profess you have it.
Sir. Now all my joy
Trace the Conjunction,
Saf. My Amen too's.
Now. All mean.
Saf. There's order glean for her Coronation:
Marry this is yet but going, and may be left
To some cares unaccounted. But my Lords
She's a gallant Creature, and complete
In mind and feature. I persuade not from her
Will fall some blessing to this Land, which shall Lin it be memoriz'd.
Sir. But will the King
Diggagii Leter of the Cardinals?
The Lord forbid.
Now. Marry Amen.
Saf. Nay no.
There be met Wasper that buzz about his Nose,
Will make this thing the sooner. Cardinal Campeius,
Is flying away to Rome hath taine no leave, He's left the castle o' flying unhunted, and
Is posted as the Agent of our Cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do suffice you,
The King cry'd Heav't at this,
Cham. Now God incence him,
And let him cry Hallow-day.
Now. But my Lord
When returns Campeius?
Saf. He is return'd in his Opinions, which
Have satisfied the King for his Disourse,
Together with all famous Colledges
Ainfitt in Christendome: shortly (be beleauz)
His second Marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her Coronation. Rake mine more
Shall he call'd Queen, but Princecel Dowager,
And Widow to Prince Arthur.
Now. This time Cromwell's
A warry Fellow, and hath taken much paine
In the Kings business.
Saf. He is, and we shall see him
For it an Archbyshop.
Now. So I hope.
Saf. Tho. fo.
Crom. This was Wolsey and Cromwell.
The Cardinals
Now. Observe, obstrue; he's moody,
Crom. The Packet Cromwell,
Cau'try out the King?
Crom. To his owne hand, in't Bed-chamber.
Lady. Look he be'th inside of the Paper?
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

His Contemplation was about the earth, And fixt on Spiritual objects, he should fall Devoid in his Musings, but I am afraid His Thinksings are below the Moon, not worth His serious consider.

King takes his Seat, whiles Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Car. Heaven forgive me,
Euer God blest your Highness.

King. Good my Lord,
You are full of Heavenly tiff, and bear the Inventory Of your belt Graces, in your mantle; the which You were now running o'r, you have scarce time To slake from Spirit all lyeure, a briefe span To keep your earthly Audit, sure in that I deeme you an ill Husband, and a gold To have you therein my Compassion.

Car. Sir,
For Holy Offices I haue a time; a time
To thynke vpon the part of thynke, which
I bare i'th State; and Nature does require Her times of precaution, which persevere
Her fraile bonne, amon'tt my Brethren mortall,
Muft guie my tendance to.

King. You have faid well.
Car. And euer may your Highness ysoke together, (As I will lend you caule) my doing well,
With my well laying,
King. Tis well said,
And as a kind of good deed, to say well,
And yet words are no deeds. My Father loyd you,
He laid him, and with his deed did Crowne
His word vpon you. Since I had my Office,
I haue kept you next my Heart, haue not alone Employ'd you where high Profits might come home,
But pard my present Haungis, to beflow
My Bounties vpon you.

Car. What should this mean?
Sur. The Lord increaseth this bunifette,
King. Have I not made you
The prime man of the State? I pray you tell me,
If you did not pronounce, have you found true:
And if you may confesse it, lay withall
If you are bounde to, or no. What say you?
Car. My Sovereigne, I confesse my Royall graces
Should on me daily, beene more then could
My studied purposes require, which went Beyond all mans endeavours. My endeavours,
Have euer come too short of my Deifies,
Yet fill'd with my Abil ties: Mine owne ends
Have bee mine to, that euermore they pointed
To th'good of your mouf Sacred Perfon, and
The profit of the State. For your great Graces
Heaped vpon you (poore Underfitter)
I cannot render but Allegian thanks,
My Prayres to heauen for you; my Loyaltie
Which euer ha's, and euer shall be growing,
Till death (tho't Winter) kill it.

King. Fairly answer'd.
A Loyal, and obedient Subject is
Therein illustrated, the Honor of it
Does not the Act oft, as it's contrary
The fowlence is the punishment. I preface,
That as my hand ha's open'd Bountie to you,
My heart drop'd Love, my powre raint'Honor, more
On you, then any: So your Hand, and Heart,

Your Braine, and every Function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of dutie,
As'tier in Loues particular, be more
To me your Friend, then any,
Car. I do professe,
That for your Highness good, I euer labour'd
More then mine owne; that am, have, and will be (Though all the world should cracke their dutie to you,
And thow it from their Soule, though pritie did Abound, as thicke as thought could make 'em, and Appeare in formes more hardily yet my Dutie,
As doth a Roke against the chiding Flood,
Should the approach of this wide River breake,
And stand unhaken yours.

King. 'Tis Nobly spoken:
Take notice Lords, he ha's a Loyal bref't,
For you have seene him open'. Read o're this,
And alter this, and then to Breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Exit King, Drawning open the Cardinal, the Nobles
Theory after him smiling, and whifpering.

Car. What should this mean?
What Eadaine Anger's this? How have I rece'd it?
He past Bowming from me, as if Ruine
Leaped from his Eyes. So lockes the chaffe Lyon
Upon the daring Huntman that hath gal'd him:
Then makes him nothing, I must reade this paper:
I feare the Story of his Anger. 'Tis so:
This paper ha's mind'd me: 'Tis an Acquitt
Of all that world of West-ih I haue drawne together
For mine owne ends, (Indeed to gain the P. pedome,
And see my Friends in Rome.) O Negligence!
Fit for a Poole to fall by. What croffe Driell
Made me put this mane Secret in the Packet
I sent the King? Is there no way to cear this?
No new device to bear this from his Braines
I know 'twill thrice him stronly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in fupes of Fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this? To the Pope?
The Letter (as I live) with all the Bunifette
I wrote too Holifette. Nay then, farewell:
I haue touch'd the highr part of all my Greatniffe,
And from that full Meridian of my Glory,
I haile now to my Setting. I shall fall
Like a bright exaltation in the Evening,
And no man fee me more.

Letter to Wolsey, the Duke of Noffolk and Suffolk, the Earle of Sarey, and the Lord Chamberlaine.

Ner. Heare the Kings pleasure Cardinal,
Who commands you
To render vp the Great Seale prefently
Into our hands, and to Confine your fife
To Ather-house, my Lord of Wincheffers,
Till you hearre further from his Highniffe.

Car. Stay:
Where's your Commissio'n? Lords,words cannot carrie
Authority so weighty.

Saff. Who dare croffe me,
Bearing the Kings mail from his mouth expreffely?
Car. Till I finde more then will, or words to do it,
(I mean your palicie) know, Officious Lords,
I dare, and must deny it. Now I feele
Of what course Miflefe ye are meadled, Enuy,
How eagerly ye follow my Difgraces

As
Nor. Thofe Articles, my Lord, are in the Kings hand:
But thus much, they are foole ones.
Wol. So much fayre.

And Caraff, thane of Innocence arife,
When the King knowes my Truth.
Sur. This cannot face you:
I thankne my Memorie, I yet remember
Some of their Articles, and out they flank.
Now, if you can blufh, and cry guilty Cardinall,
You'll shew a little Honelfie.

Wol. Speak ne Sir,
I dare your word Obfervations: If I blufh,
It is to fee a Nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want none, then my head;
Hate at you,
First, that without the Kings filent or knowledge,
You wouldt be a Legacie, by which power
You main'd the Jurifdiction of all Bishops.

Nor. Then, That in all you write to Rome, or elfe
To Forraigne Princes, Egz & Rex meanes
Was still infen'd in which you brought the King
To be your Servant.

Sur. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of King or Councell, when you went Ambaffador to the Emperor, you made bold
To carry into Plandes, the Great Seale.

Sur. Item, You fent a large Commination
To Gregory de Cardinall, to conclude
Without the Kings will, or the States allowance,
A League betweene his Highneffe, and Ferrara.

Sur. That out of meere Ambition, you have ca’d
Your holy-Hat to be hympt in the Kings Come.

Sur. Then, That you have lent innumerable Subftance,
(By what meanes, gent. I leave to your owne confideration)
To finall Rome, and to prepare the wayes
You have for Diuines, to the more un PROFific.
Of all the Kingdome. Many more there are,
Which since they are of you, and odious,
I will not trench my mouth with.

Oblige. O my Lord,
Paffrel not a falling man too-farre ’tis Virtue:
His faultes let open to the Lawes, let them
(Not you) correct him. My heart weepes to fee him
So little, of his great Sense.

Sur. Lord Cardinall, the Kings further pleafe it,
Because all those things you have done of late
By your power Legitimation within this Kingdome,
Fall into the campaife of a Prelates;
That therefore fuch a Write be fecd against you,
To defeif all your Goods, Lands, Tenemtions,
Coffes, and whatfoever, and to be
Out of the Kings protection. This is my Charge.

Nor. And to wele I leuje you to your Meditations
How to live better. For your Rubborne answr
About the giving backe the Great Seale to vs,
The King ftall know it, and (no doubt) fhall thank you.
So farre you well, my little good Lord Cardinall.

Exeunt all but Wolsey.

Wol. So fayrelle, to the little good you bear me.
Farewel! A long farewell to all my Greatneffe.
This is the fate of Man; to day he pafs forth
The tender Leaves of hope, to morrow Bifouges,
And bears his blufhing Honors thick upon him:
The third day, comes a frost; a killing Frost,
And when he thinke, good cafe man, fully
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

No Sun, shall ever after thine Honors,
Or gilde againe the Noble Troopes that weighted
Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me Cromwel,
I am a poore falme man, unworthy now
To be thy Lord, and Master. Seeke the King.
(That Sun, I pray may neuer be) I haue told him,
What, and how true thow art; he will aduance thee:
Some little memory of me, will triue him.
(I know his Noble Nature) not to let.
Thy hopefull servite perseth too. Good Cromwel
Neglect him not: make vfe now, and prouide
For thine owne future safety.

Crom. O my Lord,
Muff I then leave you? Muff I needs forgo
So good, fo Noble, and fo true a Master?
Beware wittlesse, all that issue not hearts of Iro,
With what a forrow Cromwel leaves his Lord.
The King shall haue my servitue; but my prayses,
For euer, and for euer shall be yours.

Crom. Cromwel, I did not thinke to fled a tearce
In all my Miferies: But thou haft forc'd me
(Out of thy honest truth) to play the Woman.
Let's dry our eyes: And thus faire heare me Cromwel,
And when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And deve in dull cold Marke, where no mention
Of me, more maue be heard of: Say I taung thee,
Say Wolsey, that once tread the wayes of Glory,
And founded all the Deeps, and Shoales of Honor,
Found thee a waye (out of his wracke) to rise in:
A lure, and fate one, though thy Master mist it.
Marke but my Fall, and that that Ruin'd me:
Cromwel, I charge thee, fling away Ambition,
By that finne fell the Angels: lowe can match then
(The Image of his Maker) hope to win by it?
Lowe thye felte lift, cherish those hearets that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more then Honesty.
Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace
To silence enious Tongues. Be iuf, and feare not;
Let all the ends thou aynt at, be thy Country,
Thy Gods, and Truths. Then if thou fall hit (O Cromwel)
Thou fall a blessed Martyr.
Serve the King: And prythee leade me in:
There take an Inventory of all I haue,
To the laft peny, 'tis the Kings. My Robe,
And my Integrity to Heauen, is all,
I dare now call mine owne. O Cromwel, Cromwel,
Had I but ier'd my God, with halfe the Zeale
I fer'd my King: he would not in mine Age
Have left me naked to mine Enemies.
Crom. Good Sir, haue patience.
Crom. So I haue. Farewell
The Hopes of Courts, my Hopes in Heauen do dwell.

Extens.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1 Y'are well met once againe.
2 So are you.
3 You come to take your land here, and behold
The Lady Anne, paifie from her Coronation.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

2 A Royal Train beleevce me: Thse I know: Who's that that bears the Sceptr?
1 Marquess Dorset,
And that the Earl of Surrey with the Rod,
2 A bold brave Gentleman, That should bee
The Duke of Suffolk.
1 'Tis the fame: high Steward.
2 And that my Lord of Norfolke?
1 Yes,
2 Haue bene thee,
Thou haft the sweetest face I ever look'd on:
Sir, I haue a Soule, she is an Angell:
Our King has all the Indies in his Armes,
And more, and richer, when he strains that Lady,
I cannot blame his Conscience.
3 They that bear
The Cleath of Honour over her, are foure Barons
Of the Cinque Ports.
2 Thofe men are happy,
And so are all, neer her.
1 I take it, she that carries vp the Traine,
Is that old Noble Lady, Duke offfle of Norfolke.
2 It is, and all the reft are Counsellors.
3 And all the Scares are Stedded,
And oftimes falling one.
2 No more of that.

Enter a third Gentleman.
1 God saw you Sir. Where haue you bin broling?
3 Among the crow'd with'th Abbey, where a finger
Could not be widge'd in more: I am fill'd
With the more ranknesse of their toy.
2 You saw the Ceremony?
3 That I did.
1 How was it?
2 Well worth the seeing,
2 Good Sir, I speake it to vs?
3 As well as I am able. The rich freame
Of Lords, and Ladies, haue brought the Queene
To a prepa'td place in the Quire. fell off
A distance from her; while her Grace face downe
To reit a while, some halfe an houre, or so,
In a rich Chaire of State, oppoising freely
The Beauty of her Person to the People.
Believce me Sir, she is the goodheft Woman
That euer lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noyle arose.
As the throudes make at Sea, in a little Tempeft,
As lowd, and ro as many Tunes. Hats, Cloakes,
(Doibb it, I thinkke) blow vp, and had their Faces
Bin loofe, this day they haue beene loft. Such joy
I never faw before. Great belly'd women,
That had not halfe a weeke to go-like Rammes
In the old time of Warre, would make the preafe
And make 'em reele before' em. No man liting
Could fay this is my wife there; all were wouen
So tranqul in their Boone.
2 But what follow'd?
3 At length, her Grace rofe, and with modest paces
Came to the Altar, where the kneel'd, and Saints-like
Caf her faire eyes to Heauen, and pray'd denoucy.
Then rote againe, and bow'd her to the people:
When by the Arch-byhop of Canterbury,
She had all the Royall makin's of a Queene;
As holyple, Edward Contrifors Crowne,
The Red, and Bird of Peace, and all rich Emblemes
I said Nobly on her: which perform'd, the Queine

With

The Order of the Coronation.

1 A Tichr Triumph of Trumpets.
2 Ten, two Faders.
3 Lord Chancellor, with Purse and Mace before him.
4 Quintaints finging, Musick.
5 Master of London, bearing the Mace. Then Garter, in his Court of Armes, and on his head he wore a Gift Copper Coronet.
6 Marquess Dorset, bearing a Stoper of Gold, on his head, a Doiy Crowne of Gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the Red of Sifer, with the Dow, Crowned with an Earles Crowne. Collars of Effet.
7 Duke of Suffolk, in his Robe of Estate his Coronet on his head bearing a Two white Wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolke, with the Red of Marshallship, a Coronet on his head. Collars of Effet.
8 A Canopy, keene by fome of the Cinque Ports, under it the Queene in her Robe, on her haires, freely adrofted with People, Crowned. On each fide her, the Bishops of London, and Wincheffer.
9 The Old Duke offfle of Norfolke, in a Coronall of Gold, brought with Flowers bearing the Queenes Traine.
10 Certaine Ladies or Counsellors, with fome Circles of Gold before them.

Exeunt, first going over the Stage in Order and State, and then A great Favour of Trumpets.

The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

With all the choyfel Multitude of the Kingdome, Together sang 'Te Deum.' So the parcel, And with the same full State parded backe againe To Yorks-Place, where the Earl is held.

Sir, You must no more call is Yorks-place, that's past: For since the Cardinal fell, it is a little loft, It is now the Kings, and call'd White-Hall: 3 I know it: But it so lately alter'd, that the old name. It is fitth about me. 2 What two Recreant Byshops Were those that went on each side of the Queene? 3 Stickleby and Gardiner, the one of Winchester, Newly prefer't from the Kings Secretary: The other London. 2 He of Winchester Is held no great good favour of the Archbishops, The veracious Cranmer: 3 All the Land kneweth How euer, yet there is a great breach, when it comes Cranmer will finde a Friend will not shrik from him: 2 Who may that be, I pray you? 3 Thomas Cranmer, A man in much esteem with th'King, and truly A worthy Friend. The King ha's made him Matter of th'Welvet Hands, And one already of the Private Council. 2 He will decline more. 3 Yes without all doubt. Come Gentlemen, ye da'lt go my way, Which is to th'Court, and there ye shall be my Guests: Something I can command. As I wake thither, I'll tell ye more. Both. You my command vs Sir. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Katherine Donwyer, sick, lead between Griffith, her Gentleman-father, and Patience her Woman.

Grif. How do your Grace? Kath. O Griffith, sick to death: My Legges like loaded Branches bow to th'Earth: Willing to loose their burthen: Reach a Chaire, So now (me thinkes) I feel a little ease. Did'th thou not tell me Griffith, as thou leadst th'ince, That the great Childre of Honor, Cardinal Woffy Was dead? Grif. Yes Madam: but I thank ye your Grace Out of the paine you sufferest, gave no care roo't. Kath. Pray the good Griffith, tell me how he dy'd: If well, he slept before me happily For my example. Grif. Well, the voice goeth Madam, For after the roost Earle Northumberland Arrested he at Yorke, and brought him forward As a man forlorn, to his Answer, he fell sicke forlornly, and grew so ill He could not fit his Mule, Kath. Alas poor man Griffith, with calsie Rodes, he came to Leicester, Lodg'd in the Abbey; where the reverent Abbot With all his Couen, honoursly receiv'd him; To whom he gave these words. O Father Abbot, An old man, broken with the Hermes of State, Is come to lay his weary bones, among ye: Give him a little rest for Charity. So went to bed; where eagerly his sicknesse Pursu'd him still, and after severall days after this, About the house of eight, which he himselfe Foreordain'd should be his last, full of Repentance, Contuminal Meditations, Tears, and Sorrowes, He gave his Honors to the world agen, His blest part to Heaven, and slept in peace. Kath. So may he rest, His Fauls lye gently on him: Yet thus fare Griffith, give me leisure to speake him, And yet with Charity. He was a man Of an unbounde Stomacke, ever ranking Himselfe with Princes. One that by forgetlen Ty'd all the Kingdome. Synnyshe, was fare pl'y, His owne Opinion was his Law. I preferre He would say vntruths, and be ever double Both in his words, and meaning. He was never (but where he meant to Ruine) quitefull. His Promises, were as he then was, Mighty: But his performance, as he is now, Nothing: Of his owne body he was all, and gage The Cleary ill example. Grif. Noble Madam: Mens quill manners Juan in Brasie, their Vertues We write in Water. May it please your Highnesse To heare he speake his good now? Kath. Yes good Griffith, I were malicious elle. Grif. This Cardinal, Though from an humble Stocke, undoubtedly Was fitted to much Honor. From his Cradle He was a Scholler, and a ripe, and good one: Exceeding wise, false spoken, and persuasinge: Lofly, and lowne to their that loud him not: But, to those men that fought him, sweet as Summer.

And though he were unvari'd in getting, (Which was a sinne) yet in bestowing, Madam, He was most Princeely: Euer witnesse for him Thoie wittiness of Learning, that he raised in you, Ipswich and Oxford: one of which, fell with him, Vowilling to out-live the good that did it. The other (though unfinishd) ye're so Famous, So excellent in Art, and Hill in seating, That Christendome shall ever speake his Vertue. His Ouerthrow, heppd it Happire esse upon him: For then, and not till then, he felt himselfe, And found the Blessflednesse of being little. And to add more Honors to his Age Then man could give him; he dy'd, fearing God. Kath. After my death, I wish no other; Herald, No other speaker of my Living Actions, To kepe mine Honor, from Corruption, But such an homete Chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated Liuing, thou hast made mee With thry Religious Truth, and Modester, (Now in his Athes) Honor: Peace be with him. Patience, be near me still, and set me lower. I thane not long to trouble thee. Good Griffiths, Cauie the Multitians play me that sad note I nam'd my Knell, whil I'll fit meditating.
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

On that Catechism Harmony I go too, Sudden and solene Musick.

Gr. She is asleep: Good wench, let's fit down quiet, For fear we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

The Catechism.

Enter solenmly tripping one after another, five Personages, clad in white Robes, wearing on their heads Garland of Bays, and golden Frieze, on their faces, trusses of Bays or Oranges on their heads. They first Come unto her, then Dance: and at certain Changes, the first two held a faire Garland over her Head, at which the other three made more muttered Curses. Then the two that held the Garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their Changes, and holding the Garland over her head. Which done, they deliver the same Garland to the last two: who likewise observe the same Order,

Kath. Speak not: nor yet call for, Sawny none enter since I slept

Kath. It is not yet, I call for, Musick cease.

Kath. No: Saw you not even now a blessed Troope Insuite me to a Banquet, whose bright faces Called thousand beauteous upon me, like the Sun? They promis'd me eternall HappiCtude, and brought me Garland (Musick which I seele)

Kath. I am not worthy yet to weare; I shall alwayes

Gr. Gr. I am most toyfull Madam, such good dreams Poffesse your Fancy.

Kath. Bid the Musick cease, They are harsh and heavy to me.

Pat. Do you peace How much her Grace is ather'd on the solemnitie? How long her face is drawne? How pale the lookes, And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes?

Gr. Gr. She is going Wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heauen comfort her.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. And like your Grace K. Kath. You are a toyfull Fellow, Desire me no more entertainment?

Gr. Gr. You are too blame, Knowing the will not looke for wanted Greatnesse To vice no nude behaviour. Go to, kneele.

Mes. I humbly do entreat your Highnesse pardon, My hart made me vnmananiely. There is lying A Gentleman item from the King, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance Gr. But this Fellow Let me not rise againe, Exeunt Musick, Enter Lord Capuchin. If my sight fail not, You should be Lord Ambassadour from the Emperor, My Royal Nephew, and your name Capuchin.

Cap. Madam the same. Your Servant.

Kath. O my Lord, The Times and Tides now are alter'd strangely With me, since first you knew me.

Gr. I pray you, What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble Lady,

First mine owne service to your Grace, the next I heare requieth, that I would visit you, Who greeues much for your weaknede, and by me Sends you his Princely Commendations, And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. Of my good Lord, that comfort comes too late, Tis like a Pardon after Execution;

That gentle Physician gien in time, bad curret'd me. But I am past all Comforts hence, but Prayers.

How does his Highneffe?

Cap. Madam in good health.

Kath. So may he euer do, and euer flourish, When I shall dwell with Wormes, and my poore name Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter I can'st you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No Madam.

Kath. Sir, I must humbly pray you to deliver This to my Lord the King.

Cap. Most willing Madam.

In which I have command'd to his goodnesse

The Modell of our chaste loues: his young daughter, The dewes of Heauen fall thick in Blessings on her, Instructing him to give her vertuous breeding.

She is young, and of a Noble modest Nature, I hope the will defende her; and a little To love her for her Mothers sake, that lou'd him, Heauen knowes how dearely.

My next poore Petition,

Is, that his Noble Grace would have some pittie Upon my wretched women, that so long Have follied in their Fortunes, faithfully, Of which there is not one, I dare now (And now I shoul'd not lye) but will defende For Vertue, and true Beautie of the Soule,

For honestie, and Decent Carriage

A right good Husband (let him be a Noble) And lufe those men are happy that liall have'em. The life is for my men, they are the poorest, (This poverty could never draw'em from me) That they may have their wages, duly paid 'em, And something over to remember me by. If Heauen had pleased to have given me longer life And able means, we had not parted thus. Those are the whole Contents, and good my Lord; By that you lose the dearest in this world, As you with Christiain peace to soules depore, Stand these poore peoples Friend and trie the King To do me this last right.

Cap. By Heauen I will,

Or let me loose the fashion of a man.

Kath. I thank you honest Lord. Remember me In all humility unto his Highnesse;

Say his long studio now is palling Out of this world, Tell him in death I left him (For so I will) mine eyes grow dimme. Farewell My Lord. Gr. Farewell. Nay Patience, You must not leave me yet. I must to bed,

Call in more women. When I am dead, good Wench, Let me be vs'd with Honor; draw me over With Maiden flowers, that all the world may know I was a chaste Wife, to my Grace: Embrace me, Then lay me forth (although vnqueen'd) yet like A Queene, and Daughter to a King enter me. I can no more.

Exeunt leading Katherine. Scene

580
The Life of King Henry the Eight.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gardner Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gard. It is now a clock past four.

Lov. It has struck three.

Gard. These should be hours for necessities, Not for delights. I come to repay our Nature With comfortings repose, and not for vs To waste these times. Good night, Sir Thomas; Whether solace?

Lov. Have you come from the King, my Lord?

Gard. I did Sir Thomas, and left him at Pemister With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too

Before he go to bed. I take my leave.

Gard. No, nor yet Sir Thomas: what's the matter?

If I find you at last, and if there be No great offence, I'll give you leave Some touch of your late business: Affairs that walk (As they say Spirits do) at midnight, have In them a wilder Nature, than the business that seeks dispatch by day.

Lov. My Lord, I love you;

And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than that work. The Queens in Labor They say in great Extremity, and need She'll with the Labour, end.

Gard. The fruit the fire goes with I pray for heartily, that it may find Good time, and live: but for the Stocke Sir Thomas, I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Me thinks, I could cry the Amen, and yet my Conscience says She's a good Creature, and sweet-Lady doe's Defend our better wishes.

Gard. But Sir, Sir,

Hear me Sir Thomas, y'are a Gentleman Of mine own way, I know you Wife, Religious, And let me tell you, it will be no worse, "I will not Sir Thomas Lovell, take't up, for They Creameer, Creameel, her two hands, and fine, Sleepe in their Graves.

Lovell. Now Sir, you speak of two The most remark'd th'th'Kingdome: as for Creameel, Before this of the Jewell-Houle, is made Matter Of Th'o' Robes, and the Kings Secretary. Further Sir, Stands in the gap, and Taste of most Preferments, With which the Lime will issue them. Th'Archbyshop Is the Kings hand, and tongue, and who dare speak One syllable against him?

Gard. Ye sure, Sir Thomas,

There are that Dare, and I my selfe haue ventur'd To speak of my mind of him: and indeed this day, Sir, (May it tell you?) I think he haue written to the Lords of the Council, that he is (For I know he is, they know he is) A moft Arch-Heretique, a Paganise That does infect the Land: with which they mowt Have broken with the King, who hath to forse Given care to our Complaint, of his great Grace, And Princeely Care, for-receing th'offeit: Mischiefes,

Our Reason sayd before him: hath commanded To morrow Morning to the Council Board He be commended. He's a ranke weed Sir Thomas, And we must root him out. From your Affairs I hinder you too long: Good night, Sir Thomas.

Exit Gardner and Page.

Lov. Many good nights, my Lord; I tell you to-morrow.

Gard. Charles, I will play no more to night, My mind is not on't; you were too hard for me.

Siuf. Sir, I did neer with you before.

Gard. But little Charles, Nor shall not when my Fantacy on my play. Now Lords, from the Queen eke whacks the Newes. Lov. I could not per, usually deliver to her What you commanded me, but by her woman, I sent her Message, who return'd her thanks In the great Rumbelene, and desir'd your Hightness Most heartily to pray for her.

Kivg. What say you'll thou, Hai? To pray for her? What is this crying out?

Lov. So Gild her woman, and that her suffrance made Almost each pang a death.

Kivg. Alas good Lady.

Siuf. Gouledly quit her of her Burthen, and With gentle Travail, to the gladding of Your Hightness with an Heire.

Kivg. This midnight Charles, Prayth to bed, and in thy Prayers remember The fate of my poor Queene. Leave me alone, For I must think on this, which company Would not be friendly too.

Siuf. I will, your Highness A quiet night, and my good Multis will Remember in my Prayers.

Kivg. Charles, good night.

Exit Suffolk.

Well Sir, what followeth?

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Denn. Sir, I have brought my Lord the Arch-bishop, As you commanded me.

Kivg. Ha, Canterbury?

Denn. My good Lord.

Kivg. Tis true: where is he Denny?

Denn. He attends your Highness pleasure, Sir. Bring him to Vs.

Lov. This is about that, which the Byshop spake, I am happily come hither.

Enter Creameer and Denny.

Kivg. At奥迪 the Gallery. Land sentens to say, Ha? I have fait, Be gone.

What?

Enter Loole and Denny.

Crum. I am fearfull: Wherefore froms he thus? 'Tis his Affeet of Terror. All's not well.

Kivg. How now my Lord? You do desire to know wherefore I sent for you.

Crum. It is my duty To attend your Highness pleasure.

Kivg. Pray you arife My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury: Come, you and I must make a tourne together, I have Newes to tell you.

Come, come, give me your hand. Ah my good Lord, I peacee at what I speake, And am right for to repeat what follows, I have, and moft vividly of late
Heard many greuous. I do say my Lord
Greeuous complaints of you; which being consider'd,
Here mon'd vs, and our Counsell, that you shall
This MAminge come before vs, where I know
You cannot with such freecom'd purge your selse,
But that till further Triall, in those Charges,
Which will require your Anwer, you muft take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Towre; you, a Brother of vs
It fits we thus proceed, or else no winneffe
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your Highness,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most throughly to be winnowed, where my Chaaffe
And Corne shall flye aldender. For I know
There's nonestands vnder more calamous tongues;
Then I my selfe, poor man.

Kng. Stand vp, good Canterbury,
 Thy Truth, and thy Integrity is roared
In vs thy Friend. Grieve me thy hand, stand vp,
Pray thele'st be walske. Now by my Holydame,
What manner of man are you? My Lord, I look'd
You would have given me your Petition, that
I should have some paines, to bring togeth'er
Your selfe, and your Accusers, and to have heard you
Without insurance further.

Cran. Most dread Liege,
The good I stand on, is my Truth and Honeste ;
If they shall fail, I with mine Enemies
Will triumphant ore my person, which I wast not,
Being of thofe Vertues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

Kng. Know you not
How your (tate stands in'th world, with the whole world?
Your Enemies are many, and not small; their practifies
Mall bear the fame proportion, and not equal.
The Justice and the Truth o'th question carries
The Dow o'th Verdict with it; at worst it safe
Might corrupt minds procure, Kunoeas as corrupt
To unweare against you: Such things have bene done, you
Are Potently oppos'd, and with a Malice
Of as great Size. Weene you of better lucke,
I mean in perit'd Winneffe, then your Maister,
Whose Minifter you are, whiles heere he's dead
Upon this naughty Earth? Go too, go too,
You take a PRECEPT for no loope of danger,
And woe your owne destruction.

Cran. God, and your Maiestie
Protect mine Innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

Kng. Be of good cheere,
They shall no more pique me, then we shave way too;
Kepe comfort to you, and this morning fee
You do appeare befure them. If they shall chance
In charging you with matters, to commit you:
The bell perfervations to the contrary
Faiile not to vie, and with what vehement
Th'occation shall instruct you. If intentes.
Will render you no remedi, this King
Desire them, and your Appeale to vs
There make before them. Looke, the Goodman weeps:
He's honett on mine Honor. Gods blest Mother,
I sweare he is true-hearted, and a soule
None better in my Kingdome. Get you gone,
And do as I haue bid you. Exit Cranmer.
He ha's strangled his Language in his tears.

Enter Olde Lady.

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the Gentleman
That was sent to me from the Counsell, pray'd me
To make great haft. All fall? What means this? How?
Who waits there? Sure you know me?

Enter Keeper.

Kep. Yes, my Lord:
But yet I cannot helpe you.

Cran. Why?
Kep. Your Grace must waft till you be call'd for.

Enter Droller Butts.

Cran. So.

Butt. This is a Peere of Malice I am glad
I came this way so happily. The King
Shall vnderstand it perfitely.

Enter Butts.

Cran. Tis Butt.

The Kings Phyfitan, as he past along
How earnestly he call his eyes upon me:
Pray heauen he found not my disgrace: for certaine
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,
(God tune their hearts, I never sought their malice)
To quench mine Honor; they would shame to make me
Wait else at doore: a fellow Counsellor
'Mong Boyes,Groome,and Lackeys.
But their pleasures
Muft be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King and Butt, at a Windows above.

Butt. He slew your Grace the strangest fight.

Kng. What's that Butt?

And the strong course of my Authority,
Might goe one way, and safely, and the end
Was euer to doe well; nor is there living,
(I speake it with a single heart, my Lords)
A man that more deteets,more flirres against,
Both in his private Confiance, and his place,
Defakers of a publique peace then I doe:
Pray Heauen the King may never find a heart
With lefse Alligence in it, Men that make
Emu, and crooked mislike, nourishment;
Dare bite the beth. I doe befooth your, Lordships,
That in this cafe of Justice, my Accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely vrg against me.

Suff. Nay, my Lord,
That cannot be; you are a Counsellor,
And by that vesture no man dare accuse you. (men,
Gard. My Lord,because we haue busines of more mo-
We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highness pleasure
And our content, for better tryall of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower,
Where being but a private man againe,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More then (I feare) you are provided for.

Crom. Ah my good Lord of Winchester: I thank you,
You are always my good Friend, if your will paffe,
I shall both finde your Lordship, judge and juror,
You are so mercifull. I feare your end,
'Tis my desires. Love and meekness, Lord
Become a Churchman, better then Ambition:
Win faying Souls with modesty again,
Cast none away: That I shall cleere my selfe,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you doe confiance,
In doing dayly wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling, makes me modest.

Gard. My Lord, my Lord, you are a Seattay,
That's the plaine truth; your painted gloffe difcouers
To men that vnderstand you, words and weakneffe, (Crom. My Lord of Winchester, y're a little,
By your good favoure, too harpe:Men fo Noble,
How ever faftly, yet should finde respect
For what they have begun; 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.

Gard. Good M. Secretary,
I pry you Honour mercy; you may worst
Of this Table, I say so.

Crom. Wh? my Lord?
Gard. Doe not I know you for a Fauuuerer
Ofthis new Seatt? ye are not found,
Crom. Not found?
Gard. Not found I say,
Crom. Would you were halfe so honest.
Mens prayers then would feake you, not their feater,
Gard. I shall remember this bold Language.

Crom. Doe.
Remember your bold life too.

Cham. This is too much;
Forbear for shame my Lords.
Gard. I haue done.

Cham. And I.

Cham. Then thus for you my Lord, it stands agreed
1 rate it, by all voyages: That fortheith,
You be conuayd to the Tower a Prifoner,
There to remaining till the Kings further pleasure
Be known vnto vs: are you all agreed Lords,

The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Ad. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, but I must needs to this? To say, my Lords?

Wold you expect? You are strangely troublesome. Let some o’ th’ Guard be ready there.

Enter the Guard.

Cran. For me?

Mufi I go look to a Traycor thither? Gard. Receive him, and let him fall o’ th’ Tower.

Cran. Stay good my Lords, I have a little yet to say. Looks there my Lords, by virtue of that Ring, I take my case

Out of the graces of cruel men, and giue it To a meitl Noble Judge, the King my Master.

Cran. This is the Kings Ring, Sir. This no counterfeitt.

Saf. To the right Ring, by Haun’t, I told ye all, when we first put this dangerous flome to rowling, Twould fall upon our felies.

Narf. Doe you think my Lords The King will suffer but the little finger Of this man to be vex’d?

Cran. This is too certain; how much more is his Life in value with him? Would I were fairly out on’t.

Cran. My mind gives me, In seeking tales and Informations Against this man, whole honestly the Distil And his Disciples only eny at, Ye blew the fire that burns ye, now haste ye.

Enter King growing on them, takes his Sabre.

Gard. Drink Soueraigne, How much are we bound to Heaven, In duty thankles, that gave vs such a Prince; Not only good and wife, but noble in dignity: One that in all obedience, makes the Church The cheele syme of his Honour, and to strengthen That holy dutie out of desire respected, his Royal! felle in Judgement: comes to thence The case between her, and this great offender.

Kim. You were ever good at Judaine Comendations, Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not To beare such ftractity now, and in my presence They are too thin, and bare to hide offences, To me you cannot reach. You play the spainiel, And thinke with waving of your tongue to win me: But whatsoeuer thou tak’st it for, I am sure Thou haft a cruel Nature and a bloody. Good man fit downe: Now let me see the proudest Hee, that does most, but was his finger at thee. By all that’s holy, he had better flarme, Then hung once think his place becomes the noor. Sir, May it please your Grace,—— Kim. No Sir, it does not please me,

I had thought, I had had men of some understanding, And inhabitants of my Countrie, but I finde none: Was it difference Lords, to let this man, This good man (few of you defend that Title) This honest man, not as a lowlie font-boy At Chamber door, and one, as great as you are? By what speech was this? Did my Commission Bude to fore longer your felies? I gave ye Power as he, was a Countess to say, Lyn.

Not as a Groomer: There’s some of ye, I see, More out of Malice then Integrity, Would try him to the viemost, had ye meant, Which ye shall Prague, and got what I like.

Kim. Thus fate.

My most dread Soveraigne, may it like you Grace, To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos’d Concerning his imprisonment, was rather (If there be faith in men) meant for his Tryall, And faire purgation to the world then malice, I presume.

Kim. Well, well, my Lords receive him, Take him, and yee him well; he’s worthy of it. I will say thus much for him, if a Prince May be beholdong to a Subject; I Am for his loose and servuce, to info him. Make me no more ado, but all embrace him; Be friends for shame my Lords: My Lord of Canterbury I have a Suite which you must not refuse. That is, a faire young Maid that yet wants Baptisme, You must be Godfather, and suffwere for her.

Cran. The greatest Monarch now alive may glory In such honour: how may I defer it,

That am a poore and humble Subject to you? Kim. Come, come my Lord, you’d spare your spoones; You shall have two noble Partners with you; the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquesse Dorset! will these please you?

Once more my Lord of Winchester, I charge you Embrace and love this man.

Gard. With a true heart.

And Brother, love I do, I do.

Kim. And let Heaven Winchester the dearer, I told this Confirmation. (hearts,)

Kim. Good Man, those if you fall trees fhew thereby The common voyce I fee is verifid Of which, that says thus: Doe my Lord of Canterbury A thredturne, and he’s your friend for ever: Come Lords, we must turn away: I long To have this young one makes a Christian. As I have made ye Lord, one enon esteem,
So I grow stronger, you must Honour grace.

Scena Tertia.

Nurse and Twend. within: Enter Porter and his man.

Port. You’ll lend your nurse anon yead else, doe you take the Count the Earl of Gardyn: ye rude Slaues, leave your gaping.

Within.上前 M. Porter I belong to th’ Lander.

Port. ”O long to th’ Gallows, and be hang’d o’er Roger. Is this a place to roare in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-tree Hats, and three strong ones; these are but switches to ’em: He scratchs your heads, you must be seeling Christians? Do you looke for Ale, and Cakes heere, you rude Raskalls?

Man. Pray Sir be patient; this is much importaince. Write we are incep from the door with Comoncs, To scare one; on, on, to make ’em Despise On May-day Morning, which will never be: We say we till push against Powis as strange ’em. Are, How got they in, and be hang’d?—

584
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Man. Alas! I know not, how gets the Tide in?
As much as one found Cudgel of fourte foote,
(You see the poore remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare Sir.
Part. You did nothing Sir.
Man. I am not Sampson, nor Sir Gay, nor Caleb Ward,
To sowen downe before me: but I spair any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or shee, Cuckold or Cuckold-maker:
Let men're hope to see a Chine againe,
And that I would not for a Cow, God tase her.
Within. Do you keere M. Porter?
Part. I shall be with you prettily, good M. 1 apparel,
Keep the door cloe Sirha.
Man. What would you have me doe?
Part. What thoulde you doe,
But knock 'em downe by th' dozzen? Is this More fields to matter in? Or haue wee some strange Indian with the great Touls, come to Court, the women to befere vs?
Belle me, what a fry of Fornication is at dore? On my Christian Conscience this one Christening will beget
a thousand, here will be Father, God-father, and all.
Man. The Spawning will be the bigger Sir:
There is a fellow somewhat neere the door, he should be a Baffie
by his face, for 'my confidence twenty of the Dog days now reign in's Nose; all that fand about him are under the Line, they need no other patectt: that Fire
Drake did hit three times on the head, and three times was his Nose discharged against me; her bands there like a Matter-piece to blow away. There was a Hattbressers Wife of small win, neere him, that rai'dd upon me, till her pinck'd passenger fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the State. I miss the Meteor once, and hit that Woman, who cryed out Clubbes, when I might see from mine; some forty Trancheencres draw to her succourr, which were the hope o'th'. Second where she was quartered; they fell on, I made good my place; at length they came to th' broune flae to me, I desie 'em
all, when suddenly a File of Boyes behind'em, loofe fleer, deler'd such a hower of Pibbles, that I was taine to draw mine Honour in, and let 'em win the Workke, the Duell was amongst 'em I taine surely.
Part. These are the youths that thunder at a Playhouse, and fight for bitter Apples, that no Audience but the tribulation of Tower Hill, or the Limbes of Limboule, their dese Brothers are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Parlam, and thare they are like to dance these three days; besides the running Banquet of Two Beans, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chambelaine.

Cham. Mercy o' me: what a Multitude are here?
(They grow still too, from all Parts they are comming,
As if we keepe a Faire here? Where are these Porters?
These lazy knowes. Yhaue made a fine hand followes?
There is a trim rabbit let in: are all thee,
Your faithfull friends o'th' Suburb? We all have Great store of some no doubt, left for the Ladies,
When they passe backe from the Christening?
Part, And pleace your Honour,
We are at diuen, and what so many may doe,
Not being some a pieces, we have done:
An Army cannot rule'em.
Cham. As I live,
If the King blame me for't; he lay ye all
By th' heales, and fodorately and on your heads
Clap round Fines for neglect: yare lazy knaues,
And there ye ly eye bating of Bombards, when Ye shild doe Service. Harkke the Trumpets sound,
There are some already from the Christening.
Go breake among the prease, and finde away out
To let the Trooep passe fairely, or Ile finde
A Marshall, frail hold ye play these two Membtes.
Part. Make way therse, for the Princeffe.
Man. You great fellow,
Stand close vp, or Ile make your head sk.
Part. You thin Chamblent, get vp o'th' sail,
Ile pecke you the pales elle. Exeunt.

Secona Quarta.

Enter Trumpeters sounding: then two Aldermen, L. Mover,
Casser, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolke with his Manshalls
Staffe, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen, bearing great sounding Bowles for the Christening Gouts: Then four Noblemen bearing a Canopy, under which the Ducheffe of Norfolke, Godmother, bearing the Child richly habited in a Maste, &c. Traine borne by a Lady: Then followes the Mareenbrooke Dorset, the other Godmother, and Ladies. The Trooep passe once about the Stage, and Gar
sper speakes.

Curt. Heauen,
From thy endless goodnesse, send prosperous life,
Long and ever happy, to the high and Mighty
Princeffe of Englan, Elisabeth.

Floweth. Enter King and Gward.

Cran. And to your Royall Grace, & the good Queen,
My Noble Partners, and my selfe they pray
All comfort, joy in this most gracious Lady,
Heauen ever laid vp to make Parents happy,
May hourly fall vpon ye.

Kin. Thank you good Lord Archbishop:
What is her Name?
Cran. Elizabeth.

Kin. Stand vp Lord,
With this kisse, take my Blessing: God protte & thee,
Into whose hand, I guesse Thine.

Cran. Amen.

Kin. My Noble Goilphs, yhaue beene too Prodigal;
I thank ye heartily: So shall this Lady,
When she's to much, English;

Cran. Let me speake Sir,
For Heauen now bids me, and the words I utter,
Let none thinke Plateres, for they finde'em True,
This Royall Infant, Heauen stille moue about her,
Though in her Cradl, yet now promisses
Upon this Land a thousand thousand Blessinges, Whetse Time shall bring to ripenesse; She shall be,
(But few now living can behold that goodnesse)
A Patterne to all Princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saha was ever
More courtesie of Wisdom and, and faire Venus
Then this pure Soule shall be. All Princely Grace
That mould vp such a mighty Piece as this is,
With all the Vertues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall Nurse her,

V. iv. 10—V. v. 29

585
The Life of King Henry the Eighth.

Holy and Heavenly thoughts still Counsell her:
She shall be loud and fear'd. Her owne shall blest her;
Her Joys shall like a Field of beaten Corne,
And hang their heads with sorrow:
Good groves with her.

In her days, Every Man shall eate in safety,
Under his owne Vine what he plants; and sing:
The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours.
God shall be truly knowne, and those about her,
From her shall read the perfect way of Honour,
And by those claim their greatnesse;not by Blood.
Nor shall this peace sleep with her: But as when
The bird of Wonder dyes, the Mayden Phoenix,
Her Hayes there create another,
As great admiration as her felte.
So shall she leaue her; blessed she to One.
(When Heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness)
Whose from the sacred Athes of her Honour
Shall rear-like rule, as great in fame as the was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Love, Truth, Terror,
That were the Seruants to this chosen Infant,
Shall then be his, and like a Vine grow to him;
Where eas't the bright Sunne of Heaven shall shine,
His Honour, and the greatnesse of his Name,
Shall be, and make new Nations. He shall flourish,

And like a Mountaine Cedar, reach his branches,
To all the Plaines about him: Our Childrens Children
Shall fee this, and blest Heaven.

Epi. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be to the happinesse of England,
An aged Prince; many days shall fee her,
And yet no day without a deed to Crowne is.
Would I had knowne no more: But the mist dye,
She must, the Saints must have her; yet a Virgin,
A moft vnspoted Lilly shall the passe
To th' ground, and all the World shall mome her.

Kim. O Lord Archbishop

Thou hast made me now a man, neuer before
This happy Child; did I get any thing,
This Oracle of comfort, he's so pleasa'd me,
That when I am in Heaven, I shall desire
To fee what this Child does, and praise my Maker.
I thanke ye all. To you my good Lord Maior,
And you good Brethren, I am much beholding:
I haue receiv'd much Honour by your prudence,
And we shall finde me thankfull. I see the way Lords,
Ye must all fee the Queene, and the mist thanke ye,
She will be ficker els. This day, no man think.
'Has businesse at his house; for all shall stay:
This Little-One shall make it Holy-day. Exect.

The Epilogue.

Tis ten to one, this Play can never please.
All that are here: Some came to take their ease,
And sleepe an Akt or two; but those we feare
Would heare with some regard: To be clear, they'd say its naught.
Others to hear the City
About'd extremely, and to cry that's witty,
Which we have not done neither; that I fear.

All the expeled good w're are like to home.
For this Play at this time, is only on
The mercifull condescension of good women.
For some years we found'ring,
And for this, I know no better way,
All the best men are ours: for this I hap.
If they hold, when their Ladies but 'em clap.

FINIS.
The Prologue.

In Troy there lies the Scene: From Iles of Greece
The Princes Orgilias, their high blood chaf'd
Hauing to the Port of Athens sent their Shippes
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruell Warre: Sixty and nine that wore
Their Crownets Regall, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia, and their crew is made
To ransacke Troy, within whose strong omures
The ransib'd Helen, Menelaus Queene,
With wanton Paris sleepe's, and that's the Quarrell.
To Tenedos they come,
And the depe-drawing Barke do there disgurse
Their warlike fraughtage: now on Dardan Plaines
The fresh and yet unbruised Greekes do pitch
Their brave Pavilions: Priamus six-gated City,
Dardan and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antchenidus with masic Staples
And correspondence and fulfilling Bolts
Stirre up the Sones of Troy.
Now Expectation tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Troian and Greeke,
Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come,
A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of Author's pen, or Actors voice; but suited
In like conditions, as our Argument;
To tell you (faire Beholders) that our Play
Leapes o're the resonant and firstlings of those broyles,
Beginning in the middle: starting thence away,
To what may be digested in a Play:
Like, or finde fault, do as your pleasures are,
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warre.

THE TRAGEDIE OF
Troylus and Cressida.

Actus Primus.  Scena Prima.

Enter Pandarum and Troylus.

Troylus.

All here my Vowes, lie warme againe.

Why should I waste without the walls of Troy
That finde shee's cruellest bates, here within?

Each Troian that is master of his heart,
Let him to field, Troylus alas hath none.

Pan. Will this geere here be mendid?

Troy. The Greeks are strong & skilful to their strength,
Fiercse to their skill, and to their censs Valiant:
But I am weak, I am a womanesse;
Tamer then sleepes, fonder then ignorance;
Leve valiant then the Virgin in the nightes,
And skilflsse as unpractis'd Infamie.

Pan. Why, I have told you enough of this: For my part,
Ile not meddle nor make no farther. Hee that will have a Cake out of the Whisce, musf needs taste the grinding.

Troy. Have I not tasted?

Pan. I the grinding, but you must taste the bolting.

Troy. Have I not caried?

Pan. The broddling: but you must taste the leaching.

Troy. Still have I caried.

Pan. I, to the lemoner: but hear what yet in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Oaten, and the Baking; nay, you must fly the cooling too: or you may chance to burne your lips.

Troy. Patience her felte, what Goddlesse e're the be,
Doth better blench as Inferiour, then I doe:
As Fenius Roffe Table doe I flt:
And when faire Cressida comes into my thoughts,
She (Truant) then she comes, when she is thence.

Pan. Well.

She look'd yefternight faire, then ever I saw her looke,
Or any woman else.

Troy. I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As were'd with a sigh, would rue in twince,
Least Helen, or my Father should percieve me: I have (as when the boome doth light a-come)
Brested this fig, to wakele a little:
Bar forrow, that is couched in seeming gladness,
Lilke that much flute comes to sudden lade.

Pan. And other Wars were not without that darker then Helen, well go to them, there was no more comparision betweene the Women. But for my part the is my Kinswoman, I would not (as they tearme it) praise it, but I wold

some-body had heard her calle yesterday as I did: I will not dispraise you sifter Caius's wife, but:

Troy. Oh Pandarum! I'll tell thee Pandarum;
When I do tell thee, I have no hope ye drown'd:
Nobly nor in how many Fadoms depth:
They be indrenchid. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressida's league. Thou answerst it she is faire,
Down in the open Vicer of my heart,
Her Eyes, her Hair, her Cheeks, her Gate, her Voice,
Handlett in thy discourse. O that her Hand
(in whose comparsion, all whites are Ink)
Wert their owne approach, to whomst sof feare:
The Cigarets Downe was hard, and spirits of Senfe
Hard at the pame of Ploughman. This thou tellst me;
As true thou tell st me, when I doe hope her;
But saying this, instead of Olye and Patine,
Though in every gainth that I vouch, givel me,
The Knife that made it.

Pan. I speake no more then truth.

Troy. Thou dost not speake so much.

Pan. Faith, I thee meddle not: Let her be as she is,
If shee be faire, 'tis the better for her: and she be not, she has the needs in her owne hands.

Troy. Good Pandarum! How now Pandarum?

Pan. I have had my Labour for your travell, all thought on of her, and all thought on of you: Gone betweene and betweene, but small times for your labour.

Troy. What art thou angry Pandarum? what with me?

Pan. Because she's hunte to me, therefore thee's not so faire as Helen, and she were not kin to me, she would be as faire on Sunday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a black-a Moore, 'tis all one to me.

Troy. Say! she is not faire?

Troy. I do not care whether you doe or no. She's a Poodle to flay behind her Father. Let her to the Greeks, and so Ile tell her the next time I see her: for my part, I meddle nor make no more Ish't matter.

Troy. Pandarum! Pan. Not I.

Troy. Sweete Pandarum.

Pan. Pray you speake no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there en end.

Exit Pand. Sound Alarm.

Troy. Peace you Wayfortious Calmors, peace rude sounds;
Foolys on both sides, Helen must needs be faire,
When with your blood you daily paint her thills.
I cannot fight upon this Argument:
Enter Ariel.

_Ariel._ How now Prince Troylus?

_Troy._ Wherefore not a field?

_Ariel._ Troy. Because not there; this woman answer for.

_Troy._ For woman it is to be from there:

_Ariel._ What never women from the field to day?

_Troy._ That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

_Ariel._ Troy. By whom? _Troy._ Troy. Let Paris bleed, his but a tear to scarce, _Parisis._ Parting go's with Mezentius borne.

_Ariel._ Troy. Ha'ke what good sport is out of Towne to day.

_Troy._ Better at home, if I would might were may:

_Ariel._ In all swift haste.

_Troy._ Come goe wee then together. Exeunt. Enter Creillus and her man.

_Denes._ Who were those went by? _Herma._ Querete Hercuba, and Hella. _Troy._ And whether go they?

_Virtue._ Vp to the Ead ENC Tower,

_Ariel._ Whole height commandes as truly all the vale,

_Troy._ To see the battell: Hecuba whose patience,

_Ariel._ Is a Vertue fine, to day was a mood.

_Ariel._ He chides Andromache and stripes his A M C, And like as there were husbandly in Wart.

_Ariel._ Before the Sunne rose, hee was i' the field lyke,

_Ariel._ And to the field go's his; where every flower

_Ariel._ Did as a Prophet weeps what it foresaw,

_Ariel._ In Hecuba wrath.

_Cre._ What was his cause of anger?

_Ariel._ The noise goe's his; this

_Ariel._ There is among the Grecians,

_Ariel._ A Lord of Trojan blood, Nephew to Hecuba,

_Ariel._ They call him _Amen_.

_Cre._ Good; and what of him?

_Ariel._ They say he is a very _manner_ and stands alone.

_Ariel._ So do all men, velsely they are drunk, sick, or have no legges.

_Ariel._ This man Lady, hab inb't many biest of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lyon, curiously as the Bear, now as the Elephant: a man into whom nature hath to crowded honors, that his valor is crutish into folly, his folly faced with discretion: there is no man hath a vertue, that he hath not a glimpse of, nor a

_Ariel._ Man,-man,-man: he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair, he hath the soote of every thing, but every thing so out of soote, that hee is a goate _briname_, many hands and no vies, or publimshed _argument_, all eyes and no sight.

_Briare._ Both he shoulde this man that makes me finlle, make Hecuba angry?

_Meno._ They say he yester day cop'd Hecuba in the bat_her out since kept Hecuba singing and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

_Cre._ Who comes hence? _Man._ Madam your Viole Pandarus.

_Cre._ Hecuba a gallant man.

_Meno._ As may be in the world Lady.

_Pan._ What's that what's that?

_Cre._ Good morrow Viole Pandarus.

_Pan._ Good morrow Cozen Crissid: what do you talk of?

_Cre._ Good morrow Alexander: how do you Cozen? when were you at illum?

_Cre._ This morning Viole.

_Pan._ What were you talking of when I came? Was Hecuba annid and gone ere you came to illum? Hecuba was not vp? was the?

_Cre._ Hecuba was gone but Hella was not vp?

_Pan._ Eene for Hecuba was thiring early.

_Cre._ That were we talking of, and of his anger,

_Pan._ Was he angry?

_Cre._ So he fies here.

_Pan._ True he was so: I know the cause too, hee do lay about him to day I can tell them that, and there's Troyus will not corner his behind him, let them take heed of Troyus: I can tell them that too.

_Cre._ What is he angry too?

_Pan._ Who Troyus?

_Troyus_ is the better man of the two.

_Cre._ Oh Vicer: there's no compassion.

_Pan._ What not between Troyus and Hecuba? do you

_Ariel._ Know a man if you fies him?

_Cre._ I. If Euer saw him before and knew him.

_Pan._ Well I say Troyus is Troyus.

_Cre._ Then you fay as I fay,

_Pan._ For I am sure he is not Hecuba.

_Cre._ No not Hecuba is not Troyus in some degrees.

_Pan._ Tis just to each of them he is himself.

_Pan._ Himselfe talls poor Troyus I would he were.

_Pan._ So he is.

_Pan._ Condition I had gone barefoot to India.

_Cre._ He is not Hecuba.

_Pan._ Himselfe? or hee's not himselfe, would a were himselfe? well, the Gods are abowe, time must friend or endwell Troyus well, I would my heart were in her body; no, Hecuba is not a better man then Troyus.

_Cre._ Excuse me.

_Pan._ He is elder.

_Pan._ Pardon me, pardon me.

_Pan._ Tell others not come too, you shal tell me another tale when the others come too: Hecuba shall not have his will this yere.

_Cre._ He shall not neede it if he have his owne.

_Pan._ Nor his qualities.

_Cre._ No matter.

_Pan._ Nor his beautie.

_Cre._ I would not become him, his own better.

_Pan._ You have no judgmem Neecees; Hecuba her selfe

_Ariel._ For the other day, that Troyus for a browne fauour (for so I must confesse) not browne neither.

_Cre._ No, but browne.

_Cre._ Faith to say truth, browne and not browne.

_Cre._ To lay the truth, true and not true.

_Pan._ She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

_Cre._ Why Paris hath colour enough.

_Pan._ So he has.

_Cre._ Then Troyus would have too much, if the prais'd

_Ariel._ Him above, his complexion is higher then his, he having colour.
The Tragedy of Troilus and Cressida.

colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion, I had asliece Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper sole.

Pan. I found you so, and I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cre. Then she's a merry Greke indeed.

Pan. Nay I am sure she does, she came to him the other day into the compast window, and you know he has not past three or four hairies on his chinne.

Cre. Indeed a Tapitis Arithmeticke may boone bringing his particular therein, to a toall.

Pan. Why he is very young, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cre. Is it so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prove you to that Helen loves him, she came and puts her white hand to his clenched chin.

Cre. I was haue mercy, how came it clenou?

Pan. Why, you know 'tis dimpled, I think his dimpling becomes him better then any man in all Pergia.

Cre. Oh he smiles variably.

Pan. Does he not?

Cre. Oh yes, and were a clow'd in Autumn.

Pan. Why go to them, but to prove you that Helen loves Troilus.

Cre. Troilus will stand to thee.

Pan. If you prove it so.

Cre. There's why he eleemes her no more then I esteem an addle egg.

Cre. If you lose an addle egg as well as you lose an idle head, you would eat chickens'th'bell.

Pan. I cannot chuse but laugh to think how the tickled his chin; indeed he has a marvell's white hand i. must needs confesse.

Cre. Without the racke.

Pan. And there takes upon her to spie a white hairie on his chinne.

Cre. Alas poor chin many a wart is richer.

Pan. But there was such laughing, Queenie Hecuba laught that her eyes ran oon.

Cre. With Million.

Pan. And Casmunder laught.

Cre. But there was more temperate fire vnder the pot of her eyes, and her eyes run oon too?

Pan. And Hector laught.

Cre. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry at the whiate hairie that Helen spied on Troilus chin.

Cre. And that beene a greene hairie, I should have laught too.

Pan. They laught not so much at the hairie, as at his pretty aunwre.

Cre. What was his aunwre?

Pan. Quoth flce, here's but two and fifty hairies on your chinne; and one of them is white.

Cre. I miss her question.

Pan. That's true, make no question of that, two and fifty hairies quoth flce, one white, that white hairie is my Faber, and all the rest arc his Sonnes. Indian quot flce, which of all those hairies is Paris my husband? The for-ced one quot flce, pluck out and gie him: but there was such laughing, and Helen so blufih, and Paris so chaste, and all the rest so laught, that it past.

Cre. So let it now, for is his beene a great while going by.

Pan. Well Cozen,
looker, and how he goes. O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way Troylus, go thy way, that it were a Grece, or a daughter of Goddesse, hee should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is due to him, and I warrant, Helen to change, would give money to boot.

Enter common Soldiers.

Cref. Here come more.

Paut. After foolest, doothes, charl' and brain, charl' and brain, porre edge after mett. I could not dye the eyes of Troylus. Ne te looke, ne te looke; the Eagles are gun, Crows and Dawses, Crowes and Dawses: I had rather be such a man as Troylus, then Agamemnon, and all Greece.

Cref. There is among the Greekes Achilles, a better man then Troylus.

Paut. Achilles a Dray-man, a Porter, a very Camell.

Cref. Well, well.

Paut. Well, well! Why have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? I am not, but, any good fleg, discourse, manhood, learning, gen-
uefli, verity, youth, liberality, and so forth: the Spices, and flat that teaches a man?

Cref. I a mind'd man, and then to be back'd with no Date in the eye, the sooner then the dates matchers.

Paut. You are such another woman, one knowes not at what ward you lye.

Cref. Upon my backe, to defend my belly; upon my wrist, to defend my wife, upon my beauty, to defend mine honer, say Maske, to defend my beauty, and you to defend all thefe: and at all these wordes I lye at, at a thousand watchers.

Paut. Say one of your watchers.

Cref. Nay, he watch you for that, and that's one of the chealfe of them two: if I can not ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, whilst if will pass finding, and then it's past watching.

Enter Boy.

Paut. You are such another.

Boy. Sir, my Lord would instantly speake with you.

Paut. Where?

Boy. At your owne house.

Paut. Good boy tell him I come, I doubt be hurt.

Paut. Fare ye well good Neece.

Cref. Afera Vinkle.

Paut. Il be with you Neece by and by.

Cref. To bring Vinkle.

Paut. I, a stoned from Troylus.

Cref. By the fame token, you are a Bawd. Exit Paut.

Words, vows, gifts, tears, & loues full sacrificing,
He offers in an others enterprise; but
Moores in Troylus thousand fold full fee,
Then in the glasse of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold it right. Women are Angels wooling,
Things won are done, inues foule eyes in the dooing:
That fine belou'd, knowes nothing, that knowes not this;
Men prize the thing vnprized, more then it is,
That she was neuer yet, that ever knew
Lost to forget, as when defte did fie:
Therefore this my vision out of trop I teach.

\[\text{Acheament, as commend, vnprized, befiech, this}
\text{though my heers Content's sire loue doth breake,}
\text{Nothing of that fall from mine eyes appears, Exit.}\]
And thou most reserued for thy stretchit-out life,
I guise to both your speeches: which were fuch,
As Agamemnon and the band of Greece
Should hold up high in Brafe: and fuch againe
As venerable Nefir (hatch'd in Silver)
Should with a bond of ayre, ftrong as the Axeterre
In which the Heauen sides, knit all Grreates ears to his expericnd tongue: yet let it pleafe both (Thou Great, and Wife) to heare Pliffer fpeake.

Agm. Speake Prince of Iliarre, and be't of leffe expect
That matter neediflee of impofitive burren
Duidde thy lips: then we are confident
When ranke Tiferes opes his Matfkie lawes,
We fhall heare Mufike, Wit, and Oracle.

Ulyf. Troy yet upon his bas'd bieft downe,
And the great Helfers sword had tack'd a Mafier
But for thefe inftances,
The specialty of Rule hath beene negleCED;
And looke how many Grecian Tents do f tand
Hollow upon this Plaine, fo many hollow Factions.
When that the General is not like the t i u e,
To whom the Forrarers fhall all repair:
What Hony is expedted? Degree being vizarded,
Th'vnworthief i f-fwes as finely in the Maufe.
The Heauen themfelves, the Planets, and this Center,
Oblige degree, priority, and place,
Infuence,courte, proportion, lefon, forme,
Office, and coughnefe, in all line of Order:
And therefore is the glorious Planet Sol
In noble eminence, enthron'd and fplead'd
Amidft the other, whose mede-cinable eye
Corrects the ill Aspects of Planets cuill,
And poiftes like the Command ment of a King,
Sans checke, to goode and bad. But when the Planets
In euill mixture to disorder wander,
Whaf Plagues, and what perronts, what mutiny?
What raging of the Sea? fhaking of Earth?
Commotion in the Windes? Frightes, changes, horrors,
Dread, and cracke, rend and derruine.
The vnity, and musted cime of States
Quite from their functure? O, when Degree is flak'd,
(Which is the Ladder to all high defigues)
The enterprise is fike. How could Communistes,
Degrees in Schooles, and Brother-hoods in Cities,
Peacefull Commerce from diuizable shore.
The primogenitue, and due of Byrths,
Prerogatief of Age, Crownes, Scepters, Lawrelts,
(But by Degree) fland in Authentique place?
Take but Degree away, vs tone at flying,
And heark to what Difcorde followers: each thing meres
In meere oppugnance. The bounded Waters,
Should lift their boundes higher then the Shores,
And make a fop of all this folid Globe:
Strength fhou'd be Lord of imbecility,
And the note Serme fhould frike his Father dead:
Force fhould be right, or rather, right and wrong,
(Betweene whose endleffe furfe, fathife reciev'd)
Should boile beginning, and to fhould fufce too.

When every thing includes it felfe in Power,
Power into Will, Will into Appetite,
And Appetite(an unwhiffall Wolfe),
So doudly fecounded with Will, and Power)
Mufi stroke perforce an unvarrall prey,
And left, eate up himfelfe.

Great Agamemnon:

This Chaos, when Degree is fuffocate,
Followes the choaking:
And this neglection of Degree, is it
That by a pace goes backward in a purpose
It hitherto to clime. The Generall's deftain'd
By him one flep below; he, by the next,
Thafs next, by him beneath: fo euer flep
Exampt from the firt pace that is ficke.
Of his Superiour, growes to an enuious Feauer
Of pife, and bloodyiffe Emulation.
And this this Feauer that keeps Troy on ftope,
Not her owne finewes. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakeflie lies, not in her fireneffe.

Nefir. Most wisely hath Pliffer heere difcouerd
The Feauer, whereof all our power is fiche.

Agm. The Nature of the fickneffe found (Unfife)
What is the remeide?

Plff. The great Acbbler, whom Opinion crownes,
The finew, and the force-hand of our Hoffe,
Hauing his eare full of his ayre Fame,
Growes dainty of his worth, and in his Tent
Lyes mocking our defignes. With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazie Bed, the ilue-long day
Breskes feurll elfs,
And with ridiculous and awkward action,
(Which Standerer, he imitation calls)
He Plantaes vs. Sometimes on the Agermammos,
Thy topeflle deputation he puts on,
And like a fruttifing Player, whose conceit
Lies in his Hart-tring, and doth think it rich
To hear the woodden Dialogue and found
Twist his frectch tooting, and the Scaffologe,
Such to be pitted, and or-reflcted leeming
He acts thy Greatneffe in: and when he speakes,
'Tis like a Childs a memoing. With teeming
Which from the tongue of roaring Typhon drops,
Would leemes Hyperbolc. At this fully fuffe,
The large Acbbler (on his prett-bed lolling)
From his deepe Cheff, laugues out a lowd applaffe,
Cries excellent, 'tis Agermammos.iuff.
Now play me Nefir; hum, and broke thy bezard
As he, being dreed to fome Oration:
That's done, as meer as the extremeall ends
Of parallels; as like, as fe Plumen and his wife,
Yet god Acbbles full cries excellent,
'Tis Nefir right. Now play him (me) Patroclus,
Arning to anwer in a night-Alarume,
And then (forotho) the faint defects of Age
Mufbe the Scene of myrth, to cough, and spift,
And with a pilfe flombling on his Corfe,
Shake in and out the Breaue; and at this fport
Six Valour diete; cries, Oenough Patroclus,
Or, give me ribs of Steele, I fhall splite all
In pleafure of my Spleene. And in this fathion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Securals and generals of grace exact,
Atchievements, plots, orders, preentations,
Excitements to the field, or Speech for truce,
Successfull or loffe, what is, or is not, ferues
As muffe for thefe two, to make paradoxes.

Nefir. And in the imitation of theft twaine,
Who as Pliffer fayes) Opinion crownes
With an Imperiall voyce, many are infct:
Anez is grownfe felle-will, and bears his head
In fuch a ftyne, in full as proude a place
As broad Acbbler, and heapes his fene like him;
Makes fathifia Facles, raile on our flate of Warre

Bold
Troylus and Cressida.

To an Oracle, and feesa Thebes.
A true, whole Gall come slanders like a Mint, To make us vassal comparisons with dut, To weaken and deterre our exposture, These make fears to move in with danger.
They take our policy, and call it Cowardice, Come, Wholesome as no member of the Warre, Fare bell prentence, and silene no note, But that of hand: The full and mental parts, That do contain how many hands shall file. When first we call the me, all know by measure Of their obdurate warre, the Enemies weight, Way too hard for a burger dignity: They call the bed-songs, Mappy, Clofet-Warre: To make sure Rime that baffers down the wall, For the great song and sulleness of his poze, Upon place before his hand that sets the Engine,
Of those that within them of their foules, By Reson guide his execution.
Nef, Let this beguiled, and Achilles here. Makes more These issues.
Achilles, When Trumpet? Lookke Aesopla.
Aesop, From Troy.
Enter Aesop.
Achilles, What aod you dare our Tent?
Aesop, Is this the great Agenusamen Tent? I pray you.
Achilles, Then this.
Aesop, May one at this a Herald, and a Prince, Do a faire message to the Kingly ears?
Achilles, With forty stronger then Achilles alone, For all the godthifh heads, which wilt one voyce. Call Agenusamen Head and Generall.
Achilles, Fare leave, and large securitie. How may A Borbor to those moat Imperialm lookes, Know them fromeys of other Mortals?
Achilles, Ho?
Aesop, If I feake, as I might waken reverence, And on the creek be ready with a blush
Match'd as morning, when his coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus:
Which is that God in office guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agenusamen?
Achilles, This Troyan feomes vs, or the men of Troy Are cemenitary Countiess.
Aesop, Cenmewries free, as debaemonia; vniard, As bending Angels: that's their Fame, in peace: But when they would terme Soundies, they have galleys, Good tunes, living joyous, true swords, & times, Nothing a fall of heart. But peace, amends.
Peace Troy, lay thy finger on thy lips, The worthesse of praise dislaies his worth: If he shall prais'm him selfe, bring the praise forth. But what the repining enemy commends, That breath Fame blowes, that prais'e pure transfer'd.
Achilles, Sir, you of Troy, call you of the Iees?
Achilles, I Greece, that is my home.
Achilles, What is your affayre? I pray you?
Achilles, Sir put him, this for Agenusamen cares, Achilles He is sentnight priually.
That comes from Troy.
Achilles, Nor I from Troy come not to whiskey him, Being a Trumpet to awake his care, To let his fence on the attitudine bent, And then to speak.
Achilles, Speak searely as the winde, It is not Agenusamen sleeping hour,
That shal shall know Troy as he is awake, He tells thee to him selfe.
Achilles, Trumpet blow loud, Send thy Trumpsf voice through all these Iaze Tents, And every Greece of mettle, let him know, What Troy meanes favourly, shall he speak aloud.
The Trumpets found.
We have great Agenusamen here in Troy.
A Prince call d Helen, Patina is his Father: Who in ths doll and long-continued Truce Is raitly grown. He had not made a Trumpet, And to this purpose spoke. Kings, Princes, Lords, If there be one among my the Iays of Greece, That holds his Honor higher then his eye, That seeks his prais'e, more then he fears his pen, That knows his Valour, and knowes not his fear, That louses his Mirths more then in confition, (With truant vowe to her owne lips he Jonah) And dare show her Beauty, and her Worth. In other ames then bess to him this Challenge.
Helen, in view of Troyans, and of Greeks, Shall make it good, or do his heart to do it. He hath a Lady, Younger, faire, truer, Then ever Greece did compasse in his armes, And will to morrow with his Trumpet call, Midway betweene your Tents, and wailes of Troy, To rowze a Grecian that is time in face.
If any come, Helen shall honour him:
Ibome, here I say in Troy when he returns, The Grecian Dares are in burnt, and not worth, The spitters of the Laver, Learn so much.
Achilles, This shall be told our Loures Lord Ajax.
If none of them Fame sole in such a knave, We left them all at home: But we are Soundiers, And may that Soundier a meerre recevant proue, That means not, hath not, oris not in love:
If then one is, or hath, or means to be, That one meets Helen: if none else, he be he,
Nef, Tell him of Ajax, one that was a man. When Heles Grandire fikes: he is now But if there be not in our Grecian应当, One Noble man, that hath one spark of fire To answer for his Loue: tell him from me, He hide my出入 heard in a Gold Beauer, And in my Vambrace put this withile'd drawe, And meeting him, will tell him, that my Lady Was fayer then his Grandame, and as chaste As may be in the world: his youth in blood. He pave this truth with my three drops of blood.
Achilles, Now heavens find bid such beauties of youth, May she, Amen.
Achilles, Dear Lord Eneas, Let me touch your hand: To your Pavillion shall I lead you first: Achilles shall have word of this intent, So shall each Lord of Greece from Tent to Tent: Your selle shall Feall with vs before you goe, And finde the welcome of a Noble Foe.
Eneas, Viver, and Nefor.
Achilles, What layes Eneas?
Achilles, What layes Eneas?
Eneas, I have a young conception in my brains, Do you my time to bring it to some shape.
Nefor, What is it?
Eneas, This is: Blunt wedges true hard knots: the feeded Pride That hath to this maturity blomep

Troylus and Cressida.

In ranke Achilles, muft or now be crot,
Or shedding breed a Nursery of like eui
To ouer-bulke vs all.
Neft. Wet, and how?
Sfy. This challenge that the gallant Helcer sends,
How euer it is spred in general name,
Relates in purpofe only to Achilles.
Neft. The purpofe is peripicuous euen as a SUBRANCE,
Whoale grofpenesse little charactres summe vp,
And in the publication make no strainge,
But that Achilles, were his brains as barren
As banke of Lybia, though (Apollo knows)
Tis day enough, wil with great speepe of judgement,
I, with celerity, finde Helcer purpofe.
Pointing on him.
Unf. And wake him to the anwer, thinke you?
Neft. Yes, 'tis nofruit meet; who may you elie oppofe
That can from Helcer bring his Honor off,
If not Achilles; thought be not a sportfull Combate,
Yet in this trall, much opinion doth deal.
For here the Troyans take our dearke repyte
With their finne Pailace: and troeft to me Pylfe,
Our impuation shall be oddly poiz'd
In this wilfe adition. For the succefe
(Although particular) shall give a fanning
Of good or bad, into the General!
And in foue Indexes, although small pricketes
To their fable Volumes, there is fcorne
The bufty figure of the Gyant-maffe
Of things to come at large. It is fippod,
That he that meets Helcer, fliues from our choype;
And choife being mutuall acte of all our foules,
Makes Merit her elecution, and doth bayle
As 'were, from forth vs all; a man diffil'd
Out of our Vertues, who militarying,
What heart from hence receyves the conquering part
To fteele a strong opinion to themfelues,
Which entertain'd, Limbs are in his instrumen,
In no leffe working, then are Swords and Bowers
Directly by the Limbs.
Phy. Give pardon to my speech:
Therefore his met, Achilles meet not Helcer;
Let vs (the Merchants) thaw our fouleffe Wares,
And be like perchance they felt it: ifnot,
The better of the better yet to shew,
Shall shew the better. Do not content,
That euer Helcer and Achilles mete:
For both our Honour, and our Shame in this,
Are doone with two strange followers.
Neft. See them not with my old eies: what are they?
Phy. What glory our Achilles gathers from Helcer,
(Were he not proude) we all thoughe ware with him:
But he already is too faitant,
And we were better parch in Affricke Sumne,
Then in the pride and falt fame of his eyes
Should he trape Helcer faire. If he were foold,
Why then we did our name opinion cruft
In time of our beft man. No, make a Lorcky,
And by douce let blackith Ace draw
The farre to fhipt with Helcer; Among our felues,
Gue him allowance as the worthieft man,
For that will phyfiue the great Myrmidon
Who broyles in lowd applause, and make him fail
His Croft, that prouder then blew Iris bendz.
If the doll brainleffe Ace come faine elfe,
We'll defte him vp in voyces fiftela.
Yet go we under our opinion full,
That we have better men. But hit or misfe,
Our projects life this fhape of fience sfimmes,
Ace imployn'd, plucker downe Achilles: Plumes.
Neft. Now Pylfe, I begin to relish thy aduice,
And I will give a trifle of it forthwith.
To Agamemnon, go we to him fraight,
Two Cures that same each other, Pride alone
Mufte rate the Maffues on, as were their bone.

Ther. Do, do.
Ther. Thou foode for a Witch.
Ther. I, do, do, thou foode-witten Lord; thou haft
no more braine then I have in mine elbowes: An Africco may ruto thee, Thou feauy wabt Ant, thou art better but to theeft Troyans, and thou art bough and guide some fhote of any wit, like a Barbanian faine. If thou vie to beare me, I will begin with helie fefe, and tel what thou say by inches, thou thing of no bowels thou.
Ther. You dogge.
Ther. You feaunt Lord.
Ther. You Can.
Ther. Mars his Idee: do rudenes, do Carmel, do, do.
Enter Achilles and Patroclus.
Achil. Why how now Aax wherfore do you this?
How now Therfes? what's the matter man?
Ther. You fee him there, do you?
Achil. I, what's the matter.
Ther. Nay lecke vp him,
Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

I. iii. 318—II. i. 65
594
Ther. Nay but regard him well.

Achil. Why, well, why do you?

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for who forex you take him to be, he is Achil.

Achil. I know that foole.

Ther. I, but that foole knowes not himselfe.

Achil. Therefore I beare thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, jo, jo, what meddler of wit he vseth: his envious ones have cures thus long. Thau bobb'd this Braine more then he has beare my bones: I will buy nine Sparrowes for a penny, and his Promissor is not worth the ninth part of a Sparrow. This Lord (Achilles) Achil who wears his wit in his belly, and his gutters in his head. He tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say this Achil.

Achil. Nay good Achil.

Ther. Has not so much wit.

Achil. Nay, I will hold you.

Ther. As will flie the eye of Helen Needle, for whom he comes tonight.

Achil. Peace foole.

Ther. I would have peace and quietnesse, but the foole will not: he there, that he, looke you there.

Achil. O thou dam'd Curre, I shall—

Achil. Will you sticke your witt to a Fooler.

Ther. No I warrant you, for a Fooler will flame it.

Pat. Good worth, Theristes.

Achil. What's the quarrel.

Achil. I bad thee wife Owle, goe learn me the tenure of the Proclamation, and he styles upon me.

Ther. I reeue thee not.

Achil. Well go too, go too.

Ther. I reuere here voluntary.

Achil. Your last sentence was suffere, 'was not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary: Achil was here voluntary, and you as sunder an Impreff.

Ther. I helo, a great desire of your wit too lies in your finnesse, or else there be Liar. Helo shall have a great catch, 'tis he knock out either of your brains, he were as good crack a fullit with no kernel.

Achil. What with me to theristes?

Ther. Theristes is old, and old Neflar, whole Wit was modest ene they Grandisses had nails on their toeses, you like dite: Cen, and make you plough vp the ware, Achil. What's the what?

Ther. Yes good troth, to Achill to Achil, to—

Achil. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter, I shall speake as much as thou afterwards.

Pat. No more words Theristes.

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achill Brooch bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you Petraselus.

Ther. I wil, if you hang'd like Croupelos ere I come any more to your Tent; I will keepe where there is wit shining, and leaue the fention of foole.

Pat. A good ridmice.

Achil. Marry this Sir is proclaim'd through all our hoff

That Helo by the fire hauing of the Sunne,

Will with a Trumpet, twist our Tents and Troy

To morrow bringing callome Knight to Armes,

That hath a thorn stake, and such a one that doe.

Maintaine I know not what: 'tis truth. Farewell.

Achil. Farewell! who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not, 'tis put to Lottery; other wife.

He knew his man.

Achil. O meaning you, I will goe leave me of it. Exit.

Enter Priam, Helen, Troilus, Paris and Helenus.

Priam. After so many hours, woe speeches sent,

Thus once againe fayes Nefer from the Greekses,

Deluet Helen, and all damage else

(As honour, loffe of time, trouble, expence,

Wounds, friends, and what els deere that is consum'd

in not digillation at this commorant Ware)

Shall be broke of. Helo, what say you too't.

Hel. Though no man letter fears the Greeks then I,

As farre as touche my particular: yet dread Priam.

There is no Lady of more Potter bow els,

More spungie, to sucke in the tene of Pearse,

More ready to cry out, who knowes what fellowes

Then Helo is: the wound of peace is furry,

Surely secure: but modest Doubles can call.

The beacon of the wife: the sent that searches

To th' bottome of the world. Let Helo go,

Since the chief sword was drawnse about this question,

Every sytle foule through many the finest of fowles,

Hath bin as dear. Helo I meanse of ours

If we have left to many tenthse of ours

To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to vs.

(If it be our name) the value of one tenn;

What merit's in that reason which denies

The yeelding of her vp.

Troy. Fie, fie, my Brother;

Weigh you the worth and honour of a King

(So great as our dread Father) in a Scale

Of common Ounces? Will you with Counters summe

The part proportion of his infinite,

And buckle in a waife most Hottentotse,

With Spannes and inches to diminish,

As fears and reasons? Fie for godly shame?

Hel. No manre, though you bite to sharp at reasons,

You are too empty of them, Should not our Father

Beare the great way of his affayres with reasons,

Because your speach hath none that tells him so.

Troy. You are for dreames & lumbers brother Priam;

You furre your gloues with reason there are your reasons

You know an enemy intends you harme,

You know, a sword imploy'd is perilous,

And reason flies the object of all harme.

Who manrels then when Helenus beholds

A Greekian and his foode, if he do set

The very wings of reason to his bereest

Or like a Starre disordr'd, Nay, if we talke of Reason,

And flye like chidden Mercuric from Ioue,

Let's that our gares and sleepe: Manhood and Honor

Should have hard hearts, wold they but for their thoughts

With this carman'd reason: reason and respect,

Makes Livers pale and loughly direct.

Hel. Brother, the is not worth

What the dorelth the holding,

Troy. What's aught, but as its veltand?'

Hel. But value dwells not in particular will,

It holds his effumate and dignite

As well, wherein 'ris precious of it selle,

As in the prizers: Tis made Idealitie,

To make the ferious greater then the God,

And the will other that is indecleasable.

To what indifferently it selfs affects.

Without some usage of th' affected merits,

It is led in the conduct of my Will.

\[ S 3 \]
Troylus and Cressida.

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded Pylors 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of Will, and judgement. How may I ause ye
(Although my will distilff what it melteth)'
The Wise I chose, there can be no solution
To bensch from this, and to stand firme by honour.
Weeume not back the Sikes won the Merchant,
When we have (joy'd them) nor the remainer Vlands
We do not throw in varefpeute fame,
Because we now arc full. It was thought meete
Paris should do some vengence on the Greckees;
Your breath of full content belied his Sailes,
The Seas and Windes (old Wranglers) took a Truce,
And did him ferue; he touch'd the Ports defir'd,
And for an old Aunt whom the Greckees held Captive,
He brought a Grecian Queen, whose youth & frendherts
Wrinkles Apollis, and makes stale the morning.
Why keep we ther the Grecians keep our Aunt?
Is the worth keeping? Why she is a Pearle,
Whose price hath launch'd aboue a thousand Ships,
And turn'd Crown'd Kings to Merchants.
If you'll abouch, twas wisdome Paris went,
(As you not need, for you all else, Go, go!)
If you'll coeftive, he brought home Noble prize,
(As you must needs) for you all clapt your hands,
And crid indefinable; why do you now
The issue of your proper Wifedomes rate,
And do a deed that Fortune never did?
Begger the estimation which you priz'd,
Richer then Sea and Land? O Their most safe!
That we have linne what we do fear to keepe.
But Theues unworthy of a thing so folioke,
That in their Country didthem that disgrace,
We more to warrant in our Nature place.

Exeunt Caelebe with her faire about her ears.

Caf. Cry Troyans, cry.

Paris. What siece, what siece is this?

Troy. This our mid fitter, I do know her voyce.

Caf. Cry Troyans.

Hel. It is Caffandra,

Caf. Troyans cry; lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with Prephrike taxes.

Hel. Peace after, peace.

Caf. Vgrans, and boyes; midge & wrinkled old,
Soft in the eare, that nothing can but cry,
Add to my clamour: let vs pay bemy
A moiety of that faffe of moane to come.

Cry Troyans cry, pricate your eyes with teares,
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ison blund,
Our first-brand Brother Paris burnes vs all.

Caf. Cry, cry, Troy burnes, or else let Helen go.

Hel. Now yourfull Troylus, do not these flie thes
Of dissimmon in our Sifer, world.
Some touches of remorfe? Or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor feare of bad facefice in a bad caufe,
Can qualify the fame?

Troy. Why Brother Helles,
We may not tumke the sillage of each side
Such, and it wonder than euer daune haue it,
Nor once detect the courage of our minde;
Because Caffandra a mad, or brainfacke captures
Cannot distilff the goodnesse of a quarrell,

Which hath our feuerall Honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd, then all Priam's termes,
And love forbid there should be done amongst vs
Such things as might offend the weakeft fpleene,
To fight for, and maintaine.
The world might the world comendice of leisur,
As well my vnder-taking as your counsels; But I aat the gods, your full content.
Gawe wings to my propension, and cut off
All feares attending on fo dire a profeet.
For what (alias) can thece my fingle armes?
What propugnation is in one man valour
To fount the prud and eminit of thofe
This quarrell would excite? Yet I profeet,
Were I alone to paffe the difficulties,
And had as ample power, as I haue well,
Paris should ne're receaft what he hath done,
Nor faint in the prufite.

Pri. Paris, you specke
Like one be-fotted on your sweet delights;
You have the Hony full, but thefe the Gail,
So be valiant, in due paife all.

Par. Sir, I propofe not meerly to my felfe,
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it:
But I would have the joye of her faire Rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.

What Treafon were it to the ranack'd Queene,
Diligent to your great worths, and fame to thee,
Now to deliver her possession vp
Our great eftate for promotion? Can it be,
That to desexteinate a flame as that,
Should once fct. tooting in your generous bofomes?
There's not the meanest spirit on our partie,
Without a heart to dare, or word to draw,
When Helen is defended: none none to Noble,
Who beftre were all brefhow'd, or death un-cap't,
Where Helen is the fuberth. Then (I fay)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large ipaces cannot paralle.

Hell. Paris and Troylus, you have both faid well:
And on the cause and question now in hand,
Hawe gloz'd, but superficially: not much
Vnhle young men, whom Argyle think'd
Vnto to heare Morall Philosophie.
The Reafons you alledge do more concide
To the hot paflion of infpen's blood,
Then to make vp a free determination
Twixt right and wrong: For pleafure, and revenge
Hawe eares more defe as than Aucters, to the voyce
Of any true decifion. Nature cries
All dutes be rendere to their Owners now
What ever debts in all humanity,
Then Wife is to the Husband? If this law
Of Nature be corrupted through affefion,
And that great mindes of partial indulgence,
To their bemummed wills refult the fame,
There is a Law in eauv well-ordred Nation,
To curwe those raging appetites that are
Most dilobedient and reitardate.

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's King
(As it is knowne she is) there Morall Lives
Or Nature, hee may be famt, or fpeak be atow'd
To have her backe returnd. That to perfift
In doing wrong, exteremes not wrong,
But makes it much more heace. Helles opinion
Enter Thersites first.

How now Thersites? what loft in the Labyrinth of thy wit? shall the Elephant Achilles carry it thus? he beats me, and I blame at him: O worthy satisfaction, would it be otherwise: they that could beat him, should he rafte at me! Soothe, I learn to consume and raise Dues, but Ile see some idie of my spirit full excitations. Then ther's Achilles, a race Engineer. If I'd be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art the King of gods; and Mercury, loose all the Serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if thou take not that little little least then little visit from them that they hate, which hurt and ignorance if it feels knowes, is abundant scare, it will not in circumvention either a Flye from a Spider, without drawing the milk out of them and cutting the web: after this, the vengeance on the whole Camp, or rather the bone-ach, for that me thinkes is the curse dependant on those that ware for a placet, I have paid my prayers and diuell, emile, say Amen: What so? my Lord Achilles?

Enter Patroclus.

Par. Who's there? Thersites. Good Thersites come in and raile.

Thers. If I could have remembered a guilt counterfeit, thou would'lt not have flpte out of my contemplation, but it is no matter, thy face upon thy face. The common curse of mankinde, folly and ignorance be shine in great reuenc; heauen blesse thee from a Tutor, and Discipline come not near thee. Let thy bloud be thy direction till thy death, then if the latter thee out fayes thou art a faire coarse, Ible be sworne and sworne vpon't the never throwed any but Lazarus, Amen. What's Achilles?

Par. What are thou desirous? will thou in a prayer?

Thers. 1, the heavens heare me.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Par. Thersites, my Lord.

Achil. Where, where, art thou come? why my cheefe, my digestion, why hast thou not serv'd thy selfe into my Table, so many meates? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Par. Thy Commander Achilles, then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Thers. Thy Lord Thersites: then tell me I pray thee, what's thy selfe?

Thers. Thy knowes Patroclus: then tell me Patroclus, what art thou?

Patro. Thou maist tell that know'd.

Achil. O tell, tell. Ther. Ile declin the whole question: Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my Lord, I am Patroclus know'er, and Patroclus is a fool.

Patro. You ralcell.

Ter. Peace fool's, I have not done.

Achil. He is a pruntledg'd man, proceede Therjites. Ther. Agamemnon is a fool, Achilles is a fool, Therjites is a fool, and as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this? come?

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles, Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon, Therjites is a fool to servce such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool politicke.

Par. Why am I a fool?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, Ajax, and Chalcis.

Thers. Make that demand to the Creator, it sufficies me thou art. Looko ye, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, Ile speake with no body: come in with the Thersites.

Exe. Ther. Here is such parache, such luging, and such knowser: all the argument is a Cuckold and a Whore, a good quiet to draw emulations factions, and bleed to death upon: Now the dry Sappeago on the Subject, and Warte and Lecherie confound all.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his Tent, but ill dispos'd my Lord.

Ajax. Let it be knowne to him that we are here. He ences our Medlengers, and say we by our appetiments, visiting of him. Let him be told of, so preache he thinkes We dare not more the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Par. I shall today to him.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his Tent, He is not fisk.

Ajax. Yes, Lyon sickes, sickle of proud heart, you may call it Molonthaly if you wish the man, but by my head, this pride; but why, why, let him throw us the cause?

A word my Lord.

Nef. What masues Achilles thus to bay at him?

P-lfs. Achilles hath inuagled his Hoole from him.

Nef. Who, Therjites?

P-lfs. He.

Nef. Then will Achilles lacke matter, if he have lost his Argument.

P-lfs. No, you see he is his argument that has his argument Achilles.

Nef. All the better, their faction is more out with then their faction: but it was a strong couent that a Hoole could diluante.

P-lfs. The amite that wisdoms knits, not soltly may easily vaunt.
Here comes Patroclus.

In will peculiar, and in selfe admission.

Ag. Why, will he not upon our faire request, Vntent his person, and share the ayre with vs?

Vlf. Things small as nothing, for requestes sake only He makes important; pooffet he is with greatnesse, And speaks not to him selfe, but with a pride That quarrels at selfe-breath. Imag'd wound Holds in his blood such force, and hot discourse, That twixt his tempell and his arie parts, Kingdom?Achilles in commotion rages, And batters gainst it selfe, what should I say? He is so plaguy proud,that the death tokens of it, Cry no recovery.

Ag. Let Achilles goe to him,

Deare Lord, goe you and greeete him in his Tent;

Tis said he holds you well, and will be led At your request a little from himselfe.

Vlf. O Agamemnon, let it not be so.

Weele confecrate the steps that Aias makes, When they goe from Achilles; still the proud Lord, That baiths his arroganccy with his owne feare, As he never suffers matter of the world, Enter his thoughts: base such as doe renounce And ruminate himselfe, Shall he be worthyp, Of that we hold an Idoll, more then hee?

No, this thrice worthy and right valiant Lord, Mull not so staine his Palme, nobly acquir'd, Nor by my will sabfubingate his merit, As amply tittled as Achilles is by going to Achillbes, That were to enlarde his far already pride, And addde more Coles to Cancer, when he burns With entertaining great Hesperion.

This L. goe to him? sliperis forbid,

And say in thunders, Achillses goe to him.

Nef. O this is well, he rubs the veme of him.

Dos. And how his silence drunkes vp this applause.

Aias. If I goe to him, with my armed hit, Ile path him over the ficer.

Ag. O no,you shall not goe.

Aias. And be a proud with we, ile phease his pride let me goe to him.

Vlf. Not for the worth that hanges upon our quareil.

Aias. A paulyer infolent fellow.

Nef. How he describes himselfe.

Aias. Can he not be fociable?

Vlf. The Bawen chides blackneffe.

Aias. Ile let his humours bloud.

Ag. He will be the Physician that should be the paient.

Aias. And all men were a my minde.

Vlf. Wit would be out of fashion.

Aias. A shoulde not beare it? a should eare Swords first? shall pride carry it?

Aias. And 'twould, you'card halle.

Vlf. A would haue ten fates.

Aias. I wil neke him, ile make him fupple, he's not yet through warme.

Nef. Force him with praises,poure in poure in his ambition is dry.

Vlf. My L. you feede too much on this dislike.

Nef. Our noble Generall, doe not doe do.

Dos. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Vlf. Why, 'tis this naming of him doth him barme.

Here is a man, but 'tis before his face, I will be silent.

Nef. Wherefore should you so?

He
Troylus and Cressida.

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

VII. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Aii. A horrid dog, that that palter thus with vs, would he were a Trojan.

Neft. What a vice were it in Aias now—

VII. If he were proud,

Dio. Or courteous of praise.

VII. I, or rudely borne.

Dio. Or strange, or selfe affected.

VII. Think the heauen L, thou art of sweet comploure;

Praise him that gat thee, the the gat thee sucke:

Fame be thy Tutor, and thy parts of nature

Three fand, beyond, beyond all enuion;

But he his dischand'd thy armes to fight,

Let Mars deude Eternity in twinne,

And give him halfe, and for thy vigour,

Bull-bearing Milet his addition yeeld.

To finnow. Aias: I will not praise thy wisdome,

Which like a bounre, a pale, a shore confines

Thy spacious and dilutte parts: here's Neftor

Instructed by the Antiquityz times:

He muft, he's, he cannot but be wise.

But pardon an Father Neftor, were thy deyes

An ocean, as Aias, and thy brains so temper'd,

You should not haue the eminence of him,

But be as Aias.

Aias. Shall I call you Father?

VII. I my good Sonne,

Dio. Be rud'd by him Lord Aias.

VII. There is no tarrying here, the Haste keeps thicker: please it your Generall,

To call together all his flate of warre.

Fifth Kings are come to Trye to morrow

We muft with all our maine of power stand fast:

And here's a Lord, come Knighs from East to West,

And call their flower, Aias shall cope the best.

Ag. Goe we to Countaile, let Achilles sleepe;

Light Botes may faile swifts, though greater bulkes draw deseep.

Enter Pandarum and a Servant.

Pan. Friend, you pray you a word: Does not you follow the yong Lord Paris?

Ser. Sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him I mean?

Ser. Sir, I doe depend upon the Lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble Gentleman: I must needs praze him.

Ser. The Lord be praised.

Pa. You know me, doe you not?

Ser. Faith fir, suppositiously.

Pa. Friend know me better, I am the Lord Pandarum.

Ser. I hope I shal know your honour better.

Pa. I doe defire it,

Ser. You are in the flate of Grace?

Pa. Grace, not for friend, honor and Lordship are my title: What Mufique is this?

Ser. I doe but partly know for it is Muficke in part.

Pa. Know you the Musitians.

Ser. Wholly fir,

Pa. Who play they to?

Ser. To the headers fir.

Pa. At whose pleasaunt friend?

Ser. At mine fir, and theirs that love Muficke.

Ser. Who shall I command fir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request doe these men play?

Ser. That's too indeepee fir: marry fir, at the request of Paris my L, who's thire in perfion; with him the mortall Peyer, the heart blood of beauty, loues invisible soule.

Pa. Who? my Cofin Cressida?

Ser. No fir, Helen, could you not finde, out that by her attributes?

Pa. It should seeme fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speake with Paris from the Prince Troylus: I will make a complemetall assault upon him, for my businesse steedes.

Ser. Sudden businesse, there's a flawed phrase indeed.

Enter Paris and Helena.

Pan. Fare be to you my Lord, and to all this faire company: faire defires in all faire measure fairly guide them, especially to you faire Queene, faire thoughts be your faire pillow.

Hel. Deere L, you are full of faire words.

Pan. You speake your faire pleasure sweete Queene: faire Prince, here is good broken Muficke.

Par. You haue broke is cozen: and by my life you shall make it whole againe, you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance. Nel, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truely Lady no.

Hel. O fir.

Pan. Rude in sooth, in good sooth very rude.

Paris. Well mada my Lord: well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I haue businesse to my Lord, deere Queene: my Lord will you vouchsafe me a word.

Hel. Nay, this shall not hedge vs out, wele heare you fing certainly.

Pan. Welle sweete Queene you are pleasante with me, but, marry that my Lord, my deere Lord, and most effeeced friend your brother Troylus.

Hel. My Lord Pandarum, hony sweete Lord.

Pan. Go to sweete Queene, goe to.

Commends himselfe most affectionately to you.

Hel. You shall not bob vs out of our melodie:

If you doe, our melancholly vpoun your head.

Pan. Sweete Queene, sweet Queene, that's a sweete Queene I shal—

Hel. And to make a sweet Lady sad, is a lower offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not ferue your turns, that shall be not in truth l. Nay, I care not for such words, no, no.

And my Lord he desires you, that if the King call for him at Supper, you will make his excuse.

Hel. My Lord Pandarum?

Pan. What fayes my sweete Queene, my very, very sweete Queene?

Hel. Nay but my Lord?

Pan. What fayes my sweete Queene? my cozen will fall out with you.

Hel. You must not know where he fups.

Pan. With my dipoler Cressida.

Pan. Na, no, no such matter, you are wide, come your dipoler is fike.

Par. Well, it make excuse.

Pan. I good my Lord: why should you say Cressida?

Hel. You, your poor dipoler's fike.

Pan. I tye.
Troylus and Cressida.

Pan. You spie, what doe you spie? come, give me an Intrument no sweete Queene.

Hel. Why is this kindely done? Pan. My Niece is horribile in love with a thing you hate sweete Queene.

Hel. She shall have it my Lord, if it be not my Lord Paria. Pand. Hee? no, theele none of him, they two are terraine.

Hel. Falling in after falling out, may make them three.
Pan. Come, come, Ile heare no more of this, Ile sing you a song now.

Hel. I, I, prethee now: by my troth sweet Lord thou haft a fine fore-head.

Pan. I you may: you may.

Hel. Let thy song be love: this love will vndoe vs. sl.
Oh Cupid, Cupid, Cupid.

Pan. Love? I that I shall yfaith.

Par. I good now love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth it begins so.

Love love, nothing but love, still more.
For O sweet Bess,
Shooers Bucke and Doe.
The Shelfe confoundes not that it wounds,
That tickles; fill the face:
These Ladies cry, oh they dye.
Yet that which seems the wounde is Kill.
Dust turns to be to be, a babe be:
So dying love lines still,
O ho a white, but be bea,
O ho growes out for ba ba be---hey ho.

Hel. In love yfaith to the very tip of the nose.
Par. Hee casts nothing but dooes love, and that breed hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deedes, and hot deedes is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? Hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deedes, why they are Vipers, is Love a generation of Vipers?

Sweete Lord whos whole a field to day?
Par. Heue, Doppel, Helen, Anther, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would faine have arm'd to day, but my Med would not have it so.

How change my brother Troylus went not?

Hel. He hangs the lippe at something; you know all Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I know sweete Queene: I long to heare how they sped to day:
Youle remember your brothers excuse?

Par. To a hayre.

Pan. Farewell sweete Queene.

Hel. Command me to your Niece,

Pan. I will sweete Queene. Smok a retire it.

Par. They're come from fields let vs to Priamos Hall.

To great Erectus, Warrors, Sweet Helen, I must woor you,
To helpewme our Helier: this thunbore Buckles,
With the sunne, where enchanting fingeis sounch,
Shall more obey then to the edge of Steele,
Or force of Grecheles firenese: you shall doe more
Then all the Land Kings, disfame great Helen,

Hel. Twill make vs proud to be his terzera: Paris:
Yea what he shall revere of vs in ducie,
Gives vs more paine in beautie then we haue:
Yea other times our selfe.

Sweete sweare now I spie thee.

Exeunt.
Troylus and Cressida.

Cref. More drugs then water, if my tears have eyes.

Troy. Fears make dulls of Cheronibus, they never see truly.

Cref. Blind is the seer, seeing his Tyson leads, findes safe footing, they are profound, thrashing without leave: to fear the worst, oft cures the worse.

Troy. Oh let my Lady apprehend no fear, in all Caprice Pageant there is pretence no moniter.

Cref. Not nothing monitors neither.

Troy. Nothing but our understandings, when we wove to wepe fears, true in fire, esse rocks, same Tygers; thinking it harder for our Mistris to Denise imposition enough, then for vs to vndergo any difficultie impioed.

This is the monition too in Love Lady, that the will is finite, and the execution confideth, as the deare is bound-Jeile, and the act a flase to limit.

Cref. They say all Lovers sweare more performance then they are able, and yet referte an ability that they never performe; vowing more then the perfection of ten; and dicharging leffe then the tenth part of one.

That they have the voyce of Lyons, and the act of Hares are they not Monitors?

Troy. Are there such? such are not we; Prase vs all as we are called, allow vs as we proue: our head shall goo bare till ment crowne in: no perfection in cuercion shall have a prase in pretent: wee will not name deere before his birth, and being borne his addition shall be humble: few words to fafe faith.

Troylus shall be such to Cressida, as what enue can say wooll, shall be a mocke for his truth; and what truth can speake truthe, not truer then Troylus.

Cref. Will you walk in my Lord?

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. What blushing fiall have you not done talking yet?

Cref. Well Vncke, what folly I commet, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my Lord get a Day of you, youe give him me: I true to my Lord, he think, chide me for it.

Troy. You know now your hostages, your Vnckles word and my sincere faith.

Pan. Nay, I give my word for her too: our kindred though they be long ere they are woode, they are constant beeing woome: they are Bares I can tell you, they lisse where they are throwne.

Cref. Oldnesse comes to mee now, and brings mee hearts: Prince Troylus, I haue you'd you night and day, for many weare moniter.

Troy. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cref. Hard to forme won: but I was won my Lord

With the fift glances that ever pardonne, If I confesse much you will play the tyrant: I love you now, but not still new to much But I might mate it: in faith I ly.

My thoughts were like vmbreded children grow To head-stonge for their mothers: fee whee foole.

Where have I blis'd: who shall be true to vs When we are to vnterces to our felues? But though I loud you well, I wooe you not, And yet good faith I with in my sole a man: Or but we women had more prudence Of speaking first: Sweet, but me hold my tongue, For in this rapture I shall freely speake The thing I shall repente: fee, see your silence Coming in dumberst, from my weakeste drawes

My soule of counsell from me. Stop my mouth.

Troy. And shall, albeit sweete Mufickes iust thence.

Pan. Pretty yfaith.

Cref. My Lord, I doe befeech you pardon me,

Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kisstes: I am aham'd; O Heaven, what have I done? For this time will I take my leave my Lord.

Troy. Your leave sweete Cressid?

Pan. Leave: and you take leave till to morrow morning.

Cref. Pray you content you.

Troy. What offer you my Lady?

Cref. Sir, mine owne company.

Troy. You cannot thin your selfe.

Cref. Let me goe and try:

I have a kind of selfe recites with you: But an wilkinde selfe, that it selfe will leave, To be another foole. Where is my wife? I would be gone: I speake I know not what.

Troy. Well know they what they speake, that speakes so willy.

Cref. Perchance my Lord, I shew more craft then loue, And tolle roundly to a large confesion, To Angle fons your thoughts. but you are wife, Or else you loue not: for to be wife and loue, Exceeds mens might, that dwell with gods about.

Troy. O that I thought it coulde be in a woman:

As if it can, I will presume in you, To feele for eye her lampre and flames of loue. To keep her confidence in might and youth, One-living beauties outward, with a mute That doth renew within then burn loue

Or that persuation coulde but this content me, That my integratie and truth to you, Might be all pointed with the match and weight Of such a woulded pritinct in loue:

How were I then vp-lifted! but alas, I am as true, as truss Emplitie, And fupper then the influence of truthe.

Or in that I loose with you.

Troy. Overconious fight, When right with right wars who shall be most right: True twaines in love, shall in the world to come Approve their truthe by Troylus, when their times, Full of protest, of oath and blind compare, Wonts familie, truth and iteration, As true as freede, as placebo to the Moone: As Sunne to day: as Turtle to her mate: As Iron to Adamanst: as Earth to th'Center: Yet after all comparisons of truthe, (As truths authentick author to be cited) As true as Troylus, shall crowne vp the Vesse, And fanche the numbers.

Cref. Prophet may you be.

If I be false, or fortrue a base from truth, When time is old and hain forgo't it selfe: When water drops have worn the Stones of Troy: And blinde oblivion swalow'd Cities vp:
And mightie state's characterlie are grated To dustie nothing: yet let memory, From false to false, among false Maius in loue, Vpbrad my fallehood, when they're said as falle,
As Air, as Water, as Winde, as sandie earth: As Foxe to Lambe: as Wolf to Heifers Calfe: Pard to the Hinke, or Steppedame to her Sonne: Yes, let them say, to fliske the heart of fallehood,
Troylus and Cressida.

As false as Cressid.

Pand. Go too, a bargain made: feale it, feale it, I'll be the witness here I hold your hand; here my Counsellors, if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers betweene be call'd to the worldz end and after my name: call them all Panders; let all constant men be Troybullers; all false women Cressidis, and all brokers betweene, Panders: say Amen.

Troy. Amen.

Cress. Amen.

Par. Amen.

Whereupon I will shew you a Chamber, which bed, because it shall not speake of your partie encounters, preste it to death: away,

And Cressid grant all her dishide Maidens here,

Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to provide this geere. Exeunt.

Enter Whiter, Diodoros, Nestor, Agamemnon, Achilles and Chryses. Flory.

Cal. Now Princes for the service I have done you,
Th'a'aduantage of the time prompt me aloud,
To call for recompence: appeare it to your mind,
That through the fight I bear in things to lour,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my poftition,
Incur'd a Trators name, expos'd my felle,
From certaine and poftiff conveniences,
To doubfull fortunes, fequeilshing from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom and condition,
Made tame, and moft familiar to my nature:
And here to doe you servisse cam become,
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted,
I doe beseech you, as in way of tale,
To give me now a little benefite,
Out of those many regiftred in promife,
Which you fay, hauing come in my behalfe.

Agam. What would'th thou of vs Trojan? make demand?

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Anactor,
Yetted day tace: Troy holds him very deere.
Get haue you (often have you, chances therefore)
Defr'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy holds still dem'd: but this Anactor,
I know'st is such a wretl in their a faire,
That their communications all muff flacke,
Wainting his managaze: and they will almoft,
Gue vs a Prince of blood, a Sonne of Priam,
In change of him. Let him be fent great Princes,
And he fhall buy my Daughter: and her prefence,
Shall quite strike off all Cruice I have done,
In most accepted praise.

Agam. Let Diodoros bee him,
And bring vs Cressid hither: Calchon fhall have
What he requirements: good Diodoros
Furnish you likely for this entertaince:
Withall bring word, if Heleos will to morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge, Aias is ready.

Dio. This fhall I undertake, and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to beeare. Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tent.

Aias. Achilles send us his entrance of his Tent;
Pleade it our General to passe fafely by him,
As if he were forgot and Princes all,
Lay neglect and loose regard upon him;
I will come late, 'lis like hee'te question me,

Why such unlaustifie eyes are bent? why turn'd on him?
If so, I haue derision medicable,
To vfe betweene your fightingesse and his pride,
Which his owne will shall haue direcf dreire to drink;
It may doe good, pride hath no other glasse
To show it felle, but pride: for supple knees,
Feede arrogance, and are the proud mans fees.

Agam. We ele execute your purpose, and put on
A Tones'ing of strangeesse as we passe along,
So doe each Lord, and either greete him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall flake him more,
Then if not look on, I will lead the way.

Achil. What comes the General to speake with me?
You know my minde, Ile fight no more 'gainft Troy.

Asg. What failes AchiUes, would he be with vs?
Nef. Would you my Lord fought with the General?

Achil. No.

Nef. Nothing my Lord.

Asg. The better.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Asg. What, do's the Cuckold fcorne me?

Asg. How now Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow Aias?

Asg. Ha.

Achil. Good morrow.

Aias. I, and good next day too. Exeunt.

Achil. What meane thefe followers? know they not Achilles?

Par. They passe by frangely: they were v'ld to bend
To fend their images before to Achilles:
To come as humbly as they v'ld to crepe to holy Altars.

Achil. What am I poore of late?
'It's certaine, greatneffe once laufe out with fortune
Muff fall out with mento too: what the deeln'd is,
He fall as soon reade in the eyes of others,
As felle in his owne falle: for men like butter-flies,
Shew not their meane wings, but to the Summer;
And not a man for being fimly man,
Hath any honour; but honour'd for fhole honour's
That are without him; the place, richer, and fauour,
Prizes of accident, as oft as merie,
Which when they fall, as being flippery flanders
The loue that leand on them at flippery too,
Doth one plucke downe another, and together
Dye in the fall. But kis not fo with me;
Fortune and I are friends, I doe enjoy
At ample point, all that I did poiffe,
Save these menlokes, why do me thinkers finds out
Something not worth in me fuch rich beholding,
As they have ofte given. Here is Wlifer,
He interrupt his reading: how now Wlifer?

Wlifer. Now great Theris Sonne.

Achil. What are you reading?

Wlifer. A strange fellow here
Writes me, that man, how delyeely euer parted,
How much in hauing, or without, or in,
Cannot make heart to hau'e that which he hath;
Nor fedle not what he owes, but by reflection:
As when his vertues fliming upon others,
Hear them, and they retort that heare againe
To the first gierer.

Achil. This is not strange Wlifer:
The beautee that is borne here in the face,
The bearer knowes not, but commends it felle,
Not going from it felle: but eye to eye appo'sd,
Troylus and Cressida.

Salutes each other with each other forms.
For speculation turns not to it selfe,
Till it hath trauell'd, and is married there
Where it may see is selfe: this is not strange ar all.

Whil. I do not straine it at the position,
It is familiar: but at the Authors shrie,
Who in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the Lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there is much confusing,) Till he comminicate his parts to others,
Nor dou neither he of uncelfe know them for ought,
Till he behold them form'd in that place,
Where they are extended: who like an arch reuer'd rate
The voyace against, or like a gate of steel,
Fronting the Sunne, receives and renders backe
His figure, and his heate. I was much rait in this,
And apprehended here imediatly: he.

The wiki-wake Are.

Heauen what a man is: there's very Horfe. care
That has he knowes not what. Nature, what things there
Moll abject in regard, and desire in we.
What things againe mus't decree in the eifeme,
And poore in worth: now shall we see to morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him
Areu renoun'd! O heauen, what some men doe,
While some men lease to doe
How some men creepe in stillish fortunes hall,
While others play the Idots in her eyes:
How one man eares into others pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonnesse
To fee thefe Grecian Lords; why, even already,
They clap the hubber Are on the shoulder,
As if his foote were on brave Heiress breit,
And great Troy thinking.

Achil. I doe believe it,
For they paft by me; as mylers doe by beggars,
Neither gauve to me good word, nor looke:
What are my deedes forgot?

Tuf. Time hath (my Lord) a wallet at his backe,
Wherein he putts almes for oblivion:
A great fized monder of ingratiates;
Those teares are good deedes pa'd,
Which are decou'd as fall as they are made,
Forgot as soon as done: perseverance,deere my Lord,
Keeps honor bright, to have done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a ruffie male,
In monnemall mockeire: take the infrant way,
For honour travels in a straight for narrow,
Where one bus goes a breath,keepes then the path
Emulation hath a thousand Sonnes,
That one by one pursue; if you gueeway,
Orhedge aside from the direct forth right;
Like to an entred Tyde, they all rush by,
And leawe you hindmof:
Or like a gallant Horfe faine in fift tanke,
Eye there for patience to the abije, neere
Oxen and trampled what do they in deedes pre,of,
Though lefe then yours in paft, mutt one-top yours:
For time is like a fashionable Horfe,
That lightly shakes his parting Gueft by th hand,
And with his arms out-freeth, as he would flye,
Graspes in the commaure: the welcome euer relations.
And therefore goe out fishing: O let not venture feeke
Remembrance for the song is warmes: for beautie, wis,
High birth, vigour of bone, defeat in fervice,
Lowe, friendship, charie, are fubiect all

To envious and calummatins tim:
One touch of nature makes the whoole world kin:
That all with one confent praiue new borne gauder,
Though they are made and moulded of things paft,
And goe to duft,that is a little guilt,
More laud then guilt oreculued.
The present eye praiues the pref't object,
Then maruell not thou great and compleat man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Are;
Since things in motion begun to catch the eye,
Then what no flats: the cry went out on thee,
And fill it might, and yet it may agane,
If thou would not encombe thy feete alue,
And cage thy reputation in thy tent.
Whole glorious decrees, but in theie fields of late,
Made emulous mifions through the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to faction.

Achil. Othus my priuacie,
I have strong reasons.
Phil. But gainst your pristacie.
These reasons are more potent and heroical,
'Tis knowne Achill, that you are in love
With one of Priamus daughters.

Whil. If that a wonder?
The providence that is in a watchfull State,
Knowes almost every graine of Piutes golds;
Findes bottom in thc comprehens rare
keeps place with thought, and almost like the gods,
Doe thoughts vnusile in their dumbe cradles;
There is a mysterie (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the foute of State;
Which hath an operation more divine,
Then breath orpen can gue expredione to:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly is our, as yours, my Lord,
And better would it hit Achill much,
To throw owne Heiress when Fieixa,
But it must griue you young Priamus now at home,
Where fame flall in litt fea found her tramps;
And all the Greeks flall slippery fongs,
Great Heiress fated did Achill wane;
But our great Are brauely beste owne hym.
Farewell my Lord: as your louter speake:
The foole flides oer the lee that you should break.

Parv. To this effect Achill ihaue i would you;
A woman impudent and namefh growne,
Is no more loth'd, then an effeminat man,
In time of Skyon: I fland condemnde for this;
They thinke my little fomanke to the warre,
And your great love to me, refraines you thus:
Sowe, rorfe your selfe; and the weake wanton Cepid
Shall from your necke voloole his amorous fould,
And like a dew drop from the Lyons mane,
Be shooke to your ayre.

Achil. Shall I refight with Heiress? Parv. I, and perhapes receive much honor by him;
Achill. I feemy reputation is at flake,
My fame is flowdly gored.

Parv. O then beware:
Those wounds heale all,that men doe giue themselues
Onifion to doe what is necessarly,
Selles a commision to a blank of danger,
And danger like to good falsion saints.
Euen then when we fitt idely in the funne.

Achill. Goe call? her fiter bither sweet Patroclus,
Troylus and Cressida.

He send the fool to Aias, and desire him
To invite the Trojan Lords after the Combat
To see where vnarm'd: I have a woman longed,
An appetite that I am fickle withall,
To see great Hector in his wecedes of peace; Enter Thers.
To talke with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour fard'd.
Thers. A wonder.
Achil. What?
Achil. Aias goes vp and downe the field, asking for himselfe.
Achil. How to?
Thers. He must fightingly to morrow with Hector,
And is so prophetically proud of an heroically cudgelling,
that he raves in saying nothing.
Achil. How can that be?
Thers. Why he flakkes vp and downe like a Peacock,
A bride and a fand; ruminates like an hoisedl, that hath no
Arithmetique but her braine to fett downe her reckoning:
Bites his lip with a politike regard, as who should say,
there were within his head and two'd out; and so there is:
but it lyes as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not through without knocking. The man vndone for euer; for if Hector break not his necke as\n\nAchil. To him Patroclus; tell him, I humbly desire the\nvaliant Aias, to invite the most valorous Hector to come\nvnarm'd to my Tent, and to procure fete conduct for his\nperson, of the magnanimous and most illustrious, fixe or\nsweaten times honour'd Captain, General of the Grecian\nArmy Agamemnon, &c. doe this.

Par. There is no help: The bitter disposition of the time will have it so. On Lord, wecle follow you.

Aux. Good morrow all.

Par. And tell me noble Dianus, faith tell me true, Even in the foule of sound good fellow, Whin in your thoughts virtus fave Helen most? My selfe, or Medonius?

Dian. Both alike. He merits well to have her, that doth recke her, Not making any scruple of her soule, With such a hell of pane, and world of charge. And you as well to keep her, that defend her, Not palizing the raffe of her dishonnour, With such a scoffly loffe of wealth and friends; He like a puling Cucubod, would diske up The lies and dregs of a flat tamed peace: You like a letter, out of whose liyner, Are pleas'd to breathe out your oblores: Both merity poyzd'd, each venge no lese nor more, But hee he, which heust for a whore.

Par. You do not too bitter to your country-woman.

Elia. She's bitter to her country: she meane Paris, For every false drop in her baudiy veins, A Grecians life hath funke: for every scruple, Of her contaminated carriion weight, A Trojan hath beene frame, since she could speake, She hath not guen so many good words breath, As for her, Grecianes and Troianes fullre death.

Par. If you do, you do as chamen doe, Disprase the thing that you desire to buy: But we in silence hold this vertue well; Weele not commend, what we intend to sell. Here lyes our way.

Enter Troylus and Crisida.

Troy. Deceate trouble not your selfe: the morn is cold,

Cris. Then seeke how my Lord, me call mine Vucke down; He shall vnbolt the Gate,

Troy. Trouble him not: To bed, to bed, sleepe till tho' pritty eyes,

And guise as soft attachment to thy sence, As Infantinessey all the night.

Cris. Good morrow then, Troy.

Troy. I prichee now to bed.

Cris. Are you a weary of me?

Troy. O Crisida but that the buffe day

Wak't by the Lark, bashe round: the ribleld Crowes,

And dressing night will hide our eyes no longer: I would not from thee.

Cris. Night hath beene too briefe.

(Prayes,

Troy. Beforth the winckle: with venemous wights the

As hidiously as hell: but flies the grapes of love,

With wings more momentary,swift then thought: You will catch cold, and cut me.

Cris. Prick thee carry, thou men will never tarry;

O footill Crisida, I might have still held oft:

And what thou would hast tarry. Haue not, what's one vp?

Pand. within. What's all the doores open here?

Troy. It is your Vuckel. Enter Pandarus.

Cris. A prifirice on him: now will he be mocking:

I shall haue such alfe.

Pand. How can we how now? how goe maids-heads?

If you Mada: who's my cousin Crisida.

Cris. Go hang your tell, you naughty mocking Vuckel; you bring me to doo--and then you smite me too.

What have I brought you to do?

Cris. Come, come, before your heart ye shulde eere be good, nor suffere others.

Pand. Ha, ha, ha, the poore stetches a poore Cymbeline, hat not slept to night? would be not (a naughty night) let sleepers bag, sheere take him.

Cris. Did not you tell me? would hee were knockt off head, Who's that at door? good Vucke goe and see,

My Lord, come you against my Chamber:

You tame and mocke me, as I meant naughtily.

Troy. Ha, ha, ha.

Cris. Come you are decended, I think of no such thing.

How carntely they knoue they pray you come in.

Aske, I would not for half: Troy have you scene here.

Enter.

Pand. Who's there? what's the matter? will you byre downe the dores? How now, what's the matter?

Cris. Good morrow Lord, good morrow.

Pand. Who's there my Lord? Answer? by my troth I know you not: whatnews with you so early?

Cris. Is not too bight Princeshiers?

Pand. Here what should the shee here?

Cris. Come he is here, my Lord, doe not deny him:

It doth importe him much of seekes with me,

Troy. Is he here now? it more then I know, he be:

worne: for my owne part I came in late: what should he be here?

Cris. Who, why then? Go, come, come, youlde due wrong, ere you are ware: youlde be true to him, to the false to him: Doe not you know of him, but yet goe fetch him hither, goe.
Troylus and Cressida.

Cref. Good V nickle I befeech you, on my knees, befeech you what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, O, thou must be gone; thou art charg'd for Antilenor: thou must to thy Father, and be gone from Troylus: 'twill be his death: 'twill be his bane, he cannot bear it...

Cref. O you immortal gods! I will not goe.

Pan. Thou must.

Cref. I will not V nickle: I have forgot my Father: I know no touch of contumacious; No kin, no kinsman, no blood, no kinsman, no Mercer me, As the sweet Troylus: O you gods shine!

Make Troylys fame the very crowne of faltitude? If ever the issue Troylus: time, once and death, Do to this body what extremity you can;

But the strong base and building of my love, Is at the very Center of the earth, Drawing all things to it. I will goe in and weep.

Pan. Doe, doe.

Cref. Tease my bright home, and rack my praifed cheeks,

Cracke my cleere voyce with scoffs, and breake my heart

With founding Troylus. I will not goe from Troy.Letus.

Enter Paris, Troylus, & Antenor, Diogenes, Antenor, and Diomedes.

Pan. It is great morning, and the house prefent

Other deliverie to this valiant Greeke

Comes falt upon: good my brother Troylus,

Tell you the Lady what the fe is to doe,

And have her to the purpoife.

Troy. Walk into her house:

Ille bring her to the Greeke presently;

And to his hand, when I deliver her,

Thinke it an Alke, and thy brother Troylus

A Prieff, there offering to it his heart.

Pan. I know what 'tis to love,

And would, as I shall pitte, I could helpe,

Pleaze you walke in, my Lords.

Enter Pandarum and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cref. Why tell you me of moderation?

The griefe is fine, full perfet that Iaffe,

And no leaff in a fene as strong

As that which caufeth it. How can I moderate it?

If I can temperifie with my affection,

Or brewe it a weake and colder pallat,

The like ailments could I give my griefe:

My lone admits no qualifying croffe;

Enter Troylus.

No more my griefe, in fuch a precious loffe,

Pan. Here, here, here, he comes, a sweet ducke.

Cref. O Troylus, Troylus!

Pan. What a pare of fpectacles is here? let me embrace too; or hark, as the goodly faying is: 'O heart, heave heart, why fleft thou without breaking? where be thine answers againe? for thou canft not eafe thy f mart by f rindship, nor by f peaking: there was neuer a tamer rime; let vs call away nothing, for we may liue to have neede of fuch a Verfe: we fee it, we fee it; how now Lambs?

Troy. Cressida. I lone thee in fo strange a passe:

That the best gods, as angry with my fiance;

More bright in zeele, then the devotion which cold lips blow to their Deities take thee from me.

Cref. Have the gods enuie?
Troylus and Cressida.

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell that in each grace of thee,
There lurks a still and dumb-disturcous duell,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

Cref. Does thou think I will:

Troy. No, but something may be done that we will not:
And sometimes we are duds to our feltes,
When we will tempt the faulite of our powers,
Presuming on their changfull potencie.

Enter with us. Nay, good my Lord?

Troy. Come kiffe, and let us part,
Paris with us. Brother Trojly

Troy. Good brother come you hither,
And bring a Lence and the Grecian with you.

Cref. My Lord, will you be true?

Troy. Who I alas it is my vice, my fault:
Whiles some other fish with craft for great opinion,
I, with great truth, each meere simplicite;
Which will some with cunning gild, their copper crownes,
With truth and pleasinglye. J do we dearly make bare:

Enter the Grecians.
Pierce not my truth: the morall of my wit
Is plainse and tree, thet all the seck of thet.
Welcome for Dissembled, here is the Lady
Which for Antwerp, we deliever you.
At the port (Lord) I lye he to thy hand,
And by the way poollifie thee what thet is.
Entreate her faire: and by my foule, faire Greeces,
If ever thou stand at mercy of my Sword,
Name Crefild, and thy life shall be as fale
As Primaes in Illion?

Diam. Faire Lady Crefild,
So please you sauceth the thanks this Prince expels:
The lutfre in you very, heaven in your checke,
Please your faire vallage, and to Diseid
You shall be mistreffe, and command him wholly.

Troy. Grecian, thou shalt not vse me curiously,
To fumise the feale of my petition to wards,
I prating her. I tell thee Lord of Grece this
She is as faire high fortaso oter thy praisles,
As thou wunowest to be called her seruant;
I charge thee vse her well, even for my charge:
For by the dreadful Prince, if thou doit not,
(Though the great bulke Achilles be thy guard)
Hee cut thy thoarse,

Diam. Oh be not mou'd Prince Trojylus;
Let me be prudent and by myplace and meeffge,
To be a speacker free when I am hence,
IIe answer to my luft: and know my Lord;
IIe nothing doe on charge: to her owne worth
She shall be priz'd: but that do say, be it to;
IIe speake it in my spirit and honor, no.

Troy. Come to the Port, I tell thee diseid,
This braver, shall not make thee to hide thy head:
Lady, lye theer my hand, and as we walke,
To owne feltes bend we our needefull talke.

Sound Trumpeet.

Par. Harke, Heleurs Trumpeet,

Enter. How haue we spent this morning
The Prince must think mee tardy and remiffe,
To fowre to ride before him in the field,

Par. This Trumpeet faules: come, come, to field with him,

Exeunt.

Let vs make ready strait.

End. Yea, with a Bridegroomes fresh slaesitie

Let vs address to send on Heleurs hecles:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lye
On his faire worth, and single Chiusifite.

Enter Ajax armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemmon,
Menelaus, Pylades, Nestor, Odysseus, etc.

Agam. Here art thou in appintment fresh and faire,
Anticipating time. With fawre, courage,
Gleue with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy
Thou dreading. Ajax, that the appealed are
May pierce the head of the great Combatant,
And bale him hithe.

Ajax, Thou, Trumpeter, ther's any parte;
Now cracke thy lunge, and split thy baren pipe:
Blow villust, till thy spreded Blas checke
Oust-swell the collicke of putt Agrius:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes ipout blood:
Thou blowest for Helles.

Vifs. No Trumpeter answers.

Achil. To but early dayer.

Agam. Is not young Dissembled with Calcas daughter?

Vifs. This, I ken the manner of his gate.

Herself on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration bits him from the earth.

Agam. Is this the Lady Crefild?

Dios. Even the.

Agam. Boldly welcome you to the Greeces, sweete Lady.

Vifs. Our Generall doth faile you with a kiffe.

Vifs. Yeris, is the kindenesse but particulars: wwer bette the were kifte in generall.

Vifs. And very courteuslye: Ile begin. So much for Nestor.

Achil. Ile take that winter from your lips faire Lady
Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kifling once.

Paris. But that's no argument for kifling now;
For thou pop't Paris in his hardiment.

Vifs. Oh deadly gall, and thame of all our scornes,
For which we loose our heads, to gild his horns.

Paris. The fift was Menelaus kiffe, this mine:

Patroclus kiffes you.

Men. Oth this is trim.

Pat. Paris and I kiffe evermore for him.

Men. I de have my kiffe for: Lady by your leave.

Cref. In killing doe you render, or receiv'e.

Pat. Both take and gue.

Cref. Ile make my match to lye,

The kiffe you take is better then you gue: therefore no kiffe.

Men. I le you goo boote, Ile gue you three for one.

Cref. You are an odde man, gue euen, or gue none.

Men. An addde man Lady, evey man is odde.

Cref. No, Paris is not: for you know'tis true,
That you are odde, and he is euen with you.

Men. You lylip me a'th head.

Cref. No, Ile be fowrned.

Vifs. It were no match, your naile against his horse:
May I sweete Lady beg a kiffe of you?

Cref. You may.

Vifs. I doe desire it.

Cref. Why begge then?

Vifs. Why then for Vens fake, give me a kiffe:
When Helles is a maidse againe, and his—

Cref. I am your debtor, claine it when it doe.

To flatslipryeties of opportunitie:

Exeunt.

Enter all of Troy, Hector, Paris, Ascanius, Helcium and Attendants. Fortifi.

All. The Trojans Trumpet.

Agm. Yonder comes the troop.

And halie all our flat of Grecia: what shall he done?

This Ares is halfe made of Hecules blood;

Hecules, and all the Trojans, &c.

Agm. If not Achilles fit, what is your name?

Therefore Achilles: but what ere, know this,

In the extremity of greate and tender care,

That is his name.

Achilles. Doth not your nameless words

When it and that which looks like pride, is suretie:

'This Ares is halfe made of Hecules blood;

And his name?

And therefore Achilles, but what ere, know this,

Troylus and Cressida.

Are. My well-sap'd Lord of Troy, no title to you.
Men. Let me confirm my Prince's brothers greeting.
You brace of warlike Brothers, welcome her.

Hest. Who must we answer?

Are. The Noble Mentor.
Hest. Or, you my Lord, by Mars his generous thanks,
Macklin, that I affected this untrained Oath,
Your generous wife foresees still by Phoebus Gloire
She's well, but bad, and must commend her to you.

Men. Name her now sir, she's a dreadfully Theame.

Hest. I pardon, I offend.

Nef. I have (thou gallant Troyan) sent thee off
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youths: and I have seen thee
As he &c. so, I trust thy Phegian Steed,
And teene thee learning for tos & slaughters,
When thou hast hung the advanced word in thy ear,
Not letting it decline, on the decline:
That I have paid unto my bidders by,
For Jupiter is yeonder dealing life.
But I have seen thee safe, and take thy breath,
That when that a ring of Greeks have him dead,
Like an Olympian wrestling, this have I seen,
But this thy countenance (thou look'st flinty)
I learned now till now. I know thy Gallant,
And once fought with him; she was a sonder good,
But by great Mars, the Captain of all,
Never like thee. Let an oldman embrace thee,
And worthy Warrior welcome to our Tents.

Are. This the old Nefor.

Hest. Let me embrace thee good old Chronicle,
That half so long, would hang in hand with thee.
Most respectful Nefor, I am glad to embrace thee.
Nef. I would my arms could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courteisie.
Hest. I would they could.

Nef. Let by this white beard I did fight with thee to-morrow.
Well, welcome, welcome: I have seen the time.

V. If. I wonder now how wonder City stand,
When we have here their face and pillar by vs.

Hest. I know your saucy Lord V. if. well.
Al sir, there's many a greedy and Troyan dead,
Since first I saw your telle, and Dressed
In Illion, on your Greekish Embraie.
V. If. Sir, I foretold you then what would enue,
My prophecie is but half a journey yet;
For wonder was that pernicious in your Towne,
With those tops do buffet the clouds,
Must kife them own feet.

Hest. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet: and modestly I think,
The fall of every Philigian stone well will
A drop of Greekian blood: the end crowns all,
And that old common Arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.

V. If. So to him we let it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Helier, welcome;
After the General, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my Tent.

Ach. I shall forecast thee Lord V. If., thou.
Now Helier I have fed nine eyes on thee,
I have with exact view perceived thee Helier,
And quoted optarg by way.

Hest. Is this Achill?

Ach. I am Achill.

Hest. Stand faire I pray thee, let me look on thee.

Ach. Behold thy fill.

Hell. Nay, I have done already.
Ach. Thou art to brest, I will the second time,
As I would brest thee, view thee, limb by limb.

Hell. O like a Book of state thou'rt unread me ere:
But there's more in me then thou underrand't.
Why dost thou so oppose me with thine eye?

Ach. Tell me you Herowen, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? Whether there, or there, or there;
That I may guide the soul in some name,
And make distinct the very breach, where-out
Hellers great spirit flow. Answer me heavens.

Hell. It would disorder the bliss Gods, proud man,
To answer such a question, Stand again;
Think it thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to press in me in nice conclustion
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Ach. I tell thee yea.

Hell. Went thou the Oracle to tell me so,
I did not beleue thee: henceforthe guard thee well,
For I'll not kill thee, not there, not there,
But by the forge that flysh'd Mars his helme,
He kill thee every where, yea, and there.
You wilfull Grecians, pardon me this bragge,
His violence draws flow from my lips,
But He endeavoured to fetch these words;
Or may I never—

Ach. Do not chafe thee Cofin;
And you Achill, let thee threats alone
Till accident, or purpose bring you too.
You may every day enough of Hellor
If you have Romacce. The general flame I bear,
Can scarce interest you to be take with him.
Hell. I pray you let us see you in the field,
We had pealing Worces since you refus'd
The Grecians cause.

Ach. Doth thou intrest me Hellor?
To morrow do I meete thee tell as death.
To night, all Friends.

Hell. Thy hand upon that match.

Ach. First all you Petres of Grece go to my Tent,
There in the full converse you: Afterwardis,
As Hellors byforre, and your bugniyes shall
Concur together, facultally intrest him,
Beate loud the 1 abornt, let the Trumpets blow,
That this great Soouldier may his welcome know: Exeunt
Troy. My Lord Ulysses, tell me I beseech you,
In what place of the Field doth Calesar keep.
Ulyss. At Strenuous Tent, nought Princely Troylaus,
There Dressed both feast with him to night,
Whoever looks on heavens, nor on earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the faire Cressida.

Troy. Shall I (sweet Lord) be bound to thee so much,
After we part from Agamemnon Tent,
To bring me this?

Ulyss. You shall command me:
As gentle tell me, of what Honour was
This Cressida in Troy, had she no Louer there
That wak's her absence?
Troy. O fir, to such as bowst thefing their fcarres,
A mocke is due: wilt you walke on my Lord?
She was belaund, she loud, she is, and dooth;
But still sweet Loue is food to Fortunates tooth.

Exeunt.

Enter Achill, V. If., Mentor and Patroclus.

Achill. He heat his blood with Greekish wine to night, Which

Troylus and Cressida.

Which with my Cemitar lye cool to morrow:
Parroclial, let vs Feast him to the height.

Pat. Here comes Thersites. Enter Thersites.

Ach. How now, thou deaf and Dullard, thou crumply batch of Nature, what's the newest?
Thers. Why thou picture of what thou seest; & I doff of Ido-lot-worshipers, here's a Letter for thee. Achit. From whence, Fragment?
Thers. Why thou full diff of Foole, from Troy.
Pat. Who keeps the Tent now?
Thers. The Surgeons box, or the Patients wound.

Ach. Male Varlot you Rogue! What's that?
Thers. Why his macliffe Whore. Now the rotten difses of the South, guts-griping Ruptures, Catarres, Lawdes a gruell eth'backe, Lethargies, cold Palifes; and the like, take and take againe, such prepondous difcencies.

Thers. Why thou damnable box of croul thou, what meanst thou to curse thu?
Thers. Do I curse thee?
Patr. Why no, you ronnous But, you whorson indignifiable Curre.

Ach. No, not vs

Pat. Or, no, you villain But, you whorson indignifiable Curre.

Ach. My sweete Parrocline, I am charrest quite From my great purpoe into水墨es bastell:
Here's a Letter from Queene Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my faire Loue.
Both taxing me, and gaging me to keepe
An Oath that I have sworn. I will not breake,
An Oath that I have sworn. I will not breake,
Full Grekes, false Fame, Honor go, or stay,
My minor voyg lyes here; thus 11 obeye, a.

Come, come Thersites, help to trim my Tent,
This night in banqueting must all be spent.

Ach. Away Parrocline.

Thers. With too much blood, and too little Brain, these two may run mad: but if with too much braine, and too little blood, they do. I lese a corner of madmen. Here's Achit's Atemem, an honest fellow enough, and one that loues Qualites, but he has not so much Braine as earwax; and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primitive Statue, and oblique memoriall of Cuckold's, a thrifty sheepe-herde in a chaine, hanging at his Brothers legge, to soome forme that but that he is, sould warded with malice, and malice forsworn with wit, turne him too; to an Affe and Oxe to an Owle; two nothing, here's both Oxe and Affe:

Thers. To a Dogge, a Mule, a Cat, a Finchew, a Toade, a Lizard, an Owle, a Patacke, or a Herring without a Roe, I would not care: but to be Mamenius, I would confine against Definy. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites: but I care not to see the bowles of a Lazor, so I were not Mamenius. Hoy-dye, spirits and fires.

Enter Helen, Ajax, Agamemnon, Pisser, Ne-
For Diomed, with Lights.

Ach. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ach. No yonder til, there where we see the light
Helt. I trouble you.
Troylus and Cressida.

Troy. Good night.

Troy. Hold, patience.

Cress. How now Trojan?

Cress. Diest.

Troy. No, no, good night: I be your fool no more.

Troy. Thy better mull.

Cress. Hirake one word in your care.

Troy. O plague and madness!

Philo. You are mad, Prince; I must depart; I pray you,

Let your displeasure shoulde enlarg[e it felle.

To warchfull rearmes: this place is dangerous;

The time right deadly; I beseech you goe.

Troy. Behold, I pray you.

Philo. Nay, good my Lord goe not:

You follow to great destruction: come my Lord?

Troy. I pray thee stay?

Philo. You haue not patience, come.

Troy. I pray you stay? by hell and hell torment,

I will not speake a word.

Troy. And so goodwill.

Cress. Nay, but you part in anger.

Troy. Dost thou this grievance? O wathered truth!

Philo. Why, how now Lord?

Troy. By hate I will be patient.

Cress. Good man, why Greeke?

Philo. Fogo, adew, you prate.

Cress. In faith, I do not: I come hither once again.

Philo. You shake my Lord at something; will you goe?

You will break out.

Troy. She trouses his checke.

Philo. Come, come.

Troy. Nay stay, by hate I will not speake a world.

There is betweene my will, and all offences,

A guard of patience; stay a little while.

Troy. How the diewell? Luxury with his fat rumpe and potato finger, tickles thefle together: I syce lechery, syce;

Dis. But will you then?

Cress. In faith I will; I never truet mee else.

Dis. Giveme some token for the suete of it.

Cress. Ite fethe you once, Exit.

Dis. You haue wonne patience.

Philo. Envy me not wretet Lord.

Cress. I will not be my selfe, nor have cognizance
Of what I seel: I am all patience.

Enter Cressid.

Troy. Now the pledge, now, now, new.

Cress. Here Diomed, keepes this Sliene.

Troy. O beautie, where is thy Path?

Philo. My Lord,

Troy. I will be patient, outwardly I will.

Cress. You know upon this Sliene? behold it well:

He said me: O faire wench! I giue thee againe.

Dis. Whoes was?

Cress. It is no matter now I haue againe,

I will not meete you with to morrow night:

I now diemed visit me no more.

Philo. Now the intenps: well laid Wheftone.

Dis. I shall haunt it,

Cress. What this?

Dis. I that.

Cress. O all you gods! O prettie, prettie pledge;

Thy Mafter now lies thinking in his bed

Of thee and mee, and fighes, and takes my Glove,

And, giues meall daunger killes to:

As li thine.

Philo. Nay, doe not search it from me.

Cress. He that takest that, takes my heart withall.

Troy. I had your heart before, this followes it.

Dis. I did swere patience.

Cress. You shall not haue it Diomed; faith you shall not:

He giue you something else.

Dis. I will haue this: whose was it?

Cress. It is no matter.

Dis. Come tell me whose it was?

Cress. Twas one that lould me better then you will.

But now you have it, tak it.

Dis. Whole was it?

Cress. By all Diana waiting women yond;

And by her selfe, I will not tell you whose.

Dis. To morrow will I were it on my Helme;

And giue his spirits that dars not challenge.

Troy. Where thou the dwell, and wont it on thyborne,

It should be challeng'd.

Dis, Well well, itis done, til past; and yet it is not:

I will not keepe my word.

Dis. Why then farewell,

Thou never thatst mockes Diomed againe.

Cress. You shall not goe: one cannot speake a word,

But its faire flatters you:

Dis. I do not like this fooling,

Thou; Not by Jove: but that that likes not me, pleases me beth.

Dis. What shall I come? the house.

Cress. I, come: O I doe, come: I shall be plaguy'd.

Dis. Farewell till then.

Exit.

Cress. Good night: I prye thee come.

Troy. farewell one eye yet looks on thee;

But with my heart, the other eie, doth fee.

Ah pheare our fexe; this fault in vs I finde:

The errour of our eye, directs our minde;

What errour leads, maue ere: I then conclude,

Mines swaied by eyes, are full of turpitude,

Thou. A proofe of strength the could not publish more;

Ysplehe the say, my minde is now turn'd whore.

Philo. Alas done my Lord.

Troy. It is.

Philo. Why say we then?

Troy. To make a recollection to my soule

Of every libel that here was spoke:

But if I tell how these two did coake;

Shall I not lyce, in publishing a truth?

Sith yet there is a resedence in my heart:

An esperance so obstinately strong,

That doth intent that tells of eyes and ears;

As if thee organes had deceitious functions,

Ceated onely in caluminate.

Vas Cressid here?

Philo. I cannot contrive Troyan.

Troy. She was not fine,

Philo. Much faire she was.

Troy. Why my negation hath no tache of wrothnesse

Philo. Nor mine my Lords; Cressid was here but now.

Troy. Let it be beleued not womanhood;

Thinkes we had mothers; do not give advantage

To stubbome Criticks, apt without a theme

For depravation, to square the general faks

By Cressida rule. Rather thinke this not Cressida.

Philo. What hath the done Prince, that can soyle our mothers?

Troy. Nothing at all, unlesse that this were the.

Thou. Will he twigg an hand to the outest of owne eyes?

Troy. This flue ha'. this is Diomed Cressida:

If beaute have a soule, this is not fine.
Troyus and Cressida.

By the everlasting gods, Ile goe.

And. My dreames will sure prove ominous to the day.

Heil. No more I say.

Enter Casandra.

Caffa. Where is my brother Helen?

And. Here sitter, arm'd, and bloody in intent;

Confort with me in loud and deere petition:

Put me by the hand, and knees, for I have dramee

Of bloody turbulence; and this whole night

Hath nothing beene but spafe, and forms of slaughter.

Caff. O, 'tis true.

Heil. Ho! bid my Trumpet sound.

Caff. No notes of callie, for the heauens, sweet brother.

Heil. Begen I say: the gods have heard me sweare.

Caff. The gods are deare to hot and pesculle vowes;

They are polluted offringes, more abhorr
t

Then spotted Litters in the firensc.

And. O be perfwaded, doe not count it holy;

To hurt by being iuft, it is a lawfull:

For we would count glue much to as violent thefts,

And rob in the behalfle of charity.

Caff. It is the purpose that makes strength the vow;

But vowes to every purpose must not hold:

Vnarme the Helen.

Heil. Hold you this iuff for say:

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:

Life every man holds deere, but the deere man

Holdes honour faire more precious, deere, then life.

Enter Troyus.

How now young man? what meane'th thou to fight to day?

And. Casandra, call my father to perfwade.

Heil. No faith young Troyus deffe thy hautefull youth

I am to day'st ius'ne of Chausirt:

Let grow thy sinewes till their knees be strong;

And temper not yet the bushes of the waste.

Vnarme thee, goe; and doubt thou not brave boy,

If hand to day, for thee, and me and Troy.

Troy. Brother, you have a ius'ne of mercy in you;

Which better fits a Lyon then a man.

Heil. What vice is that? good Troyus chide me for it.

Troy. When many times the capte Grecian falls,

Enes in the fame and winde of your faire Sword:

You bid them rite, and true.

Troy. O'tis fare play.

Troy. Fooles play, by heaven Helen.

Heil. How now? how now?

Troy. For th' loue of all the gods.

Let's leave the serous Patty with our Mothers;

And when we have our Armours buckled up,

The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,

Spur them to ruthless workes, reine them from ruth.

Helen, Fire fangs, fire.

Troy. Helen, then his wafer.

Helen. Troyus, I would not have you fight to day.

Troy. Who should with-hold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars,

Beckning with fecrale truchion my retiere;

Nor Priam, and Hector on kytes;

Their eyes ore-galled with recource of teates,

Nor you my brother, with your true sword drawn

Oppod to hinder me, should stop my way:

But by my ruine.

Enter Priam and Caffandra.

Caffa. Lay hold upon him Priam, hold him fast;

He is thy cruch; now if thou lose thy styx,

Tito on him lesning; and all Troy on thee,
Troilus and Cressida.

Fall all together.

Prarm. Come Helio, come, goe backe:
Thy wife hath dreamept: thy mother hath bad visions;
Cassandra doth foretel; and i telle thee,
As ike a Prophet suddenly emipt,
to telle thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore come backe.

Hect Eneas is field,
And I do stand engag'd to many Grecians,
Even in the faith of yours, to appeare
This morning to them.

Pram. I, but thou shalt not goe,
Hect. I must not breake my faith:
You know me dutfull, therefore depart
Set me not shame respet; but giue me leave
I to take that course by your confudt and voice,
Which you doe here forbid me Royall Prarm.

Caff. O Prarm, yelde not to him.

Ado. Doe not doe father,
Hect. Adoweache; I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in,
Exit Andromach.

Troj. This foolifh, dreaming, superfluous girle,
Makes all these bodements.

Caff. O farewell, deare Helio:
Looke how thou diest; look how thy eye turns pale:
Looke how thy words doth breake in many vents;
Harke how at Troj rearest; how Hebram cries out;
How poore Andromache flings her doulous forth;
Behold distraction, frenzy, and a hazement,
Like wildefide Anteekes one another meete,
And alcry Hecull, Heli'ers dead: O Heli'o!

Troj. Away, away.
Caff. Farewell yees, softe: Heli'o I take my leaue;
Thou dost thy selfe, and all our Troye decease.

Hect. You are acause, my Liege, at her exclaine:
Got and cheere the Towne, weele forth and night,
Doe deedes of praise, and tell you them at night.

Prarm. Farewel. the gods with safetie stand about thee.

Alarm. Troj. They scarce us, harke: proud Dismas, bleuece
I come to loose my arm, or winne my sleue.

Enter Pandar.

Pand. Do you heare my Lord? do you heare?

Troj. What now?

Pand. Here is a LETTER come from yond poore girle.

Troj. Let me reade.

Pand. A whorifon tiscke, a whorifon rascally tiscke,
Fo troubles me; and the foolifh fortune of this girle, and
What one thing, another, that I shall loose you one,
O'th days: and I have a thame in mine eyes too;
And such anache in my bones; that violete a man were curf,
I cannot tell what to thinke on't. What fayes thee there?

Worke, words, meere words, no matter from Ich: torr.

The effect doth operare another way.
Goe wande to wade there amir and change together:
My bone with words, and errors fill the seeds;
But edific another with her deedes.

Pand. Why, but hear thee?

Troj. Hence brother is like: ignominy and flame
Passueth yie, and lies awe with thy name.

A Larm. Enter Therfis inexcursion.
Troylus and Cressida.

Before the belching Whale; then is he yonder, And there the lying Greeks, ripec for his edge; Full down before him, like the mowers' swath; Here, there, and every where, he leaves and takes: Dextertie fo obaying apatite, That what he will he does, and doas much, That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulysses. Oh, courage, courage Princes! great Achilles is arm'd, weeping, enflaft, raving vengeance; Parthenus woulds have raze'd his drostwe blood; Together with his mangled Asyrfoanuus,
That noeleffe, handleffe, luckt and chipt, come to him; Crying on Hector. Aias hath lost a friend, And foames at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it: Roaring for Troyles; who hath done to day, Mad and fantafick execution; Engaging and redeeming of him: With luch a careaffe force, and forceaffe care, As if that luck in very flpight of cunning, bad him win al. Enter Aias.

Aias. Troyles, thou coward Troyles. Exit.

Dido. I, there, there,

Neft. So, fo, we draw togethert. Exit. Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, thou thy face: Know what it is to meete Achilles angry.

Hector, what's Hector? I will none but Hector. Exit. Enter Aias.

Aias. Troyles, thou coward Troyles, shew thy head, Enter Diomed.

Dido. Troyles, I say, where's Troyles?

Achilles. What would it thou?

Diomed. I would correct him.

Achilles. Were I the General,

Thou shoul'dl'have my office,

Erst that correction: Troyles I say, what Troyles? Enter Troyles.

Troyles. Oh traitor! Dido.

Tumethyfalseface,thoustrayon,

And pay thy life thou owell use for my base.

Diomed. HeArt thee there?

Achilles. He lights with him alone,

Diomed. Lo, he my praise, I will not looke upon.

Troyles. Come bold you coging Greeks, hauze at you.

Enter Hector.

Hector. Troyles, why Troyles?
W ell bought my youngest Brother, Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Now doe I see thee; hauz at thee Hector.

Hector. Pauze if thou wilt.

Achilles. I do disclaim thee curtsey, proud Trojan; Be happy that my arms are out of vte.

My self and negligence betriedst the new,

But thou arton this heart of me against.

Tkill when, goe.

Hector. What is that?

I would have beene more, more a fresher man,

I had expected they shou have now my Brother. Enter Troyles.

Troyles. Aias hath ta'en Aeneas, shall it be?

No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,

He will not carry him: He be came too,

O bring him off: Pate hear me what I say;

I wraek nor, though I end my life to day, Exit. Enter one in Armour.

Hector. Stand flue, thou Grecce,

That thou art a goodly make.

Nein, will thou nor? like thy armour well,

He doth it, and unloose the mutes all.

But liue be master of it; will thou not bestride?

Why then fly on, liue hunte thee for thy hide.

Exit. Enter Achilles with Myrmidon.

Achilles. Come hither about me you my Myrmidon:

Mark what I say, attend me where I wheel:

Strike not a strive, but keep your feltes in breadth;

And when I have the bloody Hector fount,

Engage him with your weapons round about:

In yelfe manner execute your armes.

Follow me first, and my proceedings set:

It is decreed, Hector the great mufle dye. Exit.

Enter Thersites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Thers. The Cuckold and the Cuckold maker are at it: Now bulb, now dogge, lowe; Paris lowe; now my double herd shall screw; lowe Paris, lowe; the bull has the game: wate horses ho!

Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Baifard.

Baf. Tune Vane and fight.

Thers. What art thou?

Baf. A Baiftard Sonne of Prasons.

Thers. I am a Baiftard too, I have Baifart, I am a Baifard begost,

Baifard intrufed, Baiftard in mundane, Baiftard in vallour, in every thing illegitimate: one Baiftar will not bite another, and wherefore should one Baiftard take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to vs: if the Sonne of a whore fight for a whore, the tems judgement: farewell Baiftard.

Baf. The diuell take thee coward.

Exit. Enter Hector.

Hector. Moif pottified core to fare without:

Thy goodly armours thus haff coth thy life.

Now is my dites work done; I take good breath:

Reft Sword, thou haff thy fill of blood and death, Enter Achilles, and his Myrmidones.

Achilles. Lookst Hector now the same begins to set?

How ugli night comes breathing at his laiect,

Even with the vail and dashing of the Sunne.

To clofe the day wp,

Hector is done.

Hector. I am warm'd, for I forget this goodly Grecke,

Achilles. Strike fellowes, strike, this is the man I lecture.

So Illian full thou: now Troy shynke downe;

Here lyes thy heart, thy finewes, and thy bone.

On Myrmidones, cry you all a name,

Achilles hath the emmab Hector Duke.

Retreat.

Hakke, a retreat upon our Grecian part.

Gree. The Trojan Trumpets sounds the like my Lord.

Achilles. The dragon wing of night on-speeds the earth

And ffeaker-like the Armies feerates

My halle fypt Sword, that franklly would have fed,

Pikes would with this damny bed: thus goes to bed.

Come, eye his body to my horses tale:

Along the feeld, I will the Trojan tiles.

Exit. Sound Retreat.

Agamemnon.

Enter Agamemnon, Aias, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomed, and the rest marching.

Agamemnon. Hakke, hakke, what thou is that?

Troylus and Cressida.

Sold. Achilles, Achilles, Hector's slain; Achilles, Der. The bruiser is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles. Act. If he be yet bragglest let it be: Great Hector was a man as good as he. Again. March paciently along; let one be sent To play Achilles feemes out our Tent. If in his death the gods have vs befrended, Great Troy is ours, and our sharper wars are ended.

Exeunt. Enter Eneas, Paris, Antenor and Diphilus. Aene. Stand hoo, yet are we masters of the field, Never goe home; here Blamow we out the night. Enter Troylus. Troy. If Hector is slain, All. Hector the gods forbid. Tra. He's dead! and at the murhurers Horses tale, In bruntly font, dragged through the thamefull Field: Frowne on you heauen, effedt your rage with speeke: Site gods vs your throames, and fitle at Troy. I say at onc, let your briece plaques be mercy, And linger not our sure dettructions on. Aene. My Lord, you doe discomfort all the Hosts. Troy. You understand me not, that tell me so: I do not speake of flight, of fear, of death, But dare all immenseness that gods and men, Address their dangers in. Hector is gone: Who shall tell Paeans to vs or Heauana? Let them that will a fercehoule aye be call'd, Goe in to Troy, and fay there, Hector's dead: There is a word will Paeans tune to Stone: Make weifs, and smother of the maides and wives; Coolke fatares of the youths; and in a word, Scarsr Troy out of it feile. But march away, Hector is dead; there is no more to fay.

Stray yet: you vile abominable Troes, Thus prouudely pight upon our Phrygian plaines: Let Titan rite as early as he dare, He through, and through your great fide toward. No frace of Earth shall funder our two hates, He haunte thee, like a wicked confidence still, Thrpmongest goblins swift as frenzies thoughts. Strike a free march to Troy, with comfort gee: Hope of revenge, shall hide our inward woes. Enter Pandarum. Pard. But heare you? heare you? Troy. Hence broker, lackee, ignomy, and shame Purtue thy life, and hie aye with thy name. Exeunt. Pan. A goodey medicinor myne skingbones: Oh world, world! thus is the poore agent dispide: Oh tra-tours and bawdes; how earnestly are you fete worke, and how ill requested? why should our iudevous be so defeed? and the performance so loathde? What Veste for it? what instance for it? let me fee. Pull merrily the humble Bee doth sing, Till he hatn left his hony, and his fling: And being once subdu'd in armed tale, Sweete hony, and sweete notes together falle. Good traders in the feld, feast in your painted cloathes; As many as be here of Panders houll, Your eyes halfe out, weep out at Pandar's fall: Or if you cannot wepe, yet giue some grones, Though not for me, yet for your skingbones: Brethren and sisters of the hold-dore trade, Some two months hence, my will shall here be made: It should be now, but that my fere is this: Some called Goole of Winchefer would hiffe: Till then, He teweare, and seeketh soute for caifer: And at that time beareth you my dyces. Finis.

FINIS.

The Tragedy of Coriolanus:

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Company of Mutinous Citizens, with Swords, Clubs, and other weapons.

1. Citizen. E'fore we proceed any further, heare me speake. All. Speake, speake.

1. Cit. You are all resolvd rather to dy then to famish?

All. Resolvd, resolvd.

1. Cit. First you know, Caius Martius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know it, we know't.

1. Cit. Let vs kill him, and wee haue Corne at our own price. Is it a Verdikt?

All. No more talking on; Let it be done, away, away.

2. Cit. One word, good Citizens.

1. Cit. We are accounted poore Citizens, the Patri- clas good: what Authority surrest one, would relieve vs. If they would yeeld vs but the superfluitie while it were whollomne, wee might gueffe they releu'd vs humane: But they thinke we are too deere, the leaemefe that afflic't vs, the object of our miferie, is as an invento- ry to particularize their abundance, our suffrance is a gaine to them. Let vs revenge this with our Pikes, ere we become Bakes. For the Gods know, I speake this in hunger for Breed, not in thirst for Revenge.

3. Cit. Would you procede especially against Caius Martius?

All. Against him first: He's a very dog to the Commonalty.

1. Cit. Consider you what Service he ha's done for his Country?

3. Cit. Very well, and could bee content to give him good report for't, but hee pays himselfe with beeing proud.

1. Cit. Nay, but speake not maliciously.

1. Cit. I say not you, what he hath done Famoislie, he did it to that end: though oft enconcie'd men can be content to say it was for his Country, he did it to please his Mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his vertue.

2. Cit. What he cannot helpe in his Nature, you ac- count to Vice in him: You must in no way say he is co- cuous.

1. Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of Acula- tions he hath faults (with surpluss) to crye in repetition. Shew'te: why.

What shew'st thee? The other fade a'ch City is siften: why say we prating here? To th Capitoll,

All. Come, come.

1. Cit. Soft, who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa, one that hath al- ways lovd the people.

2. Cit. He's one himself enough, wold at the rest vs so.

Men. What work's my Counselen men in hand?

Where go you with Blades and Clubs? The matter

Speake I pray you.

2. Cit. Our busines is not enowne to th Senat, they haue had inliking this fornight what we intend to do, & now wee'll shew em in deeds: they say poore Surres have strong breaths, they shall know we have strong arms too.

Menen. Why Masters, my good Friends, mine honest Neighbours, will you undoe your selves?

2. Cit. We cannot Sir, we are undone already.

Men. I tell you friends, most charitable care Have the Patricians of you for your wants. Your suffering in this darth, you may as well Strike at the Heaven with your flasts, as lift them Against the Roman State, whose cause will on The way it takes: cracking ten thousand Guebas Of more strong linkes affulder, than can ever Appear in your impendement. For the Dearth, The Gods, not the Patricians make it, and Your knees to them (not armes) must helpe. Alacke, You are transported by Calamity.

Theather, where more attends you, and you flander The Holmes of't State; who care for you like Fathers, When you curse them, as Enemies.

2. Cit. Care for vs? True indeed, they were car'd for vs yet. Suffere vs to famish, and their Store-houses crammed with Graine: Make Edicts for Vtiure, to support Vtu- rers; repeale daily any wholesome Act established against the rich, and provide more piercing Statutes daily, to chaine vp and restraine the poor. If the Warses eas vs not ypppe, they wills and there's allthe loue they besee.

Menen. Either you must

Confesse your selves wondrous Malicious, Or be accus'd of Folly. I shall tell you A pretty Tale, it may be you have heard it, But since it serues my purpose, I will venture To scale a little more.

2. Citizen. Well, he hear it Sir; yet you must not thinke To lubbe e'er our disgrace with a tale: But and plea se you deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the bodies members

Rebell'd against the Belly; thus accus'd it;

That onely like a Gulfe it did remaine

[\textit{Peth]}}
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Book I. Act II. Scene 2.

Thou Rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage,
But makest thou ready thy shield, staffs, and clubs,
Rome, and her Rats, are at the point of battle,
The one side must have baile.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hayle, Noble Caius Martius.

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter you{ious rogues
That rubbing the poore Ith of your Opinion,
Makest thy felles Seabs.

2.Cit. We have enter your good word,

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter
Beneath abusing. What would you have, you Caius,
That like not Peace nor Warre; The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you,
Where he should finde you Lyons, finds you Hares:
Where Boxes, Geefe you are: No furer, no,
Then in the coale of fire upon the Ice,
Or Halfstone in the Sun. Your Verse is,
To make him worthy, whose offence sobbites him,
And swerve that infidels side. Who defines Greatness,
Defyres your hate: and your Affections are
A sicknesse Appetite; who desires most that
Which would encrease his euill. He that depends Upon your favours, is somwmes with finesse of Leafe,
And sweves downe Oakes, with ruthles. Hang ye
To every minute you do change a Munde,
And call him Noble, that was now your Hate: He Wisd, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the Citie,
You cry against the Noble Senaor, who
(Under the Gods) keepes you in awe, which else
Would feede on one another? What's their seeking?

Mar. For Corne at their owne rates, whereof they say
The Citie is well full.

2.Mor. Hang'em: They say?

They'll sit by thefe, and preame to know
What's done't with Capitoll: Who's like to rise,
Who Upprises, & who declines: Side fitions, & guie out
Ceneciall Marriages, making parties forong,
And feeling-fuch as ft and not in their liking,
Below their cobled Shoes. They say their's grain enough;
With their Nobility they fit to their Hathe.
And let me vfe my Sword, I'll make a Quarrile
With thousands of these quarter'd flaves, as high
As I could picke my Lance.

2.Mor. Nay these are almost troughously perfravved:
For though abundantly they lacke defection
Yet are they passing Cowardly. But I befeech you,
What fayes the other Troope?

Mar. They are difpleas'd: Hang'em:
They said they were an hungry, fight'd forth Prauertos
That Hunger-broke stone walls: that dogges must eate
That meate was made for mouths. That the gods sent not Comme for the Richenes only: With thefe threads
They vended their Complaininges, which being anwer'd
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
To make the heart of generofity,
And make bold power looke pale, they threw their cups
As they would hang them on the hands a'th Moore,
Shooting their Emulation.

2.Mor. What is graunted them?

Mar. Fine Tribunes to defend their vulgar wildoms
Of their owne choice. One's Iuovis Brattus,
Sinovis Velosius, and I knownot. Seleth,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Enter Siemini Venetus, Annius Brero Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Senators.

1. Sen. Martius'tis true, that you lately told vs, The Voices are in Armes.

Mar. They have a Leader, Tullius Aufidius that will put you too: I sense in enuying his Nobility: And were I any thing but what I am, I would with me only go.

Com. You have fought together:

Mar. Were half the half the world by th'ears, & he upon my paste, I'd rove to make Onely my warres with him. He is a Lion That I am proud to hunt.

1. Sen. Then worthy Martius, Attend upon Cominius to thefe Warres.

Com. It is your former promisse, Mar. Sir it is, And I am constant: Tito Lucius, thou Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus face.

What art thou fiuifs? Stand't it out?

Tit. No Cause Martius, Ile leane upon one Crutch, and fight with tother, Ere play behinde this Buiffenie,

Men. Oh true-bred.

Sen. Your Company to'chari Capitoll, where I know Our greatest Friends attend vs.

Tit. Lead you on: Fellow Cominius, we must follow you, right worthy you Priority.

Com. Noble Martius, Sen. Hence to your home, be gone!

Mar. Nay let them follow, The Voices haue much Corne: take these Rats thither, To gnawe their Garners. Worshipfull Mutiners, Your valour puts well forth: Pray remove. Exeunt.

Citizens spare away. Mantu Siem, & Bruces.

Siem. Was ever man to proud as this Martius?

Bru. He has no equal.

Siem. When were we chosen Tribunes for the people, Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes.

Siem. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mou'd, he will not spare to gird the Gods, Siem. Bemoke the modest Moone.

Bru. The present Warres deweau him, he is growne Too proud to be so valiant.

Siem. Such a Nature, tickled with good fortune, did daina the shadow which he treads on at noone, but I do wonder, his insolence can brooke to be commanded under Cominius?

Bru. Fame, at the whiche he aymes, In whom already he's well gra'd, cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd then by A place below the first: for what miscarries Shall be the Generals fault, though he performe To th'enviow of a man, and giddy centure Will then cry out of Martius: Oh, if he Had borne the buffete.

Sen. Besides, if things go well. Opinion that to flickes on Martius, shall Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Comet halfe all Cominius Honors are to Martius Though Martius earn'd them not: and all his faults To Martius shall be Honors, though indeed In ought he merite not.

Sen. Let's hence, and heare How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion More then his singularity, he goes Upon this present Action.

Bru. Let's along. Exeunt.

Enter Tullius Aufidius with Senators of Coriolas.

1. Sen. So, your opinion is Aufidius, That they of Rome are entred in our Counsailes, And know how we proceed,

Auf. Is it not yours?

What ever haue bin thought one in this State That could be brought to bodily aet, ere Rome Had circumention: 'tis not foure dayes gone Since I heard there, there are the words, I thinke I haue the Letter heere: yses, heere it is;

They have prefh a Power, but it is not knowne Whether for East or West: the Dearth is great, The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd, Cominius Martius your old Enemy (Who is of Rome worfe hated then of you) And Tito Lartius, a most valiant Roman, These three leade on this Preparasion Whether 'tis bent; most likely, 'tis for you; Consider of it.

1. Sen. Our Armie's in the Field: We never yet made double but Rome was ready To answere vs.

Auf. Nor did you thinke it folly, To keep your great pretences away'd, till when They needes must shew themselfes, which in the hatching It feem'd appear'd to Rome. By the discovery, We shall be hurnd in our ayme, which was To take in many Townes, ere (almost) Rome Should know we were a-foot.

2. Sen. Noble Aufidius, Take your Commission, hye you to your Bands, Let vs alone to guard Coriolas If they set downe before's: for the remove Bring vp your Army: but (I thinke) you'nd finde Th'have not prepar'd for vs.

Auf. O doubt not that, I speake from Cerainities. Nay more, Some parcels of their Power are forth already; And onely hitherward. I lease your Honors, If we, and Caius Martius chance to meete, 'Tis foame between vs, we shall ever strike Till one can do no more.

All. The Gods assif you.

Auf. And keep your Honors safe.

2. Sen. Farewell,

Auf. Farewel.

I. i. 224—I. ii. 38

4.

Enter Volusian and Virgilia, mother and wife to Martius: They set them down on two loose stools and stairs.

Volusian. I pray you, daughter Jng, or express your selfe in a more comfortable seat: If my Somes were my Husband, I should be free to choose an able woman whereunto he wonned Honor, then in the embracements of his Bed, where he would shew me love. When yet hee was but tender-bodied, and the only Sonne of my womb; when youth with comeliness pluck'd all gaiety from his joy; when for a day or two entreate, a Mother should not tell him an houre from her bed: I considering how Honour would become me in a manner, that it was no better then Picture-like to hang by air, if renoume made it not fine, was pleased to let him feele danger, where he was like to finde fame: To a cruel Waste I lent him, from whence he return'd, his browes bound with Oake. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang now more in joy at first harkning he was a Man-child, then now in first feele he had prov'd himselfe a man.

Virg. But had he died in the Sunne, then how then?

Volusian. Then his good report should have besege my Somes, I therein would have stood none. Heare me professe sincerely, had I a dozen sons in my house alike, and none less deere then thine, and my good Martius, I had rather had eleuen like Nobby for their Country, then one voluptuously further out of a State.

Enter A Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Volusia is come to visit you.

Virg. Referee you give me leave to receive my selfe.

Volusian. Indeed you shall not.

I thankes, I assure you my Husbands Drumme: See hee placke a Auffidius downe by th'air: Then children, the poor Than: Then my poor bugg, then having him: I thankes I see him looke at thee, and call thee, Come on you Cowards, you were got in care. Though you were born in Rome, this bloody brow With his mans hilda then, while haping, in it he goes Like to a Harriet man, that task to do move. Os all, or loose his hyre.

Volusian. Away you Folli: it more becomes a man.

Then get him this Trophies. The breaths of Hector. When shee did suckle Heiler, look'd not onether.

Then Heiles upon forhead, while it spryke forth Blood.

At Grecian sword: Crowning, tell Valeria.

We see fit to bid her welcome. Exit Gent.

Virg. Heauen bleisse my Lord from fell Auffidius.

Vol. Hee I beat Auffidius head below his knee, And trode upon his necke.

Enter Valeria with an eye, and a Gentlewoman.

Val. My Ladys both good day to you.

Virg. Sweet Madam.

Virg. I am glad to see your Ladyship.

Val. How do you both? I see you manifest house-kepers.

Virg. What see you standing here? A fine ipote in good Cath. How does your little Somes?

Vir. I thank you, Ladyship: Well good Madam.

Vol. He had made us fee the Iwrends, and heard a Drum, then looked upon his Schoolmaster.

Val. A my Lord the Fathers Somes: He forewes tis a very pretty boy. A my truth, I think I vpon him a Wend-day at our house together: he's such a commend'd coun-tenancer. I saw him run after a gilded Butterfly, & when he caught it, he let it go again, and after it again, and ou-er and outer he came, vp against it again: or whether his fall emrag'd him, as how swards, hee did so let it

Virg. One of my Fathers mood.

Val. Indeed, is to a Noble child.

Virg. A Crackle Madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your frights, I must haue you play the idle Hufwife with me this afternoone.

Virg. No (good Madam)

I will not out of doore.

Val. Out of doore?

Virg. She shall, the flall.

Virg. Indeed no, by your patience; It not over the theesold, till my Lord returne from the Waters.

Val. I say, you confine your selfe most vrestrealy: Come, you must go to the good Lady that lies in.

Virg. I will with her spredy strength, and with faire my prayers; but I cannot gother.

Val. Why I pray you, Whys?

Virg. I'm not to fawe labour, nor that I want lone.

Val. You would be another Penelope yet they say, all the same the shep in Parises absence, did but fill Aethica full of Mothers. Comest, I would your Cambirck were en-

Frighted as your finger, that you might loose picking it for price. You shall come go with vs.

Virg. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not to.

Val. In truth I go with you, and tell you excellent newses of your Husband.

Virg. Oh good Madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily I do not sit still with you there comes newes from him last night.

Val. In extant it's true; I heard a Senator speake it. Thus it is the Volctes have an Army soth, against who Commones the General is gone, with one part of our Romane power. Your Lord, and Titus Lartius, we set down before their Citie Casilda, they nothing doubt prevaring, and to make it breife Waters. This is true unme Hone, and so I pray go with vs.

Virg. Give me courage good Madam, I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Val. Let her alone Ladie, she is now: She will but diface our better mirth.

Valeria. In truth I shakke the fine would:

Fare you well then. Come good sweet Ladie. Praysee Virgilia come thy idomete out a doore,

And along with vs.

Virg. No.

Val. At a word Madam; Indeed I must not,

I wiff you much mirth.

Val. Well, then farewell.

Exhaust Ladies

Enter Martius, Titus Lartius, with Drumme and Colours, with Captaines and Soldieres, as before the City Corialum: to them a Meeting.

Martius. Yonder comes Newes: A Wager they hauemet.

Lur. My hoile to yours, no.

Mar. Th's done.

Lur. Agreed.

Mar.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Mar. Say, ha's our General met the Enemy?
Meff. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet.
Lar. So, the good Horace is mine.
Mar. He buy him of you.
Lar. No, Ile not sell, nor give him; Lead you him I will
For halfe a hundred years: Summon the Towne.
Mar. How farre off lie these Armies?
Meff. Within this mile and halfe.
Mar. Then shall we hear their Larum, & they Ours.
Now Mar. I tryshoo make vs quicke in worke,
That we with smokings swords may march from hence
To helpe our fielded Friends. Come, blow thy flay.

They Sound a Parley: Enter two Senators with others on the wales of Coriolains.
Tullus Aufidius, is he within your Walles?
1. Senat. No, poor man that fears you leefe then he,
That's lefser then a little: Drum a farre off.
Hearke, our Drum
Are bringing forth our youth: We'll break our Walles
Rather than they shall sound vs vp,
Which yet seeme flurt, we haue but pin'd with Ruthers,
They're open of themselues. Hearke, you farre off.

There is Auffidius. Lift what worke he makes Among'this your clouen Army.
Mar. Oh they are at it.
Lar. Their noife be our instruction. Ladders hoa.

Enter the Army of the Voles.
Mar. They feare vs not, but flife forth their Cittie.
Now put out your Shields before your hearts, and fight
With hearts more proofs then Shields.
Advance brave Tiums,
They do disdain vs much beyond our Thoughts, which makes me sweaft with wrath. Come on my fellows
He that retires, Ile take him for a Vole,
And he shall feele mine edge.

Alarum: the Voles are beat back to their Trenches.

Enter Martius & Coriolanus.
Mar. All the contagion of the South, light on you,
You Shames of Rome: you heard of byles and Plagues
Plaister you o're, that you may be abhor
Farther then seene, and one infect another
Against the Wind a mile: you foules of Goece,
That best the shapes of men, how have you run
From Slaves, that Apes would bate; Pluto and Hell
All hurt behind, backes red, and faces pale
With flight and agued feare, mend and charge home,
Or by the fires of heauen, Ile leave the Poe,
And make my Wares on you: Looke too: come on,
If you'll hand fall, we'll beate them to their Wres,
As they vs to our Trenches followes.

Another Alarum, and Marins followes them to
Trench, and in vs in.

So, now the gates are open: now prose good Seconds,
Tis for the followers Fortune, widens them,
Not for the Fevers: Mark me, and do the like.
Enter the Cati.

1. Sol. Foole-hardineffe, nor I.
2. Sol. Nor I.
3. Sol. See they haue thus him in.
Alarum continues.
All. To th'pot I warrant him.
Enter Titus Lartius.
Tit. What is become of Marins?
Alarum. (Sir) doubleffe.
1. Sol. Following the Vaters at the very heels,
With them he enters: who upon the sodaine
Clapt to their Gates, he is himselfe alone,
To answere all the City.
Lar. Oh Noble Fellow!
Who feenfully out-dares his fenceeleff Sword,
And when it bowes, & fall vp: Thou art left Marins,
A Carabanche intire: as big as thooares
Weare not to riche a Jewell. Thou wast a Souldier
Even to Calues with, not fierce and terrible
Onely in strokes, but with thy grim lookes, and
The Thunder-like percussion of thy sounds
Thou maide thine enemies shake, as the World
Were Feuorous, and did tremble.

Enter Martius bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.
1. Sol. Looke Sir.
Lar. O'tis Marins.
Let's fetch him off, or make remise aliske.
They fight, and all enter the City.
Enter certaine Romans with sabres.
1. Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2. Rom. And I this.
3. Rom. A Marins on't, I tooke this for Siluer. extenu.
Alarum continues still a farre off.
Enter Martius, and Titus with a Trumpet.
Mar. See here these masters, that doe prize their hours
At a crack'd Drachme: Cunions, Leaden Spoons,
Irons of a Doot, Dublets that Hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them. These base flauges,
Ere ye the fight be done, packe vp, downe with them.
And harke, what noyfe the Generall makes; To him
There is the men of my foules hate, Auffidius,
Piercing our Romans: Then Valium: Times take
Convenient Numbers to make good the City,
While I with those that haue the spirit, will haste
To helpe Cominas.
Lar. Worthy Sir, thou bleed'st,
Thy exercife hath him too violent,
For a fecond course of Fight.
Mar. Sir, praise me not:
My worke hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well:
The blood I drop, is rather Physicall
Then dangerous to me: To Auffidius thus, I will appear.
Lar. Now the faire Goddesse Fortune, (and fight.
Fall deeper in love with thee, and her great charmes
Misguide thy Oppossers swords, Bold Gentleman:
Priory think thy Page.
Mar. Thy Friend no leefe,
Then thofe the placest highest: So farewell.
Lar. Thou worthieff Martius,
Go found thy Trumpet in the Market place,
Call thither all the Officers a'th Towne,
Where they shall know our minde. Away.

Enter Cominas as it were in retire with soldiers.
Com. Breath you my friends, well fought, we are come
Like Romans, neither foolish in our fands,
Nor Cowardly in retire: Beleeue me Sirs,
We shall be charg'd againe. Whiles we hate strooke
By Inirmes and conveying guftes, we haue heard
The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods,
Lead their successe, as we with our owne,
That both our powers, with smiling Fronnis encountring,
May give you thankfull Sacrifice. Thy Newes?
Enter a Messinger.
Meff. The Citizens of Coriulf have yefled,
And gien to Lartius and to Martius Battala:

I. iv. 3—I. vi. 11

621
The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

I saw our party to their Trenches driven,
And then I came away,
Comm. Though thou speakest truth,
Me thinks thou speakest not well. How long is't since?
Met. About an hour, my Lord.
Comm. 'Tis no mile; briefly we heard their drummer.
How could't thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy Neighbors so late?
Met. Spies of the Valles
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheele
Three or four miles about, else had I sist
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Martius.

Comm. Whole wonder!
That do's appear as he were Fled? O, Gods,
He has the flame of Martius, and I have
Before time seek him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?
Comm. The Shepherd knows not Thunder from a Taber,
More then I know the sound of Martius Tongue
From every hearer over man.

Martius. Come I too late?
Comm. I, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your owne.

Mar. Oh! let me clipp ye
In Armes as sound, as when I wodd in heart;
As merry, as when our Nuttiall day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.
Comm. The flower of our Warriors, how is't with Titus Lartius?
Mar. As with a man buffeted about Decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile,
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other;
Holding Cordes in the name of Rome,
Even like a swelling Grey-hound in the Leash,
To let him flie at will.
Comm. Where is that Slave
Which told me they had beat you to your Trenches?
Where is her Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone,
He did informe the truth; but for our Gentlemen,
The common file, (a plague Tribunes for them)
The Mouse ne'er found the Cat, as they did budge
From Rattles to men when they.

Comm. But how prescind you?
Mar. Will the time ferce to tell, I do not think;
Where is the enemy? Are you Lords a'th Field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?
Comm. Martius, we have at disadvantage fought,
And did try to win our purpose.
Mar. How lies their Battle? Know you on't ride
They have plac'd their men of truf?
Comm. As I gudge Martius,
Their Bands in Vaward are the Antients
Of their best truf: O're them Ausfilius,
Their very heart of Hope.
Men. I do beleeeh you,
By all the Tribunes wherewith we hate fought,
By all the Blood we hate that together,
By all the Vawes we bare made:
To endure Friends, that you directly set me
Against Ausfilius, and his Auxilors,
And that you not delay the present; but
Filling the air with Swords abroad, and Darts,
We prove this very hour.
Comm. Though I could wish,

You were conducted to a gentle Bath,
And Bains applied to you, yet dare I never
Deny your asking, take your choice of thefe
That bea can ayde your action.
Mar. Those are they
That most are willing if any such be here,
(As it was fume to doubt, that love this painting
Wherein you fee me fient f, if any feare
Lefen his person, then an ill report:
If any think, brave death out-weighes bad life,
And that his Countries deere then himselfe,
Let him alone: Or to many fo minded,
Wau to express his disposition,
And follow Martius.
They all Just and name their swords, take him up in their
Armes, and cafl up their Caps.

Oh me alone, make you a sword of me:
If these thewes be not outward, which of you
But isoure Foles? None of you, but:
(Thoukand to thanks) all: I felecut from all:
The retz shall bear the businesse in some other fight
(As care will be obey'd) pleae your March,
And foure flall quickly doe out my Command,
Which men are biff inclin'd.
Comm. March on my Fellowes:
Make good this offentation, and you flall
Dunde in all, with vs.

Excett
Titus Lartius, having fit a guard upon Corirolla, going with Drum and Trumpets toward Comumus, and Caius Marlius, enters with a Lieutenant, other Soulbun, and a Scout.

Lort. So, let the Ports be guarded; keep your Duties
As I have let them downe. If I doe fende, dilpach
Those Centuries to our ayd, the left will ferve
For a short holding, if we loofe the Field,
We cannot keep the Towne.

Lort. Fender not our care Sir.
Lort. Hence and fhut your gates vs'on:
Our Guards come, to the Roman Compe conduct vs. Exit
Alarum, as on Battallie.

Enter Martius and Ausfilius at further distant.
Mar. Ile fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worfe then a promise-breaker.
Ouffid. We hate alike:
Not Affrifice owes a Serpent I abhorre
More then thy Fame and Emu. Fix thy foot.
Mar. Let the fift fudge flie the others Slave,
And the Gods doome him after.
Ouff. If I flie Martius, hollow me like a Hare.
Mar. Within thfe three hours Tullus
Alone I fought in your Corirolla wallet,
And made what worke I pleas'd: I'm not my blood,
Wherein thou feell me maskt, for thy Reueenge
Wrench up the power to the highest.
Ouff. Were thau the Bulter,
That was the whip of thy brag'd Progyny,
Thou shoul'd I not feape me here.
Here they fight, and certaine Voles come in the fyle of Ouffis Martius fights to be driven in breathes.
Obficious and not valiant, you have Shamed me
In your condemned Seconds.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Flourish. Actum. A Retreat is founded. Enter at one Door Cominius, with the Remains: At another Door Martius, with his Arms in a Scarfe.

Com. If I should think thee 'o ye this thy dayes Worke, Thou 'st not beleeue thy deeds: But let report it, Where Senators shall mingle tears with smiles, Where great Patricks shall attend, and hymn, I 'll end admire: where Ladies shall be frighted, And gladly quak'd, hear more: where the dull Tribunates, That with the fuisse Plebeans, hate thine Honors, Shall say against their hearts, We thanke the Gods Our Rome hath such a Soullidier. Yee can't shew to a Marsell of this Feast, Haung fully don'd before.

Enter Titus with his Power, from the Pursuit.

Titus Lartus. Oh Generall: Here is the Steed, wee the Caparison: Hadst thou beheld—

Martius. Pray not, nor more: My mother, who 's a Charity to extoll her Blood, When she do't praise me, grieues me: I have done as you have done, that's what I can, Indue'd as you have beene, that's for my Country: He that's but effectcd his good will, Hath overtaken mine Aet.

Com. You shall not be the Grave of your desiring, Rome must know the value of her owne: There a Conceleame worke: then a Thief, No leaf but a Tradescant, To hide your doings, and to silence that, Which to the pure, and top of prayses vouch'd, Would beeme but modell: therefore I beseech you, In signe of what you are, not to reward What you have done, before our Arme heare me.

Martius. I have some Wounds upon me, and they smart To hear themselves remembred.

Com. Should they not? Well might they fele 'gainst Ingratitude, And them selves with death: of all the Horites, Whereof we have tane good, and good store of all, The Treasure in this field achieved, and Citi, Weender you the Tent, to be tane the forth, Before the common distribution, At your onely choyse.

Martius. I thank you Generall: But cannot make my heart content to take A Babe, to pay my Sword: I doe refuse it, And stand upon my common part with these, That have beheld the doing.

A long flourish. They all cry, Martius, Martius, cull up their Caps and Lawcoes: Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Mart. Myself these fame Instruments, which you prophane, Neuer found more: when Drums and Trumpets shall 1st their proue to shew, let Countes and Cities be Made all of false-face'd soothing: When Steele grows soft, as the Parasites Silke, Let him be made an Overture for th' Waters: No more I say, for that I have not walt'd

My Note that bled, or Soy'd some debile Wretch, Which without note, here's many else have done, You flout me forth in acclamations hyperbolical, As if I could my little should be directed In prayses, fave'llt with Lyes.

Com. Too modest are you: More cruel to your good report, than grateful To vs, that gave you truly: by your patience, If 'ganst your felle you be incend'd, we 'll put you (Like one that means his proper harme) in Manacles, Then reason safely with you: Therefore be it knowne, As to vs, to all the World, That Cass Martuin Weares this Wares Garland: in token of the which, My Noble Steed, knowne to the Campes, I give him, With all his trin belonging: and from this time, For what he did before Coriades, call him, With all that applause and Clarions of the Hoist,

Omonts, Marcus Cassius Corioli. Martius. I will goe walt: And when my Pace is faire, you shall perceive Whether I blouf, or no: howber, I thank you, I meane to finde your Steed, and at all times To vnder-creft your good Addition, To th'fairence of my power.

Com. So, to our Tent: Where ere we do repose vs, we will write To Rome of our forcelfe: you Titus Lartus Mulf to Coriades backe, send vs to Rome The beft, with whom we may articulate, For their owne good, and ours,

Lartius. I shall, my Lord,

Marti. The Gods begin to mocke me: I that now refus'd most Princely gifts, Am bound to begge of my Lord Generall,

Com. Tak't, 'tis yours: what is't?

Martius. I sometimell lay here in Coriades, At a poore mans houfe: he vs'd me kindly, He cry'd to me: I saw him Prisoner: But then Affidius was within my view, And Wrath o're-whdm'd my pittie: I request you To give my poore Halt freedome.

Com. Oh well begg'd: Were he the Batcher of my Sonne, he should Be free, as is the Winde: deliuer him, Titus, Lartius, Martius, his Name: Martius. By hiper forget: I am wene, ye, my memorie is tyr'd: Haue we no Wine here?

Com. Go we to our Tent: The bloud upon your Vifage dryes, 'tis time It should be lookt too: come.

A flourish. Cornets. Enter Titus Assidius blondie, with two or three Soullidiers.

Affi. The Towne is tane, Soold. 'Twill be deliuer'd backe on good Condition. Assif. Condition? I would I were a Roman, for I cannot, Being a Walter, he flattereth that good Condition? What good Condition can a Treasur finde I'll part that is at mercy? five times, Martius, I haue fought with thee; so often haft thou beat me; And 'd'lt do for, I think, should we encounter
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius & Brutus.

Men. The Agurer tells me, we shall have Newes to night.

Brut. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Martius.

Sicin. Nature teaches Beasts to know their Friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolfe love?

Brut. The Lambe.

Men. I, to deceive him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martius.

Brut. He's a Lambe indeed, that baes like a Beare.

Men. He's a Beare indeed, that baes like a Lambe. You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Brut. Well ask.

Men. What in enormity is Martius poore in, that you two have not in abundance?

Brut. He's poore in one no fault, but for'd withall.

Sicin. Especially in Pride.

Brut. And taking all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know, how you are cenured here in the City, I mean of vs with right hand file, do you?

Brut. Why ho were we cenured?

Men. Because you talke of Pride now, will you not be angry.

Brut. Well, well, for well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter: for a very little sheele of Occasion, will rob you of a great deal of Patience; Give your dispositions the reines, and bee angry at your pleasures.(at the leaf) if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being to : you blame Martius for being proud.

Brut. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can doe, very little alone, for your hopes are many, or else your actions would growe wonderfull sly; your abilities are to intent-like as to doing much alone. You talk of Pride; Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your neckes, and make but an Interior survey of your good felwes. Oh that you could.

Brut. What then sir?

Men. Why then you should discover a brace of vnhonest, proud, violent, ruffe Maygers (Alia Foles) as any in Rome.

Sicin. Menestens, you are knowne well enough too.

Men. I am knowne to be a humorous Aristocrat, and one that loves a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of slyling Tiber in't: Said, to be something imperfecket in taunting the first complaint, bally and Tinner-like upon, to triall motion; One, that counteries more with the Buttocke of the night, then with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such Weales men as you are (I cannot call you Literaters,) if the drinks you give me, touch my Pa- lat acutely, I make a crooked face at't, I can say, your Worshippes have deliver'd the matter well, when I finde the Affe in compound, with the Major part of your syllables. And though I must be content to beare with those, that say you are reuerend grace men, yet they lie deadly, that tell you have good faces, if you see this in the Map of my Microcose, follows it that I am knowne well en- enough too? What harme can your beonde Conspicuities gleane out of this Charactter, if I be knowne well en- enough too.

Brut. Come for come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither mee, your trines, nor any thing: you are ambitious, for poore knakes cappes and legges: you were out a good wholesome Forenoon, in hearing a saufe betweene an Orendge wife, and a Forsett- feller, and then returne the Counterest of three-pence to a second day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter betweene party and party, if you chance to bee pinch'd out of the Collarke, you make it to the Mump- ners, et yp the bloodie Flagge against all Patience, and in roaring for a Chamberpot, dismiss the Counterest bleeding, the more intangled by your hearing: All the peace you make in their Cadue, is calling both the parties Knaves. You are a payre of strange ones.

Brut. Come, come, you are well vnderstood to bee a perfecte gyber for the Table, then a necessary Benches in the Capitell.

Men. Our very Priests must become Mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous Subjectes as you are, when you speake best into the purpose. It is not woorth the wagging of your Beards, and your Beards defere not to the honourable a grace, as to fluffe a Botchers Cushion, or to be incomb'd in an Affet Pachers-fiddle; you must bee saying, Martius is proud: who in a cheap eedmation, is worth all your predecessors, since Duncan, though per- adventurere some of the best of 'em were hereditarie hang- men. Godden to your Worshippes, more of your concus- sation would infect my Braine, being the Heerdmen of the Beasty Plebeans. I will be bold to take my leave of you.

Brut. and Sicin.

Aside. Enter.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Enter Volumnio, Vrgil, and Valeria.

How now (my as faire as Noble) ladies, and the Moonen were shee Earthly, no Noble; whither doe you follow your Eyes to sall

Volumn. Honorable Meminio, my Boy Martino approaches; for the love of yous let's goe.

Memen. Has Martino comming home?

Volumn. I worthy Memenio, and with most prosperous approbation.

Memen. Take my Cappe Jupiter, and I thanke thee; ho! Martino comming home?

2.Ladies. Nay, his true.

Volumn. Look, here's a Letter from him, the State hath another, his wife another, and (I thinke) there's one at home for you.

Memen. I will make my very house reel to night: A Letter for me?

Virgil. Yes certainly, there's a Letter for you, I saw't.

Memen. A Letter for me? it gives me an Estate of seuen yeeres healtch; in which case, I will make a Lippe at the Physicians: he is most lote-signe Prescriptions in Galen, but is Empericke-difquone, and to this Preferrtume, of no better report then a Horse-drench. Is he not wounded?

Volumn. He was went to come home wounded?

Virgil. Oh no, no, no,

Volumn. Oh, he is wounded! I thank the Gods for't.

Memen. So doe I too, if it be not too much: brings a Victorie in his Pocket the wounds become him.

Virgil. Oh's Browes. Memenio, hee comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Memen. He is his disciple's, Androgynously?

Volumn. Tuttus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Androgynus got off.

Memen. And 'tis time for him too, Ile warrant him that: and he had flay'd by him. I would not have been't fiddious'd, for all the Cheifs in Carioles, and the Gold that in'them. Is the Senate possif of this?

Volumn. Good Ladies let's goe. Yes, yes, yes: The Senare ha's Lesters from the Gruerall, wherein hee gives my Sonne the whole Name of the Warre: he hath in this action out-done his former deeds boldly.

Vader. In troth, there's wondrous words spoke of him.

Memen. Wondrous: I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Virgil. The Gods grant them true.

Volumn. True? now war.

Memen. True? He be swaree they are true: where is hee wounded, God save your good Worshipes? Martino is comming home; hee's more cause to be proud: where is he wounded?

Volumn. Ith Shoulder, and ith's left Arme: there will be large Cicatrice to shew the People, when hee shall stand for his place: he receiued in the repulse of Tarquin feuen hurts in Body.

Memen. One ith Neck, and two ith Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volumn. Hee had, before this last Expedition, twentie five Wounds upon him.

Memen. Now it's twentie feuen: every gash was an Enemies Graue. Hearke, the Trumpets.

A sound, and flourish.

Volumn. These are the Vithers of Martino: Before him, hee carres Noise;

And behind him, hee leaves Teares:

Death, that darke Spirit; in's neere Arme doth yee,
Which being aduan'd, declines, and then then dyes,

A Senec. Trumpets sound.

Enter Cominio the General, and Titus Latinus; betweene them Coriolus, crowned with an Oaken Garland, with Captains and Senators, and a Harpind.

Herald. Know Rome, that all sole Martino did fight
Within Corioles Gates; where he hath wonne,

With Fame, a Name to Martino Cause:

Thee in honor follows Martino Caus Coriolus.

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolan,

Sound, Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Coriol. No more of this, it does offend my heartspay now no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your Mother.

Coriol. Ah! you have, I know petition'd all the Gods for your prosperite.

Kneels.

Volumn. Nay, my good Souldier, vp:
My gentle Martino, worthy Caus,
And by deed-achieuing Honor newly nam'd,
What is it (Coriolan) must I call thee?

But oh, why Wife.

Coriol. My gracious silence, hayle:
Wouldst thou have haughtly, had I come Coffin'd home,
That weep't to fee me triumph? Ah my deare,
Such eyes the Widows in Carioles were,
And Mothers that lacke Sonses.

Memen. Now the Gods Crowne thee.

Com. And I dje ye?ye? Oh my sweet Lady, pardon,

Volumn. I know not where to turne.

Oh welcome homeand welcome Generall,
And y're welcome all.

Memen. A hundred thousand Welcomes:
I could weep, and I could laugh,
I am light, and heaute; welcome:
A Cursive begin at very roon on's heart,
That is not glad to fee thee.

You are three, that Rome should doe on:
Yet by the faith of men, we hauce
Some old Crab-trees here at home,
That will not be grafted to your Railish,
Yet welcome Warriors:
WEE call a Nettle, but a Nettle;
And the faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Euer right.

Cor. Memenio, euer, euer.

Herald. Give way there, and goe on.

Cor. Your Hand, and yours?

Ere in our owne houfe I doe shade my Head,
The good Patricians must be vizted,
From whom I have receiued not onely greeings,
But with them,change of Honors.

Volumn. I haue list,
To fee inherited my very Vithes,
And the Buildings of my Fancie:
Onely there's one thing wanting,
Which (I doubt not) but our Rome
Will call upon thee.

Cor. Know,good Mother,
I had rather be their fervant in my way,
Then Iway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitall.

Flourish, Cortset; Exeunt in State, as before.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Enter Brutus and Scenecion.

Brut. All tongues speake of him, and the bleared sights Are spectacled to fee him. Yon prating Nure
Into a rapture let her Baby cre, When the chaps him: the Kitchin Mallic pinnes Her richest Locksam'bout her recchie necks, Clambrong the Walls to eye him:
Stalls,Butkes, Windows, are smother'd vp,
Leades fill'd, and Ridges hor'd With variable Complexions; all agreeing In earneffide to fee him: feld-showne Flamins
Doe prede among the popular Thronges, and pufe To wone a vulgar flatlon: our wyld Dames
Commit the Warre of White and Damaske
In their nicely gawded Cheekes,coth wanlon fpoyle Of Phobus burning Kifles: such a poother, As if that whatsoever God, who leades him,
Were flyly crept into his humane powers, And gave him graciefull pature.
Scen. On the fudden, I warrant him Confull.
Brutus. Then our Office may, during his power, goe sleepe.
Scen. He cannot temp'rateley transport his Honors,
From where he should begin and end, but will Lose thofe he hath wonne.

Brut. In that there's comfort.
Scen. Doubt not, The Commons, for whom we Stand, but they Upon their ancient mallice, will forget With the leaft caule, thefe his new Honors,
Which that he will give them, make 1 as little question, As he is provd to do't.

Brutus. I heard him sweare,
Were he to Stand for Confull, never would he Appeare I'th' Market place, nor on him put The Naples Vexture of Humilitie,
Nor flewing(as the manner is) his Wounds
Toh People, begge their flinking Breaths.
Scen. 'Tis right.

Brutus. It was his word:
Oh he would miffe it, rather then carry it,
But by the suite of the Gentry to him,
And the delfire of the Nobles.

Scen. I wil not, without then have him hold that purpoe, and to put it in execution.

Brutus. 'Tis most like he will.
Scen. It shal be to him then, as our good wills; a sure deftruction.

Brutus. So it maff fall out
To harme our Authorities, for an end.
We must urge the People, in what hatred He will haft held them; that to's power he would Have made them Mules, stained their Pleaders,
And disproportned their Freedomes; holding them, In humane Action, and Capacitie,
Of no more Soulne,not finenesse for the World,
Then Cammels in their Warre, who have their Pround Only for bearing Burthen, and loose blows For finitng under them.

Scen. This (as you saw) I suggested,
At some time, when his foraging Inclence Shall teach the People,which time shall not want,
If he be put upon; and that's as easie,
As to set Dogges on Sleepe, will be his fire
To kindle their dry Subble: and their Blaze Shall dacken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Brutus. What's the matter?
Mes. You are sent for to the Capitoll:
'Tis thought, that Marcus shall be Confull;
I have seene the dumbe men throng to see him,
And the blind to hear him speake:
Matrons flong Clotes, Ladies and Maids their Scarfe, and Handkercheifs,
Vpon him as he pass'd: the Nobles bended
As to Ines Statute, and the Commons made
A Shower, and Thunder,with their Caps, and Shotter,
I never saw the like.

Brutus. Let's to the Capitoll,
And carry with vs Eares and Eyes for'th time,
But Hearts for the event.
Scen. Hau with you,

Exeunt.

Enter two Officers, to lay Confusion, as it were, in the Capitoll.

1. Off. Come,come, they are almost here: how many stand for Confuls hips?
2. Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of evey one,
Coriolanus will carrie it.
1. Off. That's a brave fellow: but he's vengeance proud, and louses the common people.
2. Off. Faith, there hath bene many great men that have flower'd the people: who are leaved them; and there may be that they have leaued, they know not wherefore: so that if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neyther to care whether they love, or hate him, manifesteth the true knowledge he ha's in their disposition, and out of his Nobile carriage lets them plainly seek.
1. Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he were indifferently, 'twas doing them nether good, nor harme: but he seeks their hate with greater devotion, then they can render it him; and leaves nothing vndone, that may fully discover him their opposite. Now to seeme to affect the mallice and dislike of the People, is as bad, as that which he disliked, to flatter them for their love.
2. Off. Hee hath deferved worthiely of his Country, and his affent is not by such easie degrees as thole, who having bene supple and courteous to the People, Bourned, without any further deed, to have them at all into their affirmation, and report: but hee hath so plante his Honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their Hearts, that for their Tongues to be silent, and not confesse so much, were a kind of ingratefull Intemper to report otherwise, were a Mallice, that giving it selfe the Lye, would plucke reprofe and rebuke from every Eare that heard it.
1. Off. No more of him, he's a worthy man; make way, they are coming.

A Scenem Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Li'lors before them: Coriolanus, Silentiae, Cominius the Conful; Scenecion and Brutus take their places by themselves: Coriolanus flound.

Menen. Hauing determin'd of the Volces,
And to send for Titus Lartius: it remains,
As the maine Point of this our after-meeting,

II. i. 224—II. ii. 44

636
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

To graff his Noble seruice, that hath
That bond for his Country, Therefore prays, you
Most reuerend and grave Elders, to defile
The present Confuill, and left Generalis,
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy Wrode, perform'd
By Martius and Coriolanus: whom
We meet here, both to thanke, and to remember,
With Honors like himselfe.

1. Sen. Speake, good Commons. I came nothing out for length, and make vs thinke Rather our blates desirous for requital,
Then we to stretch it out. Matters is't People, We do requite your kinder care's: and after
Your louing motion toward the common Body,
To yield what paies here.

Sen. We are commented upon a pleasing Theatre, and Have house incommensurable to honor and advance the theme of our Assembly.

Brutus. With which the rather we shall be blest to do, if
He remember a kinder value of the People, then he hath hereto priz'd them at.

Menas. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been stilte: Please you to heare Commonwealth speake.

Brutus. Most willingly: but yet my caution was more pertinent then the retribution you give it.

Menas. He loves your People, but eye him not to be their Bed-fellow: Worthy Commons speake.

Coriolanus rizes, and offers to goe out.

 Nay, keepe your place.

Sen. Sit Coriolanus: never shame to heare
What you have Nobly done.

Coriol. Your Honors pardon: I had rather base my Wounds in he'd againe,
Then here to speake how I got them.

Brutus. But, hope my words dis-commend you not?

Coriol. No Sir: yet off,
When blowes have made me flay'd, I fled from words.
You fowld not, therefore hurt not: but your People,
I loose them as they weigh.

Menas. Pray now fit downe.

Coriol. I had rather have one scratch my Head in the Sun,
When the Atroce were strucken in signe fit.

To hear my Nothing moulded. Exit Coriolanus

Menas. Masters of the People,
Your multiplying Spawne, how can be flatter?
That's thousand to one good one, when you now fee.
He had rather venture all his Limbes for Honor,
Then on ones Eares to heare it. Proceed Commonwealth.

Com. 1 shall haue your vociest yeeds of Coriolanus:
Should not be vever alack? it is hel'd,
That Valour is the chiefet Vertue,
And most dignifies the bauer: if it be,
The man I speake of, cannot in the World
Be singily counter-poy'd. At sixtene yeares,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the marble of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all prayse I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian Shinn he drove
The brised Limpe before him: he beleefid
An or-es-presed Roman, and that Coriolus view'd
Slew three Opposers: Tarquin fell he met,
And shriueke on his Knee: in that dayes feares,
When he might al the Woman in the Scene,
He prou'd belman I'this Field, and for his meed
Was Brow-bound with the Oakes. His Papil age

Man-entered thus, he waked like a Sea,
And in the brust of a scene Battle, since,
He lurched all Swords of the Garland: for that left,
Before, and in Coriolas, let me say
I cannot speake him home: he flaps the flyer,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Turne terror into sport: as Weeds before
A Veil'd under payer, to men obay'd,
And fell below this Stem: he Sword, Deaths stompe,
Where it did marke, it couke from face to foot:
He was a thing of Blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying Guiss: alone he entred
The mortall Gate of the Citty, which he painted
With flame's effusion: aydaete came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement shriueke
Coriolas like a Planet: now all this,
When by and by the dinne of Warrs gan pierce
His readie sense: then straight his doubled spinet
Requicken'd, what in feth was frighte, and
To the Battle came he, where he did
Runne recking on'the flues of men as if were
A perpetall spoyler: and till we call'd
Both Field and Citty ours, he never stood
To eafe his Breath with panting.

Menas. Worthy man.

Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the Honors which we deuife him.

Com. Our peoples he kicks at,
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common Muck of the World: he coues leffe
Then Miferie is felle would giue, rewards his deeds
With doing them, and it conten'ts
To prey'd the time, to end it.

Menas. He's right Noble, let him be call'd ffor.
Sen. Call for Coriolanus.

Off. He dont appeare.

Enter Coriolanus.

Menas. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee
Conful.

Carta. I doe owe them all, and my life, and services.

Menas. It then remaunt's, that you doe speake to the People.

Carta. I doe beseech you,
Let me releape that cuffame: for I cannot
Put on the Gowne, and naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds fake, to give their suffrage:
Please you that I may paife this doing.

Sen. Sir, the people must hae their Voyces,
Neither will theybrate one lot of Ceremony.

Sen. Put them not touc'ke:
Pray you goe fit you to the Curllome,
And take to your, as your Preeedecessors have,
Your Honor with your forme.

Carta. It is a part that I shal blash in, aying,
And might well be taken from the People.

Brutus. Mark ye that.

Carta. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus Shew them th': making Sake, which I should hide,
As if I had receiued this for the byre
Of their breath only:

Menas. Doest not stand upon's?
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpose to them, and to our Noble Conful
With we all Joy, and Honor.

Sen. To
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Senec. To Coriolanus come all joy and Honor.

Enter Euriail, Cornelia. Then Exequel, Menen Sticanus and Brutus.

Brut. You see how he intends to win the people.

Senec. May he perceive his intent; he will require them As if he did containe what he requested, Should be in them to giue.

Brut. Come, we'll informe them

Of our proceedings here on th'Market place,

I know they do attend vs.

Enter Juno or eight Citizens.

1 Cit. Once if he do require our voyces, wee ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may Sir if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in our felues to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: For, if he shew vs his vounds, and tell vs his deeds; we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speake for them: So if he tell vs his Noble deeds, we must also tell him our Noble acception of them. Ingratitude is nothrus, and for the multitude to be ingratefull, were to make a Moniter of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring our felues to be monstrous members.

4 Cit. And to make vs no better thought of a little helpe will let us: for once we flood vp about the Corne, he himselfe flucke not to call vs the madly headed Multitudes.

5 Cit. We have beene call'd fo many, not that our heads are some browne, some blacke, some Abram, some bald; but that our wis is so duerly Coulu'd; and truly I think, if all our witters were to issue out of one Scull, they would flye East, West, North, South, and their con- tent of our direct way, should be at once to all the points at Campsafe.

6 Cit. Think ye so? Which way do you judge my wit would flye.

7 Cit. Nay your wit will not so foam out as another mans will, 'tis strongly wadg'd up in a blocke-head: but if it were at liberty, 'twould turne Southward.

8 Cit. Why that way?

9 Cit. To look into it as a Finger, where being of the parts melted away with rotten Dewes, the tooth hyd returns for Confidence sake, to helpe to get thee a Wife.

10 Cit. You are neuer without your trickes, you may, you may.

11 Cit. Are you no resolved to giue your voyces? But that's no matter, the greater part caries it, I say. If he would incline to the people, there was neuer a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus in a Garre of Humilitie, with Mercenary.

Here he comes, and in the Gowne of humilitie, made his behovell: we are not to fly altogether, but to come by him where he stands: by ones, by twos, & by three.

He's to make his requells by particulars, whereon every one of vs has a fagge I honour, in gining him our own voi- ces with our owne tongues therefore follow me, and he direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

Men. Oh Sir, you are not right-hauing you not knowne

The worthieft men have done?

Corio. What must I lay, I pray Sir?

Plague upon't, I cannot bring my tongue to such a pace. Looke Sir, my wounds, I go them in my Countries Venice, when I some certaene of your Brethren would, and care.

From the noise of our owne Drummes.

Men. Oh me the Gods, you must not speak of that,

You must defire them to thinke upon you.

Corio. Thynke upon me? Hang'em, I could make them forget me, like the Verrus

Which our Dutines lofe by em.

Men. You'll marke all,

He leave you? I pray you speake to em, I pray you

In wholsome manner.

Enter three of the Citizens.

Corio. Bid them wash their Faces,

And keepe their teeth cleane: So here comes a brace, You know the caufe (Sir) of my flanding here.

3 Cit. We do Sir, tell vs what hath brought you'to.

Corio. Mine owne defect.

2 Cit. Your owne defect.

Corio. But mine owne desire.

3 Cit. How not your owne desire?

Corio. No Sir, I was neuer my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

3 Cit. You must think if we giue you any thing, we hope to gaine by you.

Corio. We'll then prays your price shall.

1 Cit. The price is, to sake it kindly.

Corio. Kindly Sir, I prays me not: I have wounds to shew you, which shall be lett yours in private: your good voice Sir, what pay you?

2 Cit. You shall have a worthy Sir.

Corio. A match Sir, there is in all two worthie voyces begg'd: I have your Almes, Adieu.

3 Cit. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. And woot to give against: but this is no matter.

Enter a water Citizens.

Corio. Prays you now, if it may stand with the tone of your voices, that I may see Conful, I have heare the Commonarie Gowne.

1. You have deferved Nobly of your Country, and you have not deferved Nobly.

Corio. Your Aegigma.

2. You have bin a scourge to her enemies, you have bin a Rod to her Friends, you have not indeed loved the Common people.

Corio. You should account mee the more Vertuous, that I have not bin common in my Love, I wil stirr my wife Brother the people to esume a better estima- tion of them, it's a condition they account gentle. & since the wifedome of their choice, is rather to have my Hat, then my Heart, I will preside the interest and, and be of them most courteously, that is say, I will counter- forest the bewitchings of some popular man, and giue it boundsfull to the defires: Therefore before you, I may be Conful:

2. Wee hope to find you our friend: and therefore giue you our voices heartily.

1. You have receu'd many, wounds for your Coun- try.

Corio. I will not Scale your knowledge with shewing them, I will make much of your voyces, and trouble you no farther.

Bath. The Gods giue you joy Sir heartily.

Corio. Moll sweet Voyces.

Better it is to dy, better to stene,

Then eraze the higher, which first we do defende.

Why in this Woolfust tongue should I stand here,

To begge of Hob and Dick, that does appeare Their
Their needleless Vouches; Custome calls me too,
What Custome wills in all things, should we do not?
The Dust on antique Time would lye vanwep,
And mountainous Error be too highly heape,
For Truth to o're-peeere. Rather then foot it fo,
Let the high Office and the Honor go
To one that would doe thus. I am halfe through,
The one part suffered, the other will I doe.
Enter three Citizens more.
Here come more Voyces.
Your Voyces? for your Voyces I have sought,
Watch for your Voyces: for your Voyces, bear
Of Wounds, two dozen ode: Battailes three six
I have seen, and heard of: for your Voyces,
Hau one d Mund things, some leffe, some more:
Your Voyces? Indeed I would be Confull.

1. Cit. Hee ha's done Nobly, and cannot goo without any honours man Voyces.
2. Cit. Therefore let him be Confull: the Gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the People.
All, Amen, Amen. God faue thee, Noble Confull,
Cora. Worthy Voyces.

Enter Meneius, with Brutus and Semius.

Mene. You have flood your Limitation:
And the Tribunes endue you with the Peoples Voyce,
Remains, that in th' Official Markes invested,
You anon doe meet the Senates.
Cora. Is this done?

Seiun. The Custome of Requeall you haue discharged:
The People doe admit you, and are un谟ion'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.
Cora. Where? at the Senate-house?
Seiun. There, Coria.
Cora. May I change these Garments?
Seiun. You may-Sir.
Cora. That Ile straight doe: and knowing my selfe again,
Repayce toth' Senate-house.
Mene. Ile keepes you company, Will you along?
Brut. We stay here for the People.
Seiun. Fare you well.

Exeunt Coria, and Mene.
He ha's it now: and by his Looks, me thinkes,
Tis warme at's heart.
Brut. With a proud beset he wore his humble Weeds:
Will you dissimule the People?

Enter the Plebeians.

Seiun. How now, my Matters, haue you chose this man?
1. Cit. He ha's our Voyces, Sir.
Brut. We pray the Gods, he may defteere your loues,
2. Cit. Amen, Sir; to my poore unworthy notice,
He mock'd vs, when he begg'd our Voyces.
3. Cit. Certainly, he swowet vs downe-right,
4. Cit. No, thet his kind of speech, he did not mock vs.
5. Cit. Not one amongt vs, faue your selfe, but fayes
He vs'd formellly: he should haue shew'd vs
His Markes of Merit, Wounds receiv'd for his Country.
Seiun. Why so he did, I am sure.
6. Cit. No, no man saw'em.
7. Cit. Hee saide hee had Wounds,
Which he could shew in private:
And with his Hat, thus waving it in fcore,
I would be Confull, fayes he: aged Custome,
But by your Voyces, will not so permit me.
Your Voyces therefore: when we granteed that,
Here was, I thank ye for your Voyces, thank ye.

Your most sweet Voyces now you haue left your Voyces,
I have noe further with you. Was not this mockerie?
Seiun. Why eyther were you ignorant to see?
Or seeing it, of such Childifh friendinelle,
To yeld your Voyces?
Brut. Could you not haue tolde him,
As you were illust in: When he had no Power,
But was a pere to the State,
He was your Enemie, ever spake against
Your Libertie, and the Charters that you bear
Th' body of the Weale: and now arriving
A place of Potency, and sway o'th' State,
If he should fill instanliely remaine
Fast foes though Plebeian, your Voyces might Be Curtes to your fethes. You should haue said,
That as his worthy deeds did clayne no leffe
Then what he flood for: for his gracious nature
Would shoke upon you, for your Voyces,
And transfix his Mallice towards you, into Lour,
Standing your friendly Lord,
Seiun. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-adoys'd, had toucht his Spirit,
And try'd his Inclinations from him pluckt
Eyther his gracious Promise, which you might
As cause had call'd you vp, haue hold him to;
Or else it would have giff'd his first fasure,
Which easily endures not Article,
Tying him to ought, so purting him to Rage,
You should haue to the advantage of his Choller,
And paid him vnexcepted,
Brut. Did you perceive,
He did foillicate you in free Contemp.
When he did need your Loues: and doe you thinke,
That his Contemp shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to cruith Why, had your Bodies
No Heart among you? Or had you Tongues, to cry
Against the Reftorfhip of Judgement?
Seiun. Have you ere now, deny'd the asker:
And now againe, of him that did not ask, but mock;
Bellow your fa'd. for Tongues?
3. Cit. Hee's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.
4. Cit. And will deny him?
He haue five hundred Voyces of that sound.
1. Cit. I twice five hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.
Brut. Get you hence, if you, and tell those friends,
They haue chose a Confull, that will from them take
Their Liberties, make them of no more Voyce
Then Dogges, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to doe so.
Seiun. Let them affembles: and on a safer Judgement,
All teake your ignorant elections! Enforce his Pride,
And his old Hate vnto you: besides, forget not
With what Contemp he wore the humble Weeds,
How in his Stic he scorn'd your but your Loues,
Thinking upon his Services, sucke from you
That apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibly, yvngrefully, he did fashion
After the inutterate Hate he bearst you.
Brut. Lay a fault to your Tribunes,
That we laboure (no impediment betweene)
But that you must cast your Election on him.
Seiun. Say you chose him, more after our commandment,
Then as guided by your owne true affections, and that
Your Minds pre-occupy'd with what you rather muft do,
Then what you shou'd, made you against the grappe
To Voyce him Confull. Lay the faile on vs.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Brut. I spare vs not: Say, we read Lectures to you;
How youngly he began to serve his Country,
How long continued, and what flocks he springes of,
The Noble Hous o' th' Maritians: from whence came
That Ancil Mortius, Ninian Daughters Sonne:
Who after great highdion here was King,
Of the same House Rubius and Quinatus were,
That our belte Water,brought by Conoids hitter,
And Nobly nam'd, so twice being Centor,
Was his great Ancestor.
Seec. One thus desceded,
That hath besides well in his perfon wrougth,
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Skaling his present bearing with his past,
That here is your fixed enemie; and reuoke
Your faldaine approbation.
Brut. Say you reed don't,
(Harpe on that fall) but by our putting on:
And presently, when you have drawne your number,
Repair to' th' Capitoll.
All. We will so: almost all repent in their election,
Except Plebeians.
Brut. Let them go on:
This Mutiny were better put in hazard,
Then payd doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refuall, both obfcur and anuver
The vantage of his anger.
Seec. Toth'Capitoll, come:
We will be there before the fireame o' th' People:
And this shall feme, as partly by their owne,
Which we have goaded on-ward,

Actus Tertius.

Camer. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Gentyl,
Comonw, Tullus Latinus, and other Senators.
Corio. Tullus Auffius then had made new head,
With them he had his Lord, and that it was which caus'd
Our wifter Computation.
Corio. So then the Voices fland but as at first,
Readie when time shall prompt them, to make roade
Vpon's againe.
Com. They are worne (Lord Confull) so,
That we shall hardly in our ages fee
Their Banners waie againe.
Corio. Say you Auffius?
Latin. On safegard he came to mee, and did curse
Against the Voices, fat they had so wildly
Yelded the Towne: he is retcyd to Antium.
Corio. Spoke he of me?
Latin. He did, my Lord.
Corio. How? what?
Latin. How often he had met you Sword to Sword:
That of all things vpon the Earth, he hated
Your perfon moff: Thas he would payne his fortunes
To hopefull refuution, so lie might Be call'd your Vanguisher.
Corio. At Antium lyes he?
Latin. At Antium.
Corio. I wish I had a caufe to fecke him there,
To oppose his hysted fully, Welcome home.
Eneter Scenius: sad firminus.
Behold, these are the Tribunes of the People,
The Tongues o' th' Common Mouth. I do despise them:
For they doe pranke them in Authoritie,
Against all Noble sufferance,
Seec. Passie no further.
Cor. Hal! what is that?
Brut. It will be dangerous to gaze on- No further.
Corio. What makes this change?
Men. The matter?
Corio. Hath he not pafs'd the Noble, and the Common?
Brut. Commit's no.
Corio. Have I had Childrens Voyces?
Seec. Tribunes gave way, he shall toth' Market place.
Brut. The People are incend'd against him.
Seec. Stop, or all will fall in breyle.
Corio. Are these your Heard?
Mulf these haue Voyces, that can yeeld them now,
And straight disfaim their towngs? what are your Offices?
You been their Meathers, why rule you not their Teeth?
Have you not fet them on?
Men. Be calm, he calme,
Corio. It is a purport'd thing, and growes by Plot,
To curbe the will of the Nobilites:
Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule,
Nor euer will be ruled.
Brut. Call'st not a Plot:
The People cry you mockt them: and of late,
When Corio was gien them greats, you repair'd,
Scandal'd the Suppliants: for the People, call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to Noblesse,
Corio. Why this was knowne before.
Brut. Not to them all.
Corio. Have you inform'd them sitheence?
Brut. How? I informe them?
Corio. You are like to doe much businesse.
Brut. Not unlike each way to better yours.
Corio. Why then should I be Conful by yond Clouds
Let me defende so all as you, and make me
Your fellow Tribune.
Seec. You shew too much of that,
For which the People thare: if you will passe
To where you are bound, you must enquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or neuer be to Noble as a Conful,
Nor yoke with him for Tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.
Com. The People are absu'd: let on this patlirizing
Becomes not Rome: nor his Coriollus
Defend'd this do dishonest'd Rob, layd falsely
This plain, Why way of his Merit.
Corio. Tell me of Corne: this was my speech,
And I will speake't againe.
Men. Not now, not now.
Seec. Not in this heat; Sir, now.
Corio. Now as I live, I will,
My Noble friends, I truste their pardons:
For the murde ranke-ten'd Mynes,
Let them regard me, as I do not flatter,
And therein behold themselves: I say againe,
In soothing them, we nourish' gaine our Senate
The Cockle of Rebellion, Influence,Sedition,
Which we our felues have plow'd for, so'w'd & flatter'd,
By mingling them with vs, the honor'd Number,
Who lack not Vertue, nor Power, but that
Which they have ower-given to Beggers.
Men. Well, no more.
Seec. No more words, we beseech you.
Corio. How? no more? A
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

As for my Country, I have died my blood,
Not fearing outward force; So tall my Lungs,
Coin words still till their decay, against th'o'th M decentral
Which we ordain, should Tetter vs, yet fought
The very way to catch them.

Bro. You speake a' th'people, as if you were a God,
To punifh; Not a man, of their Infamy,
Sen. 'Twere well we let the people know't.
Maur. What, what? His Choller?
Cor. Choller! Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By lone, 'twould be my mind.

Sen. It is a minde that shall remain a poiton
Where it is; not poifton any further.
Cor. Shall remaine?

Heres you this Triton of the Minnows? Mark ye
His absolute Shall?

Cor. 'Twas from the Cannon.

Cor. Shall? O God! but most unwise Patricians: why
You graste, but weak'lefe Senators, have you thus
Gure, here to chose an Officer,
That with his peremptory Small, being but
The horse, and noife o' th' Monfters, wants not Spirit
To fay, hett'urn your Current in a ditch,
And make your Channell his? If he have power,
Then vife your Ignorance: If none, awake
Your dangerous Latency. If you are Lear'd,
Be not as common felf; if you are not,
Let them have Cuthions by you. You are Plebeians,
If they be Senators: and they are no leffe,
When both your voices blended, the great'ft tale
Most palliates theirs. They choose their Magiftrates,
And fhould one as he, who puts his Shall,
His popular Shall, againft a grauer Bench
Then euer frownd in Greece. By loue himfelfe,
It makes the Confuls base; and my Soule,akes
To know, when two Authorities are vp,
Neither fupreme; How foone Confufion
May enter 'twixt the gap of Both, and take
The one by th'o'ther.

Sen. Well, on to'th Market place.
Cor. Who euer gueze that Confu'll, to give forth
The Comme a' th' State-house graffis, as 'twas v'd
Sometimes in Greece.

Sen. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. Thogh there the people had more absolute powre
I fay they norifht disobedience; fed, the ruin of the State.

Bro. Why hall the people giue
One that speakes thus, their voyage?
Cor. Ile giue my Reasons,
More worther then their Voyces. They know the Conre
Was not our recompence, reftoring well affd'd.
They me'd furce for't; being prifon'th' Warre,
Even when the Naual of the State was tocht'd,
They would not thed the Gates: This kinde of Service
Did not deferve Corne graffis. Being th'o' Warre,
There Mutinies and Mutinies, wherein th'yhow'd
Moff Valour spoke not for them. Th' Accution
Which they have often made, againft the Senate,
All cause vnhorde, could never be the Nation.
Of our fo frrake Donation. Well, what then?
How fhall this Bonome-multiplied, digfeft
The Senates Couttefe? Let deeds exprefle
What's like to ebe their words, We did requere it,
We are the greatefe polec, and in true fear
They giue to our demands. Thus we debate
The Nature of ourSeats, and make the Rubble

Call our Care, Peares, which will in turn Breake ope the Lockes a' th'Senate, and bring in
The Growes that lie the Eagles.

Mene. Come enough.

Bro. Enough, with our meafure.
Cor. No, take more.

What may be iomeone by, both Divine and Humane;
Scale what I end withall. This double worship,
Wiprepe part do's difhonne with care, the other
Infer without all reafon; where Gentry, Title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general Ignorance, it muft omit.

Resl Necessities, and give way the while
To visible Slightneffe. Purpose to banish:
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore becauie you,
You that will be leffe fearfull, then differes,
That love the fundamental part of State
More then you doubt the change on't: That prefere
A Noble life, before a Long, and With.

To humpe a Body with a dangerous Physicke.
That's sure of death without it: at once pluck out
The Multiplind Tongue, let them not lice
The fwer which is their poifton. Your diuinion
Mangles true judgement, and bernes the State
Of that Integrity which Should becomen't:
Not having the power to do the good it would
For that which doth confirm.

Bro. Has fail'd enough.

Sen. Ha's spoken like a Traitor, and fhall answer
As Traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch, defpifg ore-whalme thee:
What fhould the people do with thefe bald Tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience failes
To th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion:
When what's not meere, but what muft be, was Law,
Then were they choisen: in a better house,
Let what is meet, be faide it muft be meet,
And know their power t'h'duft,

Mene. Manifeft Trefon.

Sen. This a Confull? No.

Enter an Edile.

Bro. The Ediles hoe: Let him be apprehended:

Sen. Go call the people, in whose name my Selfe
Attach thee as a Traitorous Innovator
A Fou to'th publike Weale. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine anfwer.

...CorioianUs,

...CorioianUs,

...CorioianUs,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Seii. Hear me, People peace.

All. Let's here our Tribune: peace, speak, speak, speak.

Seii. You are at point to lose your Liberties:

Martiun would have all from you; Martius,

Whom late you have nam'd for Consull,

Murt. Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to quench.

Sen. To unbuid the City, and to lay all flat.

Seii. What is the City, but the People?

All. True, the People are the Citie.

Brut. By the content of all, we were established the Peoples Magistrates.

All. You so remaine.

Murt. And so are like to doe.

Con. That is the way to lay the City flat.

To bring the Roofs to the Foundation,

And burne all, which yet distinctly raunges

In heapes, and piles of Ruine.

Seii. This deferves Death.

Brut. Or let vs stand to our Authoritie,

Or let vs lose it: we doe here pronounce,

Vpon the part of People, in whole power

We were elected theirs, Martius is worthy

Of prefent Death.

Seii. Therefore lay hold of him:

Beat his bofe Rock Tarpeian, and from thence

Into destruction call him.

Brut. Abdites seize him.

All Plt. Yeeld Martius, yeeld.

Murt. Hear me one word, beleeche you Tribunals, heare me but a word.

Abdites. Peace, peace.

Murt. Be that you feeme, truly your Countries friend,

And tempomately proceed to what you would

Thus violently reddresse.

Brut. Sir, thofe cold ways,

That seem like prudent helpe, are very poysonous,

Where the Difcase is violent.

Lay hands upon him,

And beare him to the Rock. Corso draws his Sword.

Cenio. No, No, die here:

There's frene among you have beholden me fighting,

Come trie your felves, what you have feene me.

Murt. Downe with that Sword, Tribunals withdravw a while.

Brut. Lay hands upon him.

Murt. Helpe Martius, helpe you that be noble, helpe him young and old.

All. Downe with him, downe with him. Exeunt

In this Maccius, the Tribunals, the Abdites, and the People are best in.

Murt. Go, get you to your House, be gone, away.

All will be naught else.

Sen. Get you gone.

Con. Stand tall, we haue as many friends as enemies.

Murt. Shall it be put to that?

Sen. The Gods forbid:

I perceive noble friends, home to thy House,

Leave vs to cut this Case.

Murt. For vs is a Sore vp vs,

You cannot Tent your felles, be gone, be feth you.

Corso. Come Sir, along with vs.

Murt. I would they were Barbarians, as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd: not Romans, as they are not,

Though called Pit'forch o' th' Capitoll.

Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue,
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

The man I am.

Volumn. Oh, sir, sir, sir, I would have had you put your power well on Before you had worn it out.

Corio. Let it go.

Volumn. You might have beene enough the man you are,
With withtringe lye to be so: Leyer had bin
The things of your disposition, if
You had not slew them how ye were disposed,
Ere they lack'd power to eolleve you.

Corio. Let them hang.

Volumn. I, and burn't they too.

Enter Menenius with the Senators,

Men. Come, come, you have bin too rough, lemthing too rough: you must returne, and mend it.

Sin. There's no remedy,

Vnleffe by not to doing, our good Citie

Cleanse in the midd'it, and periah.

Volumn. Pray, be content'd:
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
Yet but a braine, that leads my vie of Anger.
To better vantage,

Men. Well said, Noble woman: Before he should thus floope to'th'heart, but that
The violent fit at'time caues it as Physick.
For the whole State, I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can bear the lease.

Corio. What must I do I?

Men. Returne to th'Tribunes.

Corio. Well, what then? what then?

Men. Repent, what you have spoke.

Corio. For them, I cannot do it to the Gods,
Must I then doe't to them?

Volumn. You are too absolute,
Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremeties speake. I have heard you say,
Honor and Policy, like vnfee'd Friends,
I'th' Warre do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other loose,
That they combine not there?

Corio. Tell'th truth.

Men. A good demand.

Volumn. If it be Honor in your Warres, to seeme
The fame you are not, which for your best ends
You adopt your policy: How is't leftt or worse
That it shall hold Companionship in Peace
With Honour, as in Warre; since that to both
It stands in like request.

Corio. Why force you this?

Volumn. Because, that
Now it lyes you on to speake to th'people:
Not by your owne infracion, nor by th'matter
Which your heart prompts you, but with such words
That are but rooted in your Tongue;
Though but Baffards, and Syllabies
Of no allowance, to your behoves truth.

Now, this no more diffhones you at all,
Then to take in a Towne with gentle words,
Which elle would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.

Iwould dissemble with my Nature, where
Me Fortunes and my Friends at flake requir'd
I should do so in Honor. I am in this

III. i. 293—III. ii. 64
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

The Glafs of my Eare.

And by my Bodies a'thon, teach my Minde
A most inherent Bainehee.

Volans. At thy choice then:
To begge of thee, it is my more dit-honor,
Then thou of them. Come all to ruine, let Thy Mother rather feel thy Pride, then feare
Thy dangerous Stoutnesse: for I mocke at death
With as bigge heart as thou. Do as thou list,
Thy Vallantesse was mine, thou fuck't it from me:
But owe thy Pride thy selfe.

Cor. Pray be content:
Mother, I am going to the Market place:
Chide me no more. Ile Mountebank his Loutes,
Cogg their Heads from them, and come home belou'd
Of all the Trades in Rome. Looke, I am going:
Commend me to my Wife, ile returne Confoll,
Or neuer truth to what my Tongue can do
I th'way of Flattery further.

Volans. Do thy will,
Exit Volans.

Senen. Haue ye the Tribunes do attend you arm your selfe
To answer mildely: for they are prepar'd
With Accusations, as I hear more strong:
Then are upon you yet.

Cor. The wordis, Mildely. Pray you let vs go,
Let them accuse me by inuention: I
Will answer in mine Honor.

Volans. I, but mildly.

Cor. Well mildly be it then, Mildely. Exeunt.

Enter Senecius and Brutus.

Sen. In this point charge him home, that he afflicts
Tyranical power: If he evade vs there,
Inforce him with his enuis to the people,
And that the Spoile got on the Ancient
Was ne'er distributed. What, will he come?

Enter as Edile.

Edile. Here's comming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Edile. With old Menenius, and those Senators
That always favourd him.

Senen. Have you a Catalogue
Of all the Voice, that we have procur'd, let downe by

Edile. I have 'tis ready. (Pole)

Sen. Have you collected them by Tribes?

Edile. I have.

Senn. Affirmable performently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, it shall be so,
I'll light and strength a bitt Commissions, be it either
For Death, for fine, or Banishment, then let them
If I say Fine, cry Fine; if Death, cry Death,
Inflaming on the olde pretogatiae
And power of truth ath Gaule,

Edile. I shall informe them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a divine confus'd
Inforce the present Execution
Of what we chance to Sentence.

Edile. Very well.

Senen. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint
When we shall hap to giu'them.

Bru. Go about it,
Put him to Chisseler straite, he hath bene v'd
Euer to conquer, and to hause his wits
Of contradiction. Being once chaff'd, he cannot Be turn'd againe to Temperance, then he speakes

III. ii. 65—III. iii. 28
What's in his heart, and that is there which looks
With vs to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with others.

Sicin. Well, here he comes.

Corto. Calmly, I do beseech you,

Corio. I, as an Hostler, that fourth poorest piece
Will bear the Knaue by th' Volume:

Th'honor'd Goddes
Keepe Rome in safety, and the Chafes of Justice
Supplied with worthy men, plant none amongs
Through our large Temples with 5 thieves of peace
And not our streets with Warre.

Men. A Noble wish.

Enter the Edits with the Plebeians.

Sicin. Draw near ye people.

Edits. Lift to your Tribunes. Audience.

Peace I say.

Corio. First hear me speake.

BothTri. Well, say : Peace hee.

Sicin. Shall I be charg'd no further then this present?

Must all determine here?

Sicin. I do demand,
By you submit to the peoples voices,
Allow their Officers, and are content
To suffer lawfull Charges for such faults
As shall be prou'd upon you.

Corio. I am Content.

Men. Lo Citizens, he fayes he is Content.

The warlike Service he ha's done, confider: Think Upon the wounds his body beares, which flew
Like Graues i'th holy Church-yard.

Corio. Scratches with Briars, fears to move
Lachery onely.

Men. Consider further:
That when he speakes not like a Citizen,
You finde him like a Soldier: do not take
His rougher Actions for malicious founds:
But as I say, such as become a Soldier,
Rather then envy you.

Corio. Well, well, no more.

Corio. What is the matter,
That being past for Consull with full voyce:
I am so disinclined, that the very howre
You take it off again.

Sicin. Answer to vs.

Corio. Say then: 'tis true, I ought fo

Sicin. We charge you, that you have contribut'd to take
From Rome all fea'n'd Office, and to winde
Your felle into a power tyrannical,
For which you are a Traitor to the people.

Corio. How? Traitor?

Men. Nay temperately : your promise.

Corio. The fires thou'lowell hell, Fould in the people:
Call me their Traitor, thos intuirous Tribune,
Within thine eyes, I fay twice thou fhouldst be:
In thy hands clutches : as many Millions in Thy lying tongue, both numbers. I would say
Thou fleyf into thee, with a voice as free,
As I do pray the Gods.

Sicin. Make you this people?

All. To'th Rocke, to'th Rocke with him.

Sicin. Peace:
We neede not put new matter to his charge:
What you have feene him do, and heard him speake:

Beating your Officers, cursing your selues,
Opposing Laws with frowndes, and here defying
Those whole great power must try him,
Even this fo criminal, and in fuch capittall kinde
Deferves th'extreamest death.

Brut. But fince he hath ferd'well for Rome.

Corio. What do you prate of Service.

Brut. I tale of that, that know it.

Corio. You?
Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother.

Com. Know, I pray you.

Corio. Ile know no further:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabanxit, Fleeing, pent to linger
But with a graine a day, I would not buy
Their mercie, at the price of one faire word,
Nor checke my Courage for what they can give,
To haue't with faying, Good morrow.

Sicin. For that he ha's

(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Lun'd against the people; seeking means
To plucke away their powers : as now at last,
Given Hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the Minifters
That doth distribuite it. In the name al't people,
And in the power of al's the Tribunes, wee (E'en from this infant) with him our Citi
In peril of precipituous
From all the Rocke, Tarpeian, nother more
To enter our Rome gates. I, a Peoples name,
I say it shall bee fo.

All. It shall be fo, it shall be fo: let him away:

Hes' banish'd, and it fn.'ll be fo.

Com. Heare me my Mifters, and my common friends.

Sicin. He's enter'd: No more hearing.

Com. Let me speake.

I have beene Consull, and can shew from Rome
Her Enemies makes upon me. I do loue
My Countries good, with a respect or tender.
More hely, and profound, then mine owne life,
My deere Wives esteemme, her wombs recreale,
And treasur of my Loyalty then I would Speake that.

Sicin. We know your drift. Speake what?

Brut. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd
As Enemy to the people, and his Countrie.

It shall bee fo.

All. It shall be fo, it shall be fo.

Corio. You common cry of Cours, whose breath I hate,
As reeks 2th rotten Femmes: whole Loues I prize,
As the dead Carkasses of unburied men,
That do corrupt my Ayre: I banish you,
And here defy remaine with your uncertainzie.
Let every feeble Rumor flake your hearts:
Your Enemies, with nodding of their Plumes
Fan you into the Fire: Haue the power still
To banish your Defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which finds not till it feelles,
Making but refolution of your selues,
Still your owne Foes) deliver you
As most abated Captives, to some Nation
That wonne you without blwres, defiping
For you the City. Thus I turne my backe;
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt Coriolanus, Ceminius, with Cymelix,
They all shout, and throw up their Capes.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Volumnia, Mecenius, Caminius, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Curio. Come leave your scowls; a brief farewell; the beast
With many heads butts me away. Nay Mother,
Where is your ancient Courage? You were vs'd
To say, Extremities was the trer of spirits;
That common chances. Common men could beare, That
When the Sea was calm, all Boats alike.
She'd Master-ship in floating. Fortunes blowes,
When most firoole home, being gentle wounded, drawn
A Noble cunning. You were vs't to load me
With Precepts that would make inuncible
The heart that could't them.

Volumnia. Oh heavens! O heavens!
Ped. Now the Red Peltitence like all Trades in Rome,
And Occupations perfish.

Curio. What, what, what,
I shall be loud when I am lack'd.
Nay Mother, Refue me that Spirit, when you were wom't to say,
If you had beene the Wife of Herocles,
Six of his Labour's would have done, and said
Your Husband to much fact. Caminius,
Draper not, Adieu. I see my Wife, my Mother,
He do well yet. Thou old and true Mecenius,
Thy scowls are facet; than younger men,
And venomous to thoe eyes. My sometime General,
I haue seen the Scene, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardning fp'tables. Tell these fair women,
This fond to wise increasit bookes,
A's it to laugh at 'em. My Mother, you want not My hazzards, still haver beene your false, and Believe not lightly, though I go alone
Like to a lovely Dragon, that his Femme
Makes fair, and talk'd of more then face; you Sonne
Will or exceed the Common, or be caught
With cautelous barts and practice.

Volumn. My first staffe,
Whether will thou go? Take good Communs
With thee awhile. Determine on some course
More then a wild espouze, to each chance
That start's a'sway before thee.

Curio. O the Gods!

Com. He follow thee a Month, deifie with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayl' beare of us,
And we of thee. Still the time thrift forth
A cave for thy sepulchre, we shall not tend
Ore the vast world, to feke a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth euer coole
In absence of the needer.

Curio. Fare ye well;
Thou hal' yeares upon thee, and thou art too full

The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Of the warres surfect, to go route with one
That's yet vnbruised: bring me but out at gate,
Come my sweet wife, my deereft Mother, and
My Friends of Noble touch: when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smite. I pray you come;
While I remaine about the ground, you shall Heare from me still, and never of me ought.
But what is like me formerly,
Mecen. That's worthly
As any ear can hearre. Come, let's not weep,
If I could shake off but one feuen yeares
From them old arms and legges, by the good Gods
I'd with thee, every foot.

Curio. Give me thy hand, come.

Enter the two Tribunes, Siceniwm, and Brutes, with the Edius.

Siceni. Bid them all home, he's gone; & we'll no further,
The Nobility are vexed, whom we weare fided
In his behalfe.

Brute. Now we have shewn our power,
I let them humber after it is done,
Then when it was a doing.

Siceni. Bid them home; say their great enemy is gone,
And they,brand in their ancient strength.
Brute. Difmitte them home. Here comes his Mother.

Enter Volumnia, Volumnia, and Mecenius.

Siceni. Let's not meet her.

Siceni. They say he's mad.
Brute. They haue tane note of vs: keepe on your way.

Volumn. Oh y'are well met:
Their hon'd plate at'st God's requirre your love.

Mecen. Peace, peace, be not so loud.

Volumn. If that I could for weeping, you should hearre,
Nay, and you all hearre fame. Will you be gone

Volumn. You shall stay too: I would have the power
To say to my Husband.

Siceni. Are you manckinde?

Volumn. I foole, so that a shame. Note but this Foole,
Was not a man my Father? Hau'dt thou Fooishpall
To banish him that brooke more blouses for Rome
Then thou hast spoken words.

Siceni. Oh blessed Heaven!

Volumn. Most Noble blouses, than ever fte wife words,
And for Rome good. He tells thee what thou goest;
Nay but thou shalt stay too: I would my Sonne
Were in Arabia, and my Tribes before him,
His good Sword in his hand.

Siceni. What then?

Volumn. What then! He'll make an end of thy pestiferity

Volumn. Baitards, and all.

Good man, the Wounds that he does bære for Rome!

Mecen. Come, come, peace.

Siceni. I would he had continued to his Country
As he began, and vnknit himselfe.
The Noble knot he made,

Brute. I would he had.

Volumn. I would he had? Twas you incant the table.
Card, that can judge as fide of his worth,
As I can of thefe Mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Brute. Pray let's go.

Volumn. Now pray for get you gone.

Curio. Have done a brave decide: Ere you go, hear this:
As faire as dought the Capitoll exceed
The meanest houfe in Rome; to fare my Sonne

This
This Ladies Husband heere; this (do you see) Whom you have banished, does exceed you all. Brin. Well, well, we'll leave you, Sicem. Why stay we to be bated With one that wants her Wits, Exeunt Tribunes. I would, I take my Prayers with you. Would the Gods had nothing else to do, But to confirm my Cusses. Could I meet'em But once a day, it would vnloge my heart Of what eyes heavy too. Amen. You have told them home, And by my troth you have caufe: you're Sup with me. Volumn. Angers my Meane: I kempt upon my selfe, And to small terme with Feeding: Come, let's go, Leave this faint-puling, and lament as I do, In Anger, tame-like: Come, come, come. Exeunt. Men. Fie, fie, fie. Enter a Roman, and a Voice. Rom. I know you well sir, and you know me: your name I think is Albinus. Voice. It is so sir, truly I have forgott you. Rom. I am a Roman, and my Seruices are as you are; against em. Know you me yet. Voice. Nicoman too. Rom. The same sir. Voice. You had more Beard when I last saw you, but your favour is well appear'd by your Tongue. What's the Newes in Rome: I have a Note from the Volcan flatte to finde you out there. You have well faced mee a day's journey. Rom. There hath bene in Rome strange Infurriage: The people, against the Senators, Paarticiats, and Nobles. Val. Hath bin: is it ended then? Our State thinks not so: they are in a most warlike preparation, & hope to com vpon them, in the heat of their diuision. Rom. The maine blaze of is past, but a small thing would make it flame againe. For the Nobles receiue fo to heart, the Banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe apetifte, to take all power from the people, and to plucke from them their Tribunes for euer. This lyes glowing I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out. Val. Coriolanus Banift? Rom. Banift, sir. Val. You will be welcome with this intelligence Nicoman. Rom. The day serues well for them now, I have heard it saide, the first time to corrupt a mans Wiffe, is when there's face out with her Husband. Your Noble Twain Auffidius well appeare well in these, Whis great Opposer Coriolanus being now in no request of his country. Voice. He cannot choose: I am most fortune, thus accidentally to encounter you. You have ended my Banifie, and I will mercifullly accompany you home. Rom. I shall between this and Supper, tell you most strange things from Rome: all tending to the good of their Aduersaries. Have you an Army ready say you? Val. A most Royall one: The Centurions, and their charges diligently billeted already in the entertainements, and to be on foot at these hours warning. Rom. I am loy'd full to hear of their residentes, and the man I thinkke, that shall fet them in present Action, So shortly he well meet, and most glad of your Company, Voice. You take my part from me sir, I have the most cable to be plad of yours.
Rom. Well, let vs go together, Exeunt. Enter Coriolanus in meanes. Apparell, list- gird, and winged, Exeunt. Corio. A goodly City is this Autumn. Citty, Tit I that made thy Windows: Many an eye were Of these faire Edifices for my Warses Have I heard groame, and drop: Then know me not, Leaft that thy Wits with Spirits, and boyes with thones In pury Battell I flye. Sine you sir. Enter a Citizen. Cit. And you. Corio. Direct me, fit be your will, where great Auffidius lies. Is he in Autumn? Cit. He is, and feastis the Nobles of the State, at his house this night, Corio. Which is his house, beafyeth you? Cit. This house here before. Corio. Thank you sir, farewel. Exit Citizen. Oh World, thy slippery turne! Friends now fast worn, Whole double bonemes femnes to weare one heart, Whole: Hours, whole Bed, whole Meale and Exercise Are still together, who Twin (as twere) in Lone, Unparable, still within this house, On a disputation of a Doit, break e out To bitterest Enmiety: So tileft Foes, Whole Poffesions, and whole Pilots have broke their sleep To take the one the other, by some chance, Some tricke not worth an Egge, still grow decreet friends And inter-taine their ylacke: So with me, My Birth-place have I, and my Loves upon This Enemie Towne; Ile enter, if the lyfe me He do faire Iffume: if the give me way, Ile do his Country Seruice. Exeunt. Muscles players. Enter a Servantman. 1 Ser. Wine, Wine, Wine: What seruice is heere ? I think our Fellowes are sleepe. Enter another Serintman. 2 Ser. Where's Caunoty M. cals for him? Cost, Exit Enter Coriolanus. Corio. A goodly House! The Feast finnes well : but I appeare not like a Gueft. Enter the selfe Servantman. 1 Ser. What would you have Friend? whence are you? Here's no place for you: Pray go to the doore: Exit Corio. I have here'd no better entertainment, in being Coriolanus. Enter second Servant. 2 Ser. Whence are you sir? Hat's the Porter his eyes in his head, think he gives entrance to such Companions ? Pray get you out. Corio. Away, 2 Ser. Away ? Get you away. Corio. Now this is troublesome. 2 Ser. Are you so bisit? He have you allat with anem Enter a Servintman, fit meets him. 3 What Fellowes this? 1 A strange one as euer I look'd on: I cannot get him out of the house: Drythee call my Master to him. 3 What have you to do here fellow? Pray you avoid the house. Corio. Let me but read, I will not hurt your hand. 3 What are you? Corio. A Gentleman. 3 A manfull poorone. Corio. True, so I am. 3 Pray you poor Gentleman, take vp some other flation.
The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

Enter Aufidius with the Serving-man.

Auf. Where is this Fellow?

Cori. He is married hither like a dogge, but for disturbing the Lords within.

Auf. Why soe? I heard much to the contrary. What sort of man?

Cori. If I should not know him, and seeing him, doth not think me for the man I am, peradventure commands me in my ffe.

Auf. Who is thy name?

Cori. My name is Coriolanus, who hath done To thee particularly, and to all the Voices Great hurt and Miscarriages: thereto witness may My Surname Coriolanus. The painful Service, The extreme Dangers, and the dropses of Blood Shed for my than Queene Country, are required: But with that Surname, a good memorie And witness of the Malice and Defcription Which thou shouldst perceive, only that name remains, The Cruelty and Envy of the people, Permitsted by our dear noble Nation, who Have all forgot me, hath devour'd the rest: And I am shamed by thy voice of Stace to be Hoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity, Her heart brought me to thy Haith, not out of Hope (Mistake not) to save my life: for if I had fear'd death, of all the Men in't World I would one avoided thee. But in more fright To be full out of toioe my Banifhers, Stand I believe thee here: Then if thou haft A heart of wretchedness, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those Manes Of thine scene through thy Country, speed thee straight And make my mistrey sever thee turner. So viest, That thy revengefull Service may prove As Benefits to thee. For I will fight Against thy Cassked Country, with the Spleene Of all the winder FRIENDs. But if to be, Thou art not this, and that to prove more Fortunes

That's tyr'd, then in a word, I also am Longer to live most westerne and prevent My throat to thee, and to thy Ancient Maitre: Which not to cut, would frow thee but a Fool, Since I have ever followed thee with hate, Drawn my Tunnels of Blood out of thy Countries brest, And cannot live but to thy blaming, whilift It be to do thee service.

Auf. Oh Martius, Martius;

Each word thou hast spak, hath weeded from my heart A root of Ancient Envy. If Jupiter Should from yond cloud speake divine things, And say his true, I'd not believe them more Then thee all noble Martius. Let me twine Mine armes about that body, where against Ingrained Aft a hundred times harken, And feard the Moone with splinters: here I sleep The Anule of my Sword, and do contest As hotly, and as Nobly with thy Leue, As ever in Ambitious strength, I did Content against thy Valour. Know thou fiift, I would that I had married: never man Sigh'd truer breath. But that I see thee there Thou noble thing, more dances my rapt heart, Then when I first my wedde Martius'law Beltide my Threshold. Why, thou Mars I tell thee, We have a Power on foot: and I had purse Once more to hew thy Target from thy Browne, Or loose mine Arme for't. Thou hast best mete out Twelve fracture times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters, twixt thy blade and me: We have beene downe together in my sleep, Vbuckling Helme, catching each other Threats, and wak'd halfe dead with nothing. Worthy Martius, Had we no other quartel elite to Rome, but that Thou art thence Banifh'd, we would murther all From twelve, to teuentie: and powring Witne Into the bowells of our grateall Rome, Like a bold Flood o'er-beate. Oh come, go in, And take our Friendly Senators by'th hands Who now are heere, taking their leaves of mee, Who am prepar'd against your Territorie, Though not for Rome it selfe.

Cori. You bifie me Gods.

Auf. Therefore most absolute Sir, if thou wilt have The leading of thine brave Reunisers, take Thou'n halfe of my Communion, and set downe As best thou art experience, since thou know

Thy Countries strength and weakeflite, thine owne waies Whether to knocke against the Gates of Rome, Ordinly vift them in parts remote, To fright them, ere destroy: But come in, Let me commend thee conf, to the shoife that shall Say ye to thy defires. A thousand wellcomes, And more a Friend, then ere no Enemy, Yet Martius that was much. Your hand: most welcome.

Exeunt

Enter two of the Serving-men.

2. Here's a strange alteration.

3. By my hand, I had thought to have striken him with a Cudgel, and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

4. What an Arme he has, he turnd me about with his finger and his thumbe, as one would set vp a Top.

5. Nay, I know by his face that there was some thing in him. He had fir, a kinde of face methought, I cannot tell.

IV. v. 33—165

tell how to estimate it.

1. He had no looking as it were, would I were hang’d but I thought there was more in him, then I could think.

2. So did I, Ile be sworn: He’s simply the rarest man
   I’th’world.

1. I think he is: but a greater soldier then he,
   You want one.

2. Who my Master?
   Nay, it’s no matter for that.

3. Worth fix on him.

1. Nay not so neither: but I take him to be the greater Squallour.

2. Faith lookke you, one cannot tell how to lay that for the Defence of a Towne, our Generall is excellent.

1. I, and for an assault too.

Enter the third Servant, etc.

3. Oh, Serves, I can tell you News, News you Raffles.

1. I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as little be a condemn’d man.

Bath. Wherefore? Wherefore?

3. Why here’s he that was went to thwacke our Generall, Casta Martius.

1. Why do you say, thwacke our Generall?

3. I do not say thwacke our Generall, but he was always good enough for him.

2. Come we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him, I have heard him say so himself.

3. He was too hard for him directly, to say the Truth on’t before Coriolanus, he focthimth, and notch him like a Caribando.

2. And hee had bin Cannibly gien, he might have boyht and eaten him too.

1. But more of thy Newes.

3. Why he is so made on heere within, as if there were Son and Heire to Mars, set at upper end of Table: No question ask him by any of the Senators, but they stand bald before him. Our Generall himselfe makes a Mirth of him, Schallifes himselfe with a hand, and turns vp the white o’th’eye to his Discourse. But the bottome of the Newes is, our General is cut t’th’middle, & but one half of what he was yester day. For the other he’s halfe, by the treachry and grunt of the whole Table. He’ll go sa-yes, and folde the Porter of Rome Gates by th’ears. He will move all doe worse before him, and leave his palisage pou’d.

2. And he’s as like to do’t, as any man I can imagine.

3. Doog’d he will do’t; for looke you Sir, he has as many Friends as Enemies: which Friends sir as it were, doot not (do you sir) thew them talces (as we terme it) his Friends, whilst her in Directlade.

1. Directlade What’s that?

3. But when they shall see Sir, his Creft vp againe, and the man in blood, they will out of their Burroughes (like Comies after Raine) and resell all with him.

2. But when does forward?

3. To morrow, to day, presently, you shall have the Fringe brooke vp this afternoon: This peace is nothing, but to cart Iron, scotche Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.

1. Let me have Warre say I, it exceeds peace as farre as day do’s night: It’s frighting walking, audible, and full of Verse. Peace, is a very Apeopley, Letherage, mul’d, desfe, sleep, intellable, a getter of more bialful Children, then warres a defrophy of men.

2. ’Tis so, and as warres in some sorte may be fai’d to be a Raimher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.

1. I, and it makes men hate one another.

3. Reason, because they then lefe neede one another: The Warres for my money. I hopeto see Romans as cheaper as Volentiar. They are rising, they are rising.

Bath. In, in, in, in.

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brute.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him,
   His remedies are tame, the present peace,
   And quietness of the people, which before
   Were in wildy hurry. Herece do make his Friends
   Buflh, that the world goes well: who rather had,
   Though they themselfes declar’d it to be, behold
   Differtous numbers pelting streets, then fee
   Our Traditions finging in their hopes, and going
   About their Funditions friendly.

Enter Sicinius.

Bru. We flood too it in good time. Is this newes?
   Sic. This he, this he: O he is grown molt kind of slates:
   Haile Sir.

Mere. Haile to you both.

Sic. You Coriolanus is not much milly, but with his Friends: the Commonwealth doth stand, and so would do the people were he more angry ar a’t.

Mere. All’s well, and might have bene much better, if he could have temper’d.

Sic. Where is he, heare you?

Mere. Nay I heare nothing:
   His Mother and his wife, heare nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

All. The Gods preferre you both.

Sic. Gooden our Neighbours.

Bru. Gooden to you all, goodbye to you all.

1. Our liues, our wives, and children, on our knees,
   Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive.

Bru. Farewell kinde Neighbours:
   We wish the Coriolanus had lou’d you as we did.

All. Now the Gods keepe you.

Both. Farewell, farewell.

Enter Citizens.

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time,
   Then when these Fellowes ran about the streets,
   Crying Confusion.

Bru. Cassa Martius was

A worthy Officer, Sir, but Infallent,
   O come with Pride, ambitious, full all thinking
   Self-lou’d.

Sicin And stinking one folde Throne, without afficiance.

Mere. I thinke not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our Lamentation,
   If he had gone forth Conful, found it so.

Bru. The Gods have well puicient it, and Rome
   Sits safe and still, without him.

Enter an Adile.

Addle. Worthy Tribunes,
   There is a Slace whom we have put in prizin,
   Reports the Volces whom we have put in prizin,
   Are entred in the Roman Territories,
   And with the deepeli malice of the Warre,
   Destroy, what lies before ’em,

Mere. ’Tis Auffidus.

Who hearing of our Martius Banishment,
   Thrufs forth his horses against the world.

Which were In-ful’d, when Martius floored for Rome,

And
And dart not once peep out.

tis in, what you talk of Martinus.

hail, that very well it can,

are all the examples of the like, hath beene

Within my Age. But reason with the fellow

Before you punish him, where he heard this,

least you shall chance to whip your Information, and beate the Messanger, who bids beware

of what is to be dreaded.

Tell not me: I know this cannot be.

But not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

The Nobles in great eaies service are going
All to the Senate-house: some newes is comming
That turns their Countenances,

Tis this Slaves:

Go whip him fore the peoples eyes: His raising,

Nothing but his report.

Yet worthy Sir,

The Slaves report is seconded, and more

More fearfull is deliver'd.

What more fearful?

It is spoke freely out of many mouths,

How probable I do not know, that Martinus

Ioynd with Auffidus, leads a power 'mind Rome,

And wows Reuenge as spacious, as betweene

The yung it, and old thing,

This is most likely.

Rais'd onely, that the weaker form may with

Good Martinus home again.

The very strake on.

This is unlikely.

He could not Auffidus can no more attone

Then violent it Consternation.

Enter Messanger.

You are sent for to the Senate:

A fearfull Army, led by Caius Martinus,

Affeminated with Auffidus, Rages

Upon our Territories, and have already

O're-borne their way, confum'd with fire, and took

What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Oh you have made good worke.

What newes is What newes?

You have holp to raunish your owne daughters, &

To melt the City Ledes upon your pates,

To fee your Wives dishonour'd to your Noses.

What is the newes? What is the newes?

Your Temples burned in their Ciment, and

Your Vranches, whereon you flood, confin'd

Into an Augers boare.

Pray now, your Newes:

You have made faire worke I feare me: pray your newes,

If Martinus should be joyned with Volcanus.

If he is their God, he leads them like a thing

Made by fame other Deity then Nausur,

That shapes man Better: and they follow him

Against vs, Brats, with no leffe Confidence,

ThenBoye's purifyingSummer Butter, flies

O; Butcher's killing Flyes.

You have made good worke,

You and your Aruon men: you, that flood so much

Upon the voyce of occupation, and

The breath of Garlicke-eaters.

Hee! shake your Rome about your cares.

As Hercules did slake downe Mellow Fruits

You have made faire worke,

But is this true fit?

Before you finde it other. All the Regions

Do imligniously Resoul't, and who reffits

Are mock'd for valianc: Ignorance,

And perfist confant Foolies: who it can blase him?

Your Enemies and his, finde something in him,

We are all vndone, vniffe.

The Noble man have mercy.

Who shall ask it?

The Tribunes cannot doe for shame; the people

Defire fech pitty of him, as the Wolfe

Doe's of the Shepheards: For his best Friends, if they Should say be good to Rome, they charg'd him, even

As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,

And therein fiew'd like Enemies.

Tis true, if thee were putting to the houfe, the brand

That should confume it, I have not the face

To fy, before you caele; You have made faire hands,

You and your Crat, you have crafted faire;

You have brought

A Trebling upon Rome, such as was never,

Sincapable of helpe.

Sry, Say not, we brought it.

Where? How was't we? We lould him,

But like Beasts, and Cowardly Nobles,

Gave way into your Clutter's, who did hoote

Him out of the City,

But I feare

They'll roare him in againe. Tellus Auffidus,

The second name of men, obeys his points

As If he were his Officer: Deparation,

Is all the Policy, Strength, and Defence

That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Trapege of Citizens.

Hear come the Clutters.

And is Auffidus with him? You are they

That made the Ayre wash-holme, when you catt

Your thinking, greafe Caps, in hooting

At Corioliexe Exile. Now he's committ'd,

And not a haire upon a Souldiers head

Which will not proue a whip: As many Cocoberbes

As you trow Cap's well, will he humble downe,

And pay you for your voyces. 'Tis no matter,

If he could burne vs all into our coale,

We have deferv'd it.

Owne, Faith, we heare feart News.

Civ. For mine owne part,

When I said banish him, I said 'twas pitty,

And so did I.

And so did I: and to say the truth, I did so very many of vs, that we did we did for the best, and though we willingly conwithed to his Banishment; yet we was against our will.

Yare goodly things, you Voyces.

You have made good worke

And you your cry. Shal's to the Captoll?

O'h, what else t

Excmvole.

Go Matters get you home, be not dismised,

There be a Side, that would be glad to haue

This true, which they so fome to leare. Go home,

And they noe signe of Faire.
The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

Come let's away: when Rome, Rome is mine,
Thou art poor of all; then shortly art thou mine.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Scipio, Brutus,
the two Tribunes, with others.

Menen. No, I'll not go you hear ye what he hath said
Which was sometime his General: who loved him
In a most deere particular. He call'd me Father:
But what o' that? Go you that banish'd him
A Mile before his Tent, tall, down, and kneel
The way into his mercy: Nay, if the coy'd
To hear Cominius speaks, he keeps at home.

Com. He would not seeme to know me.

Menen. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name:
I vy'd our old acquittance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer too: Forbad all Names,
He was a kind of Nothing, Tattleaffe,
Till he had forg'd himselvse a name to fire
Of burning Rome.

Menen. Why so: you have made good workes:
A pairre of Tribuntes, that have wrack'd
To make Cori: cheaper: A Noble memory.

Com. I minding him, how Reynell was to pardon
When it was lest expected. He replyed
It was a bare petition of a State
To one whom they had punish'd.

Menen. Very well, could he say leffe.

Com. I offered to awaken his regard
Of his private Friends. His answer to me was
He could not stay to picke them, in a piece
Of anysome mutly Chaffe. He said, twas folly
For one poore graine or two, to leave viburn
And still to noe thensence.

Menen. For one poore graine or two?

I am one of those this Mother, Wife, his Childre,
And this brave Fellow too: we are the Graine,
You are the mutly Chasse, and you are met.
Aboute the Moore. We must be burnt for you.

Menen. Nay, pray be patient: If you refuse your syde
In this so never needed help, yet do not
Upbraid's with our diffire, But fure if you
Would be your Countries Pleadar, your good Tongue
More then the infant Annie we can make Might stopp our Countreymen.

Menen. No: I'll not meddle.

Scip. Pray you go to him.

Menen. What should I do?

Com. Onely make triall what your Loue can do,
For Rome, towards Martius.

Menen. Well, and say that Martius return me:
As Cominius is return'd, what needs what then?
But as a discontented friend, great-tho
With his vnkindnesse, Sayt be so?

Scip. Yet your good will
Muft have that thankes from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.

Menen. Ho, Ho, we trust not:
I thinke hee'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And humme at good Cominius, much unharts mee.
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

I. I am as thy General is,

Then you should hate Rome, as he do's. Can you, when you have putst out your gates, the very Defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his reuenges with the easie groanings of old women, the Virginall Palms of your daughters, or with the palled interception of such a deuoy'd Dorastas you fetyome to be? Can you think to blow out the intende'd fire, your City is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deced'd, therefore backe to Rome, and prepare for your execution; you are condemn'd, our General has sowne you out of reprieve and pardon.

Mene. Sira, if thy Captaine knew I were here, He would vie me with effimation.

II. Come, my Captaine knowes you not, Mene. I meane thy General,

I My General cares not for you. Back I say, go at home. I let forth your hale pinte of blood. Backe, that's the vinmost of your having, backe.

Mene. Nay but fellow, Fellow,

Enter Coriolanus with Antipater.

Coro. What's the matter?

Mene. Now you Companion: He say an arrant for you, you shall know now that I am in effimation: you shall perceive, that a backe gardant cannot offer me my Son Coriolanus, guelfe but my entertainment with him: if thou standst not th that hale of hanging, or of some death more long in Spectatorship, and crueller in suffering, be hold now pretently, and swood for what's to come upon thee. The glorious Gods fit in hourly Synod about thy particular prosperity, and lone thee no worse then thy old father Menenius do's. O my Son, my Son! thou art preparing fire for vs: look there, here's water to quench this. I was hardely moved to come to thee: but being affuted none but my felfe could move thee, I here bare bloune out of your Gates with figthes: and continue thee to par don Rome, and thy petitionary Countriemen. The good Gods alway thy wrath, and turne the dres of it, upon this Vallet here: This, who like a blockke hath denied my accesse to thee.

Coro. Away.

Mene. How? Away?

Coro. Wife, Mother, Child, I know not. My affaires Are scarued to others: Though I owe My Reuenge properly, my reniallion lies In Volcan brevets. That we have brenne familiar, Ingrate forgetfullnes shall poison rather. Then pitty: Note how much, therefore be gone. Mine ears against your fizers, are stronger then Your gates against my force. Yet for I loved thee, Take this along, I write it for thy fake, And wou'd have fent it. Another word Menenius, I will not heare thee speake. This man Mulfidus Was my belou'd in Rome; yet thou beholdest. Answel. You keeps a contenfant temper, Mene. Keeps the Guard and Menenius.

II. Now fit, is your name Menenius?

2 Titus a spell you fee of much power:

You know the way home again. Do you heare how we are fent for keeping your greatnesse backe?

2 What cause do you think I have to swood?

Menen. I neither care for thi would, nor your General: for such things as you, I can feare think thel's any, y'are so flight. But that hath a will to die by himselfe, feares it not.

642
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

Between the Child, and Parent.

Coriol. What's this? your knees to me?
To your Corneled Sonne?
Then let the Pibbles on the hungry beach
Fillop the Stares: Then let the mutinous windes
Strike the proud Cedars against the fiery Sun:
Mundring Impomibility, to make
What cannot be, flight worse.
Vol. Thon am I your warrior, I hope to frame thee
Do you know this Lady?

Coriol. The Noble Sitter of Publicola;
The Moone of Rome; Chaffe as the Icle
That's curst by the Frosts, from purest Snows,
And hangs on Diana Temple. Dece Valeria.
Vol. This is a poor Epitome of yours,
Which by th' Interperation of Full time,
May shew like all your selves.

Coriol. The God of Soldiers:
With the conten of Suprême Iour, informe
Thy thoughts with Noblenesse, that thou mayst prove to frame unvulnerable, and tickle's the Warres
Like a great Sea-marke standing every flaw,
And fasting shole that eye thee.

Vol. Your knee, Sith.

Coriol. That's my brave Boy,
Vol. Even he, your wife, this Ladie, and my selfe,
Are Sitters to you.

Coriol. I beseech you peace:
Or if you'd ask, remember this before;
The thing I have forewarned you to grant, may never be held by you denieth. Do not bid me
Dismisse my Soldiers, or capitulate
Again, with Rome's Mechanikes. Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not to lay
My Rages and Reuenges, with your colder reason.

Vol. Oh no more, no more:
You have said you will not grant vs any thing:
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask,
That if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardnere, therefore heare vs.

Coriol. Affiditam, and you Volces marke, for we?w
Hearc nought from Rome in priuate. Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent & not speake, our Raiments
And state of Bodies would bewray what life
We have lead since thy Exile. Thinks with thy selfe,
How more unfortunate then all living women
Are we come hither, since thy flight, which should
Make our eyes owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owre owr...
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

And beare the Palme, for having brately fled
Thy Wife and Childrens blood: For my selfe, Sonne,
I purpose not to waite upon Fortune, till
Thrice warres determisse: I Cannot perswade thee, rather
To sue for Rome, giue grace to both partes,
Then teake the end of one; thou shalt not lonner
March to assault thy Country, then to streake
(Truth too, thou shalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

No, I am more, that brought you forth this boy,
To keep your name living so time.

I shall not read same: He run away
Till I am bigger, but then lie fight.

Corin. Not of a woman's tenderneffe to be,
Requires nor Childre, nor women's face to see:
I have faire too long.

Vivian. Nay, go not from vs thus:
If I were so, that our request did tend
To fatis the Romanes, thereby to destroy
The Voices of a certaine but small concerne vs
As poynous of your Honnour. No, no lasts
Is that you receaue them: While the Voices
May fay, this mercy we have fiew't: the Romans,
This we receive, and each in side.
Gue the All-hale to thee, and cry be Left
For making vp this peace. Though I know'lt (great Sonne)
That, the Romanes in every certaine but small certaint,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefite
Which thou shalt thereby receaue, is such a name
Whose reputation will be dogged with Curses:
Whole Chronicle thus was, the man was Noble,
But with his life Attempts, he wip'd it out:
Destroy'd this Country, and his name remains
To thine, and the world. Speak to me Son:
Though I accept the fine franchises of Honor,
To impute the grace of the Gods,
To erase with Thunder the wide Cheakes all about,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Hount
That should burnt an Oake. Why do't not speak:
Think it thou is Honourable for a Nobleman
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speake you:
He cannot for you requite, When thou say,
Perhaps thy childerffe will make him more
Then can our Reason. There no man in the world
More bound to, Mother, yet here he let's me prate
Like one in a Stocket. Thou haile never in thy life,
Shew'd thy deere Mother any curteisie,
When the poore Hen'fond of no second brood,
He's clee'd thee to the Warrs and false home
Loden with Honor. Say me your Request's vain,
And speake me backe: But, if it be not so
Then thou art not honest, and the Gods will plague thee
That thou Traffam'st from me the Duty, which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turns away:
Down Ladies let vs shame him with his kneevs
To his own name Corinolan longs more mole:
The pitty to our Prayers. Downe: an end,
This is the last. So, we will home to Rome,
And dye amongst our Neighbours: Nay, behold's
This day that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneevs, and holdes vp hands for fellowship,
Duc's resson our Petition with more strength
Then should you deny. Come, let vs go:
The elbow had a Voice to his Mother: His Wife is in Corinolan, and his Child
Like him by elence; yet gue vs our dispatch:

I am butt vs till our City be afire, & then Ile speake a little
Holds her by the hand silent.

Corin. O Mother, Mother!
What haue you done? Behold, the Heaunt do ope
The Gods looke downe, and this unnatural Scene
They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother: Oh!
You haue wonne a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Sonne, believe it: Oh beleue it,
Most dangerously you have him with preuiald,'d,
If not mortall to him. But let it come:
Affiduum, though I cannot make true Warrs,
In frame concertemen peace. Now good Affiduum
Were you in my stead, should you have heard
A Mother lefe? or granted lefe? Affiduum?

Aff. I was mou'd withall.

Corin. I dare be sworn you were:
And fir, it is no little thing to make
Mune eyes to wete compassion. But (good fir)
What peace yee make, doe me: For my part,
I le not to see a wretch with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this caufe. Oh Mother! Wife !

Aff. I am glad thou hast fet thy reacy, & thy Honor
A difference in thee. Out of that Ile work
My fea a forerm Fortune.

Corin. O by and by; But we will drinke together:
And you shall bear.
A goodly lawes & voices, then words, which we
On like conditions, will have Counter-feald.
Come enter with vs: Ladies you defende
To have a Temple built you: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confederate Armes.
Could not have made this peace.

Enter Messenger and Sicinnus. Rome.

Sic. See yee your good Count's Capitol, y'ont corner
Sicinnus. Where is that so?
Sic. It be poosible for you to displaice it with your little finger, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome, epecially his Mother, may preuail with him. But I say, there is no hope in't: our throats are sentenc'd, and itts upon execution.

Sicinnus. It's poosible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a Grub & a Butterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub: this Martrius, is groome from Man to Dragon: He has wings, he's more then a creeping thing.

Sicinnus. He loud his Mother earnestly.
Sic. So did he mee: and he no more remembers his Mistresse, then the late eightye year old houfe. The tartannetle of his face lowers ripe Grapes, When he wallks, he moves like an Engine, and the ground shrinks before his Tres-ding. He is able to pierce a Coflet with his eye: Talks like a keel, and his hain is a Battery. He fits in his State, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids he doe done, it finnes with his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Sicinnus. The Gods be good vnto vs.

Sicinnus. No, to such a face the Gods will not be good vnto vs. When we banish him, we respect not then; and he returning to breake our necks, they repect not vs.

Mef. Sir, if you 'd fancy your life, fly to your House, The Plebeians have got your Fellow Tribune, And hale him vp and down; all wearing, if The Roman Ladies bring not comfort home They 'll give him death by Inches.

Enter another Messanger.

Sein. When is the Newes? (prensy I'd.
Mef. Good Newes, good newes, the Ladies have The Volcans are diflodged, and Martines gone: A merrier day did never yet great Rome, Now, not an expulsion of the Targains.

Sein. Friend, are you certain this is true? It's must certain.

Mef. As certaine as I know the Sun is fire: Where have you lack'd that you make doubt of it? We're through an Arch so hurried the winne Tide, As the recomforted through the gares. Why harke you: Trumpets, Halyse, Drums beate, altogether, The Trumpers, Sack-buss, Palfreeters, and Tydes, Tabors, and Symboles, and the crowning Romans, Make the Sunne dance, Hearke you. A florin within Mene. This is good Newes: I will go meete the Ladies. This Volumnia, Is worth of Confuds, Sistus, and Particiants, A City full: Of Tribunes such as you, A Sea and Land full: you pray'd well to day: This Morning, for tennethousand of your throates, I'd not have given a doar. Harke, how they joy: Sound still with the Shouts.

Sein. First, the Gods bleffe you for your sydngs: Next, accept my thankfullnesse.
Mef. Sir, we have all great case to give great thanks. Sein. They are nere the City.
Mef. Almost at point to enter.
Sein. We 'll meete them, and helpe the joy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing over the Stage, with other Lords.

Sein. Behold our Patronesse, the life of Rome: Call all your Tribes together, praise the Gods, And make triumphant fires, set new Flowers before them: Vnshoul the noife that Banished Meritio, Repale him, with the welcome of his Mother: Cry welcome Ladies, welcome.

All. Welcome Ladies, welcome.

A Florin with Drummes & Trumpets.

Enter Two Ausfuidians, with Attendants.

A. Go, tell the Lords a'th' City, I am heere: Deliver them this Paper: hauing read it, Bid them repair tyo th'Market place, where I Even intheirs, and in the Commons eares Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse: The CityPorts by this hath enter'd, and Intende's appeare before the People, hopings To purge himselfe with words, Dipatch. Enter 1 or 4 Consulares of Ausfudian Fation.

Mofl V. ecume.

1. Cons. How is it with our Generall?
A. Euen soas, with a man by his owne Almes impoynd'd, and with his Charity flame.
2. Cons. Mofl Noble Sir, if you do hold the same intent Wherein you wish'd with parties: Well I deliver you Of your great danger.
A. Sir, I cannot tell, We must proceed as we do finde the People.
3. Cons. The People will remayne vncertaine, whil't Twixt you there's difference: but the fall of either Makes the Surruior heyre of all.

A. I know it: And my pretext to strike at him, admit A good contradiction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine honor to this truth: who being so heightned, He watered his new Plants with dewes of Flatterty, Seducing to my Friends: and to this end, He bow'd his Nature, neuer knowne before, But to be rough, vnwayable, and free,

3. Consp. Sir, his Rounde
When he did stand for Consull, which he lost By lacke of flowing.

A. That I would have spokeno, Being banished for, he came unto my Harth, Pretended to my knife his Throat: I took him, Made him loynt-seruant with me: Gave him way In all his owne defires: Nay, let him chuse Out of my Files, his projectes, to accomplis My best and freethest men, fer'd his deignements In mine owne persone: holpe to reape the Fame Which he did end all his; and took some pride To do my felie this wrong: Till at the last I seern'd his Follower, not Partner; and He wadg'd me with his Countenance, as if I had bin Mercenary.

1. Cons. So he did my Lord: The Army maruely'd at it, and in the laft, When he had caried Rome, and that we look'd For no lefe Spoile, then Glory.

A. There was it: For which my newes shall be stretched upon him, At a few drops of Womans rhowme, which are As cheape as Lyes; he fold the Blood and Labour Of our great Action; therefore shall he dye,

And I renew me in his fall. But hearke.

Drummes and Trumpets sounds, with great bawts of the people,

1. Cons. Your Native Towne you enter'd like a Postle, And had no wycomes home, but he returns Spleiting the Ayre with noysse,

2. Cons. And patient Fools, Whose children he hath flame, their base throats teare With glinging him glory.

3. Cons. Therefore at your vantage, Ere he expresse himselfe, or moue the people With what he would say, let him fell his Sword: Which we will second, when he lies along.

After your way. His Tale pronounced, shall bury His Reason, with his Body.

A. Say no more. Hear we come the Lords, Enter the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are most wycome home.

A. I have not defend't it.

But worthy Lords, have you with heed perused What I have written to you?

All. We haue.

1. Lord. And grecce to heare:

What faults he made before the laft, I think Might have fourde ease Fines: But there to end Where he was to begin, and glue away The benefit of our Ladies, answering vs With our owne charge: making a Tyme, where There was a yeelding: this admits no excute.

V. iv. 39 — V. v. 69
The Tragedie of Coriolanus.

As. He approaches, you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus marching with Drumme, and Colours. The Commons being with him,

Corio. Haile Lords, I am return'd your Souldier:

No more infected with my Countreys love

Then when I parted hence : but still inflaming

Vnder your great Command. You are so known,

That prospeerously I have attempted, and

With bloody passage led your Warrs, even to

The gates of Rome: Our spoiles we have brought home

Doth more then counterpoize a full third part

The charges of the Action. We have made peace

With no lesse Honor to the Antients

Then flame to the Romaines. And we here deliver

Subterfus by til Corio, and Patricians,

Together with the Seace 3th Senate, what

We have compounded on.

As. Read it not Noble Lords,

But tell the Traitor in the highest degree

He hath abus'd your Powers.

Corio. Traitor! How now?

As. I Traitor, Marins.

Corio. Marins?

As. I Marins, Came Marius: Do'st thou thinke

He grace thee with that Robbery, thy false name Coriolam in Coriades?

You Lords and Heads 9th State, peradventure

He ha's betray'd your busineffe, and givn vp

For certaine drops of Salis your City Rome:

I say your City to his Wife and Mother,

Breaking his Oath and Relolutions, like

A swift of rotten Silke, never admittin

Counsell 9th warre: But at his Nurses reares

He whin'd and roar'd away your Victory,

That Pages blufh'd at him, and men of heart

Look'd with wondering at each other.

Corio. Heart's thou Mars?

As. Name not the God, thou boy of Teares,

Corio. Ha?

As. No more.

Corio. Measurelesse Lyre, thou haft made my heart

Too great for what contains it. Boy? Oh Slaine,

Pardon me Lords, 'tis the faultfull time that ever

I was forc'd to confound your judgments my grave Lords

Muff give this Corre the Lyre: and his owne Nation,

Who weares my triumph imprisston vpon him, that

Muff breahe his beating to his Graue, shall joyne

To thraught the Lyre vpon him.

1 Lord. Peace both, and heare me speake.

Corio. Cut me to peeces Volcnes men and Lads,

Staine all your edges on me. Boy, falle Hound:

If you have wras your Annales true, 'tis there,

That like an Eagle in a Doute-cost, I

Flatten'd your Volcnes in Coriades.

Alone I did it, Boy.

As. Why Noble Lords,

Will you be put in minde of his blinde Fortune,

Which was your shame, by this vnholy Braggart?

'Fore your owne eyes, and ears?

As. Let him dye for't.

All People. Teare him to peeces, do it prefently:

He kill'd my Sonne, my daughter, he kill'd my Coyns.

Marcus, he kill'd my Father.

2 Lord. Peace here: no outrage, peace:

The man is Noble, and his Fame told in this

Oure of his birth: His last offences to vs.

Shall have Judicious hearing. Stand Auffidius,

And trouble not the peace.

Corio. O that I had him, with fix Auffidius's, or more:

His Tribe, to we our lawfull Sword,

As. Infolent Villaine.

All Conpi. Kill, kill, kil, kill, kill him,

Draw both the Conspirators, and kill Martins, who fails Auffidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold,

As. My Noble Masters, heare me speake.

1 Lord. O Tullus.

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed, whereat

Valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him Masters, all be quiet,

Put vp your Swords.

As. My Lords,

When you shall know as in this Rage

Prouok'd by him, you cannot, the great danger

Which this mans life did owne you, you'l renounce

That is thus cut off. Peace it your Honours

To call me to your Senate, Ie declare

My felfe your loyal Servant, or endure

You heare me Ceduce.

Lord. Beare from hence his body,

And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded

As the most Noble Corruse, that ever Herald

Did follow to his Vnne.

2 Lord. His owne impatience,

Takes from Auffidius a great part of blame:

Let's make the Beef of it.

As. My Page is gone,

And I am Brucke with sorrow. Take him vp:

Help three a.shcheest Souldiers, Ie be one,

Beare thou the Drumme that is speake mournfully:

Traile your steele Pikes, Though in this City bee

Hath widdow'd and vnchilded many a one,

Which to this houre be waile the loure,

Yet the shall have a Noble Memory. Affith.

Exeunt bearing the Body of Martius. A loud March Sounded.

FINIS.
The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft. And then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bassoctus and his Followers at the other, with Drums & Colors.

Saturninus,
Noble Patricians, Patrons of my Right,
Defend the Justice of my Cause with Arms.
And Country-men, my louing Followers,
Please my Successfull Title with your Swords.

I was the first borne Sonne, that was the last
That wore the Imperial Diadem of Rome:
Then let my Fathers Honour live in me,
Nor wrong mine Age with this indignity.

Bassoctus, Romanes, Friends, Followers, associates of my Rights:
I feuer Bassoctus, Caesar Sonne,
Were gracious in the eyes of Rovall Rome,
Keepet this passage to the Capitoll:
And suffer not Dishonour to approach
The Imperial Seat to Verite, confecrate
To Injustice, Contince, and Nobility:
But let Deceit in pure Elecution shine;
And Romanes, fight for Freedom in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus also with the Crowne,

Princes, that shew by Factsions, and by Friends,
Ambitiously for Rule and Emperie:
Knew, that the people of Rome for whom we Stand
A speical Party, bathe by Common voyce
In Elecution for the Roman Empire,
Chosen Andronicus, Sur-named Bassoctus,
For many good and great defects to Rome.
A Nobleman, a bravet Warrior,
Lines it this day within the City Walls.
He by the Senate is acceded home.
From weary Wares against the barbarous Caeths,
That with his Sonnes (a terror to our Foes)
Hath yеak'd a Nation strong, train'd vp in Armes.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This Caue of Rome, and chalifshd with Armes
Our Enemies pride. Foure times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his Valiant Sonnes
To Cathis from the Field.
And now at last, laden with Hounours Spoyle,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flowerishing in Armes.

Let vs intreat, by Honour of his Name,
Whom (worthily) you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitoll and Senates right,
Whom you pretend to Honour and Adore,
That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength,
Dismiss your Followers, and as Senates should,
Please your Defers in Peace and Humbility.

Saturnine, How sayre the Tribune speaks,
To calme my thoughts.

Bosea. Marcus Andronicus, so I do aske
In thy vprightneffe and Integrity:
And lo I Loue and Honor thee, and thine,
Thy Noble Brother Titus, and his Sonnes,
And Her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all)
Gracious Lusius, Rome's rich Ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving Friends:
And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Favour,
Commit my Cause in balance to be weigh'd.

Exit Senators.

Saturnine, Friends, that haue bene
Thus forward in my Right,
I thank you all, and here Dismiss you all,
And to the Loue and Favour of my Country,
Commit my Selfe, my Person, and the Cause:
Rome, be as juit and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.

Open the Gates, and let me in.

Bosea. Tribunes, and me, a poore Competitor.
Flourish. They go vp to the Seant house.

Enter a Captaine.

Cap. Romanes make way: the good Andronicus,
Patron of Verite, Rome's belt Champion,
Successe fall in the Batteloke that he fights,
With Honour and with Fortune is return'd,
From whence he circumstanced with his Sword,
And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome.

Sound Drummes and Trumpetts. And then enter one of Titus
Sponsors; After them, two men bearing a Coffin covered with blackne, then two other Sponsors. After them, Titus Andronicus, and then Tamora the Queen of Goather, her two Sonnes Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the More, and others, as many as can best: They set down the Coffin, and Titus bodek.

Andronicus. Haille Rome:
Victorious in thy Mourning Weedes.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Alarbus goes to tell, and doth prepare
To tremble with Titus trembling looks,
Then Madam stand resolu'd, I have hope within,
The fife same Gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May favour Tamora the Queen of Gothes,
(When Gothes were Gothes, and Tamara was Queen)
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her feet.

Enter the Sons of Andronicus again.

Luc. See Lord and Father, how we have perform'd
Our Romanie rights, Alarbus limbs are lopt.
And infrails the terriflying fire,
Whoe make like in cence doth perfume the skie,
Remaineth nought but to interre our Brethren,
And with low'd Laurens welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andruckist
Make this his lastest farewell to their foules.
Flourish.

Then sound Trumpets, and say the Coffins in the Tombe,
To peace and Honour: light ye heere my Sonnes,
Romes readingl Champions, repose you in reft,
Secure from wordly chaunces and mishaps:
Heere lurks no treaason, heere no enemie fowl's,
Heere grow no damned grudges, heere are no flomers,
No noyse, but silence and Eternall sleepe.
In peace and Honour reft ye heere my Sonnes.

Enter Lords.

Luc. In peace and Honour, light Lord Titus long,
My Noble Lord and Father, light ye in Fame:
Joe at this Tombe my tributarie teaves,
I render for my Brethrens Officiques:
And at thy feate I kneele, with teares of joy
Said on the earth for thy returne to Rome.
O bleste me heere with thy victorious hand,
whole Fortune Rome's belt Citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome,
That halfe thus loudly refpe'ted
The Cordall of mine age to glad my hart,
Laudius liee, out-liee thy Fathers slaves:
And Fortune doing in the serene prai'se,
Mong. Long liee Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious Triumphet in the eyes of Rome.

Tit. Thankes Gentle Tribune,
Noble brother Marcus.

Mar. And welcome. Nephews from succeffulf wars,
You that furvive and you that sleep in Fame:
Fair Lords you: Fortunes are all alike in all,
That in your Countries service draw your Swords:
But fater Triumph is this Funeral Pomps,
That hath aspire'd to Soleni Happiness,
And Triumphs over chaunc in honour beds.
Tit. Andronicus the people of Rome,
Whole friend in tiffue thou hast earbene,
Send thee by me their Tribune and their truft,
This Parliament of white and speckled Hue,
And name thee in Election for the Empire.
With thee our late deceased Emperours Sonnes:
Be Conditum then, and put it on,
And helpe to fea a head on headlefe Rome.

Tit. A better head her Glorious body fitts,
Then his that makes for age and freebene.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

What should I do this Rube and trouble you, Be enveni with proclamations to day, To morrow yield vp rule, resigne my life, And set abroad new businesse for you all. Rome I have bene thy Souldier forty yeeres, And led my Countreys strenght successfully, And burden one and twenty Valiant Sonnes, Righted in Field, and beaten all the Armies, In righte and Service of their Noble Country : Give me a flaque of Honour for mine age, But not a Scepter to controlle the world, Upvrithe he held it, Lords, that held it left.

Tit. Thou shalt obtaine and ask the Empire. Pris. And ambitious Tribune can it thou tell ?

Tribunes. To gratifie the good Andronicus, And vouchsafe his life returne to Rome, the people will accept whom he admitt.

Tit. Tribunes I thank you, and this sure I make, That you Create your Emperours eldest sonne, Lord Saturnine, whose Vertues will hope, Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rayes on earth, And open Justice in this Common-wealth: Then if you will elect by my advice, Crownem, and say: I long haue our Emperor. More. With Yeare, and applause of every fort, Patricians and Plebeians we Create Lord Saturnine Rome's Great Emperour. And long, Long live our Emperour Saturnine, A long Florish till they come downe.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy Favours done, To win our Election this day, I give thee thanks in part of thy Defects, And will with Deeds require thy beneficence: And for an Other: Titus to advance Thy Name, and Honoroble Famille, Lamnia will I make my Empresse, Rome a Royall Meate, Meats of my hart And in the Sacred Pathan her espoice: Tell me Andronicus doth this motion please thee ?

Tit. It doth worthy Lord, and in this match, Who setteth ever so glorious a Grace, And here in light of Rome, to Saturnine, King and Commander of our Common-wealth, The Wides-worlds Emperour, do I Consecrate, My Sword, my Chariot, and my Piflower, Pletens well Worthy Rome's imperial Lord: Receive them then, the Tribune that I owe, Mine Honour Ensignes tumble at my feete,

Sat. Thanks Noble Titus, Father of my life, How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts

Rome Shall record, and when I do forget

The leafl of these unspokeable Defects, Romans forget your Felicity to me.

Tit. Now Madam are you prisoner to an Emperour, To him that for you Honour and your State, Will give you Nobly and your followers.

Sat. A goodly Lady, trust me of the Hug : That I would choose, were I to choose a new : Cleere vp faire Queene that cloudly countenance, Though chance of warre

Hath wrought this change of cleere, Thou dost not to be made a foraine in Rome: Princely shal be thy voyage every way, Rele on my word, and let out discontent

Dance all your hopes : Madam he comforts you, Can make your Greater than the Queene of Gothes ?

Lamnia you are not displeas'd with this ?

Lam. Not I my Lord, fith true Nobilitie, Writures these words in Princely curtseie.

Tit. Thanks sweete Lamnia, Romans let us see:

Randleliffe here we fixt our Prisoners free,

Proclaime our Honors Lords with Trumpete and Drum, Tit. Lord Titus by your lease, this Maid is mine.

Tit. How far? Are you in earnest then my Lord ?

Bafi. I Noble Titus and revel'd aswhel, To doe my tels this reason, and this right.

Marc. Summa curpers, is our Roman Juberti,

This Prince in Justice exeth but his own.

Lam. And that he will and shal, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traynor auzant, where is the Emperours Guardian ?

Treson my Lord, Lamnia is suppos'd. Lam. Surpris'd, by whose ?

Bafi. By him that ugly may

Bear his Betrach't, from all the world away.

Marc. Brothers helpe to convey her hence away,

And with my Sword I keepe this doore safe.

Tit. Follow my Lord, and Ie sonne her brake.

Mist. My Lord you passe not hence.

Tit. What villaine Boy, be not me my way in Rome ?

Mist. Help me Lucius helpe. He fell him.

Lam. My Lord you are unwise, and more than so,

In wrongfull quarrell, you have shame your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he are any sonnes of mine,

My sonnes would never so dilligent me.

Traynor repaire Lamnia to the Emperour.

Lam. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife,

That is anothers lawfull promist Luci.

Enter aloft the Emperour with Tamora and her two sonnes, and Aaron the Moor.

Empe. No Titus, no the Emperour needs her not, Nor her, nor thee, nor any othly bucke.

Tit. He trust by Leisure him that mocks me once,

Thee neuer: not thy Traynor's hughe sonnes,

Confeders all, thus to dis Honor me.

Was none in Rome to make a title

But Saturnine I fast well Andronicus.

Tit. Agree these Deeds, with that proud bragge of thine,

That said I, I beg'd the Empire as thy hand.

Tit. O monsieurs, what repulschill words are these ?

Sat. But goe thy wayes, goe gieue that changing pece,

To him that flourishes for her with his Sword : A Valiant sonne in law thou shalt enioy.

One, fit to bandy with thy lawlell Sonnes,
To suffice in the Commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are Razors to my wounded hart.

Sat. And therefore loathly Tamora Queen of Gothers, That like the filthy Tethe mong't her Nymphs Doth over-shine the Gallant 'll Dames of R. one, If thou be pleased with this my faffine choyse, Behold I choose thee Tamora for my Bride, And will create thee Empresse of Rome.

Speak Queen of Gothers doth thou applaud my choyse? And here I swear by all the Romaine Gods, Sith Priests and Holy-water are so nere, And Tapers burn so bright, and every thing In realitie of Hypocresy's hand, I will not relaute the streets of Rome, Or clime my Pallace; still from forth this place, I leade espoused my Bride along with me, Tamora. And here in fight of heaven to Rome I swear, If Saturnine advance the Queen of Gothers, She will a hand-maid be to his defires, A loving Nurse, a Mother to his youth.

Sat. Attend faire Queen, Another Lord, accompany Your Noble Empeur and his louey Bride, Sent by the heauens for Prince Saturnine, Whose wife done hath her Fortune Conquered, There shall we Conmunicate our Spoufull rites. Execut. Tam.

Tit. I am not bid to wait on this Bride: Titw when wert thou wont to walk alone, Dishonoured thus and Challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Titus Sonnes.

Mar. O Titus see! I see what thou hast done! In a bad quarrell, slaine a Vertuous sonne.

Tit. No foolish Tribune, no: No sonne of mine, Nor thou, nor stille Confedirates in the deed, That hath dishonoured all our Family, Vvnworthy brother, and vvnworthy Sonnes.

Luc. But let vs give him burial as becomes: Give Magnifitque burial with our Bretheren.

Tit. Traytors away, the rest not in this Tomb: This Monument five hundred yeares hath stood, Which I haue Sumptuously re-edified: Herein none but Souldiers, and Rome Striuors, Repose in Fame: None bafely flame in braves, Burie him where you can, he comes not heere.

Mar. My Lord this is impiery in you, My Nephew Marcus doth depute for him, He must be buried with his bretheren.

Titus two Sonnes speak.

And shall, or him we will accompany. Tit. And shall! What villain was it spake that word? Titus spake speedy.

He that would vouch'd it in any place but heere. Tit. What would you bury him in my delight? Mar. No Noble Titus, but intrest of thee,

To pardon Magnific, and to bury him. Tit. Marcus, be thou hast stroke upon my Cred, And with these buyes mine Honour thou hast wounded, My foes I doe repute you every one, So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

1. Sonne. He is no hynde, let vs withdraw.

2. Sonne. Not I tell Magnific bones be buried.

The Brother and the Sonnes kneele.

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plea'd.
Were gracious in those Princely eyes of thine,
Then heare me speake indifferently for all;
And at my suits (sweet) pardon what is past.

Sau. What Madam, doth dishonour openly,
And basely put it vp without revenge?

Tam. Not to my Lord,
The Gods of Rome for-fend,
I should be Author to dishonour you,
But on mine honour dare, I undertake
For good Lord Titus innocence in all:
Whose fury not disfembled spakes his griefs:
Then at my fote look graciously on him,
Loose not so noble a friend on vaine suppose,
Nor with fower lookes afflict his gentle heart,
My Lord, be rul'd by me, be woman at large,
Dissemble all your griefes and difcontents,
You are but newly planted in your Throne,
Least then the people, and Patricians too,
Upon a just survey take Titus part,
And so supple vs for ingratitude,
Which Rome repuets to be a hairnie finne.
Yeeld at interest, and then let me alone:
He find a day to affarce them all,
And dance their faction and their family,
The cruel Father, and his traytous fones,
To whom I freed for my desire fones life;
And make them know what 'ris to let a Queene,
Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vaine,
Come, come, sweet Emperour, (come Andronicus)
Take vp this good old man, and cheere the heart,
That dies in the weft of an angry frowne.

King. Rite Titus,
My Empeeffe hath preuail'd.

Titus. I thank you Maifteff,
And her my Lord.
These words, thefe lookes,
Infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Peaon now adopted in your family,
And must advise the Emperour for his good,
This day all quarrel is Andronicus,
And let it be mine honour good my Lord,
That I have reconnoitred your friends and you.
For your Prince Belli-fawn, I haue paff
My word and promise to the Emperour,
That you will be more mild and tractable.
And feare not Lords:
And you Launia,
By your affiftance I am humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of my Maifteff,
Sen. We doe,
And vow to heare, and to his Highnes,
That what we did, was milde, as we might,
Tenning our fifters honour and our owne.
Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

King. Away and talk not, trouble vs no more.
Tamora. Nay, nay,
Sweet Emperour, we affift all be friends,
The Tribune and his Nephews kneele for grace,
I will not be denied, focus hart look back.

King. Marcel. For thy take and thy brothers heere,
And at my lately Tamora's interest,
I doe remit these young men hyaious faults.

Tamora. Though you left me like a childe,
I found a friend, and fure en death I Sawer.

I would not part a Batchellour from the Priest.
Come, if the Emperours Court can part two Brides,
You are my gentle Lamini, and your friends:
This day shal be a Loue-day Tamora's.

Tit. To morrow and it pleafe your Maieffe,
To hunt the Panter and the Hart with me,
With hore and Hound.

Weele give your Grace Box inuer.

"Sau. Be it to Titus, and Gramercy to."

Exit.

Actus Secunda.

Flourish.
Enter Aaron alone.

Aaron. Now climbeth Tamora Olympos coppe,
Safe out of Fortunes foal, and fits aloft,
Secure of Thunders cracke or lightning flash,
Advanc'd about pale enuies Threatening reach:
As when the goldes nekke faultes the mones,
And having gift of the Ocean with his beames,
Gallops the Zodiacke in his glittering Coach,
And oute lookes the hight piercing hills:

Sau. (To Tamora) Upon her wit doth earthly honour waite,
And vertue toopest and trembles at her frowne.
Then Aaron name thy hart, and fit thy thoughtes,
To mount aloft with thy Empeffiall Miftifs,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Halt prisoner held, fetted in amorous chains,
And fafher bound to Aaron charming eyes,
Then is Prometheus ti'd to Caemus,
Away with flauifh weeder, and idle thoughtes,
I will be bright and shine in Pearle and Gold,
To waite upon this new made Empeff.te,
To waite said I To wanon with this Queene,
This Goddesse, this Sempronius, this Queene,
This Syren, that will charme Rome Saturne,
And see his shipwacke, and his Common weale.
Hallo, what firme is this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrious bragging.

Dem. Chiron thy yeares wants, why thy winters edge
And manner to intro'd where I am gaide,
And may fo ought thou know'st affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost not ouer-weene in all,
And in this, to bestre me downe with brauer,
'Tis not the difference of a yeere or two
Makes me leffe gracious, or thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To fere, and to deftrie my Miftirs grace,
And that my fond vpon thee shall approue,
And plea for my patrons for Lamina's loue.

Aron. Clubs, clubs, these louers will not keep the peace.

Dem. WhyBoy, although our mother (teumedifed)
Gave you a daunffing Rapier by your side,
Are you so defperate growne to threat your friends?
Give too, have you thy Lath gled within thy sheathe,
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meane while fit, with the little skill I have,
Full well that thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. I boy, grow ye fo braue e
They drawe.

Aron. Why how now Lords?
So nere the Emperours Palace date you draw,
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

And mainaine such a quarrell openly?
Full well I wote, the ground of all this grudge,
I would not for a million of Gold,
The cause were knowne to them it most concerns.
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonored in the Court of Rome:
For frame put on.

Dem. Not I, till I have breath'd,
My rapiere in his bosome, and withall
Thrust these reprochfull speecches downe his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd, and full resolv'd,
Foul spotten Coward,
That thunderd with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing daft performe.

Arms. A way I say.

Now by the Gods that wateke Gothes adore,
This pretty brabbile will vado vs all:
Why Lords, and thinke you not how dangerous
It is to let upon a Princes right?
What is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Basianus do degenerate.
That for her love such quarrells may be brotch,
Without controulment, justice, or reuenuego?
Young Lords be ware, and shoulde the Empereor know,
This disord ground, the muckle would not plete.

Chi. I care not, I knew thee, and all the world,
I loose Lavinia more then all the world.

Dem. Youngling.

Learn thou to make some meaner choyce,
Lavinia is thine elder brothers hope.

Arms. Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome,
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brooke Competitors in love?
I tell you Lords, you dare not plot your deaths,
By this deuise.

Arms. And thou hast seen thousand and deaths would I propoese,
To architeste whom I do love.

Arms. To architeste her, how?

Dem. Why, in'th' thou is it strange?
Shee is a woman, therefore may be wood'd,
Shee is a womans herte may be wronge,
Shee is Lavinia therefore must be loud.
Where in, more water glisteth by the Mill
Then worst the Miller of, and eate is it
Of a cutt loose to fleaste a shyn we knowe
Though Basianus be the Emperour brother,
Better then hee haue worne Valescau badge.

Arms. I, and as good as Saturnus may.

Dem. Then why should he dispaire that knowes to
With words, faire looks, and liberality: (court it)
What hath not thou full often strikke a Doe,
And borne her cleanly by the Keepers note?

Arms. Why then it strength some certaine snatch or so
Would sure your turnes.

Chi. I to the turne were fustred.

Dem. Armes thou hast hit it.

Arms. Would you had hit it too,
Then should not we be in't with this ado:
Why harke ye, harke ye, and are you fuch foole,
To quere for this? Would it offend you then?

Chi. Faith not me.

Dem. Not me,fo I were one,
Armes. For shame be fRIENDS, &dneye for that you say:
'Tis policy, and strategem must doe
That you affect, and so much you refuse,

That what that cannot as you would architese,
You must perforce accomplishe as you may:
Take this of me, Valescau was not more chaste
Then this Lavinia, Basianus love,
A speedier courtext this inglorious languishing
Mutt we purifie, and I haue found the path:
My Lords, a folome hunting is in hand,
There will the lowly Roman Ladies troope:
The Forrest walkes are wide and spacious,
And many unquieten plots there are,
Fitted by kind to rape and villanies:
Single you therfe then this dainty Doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way or no stail, stand you in hope.

Dem. Why then the course full of tongue, of eyes, of ears:
The woods are ruthefull, dreadful, pleas, and dull:
There speake, and strike theu Boyes, & take your turnes.
These ferue your lufts, shafeld from heavens eye,
And resell in Lavinia's treasure.

Chi. Thy countell Ladimes of no cowardise,

Dem. Say'st our resait, till I finde the armes,
To coate this hole, a Charme to calmie their fits,
Per St?g?per m受e fecur.

Enter Titus Andronicus and his three sons, making a noyse with hounds and horses, and Marcus,

Tit. The hunt is vp, the morn is bright and gray,
The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green,
Come on, our emperour with his band, and let us make a joy:
And wake the Emperor, and his lovely Bride,
And rouze the Prince, and sing a hunters pesel,
That all the Court may echo with the noyse.
Sonnes let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours person carefully:
I have bene troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Winds Harmer.

Herea a cry of hounds, and wince: harnes in a peale, then
Enter Sarastro, Tamora, Basianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrowes to your Maiestyes,

Madam to you as many and as good,
I promised your Grace, a Hunters pesel.
Satur. And you haue rung it lustly my Lords,
Somewhat to cere for new married Ladies.

Balf. Lavinia, how say you?

Lain. I say no:
I have bene awake two houres and more.
Satur. Come on then, horse and chariots letvs haue,
And so our spott, Madam, now shall ye see,
Our Roman hunting.

Mar. I haue dogged my Lord,
Will rouze the pridefull Panther in the Chase,
And clime the highest Pommont top.

Tit. And I haue horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and runnes lies Swallowes ope the plane

The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus

Dem. Choose we hunt not we, with Horie nor Hound, But hope to please a darling Doe to ground, Exeunt Ares alone.

Ares. He that hath win, would thinke that I had none, To buy so much Gold under 3 Trees, And never after to inherit it. Let him that thinks of me for truly, Know that this Gold must come a strawegene, Which cunningly effected will begyn

A very excelent piece of many, And to repose sweet Gold for their smelt, That have their Almes out of the Empyrean Chest. Enter Tamora to the Moore.

Tamora. My louly Ares, Wherefore look'nt thou sad, When every thing doth make a Glickfull bosom? The Birds chant melody on every bush, The Snake lies rolled in the cheerfull Sunne, The greene leaves quiner with the cooling winde, And make a chekfull gladness on the ground: Under their favorable shade, Ares lies visis, And whilst the babling Echo moweth the Hounds, Replying sillyly to the well undes-Homes, As if a double hunt were had at once, Let vs sit downe, and make their yelping noyse: And after contention, such as was supposed. The wandring Prince and Dido once entred, When with a happy home they were surpris'd, And under a Counting-house keeping Care, We may each threaten in the others armes, (Our palest done) possete a Golden stumper, Whites Hounds and Horses, and sweet Melodious Birds Be not vs, as is a Natures Song Of Lullable, to bring her Babe asleep. Enter. Madame, Though Fecund gourette your desires, Saturne is Dominor over mine: What signifies my deadly standing eye, My silence, and my Cloudy Melancholy, My fleece of Woolly hair, that now vuncures, Even as an Adder: when the doth know you To do some fatal execution?

No Madame, these are no Veneriall signes, Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand, Blood, and revenge, are Hymning in my head. Hatke Tamora, the Empresse of my Soule, Which never hopes more heauen, then reft in thee, This is the day of Doome for Baffianus; His Philomel must knowe her tongue to day, Thy Sonnes make Pillage of her Chastity, And wash their hands in Baffianus blood. Seest thou this Letter, take it vp I pray thee, And gue the King this fatal plotted Scrowle, Now question me no more, we are eipled, Here comes a parcell of our hopefull Booty, Which dreads not yet their lives destrucion.

Enter Baffianus and Lucinius.

Tamora. Ay my sweete Moors: sweeter to me then life.

Ares. No more great Empresse, Baffianus comes, Be eipled with him, and hee goe fetch thy Sonnes To backe thy quarella what so ever they be.

Baff. When thou we hear heere? Rome's Royall Empresse, Vnturned of our well beleeving troope; Or is it Dion habited like her, Who hath abandoned her holy Graces, To see the general Hunting in this Forrest?

Tamora. Swaile contrower of our proulse resps: Had I the power, that some say Dion had, Thy Temples should be planted pretty, With Horse, as was Alcione, and the Hounds Should drue uppon his new transformed Limbes, Vnmeanerly intrudes as thou.

Lau. Under your patience gentle Empresse, Twas thought you had a goodly gift in Horning, And to be doubted, that your Moere and you Are fagled forth to try experiments: See if the husband from his Hounds to day, Tir pitty they should take him for a Star.

Baff. Believe me Queen, your swarth Cymeron, Doth make your Honour of his bodie Hure, Spotted, detected, and abominate. Why are you suspected from all your traine? DIScounted from your Snow-white goody Streed, And wunder'd bittier to an obscure plot. Accompanied with a barbarous Moere, It louke desire had not condued you?

Lau. And being interred in your sport, Great reason that my Noble Lord, be rated For Scape thine, I pray you let vs hence, And let her joy her blood coloured eare, This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Baff. The King my Brother shall have notice of this. Lau. I for these flaps have made him noted long, Good King, to be so mightfully abused.

Tamora. Why I have patience to endure all this? Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now dure Soueraigne And our gracious Mother, Why dost your Highnesse look so pale and wan?

Tamora. Haue I not reaon thinke you to looke pale. These two haue tie'd me hither to this place, A bam, deserted vale you see it is. The Trees though Sommer,yet forborne and leave, One-come with Mosse, and batefull Miehleto. Heere neues thines the Sunne,heere nothing breedes, Valerie the nightly Ombr, or fatal Raynes. And when they saw'd me this abhorred pit, They told me here at dead time of the night, A thousand Friends, a thousand bussing Snakes, Ten thousand swelling Toades, as many Vorchett, Would make such fearfull and confused cries, As any mortal body hearing it, Should strait fall mad, or eile die suddenly. No sooner had they told this herelish tale, But strait they told me they would bind me heere, Vuto the body of a dismall yew, And leue me to this miserable death. And then they call'd me solee Adulterresse, I aciousious Github, and all the biterell teares That ever care did heare to such effect, And had you nor by wondrous fortune come, This vengeance on me had they executed: Reuenge it, as you love your Mothers life, Or be ye not henceforth call'd my Children.

Dem. This is a wittence that I am thy Sonne. Sub him. Oh. And this for me, Strook home to shew my strength.

Lau. I come Somer-somay Barbarous Tamora.

653
For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

TAM. Give me this toy, servitor, that shall know my boyes.
Your Mothers hand shall right your Mothers wrong.

DEMO. Stay Madam here, it is more belongs to her,
Fifth thrall the Corne, then burnt the straw:
This Minion fond upon her chaff, fond,
Vpon her Nipsall vow, her loyale,
And with that painted hope, braves your Mightineffe,
And shall fill this troy into her grave?

CHI. And if it fit the doe,
I would I were an Eunuch,
Drag then her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead Trunkc Pillow to our lust.

TAM. But when ye have the hony we define,
Not this Wapte out-lung vs both to sting:

CHI. I warrant you Madam we will make that fure:
Come Miltons, now perforce we will enjoy,
That nice-prefered honest of yours,

LAM. Oh Tamur, thou beart a woman face.

TAM. I will not hear her speak, away with her.

LAM. Sweet Lords interest her hear me but a word.

DEMO. Litten fair Madam, let it by your glory
To see her teares, but be your hart to them,
As reverencing lift to drops of rain.

LAM. When did the mighty young one's first reach the dam?
O doe not learn her wrath, she taught it thee,
The milke thou sucke from her did turne to Marble,
Euen at thy Text thou had it thy Tyranny,
Yet every Mother breeds not Sons alike,
Do thou interest her fawn a woman pretty.

CHI. What,
Wouldst thou have me prove my selfe a bastard?

LAM. 'Tis tru,
The Raun doth not hatch a Lark,
Yet haue I heard, Oh could I finde it now,
The Lion moud with pitty, did indure
To haue his Prince paies pard all away.

LAM. But some fay, that Raunes foster forsome children,
The which if their owne birds famih in their neifs:
Oh be to me then thy hard hart stay no,
Nothing but kind but something pitsfull.

TAM. I know not what it means away with her.

LAM. Oblect me teach thee for my Fathers fake
That gane that life when well he might haue flaine thee:
Be not obdurate, open thy deare cares.

TAM. Had it theon in perion more offended me.

LAM. Even for his fake am | picture.
Remember boyes I gendar forth teares in vain,
I to ease your brother from the fatiche,
But fierce Andronicus would not relent,
Therefore away with her, and vfe her as you will,
The worfe to her, the better love of me.

LAM. Oh Tamara,
Be call d a gentle Queenes,
And with thine owne hands slay me in this place,
For this is not fat: I have begg'd to long,
Poor I was shaine, when Bajfamuays dy'd,
TAM. What begg'd thou then? fand woman let me go?

LAM. I prays the present death I beg, and one thing more,
That woman said denies my tongue to tell:
Oh keep me from their worfe then killing lust,
And tumble me into some lossthorne pit,
Where never mans eye may behold my body,
Doe this, and be a charitabe murderer.

TAM. So shold I rob my sweet Sonnes of their fee,
No let them falsifie their part on thee,

DEMO. Away,
For thou hast fluid vs here too long.

LAM. No Garace,
No womanhood? Ah besently creature,
The blit and enemy to our general name,
Confusion fall.

CHI. Nay then Ile flop your mouth
Bring thou her husbands,
This is the hole where Aaron bid vs hide him.

TAM. Farewel my Sonnes, fee that you make her fure,
Nece let my heart know merry cheere indeed,
Till all the Andronicus be made away:
Now will I hence to seeke my lonely More,
And let my spleenfull Sonnes this Trull defloure. Exit.

Enter Aaron with two of Titus Sonnes.

ARON. Come on my Lords, the better foon before,
Straight I will bring you to the lostlie flight pit,
Where I espied the Panther full allepe.

QUIN. My fity is very dull what e'er it beades.

MART. And mine I proue you, were it not for flame,
Well coulde I leave our sport to sleepe a while.

QUIN. What art thou fallen?

Wine fabule hole is this,
Whose mouth is covered with Rude growing Briers,
Vpon whose leaves are dapples of new-sheed-blood,
As freth as mornings dew duffild on flowers,
A very fatall place it fentes to me:
Speke Brothe falt thou fure with thee with the fall?

MART. Oh Brothe,
With the defatate object
This eye with a right mad heart lament:

ARON. Now will I fetch the King to finde them heare,
That he thereby may have a likely geffe,
Howe there they that made away his Brother.

Exit ARON.

MART. Why doft not comfort me and help me out,
From this vnshallow'd and blood-stained hole?

QUIN. I am surpris'd with an uncooche fcar.
A chilling fconce ore-truus my trembling pyrnes,
My heart fuipled more then mine eie can fee.

MART. To proue thou haft a true druing heart,
Aaron and thou looke downe into this den,
And fee a fairefull fght of blood and death.

QUIN. Aaron is gone,
And my comfoffionate heart
Will not permit mine eies once to behold
The thing where as it trembles by furnice:
Oh tell me how it is, for nere till now
Was I a child or faire I know not what.

MART. Lord Bajfamuay liet embrued here,
All on a beape like the liughtered Lambe,
In this delfeted, darke,blood-drinking pit.

QUIN. If it be darke, how do you thon knouw his he?

MART. Vpon his bloody finger he doth weeke
A precious Ring, that lightens all the hole:
Which like a Taper in some Monument,
Doth thine vspon the dead mans earthly cheeks,
And flinges the ragged intraines of the pit:
So pale did shine the Moone on Piramum,
When he by night lay bath'd in Maiden b lood;
O Brothe helpe me with thy faining hand.
If feare hath made thee faint, as mee it hath,
Out of this fell devouring recepacle,
As hateful as Orcus miste mouth.

QUIN. Reach me thy hand, that I may helpe thee out,
Or wanting strength to doe thee so much good,
I may be pluckt into the allowing wome,
Or this deep pit; poore Bajfianus grace:
I have no strength to plucke thee to the brinkes.
Martius. Nor I no strength to cliime without thy help.
Queen. Thy hand once more, I will not lose againe,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below,
Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee. Death fall in.

Enter the Emperour, Aaron the Moor.

Sawr. Along with me, I see what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leapt into.
Say, who art thou that lately did defend,
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Martus. The vnhappy sonne of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most vnkuicke houre,
To finde thy brother Bajfianus dead,
Sawr. My brother dead? I know thou dost cut left,
He and his Lady both are at the Lodge,
When in the North-side of this pleasant Chafe,
'Tis not an houre since I left him here.
Martus. We know not where you left him all alie,
But out alas, here have we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lucretia.

Tam. Where is my Lord the King?
King. Here. Tamora, though grieu'd with killing griefe,
Tam. Where is thy brother Bajfianus dead?
King. Now to the bottome dooth thou search my wound,
Poore Bajfianus here lies murthered.
Tam. Then all too lare I bring this fatal wrire,
The complot of this timelife Tragedie,
And wonder greatly that mans face can fold,
In pleasing faults such murderous Tyrannie.
She ginsch Saturninus a Letter.

Saturninus reads the Letter.

And if we might to meete hum banfully,
Sweet huntsman, Bajfianus 'tis we meane,
Doe thou'so much as dig the grave for him,
Then know by our meaning, looke for thy reward.
Among the Nestles at the Elder tree:
Which that our house the mouth of that same pit:
Where we decreed to bury Bajfianus.
Doe this and purchase vs thy lying friends.

King. Oh Tamora, was euer heard the like?
This is the pin, and this the Elder tree,
Looke first, if you can finde the huntsman out.
That should have murthered Bajfianus here.
Aaron. My gracious Lord heere is the bag of Gold.
King. Two of thy whelpes, fell Curs of bloody kind
Have heere bereft my brother of his life:
Sirs drag them from the pit unto the prison,
There let them bide unill we have decreid,
Some neuer hear'd of torturing paine for them.
Tam. What are they in this pit,
Oh wondrous thing!
How easly sinners is discovered?
Tit. High Empeour, vpon my feeble knee,
Ib eg this boone, with tears, not lightly flie,
That this fell fault of my accursed Sonnes,
Accursed, if the faultis be proud in them.
King. If he be proud if you feit it is apparant,
Who found this Letter, Tamora was it you?
Tamora. Andronicus himselfe did take it vp.
Tit. I did my Lord,
Yet let me be their baile,
For by my Fathers reverent Tomb I vow
They shall be ready at your Highnes will,
To answere their fupposition with their liues.
King. Thou shalt not baile them, see thou follow me:
Some bring the murthered body, done the murtherers,
Let them not speake a word, the guilt is plaine,
For by my foule, were there worse end then death,
That end upon them should be executed,
Titus, Andronicus I will entreat the King,
Fare not thy Sonnes, they shall do well enough.
Tit. Come Lucina come,
Stay not to take with them.

Enter the Emprefs Sonnes, with Lucinia her hands cut of and her tongue cut out, and ran fow.

Dems. So now goe tell and if thy tongue can speake,
Who t was that cut thy tongue and rauffte thee.
Ch. Write downe thy mind, bewray thy meaning fo,
And if thy stumpes will let thee play the Scribe.
Dem. See how with fignes and tokens thee can fowle.
Ch. Goe home,
Call for sweet water, wah thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to waft.
And fo let's loose her to her filent walks.
Ch. And t were my caufe, I should goe hang my felle.
Dem. If thou hadt hands to heape thee the cord.

Enter Marcia from humbling to Lucretia.

Who is this, my Neeze that flies away to fall?
Coven a word, where is your husband?
If I do dreame, would all my wealth would wake me;
If I doe wake, some Planet strike me downe,
That I may lumbre in eternall sleepe.
Speake gentle Neeze, what faire gentle hands,
Hath loppt, and heu'd, and made thy body bare.
Of her two branches, those fweet Ornaments
Whose cirkling flades, Kings have fought to sleep in,
And might not gaue so great a Happine.
As haste thy Loue: Why doth not speake to me?
Alas, a Crimson rivers of warme blood,
Like to a bubbling fountaine flid with winde,
Doth rule and tall betwixte thy Rofed lps,
Comming and going with thy Honey breath.
But fore some terrow hath defcorde thee,
And leaft thou shoulde decte them, cut thy tongue.
Ah now thou turn't away thy face for shame;
And now withstanding all this losse of blood,
As from a Conduit with their iffuing Spouts,
Yet doe thy cheekes looke red as Titans face,
Blushing to be encountered with a Cloud,
Shall I speake for thee? Shall I fay thy so?
Oh that I knew thy hart, and knew the breaf,
That I might rule at him to ease my minde.
Sorrow conuerted, like an Ouen ftept,
Doth burne the hart to Cinders where it is.
Faire Whitewate fire but loth her tongue,
And in a tediousSampler fowde her minde.
But lonely Neeze, that meanes is cut from thee,
A crattier Terrow haft thou met withall,
And he hath cutthose pretty fingers off,

II. iii. 238—II. iv. 42
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Enter the Judges and Senators with Titus two scenes bound, palling on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titus going, before pleading.

Ti. Hear me base fathers, noble Tribunes stay, For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent In dangerous wars, whilst I securely slept: For all my blood in Rome, great quarrell fled, And for all the frothy nights that I have watcht, And for these bitter tears which now ye see, Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks, Be pitiful to my condemned Sonnes. Who soeulnes is not corrupted as'tis thought: For two and twenty sonnes I neuer wept, Because they died in honours lofty bed. Andronicus yield durance, and the Judges passe by him. For these, Tribunes, in the dust I write My harts deepse languor, and my soules sad teares: Let my teares (stand the earths driest appetite. My sonnes sweet blood, will make it thame and blushing: O earth! I will be friend thee more with rain, Exeunt That shall distill from these two ancient rooses, Then youthfull! Aprill shall with all his showres In fanners drought: He drop vp on thee still, In Winter with warme teares: He melt the snow, And keepeth everall springe time on thy face, So thou refuseth to drinke my deare sonnes blood.

Enter Lucius, with his weapons drawnne.

Oh reverent Tribunes, oh gentle aged men, Vnbine my sonnes, reverence the doome of death, And let me say (that me not weare before my teares are now prevailing Oracours. Lu. In noble father, you lament in vaine, The Tribunes in are not, no man is by, And you recount your forrowes to a three. Ti. Al Lucius for thy brothers let me plead, Graue Tribunes, once more I intrest of you. Lu. My gracious Lord, no Tribune heares you speake. Ti. Why tis no matter man, ifthey did hear They would not marke mee oh if they did heare They would not pitty me. Therefore I tell my forrowes bootes to the flores. Who through they cannot answere my diffire, Yet in some fort they are better then the Tribunes, For that they will not intercept my speake. When I doe wepe, they humbly at my feate Receive my teares, and feeme to wepe with me, And were they but stilled in grave weedes, Rome could afford no Tribune like to thele, A flore is as soft waxe, Tribunes more hard then flores: Aftone is silent, and offender noth, And Tribunes with their tongues doome men to death. But wherefore fandle thow with thy weapon drawnne? Lu. To rescue my two brothers from there death, For which attempt the Judges have pronoune It my euerlastinge doome of banishement. Ti. 0 happy man, they have behelde thee: Why foolish Lucius, daft thou not perceiue That Rome is but a wildernes of Tigers? Tigers mull pray, and Rome affords no prey But me and mine: how happy art thou then, From these deuouers to be banishd? But who comes with our brother Marcus here? Exeunt

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Tiue, prepare thy noble eyes to wepe, Or if not fo, thy noble heart to breake: I bring consuming forrow to thine age. Ti. Will it consume me? Let me fee it then. Mar. This was thy daughter. Ti. Why Marcus to thee. Lu. Ay, me this object kill me. Ti. O fairest formes of art and love and offer her, Speak Lavinia, what accursed hand Hath made thee this base deface in thy Fathers sight? What foole hath added water to the Sea? Or brought a faggot to bright burning Troy? My griete was at the height before thou camst, And now like Nyctis it did sixth bounds: Cisse me a sword, Ile chop off my hands too, For they have foughed for Rome, and all in vaine: And they have madst this woe, In feeding life: In bootelesse prayer have they bane held vp, And they bave serued me to erectlesse vie, Now all the feruice I require of them, Is that the one will help to cut the other: Tiis well Lavinia, that thou haue not hands, For hands to do Rome feruice, is but vaine. Lu. Speak gentle sister, who hath marst'y'd thee? Mar. O that delectfull engine of her thoughts, That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence, Is come from forth that pretty hollow cage, Where like a sweet melodioe bird it sung, Sweet varied notes enchanting every ear. Lu. Oh say thou for her, Who hath done this deed? Mar. Oh thus I found her straying in the Parke, Seeking to hide her selfe as doth the Deare That had receiued some vnrectuous wound. Ti. It was my Deare, And he that wounded her. Hath brest mee more, then had he killd mee dead: For now I stand as one upon a Rocke, Inuiron'd with a wildernes of Sea. Who marke the waxing tide, Growe wauie, wauie.
Expecting ever when some envious surge,
Will in his breaths bowls swallow him.
This way to death my wretched fanny are gone:
I leave lands my other fanny, a bountiful man,
And leave my brother weeping at my woes.
But that which gives me life the greatest spurned,
Is death, dearer then my soul.
I had but leave thy picture in this plight,
It would have maddened me. What shall I see then?
Now I behold thy lively body so.
Thus hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,
Not tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee: Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd and dead by this.
Look, Marcus, oh fanny, look on her:
When I did name her brothers, then freth teares
Stood on her cheekes as drops the dew,
Upon a gathered Lillie almost wither'd,
Let chance these weepes because they kild her husband,
Perchance because she knows him innocent.
Thus if they did kill thy husband then joyfull,
Because the law hath time requeng on them.
Now no, they would not doe to foule a deede,
Witness the sorrow that their fitter makes.
Gentle Lullia let me kiffe thy lips,
Or make some signes how I may do thee ease:
Shall thy good Vnde, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou and I fit round about some Founaigne,
Looking all downwards to behold our cheeks.
Now they are fluid in dewes, yet not dry
With merry flime left on them by a flood:
And in the Founaigne shall we gaze for long,
Till the freth teale be taken from that cleereen,
And make a brine pit with our bitter teares? or shall we cut away our hands like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumber flows,
Palle the remainder of our base full days?
What shall we doe? let us haue our tongues,
Plot some deuice of further miseries
To make vs wondred in a time to come.
Ll. Sweet Father cease your teares, for at your griefe
See how my wretched fitter fobs and weeps,
Marc. Patience deere Niece, good Titus drie thine eyes:
Ah Marcus, Marcus, Brother well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot dry a teare of mine;
For thou poore man haft drownd it with thine owne.
Ah, ah my Lullia I will wipe thy cheeks.
Ah Marcus marke, I understand her signes,
Had the a tongue to speake, now would the say
That to her brother which I said to thee,
His Napkin with herne teares all bewet,
Can do no feruice on her forrowfull cheeks.
Oh what a sympathy of woe is this!
As farre from helpe as Limbo is from blisse,
Enter Aaron the Moore alone.
More. Titus Andronicus, my Lord the Emperor,
Send this the word, that if thou love thy fannes,
Let Marcus, Lucius or thy selfe old Titi,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And lend it to the King, he for the fame,
Will fend thee bitter both thy fannes alike,
And that shall be the comfitome for their fault.

To. Oh gracious Emperour, oh gentle Aaron,
Did ever Rauen sing so like a Larks,
That gies sweet sydings of the Sunnes vphere?
With all my heart, he fend the Emperour my hand,
Good Aaron wilt thou help to chop it off?
Lu. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrownne downe to so many enemies,
Shall not be lent: my hand will ferue the turne,
My youth can better spare my blood then you,
And therefore mine shall faue my brothers liues.
Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And read\'d aloft the bloody Bataile,
Writing destruction on the enemies Castle?
Of none of both but are of high defers:
My hand hath bin but idle, let it loose,
To ransom my two nephews from their death,
Then haue I kept it to a worthy end,
More. Nay come agree, whole hand shall goe along
For feare they die before their pardon come.
Marc. My hand shall goe.
Lu. By heauen it shall not goe.
Ti. Siths thine no more, faire wavered hearts as these Are meere for plucking vp, and therefore mine.
Lu. Sweet Father, if I shall be thought thy fonne,
Let me redeeme my brothers both from death.
Marc. And for our fathers sake, and mothers care,
Now let me shew a brothres loue to thee.
Ti. Agree betweene you, I will spare my hand.
Lu. Then Ile goe fetch an Axe.
Marc. But I will weare the Axe.
Ente. Come hither Aaron, lie decrees them both,
Lend me thy hand, and I will guide thee mine.
More. If that he call decies, I will be lonesl,
And never whil I be more decies them io:
But lie decrees you in another fort,
And that you I say ere halfe a houre passe.
He cuts off Titus hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus again.
To. Now flay you flirite, what shall be the dispatch?
Good Aaron giue his Malielie me hand,
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it:
More hast it merited: That let it haue.
As for for my fones, say I account of them,
As jewels purchasht at an easie price,
And yet decier too, because I bought mine owne,
Aaron. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand,
Looke by and by to haue thy fones with thee:
Their heads I meane: Oh bowt this villany
Both fat me with the very thoughts of it.
Let foules doe good, and faire men call for grace,
Aaron will have his foule bluckle like his face.

Exit.
To. There Ieere I lift this one hand vp to heauen,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth,
If any power pitities wretched teares,
To that I call; what with thou kneale with me?
Do then deere heart, for heaven shall heare our prayers,
Or with our fighges weble breath the welkin dinne,
And raise the Sun with fogge as sometimee cloudes,
When they do bug him in their melting boomes.
Marc. Oh brother speake with positivities,
And doe not breake into these deepe extremes.
To. Is not my sorrow deep, hauing no bottome?
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason gouthe my thre lament.

Titus. If there were reason for these miseries,

Then into limits could I binde my woes:

When heaued doth worpe, doth not the sea oncflowe?

If the windes rage, doth not the Sea wax mad,

Threatning the weeping welkin with his biglowne face?

And wilt thou have a reason for this coile?

I am the Sea. Haue howe her fighes doe flowe:

Shee is the weeping welkin, I the earth:

Then mort my Sea be moued with her fighes,

Then mort my earth with her continuall tears,

Become a deluge: ouerflow'd and drown'd:

For why? my bowels cannot hide her woest,

But like a drunken muff I vomit them:

Then giue me leave, for looers will have leave,

To ease their flamakes with their bitter tongues,

Enter a messenger with two beads and a hand,

Meant. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid,

For that good hand thou sentst the Empourer.

Here are the heads of thy two noble sones.

And hearst thy hand in scorne to thee sentt backe:

Thy griefs, their spoiers: Thy resolution movet,

That woest is me to thinke upon thy woes,

More then remembrance of my fathers death.

Marc. Now let hot Aema coole in Creuthe,

And be my heart an eues-burning bell:

These miseries are more then may be borne.

To weep with them that weeppe, doth safe some deale,

But forrow flouted at, is double death.

Luc. Ah that this fight shoulde make so deep a wound,

And yet deceased late not shrinke thereat:

That euer death shoulde let life beare his name,

Where life hath no more interest but to breath.

Marc. Alas poore hart that liking comfortlesse,

As frozen water to a frozen lake,

Titus. When will this fearfull flumber haste an end?

Marc. Now fastwell sttace, die Andronicus,

Thou dost not flumber, see they two sons head,

Thy weake hands, thy mangled daughter here:

Thy other bastin founnes with this deicide figh

Strucke pale and bloodlesse, and thy brother I,

Euen like a soory Image, cold and numere.

Ah my more woe will I contresse my griefe,

Rest off thy thunty bars, thy other hand,

Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dimmall figh

The closing vp of our most wretched eyes:

Now is a time to fowre, why art thou fall?

Titus. Ha, ha, ha,

Marc. Why doth thou laugh it hits not with this house.

Tit. Why I have nor another teare to flide:

Befide, this sorrow is an enemy,

And would vince upon my warty eyes,

And make them blinde with tributary teares,

Then which way shall I finde Reuenges Cae?

For these two heads doe seeme to speake to me,

And threat me, I shall never come to blisse,

Till all these em中级ies be returned againe,

Euen in their threats that have commited them.

Come let me see what taske I have to doe,

You bextre people, circle me about,

That I may turne me to each one of you,

And sweare vnto my soule to right your wrongs.

The vow is made, come Brother take a head,

And in this hand the other will I beare.

And Lavinia shalke be employd in these things:

Bare thoy my hand sweet wench between thy teeth:

As for thee boy, goe get thee from my fight,

Thou art an Exile, and thou must not stye,

Hie to the Gothes, and raise an army there,

And if thou love me, as I thinkc thee doe,

Let's kiffe and part, for we have much to doe.

Exit.

Marc. Lavinia.

Luc. Farewell Andronicus my noble Father:

The woudf it man that euer had in Rome:

Farewell proud Rome, till Lavinia come againe,

Heloues his pledges dearer then his life:

Farewell Lavinia my noble siter,

O would thou wert as thou to fore haft bene,

But now, nor Lavinia nor Lavinia lives

But in obliation and hateful griefes:

If Lucinas love, he will requite thy wronges,

And make proud Saturnine and his Empoirlc

Bes the gates like Tarpeyes and his Queen,

Now will I to the Gothes and raise a power,

To be recueng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

Exit Lucius.

A Banket.

Enter Andronicus, Marcius, Lavinia, and the Boy.

Marc. So now, so now, and locke you easte no more.

We shall preferne in luft so much through mus

As will renounce these bitter woes of ours.

Marcius vouch that yourow wearthen knot:

Thy Neece and I (poore Creatures) want our hands,

And cannot passionate our tenfold grate,

With fooded Armes. This poore right hand of mine,

Is left to stirrize upon my breast,

Who when my hart oldned with inuy,

Bears in this hollow proude of my Bith,

Then thust I thump it downe.

Thom Map of war, that thus doth talk in signes,

When thy poore hart beatest without ragious beatinge,

Thou canst not make this to make it fell:

Wouned is fighing guyle, hate with stones:

Or get me a little knife betweene thy teeth,

And infl against thy hart make more than a hole,

That all the teares that thy poore eyes let fall

May runne into that fiske, and soakinge in,

Drowne the lamenting foule, in sea salt teares.

Mar. By brother fy, teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

An. How now! I hast voorow made thee doste already?

Why Marcius, no man should be bad but I,

What violent hands can she lay on her life:

Ah, wherefore doth thou vide the name of hands,

To bid Anceus tell the tale twice oer

How Troy was burnt, and he made miferable

O handle not the thame, to talke of hands,

Leat we remembre full that we have none,

Fie, fie, how Fraquently I sute my talke

As if we should forget we had no hands:

If Marcius did not name the word of hands,

Come, let us fall too, and gentle girlie ets this,

Hicrte is no drinke? Harke Marcius what she faire,

I can interpret all her marris'd signes,

She faire, she drinke no other drinke but teares

Bread with her forrow: meeth'd upon her cheeks,

Speech.

43

Speechlesse complaynet, I will leaue thy thoughts:—
In thy dumb action, will I be as perfect
As begging Hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou shalt not fighte nor hold thy thumps to heaven,
Nor winke, nor nod, nor kneele, nor make a signe;
But (if thee) will wretche an Alphabet,
And by still practice, learn to know thy meaning.

Bor. Good grandfoire, leave these bitter deep sorrow,
Make my Aunt merry, with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas, the tender boy in passion mord'd,
Doth weed to see his grandfathers heauneffe.

An. Peace tender Sapling, thou art made of teares,
And teares will quickly melt thy life away.

Marcus strikes the dish with a skive.

What doest thou strike at Marcus with knife.

Mar. At that that I have kill'd my Lord, a flys.

An. Out on the murderers: thou kill'dst him, I
Mine eyes close'd with view of Titannie:
A deed of death done on the innocent
Becomes not Titam brother: get thee gone,
I see thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas (my Lord) I have but kill'd a fly.

An. But? How? is that Fic a father and mother?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings
And bus lamenting doings in the ayer,
Poore harmettel Fly,
That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Come here to make vs merry,
And thou haft kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me sir,
It was a blacke illfavours'd Fly,
Like to the Empresse Moore, therefor I kild him.

An. O, o, o,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou haft done a Charitable deed:
Give me thy knife, I will influnt on it,
Plattering my flatter, as if it were the Moore,
Come hither purposely to pay for me.
There's for thy selfe, and thaus for Tamara: Alas firra,
Yet I think we are not brought to follow,
But that betweene vs, we can kill a Fly,
That comes in likenesse of a Cole-blacke Moore.

Mar. Alas poore man, grieue he's so wrothe on him,
He takes false frowndes, for true subsances.

An. Come take away: Lauinia, goe with mee,
He to thy clothet, and goe read with thee.
Sad stories, changed in the times of old.
Come boy, and goe with me, thy fight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begin to daze.

Exeunt

Actus Quartus.

Enter young Lucius and Lavinia running after him, and the Boy flie from her with his books under his arme.

Enter Titam and Marcus.

Boy. Helpe Grandfier helpe, my Aunt Lavinia,
Followes me ever where I know not why.

Good Vnle Marcus see how swift she comes,
Alas sweet Aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me Lucius, do not feare thy Aunt.

Titam. She lodes thee boy too well to doe thee harme.

Boy. I when my father was in Rome did we.

Mar. What means my Neece Lavinia by these signes?

Ti. Pears not Lavinia, somewhat doth she meane:
See Lavinia see, how much the makes of thee;
Some whether thou hadst the hande there with her.
Ah boy, Cornelius neuer with more care
Read to her fonnes, then she hath read to thee,
Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Oratour:
Canst thou not geffe wherefore she pleasa thee thus?

Boy. My Lord I know not, nor can I geffe,
Vnleffe some hit or frentise do poiffe her:
For I have heard my Grandfier say full oft,
Extremite of griefes would make men mad.
And I have read that Herow of Troy,
Ran mad through sorrow, that made me to feare,
Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt,
Losse me as deare as ere my mother did,
And would not but in fury fright my youth,
Which made me downe to throw my booke, and the Caules perhaps, but pardon me sweet Aunt,
And Madame, my Vnle Marcus goe,
I will most willingly attend your Ladyship.

Mar. Lucas I will.

Ti. How now Lavinia, Marcus what meane this?
Some booke there is that she def tires, to
Which is it girles of these? Open them booke,
But thou art deere read and better skil,
Come and take choye of all my Library,
And fo beguile thy forrow till the heauens
Reuole the damn'd conturier of this deed.
What booke?

Why lifts the vp her symes in sequence thus?

Mar. I thinke she means that ther was more then one
Confedrate in the fact, I more there was I,
Or else to heaven the heauses them to reuenge.

Ti. Lucas what booke is that the toffeath fo?

Boy. Grandier tis Ovids Metamorphosis,
My mother gave it rite.

Mar. For Iue of ether that's gone,
Perhabs shee culd it from among the teifi.

Ti. Soft, so busily she turns the leaves,
Help he, what would she finde?
Lavinia shall I read? I
This is the tragicke tale of Philemel,
And treated of Teren treaion and his rape,
And rape I fear was roote of chine annoy.

Mar. See brother fee, note how she quotes the leaues
Ti. Lavinia, went thou thus surpriz'd sweet girlie, Raifeit and wrong'd as Philemel was?
For'd in the ruthlesse, yall, and gloomy woods?
See, see, such a place there is where we did hunt,
(O had we never, never hunted there)
Pattent by that the Poet hearre describes,
By nature made for murtherers and forrapers:

Mar. O why should nature build to foule a den,
Voleffe the Gods delight in tragedies?

Ti. Glie signes sweete: girlie, for heere are none but friends
What Romaine Lord it was wurt the deed?
Or flinke not Saturnine, a Tarquin erifs,
That left the Campe to finne in Lucresse bed.

Mar. Sit downe sweet Neece, brother sit downe by me,
Appoll, Pallas, Juno, or Metronys,
Inquire me that I may this treaion finde.
My Lord looke heere, looke heere Lavinia.

He write his Name with bus Staffe, and guides it
With fette and mouth.

This wandie plot is plane, guide if thou canst.

This
The Tragedie of Tims Andronicus.

This after me, I haue witt my name,
Without the helpe of any hand at all.
Curst be that hark at that fore it was to that shift:
Write thou good Neece, and heere dispay at laft,
What God will have diuierfed for reuenge,
Heere guide the pen to print thy fairest plaine,
That we may know the Trayers and the truth.

She takes the staffe in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps and writers.

Ti. Oh do ye read my Lord what the hark writes?

Stiperbon, Chiron, Demetrius.

T. Mar. What, what, the superfluous comme of Tamora,
Performes of that bainious bloody deed?

T. Magno Deum inanis poli,
Tam levissi amore, tam levissi vitae.

Mar. Oh calme thee gentle Lord: Although I know
There is enough written upon this earth,
To hirue a multine in the mildest thoughts,
And arme the mindes of infants to exclaimes.
My Lord kneele downe with me, Lamia kneele,
And kneele sweer boy, the Romanse Heles hoare,
And swears with me, as with the wooll full Feere
And father of that chaff dishonourde Dame,
Lord Lucius Bruno swears for Lucius tape,
That we will profecte (by good aduise)
Moreall reuenge upon their traytorous Gother,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

T. Titus fature enough Andronicus of the self,
But if you hunt thee Bearer-whelpes, then beware
The Dam will wake, and if the windie you once,
Shes with the Lyon deeplie still in league.
And falls him whilst the palyeth on her backe,
And when he sleepe will he do what she will.
You are a young huntinge Marueu, let it alone:
And come, I will goe a leafe of brasse,
And with a God of feele will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry Northerne windes
Will blow these fands like Sheeles leaves abroad,
And where your leission then. Boy what say you?
Boy. I say my Lord, that if I were a man,
Their mothers bed-chamber should not be safe,
For theyre bad bond-men to the yoke of Rome.

Mar. That's well said. But what shall I do full off,
For his vngracious country done the like.

Boy. And Vacle so will I, and if I live.

T. Come goe with me into mine Armorie,
Lucius Ie fit thee, and withall, my boy,
Shall care from me to the Emperesse fommes,
Prerents that I intend to tend them both,
Come come, thou'lt do thyselfe, with thou not?
Boy. I with my dagger in their bosomes Grandire.

T. No boy not so, he teach thee another course,
Lamiae come, Marueu looke to my houfe,
Lucius and Ie goe brate it at the Court,
I marry we will live, and weele he waited on.

Exit T. Mar. Oh heauens! Can you heare a good man groane
And not releaste, or not compaine him?

Marueu attend him in his extaze,
That hath more facts of fire in his heart,
Then fo-mens makes upon his battede shield,
But yet so in, that he will not reuenge,
Rescuinge the heauens for old Andronicus.

Enter Aron, Chlorus and Demetrius at one dore, and at another a young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapon, and vorset writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius heeres the fonne of Lucius,
He hath some mesage to deliuer vs.

Aron. I some mad mesage from his mad Grandfather.

Boy. My Lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greeete your honours from Andronicus,
And prays the Romeine Gods confound you both,
Demetrius, Grauerly Lucius, who is the nevies?
For villanie's marks with tape. May it please you,
My Grand sire well advi'd hath first by me,
The good left weapons of his Armorie,
To gratifie your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for so he bad me say;
And so do I and with his gifts present
Your Lordship, where men euer you have need,
You may be armed and appointed well,
And I doe leave you both: like bloody villanies. Exit

Deme. What's heere? a particule written round about?
Let's see.

Introue vnto festerisque pares fom gaius mauro inculis nunc arcu.

Chi. O'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well.
I read it in the Grammer long a goe.

Moore. I utf, a verse in Horaces right, you have it,
Now what a thing is it to be an Aft?
Here's no found left, the old man hath found their gull
And fends the weapons wrapes about with lines,
That wound beyond their feeling to the quick:
But here we publish Emperesse well a foot,
She will appliue enough Andronicus conceit
But let her reft, in her vnrest a while.
And now young Lords, we't a note a happy starre
Led vs to Rome strangere, and more then so;
Capturess, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good before the Pallace gate,
To beeke the Tribune in his brothers hearing.

Chi. A charitable with, and full of looue,

Moore. Heere lacke's but you mother, for to say, Amen.

Chi. And that would shew the twentie thousand more.

Deme. Come, Jet vs go, and pray to all the Gods
For our beloved mother in her pains.

Moore. Pray to the devils, the gods have guen vs our Hows.

Dem. Why do the Empereors trumpets flouish thus?
BCi. Belle for joy the Empour hath a sonne.

Deme. Soft, who comes heres.

Enter Nurfe with a blade & a Moore child.

Nurfe. Good morrow Lords.

Otell me, did you see Arons the Moore?

Aron. Well, more or leffe, or one a whit at all,
Here Aron is, and what with Aron now?

Nurfe. Oh gentle Aron, we are all vndone,
Now helpe, or woe bide thee euermore.

Aron. Why, what a castcrwailing doth thou keere?

What doth thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nurfe. O that which I would hide from heauens eye,
Our Emperesse flame, and flatley Rome's digniate,
She is deliuered Lords, she is deliuered.

Aron To whom?

Nurfe. I mean she is brought a bed?

Aron. Wel God giue her good rall.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus

What hast be fent her?

Nurse. A few dolls.

Aaron. Why then the ishte Deuils Dam: a toyfulle issue.

Nurse. A toyfulle, dismall, blacke & sorrowfull issue, Here be the babe at leasome as a toad,

Among'th the fairest breeders of our clime,

The Empresse fends it there, thy flame, thy fcale,

And bids thee chrifi it with thy daggers point.

Aaron. Once where, it is blacke to bafe a fde fce.

Sweet blowe, we are a beautifull blone fume.

Dem. Villaine what hath thou done?

Aaron. That which thou canft not vnvee.

Chri. Thon hath vnvee our mother.

Dem. And therein hellish dog, thou haft vnvee,

Wore to her chance, and danfe'd her leathi choyce,

Accut'the off-spring of fo foul a friend.

Chri. It fhall not live.

Aaron. It fhall not die.

Nurse. Aaron it null, the mother wilts it fo.

Aaron. What, null it? Nay? Then let no man but I

Doe execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I, the breach the Tadpole on my Rapiers points:

Nurse, said me: my word shall boone dispatc h it.

Aaron. Sooner this fceast fhall plough thy bowels vp.

Shes ane murderouf villain, will you kill your brother?

Now by the burning Tapes of the skin,

That fhone fo brightely when this Boy was got,

He dies upon my Senators fpire point,

That touches this my first borne fonne and heire,

I tell you young-lings, not Evercleau.

With all his thristing band of Tiphons brooie,

Nor great Alcides, nor the God of warre.

Shall ceaze this prep out of his fathers hands:

What, what, ye fanguine fhallow harted Bynes,

Ye white-limb'd wails, ye Alcicles painted fignes,

Coke-blacke is better then ano, her hate,

In that it feemce to bear another hue:

For all the water in the Ocean,

Can never turne the Swans blanke legge to white,

Although the fune th'embryoe in the flood:

Tell the Emprefs from me, I am of age.

To keppe mine owne, exeute it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble minions thus?

Aaron. My minions is my minfristis this my fefe,

The vigour, and the picture of my youth:

This, before all the world do I prefere,

This my fpirit to all the world will I keep safe,

Or fome of you fhall fameke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother it is eues fhame'd.

Chri. Rome will defepe her for this foole ecape.

Ver. The Emprefs in his rage will doe her death.

Chri. I bluch to thinke upon this ignominie,

Aaron. Why that's the piffulated your beauty bares,

Fier trecherous hue, that will better with blushing

The clofe enafts and counfels of the hake:

Here's a young Lad fram'd of another leere,

Look how the blacke flace flines upon the father;

As who fhould fay, old Lad I am thine owne.

He is your brother Lords, fensibely fed

Of that felfe blood that first gafe life to you,

And from that wounde where you impiionted were

He is infamified, and come to lift.

Nay he is your brother by the furer fide,

Although my fcale be fhamned in his face.

Nurse. Aaron what fhall I fay unto the Empreff?

Dem. Aduife thee Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will al fubijferbe to thy advice:

Sawe thou the child, fo we may all be safe.

Aaron. Then fit we downe and let vs all confult

My fonne and I will have the winde of you:

Keep there, now talke at pleufe of your farty.

Dem. How many women law this child of his?

Aaron. Why to brewe Lords, when we foyne in league

I am a Lamb: but if you brewe the Mare,

The chafed Face, the mountaine Lione, and

The Ocean fels not fo as Aaron fymes:

But fay againe, how many law the child e.

Nurse. Cornelia, the midwife, and my felfe,

And none elfe but the deliverd Empreff.

Aaron. The Empreff, the Midwife, and your felfe,

Two may kepe counfell, when the th'third's away:

One to the Empreff, tell her this I faid,

He kills her Weekes, weeke, cornotes a Pigge prepar'd to th'fip.

Dem. What means it thou Aaron?

Wherefore didn't thou this?

Aaron. O Lord fit, it's a deed of pollicie?

Shall the line to betray this guilt of om's:

A long tongu'd babling Godifh! No Lords no:

And now be it knowne to you my full intent.

Not farre, one Abluates my Country-man

His wife but yesternight was brought to bed,

His felace is like to her, as you are.

Goe packe with him, and give the mother gold,

And tell them both the circumfance of all,

And how by this their Childe shall be aduanced,

And be receiv'd for the Emperours hyre,

And fublimated in the place of mine,

To colme this tempell whirling in the Court,

And let the Empreoure dandle him for his owne.

Hark ye Lords, ye fee I have given her physick,

And you must needs bellow her funeral,

The fields are neree, and you are gallling Greoues:

This done, fee that you take no longer dailies

But fend the Midwife prefently to me.

The Midwife and the Nurse well made away,

Then let the Ladie rattle what they pleafe.

Chri. Aaron I fee thou wilt not truft the ayre with fe

Dome. For this care of Tamora,

(cree, herfelf, and hers are highly bound to thee.

Exeunt.

Aaron. Now to the Gothes, as twixt as Swallow fifies,

There to difpole this treafure in mine armies,

And fecretly to grette the Empreff friends:

Come on you thick-lipt-claue, ftear you fheere fhaffer,

For it is you that pass so to our fhiffs:

Ife make you feed on berries, and on roots,

And feed on curdes and whay, and fucke the Goate,

And cabbifie in a Cave, and bring you vp

To be a warior, and command a Campe.

Exit.

Enter Titus, old Marcus, young Lucius, and her gentlemen with bowers, and Titus bears the armes with

Letters on the end of them.

Tit. Come Marcus, come, kinmen this is the way.

Sir Boy let me fee your Archerie,

Looke yee draw home enough, and 'tis there fr Brief:

Terra Africar equator, he be remembred Marcus.

She's gone, she's dead, fits take you to your coole,

You Cofell shall goe found the Ocean,

And cafl your nets, haply you may find her in the Sea,

Yet the's a little iffucce at Land:

No Pubblius and Irmumous, you must doe it,

Tit.
Tis you must dig with Maltace, and with Spade,
And piece the immot Center of the earth:
Then when you come to Plato's Region,
I pray you deliver him this petition,
Tell him it is for justice, and for aide,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with forrows in ungrateful Rome,
Ah Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable,
What time I took the peoples sufferings
On him that thus doth tyrannize ore one.
Geely get you gone, and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man of ware unearthish,
This wicked Empouray may have shipt her hence,
And Kinfmen then we may goe pipe for justice.
Marc. O Publius is not this a heautie cafe
To see thy Noble Vnkle thus distressed?
Publius. Therefore my Lords is highly vs concerns,
By day and night I attend him carefully:
And teele his humour kindely as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedie.
Marc. Kinfmen, his forrows are past remendle.
Joyne with the Gothes, and with reuenge full ware,
Take wrecakes on Rome for this ingratitude,
And enmynence on the Traytor Saturnne.
Publius. Publius how now? how now my Masters?
What have you met with her?
Publius. No my good Lord, but Phoe sends you word,
If you will have reheuse from here you shall,
Marrie for justice she is so iemple d,
He thinkes with low in heauen, or some where else:
So that profess you must needs fly a time.
Marc. Hie, Hie, he shal me wrong to feedinge with deles,
He due into the burning Lake below,
And pull her out of Avern by the heles.
Marius, we are but thrusts, no Cedes we,
No big-hand-men, fram'd of the Cyllops face,
But mistell Marcus fleete to the very backe,
Yet wrong with wrongs more then our backe can bear:
And fish there's no justice in earth nor hell,
We will felicitize heauen, and moue the Gods:
To sende downe Justice for to wrecake our wrongs:
Come to this gare, you are a good Archer Marcus,
He gues them the Arrows.
Alloveth, that's for you here ad Appallium,
Ad Mestra, that's for my selfe,
Heere Boy to Pallas, heere to Mercuri,
To Saturnne, to Ceres, to Saturnne,
You were as good to shoote against the winde.
Too it Boy, Marcus looke when I bid:
Of my word, I have written to effect,
There's not a God left vnfacilitate.
Marc. Kinfmen, shoot all your fistes into the Court,
We will affliet the Empouray in his pride.
Tis. Now Masters cast, O well paid Lucius:
Good Boy in Vigour lap, give it Pallas,
Stave my Lord, tis a mile beyond the Moone,
Your Letter is with Jupiter by this.
Tis. Hah, Pallas, Pallas, what hast thou done?
See, thou hast felt one of Taurus horns.
Marc. This was the font my Lord, when Pallas shot,
The Bull being gold d, gave Arrets such a knocke,
That downe fell both the Rams horns in the Courte,
And who should finde them but the Empouray villain:
He laugh, and told the Moone he should not choose
But give them to his Masters for a present.
Tis. Why there it goes, God give your Lordship joy.

Enter the Emperor with a basket and two Pigeons in st.
Titus. News, news, news, from heauen,
Marcus the post is come.
Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters?
Shall I haue justice, what fayes Jupiter?
Clown. Hie the libbymaker, he fayes that he has taken them downe againe, for the man must not be hang'd till the next weeke.
Tis. But what fayes Jupiter? I ask thee?
Clown. Alas sir I know not Jupiter:
I never dranke with him in all my life.
Tis. Why villain art not thou the Carrier?
Clown. I of my Pigeons frit, nothing else.
Tis. Why, didst thou not come from heauen?
Clown. From heauen? Alas sir, never came there,
God forbid I should be so bold, to preffe to heauen in my young daies.
Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunate Pleas, to take up a matter of brawle, between my Vnkle, and one of the Emperiorals men.
Marc. Why sir, that is as fit a canbe to sette for your Oration, and let him delive the Pigeons to the Empouray from you.
Tis. Tell me, can you deliver an Oration to the Emperior with a Grace?
Clown. Nay tenderly sir, I could never lay grace in all my life.

Titus. Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneele, then knihe his foote, then deliver vp your Pigeons, and then looke for your reward. Be at hand sir, see you do it brauely.
Clown. I warrant you sir, let me alone.
Tis. Sirrah hast thou a knife? Come let me see it,
Heere Marcus fold it in the Oration.
For thou hast made it like an humble Suppliante:
And when thou hast gliden in the Empouray,
Knocke at my doore, and tell me what he fayes.
Clown. God be with you sir, I will.

Exit. Come Marcus let vs gore, Publiue follow me.

Enter Emperior and Emperisse, and her two sons, the Empouray bringing the Arrows in his hand that Titus set at him.

Saur. Why Lords, What wrongs are these? was euer scene
An Empouray in Rome thus ouerneamed,
Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent
Of all justice, falt in such contempt?
My Lords, you know the mightfull Gods,
(How euer these disturbers of our pace
But in the peoples cares, there nought hath paft,
But even with law against the willfull Sonnes
Of old Andronicus. And what and if
His forrows have to overwhelm'd his witts,
Shall we be thus afflieted in his wreakes,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness
Now but he writes to heauen for his redresse.
See, heeres to Jove, and this to Mercury,

This

IV. iii. 11 — IV. iv. 14

662
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

IV. iv. 15—V. i. 21

663
And as I earnestly did fixe mine eye
Upon the waited building,uddainly
I heard a childish cry underneath a wall:
I made my way to the noyse, when soone I heard,
The crying babe control'd with this discourse:
Peace I say, halfe me, and halfe th4 Dam,
Did not thy Hey brewey whose brat thou art?
Had nature lent thee, but thy Mothers loake,
Villaine thought it but bene an Emperour,
But where the Bull and Cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a colt-blacke-Cafe:
Peace, vessel peace, even thus he rates the babe,
For I must bear thee to a straitly Goth,
Who when he knowes thou art the Empresse babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy Mothers sake.
With this, my weapon drawn, I ruff't upon him,
Surpriz'd himuddainly, and brought him hither
To see, as you thinke needesfull of the man.
LUCI. Oh worthy Goth, this is the incarnate deuill,
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the Peale that pleas'd your Empresse eye,
And heere's the Baile Fruit of his burning lust,
Say wall-y'd face, whether wouldst thou consay
This growing Image of thy head-like face?
Why doo not speake of what devise? Not a word?
A halfe Souldiers, hang him on this tree,
And with this hand his Fruit of Baffardie.
Luci. Touch not the Bay, he is of Royall blood.
LUCI. Too like the Syre for ever being good.
First hang the Child that he may see it prrall,
A sight to weake the Fathers foule withall.
Aron. Get me a Ladder Luciua, take the Childie,
And bear it from me to the Empresse:
If thou do this, lie thee worthy wondrous things,
That highly may advance thee to heare;
If thou will not, fall what may befall,
Lie speake no more: but vengeance rot you all.
LUCI. Say on, and if it please me which thou speakest,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it Nourish.
Aron. And if it please thee? why afforce thee Luciua,
I'will weake thy foule to hearse what I spake speake:
For I must take of Murderers, Rapes, and Maffacles,
Acts of Blacke-night, abominable Deeds,
Compilations of Mischiefes, Treason, Villaines,
Riught to heare, yet pitiously proceed
And this foule all be buried by my death,
Valefle thou speake to me my Childie shall live.
Luci. Tell on the mindes,
I say thy Childie shall live.
Aron. Swearme that he shall, and then I will begin.
Luci. Who shoule I sware by,
That blessed no God,
That therefore canst thou beleue an oath by?
Aron. What if I do not, as indeed I do not,
Yet for I know thou art Religious,
And hast a thing within thee, called Conscience,
With twenty Popish tricks and Ceremonies,
Which I hau'st since thee carefull to observe;
Therefore I vowe thy oath, for that I know
An Idol holdest, his double for a God,
And esteemes the oath which by that God he sweares,
To that hee vorge him: therefore thou shalt vowe
By that same God, what God for eke he be,
That thou aoreest, and hast in reverence,
To suue my Bay to nourish and bring him vp;
Ore ecle I will discover nought to thee.
But to torment you with my bitter tongue.

Luc. Sirs, lift his mouth, & let him speak no more.

Enter Emilius.

Gath. My Lord, there is a Messenger from Rome

That desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Welcome Emilius, what news from Rome?

Emi. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Goths,

The Roman Empire greets you all by me,

And for he understands you are in Armes,

He cries a parly at your Fathers house.

Willing you to demand your Hostages,

And shall be immediately delivered.

Gath. What says our General?

Luc. Emilius tels the Emperor give his pldges

Vnto my Father, and my Uncle Marcus, Flavioth.

And we will come: march away.

Enter Tamora, and other two Sorges disguised.

Tam. Thus in this strange and sad Habillament,

I will encounter with Andronicus,

And say, I am Revenge sent from below;

To inwaite with you and your enemies, wrongs:

Knocke at this fludy where they say he keeps,

To tuminate strange plots of dire Revenge;

Tell him Revenge is come to inwaite with him,

And worke confusio on his Enemies.

They knocke and Titus openeth his studie door.

Tit. Who doth molest my Contemplation?

Is it your tricke to make me ope the door,

Or to my sad deeder, which were away,

And all my studie be to no effect?

You are deceiv'd, for what I mean to do,

See heere in bloody lines I have set downe;

And wha't is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talke with thee,

Tit. No not a word: how can I grace my talke,

Wanting a hand to give it a blow,

Thou haft the odds of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou dost not know me,

Thou wouldst talke with me.

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough,

Witness this swretched flump,

Witness these crimson lines,

Witness these Trenches made by griefe and care,

Witness the springing day, and the conern'd night,

Witness all forrow, that I know thee well.

For our proud Empresse, Mighty Tamora:

Is not thy comming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou fud men I am not Tamora,

She is thy Enemy, and I thy Friend,

I am Revenge sent from this infall Kingdom,

To extirpate the growing Vulture of the mind,

By working weakefull vengeance on my Foes:

Come downe and welcome me to this worlds light,

Conferre with me of Murder and of Death,

That's not a hollow Cave or Lucring place,

No Vast obscuritie, or Milly vale,

Where bloody Murther or detested Rape,

Can couch for lesse, but I will finde them out,

And in their cases tell them my dreadful name,

Revenge, which makes the soule offenders quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? art thou sent to me,

To be a torment to mine Enemies?

Tam. I am therefore come downe and welcome me.

Tit. Doe me some frence ere I come to thee:

Look by thy side where Rape and Murder standes,

Now give me some furance that thou art Revenge,

Stab them, or tear them on thy Charriot wheeles,

And then Ile come and be thy Waggoneer;

And whilee alonge with thee about the Globes,

Provide thee two proper Palesties, as blake as let,

To hale thy werteful Waggoneer forwaie,

And finde out Murder in their guilty cases.

And when thy Car is laden with their heads,

I will dismount, and by the Waggon wheeles,

Trot like a Seruile footman all day long,

Even from Empires rising in the East,

Until his very downfall in the Sea.

And day by day Ile do this heavy tale,

So thou delovery Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my Ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are they them thy Ministers, what are they call'd?

Tam. Rape and Murder, therefore called so,

Caufe they take vengeance of fuch kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord how like the Empresse Sons they are,

And you the Empresse: but we worldly men,

Have miferable mad misleading eyes:

Oh sweet Revenge: now doe thou come to me,

And if one armes embracement will content thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by.

Tam. This cloathing with him, fits his Luscie.

What ere I forge to leede his braine,he seems,

Do you vphold, and maintain in your speeches,

For now he timely takes me for Revenge,

And being Credulous in this mad thought,

He make him fard for Luciu his Sonne,

And whilst I at a Banquet hold him fore,

He finde some cunning pacifics out of hand,

To fatter and difperfe the giddy Gothers,

Or at the leaft make them his Enemies:

See heere he comes, and I must play my theme.

Tit. Long have I bene forlorned, and all for thee,

Welcome dread Fury to my woefull house,

Rapine and Murthre, you are welcome too,

How like the Empresse and her Sonnes you are.

Well are you fitter, had you but a Moore,

Could not all hell afford you fuch a devill?

For well I wore the Empresse never wagg;

But in her company there is a Moore,

And would you reprefent our Queene aight

It were convenient you had fuch a devill:

But welcome as you are, what fhall we doe?

Tam. What would'lt thou have vs doe Andronicus?

Dem. Snewe me a Murtherer, Ile deal with him.

Chi. Show me a Villaine that hath done a Rape,

And I am fent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Snewe me a thousand that have done thee wrong,

And Ile be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,

And when thou find'st a man that's like thy felfe,

Good Murder flab him, hee's a Murtherer.

Goe thou with him, and when it is thy hap

To finde another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine flab him, he is a Ruiftfer.

Goe thou with them, and in the Empresse Court,

There is a Queene attended by a Moore,

Well mait thou know her by thy owne proportion,

For vp and downe thy doth refemble thee,

I pray thee doe on them some violent death,

They have bene violent to me and mine.

Tamora.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcus, my Brother, 'tis fid Titi calls,
Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius,
Thou shalt enquire him out among the Gothers,
Bid him repair to me and bringing with him
Some of the chiefest Princes of the Gothers,
Bid him encamp his Soldiurers where they are,
Tell him the Emperour, and the Empresse too,
Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them,
This do thou for my sake, and let him know,
As he regards his aged Fathers life.

Mer. This will I do, and soone return againe.

Tit. Now will I hence about thy businesse,
And take my Ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, may Ist Rape and Murder play with me,
Or else call my Brother back againe,
And clause to no revenge but Lucius.

Luc. What say you Bojes, will you bide with him,
While, I goe to tell Lord the Emperour,
How I have goucnt'd our determined list?
Yeeld to him Hamour, smooth and speake him faire,
And tarry with him till I turne againe.

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad,
And will one reach them in their owne deuiles,
A pyre of cursed hell-hounds and their Dam.
Dem. Madam depart at pleasure, leave vs here.

Tit. Farewel Andronicus, revenge now goes,
To lay a compot to betray thy foes.

Tit. I know thou doo't, and sweet revenge farewell.

Publius come hither, Caius, and Valentina.

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you thefe two?

Pub. The Empresse and her Sonnes.

Tit. I take them, Cauus, Demetrius.

Tit. Soe Publins, with too much desceund,
The one is Murder, Rape is the others name.
And therefore bind them gentle Publins,
Cauus, and Valentina, lay hands on them,
Oft haue you heard me with for such an houre,
And now I find it, therefore bind them sure,
Cauus, Villaines for beare, we are the Emprresse Sonnes,
Pub. And therefor do we, what we are commanded,
Stop close their mouthes, let them not speake a word,
Is he sure bound looke that you bind them fast, Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife and Luainia with a Banquet.

Tit. Come, come Luainia, looke, thy Foes are bound,
Sirs flie their mouthes, let them not speake to me,
But let them hear what seemfull words I vter.

OthVillains, Chiron, and Demetrius,
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,
This goodly Sommer with your Winter mixt,
You kill'd her husband, and for that will's fault,
Two of her Brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off, and made a mercy left,
Both her Sister H-Upman'd, her Tongue and that more deere
Then Hands or tongue, her spotlesse Chastity,
Iohnhame Trafitors, you conftraid and for't.
What would you say, if I should let you speake?
Villaines for shame you could not beg for grace.
Harke Wretches, how I meane to martsry you,
This one Hand yet is left, to cut your throats,
Whil'st that Luainia wente her flumps doth hold:
The Banquet that receives your guilty blood.
You know your Mother meanes to feaft with me,
And calls her selfe Reuenge, and thankes me mad,
Harke Villaines, I will gun your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, he make a Paffe,
And of the Paffe a Coffin I will rear,
And make two Paffes of your shamefull Heads,
And bid that stropmet their whallowed Dam,
Like to the earth (with all the inraptur) is this,
The is the Feast, that I have bid her to,
And this the Banquet the thall surfeft on,
For worse than I helmet you'd my Daughter,
And worse then Pregue, I will be re'g'd,
And now prepare your throats: Luainia come,
Receive the Blood, and when that they are dead,
Let me goe grind their Bones to powder small,
And with this haterfull Liquor temper it.
And in that Paffe let their wild Heads be bakte,
Come, come, be every one officious,
To make this Binkett, which I with might proue,
More fener and bloody then the Centaures Feast,
He eates their throats,
Sonow bring them in, for he play the Cooke,
And let them ready, gainst their Mother comes,
Exeunt.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Gothers.

Luc. Vuckle Marcus since 'tis my Fathers minde,
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

Gaius. And ours with thine behalfe, what Fortune will.

Luc. Good Vuckle take you in this barbarous Mote,
This Rauinious Tigrie, this accursed deuil,
Let him receive no suffenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought into the Emperous face,
For testimonie of her foule proceedings.
And see the Ambush of our Friends be strong,
Ifere the Emperour meanes no good to vs,
Arise. Some deuil whippr curles in my eare,
And prompte me that my tongue may vter for th,
The Venemous Milan of my swelling heart.

Luc. Away Iohnhame Dogge, Wallowed Slave,
Sirs, hepe out Vuckle to comey him in,
Flamin. The Trumpets shew the Empeor is at hand.

Sound Trumpets. Enter Empeor and Empresse, with Tribunes and others.

Sat. What, hath the Fireament more Sunes then one?

Luc. What bootes it thet to call thy self a Sunne?
I will bring in the Empresse and her Sonnes,
These quarrels must be quietely debated,
The Feast is ready which the carefull Titus,

Hath.
The Tragedie of Titus Andronicus.

When with his tolemne tongue he did discourse
To loue-sick Duke doth sad attending care,
The story of that basefull burning night,
When sulluGreekes surpriz'd King Priamus Troy:
Tell vs what Sinow hath bewicht our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine,
That gues our Troy, our Rome the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor steel,
Nor can I vster all our bitter griеfe,
But floods of tears will drowning my Oratione;
And breake my very vrance, even in the time
When it shold move thee to attend me moft,
Lending your kind hand Commiseration.
Heree is a Captaine, let him tell the tale,
Your hearts will throb and wepe to heare him speake,
Luc. This Noble Auditor, ye is knowne to you,
That cursed Chron and Demetrius
Were they that murdred our Emperours Brother,
And they it were that raffiour our Sifter,
For their fell faults our Brothers were beheaded,
Our Fathers teares desip'd, and basely coulen'd,
Of that true hand that fought Romes quarrell out,
And sent her enemies into the grave.
Lastly, my selfe vnsoundely brake,
The gates flint on me, and turn'd weeping on,
To beg reliefe among Romes Enemies,
Who droun'd their enimy in my true teares,
And op'd their armes to embrace me as a Friend:
And I am turned forth, he is knowne to you,
That haue prefer't her welfare in my blood,
And from her bynome tooke the Enemies point,
Sheathing the ficle in my aduentous body.
Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I,
My fears can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is iuit and full of truth:
But soo, me thinkes I do digress too much,
Citing my wortelife praiue.Oh pardon me,
For when no Friends are by,men praiue themselues,
Mar. Now is my turne to speake.Behold this Child,
Of this was Tamora deliver'd,
The issue of an Irreligeous Moore,
Chief Architeckt and plotter of these woes,
The Villaine is alue in Titus houfe,
And as he is, to wittene this is true.
Now judge what course had Titus to revenge
These wrongs,unpeakeable past patience,
Or more then any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you Romanes?
Were we done ought smiue? I shew vs wherein,
And from the place where you behold vs now,
The poore remainder of Andronics,
Will hand in hand all headlong catt vs downe,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutuall clofure of our houfe:
Speake Romanes speake, and if you say we shall,
Lue hand in hand,Lucius and I will fall.
Ermili. Come come,tho stoutest man of Rome,
And bring our Emperour gently in thy hand,
Lucius our Emperour:for well I know,
The common voyce do cry it shall be so,
Mar. Lucius,all haile Romes Royall Emperour,
Go,goe into old Titus sorrowfull houfe,
And hither hale that misheltring Moore,
To be aduiz'd some direfull slaything death.
As punishment for his most wicked life.
Lucius all haile to Romes gracieus Gouernour.
FINIS.
THE TRAGEDIE OF ROMEO and JULIET.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, with Swords and Backriers, of the House of Capulet.

Sampson.

Ainors. JF: Ecard: A my word we'll not carry coales.
Greg. Thee, for then we should be Collars.
Samp. Our men, if we be in cloister, we'll draw, and thirten.
Greg. I, while you live, draw your neck out o' the Collars.
Samp. I strike quickly, being mon'd.
Greg. But thou art not quickly mon'd to strike.
Samp. A dogge o' the house of Montague, moves me.
Greg. To moe, it is to fit: and to be valiant, is to stand: Therefore, if thou art mon'd, thou runtest away.
Samp. A dogge o' that house shall move me to stand.
I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Montague.
Greg. That fends thee a voke flutes, for the weakest goes to the wall.
Greg. The Quarrel is between our Masters, and vs.
Samp. 'Tis all one, I will throw my selfe a curant when I shoue fought with the men, I will bee civil with the Maids, and cut off their heads.
Greg. The heads of the Maids?
Samp. I, the heads of the Maids, or their Maidens-heads, Take it, if thou be mon'd to with.
Greg. They must take it, fience, that does it.
Greg. That they be able to stand: and if we knowe me, I am a pretty piece of steel.
Greg. 'Tis well thou art not Fife: if thou hadst, thou hadst beene poor John. Draw thy Toole, here cometh of the House of the Montagues.

Enter two other Servants.
Sam. My naked weapen is out: quarrel, I will back thee.
Sam. Fear me not.
Greg. No marry: I fear thee.
Sam. Let vs take the Law of our sides, let them begin.
Greg. I will join as I paffe by, & let the take it as they lift Sam. Nay, as they dare, I will bite my Thumbe at them, which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.
Greg. Do you bite your Thumb at vs, sir?
Samp. I do bite my Thumbe, sir.
Greg. Do you bite your Thumb at us, sir?
Sam. Is the Law of our side, if I say it?
Greg. No, sir; I do not bite my Thumb at you, but I bite my Thumbe.
Greg. Do you quarrel?
Sam. Are you quarrel?
Greg. No, sir; I do not quarrel.
Sam. Why do you quarrel?
Greg. Are you quarrel?
Sam. Do you quarrel? (as you)
Greg. No, sir; I do not quarrel.
Sam. You quarrel.
Greg. You quarrel.
Greg. Say better here comes one of my masters kinsmen.
Sam. Yes, better.
Greg. Do you quarrel?
Sam. You do.
Ben. Part Fool: do put up your Swords you know not what you do.

Enter Hands.

Tyb. What art thou drawn, among these heartless
Hindes? Turne thee, there Bohole, upon thee this death.
Ben. I do but keep the peace, put up thy Sword, Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What do, and talk of peace? I hate the word.

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
Hast at thee Coward.

Fight.

Enter three or four Citizens with Clouts.
All. Clubs, Isles, and Partitions, strike, beat them down.
Downe with the Clouts, downe with the Montagues.

Enter old Capulet in his Gowne, and his wife.
Cap. What noise is this! Give me my long Sword ho.
Wife. A crust, a crust: why call you for a Sword?
Cap. My Sword I say: Old Montague is come, And furnishes his blade in sight of me.

Enter old Montague, and his wife.
Wife. Thou villain Capulet. Hold me not, let me go.

Prince. Rebellious Subjects, Enemies to peace, Prophaters of this Neighbour-Stained Steele,
Will they not hear? What hope you Men, you Beasts, That quench the fire of your persistent Rage,
With purple Fountaines issuing from your Venes: On paine of Torrency, from those bloody hands
Throw your misifer'd Weapons to the ground,
And here the Sentence of your mooved Prince,
Three cuill Brookes, bred of an Ayer word,
By thee old Capulet and Montague,
Haste three, doth bid thee quiet of our streets,
And make Vertue's ancient Citizens
Call by their Graue becomming Ornaments,
To wield old Partizans, in hands as old,
The Tragedie of Romeo and Julliet.

Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate,
If ever you disturb our threats again,
Your liues shall pay the forfeit of the peace.

For this time all the rest depart away:
Your Capulet shall part no more along with me,
And many a day come you this afternoome,
To know our fathers pleasure in this cafe:
To old Free-towne, our common judgment place.
Once more on paine of death, all men depart.

Speake nephew, were you by, when it began?

She will bux Sec + will I ioi
If your Father best went hence, to fall?

To know our fathers pleasure in this cafe:
To old Free-towne, our common judgment place:
Once more on paine of death, all men depart.

Speake nephew, were you by, when it began:

I drew to part them, in the infinite came
Theerry Tribals, with his sword prepar'd,
As he breath'd defiance to his ear,
He swoung about his head, and cut the windes,
Who nothing hurt withall, hit him in the face.
While we were entre charging thulls and blowes,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the Prince came, who parted either part.

Your, O where is Romeove, saw you him to day?
Right glad am I, he was not at this fray:

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipfull Sun
Peerd forth the golden window of the East,
And drew desire me to walk abroad,
Where underneath the grove of Sycamore,
That Westward roasth from this City sith
So carely walking did I see your Sonne:
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
And broke into the court of the wood,
I measureing his affections by my owne,
Whose maffion fought, when moffion might not be found:

But one too was abroad,

Pursued my Honour, not pursuing his
And gladly shunnd, who gladly fled from me.

Mons. Many a morning bath he there bene beene,
With tears augmenting the force morning dew,
Adding to eludes, more cloudier with his deeps figthes,
But all to foam as the all-cheering Sunne,
Should in the farthest East begin to shiue,
The stately Curtains from Avarious bed,
Away from light flees home my heavie Sonne,
And prisse in his Chamber pinnes himselfe,
Shuts vp his windowes, lockes faire day-light out,
And makes himselfe an artificial night:

Blacke and portendoous muff this humour proce,
Vnleepe good counsellor in the castle remoue,

Ben. My Noble Vnde do you know the cause?

Mons. I neither know it, nor can learne of him.

Ben. Have you importuned him by any meanes?

Mons. Both by my selfe and many others friends,
But he his owne sitteous counsellor,
Is to himselfe; I will not say how true
But to himselfe so secret and so close,
So far from foundung and discouery,
As in the bost hit with intenions woulde,
Ere he can spread his sweete leues to the ayre,
Or dedicate his beauty to the flame.
Could we but learne from whence his forrowes grow,
We would as willingly gaine cure, as know.

Enter Roman.

Ben. Good morrow Cousin.
Rome. Is the day so young?
Ben. But new brooke nine.

Rome. Ay me, sad hours done long:
Which is my Father best went hence, to fall?

Ben. It was: what signes lengthens Romeove's liues?
Rome. Not hating that, which hating, makes them short
Ben. In love.

Rome. Out.

Ben. Of liue.
Rome. Out of her favour where I am in love,
Ben. Alas! those that love are gentle in their eye,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proofs.

Rome. Alas! that love, whose view is muttled still,
Should without eyes, see path-ways to his will:
Where shall we dine? O me: what fray was here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all:
Here is much to do with hate, but more with love;
Why then O railing love! O loving hate,
O any thing, of nothing first created;
O heauen lightnesse, serious vanity,
Misperon Chaos of well-ecoming forms,
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, tick health,
Still walking fleece, that is not what it is.
This lice feel I, that feel no lice in this.

Dost thou not like me?

Ben. No Coze, I rather wepe.

Rome. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart oppression.

Rome. Why such is loves tyrant refection.
Greene of mine owne lie heare in my brest,
Which thou wilt propagate to hate it prevail
With more of thine, this fray that thou hast showne,
Doth one more show by mine owne owne,
Looke, is a smocke made with the fame of fightes,
Being pur'd, a fire sparkling in Louers eyes,
Being vex, a Sea-sport with loving teares,
What is it else? a madnelle, most discreet,
A chocking gall, and a preferring sweet:
Farewell my Coze.

Ben. I will goe along.
And if you leave me, do you make me wrong,

Rome. Tis I have loft my felle, I am not here,
This is not Romeove, he's free other where.

Ben. I shall tell in fadnelle, who is that you love?
Rome. What shall I groan and tell thee?

Ben. Groome, why not; but sadly tell me who.

Rome. Why, that makes his will:
A word ill vig'd to one that is ill.

In fadnelle Cozin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I vi'd to me, when I supp'd you loud.

Rome. A right good man, an, and there's faire I love.

Ben. A right faire make, faire Coze's, vouenfort hit,

Rome. Well in that hit you misse, faire be not hit
With Cupids arrow, the blass Dams wit,
And in strong power of cautelity well arm'd
From loves weake childful Bow, the liues vouch'tam.
Shee will not flay the finge of loving teares,
Nor bid this counter of sorrowing eyes,
Nor open her lap to Saint-feeding Gold:
O she is rich in beauty, only poor,
That when she dies, with beautie dies her faire.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will stay till love chaff.

Rome. She hath, and in that swaring make huge weapon:
For beauty flerd'd with her seuerity,
Cuts beauty off from all posteritie.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

She is too faire, too wise: with too faire, To merit blisse by making me dispaire; She hath forsworne to love, and in that vow Do I live dead, that hunte to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget her thenceforth,

Rom. O teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty vnto chine eyes,

Examine other beauties,

Ro. 'Tis the way to callers (exquisite) in question more, Thee happy maskes that kiffe faire Ladies brouws, Being blacke, puts a mind they hide the faire: He that is throushen blind, cannot forget The precious treasure of his eye-sight loft:

Show me a Mittrelles that is passing faire, What doth her beauty ferue but as a note, Where I may read who past that faire passing.

Farewell world, I can't not teach me to forget,

Ben. I'le pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. Exeunt

Enter Capulet, Counte Paris, and the Clowes.

Capu. Montague is bound as well as I,

In gentle alde, and is not hard the thinkes,

For men is old as wee, to keep the peace.

Par. Of Honourable reckoning are you both,

And pittie'tis you liu'd at ods so long:

But now my Lord, what say you to my fute?

Capu. But saying ore what I have laid before,

My Child is yet a Stranger in the world,

She hath not seene the change of fourteen yeares,

Let two more Summers wither in their pride,

Ere we may thinke her ripe to be a Bride.

Par. Younger then ftre, are happy mothers made.

Capu. And too lone mad are those so early made:

Earth hath swalowed all my hopes but she,

She's the hopefull Lady of my earth:

But wore her gentle Paris, her heart,

My will to her content, is but a part.

And thee agree, within her scope of choise,

Lyes my content, and faire according voice:

This night I hold an old accuion'd feast,

Whereeto I have inuite many a Gueft,

Such as I love, and you among the more,

One more, most welcome makes my number more:

At my poore house we three together now,

Earth-treading flares, that make darkes heaven light,

Such comfort as do lufiy young men feel,

When well apparell'd April on the heele.

Ofttmping Winter treads, even fuch delight

Among freth Fennell buds shal you this night

Inherit at my house: heare all, all see.

And like her moli, whole meritt mofli shall be:

Which one more weiv, of many, mine being one,

May stand in number, though in reckning none.

Come, goe with me: goe forth trudge about,

Through faire Verona: find those persions out,

Whose names are written there, and to them fay,

My house and welcome, on their pleasure flay.

Erie. Find them out whole names are written. Here it is written, that the howe sholde meddle with his Yerd,

And the Tylor with his Lot, the Fisher with his Penhill,

And the Painter with his Netts. But I am fent to find those persions whose names are writ,

& can neuer find what names the writing person hath here writ: (I muft to the learned) in good time.

Enter Benvolus, and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burres out anothers burning,

One pane is lefiened by anothers anguish:

Turne giddie, and be holpe by backward turning:

One desparate greffe, cure with anothers louguish:

Take thou forge new infection to the eye,

And the rank boyfon of the old wil die.

Rom. Your Plantain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what I pray thee t

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why Romeo are thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more then a mad man is:

Shut vp in prifon, kept without my foode,

Whipt and tormentt and Godden good fellow,

Ser. Godgigoden, I pray sir can you read?

Rom. I may write fortune in my mistrie.

Ser. Perhaps you have learnt it without booke:

But I pray can you read any thing you see?

Rom. If I know the Letters and the Language.

Ser. Ye say honestly, tell you merry.

Rom. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reads the Letter.

Siegwir, Martine, and his wife and daughter: Counte An-

Feline and his beausions offer: the Lady widow of Wir-

Scigwir, Siegur Placeanter, and his lovely Nerest: Mercutius and his brother Valentine: mine uncle Capules his wife and daughter: my fete Nerest Bafline, Luricia Sigurra Valente, of his Cugen Tybal: Lucio and the lovely Helena.

A faire assembly, whither should they come?

Rom. Whither? to supper?

Ser. To our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Ser. My Maisters.

Rom. Indeed I should have asked you that before.

Ser. Now Ile tell you without asking. My maffier is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of

Montague I pray come and bring a cup of wine.

Be you merry.

Ben. At this fame ancient feast of Capultes

Sups the faire Bafline, whom thou so loues:

With all the adored Beauties of Verona,

Go thither and with vnartainted eye,

Compare her face with some that I'll shal flow,

And I will make thee think thy Swan a Crow.

Rom. When the house doth receive sight of mine eye

Maintaine such falshood, then turne teares to fire:

And those who often drown'd could never die,

Transparent Heretiques be burnt for liers.

One fairer then my loue: the all-seeing Sun

Nere faw her match, since forth the world begun.

Ben. Tut, you faw her faire, none elle being by,

Herfelfe play'd with herfelle in either eye:

But in that Chrifall scates, let there be waid,

Your Ladies loue against some other Maid

That I will shew you, thining at this Feast,

And the fhow fane flall, well, that now fhowes bef.

Rom. Ile goe along, no fuch fight to be fhowne,

But to reioyce in splendour of mine owne.

Enter Capullts wife and Nurfe.

Wife Nurfe when's your daughter? caller her forth to me.

Nurfe. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelue yeares old

I bad her come, what I amb: what Ladi-bird, Godforbid,

Where's this Girls? what Ile

Enter Iulets.

Iulets. How now, who calls?

Nur. Your Mother.

Iulets. Madam I am heere, what is your will:

Wife. This is the matter: Nurfe giue leave awhile, we must.

must talke in secret. Nurse come backe again, I have remembered me, thanke heart our countell. Thou knowst my daughter's of a pretie age.

Nurse. Faith I can tell her age vno hour.

Wife. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. He lay fourteen of my teethes.

And yet to my hearte be spoken, I haue but fourie, she's not fourteen.

How long is it now to Lammas tide?

Wife. A fortnight and oddes dayes.

Nurse. Ake out or else, of all dayes in the yeare come Lammas Eve at night shall the be fourteen. Such & fhe, God, let all Chriftian soules, were of an age. Well, such is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eve at night shall the be fourteen, that片 the marrie, I remember it well. 'Tis since the Earth-quake now choese yeares, and she was went I never shall forgot it, of all the daies of the year, upon that day & I had then

But Woume would I my Dug sitting in the Sunne under the Doucheoute walk, my Lord and I were then at Minveray, I do beeare a braine. But as I said, when it did talke the Woman-wood on the apple of my Dugge, and it fet it better, pretty soule, to see it teares, and fell out with the Dugge, Shake quoth the Dame-hous, it was no neede I know to bid me trudge; and since that time it is a little longest for then they could stand alone, my bide round the could have worn, & waited all about: for even the day before this broke her browe, & then my Husband Goddick with his soule, a was a mere man, tooke up the Child, yeap poet lee, don't shoul fall upon thee face: thou will fall backward when thou hast more wit, with thou not Inlet? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch! Lee crevin, & I will see now how a fel lent come about. I warrant, & I shall like a thouer yeares, I never should forgot it. What shall not Inlet quith helset and pretty fot it fret, and sad I

Old Ga. though of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes Madam, yet I cannot dene but lenger, to think it should leave crying, & say I: and yet I warrant it had upon it bowe, a bumble as big as a young Cockrels fone? A perilous knot, and it eat bodly. Yes quoth my husband, fall upon thy face, thou wilt fall back-ward when thou comnest to rage: wilt thou not Inlet? I flented and said I Inlet. And that thou too. I pray thee Nurse, say I.

Nur. Peace I have done. God make thee no grace thou put the prettiest Babette there canst know, and I might not see thee married once, I haue my wife.

Old Ga. Many that marry is the very theme I came to talk of, tell me daughter Juliet.

How finds your disposition to be Married?

Inlet. It is an houre that I dreamt not, not, Nurse.

Nur. An house, were not I thone only Nurse, I would thou hast litle fuddelesome of thy tear.

Old Ga. Well think of marriage now, younger than you,

Here in Persia, Ladies of effecce,

The you are already Matrons, by our coun-

to Jow. Most deare, but yet thou shalt see,

Which maketh you a Maidie, plus them in briefe:

The valiant Paru seekes you for his lour.

Nurse. In so young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world. Why lirre's a man of wase.

Old Lu. Verona Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay he's a flower, infall a very flower.

Old Lu. What say you, can you love the Gentleman?

This might you shall behold him at our Feast,

Read ore the volume of young Paris face,

And find delight, wast there with Beauties pent.

Examine currie feuerall kissant,

And see how one another lends content.

And where obser'd in this faire volume,

Find written in the Margin of his eyes,

This precious Booke of Love, this unbound Louer,

To Beautifie him, only lacks a Couer.

The fifth lines in the Sea, and 'tis much pride

For faire without, the faire within to hide:

That Booke in manes eyes doth share the glorie,

That in Gold clasps, Lockes in the Golden flower:

So shall you share all that he doth poffef,

By having him, making your felle no lefle.

Nurse. No lefle, my bigger women grow by me,

Old Lu. Speake briefly, can you know of Paris love &

Inle. Ille looke to like, if looking liking, more,

But no more depe will I endart thine eye.

Then your content guies strength to make flye.

Enter A Servant now.

Ser. Madam, the guests are come, suppe frond; ypu can't, my young Lady askt for the Nurse cur'd in the Pantery, and every thing in extremity I must hence to wait, I befeech you follow straight.

Exeunt. We follow the, Juliet, the Countie flates.

Enter Rome, a Pencute Benowle, with fone or fone

other Makers, Torch-bears.

Rom. What shall this speche be spoke for our excute?

Or shall we on without Apologie?

Ren. The date is dus to such preadistie,

While shooe no fepd hood winckt with a skirt,

Bearing a Tragical Bower full of bath,

Skirring the Ladies like a Curious poffef,

But les them in birt to say what they will,

While we reduce them Measure, and be gone.

Rom. Come me a Torch, I am not for this ambling,

But being, bebray I will bee the light.

Merr. Nay gentle Romeo, we mull have you dance.

Rom. Yet I beleue me, you have dancing fhoues,

With nimble fides, I haue a sole of Lead

So fakes me to the ground, I cannot now on,

Merr. You are a Lour, borrow Cupid wings,

And loare with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too far enrapaced with his fliet,

To foaze with his light feathers, and to bound:

I cannot bound a pitch about dull wor,

Vnder lohes heavy burthen doe fink.

Her. To foaze in that you burthen loue,

Too great opprettion for a tender chang.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too soft,

Too rude, too byfletous, and it pricks like thonge.

If loue be rough with you, be rough with foue,

Prick evry tow for pricking, and you best leave downe,

Give me a Cafe to put my village in,

A Wifo for a Wifo, what care I

What curious eye doth quote deformities:

Here are the Beetle-brows shall blash for me

Rom. Come knocke and enter, and no sooner in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A Torch for me,let wano's light of heart

Tickle the fenecelle ruffies with their heneles:

For I am powdered with a Grandifh Phadre,

Ile be a Candle-holder and inake on,

The game was nere so faire, and I am done.

Mr. Tue, duns the Mouse, the Comtabels own word, If thou art dum, write draw thee from the mire. Of; take your reverence left, wherefrom thou first left Vp to the ears, come we beame day, light, ho. Rom. Nay that's not so. Mr. I mean let I delay, We wait our lights in vaine, light, light, by day; Take our good meaning, for ourJudgement fits Fine times in that, ere once in our fine wits. Rom. And we mean well in going to this Maske, But is no wit to go. Mr. Why may one ask? Rom. I dreamt a dreame to night. Mr. And so did I. Rom. Well what was yours? Mr. That dreamers often lie. Ro. In bed a sleepe while they do dreame things true. Mr. O' then I see Queen Mab hath beene with you: She is the Fairy Midwife, & she comes in things no bigger then A Gas-foone, on the fore-flinger of an Alerman, drawne with a teame of little Atomies, our mens noses as they are sleepe: her Waggon Spokes made of long Spinners legs: the Courer of the wings of Grasshoppers, her Traces of the smallet Spiders web, her coallers of the Moonlines watry Beames, her Wup of Crickets bone, the Lath of Philomone, her Wagyoner, a small gray-coated Gnat, not Gate to bigge as a round little Water, prickt from the Laze-flinger of a man. Her Chariot is an empty Halchen, made by the lowner Squirel or old Grub, time out a mind, the Fairies Coach-makers, &t in this Voice the gallsops night by night, through, lour bees brains: then they are a sleepe of Ouer. Counters knees, that dream on Curries frailt, or Lawyers fingers, who slay dreamt on Peas, one Ladies lips, who slay on kisses dreame, which ole the unhappy Mab with blithers plagues, because their breath with Sweet mens tam'd are. Sometimes the gallsops are a Courters note, & then dreames he of smelld out office, & fortnime comes the with Tith pigs tale, tickling a Parson note as a lies sleepe, then he dreames of another Benefice. Sometimes the driveth out a Souldiers necke, & then dreames he of cutting Forraine throats. of Breaches, Ambuscades, Spanish Blades: Of Healths fine Padome deep, and then anon drums in his ears, at which he startes and wakes, and being thus frighted, he vehes a prayer or two & sleepe agayn, this is that very Mab that plats the mane of Horifes in the night, & bakes the Elklocks in foule (fufhink hairs, which once entangled, much misfortune bodes, This is the bag, when Maides lie on their backs, That presses them, & leane them first to bear, Making them womps of good carriage: This is fine.

Rom. Peace, peace, (Mecum is peace, Thou talkl'ft of nothing. Mr. True, I talk with dreams: Which are the children of an idle braine, Begot of nothing, but vaine phantasie, Which is as thin of substance as the ayre, And more unconfant then the wind, who woos Even now the frozen bosome of the North. And being angerd, paffes away from thence, Turning his fate to the dew dropping South.

Ben. This wind you talk of blowes vs from our feetes, Supper is done, and we shal come too late. Rom. I feare too early, for my mind misgives, Some conquence yet hanging in the hares, Shall bitterly begin his heavy full date. With this nights stews, and expire the reame Of a despitful life cloath'd in my breast. By some vile forfeit of unhumble death. But he that hath the hirage of my courte, Died my fute: on Luttie Gentlemen.

Ben. Strike Drum.

They march about the Stage, and Serving men come forth with their napkins.

Enter Serving men.
 Ser. Where's the Petrum, that he helpfuls not to take away? He shal a Puncher the refcape a Trencher? 1. When good manners, shall be in one or two mens hands, and they washe not, 'tis a foule thing. Ser. Away with the leyfnelotes, remove the Court-ebourd, looke to the Plate: good thou, fuc mee piece of Marchpane, and as thou louest mee, let the Perch let in Siril Gransefone, and Ne, Anthony and Petrum. 2. I Boyleadle. Ser. You are look for, and call'd for, askt for, & sought for, in the great Chamber. 1 We cannot be here and there too, clearly Boyes, Be brisk while, and the longer huer take all.

Exit. Enter all the Griefs and Gentlemen to the Maske.
 1. Cap. Welcome Gentlemen, Ladies that have their toes
 Vasplagud with Cornet, will walke about with you:
 Ah my Miferesses, which of you all
 Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,
 She He swearst hath Cornet am I come near ye now;
 Welcome Gentlemen, I haue scene the day
 That I have worn a Vifor, and could tell
 A whispening tale in a faire Ladies eare:
 Such as would pleafe: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone,
 You are welcome gentlemen, come Muffetians play:
 Muffetians play: and the dance.

A Hall, Hall, give room, and fow it, the girls,
 More light you knows, and turne the Tables vp:
 And quench the fire, the Roomes is grown too hot,
 Ah firrath, this vnlooks for sport comes well:
 Nay it, may fitt, good Cozin Capner,
 For you and Iare past our dawning daies:
 How long 'tis now since left your felte and I,
 Were in a Maske?

2. Cap. Belrady thirty yeares,
 3. Cap. What man? 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much,
 'Tis since the Nuptial of Lucentio,
 Come Penryce off as quickly as will,
 Some fuce and twenty yeares, and then we Mask.
 2. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his Sonne is elder for:
 His Sonne is thirty.
 3. Cap. Will you tell me that?
 His Sonne was but a Ward two yeares agoe.

Rom. What Ladie is that which dothis rich the hand
 Of yonder Knight?
 Ser. I know not sir,

Rom. Of the doth teach the Torches to burne brite:
 It feeme the hanges up the cheeckes of night,
 As a rich jewel in an Aristops ear:
 Beauty too rich for vs, for earth too deare:
 So shewes a Snowye Duke trooping with Crowes,
 As yonder Ladie ore her fellows howes;
 The measure done, he watch her place of hand,
 And touching hers, make blesse my rude hand.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Did my heart loue till now, forswear it fights,
For I returne for true Beauty till this night.

Tib. This by his voice, should be a Montague.
Fetch me my Rapier Boy, what dares the fault
Come hither cox't, with an antique face,
To ferrre and fcorne at our Solemnity?
Now by the flocke and Honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a fin.

Cap. Why how now kinman,
Wherefore fcorne you fo?

Tib. Vnle this is a Montague, our foe:
A Villaine that is hither come in fpring,
To fcorne at our Solemnity this night.

Cap. Young Romeus is it?
Tib. 'Tis he, that Villaine Romeus.

Cap. Content thee gentle Cox, let him alone,
A beares him like a porty Gentleman:
And to fay truth,
Crome brags of him,
To be a vertuous and well gouern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all the towne,
Here in my houfe do him disparsagement:
Therefor this patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, she which thou refpeft,
Shew a faire prefence, and put off thofe frownes,
An ill befoming enamance for a Feall.
Tib. It fits when such a Villaine is a gueft,
Ile not endure him.

Cap. He fhall be endur'd.
What goodman boy, I fay he fhall, go too,
Am I the Maifier here or you go too,
You're not endure him, God fhall mend my foule,
Youe make a Mutinie among the Guefta:
You will let fcoke a hoope, youe be the man.
Tib. Why Vnle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go too, go too,
You are a fawcy Boy, 'tis fo indeed?
This tricke may chance to fcafh you, I know what,
You muft contrary me, carry fis time.

Well faid my firs, you are a Princox, goe,
Be quiet, or more light, more light for shame,
Ile make you quiet. What, chearely my hearts.
Tib. Patience perchore, with willfull cholrer meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting:
I will withdraw, but this intrufion fhall
Now feeming fweet, concert to bitter gall.

Rom. If I prophanne with my vnworthie fhould,
This holy fhrine, the gentle fin this,
My lips to buffling Pilgrims did ready hand,
To smooth that rough touch, with a tender kiffe.

Good Pilgrime,
You do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly defcription fewith in this,
For Saint haue hands, that Pilgrims hands do tuch,
And paime to paime, is holy Pilmers kiffe.

Rom. Haue not Saint lips, and holy Pilmers too?

Inf. I Pilgrime, lips that they must fwe in prayer.
Rom. O then deare Saint, let lip do what hands do,
They make a grant thou) felf fhame turnes to difpare.

Inf. Saintes do not moue.

Though great for prayers fake.

Rom. Then mooue not while my pray'rs effect I take:
Thus from my lips, by thine my fin is purd'd.

Inf. Then haue my lips the fin that they haue touke.
Rom. Sin from my lips, O treuefale sweetly vrg'd:
Give me my fin againe.

Inf. You kiffe by th' book.

Nur. Madam your Mother caues a word with you.
Rom. What is her Mother?

Nur. Marrie Battcher,
Her Mother is the Lady of the house,
And a good Lady, and a wife, and Vertuous,
I Nur'll her Daughter that you talkt withall:
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her,
Shall haue the chinsks.
Rom. If she a Cuplet?
O deare account! My life is my foes debt.
Ben. Away, be gone, the sport is at the belt.
Rom. I fear the more is my vnft.

Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We have a triuffling foolifh Banquet towards:
Is it ne fo? why then I thank you all.
I thank you honest Gentlemen, good night:
More Torches here come on, then let's to bed.
Ah frrah, by my fai it waxes late,
Ile to my felf.

Inf. Come hither Nurfe.
What is yourd Gentleman:

Nur. The Sonne and Heire of old Tybrio.
Inf. What's he that now is going out doore?

Nur. Marrie that I thinke be young Petruchio,
Inf. What's he that follows here that would not dance?

Nur. Know.

Inf. Go aske his name: If he be married,
My graue is like to be my wedded bed.

Nur. His name is Romeus, and a Montague,
The onely Sonne of your great Enemie.

Inf. My onely Loue sprung from my onely hate,
Too early fene, unknowne, and knowne too late,
Prophetic birth of Loue it is to me,
That I must be loathed Enemie.

Nur. What's this? what this?

Inf. A time, I learne euyn now
Of one I don't withall.

Nur. Anon, anon:
Come let's away, the strangers all are gone.

Exeunt.

Chorus.
Now old defire doth in his death bed lie,
And yong affection gapes to be his Heire,
That fain, for which Loue gran'd for and would die,
With tender Infers match, is now not faine.
Now Romeus is beloued, and Loues again,
A like bewitched by the charm of lookes:
But to his foe Appol's he much complaines,
And the faire Loues fweete baiet from fearfull bookes:
Being held a foe, he may not haue access,
To breath fuch vowes as Louers victowe to,
And fhe as much in Loue, her meates much leffe,
To meeter her new beloued any where:
But paflion lends them Power, time, meannes to meete,
Temping extremities with extreme sweetes,

Enter Romeus alone.

Rom. Can I goe forward when my heart is here?
Tunne backe dull earth, and find thy Center out.

Enter Banfto, with Mercuito.

Ben. Romeus, my Conen Romeus, Romeus.

Mere. He is wife,
And on my life hath flonne him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way and leapt this Orchard wall.

Call good Mercuito:

Nay, he cannte more.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

Mrs. Roman, Humours. Madonna, Paffion, Louer,
Apparre thou in the likeness of a figh,
Speake but one time, and I am satisfied.
Cry me but sy me, Proud, but Loue and day,
Speake to my godfhip Venus one faire word;
One Nickname for her publish Sonne and her,
Young Abraham Cupid he that flote to true,
When King Cepheus loud the beggar Maid,
He heareth not, he striest not, he mounteth ot,
The Ape is dead, I must confine him,
I confine thee by Refilates bright eye,
By her High forehead, and her Scatter lip,
By her Fane foon, Straight leg, and Quining thigh,
And the Deamans, that there Admiring lie,
That in thy likeness thou appeare to vs.

Ten. And if he heare thou wilt anger him.

Mrs. This cannot anger him, 'twould anger him
To raise a spirit in his Mislike circle,
Of some strange nature, feeting it hand
Till the had laid it, and contined it down,
That were none spirit.
My imagination is faire and honest, & in his Mixture name,
I confine ouely but to raise vp him.
Ten. Come, he hath his himselfe among these Trees
To bee conformed with the Humerous night:
Blind is his Loue, and heft befits the darke.

Mrs. If Loue be blind, Loue cannot hit the mark,
Now will he fee without a Medder tree,
And with his Mixture yeare that kind of Fruite,
As Maidens call Medlers when they laugh alone,
Romeo that the were, O that the were
An open, or thou a Poprin Perre,
Romeo goodnight, Ile to my Truckle bed,
This Field-bed is too cold for me to sleepe,
Come off, and all we go.

Ben. Go then, let's in vaine to feeke him here
That means, not to be found.

Exeunt.

Romeo. He leafea at Scarres that neuer felt a wound,
But felt, what light through yonder window breaks down.
It is the East, and Juliet is the Sunne,
Affre faire Sun and kill the curious Moon,
Who is already fiek and pale with greefe,
That thou her Matid art far more faire than she,
But her Matid is faire, to be enviuous,
Her Vertall liuely is but fickle and greene,
And none but fooles doe wearre it, call it off:
It is my Lady, O is it my Loue, O that she knew the were,
She speakes, yet the fayes nothing, what of that?
Her eye dencourses, I will answere it:
I am too bold to tell thee, she speaks.
Two of the fairest flares in all the Heauen,
Having some bufinesse do entreate her eyes,
To twinkdle in their Spheres till they resume.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head,
The brightness of her cheeke would name those flares,
As day-light doth a Lampe, her eye in heaven,
Would through the syrie Region flame so bright,
That birds would frug, and think it were not night:
How he the leaves her cheeke upon her hand.
O that I were a Cloone upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheeke.

Jul. By me.

Romeo. She speakes.
Oh speake againe bright Angel, for thou art
As glorious to this night being ere my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven.

Vnto the white upturned wondering eyes
Of morralls that fall backe to gaze on him,
When he befindes the laziest putting Cloudes,
And failes upon the bosome of the syre.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
Denie thy Father and refuse thy name;
Or if thou wilt not, be but fixome my Loue,
And Ile no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speake at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my Enemy;
Thou art thy selfe, though thou art Montague;
What's Montague it is no hand nor tooote,
Nor name, nor face, O be some other name
Belonging to a man.

What is a name that we call a Rofe,
By any other word would smell as sweete,
So Rome would, were he not Rome call'd,
Retaine that dcare perfection which he owes,
Without that title Rome, dothe thy name rane,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,
Take all my selfe.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but Loue, and He be new baptis'd,
Hence forth I never will be Rome.

Jul. What man art thou, that thus beforesen'd in night
So stumbleth on my counsell?

Rom. By a name,
I know not how to speake to thee who I am
My name dear Saint, is hateful to my felfe,
Because it is an Enemy to thee,
Hast thou writ it, I would teare the word.

Jul. My eates have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of thy tongues vittering, yet I know the sound.
Art thou not Rome, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither faire Maid, of either thee dislike.

Jul. How canst thou hit her, tell me, and wherefore?
The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climb,
And the place death, confidering who thou art.
If any of my kinmen find thee here,

Rom. With Loues light wings
Did I oer-perch thefe Walls,
For flowy limis cannot hold Loue out,
And what Loue can do, that dares Loue attempt:
Therefore thy kindnes are no flip to me.

Jul. If they do fpee thee, they will murther thee.

Rom. Alake there lies more peril in thine eye,
Then twenty of their Swords, doke thou but sweete,
And I am profe for against their emnity.

Jul. I would not for the world they fawe thee here.

Rom. I have nights cloue to hide me from their eyes
And thou loue me, let them find me here,
My life were better ended by their hate.
Then death progrized wanting of thy Loue.

Jul. By whose whole direction foundst thou out this place?

Rom. By Loue that first did promp me to enquire,
He lent me counsell, and I lent him eyes,
I am no Pylot, yet wer thou as far
As that valt-shore-wallet with the fairest Sea,
I should adventure for such a Machandife.

Jul. Thou knowest the maske of night is on my face,
Else would a Maidens blufh bemine my cheeks.
For that which thou hail heard me speake to night,
Faine would I dwell on forme, faine, faine, faine
What I burst, fpeak, but farewell Complement,
Doth thou Loue I know thou wilt say 1,
The Tragedie of Rome and Juliet.

And I will take thy word, yet if thou swearst,
Thou maist prove false: for Louers prerties
They say love laugh'd, oh, gentle Romans,
If thou dost Loue, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou thinkst I am too quickly wonne,
I'll browne and be peruerse, and say the nay:
So thou wouldest, but else not for the world.
In truth faire Montague I am too fond:
And therefore thou maist thynke my behavour light,
But trust me Gentleman, Ile prove more true,
Then those that haue coging to be strange,
I should have been more strange, I must confesse,
But that thou ouer heardst Ie was ware
My true Loues passion, therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yeilding to light Loue,
Which the darke night hath so discoouered.
Rom. Lady, by yonder Moone I vow,
'That tips with silver all these Fruite tree tops.
Jul. I swear not by the Moone, thinconstant Moone,
That moneth changes in her circled Orbe,
Least that thy Loue prove like wise variable.
Rom. What shall I swear by?
Jul. I do not swear at all:
Orst thou wouldest swear by thy gratious selfe,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And Ile beleue thee.
Rom. If my hearts desire loue.
Jul. Well do not swere, although I joy in thee;
I have no joy of this contract to night,
It is too saile, too unwau'd, too sudden,
Too like the lightning which doth ceafe to be
Ere, one can fay, it lightnes, Sweete good night:
This bad Loue of Byoue by Summers ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous Flower when we meete,
Goodning, goodnight, as sweete repoe and ref,
Come to thy heart, as that within my bref,
Rom. O wilt thou leue me to unsatisfied?
Jul. What satisfaction can't thou have to night?
Rom. The change of thy Loues faithfull vow for mine.
Jul. I gape thee mine before thou didst requite it:
And yet I would it were to give again.
Rom. Would't thou withdraw it,
For what purpose Loue?
Jul. But to frsne and give it thee again,
And yet I wiff but for the thing I haue,
My bountye is as bondifie as the Sea,
My Loue is depe, the more I gue to thee
The more I haue, for both are incommen:
I haue some maye within desir Loue adue:
Anon good Night, sweete Montague be true:
Stay bat little, I will come again.
Rom. O bielded blefled night, I am afraid
Being in night, all this is but a dreame,
Too flattering to be fulle trustfull.
Jul. Three words desir Rome,
And goodnight indeed,
I fhall thy bent of Loue be Honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, fend me word to morrow,
By one that I procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt performe the right,
And all my Fortunes at thy foot I leye,
And follow thee my Lord throughout the world.
Witnes: Madam.

I come, mon; but if thou meanest not well,
I do beleefe thee

(By and by I come)
To ceafe thy strife, and leave me to my grief,
To morrow will I fend,
Rom. So thrive my soule.

In. A thousand times goodnight.

Exit. Rome. A thousand times the worke to want thy light,
Loue goes toward Loue as school-boys for drie books
But Loue for Loue, towards schoole with beauteous looks.

Enter Iuliet again.

In. Hift Rome; biff: O for a Falkneres voice,
To lute this Taffell gentle backe againe,
Bondage is house, and may not speake aloud,
Elle would I teare the Case where Excholas,
And make her ayre tongue more house, then
With repetition of my Rome.
Rom. It is my foule that calls upon my name.
How fluter sweet, found Louers tongues by night,
Like sweete Musick to attending eares.
In. Rome.
Rom. My Neece,
In. Do not swear at all:
Orst thou wouldest swear by thy gratious selfe,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And Ile beleue thee.
Rom. If my hearts desire loue.
Jul. Well do not swere, although I joy in thee;

Witnes: Madam.

I come, mon; but if thou meanest not well,
I do beleefe thee

(Exit. Rome.)

In. The gray eyd monere shines on the frowning night,
Checking the Eastern Cloudes with stiffness of light:
And flecked darknefe like a drunkard reles,
From forth diues path, and Tauras burning wheel.
Now ere the Sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheere, and nights danke dew to dry,
I must viflt this Ofer Cage of fons,
With baufeal wheeles, and precious fusled flowers,
The earth that's Nature mother, is her Tumbre,
What is her busying graue that is her wonbe:
And from her wonbe children of diuers kind

We Enter Romeo.

Within the infant rind of this weak flower,
Poyson hath refidence, and medicine power:
For this being fast, with that part chinese each part,
Being called iyles all forces with the heart.
Two such opposed Kings encompe them thil.
In man as well a Heartes grace and rude will:
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soone the Canker death caues up that Plant.

Rom. Good morrow Father.
Fri. Benedicite.

What early tongue so sweete fulleth me?
Young Sonne, it argues a distempered head,
So looie to bid goodmorning to thy bed;
Care keeps his watch in every old mans eye,
And where Care lodges, Spleene will never leye:
But where vnbrutall youth with vnwithe braine
Doth touch his limne, then keepe doth dole raigne;
Therefore thy earsleffe doth selfe affright,
Thou art so proued with some disemprasse:
Or if not, then here I hit it right.

Or Roman hath not bene in bed to night.
Rom. That last is true, the sweeter self was mine.
Fri. God pardon sinfull wight thou with Rosaline?
Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly Father? No,
I have forgot that name, and that names woe.
Fri. That's my good Son, but wheit hauh thun bin then?
Rom. I tell thee ere thou ask me it again:
I have beene feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounde me,
That's by me wounding each our remedies:
Within thy helpe and holy plishicke lies:
It bear three hauers, a hauers manfor love.
My interception like wife frets my face.
Fri. Be plaine good Son, left homely in thy drift,
Ridding confession, finds but ridling thirst.
Rom. Then plainly know my hearts deare Loue is set,
On the faire daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, lo hers is set on me;
And all combind, face what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when and where, and how,
We met, we wooed, and made exchange of vow:
I tell thee as we paff, but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry vs to day.
Fri. Holy S. Francis, what a change is here?
Is Rosaline that thou didst Loue so deare
So faire forraken? young mens Loue then lies
Not only in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jefu, Marua, what a destile of brine
Hath wheit thy fellow cheakes for Rosaline?
How much fait water throwen away in waft,
To feslon Loue that of it doth not tait.
The Sunne: yet thy fighees, from heaven clears,
Thy old grones yet ringing in my sancient cates:
Loe her upon thy cheeke the flame doth fit,
Of an old teare that is not wafht off yet:
If eere thou wafht thy felle, and thefe woves thine,
Thou and thefe wores, were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence then,
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.
Rom. Thou chid'it me oft for loving Rosaline.
Fri. For dosing not for loving pupill mine.
Rom. And bad't me bury Loue.
Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to hauue.
Rom. I pray thee chide me not, her I Love now
Dowth grace for grace, and Loue for Loue allow:
The other did not so.
Fri. O fie knew well,
Thy Loue did read by rote, that could not spell:
But come young wailer, come goe with me,
In one respect, I thee affiandt be:
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turne thy houseshould rancour to pure Loue.
Rom. O let vs hence, I fland on fudden but.
Fri. Wisely and flow, they stumble that run fast.

Exeunt

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where, the deale should this Romeo be? come he not home to night?
Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spoke with his man.
Mer. Why that fame pale hard harted wench, that Rosaline tornets has haue, that he will Byrne mad.
Rom. Tell it, the husband to old Cap coworkers sent a Letter to his Fathers house.
Mer. A challenge on my life.
Rom. Rome will anwer it.
Mer. Any man that can write, may ansver a Letter.
Ben. Nay, he will ansver the Letters Master how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas poor Romeo, he is already dead flab'd with a white wench's blacke eye, runne through the eare with a Loue song, the very pune of his heart, eft with the blind Bowe-boyest but, flait, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why what is Tybalt?
Mer. More then Prince of Cats. Oh hee's the Courageous Captain of Complements: he fights as you fight pick'd fong, keeps time, Affiance, and proportion, here's his minum, one, two, and the third in your boomen: the very butcher of a silk byton, a Dusiatt, a Tusiatt: a Gentleman of the very fireth house of the first and second caufe: sh the immortal Paffio in the Punto teuesco, the Hay.

Ben. The what?
Mer. The Pex offuch antique lifting affecting phantacies, the newe tunes of accent: I see a very good blade,
A very tall man, a very good where. Why is not this a lamentable thing, Grandifie, that we should be thus affiined with thee strange flies these fashion Mongers, these pando mone's, who fland fo much on the newe form, that they cannot fit as eafe on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.
Mer. Without his Box, like a dayed Hering. O sfit, sfit, how art thou fiuified? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch Bowed in: Laura his lady, was a kiten wench, marry she had a better Loue to be corne her: Erdo a dowe, Cleopatra a Gipife, Helen and Here, buildings and Harlotas Thesews a gray frie or so, but not to the purpose, Signior Romeo, Ben thur, there's a French salutation to your ff

Romeo. Good morrow to you both, what counterfait did I give you?

Mrs. The flip, the flip, can you not conceive?

Romeo. Pardon Mrs. Mercutio; my bufineffe was great, and in that cafe as mine, a man may frame counterfeit.

Mrs. That's as much as to say, such a cafe as yours contains a man to bow in the hands.

Romeo. Meant to cut office.

Mrs. Thou haft most kindly hit it.

Romeo. A most curteous expedition.

Mrs. Nay, I am the very pinck of counterfeit.

Romeo. Pink of flower.

Mrs. Right.

Romeo. Why then is my Pump well flow'd.

Mrs. Sure; wift, follow me this caft, now thou haft wrought out thy Pump, that when the sngle fold of it is worn, the leaf may remain after the wearing, folc-fingular.

Romeo. O sngle fold is left, Solitary singular for the singlenesse.

Mrs. Come between vs good Bennville, my wits faina, Swits and pur, or else erie a march.

Mrs. Nay, if our wits run the Wild-Goofe chafe, I am done; Fortho haft made off the Wild-Goofe; in one of thy wits, then I am sure I haft in my whole fue. Was I with you there for the Goofe?

Romeo. Thou well with me for any thing, when thou walt not there for the Goofe.

Mrs. I well bite thee of the care for that is.

Romeo. Nay, good Goofe bite not.

Mrs. Why is that very Buter-tweeting, It is a most sharpfawce.

Romeo. And is it not well fendt into a Sweet-Goofe?

Mrs. One haft a wit of Cheucerell, that stretchs from an eye-narrow to an ell broad.

Romeo. I fhow thee out for that world broach, which added to the Goofe's, proves thee fame and wide, abroad Goofe.

Romeo. Why is not this better now, then groining for Loue, now art thou forcible, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art by Art as well as by Nature, for this druelling Loue is like a great Naturall, that runs looling vp and downe to bid his bable in a hole.

Romeo. Stop the flip, there.

Romeo. Thou defir'd me to flip in my tale against the thou wouldft tel me that he made thy tale large, (haire."

Enter Nurse and her man.

Romeo. Here's a goodly spruce,

A fit, a tafe.

Nurse. Two, tow, tow Shirt and a Smocke.

Romeo. Pater?

Enter. Annen.

Nurse. My Fan Pater?

Romeo. Good Pater to hide her face?

For her face, the cutter face.

Nurse. God ye good now a Gentleman.

Romeo. God ye good face Gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it gooden?

Romeo. This leffe tell you: for the badwy hand of the Daff is now won the pincke of Noone.

Nurse. Out upon you, what a man are you?

Romeo. One Gentlewoman.

That God hath made himfelfe to mar.

Nurse. By my truth, it is said, for himfelfe to, mar quas.

This Gentleman, can any of you tel me where I may find the young Romea?

Romeo. I can tell you: but young Romea will be older when you have found him, then he was when you feught him: I am the youngfelf of that name, for fault of a worfe.

Nurse. You lie very weel.

Nurse. Yes it is the worf well, Very well cooke: faith, wifely, wifely,

Nurse. If you be he fir, I defire some confidence with you?

Romeo. She will endite him to some Supper.

Nurse. A bau, a bau, a bau. So no.

Romeo. What haft thou found?

Nurse. No Hare fir, vnfee a Hare fir in a Lenten pie, that is something stale and hoarse eie it befent.

An old Hare hoare, and an old Hare hoare is very good meat in Lent.

But a Hare that is hoarse is too much for a score, when it hoares eie it be fpent,

Romeo. Will you come to your Fathers? Weelee to dinner thisther.

Romeo. I will follow you.

Nurse. Farewell assuent Lady; Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

Exit. Mercutio, Bennville.

Nurse. I pray yous, what favorie Merchant was this than was full of his proper.

Romeo. A good Man Nurse, that loves to leave himfelfe talk, and will speake more in a minute, then he will stand to a Moneth.

Nurse. And speake anything against me, I take him downer, & were better then he, and were fuch a

Nay come I pray thee speake, good Nurfe, good speake.
Nur. I fea what hath can you not fay a while?
Do you not fee that I am out of breath?
Inlet. How arft thou out of breath, when thou haft breath
To fay to me, that thou art out of breath?
The excufe that thou doul make in this delay,
It longer then the tale thou doft excufe.
Is thy newes good or bad?answer to that,
Say eithe, and fay the circumstances:
Let me be satisfied, if good or bad?
Nur. Well, you have made a simple choice, you know not how to chufe a man: Romeone, no not lie though his face be better then any man, yet his legs excels all mens, and for a hand, and a fource, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare: is he not the flower of curtice, but Ie warrant him as gente a Lambe: igo thy wains wench, ferue God, What haue you din’d at home?
Inlet. No no: but this all I did I know before.
What faies he of his marriage? what of that?
Nur. Lord how my head aches, what a head: I
It beares as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My backe a nother fide: my backe, my backe:
Befirew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with haunting vp and downe.
Inlet. Ifaith! am forrie that that thou art so well.
Sweet sweet, sweet Nurfe, tell me what faies my Loue?
Nur. Your Loue faies like an honifie Gentleman:
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handomr,
And I warrant a vertuous: where is your Mother?
Inlet. Where is my Mother?
Why the is within, where should she be?
How odly thou replieth:
Your Loue faies like an honifie Gentleman:
Where is your Mother?
Nur. O Gods Lady deare,
Are you fo honifie, as I do now:
Is that the Poultis for my skyn bones?
Henceforward do your messages your selfe,
Inlet. Here’s such a coile, come what faies Romeone?
Nur. Have you got leave to go to firft to day?
Inlet. I have.
Nur. Then high you hence to Frier Laurence Cell,
There faies a Husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood vp in your cheekes,
That be in Scarlet straight at any newes:
His you to Church, I muff an other way,
To fetch a Ladder by the which your Loue
Muff climb the birds neft Soone when it is dace:
I am the drudge, and coile in your delight:
But you flall beare the burthen some at night,
Go lie to dinner, his you to the Cell:
Inlet. It is to high Fortune, honifie Nurfe, farewell. Enter Nurfe.

Enter Frier and Romeone.
Frie. So faire the heavenes vpken this holy st,
That after houres, with forrow chide vs not.
Romeone. Amen,amen, but come what forrow can,
It cannot counteracte the exchange of Joy
That one short minute glues me in her figh:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then Loue-decouring death do what he dace,
It is good, I may but call her mine.
Frie. These violent delights have violent endes,
And in their triumph die like fire and powder;
Which as they kiffe confume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his owne delight,
And in the tale confounds the appetitse.
Therefore Loue moderately, long Loue doth so,
Too swift arrives as carodie as too slow.

The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

A Louer may behinde the Goflamours,
That ydes in the wanton Summer syre,
And yet not fall, for lights is vanitie.

Int. Good even to my ghostly Confessor.
Fri. Romeo shall thanke thee Daught for vs both.

Int. And make him, ells in his thanke too much.
Fri. Ah Idest, if the measure of thy joy
Be heape like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour syre, and let rich mufickes tongue,
Vfold the imagin'd happinesse that both
Receiv in either, by this deere encounter.

Int. Conceit more rich in matter then in words,
Drawn from his flabbish, not of Ornament:
They are but beggers that can count their worth,
But my true Louse is growne to such excess,
I cannot sum vp some of haile my weath.

Fri. Come, come with me, & we will make short worke,
For by your leaves, you shall not alone,
Till holy Church incorporate two in one.

Enter Aftonieto, Benvolio, and men.

Ben. I pray thee good Mercutio lets retire,
The day is hot, the Capuletts abroad:
And if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl, for now these hot dayes, is the mad blood running.

Mer. Thou art one of thefe fellows, that when he enters the confines of a Tavern, claps me this Sword upon the Table, and says, Good God, you think me no need of thee; and by the operation of the second cup, draws him on the Draw

Ben. Am I like such a Fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a lacke in thy mood, as any in Italy: and affoone moued to be moodie, and affoone moodie to be mood'd.

Ben. And what too?

Mer. Nay, and there were two fuch, we should have done some thing; for one would kill the other, why thou wilt quarrell with a man that hath a haire more, or a haire leffe in his head, then thou haft thou wilt quarrell with a man for cracking Nuts, hauing no other reason, but because thou haft haile eyes: what eye, but such an eye, would spit out such a quarrell? thy head is as full of quarrells, as an egge is full of mems, and yet thy head hath bin beaten out of Rede: Mercutio is as mad for quarrelling: thou haft quarrel'd with a man for coolling in the street, because he haft weakened thy Dogh that haft laine asleep in the Sun.Didst thou not fall out with a Tailor for wearing his new Doub let before Easter? with another, for trying his new shoes with old Riband, and yet thou wilt Tutor me from quarrelling?

Ben. And I were so apt to quarrill as thou art, any man should buy the Free-fipme of my life, for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The Free-Simpie I do simple.

Enter Tybal, Paris, and others.

Mer. By my head there comes the Capuletts.

Int. By my heare I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speake to them.

Gentlemen, Good day, a word with one of you.

Mer. And just on word with one of you, to couple it with something, make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, and you will give me occasion.

Merc. Could you not take some occasion without

Romeo he cries aloud,
Held Friends, Friends past, and swifter then his tongue,
Hiss aged arm, beats downe their fatal points,
And twist them ruthles, underneath whole armes,
An enious thrall from Tybalt, but the life
Gilles Mercutio, and Tybalt red.
But by and by comes backe to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertained Reuenge,
And tooo, they goe like lightning, fer I could draw to part them, was Round Tybalt staine:
And as he fell, did Romeo turne and flye:
This is the truth, or let Reuelo die.

We are vndone Lady, we are vndone.
Alacke the day, here's gone, hee's kill'd, hee's dead.

Ind. Can heauen be so enuious?

Nur. Revenge can,
Though heaven cannot.

Ind. What diuelt art thou,
That dost torment me thus?
This torture should be roard in distall hell,
Hath Romeo slaine himselfe? say thou but I,
And that bare wounde I shall posy on more
Then the death-darling eye of Cockatrice,
I am not I, let there be such an I.
Or those yeues shots that makes thee anwser I?
If he be flaine say I, or if not, no.

Nur. I saw the wounde, I saw it with mine eyes,
Great was the sorowe, there on his many breth,
A piteous Causehe, a bloody piteous Causehe,
Pale pale as after, all bedawd'd in blood,
All in gore blood I founded at the fight.

Ind. O breake my heart,

To prision eyes, here looke on Liberrie.
Vile earth to earth refine, and motion here,
And thus and Rome sue preffe on heauen beere.

Nur. O Tybalt, Tybalt, she be thine Friend I had:
O courteous Tybalt, honest Gentleman,
That ever I should live to fee thee dead.

Ind. What forme is this that blowes so contrarie?
Is Romeo thought? And is Tybalt dead?

My desett Cozen, and my dearest Lord:
Then dreadful Trumpet sound the general doome,
For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nur. Tybalt is gone, and Rome vanisht,
Romes that kid him, he is banisht.

Ind. O God!
Did Romes hand shed Tybalts blood
It did in deed, this day it did.

Nur. O Serpent heart hid with a flowering face,
Ind. Did ever Dragon keep to faire a Cat?

Beautiful Tybalt, fiend Angelical:
Benevolent Dese-foather'd Raen,
Wolflife, sounding Lambe,
Dispared instance of Drumett showe:
Just oppoist to what thou hastly feene't,
A dimme Neart, an Honorable Villain:
O Nature! what hast thou to doe in hell,
When thou didst hower the spirites of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet music?
Wast ever booke containing such vile matter
So finely bound? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous Palacie.

Nur. There's not tru't, no faith, no honestie in men,
All perjured, all forsworne, all aught, all difembled,

Ah where's my man? give me some Aqua-vite?
These griefes, these woes, these sorrows make me old;
Shame come to Rome.

Ind. Bitter'd be thy tongue
For such a wil, he was not borne to blame
When his brow shame is sash'd to fit;
For 'tis a thronne where Honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the vnscuerfull earth:
O what a beast was I to chide him?

Nur. Will you speake well of him,
That kill'd your Cozen?

Ind. Shall I speake ill of him that is my husband?
Ah poyse my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thyn name,
When I thy three hours wife have mangle'd it.
But wherefore Villaine didn't thou kill my Cozin?
That Villaine Cozin would have kild my husband:
Backe foolish teares, backe to thy native spring,
Your tributarie drops belong to woe,
Which you maketh offering to joy:
My husband lives that Tybalt would have slaine,
And Tybalt dead that would have slaine my husband:
All he doth revenge, wherefore wepe I then?
Some wordes there was worse then Tybals death
That murdered me, I would forget it feaine,
But oh, it preties to my memory,
Like damned guilty deites to finnes minds,
Tybalt is dead and Rome banisht:
That banisht, that one word banisht,
For of one name there are ten thousand:
Tybalt Tybalt Tybalt Tybalt death
Wos wo'd if it had ended there:
Or if sooner voe delights in fellowship,
And neenly will be rankt with other griefes,
Who followed now when she said Tybals dead,
Thy Father or thy Mother ney or both,
Which modern lamentation might have mould:
But which a rare-ward following Tybals death
It Romes is banisht to speake that word,
Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All flaine, all dead: Rome is banisht,
There is no end, no limit, nice, sure, bound,
In that words death, no words can that woe found.
Where is my Father and my Mother Nurse?

Nur. Weeping and wailing over Tybals Cause,
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Ind. Wast they his wounds with earthenisme that be frent
When theirs are drie for Rome's banishment.
Take vp those Condels, poor sweete rope you are beguil'd?
Both you and I for Rome's exil'd
He made you for a high-way to my bed,
But I Maid, the Maidens widowed.
Come Condels, come Nurse, heere to my wedding bed,
And death not Rome takes my Maidens head.

Nur. Here is your Ouberte, he find Rome's
To comfort you, I won well where he is:
Harke ye your Rome will be here at night,
Ile to him, his is laid a Lawrrence Cell.

Ind. O find him, give this Ring to my true Knight,
And bid him come, to take his lady farewell.

Enter Friar and Romeo,

Fri. Rome comes forth,
Come forth thou feast full man,
Affliction is enamor'd of thy parts:
And thou art wedded to calamitie,

Rome. Father what news?
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

What is the Prince Doome?

What sorrow causes accuainance at my hand,
That I yet know not.

Fri. Too familiar
Is my deare Sonne with such fowre Company
I bring thee tydings of the Princes Doome.

Rem. What feale then Doome day?
Is the Princes Doome?

Fri. A gentler judgement vanish't from his lips,
Not bodyes death, but bodyes banishment.

Rom. Has banishment? be mercifull, say death:
For exile hath more terror in his looke,
Much more then death:do not say banishment.

Fri. Here from Perns art thou banished:
Before the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Coraus walls,
But Purgatorio, Torture, hell is felce:
Hence banished, is banished from the world,
And worldes exile is death. Then banished,
Is death, milseard, calling death banished,
Thou eun't my hand off with a golden Axe,
And banished upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin, OGRADE wthoutefeintesse!
Thy fall out Law calleth death, but the kind Prince
Taking thy part, hast ruthfull side the Law,
And turn'd that blacke word death, to banishment.
This is deare mercy, and thou eft it not.

Rom. Tis Torture and torture, not mercy, heauen is here
Where Julius Lyes, and every Caeas and Dog,
A little Mouse, euer worthy thing
Lile here in Heauen and may looke on her,
But Rome may not. More Validitie,
More Honour,ble state, more Courtship lies
In carrion Flies, then Rome; they may feace
On the white wonder of deare Julius hand,
And ites of most stell Blessing from her lips,
We eant in pure and retell modelle.
Still blou, as thinking their owne kites flyn.
This may Flies doe, when I from this mutt flie,
And saith thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Rome may not, hee is banished.
Hast thou no payfon mixt, no sharpere ground knife,
No sudden meane of death, though here to meane,
But banished to kill me? Banish'd?
O Frier, the damned wfe that word in hell:
Howlings attends it, how fasthen the hart
Being a Duine, a Ghostly Confessor,
A Sin-Abolisher, and my Friend profet:
To mange me with that word, banished?

Fri. Then fond Mad man, heare me speake,
Rom. O thou wilt speake againe of banishment.

Fri. He gie thee Armon to kepe off that word,
Aderiers forre emile, Philosopher,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished, hang vp Philosophie
Vnlese Philosophie can make a Julet,
Displant a Towne,reuerse a Princes Doome,
It helps not, it praetells not, talle no more.

Fri. O then I fee, that Mad men haue no cares.
They speake of what they are.
When wifemen have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispaire with thee of thy elate,
Rom. Thou can't speake of that: do not speake,
Went thou as young as Julet my Loe:
An house but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,

Then mightest thou speake,
Then mightest thou teare thy hayre,
And fall upon the ground as I doe now,
Taking the measure of an vnmade grace.

Fri. Artie one knockes,
Good Rome helde thy felce.

Rom. Not I,
Vnlese the breath of Harrieke grapes
Mift-like infold me from the search of eyes.

Fri. Harke how they knockes:
(Who's there) Romeo ariue,
Thou wilt be taken, slay a while, stand vp:

Rom. Who knockes to hard?
Whence come you? what's your will?

Fri. Let me come in,
And you shall know my errant:
I come from Lady Julet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Rom. Welcome, O holy Friar, O tell me holy Friar,
Where's my Ladys Lord? Where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground,
With his owne owre made drunkne.

Rom. Oh he is raisen in my Miftrefle cafe,
Jult in her cafe, O wooll Sympathy:
Pitius predicament, even fo lies the,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbring,
Stand vp, stand vp, and you be a man,
For Julet's sake, for her sake rife and stand:
Why should you fall into so depe as O,

Rom. Nure.

Nur. Ah sir, sir, dears the end of all.
Rom. Speake not thou of Julet, how it is with her?
Doest not the think me an old Murtherer,
Now I haue plain'd the Childhood of our joy,
With blood removed, but little from her owne?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what fayes
My conceal'd Lady to our conceal'd Loe?

Rom. O shee fayes nothing sir, but weeps and weeps,
And now falls on her bed, and then flatts vp,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries,
And then downe falls again.

Re As if that name shot from the dead leuell of a Gun,
Did murder her, as that names curfed hand
Murdered her kinman. Oh tell me Friar, tell mee,
In what vile part of this Anatomic
Dost my name lodge? Tell me, that I may sacke
The hateful Manion.

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy forme cries out thou are:
Thy teares are womanish, thy wild setts denote
The unreasonable Ferre of a healt.
Viscetely woman, in a seeming man,
And still be in a trumpeing bothe,
Thou haue amazed me. By my holy orders,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Haft thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thy felce?
And slay thy Lady, that in thy life lies,
By doing damned hate upon the felce?
Why ray? wilt thou on thy birth? the heauen and earth?

III. iii. 4—118
683
The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet.

I would have bin a bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of war afford no time to woe.

Mozam goodnight, commended me to your Daughter.

Lady. I will, and know now her mind early tomorrow.

To night, she is moved up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender

Of my Childes love: I thing she will be rul'd.

In all respects by me: nay more, I doubt not but.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed.

Acquaint her here, of my Some Paris love.

And bid her, make you come on Wendesday next.

But soft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha! ha! well Wendesday is too soon.

A Thursday let it be a Thursday tell her,

She shall be married to this Noble Earl.

Will you be ready? do you like this hait?

Weele keep no graver ador, a Friend or no;

For heke, you, Tybalt being since so late,

It may be thought we held him carelessly,

Being our kindman, if we rewell much;

Therefore weele have some halfe a dozen Friends;

And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Paris. My Lord,

I would that the Thursday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thursday be it then:

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,

Prepare her wife, against this wedding day.

Farewell my Lord, light to my Chamber too.

Afore me, it is so late, that we may call it ere by and by.

Goodnight.

Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Juliet alighted.

Jul. wilt thou be gone? it is not yet nere day;

It was the Nightingale, and not the Lark,

That pres't the tearful hollow of thine ear,

Nightly the fongs on yond Pomgranate tree,

Beleave me, Loue, it was the Nightingale.

Romeo. It was the Lark the Herald of the Morn;

No Nightingale, though Loue, what envious fosters

Do late the Beautifull Cloudies in yonder East;

Nights Candles are burnt out, and Jocund day

Sands tippo to the miffle Mountains tops,

I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. You light is not daylight, I know it;

It is some Meteor that the Sun exalts,

To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,

And light thee on thy way to Mantua.

Therefore stay yet, thou needest not to be gone,

Romeo. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

He say you gray is not the mornings eye,

Tis but the pale reflex of Combalo brow.

Nor that is not Lark whose notes do scarce

The vauty heauen to high above our heads,

That more care to day when will to go:

Come death and welcome, Juliet wills it so.

How if my foule, Jets talle, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is, he hence be gone away;

It is the Lark that sings so out of tune,

Straining harth Difcord, and vnaplesing Sharper.

Some say the Lark does make sweete Diuision;

This does not for the disheath:

Some say, the Lark and haft Toad change eyes,

On now I would they had chang'dd voyces too:

Since
The Tragedie of Romeo and Jiitlet.

Since arms from arms that yoie doth va a sray,
Hunting thee hence, with Hunt. I. up to the day,
O now be gone, more light and till ght grows.
Rem. More light & light, more dark & darke our woes.

Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.

Nur. Your Lady Mother is coming to your chamber,
The day is broke, be wary, looke about.

Inl. Then window let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kiss and He defend.

Inl. Arr, thou gone for Love, Lord, yr Husband, Friend,
I must haste from thee every day in the house,
For in a mistrace there are many days,
O by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Leaves.

Rom. Farewell.

I will omit no opportunity,
That case convey my greetings Love to thee.

Inl. O God! I hate an ill! Disease foule,
Me thinks I see thee now, thou art so lowe,
As one dead in the bottome of a Tomb,
Either my eye-light fails, or thou lookt pale.

Rem. And truth me Love, in my eye doe you.
Do you now thinkes our blood. Adieu adieu.

Rom. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what doft thou with that
That is renowned for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keep him long,
And send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lad. Ho Daughter, are you vp?

Inl. Who that calls? is it my Lady Mother.
Is she not downe so late, or vp so early?
What vnaccount'nd caufe procures her hither?

Lad. Madam I am not well.

Lad. F有更好的 weeping for your Cozins death?
What wilt thou waft him from his grave with tears?
And if thou canst, thou wilt it not make him live:
Therefore have done, some griefe, thou knowest much of Love,
But much of griefe, these will inowt want of wit.

Inl. Yet let me wepe, for such a feeling loffe.

Lad. So shal you feele the loffe, but not the Friend
Which you wepe for.

Inl. Feeling to the loffe,
I cannot finde but ever, wepe the Friend.

Lad. Madam thou wepe'tt not so much for his death,
As that the Villaine which slaughterd him.

Inl. What Villaine, Madam?

Lad. That same Villaine Rome.

Inl. Villaine and he, be many Miles affaunter
God pardom, I doe with all my heart:
And yet no man like he, doth grieue my heart.

Lad. That be cause the Traitor lives.

Inl. I Madam from the reach of these my hands
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.

Lad. We shall have vengeance for it, forsee thou not,
Then wepe no more, JLe tend to one in Action,
Where that fame banishd Runagate doth live,
Shall give him such a vnaccount'd draon,
That he shall none keep e Ty bant company,
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Inl. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Rome, till I behold him. Dead
Is my poor heart so for a kinman's Vest:
Madam if you could find out but a man
To beare a payson, I would temper it;
That Rome should upon receit thereof,
Soone speepe in quiet. O how my heart abores
To heare him namd, and cannot come to him,
To wreake the Loue I bore my Cozin,
Upon his body that hath slaughterd him.

Inl. Find thou the meanes, and he find such a man.

But now Ile tell thee joyfull tidings Gyrlc.

Inl. And toy comes well, in such a needy time,
What are they, by what means thy Father lyes?

Inl. Well, well, thou hast a carefull Father Child?
One who to put thee from thee incourenst,
Hath forced out a sudden day of toy,
That those expect not, nor I lookt not for.

Inl. Madam in happy time, what day is this?

Inl. Marry my Child, early next Thursday the date,
The gallant, young, and Noble Gentry,
The Countiue Paris at Saint Peter's Church,
Shall happily make then a joyfull Bride.

Inl. Now by Saint Peter's Church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyfull Bride.

Inl. I wonder at this haft, that I must wed
Ere he that should be Husband comes to wes:
I pray you tell my Lord and Father Madam,
I will not marie yet, and when I doe, I scarce
It shall be Rome, whom you I hate
Rather then Paris. These are newses indeed.

Inl. Here comes your Father, tell him so to yeles,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Captain and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sunnet, the earth doth drizzle dew
But for the Sunnet of my Brothers Sunnet,
It raines downright.

How now? A Conduit Gyrle, what foll in teares?
Ever more shewing in one little body?
Thou countersails a Barke, a Sea.
Wind:
For full thy eyes, which I may call the Seas,
Do enie and lowe with teares, the Barke thy body is Saying in this sad flood, the winds thy figles,
Who raging with the teares and they with them,
Without a sullen calm will ouer set
Thy tempete tost body. How now wife?
Hast you delivered of our decree?

Inl. Sir,
But the will none, she give you thanes,
I would the foule were married to her grave.

Cap. Softly, take me with you, take me with you wife,
How will the none? doth the none give vs thanes?
Is the not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Worthy as theirs, that we have wrought
So worthy a Gentleman, to be her Bridgemeane.

Inl. Not proud you have,
But thankful that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I have,
But thankfull euen for hate, that is meant Loue.

Cap. How now?

How now? Chept Loglick? what is this?
Proud, and I thank you: and I thank you no
Thank me no thankings, nor proud am I no proudly
But settle your fine point's gainst Thursday next,
The Tragedie of Rome and Juliet.

Toge with Paris to Saint Peters Church:
Or I will drag thee on a Hurdle thither.
Out you greene ficknelle carrion, out you bagage,
You tallow face.

Lady. Fie, fie, what are you mad?
Good Father, I bereech you on my knees
Hearse me with patience, but to speake a word.

Fa. Hang thee young bagage, disobedient wretch,
I tell thee what, get thee to Church a Thursday,
Or never atter looke me in the face.

Speaker, reply not, do not anwvere me.
My fingers itch, wife: we feace thought was blest,
That God had left us but this one Child,
But now I se this one is too much,
And that we have a curfe in haunging her:
Out on her Hilding.

Nun. God in heauen bleffe her,
You are too blamme my Lord to race her so.
Fa. And why my Lady wisedomehold your tongue,
Good Prudence, finster with your gossip, go.

Nun. I prake no treacle,
Father, O Godfiordon,
May not one speake ?

Fa. Peace you mumblling fool,
Vter your grannie ore a Goffsips bowles
For here we need it not,

Ex. You are too hot.
Fa. God brede it makes me mad:
Day, night, horse, ride, urn, worke, play,
Alone in compaine, ill my care butt bin
To hauce her match, and husing now proude!
A Gentleman of Noble Parentage,
Of fiate Demesnes, Youthfull, and Nobly Allied,
Suit as they fay with Honourable parts,
Proportion'd as ones thought would with a man,
And then to haue a wretched ruling fool,
A whining manner, in her Fortune tender,
To answere, il not wed, I cannot Loue:
I am too young. I pray you pardon me.
But, and you will not we'll, il pardon you.
Grace where you will, you shall not house with me:
Look to't, thinkes on't, I do not vfe to tell.
Thursday is nexted, say hand on heart, as fine,
And you be not home, bring you to my Friend:
And you be not, hang, beg, baste, die in the streets,
For by my foule, il hence acknowledge thee,
Nor what in mine shall never do thee good:
Truf't too, batheirke you, il not be forsworne.

Int. Is there no patrie setting in the Cloudes,
The fee into the bottome of my griefe?
Cought my Mother call me not away,
Delay the warning, for a month a week,
If you do not, make the Br'dall bed,
So that do Men abright where Tybalt lies.

Mj. Take to me, nor he not speake a word,
Do not (now)for, I have done with thee.

Int. O God!
O Nunle, no feliftis be presented?
My Husband is no earth, my face in heauen,
How that I taue at the some time, as wise,
Yet it is the favrishing, mine from heauen,
By coming earth. Comfort me, comfonde me:
Haste ake, haste to the heaven, and pracle the treagueus
Upon in lost, a fluidet at my idle.

What faith should in a word of joy?
Some count, no Nuffe.

Nun. Faith here it is,
Rome is banishe, and all the world to nothing,
That he dare not come backe to challenge you:
Or if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then once the face o'flands at long time doth,
I thinke it is. But you married with the Countie,
O he's a Louely Gentleman:

Romets a dish-clout to him: an Eagle Madam
Hath not greene, fo quicke, fo faire an eye
As Paris hath, beftrow my very heart,
I thinke you are happy in this second match,
For it excelle your first or if it did not,
Your first is dead, or were as good be were,
As hauing here and you no vfe of him.

Int. Speake thou from thy heart?
Nun. And from my foule too,
Or elle befirlve them both.

Int. Amen.
Nun. What?

Int. Well, thou haft comforted me maruellous much,
Gosin, and tell my Lady I am gone,
Having diplesd my Father, to Lawrence Cell,
To make confession, and to be abol'd.

Nun. Maffie I will, and this is wily done.

Int. Auncient damnation, O most wicked friend!
It is more fin to me than thus forsworne,
Orcs diisfrais my Lord with that same tongue
What he haft prattled him with aboue compare,
So many thousand times? O Councellor,
Thou and my bofom chench forth shall be twaine.
Ille to the Frier to know his remedie,
If all else tale, my felte base power to die.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Countie Paris.

Fri. On Thursday forthe time is very short.
Par. My Father Capulet will hau'e it so,
And I am nothing flow to flack his haft.

Fri. You say you do not know the Ladies mind?
Nunen is the course, I like it not.

Pa. Immoderately the weepes for Tybalt death,
And therefore haue I little talke of Loue,
For I know no smiles in a house of teares,
Now no, her Father ourest it dangerous
That she doth give her sorrow too much way:
And in his wisedome, hau'ts our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her teares,
Whichtoo much minded by her (else alone,
May be put from her by focietie.

Now do you know the reason of this haft?

Fri. I would know not why it should be flow'd,
Lookke ft, here comes the Lady towards my Cell.

Enter Juliet.

Par. Happily met, my Lady and my wife.

Int. That may be, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be, must be Loue, on Thursday next.

Int. What must be shall be,

Fri. That's a certaine text.

Par. Com'e you to make confession to this Father?

Int. To anfwere that, I should confec to you.

Par. Do not deny to him, that you Loue me.

Int. I will confesse to you that I Loue him.

Par. So will ye, I am sure that you Loue me.

Int. 1'll do fo, it will be of more price,
Being spoke behind your backe, then to your face.

Par. Poor foule, thy face is much abaf'd with teares.

Int. The
The Tragedie of Romeu and Iuliet.

I. I. The saries have got small victorie by this:
For it was bad mough before their sight.

II. The Cries firft that more then saries with that report.

I. This is no lounder for, which is truth,
And what I spake, I spake as that this.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou haft flaundred it.

I. It may be forso is not mine owne.
Are you at leisure, holy Father now,
Or shall I come to you at evening Messe?

Fri. My leaving seems my present daughter now.
My Lord you shall intreat the same alone.

Par. God keep it, I should distray the devotion,
I.

I. On Thursday day nine, I will save it,
To them a song I keep it to the litle.

Fri. O Father, I alreadie know thy grace,
It firues not past the com, any of my vart,
I hear thou shalt and nothing can prevent it,
On Thursday day next it is to come.

I. Tell me not Friar, this is no entertainst of this,
Vellie shall tell me now how I shall present it.
If I do this, then shall I give no help,
Do this but call my relation wife,
And with his knife, he helpeth me perfectly.

God wip thine heart, and thine hands, and heart,
And ease this hand by what follows.
Shall the Label to another Doctor,
Or my true heart with treacherous resolu,
Time to another, this shall play them both:
Therefore out of thy long expect'time,
Give me some present comforted, or I hold
To my extremes and my, this bloody knife
By the vappere, pondering that,
Which the commotion or thy vanitie,
On the no true of true kindred bring:
Be not long to frisk, I long to do,
If what thou spakest, it speakes not so remed:

Fri. Hold Daughter, I do spaire a kind of hope,
Which grace as desperate an execution,
As that is desperate which we would prevent.

How shall the strength of will to stay thy selfe,
The is it likely shoult witt undersetake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That usy't with death himselfe, to escape for it:
And if thou be silly, I give thee remedy.

I. On sad medeaphe, rather then martie Paris,
From his helthclements of any Tower,
Or wals in thesw salt saults, or bid me leave
Where Serpents are: joining me with roaring Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnell howe,
I encountered quite with dead men tasting bones,
With cheekt thankes and yellow chappel saults:
Or bid me go into a new made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his grave,
Things that to hear them told, have made me tremble,
And I will doe it without feare or doubt,
To live an untaught wife to my sere Loue.

Fri. Hold them thon go home be merrie, give content,
To martie Paris: yesten another is to morrow,
To morrow in the knotts that thou liest alone,
Let thon, if thou be with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Viall being then in bed,
And this stilling liquer drinke thou off,
When presently through all thy veins shall run,
A cold and droisie humours: for no pule
Shall keep his nativePropriety, but increase:
No warme, no breath shall tell the shoueth,
The Roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To many ages, the eyes windows fall
Like death when he that floureth little tyne of life:
Each part deprived of suolll government,
Shall lie and startes cold appeareth like death,
And in this borrowed like onefe of shrunke death
Shall that continue two and forty hours,
And then awake, as from a pleasant sleepe.
Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes,
To rowe thee from thy bed, be not thou dead:
Then as the manner of our country is
In thy bed Robert is acquired on the Bearer,
Be borne to burial in thy kindred grave:
Fro then shall be borne to that same one vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie,
In the mean time against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romey by my Letters know our drift,
And this shall be come, and this very night
Shall Romey break the heare hence to Mantua,
And this shall free shee from it is present shame,
If no inconsistent nor woman hath feare.

Abate thy valour in the t/arge:
I. Give me grace one, O tell me of the sea.

Fri. Hold gress you gone be fishing and prosperous.
In this behalf, I fear not a Friar with thee.
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord,
I. Love giveth me strength,
And the spirit shall help torenders.
Farewell sere father.

Exit

Jter Father Capulet, Moxiter, Nurse, and
Servant man gave there.

Cap. So many guests inside as here are not,
Suffer him to my own hiring Cokes.
Sir. You shall have none ill his, for he will if they can
Like their fingers.

Cap. How came this at the them so?
Sir. Maitre, he is an old Cokes that cannot like his own fingers: therefore he that cannot like his fingers does not like us.

Cap. Be great, we shall be much unsatisfied for this place: what is my daughter gone to love Laurence?
Nur. It was too.
Cap. We have by charite to do some good on her,
A peecchell well hardish it is.

Exit Nurse.

Nur. See where the fis comes from thist
With menite lookes.

Cap. How now my headlong,
Where bee you gone bid gading?
I. Where I do you went I requent the fis
Of losse frent oppostion:
To you and your behalfe, and am enjoin'd
By holy Lawrence to fell prestante here,
To by your pardon pardon I deprecate you,
I here fors word I am ever ready by you.

Cap. Send in the Countes, geue tell him of this,
We have this kink hunte to morrow morning:
I. I meet the youthfull Lord at Laurence Cell,
And gave him what beconme Loue I might.
Not stopping ore the bounds of modestie.

Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, stand rp,
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

This is as it should be, let me see the County:
I marie go I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afore God, this returned holy Friar,
All our whole Cuttie is much bound to him,
Inf. Nurse will you go with me into my Closet,
To help me fort such needful ornaments,
As you thinke fit to furnish me to morrow?
Me. No not till Thursday, there's time enough.
Faa. Go Nurse, go with her,
Welle to Church to morrow.

Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.

Me. We shall be short in our prouision,
This now next night.
Fa. Tuff, I will thrive about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wife:
Go thou to Jull, helpe to deck her,
If not to bed to night, let me alone:
He play the huswife for this once. Whatso?
They are all forth, well I will walk my felle.
To Countie Paris to prepare him vp.
Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous light,
Since this fame way-ward Gyrle is so reclaim'd.

Exeunt Father and Mother.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

Inf. I theo stores are bell, but gentle Nurse
I pray thee leave me to my felle to night:
For I have need of many Orvons,
To move the heavens to smile upon my flate,
Which well thou know'st, as croff and full of fin.

Exeunt Nurse.

Me. What are you bufe to need you my help?
No. Na Madam, we have cu'd such necessaries
As are behouefull for our flate to morrow:
Soplease you, let me now be left alone;
And let the Nurse this night fit vp with you,
For I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden buffefne.

Get thee to bed and cell, for thou haft need.

Exeunt.

Inf. Farewell:
God knowes when we shall meete again.
I have a faint cold fere thrills through my veinets,
That almost freezes vp the heat of fire:
I call them backe againe to comfort me.
Nurse, what shal he do here?

My smalll Scare, I needs must fit alone:
Come Vail, what is this mixture do not work at all?
Shall I be married then to morrow morning?
No, no, this shall forbid it. Lie thou there,
What if it be a poyon which the Frier
Subtilly hath minftr'd to have me dead,
Lead in this marriage he shal be difhonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I feaie it is, and yet me thinkes it should not,
For he hath thilke beene a holy man.
How, if when I am brought into the Tombe,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? There's a fearefull point:
Shall I not then be thiffed in the Vault?
To whose fole mouth the heallthome oye breaths in,
And there the digg'd grave doth Romeo comes.
Or if I be, is it not very like,
The horrid conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place;
As in a Vault, an ancient receptacle,

Where for these many hundred yeeres the bones
Of all my buried, & fuccesers are packt,
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but gentle heart,
Lies feething in his throw'd, where as they fly,
At some hours in the night, Spirits refort:
Alacke, alacke, is it not like that?
So early waking, what with loathfome fnares,
And thrakes like Maudrakes tumne out of the eart,
That falling mortals hear them, run mad.
Of if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Inuironed with all those hideous fcares,
And madly play with my forefathers ioynets?
And plucke the mangled Tybalt from his throw'd?
And in this rage, with some great kinmanes bone,
As (with a club) dash out my delicate braines.
O look, me thinks I see my Cozins Ghost,
Seeking out Romeo that did spil his body.
Upon my Righters point: fly Tybalt, fly:
Romeo, Rome, Rome, here's drinke: I drinke to thee.

Enter Lady of the bowmy and Nurse.

Lady. Hold, Take these letters, and fetch more spicas Nurse.
Nur. They call for Dares and Quacres in the Pafric.

Enter old Capulet.

Cap. Come, fit, fit, fit,
The second Cooke hath Crowl'd,
The Curpew Bell hath rung, his three a clocke:
Lookke to the bakers measures, good Angelica,
Space not for colt.
Nur. Go you Cotton-corne, go,
Get you to bed, faith youte be ticke to morrow.
For this nights watching.
Cap. No not a whitner? I have watches are now,
All night for tellie caule, and near beene tickle.
La. You have bin a Montie-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from such watching now.

Enter Lady and Nurse.

Cap. A jealouz boat a jealouz bond,
Now fellow, what there?

Enter three or four with fit, and fog, and baskets.

Fed. Things for the Cooke fit, but I know not what.
Cap. Make haft, make haft, sirrah, fetch drier Logs.
Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.
Fed. I have a head fit, that will find our logs,
And neuer trouble Peter for the matter.
Cap. Make well and well Gid, a merrie horsen, ha,
Thou shalt be loggerhead, good Father, tis day.

Play Musick

The Countie will be here with Musick bright,
For so he said he would, I heare him here,
Nurse, what ho? what Nurse I say?

Exeunt Nurse.

Go wakeen Juliet, go and trim her vp,
He go and chat with Pariche, make haft,
Make haft, the Bridgewome, he is come already:
Make haft I say.

Nor. Milites, what Milites? in'ttall I warrant her fit.
Why Lambe, why Lady, die you fuggabed,
Why Loue I say? Me. Is this, sweet heart, why Hride?
What nos a word? You take your pensworths now,
Sleep for a wecke, for the next night I warrant
The Countie Parish, hee fit vp his red
That you shall reft but little, God forgive me:
Marrie and Amen: how found is the sleepe?
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

But heaven keeps her part in eternal life:
But the moit you fought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heaven, she should be aduant,
And weep ye now, seeing she is aduant
About the Cloudes, as high as Heaven it selfe
O in this louse, you lose your Child for sirl.
That you run on, believing that she is well:
She's not well married, that late married long,
But she's left married, that late married long.
Dite vp your tears, and hick your Renomartie
On this faire Coarie, and as the cunomi is,
And in her belt array beare her to Church
For things some Nature bids all vs lament,
Yet Natures restes are restes serenement.

En. All things that we ordained Fethall,
Ture from their office to blacke Funerall:
Our instrumennts to melancholy Bells,
Our wadding chiere, to a sad buriall Bell:
Our folome Hymnes, to fallen Dyesges change:
Our Bridall flowers fife for a burned Coarie:
And all things change them to the constant.
Fri. So go you, and Madam, go with him,
And thus Fall, every one prepare,
To follow the faire Coarie unto her grave:
The heavens do lowere vp vpon you, for some still.
Mune them no more, by eroding their high will.
Exent.
Mu. Faith we may put vp our Pipes and be gone,
Nar. Hangeth good fellows (Ah put vp, vp, vp,
For well you know, this is a spitefull eale.

Pet. If by my truth, the eale may be amended.
Enter Petru.

Pet. Musions, oh Musions,
Hearts eain, hearts eafe,
O, and you will have me blue,play hearts eafe.

Mu. Why hearts eafe;

Pet. O Musions,
Because my heart is a feafe places,my heart is full.

Mu. Nor a dursmp wer, 'ts no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mu. No,

Pet. I will then give it you boundly.

Mu. What will you give vs?

Pet. No money on my faith, but the glicke.

Mu. I will give you the Muntrefil.

Afu. Then will I give you the Seruing creature.

Petru. Then will I lay the serving Creatures Dagger on your pate. I will caus no Crootheis,ille Re you,ille Fa you, do you notice me?

Mu. And you Re vs, and Fa vs, you Note vs.

2. Me Pray you put vp your Daggers,
And put out your vit.

Then haste at you with my vit.

Peter. I will hick-brake you with an yron vit,
And put vp your yron Dagger.

Answer me like men:
When grieing grie the heart doth wound, then Muficke with her fluer found.
Why fluer-tord? why? Muficke with her fluer found what say you Simon Culling?

Pet. Pray what say you Hugh Robick?

2. M. I say fluer found, because Musions found for fil.

Pet. Pray to, what say you Laurens Sound-Poet? (uer
3. Cs. Faith I know not what to say.

Pet. O I cry you mercy, you are the Singer.

I will say for you; it is Muficke with her fluer found,

689
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

As I remember, this should be the house,
Bring holy day, the beggars sheep is shut.
What hot Apothecarie?

Enter Apothecarie.

App. Who call’s so loud?

Rome. Come hither man, I see that thou art poore,
Hast, here is fortie Duckets, I give thee have
A thousand of poision, such: soones speeding grece,
As will disperse it felle through all the veines,
That the life-weare-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunceke may be dischag’d of breath,
As violently, as hiftie powder set’d
Doth hurry from the lastl Canons wome.

App. Such mortall drugs I haue, but Mantua law
Is death to any he, that veters them.

Rome. Art thou to bare and full of wretchedness,
And fear to die? Fanime is in thy heads,
Need and oppression flatter in thy eyes,
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy backe.
For then is thy friend, nor the worlds law.
The world affords no law to make thee rich.

Then be not poore, but breake it, and take this.
App. My poorty, but no my will consent.

Rome. I pray thy poorty, and notthy will.
App. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drink it off, and if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rome. There’s thy Gold,
Worke poysan to ouens foules,
Drowneth Themselves in this foule soule world,
Then these poore compounds that thou disdell not.
I fell thee poysan, thou hast fold me none,
Farewell, buy food, and get thy selfe in heath.
Come Cordiall, and not poysan, go with me
To Iuliet Grace, for there must I live these.

Enter Friar John to Friar Lawrence.

John. Holy Franciscan Friar Brother, who?

Enter Friar Lawrence.

Law. This same shoule be the voice of Friar John.
Welcome from Mantua, what says Rome?
Or if his mind be written, give me his Letter.

John. Going to find a bare-foote Brother out,
One of our order to affoicate me,
Here in this City enquiring the sick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Towne
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did raigne,
Seal’d vp the doore, and would not let vs forth,
So that my frere to Mantua there was draf’d.

Law. Who bare my Letter then to Rome?

John. I could not send it, here it is againes,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So desperate were they of infection.

Law. Unhappie Fortune: by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not sent, but full of charg’d,
Of deare impurt, and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John go henc’d,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it straight
Vnto my Cell.

John. Brother Ile go and bring it thee.

Exit.

Now will I to the Monument stait.
Within this three houres will fire Iuliet wake,
Shee will be shewe me much that Rome.

Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write againe to Mantua.
The Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet.

And keep her at my cell till Romeo come,
Poor loving Countes, do in a dead mans Tomb,

Enter Paris and his Page.

Par. Give me thy Torch Boy, hence and stand aloof.
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen:
Venter yound and Trees lay thee all along,
Holding thy ear close to the hollow ground,
So shall no light upon the Churchyard tread.
Being lone,vnisme with digging up of Graves;
But thou shalt have the same thing there,
As signall that thou hearest some thing approach,
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee,go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the Churchyard,yet I will adventure.

Par. Sweet Flower with flowers thy Bridal bed fillre.
O weary, thy Canope is dull and hoarse,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dewe.
But what envious with tears dali?d by moones;
The offices that I for thee will keep,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy grave, and weep.

Pet. Well, the Boy gies warning,something doit approach,
What curted foot wander this ways to night,
To croste my old equites, and true loves right?
What with a Torch? Mille me night a while.

Enter Romeo, and Peter.

Rom. Give me that Matteacke,& the wretching Iron,
Hold take this Letter,eary in the morning.
See thou deliver it to my Lord and Father,
Give me the light, upon thy life I change thee,
What envious thou hearest or seest,stand aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course,
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Partly to behold my Ladys face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Ring: a Ring that I cannot live,
In decent employment therefore hence be gone:
But thou shalt have the same thing to doe,
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heauen I will secure these voynt by voynt,
And strew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
The time, and my intents are fagace Wilde:
More fierce and more inexorable fate,
Then empty Tygers, or the roaring Sea.

Par. I will be gone for it, and not trouble you
So shalt thou show me friendship, take thou that,
Live and be prosperous, and fare well good fellow.
Par. For all this fame, I hide me here about,
His lookes I feare, and his intents I doubt.

Rom. Thou detestable Coward, thou wombs of death,
Goest with the dearest mortall of the earth:
Thus I enforce thy rotten Lawes to open,
And in defpite, he cram thee with more food.
Par. This is that basftiff hagtherd Muontrage,
That murdred my Loues Cozin, with which griefe,
It is supposd the faire Creature died,
And here is come to do fame villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him,
Stop this unhallowed sely spile Muntrage:
Can vengeance be purfued further, in death?
Comended valliance, I do apprehend thee,
Obey and go with me, for thou must die,

Rom. I must indeed, and therefor I came: I hisher:
Good gentle youth, stay not a deare man,
Pele hence and leue me, think of thy life like with thine done,
Let them affright thee. I befeech thee Youth,
Put not an other fin upon my head,
By vrging me to furie. O be gone,
By heauen I am thy better then my selfe,
For I come hither and against my selfe:
Stay not be gone, and hereafter say,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away,
Par. I do hereby comiowiration,
And apprehend thee for a Felton here.

Rom. Will thou promeke me? Then hauie at thee Boy.
Par. O Lord and theyght, I will go call the Watch.
Par. O I am slaine, if thou be mercifull,
Ope the Tomb, lay me with Juliet.

Rom. In faith I will, let me peruse this face:
Met with mifman, Noble Counte Paris,
What said my man, when my beloved foule
Did not attend him as we rode? I thinke
He told me Paris should have married Juliet.
Said he not so? Or did I dreame it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,
To thinke it was so. O give me thy hand,
One,wit with me in faire misfortunes book.

Rom. He used thee in a triumphant grace,
A Graue; On a Lardhorne, dafford Youth:
For here lies Juliet, and her beautie makes
This Vault a feaing presence full of light.
Death lie thou there, by a dead man interd.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Hauie they bene merrie? Which their Keepers call
A lightning before death? Oh how may I
Call this a lightning. O my Loue, my Wife,
Death that hath for the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet upon thy Beautie:
Thou art not conquerd: Beauties enigne yest
Is Crying in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And Deaths pale flagis not advanced there.
Take thy selfe from thy bloody sheet
What more favour can I do to thee,
Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
To fuder his that was thy enemie.
Forgive me Cozen, Ah deare Juliet:
Why art thou so faire, and wilt beleue,
Shall I beleue,that vnsubstantiall death is amorous?
And that the lease abhorred Monfier keeps
There here in daire to be his Paramount?
For fear of that, I will stay with thee,
And never from this Palace of your night
Depart againe,come lie thoes in my arme,
Here's to thy health, where euer thou tumbled in,
O true Apothecarie!
Thy drugs are quicke Thus with a kiffe I die.
Departing pace, here, there will I remaine,
With Womboes that are thy Chambermaids: Ohere
Will I set up my eustalizing ret.
And finde thine eares of heaven, this famous flasr
From this we ha'te wearied flesh: Eyes looke your left:
Armes laye, thy selfe in ace: And lips O you
The doore of breath, seal with a righteous kiffe
A datelesse baste to ingroguing death:
Come better, conduct, one vnfaury guide,
Thou desparre Apothecary, now at once run
The dashing Royes, by Sea-fieke were Barke:
Here's to my Loue: O true Apothecary:

V. ii. 28—V. iii. 119

691
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iulet.

Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a bliffe I die.

Enter Friar with Lantern, Drum and Spade.

Fri. St. Francis be my speed, how oft to night Have oue my feet stumbling as graues? Who's there? Man. Here's one, a Friar, & one that knows you well. Fri. Blisse be vpon you. Tell me good my Friend. What Torch is yond that vanely lends his light To grubs, and eyeleffe Sculls? As I disserne, It burneth in the Capel Monument. Man. It doth lo holy fire, And there's my Master, one that you love. Fri. Who is it? Man. Romeo. Fri. How long hath he bin there? C.Man. Full halfe an hour. Fri. Go with me to the Vault. Man. I dare not. My Master knowes not but I am gone hence, And fearefully did menace me with death. If I did stay to looke on his entence. Fri. Stay, then Ile go alone, feares comes upon me. O much I feare some ill unlucky thing. Man. As I did sleepe under this young tree here, I heard a man say, who was my Master, And that my Master slue him. Fri. Romans. Alacke, alacke, what blood is this which staines The flouring entrance of this Sepulcher? What meanes chefe Masterleele, and goarie Swords To lie discouerd by this place of peace? And this Rale, who calleth him, and thine too? And sleepe in blood? Ah what an yoake house Is guiltie of this lamentable chance? The Lady flir. Int. O comfortable Friar, where's my Lord? I do remember well where I should be: And there I am, where is my Romeo? I heare some noise. Lady, come from that room Of death, contagion, and unrestfull sleepe, A greater powre then we can contradict. Hath that wated our entenues, come, come away, Thy husband in thy home there lies dead: And Paris too, who is deploie of thee, Among a Slighthood of heare Names: Stay not to question, for the watch is comming, Come, go good Juliet. I dare no longer stay. Int. Exit. Go thee hence, for I will nowusway. What's here? A cup coul'd in my true lovers hand? Payson I fee hath bin his timelesse end And O charle, drink all and let no friendly drop, To help me after, I will kiss thy lips, Happie, some payson ye gett haling on them, To make me die with a refractory. Thy lips are warme. Enter Bay and Watch. Watch. Lead Bay, which way? Int. Yea noife? Then ile be briefe. O happy Dagger. 'Tis in thy belly, there sailt and let me die. Killesthelife. Say. This is the place. There where the Torch doth burne. Watch. The ground is bloody, Search about the Churchyard. Go some of you, who eere you find attach. Pintfull fight, here lies the Countie flaine, And Juliet bleeding, warme and newly dead

Who here hath laine these two dayes buried. Go tell the Prince, run as to the Capulet. Raise vp the Montague, some others search, We fee the ground whereon these woes do lye, But the true ground of all these pistic woe, We cannot without circumference defery. Enter Romeo, man. Watch. Here's Romeo's man. Who found him in the Churchyard. Cor. Hold him in safety, till the Prince come hither. Enter Friar, and another Watchman. What. Here is a Friar that trembles, sighes, and weeps. We tooke this Mattocke and this Spade from him, As he was comming from this Church-yard sife. Cor. A great sufpcition, stay the Friar too. Enter the Prince, Friar. What mischief ventyre is so early vp, That calls our person from our mornings rest? Enter Capulet and bustife. Cap. What shold it be that they do shrike abroad? Bustife. O the people in the streete cite Romeo. Some Iulet, and some Paris, and all runne What when oure way toward our Monument. Friar. What fear is this which disturbs in your eares? Watch. Sovereigne, here lies the Countie Paris flaine, And Romeo dead, and Juliet dead before, Warme and new kil'd. Friar. Search, Seele, and know how, this foule murder comes. What further woe confrays against my age? Enter. Here, this sight of death is as a Bell That warns my old age to a Sepulchre. Enter Montague. Pri. Come Montague, for thou art early up To see thy Sonne and Ieze, now early downe. Montague. Alas my liege, my wife is dead to night, Griefe of my Sonnes tale hath flopt her breaths, What further woe confrays against my age? Friar. Lookes, and thou shalt see. Montagh. O thou ony to what manner is this, To profe before thy Father with a grave? Friar. Seale vs up the mouth of our grave for a while, Till we can clearse these amb go, and parte. Watch. And know their spring, their head, their true descents, And that will I be the garuall of your woes, And lead you even to deathmsne time forbeare, And let mischance be fuite to patience, Bring forth the parties of sufpcition. Fri. I am the greastable, to doe first, Yet moff supscted as the time and place I doe make all my friends of this deadly murder: And here I stand bound to impeach and purge My selfe condemned, and my selfe escud'd. Friar. Then say at once, what thou dost know in this? Friar. I will be briefe, for my short time of death Is not so long as a tedious tale. Romeo the dead was his husband to that Iulet, And theire deade, that's Romeo faultfull wife:
The Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet.

I married them; and their biforn marriage day
Was Tybalt Doomed day: whose untimely deat
Banish'd the new-made Bridgroome from this Cittie:
For whom (and not for Tybait's) Iuliet pined.
You, to remonstrate that rage of Grece from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce
To Countes Paris. Then comes she to me,
And (with wilde looks) bid me dooie some meane
To rid her from this second Marriage,
Or in my cell there would she kill her selfe.
Then gave I her (to Tuccle by my Art)
A sleeping Pocon, which so tickke effect
As intended, for it wrought on her
The forme of death. Meane time, I writ to Romeo,
That she should hither come, as this dyre night,
To help to take her from her borrowede grave,
Being the time the Potions force shou'd cease.
But he which bore my Letter, Frier John,
Was slay'd by accident, and ytternight
Return'd my Letter backe. Then all alone,
As the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her Kindreds vault,
Meaning to keepe her clodeby at my Cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo.
But when I came (some Minute ere the time
Of her waking) here vere vntimely lay
The Noble Paris, and true Romeo dead.
Since wakes, and I interesth her cume forth,
And beare this worke of Heauen, with patience.
But then, a noyse did scare me from the Tombe,
And she (too desperate) would not goe with me,
But (as it seemes) did violence on her selfe.
All his I know, and to the Marriage her Nurse is privy:
And if i ought in this misforrned by my fault,
Let my old life be facrifice'd, some houre before the time,
Vnto the rigour of seuerell Law.
Frier. We shall haue knowe thee for a Holy man.
Where's Romeo's man? What can he say to this?
Day. I brought my Master newes of Iuliet death,
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same Monument.
This Letter he early bid me give his Father,
And threatened me with death, going in the Vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.
Prov. Give me the Letter, I will look on it.
Where is the Countes Page that taide the Watch?
Sirra, what made your Master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to strew his Ladies grave,
And bid me (and soone, and so I did):
Anon comes one with light to ope the Tombe,
And by and by my Master drew on him,
And then I ran away to call the Watch.
Frier. This Letter doth make good the Friers words,
Their course of love, the rydings of her death:
And here he writes, that he did buy a pozson
Of a poore Potheoer, and therewithall
Came to this Vault to dye, and ley with Iuliet.
Where be these Enemies? Capulet, Montague,
See what a scourgge is lade upon your hate,
That Heauen finds means to kill your noyces with Loue;
And 1, for warking at your desorde too,
Hau' lost a brace of Kindmen: All we punisht.
Cap. O Brother Montague, give me thy hand
This is my Daughters inuiture, for no more
Can I demand.
Day. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her Statues in pure Gold,
That whilsts Eronee by that name is knowne,
There shall no figure as that Pote be set.
As that of True and Faithfull Iuliet.
Cap. As rich shall Romees by his Lady ly,
Poore sacrifices of our enemy.
Frier. A glooming peace this morning with it brings,
The Summe for sorrow will not throw his head;
O hence, to have more talk of these sad things,
Howe shall be pardoned, and some punished.
Our never was a Story of more Wo,
Then this of Iuliet, and her Romeo.

FINIS.
THE LIFE OF TYMON
OF ATHENS.

Achus Primus. Scene Prima.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, as several above.

Poet. Good day Sir.

Pau. I am glad you’re well.

Poet. I have not seen you long, how goes the world?

Pau. It goes as it grows.

Poet. I have heard you speak of beauty, what is beauty? What is grace? What is the expression of beauty? What is the power of the heart? I have heard you speak of beauty, what is beauty? What is grace? What is the expression of beauty? What is the power of the heart?

I know the Merchant.

Pau. I know them both, they’re both a Jeweller.

Mer. O, this is a wondrous Lord.

Poet. Nay, that’s most fair.

Mer. A most incomparable man, he’s breath’d as it were, to an unutterable and continuing goodness.

He walks.

Iron. I have a Jewell here.

Mer. O pray let’s see ‘t. For the Lord Tymon, Sir?

Iron. Prithee, he walks the utmost, but for that—

Pau. When as for your grace, Sir, you have praised the valiant, he leaves the glory in that happy Yeare, which aptly singeth the good.

Iron. ‘Tis a good home.

Iron. And rich; there’s a Water lookeye.

Pau. You are apt to fight, in some worke, some Dedication to the great Lord.

When as for your grace, Sir, you have praised the valiant, he leaves the glory in that happy Yeare, which aptly singeth the good.

Iron. ‘Tis a good home.

Iron. And rich; there’s a Water lookeye.

Pau. You are apt to fight, in some worke, some Dedication to the great Lord.

Pau. How shall I understand you?

Pau. I will wait upon you.

You see how all Condition, how all Miserie,
As well as rich and flipp’ry Creatures, as
Of Grace and austere quality, tender down
Their reverence: to Lord Tymon has large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious Nature hanging,
Subtinces and properties to his love and tendance.
All sorts of hearts, yea, from the glibb-faced Blatante
To Apernance, that few things looks better:
The reservoir himself; gentle tree drops down
The love before him, and returns in peace.
Most rich in Tymon’s nod.

Pau. I saw them speak together.

Pau. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
The royall Fortune to be thron’d,
The Bane of the Mount.

If rank’d with all deferts, all kinds of Nature
That labour on the bottom of the Heare,
To propagate their flares; amongst’them all,
Whose eyes are on this Sovereigne Lady fixt,
One do I pensive of Lord Tymon’s frame,
Whom Fortune with her amber hand waits to her,
Whole present grace, to present flares and servants
Transformes his Rivals.

Pau. This thy conceit, to scope
This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinkes

Timon of Athens.

With one man becom'd from the rest below,
Bowling his head against the sleepy Mount
To climb his happiness, 'would be well express
I m: Condition.

Thee, Nay Sir, but hear me on:
All those which were his Fellowes but of late,
Some better then his valye; on the moment
Follow his footsteps; his Lobbies fill with rendance.
Raine Sacrificall whisperings in his ear,
Make Sacred even his tyrant, and through him
Drink the fine Ayre.

Pars. I marry, what of these?

Thine. When Fortune is her drift and change of mood
Sparres down her late belove; all his Dependards
Which Labour after him to the Mountaine top,
E'en on their knees and hand, let him sit do right,
Not one accompanying his declining foots.

Pars. Tis common:
A thousand mortal Paintings I am flew,
This shall demonstrate their quick dearth of Fortunes,
More prounounced then words. Yet you do well,
To flow Lord Timon, that manes eyes have seene
The foot about the head.

Trumpets sound.
Enter Lord Timon, addressing himself courteously to every Smir.

Tim. Impersion'd is he, say you?

Mef. Imy good Lord, true Talents is his debt,
His means no thrift, his Creditors no frater:
Your Honourable Letter he desires;
To throfe houe shut him vp, which failing,
Periods his comfort,
That noble Fredicate: well,
I am not of that Feather, to flake off
My friend when he must neede me. I do know him
A Gentleman, that well deferves a helpes,
Which he shall haue. He paye the debt, and free him.

Mef. Your Lordship ever bindes him.
Tim. Commend me to him, I will lend his Ransome,
And being unfranchised bid him come to me;
'Tis not enough to help the Feeble vp,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mef. All happinesse to your Honor.

Enter an old Athenian.

Oldm. Lord Timon, heare me speake.

Tim. Freely good Father.

Oldm. Thus haft a Servant nam'd Lucillion.
Tim. I haue to: What of him?

Oldm. Most Noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attendes he heare, or no? Lucillion.

Luc. Heare at your Lordsips service.

Oldm. This Fellow hearle, L:Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
My first haue beene inclin'd to thieve,
And my easte defares in Elys more rar'd,
Then one which holds a Trencher.

Tim. Well what further?

Old. One onely Daughter have I, no Kin elfe,
On whom I may conferes what I have got:
The Maid is faire, a th'youngest for a Bride,
And I have bred her as a deerest gift
In Qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pray thee (Noble Lord)

Ioyne with me to forbid him her resor,
My felle haste spoke in vaine.
Tim. The man is honest.

Oldm. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honesty rewards him in his selfe,
It must not beare my Daughter.

Tim. Does fee love him?

Oldm. She is young and apt:
Our owne precedent passions do instruct
What fealties in youth.

Tim. Love you the Maid?

Luc. If my good Lord and the acceptes of it.

Oldm. If her Marriage my content be missing,
I call the Gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heaven from forth the Beggers of the world,
And dishonifie her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be matched with an equal Husband?

Oldm. Three Talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This Gentleman of mine
Hath wou'd one long:
To build his Fortune, I will shaine a little,
For 'tis a Bond in men. Give him thy Daughter,
What you bellow, in him he cature carrs,
And make him weigh with her.

Oldm. Most Noble Lord.

Pawne me to this your Honour, he is hit,
Tim. My hard to thee,
Mine Honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your Lordship, never may
That flate or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you.

Past. Vouchsafe my Labour,
And long like your Lordship.

Tim. I thank you, you shall heare from me anon:
Go not away. What have you there, my Friend?

Past. A piece of Painting, which I do belieue
Your Lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The Painting is almost the Natural man:
For since Dishonour Traffikes with mans Nature,
He is but out-side: These Penful Figgures are Euen such as they give out. I like your worke,
And you shall finde I like it; Waite attendance
Till you heare further from me.

Tim. Well fare you Gentleman: give me your hand,
We must needs dine togethier: fit your Jewell
Hath suffer'd under praise.

Iovell. What my Lord, dispraise?

Tim. A mere faciety of Commendations,
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd,
It would unclew me quite.

Iovell. My Lord, 'tis rated
As those which fell would give i but you well know,
Things of like value differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Matters. Beleevc's deere Lord,
You mend the Jewell by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd,

Enter Apermanus.

Her. No my good Lord, he speakes y common tong
Which all men speake with him.

Tim. Louke who comes heere, will you be child?

Iovell. We bethe with your Lordship.

Her. He bethe will.

Tim. Good morrow to thee,
Gentle Apermanus.

I. i. 75—179

695
Timon of Athens.

Achates, your hearts in the field now.

Act. My heart is ever at your service, my Lord.

Tim. You had rather be a breakfast of Enemies, than a dinner of Friends.

Act. So they were bleeding new my Lord, there's no meat like 'em, I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Aper. Would all those flattering were thine Enemies then, that thou mightst kill 'em & bid me to 'em.

1. Lord. Might we but have that happiness my Lord, that you would once vie our heats, whereby we might express some part of our zeal, we should think our welfare ever perfect.

Timon. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the Gods themselves have promised that I shall have much help from you; how didst thou receive my Friends else? Why have you that charitable taste from thousands? Did you not chieflly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to my selfe, then you can with modesty speak in your own behoove. And thus fair I confesse you. Oh you Gods (thinks I), what need we have any Friends at it we should have need of 'em? They were the most needless Creatures living; should we have vse for 'em? And would most retribute sweete entertainments hung up in Cries, that keeps there founds to themselves. Why I have often with my selfe poorer, that I might come nearer to you: we are borne to do benefis. And what better or properer can we call our owne, then the riches of our Friends? Oh what a precious comfort, to have so many like Brothers commanding one another: Fortunes. Oh heaven, she made away of it can be borne a while else cannot hold our watersea thinks to forget their Paules. I drink to you.

Aper. Time were it to make them drink the Timon.

2. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our ears, And at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Aper. Ho, ho! I laugh to think this is a basse fact.

3. Lord. I promise you my Lord you may do much.

Aper. Much.

Sound Trumpet. Enter the Makers of Amazons, with Leves in their hands, dancing and playing.

Tim. What means that Trumpet? How now?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certaine Ladies most devious of Admittance.

Tim. Ladies, what are there wills?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord, which bears that offce, to dignifie their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Mask of Ladies.

Cup. Hail to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bounties affectionate heart; Senecas knowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy pleasant bosom, there tall, touch all, please from thy Table side; they only now come but to fill thine eyes.

Tim. They will wecome all, let thine kind admittance, My felfe make them welcome.

Lur. You let my Lord, how ample y'are below'd.

Aper. Hobyday. What a sweep of vanitie comes this way, they daunce? They are madwomen.

I. ii. 10—140

697
Enter a third Serenade.

How now? What news?

3 Ser. Pleased you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats as your companion to morrow, to hunt with him, and he's sent your Honour two brace of Greyhounds.

Tim. He hunts with him, and let them be receiv'd, not without faire Reward.

Fla. What will this come to?

He commands us to provide, and give great guifts, and all out of an empty Coffe; nor will he know his Purse, or yield me this, to shew him what a Beggar his heart is; being of no power to make his wishs good.

His promises flye so beyond his ftrete,
That what he speaks is all in debts, he owes for euyr word:
He is fo kind, that he now pays interest for it;
His Land's put to their Bookes. Well, would I were Gently put out of Office, before I were forc'd out.

Happier is he that has no friend to fece,
Then such that do e'ne Enemies exceede.
I blest inwardly for my Lord.

Tim. You do your felues much wrong, you bare too much of your owne merits.
Hence my Lord, a tale of our Lord.

3 Lord. With more then common thanks I will receive it. Exit.

3 Lord. O be's the very soule of Bounty.

Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gave good words the other day of a Bay Courser I rood on; in your words because you lik'd it.

1. O. Oh, I bless you pardon mee, my Lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can inflame grace, but what he does affet. I weigh my friends affections with mine owne: He tell you true, I call to you.

All Lor. None so welcome.

Tim. I take all, and your feuerall vibrations

Ser. No, no, it's not enough to give:

Me thinks, I could deale Kingdome to my Friends, and none be more ecstic.

Ah. Lord.

Ser. Or Horses.

Tim. Omy Friends:

I have one word to say to you: Look ye, my good L.
I would interest you about mee to morrow,
As much as I dare accept, and aerate it,
Kinde my Lord.

1 Lord. I am so faire already in your guifts.

Ad. So are we all.

Enter a Serenade.

Ser. My Lord, there are certaine Nobles of the Senate nearly sleighted, and come to visit you.

They are fairly welcome.

Enter Flamia.

Fla. Ibesearch we Honor, youthface me a word, it does concern you here.

Tim. Never why then, another time Ile heare thee.

I prithee let's be framed to shew them entertain't.

Tim. I'ere I know how.

Enter another Serenade.

Ser. May it please your Honor, Lord Lucullus (On this free Ione) here, presents to you

Flora. Mikel-white Horse, kept in Siluer.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the Presents

Bountifully entertain'd.

Tim.

1. ii. 141—252
Enter Sacerd. Sen. And late five thousand; to Varro and to Inshore He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe, Which makes it due and twenty. Still in motion Of raging waste? It cannot hold, it will not. If I will Gold, steele but a beggars Dudge, And give it Timon, why the Dogge goes Gold. If I would sell my Horfe, and buy twenty moe Better then he; why give my Horfe to Timon. And nothing more, it is for I do ferve And able Horfe: No Porter at his gate, But rather one that smilies, and fhall invites All that passe by. It cannot hold, no reason Can found his State in safety. Caphis hox, Caphis I say. Enter Caphis.

Ca. Here & fit, what is your pleasure.
Sen. Get on your clofe, & haft you to Lord Timon, Importune him for my Moneys, be not caft
With flight denial; nor then fiscre'd, when Command me to your Master, and the Cap Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell him, My Vifes cry to me; I mutt ferce my turne Out of mine owne, his days and times are past, And my reliances on his failed dates Have fum this credit. I loue, and honour him, But mutt not breake my backe, to heal his finger. Immediate are my needs, and my relefe Muff not be toll and turn'd to me in words, But finde fuppy immediate. Get you gone, Put on a molt importunate aifee, A visage of demand; what you deare When every Feather fitches in his owne wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which fhaffes now a Phoenix, get you gone. Ca. I go fit. Sen. I go fit? Take the Bonds along with you, And haue the doubles in. Come. Ca. I will Sir. Sen. Go. Exeunt

Enter Steward, with many bills in his hand. Stew. No care, no fpop, fo fenfible of expence, That he will neither know how to maintaine it, Nor can his floor of riot. Takes no accape How things go from him, nor refume no care Of what is to continue: never minde, Was to be fo vnwife, to be fo kind. What fhall be done, he will not haue, tilfeele: I muft be round with him, now he comes from hunting, Fye, fye, fye, fye.

Enter Caphis, Inshore, and Varro.

Cap. Would we were all dicharg'd,
Var. I faware it,
Cap. Here comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Traine.

Tim. So foone as dinners done, we'll forth againe
My Ateheater. With me, what is your will?
Cap. My Lord, here is a note of certaine due.
Tim. Due? whence are you?
Cap. Of Athens here, my Lord.
Tim. Go to my Steward.
Cap. Pleafing your Lordifhip, I haue put me off To the feceffion of new due this moneth:
My Mafter is awak'd by great Occasion,
To call upon his owne, and humbly prays you,
That with your other Noble parts, you'll fuite,
In guiding his right.
Tim. Mine friend, I prity thee but repair to me next morning.
Cap. Nay, good my Lord.
Tim. Containeth thy felte, good Friend,
Var. One Parceff feffuant, my good Lord.
Insh. From Inshore, he humbly prays your speedy payment.
Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Matters wants.
Var. Twas due on forfeiture my Lord, five weeks, and paft.
Tim. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I
Am fent expreffely to your Lordifhip.
Tim. Give me breath:
I do believe you good my Lords keep on,
He waites upon you infinitely. Come hither: pray you How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd
With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,
And the detention of long since due debts
Against my Honor?
Stew. Pleafa you Gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this businesse:
Your importunate eafe, till after dinner,
That I may make this Lordifhip vnderstand;
Wherefore you are not payd.
Tim. Do fo my Friends, fee them well entertain'd.
Stew. Pray draw near.

Enter Apemantus and Poole.

Cap. Stay, stay, here comes the Fool with Apeman-us, he's a fome port with him.
Var. Hauh him, he's abufe vs.
Insh. A plague upon him dogge.
Var. How doft Poole?
Ape. Doll Dialogue with thy shadow?
Var. I speake not to thee.
Ape. No 'tis to thy selfe. Come away.
If. There's the Foolle hangs on your backe already.
Ape. No thousand fl'angell, 'tis not on him yet.
Cap. Where's the Poole now?
Ape. He left ask'd the queffion. Poore Rogues, and Vurers men, Buids betweene Gold and want.
All. What are we Apemantus?
All. Attes.
All. Why?
Ape. That you ask me what you are, & do not know your felues. Speake to'em Poole, Foolle. How do you Gentlemen?
All. Gramercies good Poole:
How does your Miftis?
Enter Page.

Timon. Ere you, here comes my Master Page.

Timon. How doth thou Apemantus?

Apemantus. I would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitable.

Timon. Prythee Apemantus read me the supercipient of these Letters, I know not which is.

Apemantus. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apemantus. There will little Learning dye then that day thou art hang'd.

Timon. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades, Go thou thou's born a Bawd, and thou's dye a Bawd.

Page. Thou wast th'help of Dogges, and thou shalt fam'ned Dogges death.

Apemantus. Answer not, I am gone.

Page. Eve so thou run out Grace, Foolie I will go with you to Lord Timon.

Timon. Will you leave me there?

Page. If Timon stay at home, You three true three Villus.

Timon. I would they fure'd vs.

Page. So would I:

As good a tricke as ever Hangman fure'd Thefe.

Page. Are you three Villus men?

Timon. All. I Foolie.

Foolie. I think no Villus, but he's a Foolie to his Serrvant.

Page. My Mattes is one, and I am her Foolie: when men come to borrow of your Mellers, they approach falsly, and go away merry: but they enter my Mellers house merrly, and go away falsly. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Page. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whore-miller, and a Knave, which notwithstanding thou shalt be no leffe estim'd.

Foolie. A Foolie in good clothes, and something like these. This is spirit, sometime appearres like a Lord sometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two dones more then's aristarch one. Hee is very often like a knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes vp and downe in, from fourscore to thirteenth, this spirit walkes in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a Fools.

Page. Not thou altogether a Wife man,

As much foolerie as I have, so much will thou lack't.

Page. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All. If I follo'd, theere comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon and Steward.

Steward. Come with me, (Foolie) come.

Foolie. I do not alwayes follow Louter, jelder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher.

Stew. Pray you walk en ere, He speaks with you anzen.

Exeunt.

Timon. You make me moreuell wherefore ere this time Had you not fully tayde my flate before me, That I might fo have raised my expence As I had issue of meanees.

Stew. You would not have me:

At many lefuies I propoue, Timon. Go to:

Perchance for a single vantages you tooke, When your great position you put backe,

And that rap vtiofle made your minifter

Thus to excite your felte.

Stew. O my good Lord,

At many times I brought in my accompls,

Laid them before you, you would throw them of,

And lay you found them in mine honifie.

When for some tripling pretent you have bid me returne to them, I have thooke my head, and wept:

Yet a fainfth Authority of manners, pray'd you to

To hold your hand more close: I did induere

No tidelome, nor no flight checkers, when I have Prompted you in the ebbe of your estate,

And your great flow of debts; my loud Lord,

Though you hear now (too late) yet nowes a time,

The ring of your ouing, lackes a halfe,

To pay your present debts.

Timon. Let all my Land be fold.

Stew. This is all eng'd, some forreyted and gone,

And what remains will hardly flop the mouth

Of present duties; the future comes space:

That shall defend the interim, and at length

Heare's your true reck'nings.

Timon. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stew. Omy good Lord, the world is but a word,

Were it all yours, to give it a breath,

How quickly were it gone.

Timon. You tell me true.

Stew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Fallhood,

Come before the half'd Admitt, and keep the

Let me see the prooffe. So the Gods bless me,

When all our Offices have been opprest

With rigorous Feeders, when our Vauls have wept

With drunken spithn of Wines; when every room

Hath babb'd with Lights, and braied with Miniftrall

I have expect'd me to a waffles full cocke,

And let men eyes at Flow.

Timon. Prythee no more.

Stew. Heavens have I said, the bounty of this Lord;

How much prodyall bits have Staiue and Prizzes

This night englisterd: who is not Timon,

What heart, heart, sword, force, import, but is L Timon.

Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royall Timon:

Ah, when the means are gone, that buy this praiie,

The breath is gone whereof this praiie is made:

Fafion, faff'toff: one cloud of Winter floweres,

These bye are couth.

Timon. Come set men no further.

No villians bounty yet hath past my heart;

Vowdily, not ignobly have I gien.

When doth thou weep, canst thou the confine lacke,

To think I flill talk friends: I fure my heart,

If I would broach the vellons of my leane,

And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,

Men, and mens fortunes could I ftrainke wse

As I can bid thee speake.

Stew. Assurance blesse thy thoughts.

Timon. And in some for these wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them blessings. For by these

Shall I trie Fools: you shall perceive

How you may like my Fortunes;

I am weathie in my Friends.

Within there, Flamin. Seruillus?

Exit.
Enter three Servants.
Ser. My Lord, my Lord.
Tim. I will dispatch you feverally.
You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted with his Honor to day; you to Somnium, commend me to their lovers; and I am proud say, that my occasions have found time to vie them toward a supply of many:
let the requit be fifty Talents.
Flam. As you have said, my Lord.
Ser. Lord Lucius and Lucullus? Ham.
Tim. Go you for to the Senators;
Of whom, even to the States beat Justice; I have Defend'd this Hearing: bid 'em fend off thin infinit
A thousand Talents to me.
Ser. I trust be done;
(For that I knew it the most general way)
To them, to vfe your Signer, and your Name,
But they do flake them near, and I am here
No richer in return.
Tim. It's true: Can't be?
Ser. They anfwer not a Joyns and corporate voice,
That now they are at first, want Treasure cannot
Do what they would, are forto: you are Honourable,
But yet they could hate wishes, they know not,
Something hath beene amiable: Noble Nature
May catch a warrant; would all were well; 'tis pity,
And I intend neither others factions matters.
After ditfattifled, these and hard Fractions
With certaine half-caps, and cold mowing rods,
They froze me into Silence.
Tim. You Gods reward them:
Prythee man looke cheetely, These old Fellowes
Have their ingratitude in them Hereditary:
Their blood is ca'd, 'tis cold, it fildone flowers,
'Tis lack'd of kindly warmth, they are not kinde;
And Nature, as it groves against earthward,
Is faffion'd for the journey, dull and beauty.
Go to Ventidius (prythee benon sad,
Thou art true, and honest, I Ingeniously I speake,
No blame belongs to thee): Ventidius lately
Buried his Father, by whose death hee's flepp'd
Into a great estate: When he was poorer,
Impoff'd, and in Circumstances of Fortune,
I clearg him with fve Talents: Greet him from me,
Bid him fupposz, some good necessity
Touches his Friend, which caueth to be remembered
With chofe ftue Talents; that had, gie thee these Fellowes
To whom 'tis inflante due. Need's speake or thynke,
That Timon fortunes mong his Friends can finke,
Ser. I would I could not think it:
That thought is Bounties For:
Being free it felle, it thinkes all others fo.

Exeunt

Flaminus waiting to speake with a Lord from his Matter, enters a Servant to him.
Ser. I have told my Lord of you, he is comming down to you.
Flam. I thank you Sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Heere's my Lord.
Why this hint right: I dreamt of a Silver Balcon and Ewe
To night. Flaminus, honest Flaminus, you are verie respectfully welcome Sir, Fill me some Wine. And how does that Honourable, Compleat, Free-hearted Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountifull good Lord and Mayor.

Flam. His health is well fir.
Luc. I am right glad that his health is well fir: and what hath thou there under thy Cloake, pretty Flaminus?
Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Gods behalfe, I come to intreat your Honor to supply: who having great and inflante occasion to vfe his Talents, hath fruit to your Lordship to furnish him: nothing doubting your present affiquence therein.
Luc. La, La, La: Nothing doubting lays thee? Alas good Lord, a Noble Gentleman tis, if he would not keep to good a house. Many a time and often I ha'd with him, and told him on't, and came againe to supper to him of purpose, to have him spend lefle, and yet he would embrace no convenient, take no warning by my comming,every man has his fault, and honestly as he is told him on't, but I could never get him from

Enter Servant with Wine.
Ser. Please your Lordship, heere is the Wine.
Luc. Flaminus, I have noted thee alwaies wife.
Heere's to thee.
Flam. Your Lordship speaks your pleasure.
Luc. I have observed thee alwaies for a towardlie prompt spirit, gie thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reafon; and canst vfe the time wel, if the time vfe thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone fir-
rah. Draw neerer honelt Flaminus. Thy Lords a bount-fuile Gentleman, but thou art wife, and thou know'st well enough (although thou com fit to me) that this is no time to lend money, especially upon base friendshipp without securitie. Here's three Solicitors for thee, good Boy winke at me, and say thou sawt me not. Fare thee well.
Flam. It's possible the world should so much differ,
And we alie that lived? Fly dammed baseneflfe
To him that footsteps thee.
Luc. Ha? Now I see thou art a Foole, and fit for thy Matter.
Exeunt.

Flam May thee add to the number, may feall thee:
To moulten Conie be thy damnation,
Thou disfave of a friend, and not himselfe:
Has friendshipp such a faint and milkie hear,
It turns in leffe then two nights? O you Gods!
I feel my Masters passion. This Sloaize into his Honor,
Has my Lords meate in him:
Why should it thrive, and tune to Nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poypion?
O may Dissease onely work upon't:
And when he's sick to death, let not that part of Nature
Which my Lord payd for, be of any power
To expell sickness, but prolong his hower.

Exeunt

Enter Lucins with three strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend and an Honourable Gentleman.
1 We know him for no leffe, tho'g we are but stranger's to him. But I can tell you one thing my Lord, and which I bare from common rumour, now Lord Timons happie howres are done and past, and his efface shrinks from him.
Lucins. Fye no, doe not beleive it: hee cannot want for money.
2 But bleucre you this my Lord, that not long since,
one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many Talents, my vrg'd extremly for', and thewad

Timon of Athens.

what necessity belong'd too't, and yet was deny'd,

Luc. How?

I tell you, deny'd me my Lord,

Luc. What a strange face was that? Now before the Gods I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man? There was very little Honour shew'd in. For my own part, I must needs confesse, I have recou'd some small kindnesses from him, as Money, Plate, Jewels, and such like Trifles; nothing comparing to his: yet had he me for look'd him, and sent to me, I should ne'v'r have denied his Occasion to many Talents.

Enter Servants.

Serv. See, by good hap yonder my Lord, I have sent to see his Honor. My Hon'dor Lord, Luc. Servants? You are kindly met sir. Fartewell, command me to thy Honourable virtuous Lord, my very exquifite friend.

Serv. May it please your Honour, my Lord hath sent —

Luc. Has what he's sent? I am so much encreas'd to that Lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him think'lt thou? And what has he now sent?

Serv. Has only sent his present Occasion now my Lord; respecting your Lordship to supply his infant vice with so many Talents.

Luc. I know his Lordship is but merry with me, he cannot want fifty fince hundred Talents.

Serv. But in the mean time he wants leffe my Lord.

If his occasion were not vertuous, I should not vrg'e it half so faithfully.

Luc. Doft thou speake Seriously Servants?

Serv. Upon my foule his true Sir.

Luc. What a wicked Beast was I to so disfurnish my self against such a good time, when I might ha' done my selfe Honourable? How unluckily it hapned, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and vndso a great deal of Honour? Servants, now before the Gods I am not able to do (the more best I say) I was sending to wie Lord Timon my selfe, thefe Gentlemen can witness but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done now.

Commend me bountifully to his good Lordship, and I hope his Honor will entreat the fairest of me, because I haue no power to be kind. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greates afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an Honourable Gentleman. Good Servants, will you befriend mee to fare, aston'de mine owne words to him?

Ser. Yes sir, I shall.

Exit Serv. Luc. Be he the lesse ou't a good turne Servants, True as you fay, Timon's thraske indeeinde, And he that's once deny'de, will hardly fpeede. Exit.

1 Do you obserue this Hiftories? « 2 I, to well.

1 Why this is the worldes soule, And liuff of the fame peace

Is ever Flatterers sport, who can call him his Friend That dippes his bread in the same dish? For in my knowing Timon has bin this Lords Father, And kept his credit with his purfe; Supported his estate, now Timon money Has paid his men their wages. He ne're drinkes, But Timon Silver treads upon his Lip, And yet, oh see the most forforned of man, When he looke out in an vnfruchful shape; He does deny him (in respect of his)

What charitable men afford to Beggers.

3 Religion grones at it.

1 For mine owne part, I never call'd Timon in my life Nor came any of his bounties ouer me, To make me for his Friend. Yet I protest, For his right Noble minde, illuflrious Virtue, And Honourable Carriage, Had his necessitie made vfe of me, I would have put my wealth into Donation, And the benefit shou'd have return't to him, So much I loue his heart; But I perceive, Men must learne now with pitty to difference, For Policy fits about Confidence.

Exit.

Enter a third Servant with Suppers, another of Timon's Friends.

Sump. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hum. 'Tis all one is? He might haue tried Lord Lucas, or Lucas, And now Ventiagus is wealthy too.

Whom he redeem'd from prison. All these

Owes their estates unto him.

Ser. My Lord, They have all bin touch'd, and found Base, Mistake, For they have all denied him.

Sump. How haue they deny'd him? Has Ventiagus and Lucas deny'd him, And does he send to me? Three? Hum?

It shewes but little loue, or judgement in him.

Must I be his last Reuge? His Friends (like Physicians) Thrus, give him ouer: Must I take this confidence? Has much disgrac'd me in't, I'm angry at him, That might have known my place. I see no fente forts, But his Occasions might have wedd me firit; For in my conference, I was the fift man That ere received guilt from him.

And does he thinke so barksdly of me now, That ill requite it left? No:

So it may prove an Argument of Laughter To drefle, and mow ill Lords be thought a Fooles; I fearer than the worth of thrice the femme, Had fent to me firit, but for my minde, I'de fuch a courage to do him good: But now return, And with their fait reply, this anwer joyne: Who rates mine Honor, shal not know my Coyne. Exit

Ser. Excellent: Your Lordships a goodly Villain: the dwell knew not what he did, when he made man Politicke; he crost him himfelf but I cannot thinke, but in the end, the Villains of man will fet him clear. How fairely this Lord vrites to appear feule? Takes Venerous Copies to be wicked: like these, that under instan t zeale, would fet whole Realmes on fire, of such a nature is his politicke loue.

This was my Lords belf hope, now all are feld Sate onely the Gods. Now his Friends are dead, Doores that were ne'er acquainted with their Wards Many a bounteous yeere, must be neglifg'd Now to guefe sure their Master:

And this is all a liberal carfe allows, Who cannot keepe his wealth, muft keep his house. Exit.

Enter Varro's men, meetting others, All Timon's Creditors to wait for his comming out. Then enter Lucius and Hortensius.

Var. men. Well met, goodmorning Titus & Hortensius

Titus

Timon of Athens.

Tit. The like to you kinder
Hurt. Lucius, what do we meet together?
Luci. I, and I think but a mist the do's command vs all.
For mine is money.

Tit. So is thine, and ours.
Enter Philetaerus.

Luci. And for Philetaerus.

Phil. Good day at once.

Luci. Welcome good Brother.

What do you think the houses?

Phil. Labouring for Nine.

Luci. So much, money.

Phil. Is not my Lord nearby yet?

Luci. Not yet.

Phil. I wonder on, he was wont to fine at lessein.

Luci. I, but the dayes are vast shorter with him.

You must consider that 4 prodigall course.

I like the Simmes, but not like this recoverable, I frase:
'Tis deep Wolter in Lord Timon purse, that is: One may reach depe enough, and yet finde little.

Phil. I am of your fear, for that.

Tit. He show you how to suberce a strange event:

Your Lord sends now for Money?

Hurt. Most true, he do's.

Tit. And he wearis jewels now of Timons guilt,
For which I wait for money.

Hurt. It is against my heart.

Luci. Marke how strange it flowes,

Timons in this, shoulde pay more then he owes:
And one as if your Lord should wearis rich Jewels,
And send for money for 'em.

Hurt. Fine weary of this Charge,
The Gods can winne:
I know my Lord hath spent of Timons wealth,
And now ingratitude, makes it worse then health.

Varro. Ye, mine's three thousand Crownes:
What's yours?

Luci. Five thousand mine,

Varro. 'Ts much depe, and it shoulde seem by thsum

Your Masters confidence was above mine,
Eile surely he had equall'd

Enter Elfinimus.

Tit. One of Lord Timons men.

Elfinimus. Sir, a word: Pray is my Lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed he is not.

Tit. We attend his Lordship: pray signify so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that, he knowes you are 4

Enter Steward in Cloaks, muffled (disguist).

Luci. Has he not that his Steward muffled so?
He goes away in a Cloak: Call him, call him.

Tit. Do you heere, sir?

2. Varro. By your leave, sir.

Stew. What do ye ake of me, my Friend?

Tit. We wait for certaine Money here, sir.

Stew. If money were as certaine as your writing,

'Twere sure enough.

Why then prefer'd ye not your summes and Bills
When your late Masters estate of my Lords meat?
Then they could smile, and fawne upon his debs,
And take downe th'Interrest into their glutinous Mawses.
You do your felowes but wrong, to flatter me vp,
Let me safe quietely.

Releue's, my Lord and I have made an end,
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luci. I, but this answer will not ferue.

Stew. If't will not ferue, 'tis not so safe as you,
For you ferue Knaves.

1. Varro. How? What does his caffiner'd Worship matter?

2. Varro. No matter what, Jee's poor, and that's re-tunge enough. Who can speake broader, ther that has no house to put his head in? Such may style against great buildings.

Enter Serullius.

Tit. Oh hette's Serullius: now wee shall know some answere.

Seru. If I might beseech you Gentlemen, to repayre some other house, I should endure much from't. Forstake:

Of my foule, my Lord leaves wondrously to discomfet:
His comfortablie temper has forsooke him, he's much out of health, and keeps his Chamber.
Ever. Many do keep their Chambers, are not fike.
And it do to farre beyond his health.
Me shonke be should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a cleere way to the Gods.

Seru. Good Gods.

Time. We cannot take this for answere, fir.

Flaminus with him. Serullius helps, my Lord, my Lord,

Enter Timon in a rage.

Tim. What, are my dues oppod against my passage?
Hau it bin eruer free, and muft my house
Be my retentive Enemy? My God!
The place which I hau Fealet, does it now
(like all Munkinde) Bhew me an Iron heart?

Luci. Put in now Time.

Tit. My Lord, here's my Bill.

Luci. Here's mine.

1. For. And mine, my Lord,
2. For. And ours, my Lord.

Philo. All our Bills.

Tim. Knocke me downe with 'em, cleuse mee to the Girdle.

Luci. Alas, my Lord,

Tim. Cut my heart in sumners.

Tit. Mine, for if

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luci. Five thousand Crownes, my Lord

Tim. Five thousand drops payes that.

What yours? and yours?

1. For. My Lord.
2. For. My Lord.

Tim. Teare me, take me, and the Gods fall upon you.

Exit Timon.

Hurt. Faith I perceiue our Masters may throwe their cups at their money, these debts may well be call'd deperate ones, for a ushman owes 'em

Exeunt.

Enter Timon.

Timon. They have one put my breath from mee the flame. Creditors Diuets.

Stew. My deere Lord.

Tim. What if it should bee so?

Stew. My Lord.

Tim. He have it so. My Steward?

Stew. Heere my Lord.

Tim. So fety I Go, bid all my Friends againe,

Lucius, Eumolpus, and Sympermus Pieria. All, 1st once more bead the Rascals.

Stew. O my Lord, you onely speake from your dissocled soule, there's not so much left to furnish out a moderate Table.

703
Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them, with Attendants.

1. Sen. My Lord, you have my royce, too's.
2. Sen. It's necessary he should dye:
4. Sen. Moot true, the Law shall bruite'em.

Alc. Honor, health, and compassion to the Senate.

Alc. Now Captaine.

1. Sen. I am an humble Sutor to your Victuus:
2. Sen. For pity is the venue of the Law,
3. Sen. And none but Tyrants write it cruelly.
4. Sen. It pleases time and Fortune to like leaue
5. Sen. Upon a Friend of mine, who in hot blood
6. Sen. Hath reft into the Law: which is palt depth
7. Sen. To those that (without heede) do plunge tooo't.
8. Sen. He is a Man (letting his Fate aside) of comedy Victuus,
9. Sen. Nor did he foyle the fact with Cowardice,
10. Sen. (And Honor in him, which buys out his fault)

Seeing his Reputation touch'd to death,

He did oppose his Fate:

And with fuch fober and vnoted paffion
He did behavie his anger eire twas spent,

As if he had but prou'd an Argument.

1. Sen. You vndergo too fincl a Paradox,
2. Sen. Suthing to make an vgly deed looke faire:
3. Sen. Your words have cooke fuch paines, as if they labour'd
4. Sen. To bring Man-murther into forme, and set Quartelling
5. Sen. Upon the head of Valour; which indeede
6. Sen. Is Valour misbegotten, and came into the world,
7. Sen. When Sefts, and Factions were newly borne.
8. Sen. He's truly Valiant, that can withif fuffer
9. Sen. The wroth that man can breath,
10. Sen. And make his Wrongs, his Out-siders,
11. Sen. To weare them like his Rayment, carelefly,
12. Sen. And he're preferre his injuries to his heart,
13. Sen. To bring it into danger.
14. Sen. It Wrongs be euillies, and enforce vs kill,
15. Sen. What Folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill.

Alc. My Lord.

1. Sen. You cannot make grofte finnes looke cleare,
2. Sen. To revenge is no Valour, but to bear
3. Sen. Alc. My Lords, then vnder fatory, pardon me,
4. Sen. If I speake like a Captaine.
5. Sen. Why do fond men expose themselves to Battell,
6. Sen. And not endure all threats? Sleepe vs pov't,
7. Sen. And let the Foes quietely cut their Throates
8. Sen. Without repugnancy? if there be
9. Sen. Such Valour in the hearing, what make wee
10. Sen. Abroade? Why then, Women are more valiant
11. Sen. That they at home, it: Bearing carty in
12. Sen. And the Alc. more Captaine then the Lyon?
13. Sen. The fellow lustens with Irons, winer then the Judge?
14. Sen. If Wife'some be in fuffering, Oh my Lords,
15. Sen. As you are great, be pitifully Good,
16. Sen. Who cannot condemn rashine in cold blood?
17. Sen. To kill, I grant, is finnes extremestly Guilt,
19. Sen. To be in Anger, is impirec:
20. Sen. But who is Man, that is not Angrie.
21. Sen. Weigh but the Crime with this.

Alc. You breath in vain.

Alc. In vain.

His remise done at I saidemon, and Bisantium,
Were sufficient bribers for his life.
1. Sen. What's that?
2. Sen. Why say my Lords he's done faire servise,
3. Sen. And shone in fight many of your enemies
4. Sen. How full of valour did he bear himselfe
5. Sen. In the last Conflid, and made plentuous wounds?
6. Sen. He has made too much plenty with him:
7. Sen. He's a fnorre Riorer, he has a fine
8. Sen. That often drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner.
9. Sen. If there were no Foes, that were enough
10. Sen. To overcome him.
11. Sen. In that Beatfull fight,
12. Sen. He has bin knowne to commit outrages,
13. Sen. And cruel Judgments. 'Tis interred too's,
14. Sen. His days are soule, and his drinke dangerous.

Alc. Hard fate: he might haue dyed in warre.

My Lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arm might purchase his owne time,
And be in debts to none: yet more to move you,
That my defecrs are his; and his endemem.
And for I know, your revered Ages love Security,
He pawned my Victories, all my Honour to you
Upon his good returns.

If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life,
Why let the Warre recuie't in valiant gore,
For Law is fithe, and Warre is nothing more.

We are for Law, he dyes, vrging it no more
On height of our displeasure. Friend, or Brother,
He forfeits his owne blood, that spilles another.

Alc. Must it be so? it must not bee.

My Lords, I do defece you know mee.
2. Sen. How?

Alc. Call me to your remembrances.

Alc. I cannot thinke but your Age has forgot me,
It could not bee, I shou'd prooue in base,
To sue and be denyed a such common Grace.
My wounds sake at you.
1. Sen. Do you dare our anger?
2. Sen. 'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect:
3. Sen. We banish thee for ever.

Alc. Banish me?

Banish your dargue, banish your wife,
That makes the Senate angry.

1. Sen. If after two dayes shone, Athens contains them,
3. Sen. And not to swell our Spirits,
4. Sen. He shall be executed presently.
5. Sen. Alc. Now the Gods keepe you old enough,
6. Sen. That you may live
7. Sen. Onely in bone, that none may looke on you,
8. Sen. I'm worse then mad: I have kept backe their Foes
9. Sen. While they haue sold their Money, and let out
10. Sen. Their Coine upon large interett. I my felfe,
11. Sen. Rich only in large hurts. All those,for this?
12. Sen. Is this the Balfome, that the visisent Senat
14. Sen. It comes not ill! I hate not to be banished
15. Sen. It is a cause worthy my Spleene and Furie,
16. Sen. That I may strike at Athens. Ile chere vp
17. Sen. My discontented Troopes, and lay for hearts;
18. Sen. 'Tis Honour with most Lands to be at ods,

Exit.

III. iv. 118—III. v. 119

704
Enter divers Friends,
At general doors.

1. The good time of day to you, sir.
2. I all with it to you: I think this Honorable Lord did but try this other day.
3. Upon that were my thoughts spying when we encountered; I hope it's not to low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his feueral Friends.
4. It should not be, by the perusing of his new Feasting.
5. I should think so. He hath sent me an earnest inquiring, which many my noble occasions did urge me to put off: but he hath contrived me beyond them, and I must needs appear.
6. In his Majesty's case I am in debt to my important business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am forre, when he sent to borrow of me, that my Permission was out.
7. I am sick of that green too, as I understand now all things go.
8. Every man hears so: what would he have borrow'd of you?
9. A thousand Pieces?
10. A thousand Pieces?
11. What of you?
12. He sent to me first—Heere he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart Gentlemen both; and how fare you?
1. Enter at the best, bearing well of your Lordship.
2. The Swallow follows not Summer more willing, then we your Lordship.
3. Nor more willingly leaves Winter, such Summer Birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompence this long day. Feast your cares with the Myrrhe: While they will fare so heartily o'th Trumpets found: we shall't presently.
4. I hope it remains not vokindly with your Lordship, that I return'd you an empty Messenger.
5. Time 'O' fit, let it not trouble you.
7. Tim. Ah my good Friend, what chere?

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

1. How now, my Lords?
2. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?
3. Puff, did you see my Cap?
4. I have loft my Gowne.
5. He's a hot Lord, & nought but humors swaies him. He gave me a Jewell the other day, and now he has brake it out of my hand.
6. Did you see my Jewell?
7. Did you see my Cap?
8. Here 'tis.
9. Here lyes my Gowne.
10. Let's make no stay.
11. Lord Timons mad.
12. I feel upon my bones.
13. One day he gives vs Diamonds, next day bones.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me looke backe upon thee, thou Wall That girdles in those Wolves, due in the earth, And fence not Athens. Mourns, turne incensiments. Obedience payle in Children: Slaves and Fool's
Plucke the grave wrinkled Senate from the Bench,
And minister in their steads, to general Fitts.
Convent o’th’Inflame green Virgynity,
Doo’t in your Parents eyes. Bankrupts,hold fast
Rather then render back; out with your Knives,
And cut your Trullers throates. Bound Servants, fleale,
Large-handied Robbers your grate Masters are,
And pull by Law. Maid’side, to thy Masters bed,
Thy Misfit is o’th Brothell. Some of fifteen,
Plucke the lyn’d Crutch from thy old limping Sire,
With it, beate out his Brains. Pity, and Fears,
Religion to the Gods, Peace, Justice, Truth,
Dometlicke awe, Night-rell, and Neighbourhood,
Instruction, Manners, Mylleties, and Trades,
Degrees, Oberrances, Customes, and Lsew,
Decline to your confounding contraries.
And yet Confusion lies: Plaggets incident to men,
Your potent and infectious Feasors, heape
On Athens ripe for stroke. Thoul cold Scinita,
Crippl our Senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their Manners. Luft, and Libertie
Crepe in the Minces and Masroves of our youth,
That gainst the frame of Virtue they may thrive,
And thawne them selves in Rust, Inche, Blaines,
Some all th’Athenian boomen, and their crop
Be general Leprofe: Breath infect breath,
That their Society (as their Friendship) may
Be meerely payson. Nothing I bear from thee
But nakendiffe, thou deteetable Town;
Take thou that too, with multiplying Bannes:
Toum will to the Woods, where he shall finde
The’unknollied Breat, more kindet then Mankinde.
The Gods confound (hear me you good Gods all)
Th’Athenians both within and out that Wall:
And grumze at Toum growes, his harte may grow
To the whole race of Mankinde, high and low.
Amen.

Enter Steward with two or three Servants.

1. Here you M. Steward, where’s our Mafi?
Are we vndone, caft off, nothing remaining?
Stew. Alack my Fellowes, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous Gods,
I am as poor as you.
2. Such a Base broock!
So Noble a Master false, all gone, and not
One friend to take his Fortune by the arm,
And go along with him.
3. As we do turne our backes
From our Companion, throwne into his grave,
So his Familiars to his buried Fortunes
Sink/e away: loose their saffe vowes with him
Like empty portes pick’st; and his poore selse
A dedicated beggar to the Ayre,
With his diseale, of all flunk’d pauryty,
Walkes like contempt alone. More of our Fellowes.

Enter other Servants.

Stew. All broken Implements of a mind hous,
Yet do our hearts weare Toum Livery,
That fee by our Faces: we are Fellowes still,
Being able in sorrow; Less’d is our Barks,
And we poore Mates, fland on the dying Decke,
Hearing the Surgees threat: we must all part
Into this Sea of Ayre.
Stew. Good Fellowes all,

The last of my wealt Hee shre among you?
Where euer we shall mete, for Toum sake
Let’s yet be Fellowes. Let’s shake our heads, and say
As t’were a Knoll unto our Masters Fortunes,
We have seene better dayes. Let each take some:
Nay put out all your hands: Not one word more,
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poore.

Embrace and part general ways,
Oh the faire wretchedneffe that Glory brings:
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt?
Since Riches point to Misery and Contempts?
Who would be so mock’d with Glory, or to live
But in a Dreame of Friendship,
To haue his pompe, and all what flate compounds,
But onely painted like his varnished Friends:
Poore honest Lord, brought lowe by his owne heart,
Vndone by Goodnese: Stange vanfull blood.
When mans worth finde is, He do’s too much Good.
Who then dares to be halfe so kinde a gen?
For Bounty that makes Gods, do still more Men.
My deereft Lord, blest to be moft accurst,
Rich onely to be wretched: thy great Fortunes
Are made by thy base Affiliation. Also (kinde Lord)
Hee’s flung in Rapine from this ingratefull Sette
Of monstrous Friends:
Nor ha’s he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it:
Ile follow and enquire him out.
He euer leue his minde, with my bell will,
Whilit I haue God, ile be his Steward full.

Enter Toum in the woods.

Toum. O blefted breeding Sun, draw from the earth
Rosten humbly: below thy Sisters Orbe
Infetl the ayre. Twin’d Brothers of one wombe,
Where proracation, refidence, and birth,
Scarce is diuando: touch them with fouereall Fortunes,
The greater foroereth the leffer. Not Nature,
(To whom all fores lay fiege) can beare great Fortune
But by contempt of Nature.
Rasfe me this Bigger, and deny’t that Lord,
The Senators shal bear contempt hereditary:
The Bigger Native Honor.
It is the Paiture Lords, the Brothers fides,
The want that makes him leue: who dares who dares
In purtice of Manhood intand vpright
And fay, this mans a Flatterer. If one be,
So are they all: for euerie grize of Fortune
Is smooth’d by that below. The Learned pate
Ducked to the Golden Foolde. All’s oblique:
There’s nothing fteadh in our cursed Natures
But direft willamne. Therefore beabourd,
All Profits, Societie, and Thronges of men.
His fendable, yeun hisfelfe Toum disdaines,
Defitution phang mankinde: Earth yeldd me Roperes,
Who seekes for better of thee, fawe his palliate
With thy moft operant Payson. What is here?
Gold? Yellow, glittering, precious Gold?
No Gods, I am thefe Votaries,
Round you electre Hasteus. That much of this will make
Blace, white; towle, faire; wrong, right;
Bafe, Noble; Old, young; Coward, valiant.
Ha you Gods why this what this, you Gods why this
Will jugge your Priests and Servants from your fides:
Plucke Roub mens pillowes from below their heads.

This yellow Slave,
Will knitt and break Religions, bleffe th' accurt,
Make the hore Lepreole alor'd, place Theucis,
And give them Tis tus, kneel, and approbation
With Senators on the Bench: This is it
That makes the wappen'd Wilidow wed againe;
Slice, whom the Spittle-house, and vicrous Love,
Would call the gorges: This Eubulumes and Spices,
To the April day againe. Come dam'd Barth,
Thou common where of Mankinde, that puts oddes
Among the rout of Nations, I will make thee
Do thy right Nature.  March a' ron e off.
Hap! A Drumme! Th' that quik, but
Yet lie bury thee: Thou goe (long Thieves)
When Gowdy keepers of thee cannot stand:
Nay they thou out for currall.

Enter Alcibiades with Drummer and life in warlike manner, and Physician and Tandumara.

Alc. What art thou there? speake.
Tim. A Beall as thou art. The Canker grow thy hart
For flewing me against the eyes of Man.
Alc. What is thy name? is man so basefull to thee,
That art thee felte a Man?
Tim. I am Alcibiades, and hate Mankinde,
For thy part, I did with thou was a dogge,
That I might loose thee something.
alc. I know thee well;
But in thy Fortunes am unlearn'd, and strange.
Alc. What art thou? how canst thou see more then thou know thee
I do not refer to know. Follow thy Drumme,
With mans blood paint the ground Gules, Gules:
Religious Cannons, ciaul Laves are cruel,
Then what should wearre be? This fell showre of thine,
Hath in her more defraction then thy Sword,
For all thy Cherubin looke.

Tim. Thy lips rot off.
Alc. I will not kisse thee, then the rot resumes
To thine ewne lippes againe.

Alc. How came the Noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the Moone doth, by wanting light to guise:
But then renew I could not like the Moone,
There were no Summers to borrow of,

Alc. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee.
Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion.
Alc. What is it Timon?
Tim. Promisse me Friendshif, but performat none.
If thou wilt not promisse, the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou do performe, confound thee, for thou art a man.

Alc. I have heard in some sort of the Miferies.
Tim. Thou sawst them when I haust prosperity.
Alc. I see them now, then was a bleffed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with in brace of Harlotis.

Timon. Is this the Athenian Minion, whom the world
Voic'd to regardly?

Tim. Be a whole full, they love thee not that vie thee, give them the ares, lead them with thee thine Luft.
Make vie of thy late hours, sealon the flases for Tubbes and Barbes, bring downe robe-checks youth to the Fubfift, and the Dict.

Timon. Hang thee Monster.

Alc. Pardon him, yet Timandra, for his wits
Are drown'd and loof in his Calamities.

I have but little Gold of late, brace Timon.
The want whereof, doth dayly make people
In my penurious Band. I have heard and heard'd
How curs'd Athens, mindleffe of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when Neighbour Rates
But for thy Sword and Fortune tood upon them.

Tim. I prythee brace thy Drum, and gete thee gone.

Alc. I am thy friend, and pty thee, be thy name Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pitty who's, do'l trouble,
I had rather be alone.

Alc. Why fare thee well?
Here is some Gold for thee.
Tim. Keep thee, I cannot care it.

Alc. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap.
Tim. Was't thou'gaint Athens.
Alc. I Timon, and hate caulf.

Tim. The Gods confound them all in thy Conque,
And thee after, when thou haft Conquer'd.

Alc. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That by killing of Villaines
Thou was borne to conquer my Country,
Put vp thy Gold. Go on, here's Gold, doun;
Be a Plaister in thy money place.
Will o' the some high Vict-Cid, Cy, hang his poynthesis
In the fcke ayte: let not thy sword slip one:
Pitty not honour'd Age for his white Beard,
He is an Vlar. Strike me the counterfeet Marron,
It is her habitone only, that is honest,
Her selfe's a Bawd. Let not the Virgins cheeke.
Make soft thy trenchant Sword: for whose Malle pappes
That through the window Barre bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the Leaves of witty witt?
But set them down horrible Traitors, spare not the Babe
Whose dumpl'd smilies from Foutles exhaust their mercy.
Think it a Ballard, whom the Ozie
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd, the throat shall cut,
And mince it fans remonrie, weare against Obiects,
Put Armour on thine ears, plai, on thine eyes,
Whole people, nor ye's of Mothers, nor Babes,
Nor fight of Priests in holy Veimets bleeding,
Shall pierce a lot. There's Gold to pry thy Bawders,
Make large confusion: and thy fury steep,
Contwound be thy selfe. Speake not, but be gone.

Alc. Haft thou Gold yet, he take the Gold thou giuell me, nor all thy Counsell.
Tim. Doft thou or doft thou not, Headens care vpon thee.

Both. Give vs some Gold good Timon, hast $ more?
Tim. Enough to make a Whore forswear her Trade,
And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold vp you Sluts
Your Aprons mountants; you are not Obable.
And although I know you'll swear, terribly swear
Into Strong Thudders, and to heavenly Agues
Th' immortall Gods that hearre you: Spare your Oatheres.
He trust to your Conditions, be whore's still.
And he whose pious breath feckes to connect you,
Be strong in Whore, allure him, burne hun vp,
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no temperate: yet may your pains six moneths
As the pire conuerts, and the sunne is gone.
Your poor thin Roofes with burn'ch of the dead,
(Some that were hang'd) no matter:
Wearre them, betry with them; Whore still,
Paint till a horse may myre vpon your face:
A pos of wrinkles.

Barb. Well, more Gold, what then?

Beleevet t-he sweet dey any tinging for Gold:

Tim. Constrictions bow.
In hollow bones of man, strike their sharpe thimmes, And marre men spurring. Crackee the Lawyers voyce, That he may neuer more faile Title pleade.
Nor found his Quilletts flightlye: Heare the Flamen, That cold he'ld against the quallity of fliff, And not beleeue himselfe. Downe with the Nofe, Downe with his flat, take the Bridge quite away Of him, that his particular to force.
(bald ruler)
Smelt from the general weale. Make cold past Ruffians And let the vanic'ed Braggets of the Warre Derive some paine from you. Plague all,
That your Activity may deahte and quell
The foure of all Erection. There's more Gold,
Do you damne others, and let this damne you, And ditchet grace you all.

Tim. More counfell with more Money, bounteous

Alc. Strike up the Drum towards Athens, farewell

Tim. I hope well, I neuer see thee more.

Alc. I neuer did thee harme.

Tim. Yes, thou spokst well of me.

Alc. Call it thou that harme?

Tim. Yes, as thou sayst finde it. Get thee away,
And take thy Braglets with thee.

Alc. We but offend him, strike.

Exeunt.

Tim. That Nat are being fickle of mans vankindness
Should yet be hunger: Common Mother, thou
Whose wome unwmesurable, and infinite bee'
Teemes and feed's all: whose selfe name Mettle.
Whereof the proud Childe (arrogant man) is puff,
Engenders the blacke tow, and Adder blew,
The gilded Newt, and eyeleffe vemon'd Worme,
With all th'shabber'd Birds belowe Cripie Heauen,
Whereon Hyperion quickning fire doth shine:
Yield him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate,
From forth thy plentiful bosome, one poorest root:
Enleafe thy Fertile and Conceptions wome,
Let it no more bring out ingratefull man.
Go on with Tyggets, Dragons, Voluus, and Beasts,
Teeme with new Monsters, whom thy vpward face
Hath to the Marbled Monson all abowe
Neuer prefenterd. On Root, dear thaknes
Dry wth thy Marrowes, Vines, and Plough-torne Less,
Whereof ingratefull man with Licourif draughts
And Morifes Vaciion, greeche his pure minde,
That from it all Consideration flippes

Enter Aperantius,

More man? Plague, plague.

Ape. I was directed bither. Men report,
Thou dost affect my Manners, and dost not see them.

Tim. 'Tis then, becaused thou dost not keep a dogge
Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee.

Ape. This is in thee a Nature but infected,
A poor vicinously melancholly prong
From change of fortune. Why this Spade? this place?
This Slave like Habit, and tithes lookes of Carc?
Thy Flatterers yet weare Silke, drink Wine,lye loose,
Hugge their dises' Perfumes, and haue forgot
That use Timon was. Shame not these Woods,
By putting on the cunning of a Carper.
Bethou a Flatterer now, and seeke to thrive
By that which ha's vndeone thee, shindge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'ld obturere
Blow off thy Cap: prats his most vullious strawe,
As it excellent; thou waitt tould thus:
Thou gait till thine ears (like Tapfers, that bad welcom)
To Knave, and all approachers: 'Tis now juft
That thou turne Raffall, had'ld thou wealth againe,
Raffals should haue't. Do not affume my likeene.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away my felfe.

Ape. Thou haft eau safe away thy selfe, being like thy self
A Manom to long, now a Fool: what thinkst thou
That the blase eater, thy boyferous Chamberlaine
Will put thy thir, on warme? Will these moy'd Trees,
That haue out-li'd the Eagle, page thy heele.
And skip when thou point't out? Will the cold brooke
Candied with Ice, Cavidle thy Morning tafe
To cure thy o're-mights surfer? Call the Creatures,
Whose foule naked Nature lie in all the spring
Of wrecketful Heauen, whose base unhoued Trunken.
To the confiding Elements expos'd
Answer meete Nature: bid them batter thee.
O thou shalt finde.

Tim. A Fool of thee: depart.

Ape. I love thee better now, then ere I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Ape. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'lt miferie.

Ape. I Batter slyly, but say'st an a Caytiff.

Tim. Why do'lt thou seeks me out?

Ape. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a Villaines Office, or a Fools.'

Dost please thy selfe in?

Ape. I.

Tim. What, a Knave too?

Ape. It thou didst put this foure cold habit on
To callgaye thy pride, twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly: Thou'dst Couter be againe
Wert thou not Beggar: willing mifier
Out-lives: incertains pome, is crownd o' before.
The one is filling thil, neuer complext
The other, at high with: beft Haste Contendeiff,
Hath a distraight and most wretched being,
Wore the world, Content.
That thou'should differ to dye, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.

Thou art a Slave, whom Fortunes tender arm
With fauour neuer cliapat: but bred a Dogge.
Had'st thou like ws from our first ivhath proceeded,
The sweet degrees that this briefe world affords,
To such as may the psalme drugges of it
Freely command it: thou wouldst haue plang'd thy self
In general Riot, metted downe thy youth
In different beds of Luft, and neuer learnd
The Crie precepts of respect, but followed
The Sugred game before thee. But my selfe,
Who had the world as my Confectioriour
The mouthes, the tongue, the eyes, and hearts of men,
At duty more then I could frame employment;
That numberleffe upon me flucke, as leaues
Do on the Oakle, bane with one Winters breath
Fell from their boughes, and left me open, bare,
For every formre that blowes. I to beare this,
That neuer knew but better, is some burthen:
Thy Nature, did commence in sufferrance, Time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldest thou hate Men?
They neuer flatter'd thee. What haft thou gien?
Hence, mend thou I wert

Thou hadst bene a Knave and Flatterer.

Are. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. 1, that I am not thee.

Are. 1, that I was no Prodigall.

Tim. 1, that I am one now.

Were all the wealth I have flipp'd in thee,
I'll give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone:
That the whole life of Athens were in this,
Thus would I use it.

Are. Here, I will medly Feast.

Tim. First mend thy company, take away thy felie.

Are. So I shall mend me own, by the lacke of thee
Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but bottch;
If not, I would it were.

Are. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee other end of a whistles wind: if thou wilt,
Tell them there! have Gold Jocke, so I hate.

Are. Here is no vife for Gold,

Tim. The bell, and trust:
For here it beeps, and do's no hiry harme.

Are. Where lies a nights Timon?

Tim. Vnder that's about me.
Where feed'st thou 3 days Agamemnon?

Are. Where my flomacke finds meate, or railer where I eat it.

Tim. Would payson were obedient, & knew my mind
Are. Where wouldst thou tend it?

Tim. To worse thy diuers.

Are. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wait in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mocke thee for too much Curiositie in thy Ragges thou know'st none, but are de-spis'd for the contrary. There's a medles for these eat it.

Are. Do'st hate a Medlers?

Tim. I, though it looks like thee.
Are. And I hadst hated Medlers sooner, you'd not have loved thy felie better now. What man didn't thou eater know vaniths, that was beloued after his meanes?

Tim. Who thought you were you talk'd of, didst thou eat now belou'd?

Are. My felle.

Tim. I understand thee: thou hadst some meates to keep a Dogge.

Are. What things in the world canst thou neereest compar to thee Flatterers?

Tim. Women neereft, but men: men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world Acrement, if it lay in thy power?

Are. Give it the Brits, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thy felie fall in the confu-
ッション of men, and remain a Brit with the Brits.

Are. I Timon.

Tim. A bittly Ambition, which the Goddes graunt thee toaine to. If thou wert the Lyon, the Fox would beguile thee; if thou wert the Lambe, the Fox would eat thee: if thou wert the Fox, the Lion would fuppre
st thee; when precedent thou wert accus'd by the Affe:
If thou wert the Affe, thy dulnesse would torment thee;
and still thou li'dst but as a Breakefast to the Wolfe. If thou wert the Wolfe, thy greedinesse would affliel thee,
Timon of Athens.

To every purpose: O thou touch of hearts.
Thank thee thou bluest-man rebel, and by thy verse
Set them into confounding odders, that Beasts
May have the world in Empire.

Tim. Thou was't too true.

Thou pittic'st so much.

Surely, where 'tis fit, we'll have our gold:

Let each man have his share; and let us take
Theeues: For, in short, we have been so long
Within a slave; and sure, we'll have our gold.
Tim. Thou wilt be strong'd too shortly.

Thou wert too strong to fight me.

Tim. Thy backe I prittyke.

Thou hast made a prize of the world.

Tim. Long live thee, and do thee quit.

Thou hast made a prize of the world.

Enter Apemantus.

Enter the Banditti.

1 Where should he have this Gold? It is some poore

Fragments, some slender Ofs of his remaining: the more
Want of Gold, and the falling from of his Friends, drive him into this Mania.

2 It is my Gold.

Thou hast given me this Gold.

3 Let vs make the assay upon him, if he care not for's,

he will supply us easily: for he courteously relieue us, now that he is ill.

2 True: for he bears it not about him:

'Tis hid.

1 Is not this he?

All. Where?

3 This his description.

He圆to know me.

All. See thee, Timon.

And now Theeues.

All. Soldiers, not Theeues.

Tim. Both too, and women Sonner.

All. We are not Theeues, but men

That much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat:

Why should you want? Behold, the Earth hath roots:
Within this mile breaketh a hundred springs;
The Oakes bare Maf, the Briss, Scarter Hep,
The bounteous Hawse Nature, on each bush,
Layes her full Messe before you. Want? why want?

1 We cannot live on Graffe, on Berries, Water,

As Beasts, and Birds, and Fishes.

Tr. Nor on the Beasts themselves, the Birds & Fishes,

You must eat men. Yet thankes I must you con;
That you are Theeues profitt: that you work not
In hollow shapes: For there is boundlesse Theft
In limited Professions. Rafcall Theeues
Here's Gold. Go, fack the fable blood in the Grape,
Till the high feastor feeth your blood to froth,
And to feape hanging. Trueit not the Physitian,
His Ant dates are position, and he slays:

More than you Rob: Take wealth, and live together,
Do Villainie do, force you prottect to dont.

Like Workemen, He example you with heucery:
The Sunnes a Theeue, and with his great attraction
Robbes the vaffe Sea, The Moones an arrant Theeue,
And her pale fire, the snatches from the Sunne.
The Sea a Theeue, whole liquid Surge, refolves
The Moone into Salt waters. The Earth a Theeue,
The Seals and oerolds by a comparitue bone
From gen'ral excrement: each thing's a Theeue.
The Lieves, you curbe and whip, in their tough power

Thou

He's venched Theft. Lose not your felues, away,
Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut throates,
All that you recea are Theeues: to Athens go,
Breake open shoppes, nothing can you steal.
But Theeues do love it: it satele left for this I give you,
And Gold confound you howfoe: Aman.

3 Has almoft charm'd me from my Profession, by perswading me to it.

1 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus aduises
You not to have vs thourse in our mystery.

All. He beleue him as an Enemy,

And give over thy Trade.

1 Let vs first see peace in Athens, there is no time so miserable, but a man may be true.

Exit Theeues.

Enter the Steward to Timon.

Stew. Oh you Gods!

Is you'd despis'd and ruinous man my Lord,

Full of decay and faying? Oh Monument.

And wonder of good deeds, eulyly befow'd!

What an alteration of Honor has desriptae want made?

What vilder thing upon the earth, then Friends,

Who can bring Noblest minudes, to befall end.

How rarely does meete with this times guile,

What man was within to lose his Enemies:

Grant I may euer foie, and rather wou.

That would mifcheefe me, then tho'e that doo,

Has taught me in his eye, I will present my honest griefe unto him: and as my Lord, will ferue him with my life.

My deereft Master.

Tim. Away: what art thou?

Stew. Have you forgot me, Sir?

Tim. Why doft aske that? I have forgot all men.

Then, if thou gruit't, 'tis a man.

I hate forsoke thee.

Stew. An honest poore servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:

I never had honest man about me, I all,

I kept were Knackes, to ferue in meate to Villaines.

Stew. The Gods are wone.

Next did poore Steward weare a teare greefee

For his ynde, Lord, then mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, das thou weep?

Come nearer, then I loose thee

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim't

Filmy mankinde: whose eyes do never glee,

But throw a light and Laughter, pitty's sleeping:

Strange times? weep with laughing, nor with weeping.

Stew. I begge of you to know me, good my Lord,

'T accept my greefe, and whilft this poore wealth jaffs,

To entertaine me as your steward full.

Tim. Had a Steward

So true, so iuit, and now so comfortable?

It almoft runnes my dangerous Nature wide.

Let me behould thy face: Surely, this man

Was borne of woman.

Forgive my general, and eceplifel philifite.

You perpetuall aboer Gods. I do proclai'me

One honest man: Mi'sake me not, but one:

No more I pray, and hee's a Steward.

How faine would I have hated all mankinde,

And readeeme'th thy felle. But all faue thee,

I fell with Curtsies.

Me thinkes thou art more honest now, then wife:

For, by oppressing and betraying mee,

Thou

Thou mightst have sooner got another service:
For many so arriue as second Masters:
Upon their first Lords necke. But tell me true,
(For I must euer doubts, though he's for sure.)
Is not thy kindnesse subtile, courtous,
If not a kindnesse, and as rich men deale Guiffs,
Expecting in returne twenty for one?
Swer. No, my most worthy Master, in whose beest
 Doubt, and suspect (as) are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times, when you did Feast.
Suspect still comes, where an elate is left.
That which I flew, Heaven knows, is mercely Loue,
Yet, for the Gods out of my miserie
Has sent thee Treasure. Go, live rich and happy,
But thus condition'd: Thou shalt build from men:
Hast all, curse all, shew Charity to none,
But let the faithful fleth flye from the Bone,
Be thou relieue the Begger. Give to dogges
What thou denyest to men. Let Prifons swallow em,
Debts wither 'em to nothing, be men like blisf'd woods
And may Diseases like vp their false bloods,
And so farewell, and thrive.
Swer. O let me stay, and comfort you, my Master.
Tim. If thou hast Curles
Stay nay stay, wilt thou art blest and free:
Yet see thou man, and let me see thee free.
Exit
Enter Poet, and Painter.

Poet. As I took note of the place, it cannot be forre where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him?

Poet. Does the Rumor hold for true,
That he's to full of Gold?

Painter. Certainly.

Alcibades reports it: Pericles and Timandyo
Had Gold of him. He likewise enrich'd
Poor fragling Souldiers, with great quantity.
'Tis said, he gave vnto his Steward
A mighty fumme.

Poet. Then this breaking of his,
Has he bene or but a Try for his Friends?

Painter. Nothing else:
You shall see him at Palme in Athens againe,
And flourish with the highest:
Therefore, it's not amisse, we render our love:
To him, in this suppos'd diffirece of his:
It will shew honestly in vs,
And is very likely, to load our purpose
With what they trauail for,
If it be a just and true report, that goes
Of his hauing.

Poet. What have you now
To premit vnto him?

Painter. Nothing at this time
But my Vification: only I will promise him
An excellent Pecece.

Poet. I must suffer him to go too;
Tell him of an intent that's comming toward him.

Why

Timon of Athens. 95

Painter. Good as the best.
Promising, is the verie Ayre of the Time;
It opens the eyes of Expectation.
Performance, is ever the duller for his sake,
And but in the plainer and simpler kind of people,
The deed of Saying is quite out of vfe.
To Promile, is most Courteous and fashionable
Performance, is a kinde of Will or Testament
Which argues a great fickneffe in his judgement
That makes it.

Enter Timon from his Case.

Timon. Excellent Workeman,
Thou canst not paint a man to badde
As is thy selfe.

Poet. I am thinking
What I shall say I have prouided for him:
It must be a perforating of himselfe
A Sayre against the follynesse of Prosperity,
With a Discouerie of the infinite Flatteries
That follow youth and opulence.

Timon. Much thou needes
Stand for a Villaine in thine owne Worke?
Wilt thou whipt thine owne faults in other men?
Do so, I have Gold for thee.

Poet. Nay let's seeke him,
Then do we finde against our owne efte,
When we may profit more, and come too late.

Painter. True:
When the day serues before blacke-corner'd night;
Finde what thou want'st, by free and ofter'd light.

Come.

Tim. He meeke you at the tyme;
What a Gods Gold, that he is worshipful
In a sister Temple, then where Swine feede?
'Tis thou thatigg't the Barke, and plow'd the Feme,
Setleft admired reverence in a Slaue,
To thee be worships, and thy Saints for aye:
Be crown'd with Faggues, that thee alone obay.
Fit I meet them.

Poet. Haile worthy Timon,

Paint. Our late Noble Master.

Timon. Have I once li'd
To see two honde men?

Poet. Sir,
Hauling ofte my open Bountie tafted,
Hearing you were terry'd, your Friends false off,
Whole thanklesse Natures (O abhorred Spirits)
Not all the Whippers of Heauen, are large enough.
What, to you,
Whole Starre-like Noblenesse gaine life and influence
To their whole being? I am rapt, and cannot couct
The monstrous bulke of this ingratitude
With any fixe of words.

Timon. Let it go,
Naked men may see's the better:
You that are honeste, by being what you are,
Make them beft seen; and knowne.

Paint. He, and my selfe
Have trauaile'd in the great thowre of your guiffes;
And fweetsy felt it.

Timon. If you are honeste men.
We are hither come
To offer you our service.

Timon. Most honeste men:

IV. iii. 513—V. i. 78
711
Why how shal I requite you? Can you este Roots, and drink cold water, not? Emb. What we can do, We I do to you servise. Tim. Yare honest men, Y have heard that, I have Gold, I am true you haue, speake truth, y'are honest men, Pain. So it is said my Noble Lord, but therefore Came not my Friend, nor f. Timon. Good honest men: Thou draw'st a counterfeft Belt in all Athen, that's indeed the belt, Thou counterfeft't most lucily. Pain. So, fo, my Lord. Tim. One fo for as I say. And for thy fiction, Why thy Verse softens withuffe as fine and smooth, That thou'rest even Naturall in thine Art. And for all this (my honest Natur'd friends) I must needs say you have a little fault, Marry 'tis not monstrous in you, neither with I You take much pains to mend. Bath. Befeech your Honour To make it knowse to vs. Tim. You take it ill. Bath. Mof't thankfully, my Lord. Timon. Will you indeed? Bath. Doubt it not worthy Lord. Tim. There's never: a one of you but trusts a Knave, That mightily deceives you. Bath. Do we, my Lord? Tim. I, and you hear me cogge, See him dillemble, Know his grossse patchery, lour him, feede him, Keppe in your bofome, yet remaine affur'd That he's a made-vp Villaine. Pain. I know none such, my Lord. \[Footnote: Not 1.\] Timon. Look, name you, I love you well, l'll give you Gold Rid me these Villaines from your companies; Hang them, or flab them, drowne them in a draught, Confound them by some course, and come to me, l'll give you Gold enough. a. Bath. Name them, my Lord, let's know them. Timon. You that way, and you this: But two in Company: Each man a part, all finge, and alone, Yet an arch Villaine keeps him company: If where thou art, two Villaines shall not be, Corne not necese him. If thou would'lt not recide but where one Villaine is, then him abandon. Hence, packe, there's Gold, you come for Gold ye flauces: You have woks for me: there's payment, hence, You are an Alcimist, make Gold of that: Out Rascal dogges. Exeunt

Enter Steward, and two Senators. Sirw. It is vaine that you would speake with Timon: For he is set to oncely to hunscife, That nothing but himselfe, which looks like man, Is friendly with him. 1. Sen. Bring vs to his Case. It is our part and promise to th'Athenians To speake with Timon. 2. Sen. At all times alike Men are not fill the fame: 'twas Time and Greeues That fram'd him thus. Time with his fairer hand, Offering the Fortunes of his former dayes, The former man may make him: bring vs to him And chanc'd it is at my. Sirw. Here is his Case: Part and content be heere. Lord Timon, Timon, Look out, and speake to Friends: Th'Athenians By two of their most reverend Senate greeve thee: Speake to them Noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his Case.

Tim. Thou Sunne that comforts burnes, Speake and be hang'd; For each true word, a blifter, and each false Be as a Cantherizing to the root o'th Tongue, Consuming it with speaking.

1 Worthy Timon.
2 Timon. Of none but such as you, And you of Timon.

1 The Senators of Athens, greeve thee Timon, Timon. I thank thee, And would fende them backe the plague, Could I but catch it for them. 1 Offorget What we are sorry for our felues in thee: The Senators, with none content of loue, Increasse thee backe to Athens, who have thought On Speciall Dignities, which vacant lie For thy right vale and wearings. 2 They confesse Toward thee, forgetfullneffe too generall groffe Which now the publicke Body, which doth fullsome Play the re-caster, feeling in it selfe A lacke of Timon's syde, both fince withall Or it owne fall, restraining syde to Timon, And fende forth vs, to make them forward reader, Together, with a recompense more fruifull Then their offence can weighe downe by the Dramme, I even such heapes and furnmes of Loue and Wealth, As flall to thee bift out, what wrongs were theiris, And write in thee the figures of their loue, Ever to rend them thinke, Timon. You witch them in it: Surprize me to the very brinke of tears; Lend me a Fools heart, and a women eyes, And Ile bewepe these comforts, worthy Senators: 1 Therefore fo please thee to returne with vs, And of our Athens, thine and ours to take The Captainship, thou shalt be met with thankes, Allowed with absolute power, and thy good name Line with Authoritie: To fone we fhall drive backe Of Alcibades th'approches wild, Who like a Bore too fauge, doth root vp His Countries peace. 2 And makes his threatening Sword Against the walle of Athens. 1 Therefore Timon. Timon. Well fit, I will: therefore I will fit thus: If Alcibades kill my Countrymen, Let Alcibades know this of Timon, That Timon cares not. But if he fake faire Athens, And take our goodly aged men by th'beards, Guing our holy Virgins to the firene, Of consumellous, beftly, mad-brain'd warres; Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it, 1
Tim of Athens.

In pitty of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him take his worth; For their Knives care not,
While you have throats to answer. For my selfe,
There's not a whistile, in the whole Campe,
And do I prize it at my love, be ore
The reuerenda Throat in Athens. So I leav you
To the protection of the prosperous Gods,
As Theocles to Keepers.

Enter. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why I was writing of my Episth,
It will be seen to morrow. My long sickniffe
Of Health, and Luing, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, Ixst full,
Be Achebades your plague; you his,
And lead for long so.

1. We speake in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my Country, and am not
One that cloyes in the common wracke,
As commone brute doth put it.

1. That's well spoke.

Tim. Command me to my loving Countreymen.

1. These words become your hoppes as they pathio throw them.

2. A better in our eares, like great Triumpheurs
In their applausing gates.

Tim. Command me to them,
And tell them, that to eate them of their greeces,
Their feares of Haffile strokes, their Aches loffes,
Their pangs of Love, with other incident throwes
That Nature's fragile Veaffeli doth sublaine
In lifes uncertaine voyage, I will some kindes do them,
In which to prevent worse Achebades wrath.

1. I like this well, he will returne againe.

Tim. I have a Tree which grows here in my Clofe,
That mine owne we inuites me to cut downe,
And shortly must I fell it. Tell my Friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that who so pleafe
To flay Affidion, let him take his bafe.
Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe,
And hang himselfe. I pray you do my greetings.

Slew. Trouble him no further, thus you will fball
Find him.

Tim. Come not to me a gaine, but fay to Athens,
Achebades hath made his everallting Manion
With the Beached Xone, and
When once a day with his embossed Froth
The turbulent Surge shall cover, thither come,
And let my grace-borne be your O Male;
Graces onely be mens workes, and Deaths their gaine;
Sume, shed thy Beames, Achebades hath done his Raigone.

Exit Timon.

2. His discontentes are unremoelyly coupled to Na ture.

2. Our hope in him is dead: let vs returne,
And straine what other meanes is left unto vs
In our dearer pere.

1. It requires foult foot.

Enter two other Senators, with a Mesfenger.

1. Thou haft painfully discouer'd: are his Files
As full as thy report?

Mef. I haft spoke the least.

Besides his expedition promisses preuent approach.

2. We fland much hazarded they bring not Timon.

Mef. I mete a Currier, one mine ancient Friend,
Whom though in generall part we were oppos'd
Yet our old loute made a particular force,
And made vs speak like Friends. This man was riding
From Achebades to Timons Cane,
With Letters of Intreacy, which imported
His Fellowship till thecafe against your City,
In part for his take mould.

Enter the other Senators.

1. Here come our Brothers.

5. Notalke of Timon, nothing of him expcct,
The Enemies Dreame is heard, and fearefull fcowning
Doth choke the ayre with dust: in, and prepare,
Our is the fall I feare, our Foes the Snare.

Extenus.

Enter a Soldier in the Words, seeking Timon.

Sol. By all defcription this should be the place.

Whofe here? Speak ho. No answer? What is this? Timon is dead, who hath out-flrrechet his fpur,
Some Bealt reade this; There do's not like a Man,
Dead fure, and this his Graue, what's on this Tomb,
I cannot read: the Character ile rafe with wax,
Our Captain hath in euerie figure skill;
An'gd Interpretor, though yong in dayes:
Before proud Athens hee's feen done by this,
Whofe fall the markie of his Ambition is.

Exip.

Trumpets fount. Enter Achebades with his Powers before Athens.

Aie. Sound to this Coward, and licentious Towne,
Curterrible approach.

Sounds a Partly.

The Senators appear upon the wall.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the tune
With all Licentious meafure, making your willes
The scope of laughce. Till now, my felle and fuch
Afept within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our trauersi Armes, and breath'd,
Our Saffurance vainly: Now the time is fliuff,
When crouching Marrow in the beater strong
Cries (of it felfe) no more: Now breathie wrong,
Shall fit and pant in your great Chaeres of cafe,
And pursue Infolence shall break his winde
With fear and horrid flight.

1. Sen. Noble, and young;

When thy fift greeces were but a meere conceit,
Ere thou hadft power, or we had coufe of fearce,
We fente to thee, to glue thy rages Balme,
To wipe out our Ingratitude, with Loues
About their quainme.

3. So did we woe
Transformed Timon, to our Cities loue
By humble Meflage, and by promifh meane:
We were not all vnkind, nor all defere
The common stroke of warre.

4. These wallcs of ours,
Were not extrefted by their hands, from whom
You have receaved your greeces: Nor are they fuch,
That these great Towres, Trophies, & Schools should fall
For private faultes in them.

5. Nor are they living

Who

V. i. 181—V. iv. 26

718
Who were the motives that you first went out,
(Shame that they wanted, cunning in excess)
Hath broke their hearts. March, Noble Lord,
Into our City with thy Banners spread,
By decimation and a tyred death;
If thy Revenge was hunger for that Food
Which Nature doth, take thou the defl'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spott'd dye,
Let dye the spott'd.
1 All have not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take
On those that are, Revenge: Crimes, like Laws,
Are not inherited, then deere Countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage;
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and thike Kin
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended, like a Shepherd,
Approach the Fold, and call th'infect'd forth,
But kill not altogether,
2 What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Then hew too't, with thy Sword.
1 Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and thy shall ope:
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou enter Friendly,
2 Throw thy Glove,
Or any Token of thine Honour elie,
That thou wilt vfe the warres as thy redresse,
And not as our Confusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Towne, till wee
Have seal'd thy full desire.
Alc: Then there's my Glove,
Defend and open your uncharged Ports,

Th'of Enemies of Timon, and mine owne
Whom you your faultes small set out for reproofs,
Fall and no more; and to assone your fcares
With my more Noble meaning, not a man
Shall paffe his quarter, or offend the flame
Of Regular Justice in your Cities bounds,
But shall be remitted to your publicke Laws
At hearing answered.
1 Bath, 'Tis most Nobly spoken.
Alc: Defend, and keep your words.

Men: My Noble General, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd upon the very hemme o' th' Sea,
And on his Grave stone, this Inculpture which
With war I brought away: whose soft Impression
Indespis'd to my poor ignorance.

Alebades reaches the Epistle.
Here lies a wretched Corpse, of wretched Souls bereft,
Seek not my name: A Plague confume you, wicked Caitiffs left.
Here lies Timon, who alone, all living men did hate.
Paffe by, and curse thy fall, but paffe and say not here thy gate.
These well expreft in these th' latter spirits:
Though thou abhorred'st in vs our humane griefes,
Scorn'dst our Braines flow, and chose the dropless, which
From niggard Nature fall; yet Rich Conceit
Taught thee to make saft Neptune weeps for ay
On thy low Graue, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is Noble Timon, of whose Memorie
Heathens more: Bring me into your Citie,
And I will vfe the Olives, with my Sword:
Make war brede peace; make peace from war, make each
Preference to other, as each others Leach.
Let our Drummes strike.

over the Stage.

Flavius.

Hence: home you side Creatures, get you home:
Is this a Holiday? What, know you not (Being Mechanically) you ought not walke
Upon a laboured day, without theigne
Of your Profession? Speak, what Trade art thou?

Fla. What is thy Lather, Apron, and thy Rule?
What dost thou with thy bell Appurtech on?
You sir, what Trade are you?

Col. Truly Sir, in respect of a fine Workman, I am but as you would say, a Cobbler.

Col. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may vie, with a safe
Confidence, which is indeed Sir, a Mender of bad foules.

Fla. What Trade thou knowe? Thou naughty knave, what Trade?

Col. Nay I befeech you Sir, be not out with me; yet
if you be but Sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean it thou by that? Mend mee, thou Fancy Fellow?

Col. Why sir, Cobbler you.

Fla. Thou art a Cobbler, art thou?

Col. Truly sir, all that I live by, is with the Aule: I muddle with no Trademans matters, nor womens matters; but wishal I am indeed Sir, a Surgeon to old foues:
when they are in great danger, I recover them. As preper men in ever trod upon Neas Leather, have gone vp-ward bound In the shop.

Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day?
Why don't you leave these men about the streets?

Col. Truly sir, to worse out their foues, to get my felle into more worke. But indeed sir, we make Holy-day to see Caesar, and to rejoyce in his Triumph.

Fla. Why, wherefore rejoyce?

Col. What Conquest brings he home?

Fla. What Tribunaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in Captive bonds his Christer Wheelers?
You blacks, you tones, you very then, senseless things:
O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft?
Have you not chimbled up to Wawels and Battlements,
To Towers and Windowes? Yeas, to Chummery tops,
Your Infants in your Armes, and there hauie take
The long long day, with patient expectation,
The Tragedy of Julius Cæsar.

And since you know, you cannot see your selle
So well as by Reflection; I your Gái,
Will modestly discours to your selle.
That of your selle, which you yet know not of.
For if I was not in it, as gentle Bruttus:
Were I a common Laughter, or did wie
To stale with ordinary Oathes my love
To every new Preceptor: if you know,
That I do favne on men, and huggle them had,
And after scallall them: Or if you know,
That I professle my selle in Banquetting.
To all the Rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish, and Shrou,.

Brut. What means this Showwing?
I do feare, the People choole Cæsar
For their King.
Caff. I, do you care it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.
Brut. I would not Cæsar, yet I love him well:
But wherefore do you hold me heare so long?
What is it, that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the general good,
Set Honor in one eye, and Death in other,
And I will nought in both indifferent:
For let the Gods to freede me, as I loue
The name of Honor, more then I feare death.
Caff. I know that verite to be in you Bruttus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, Honor is the substec of my Story:
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life: But for my single selle,
I had as late not be, as late be;
In awe of such a Thing, as I my selle,
I was borne free as Cæsar, so were you,
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the Winters cold, as well as hee.
For once, upon a Rawe and Guffie day,
The troubled Tyger, charging with her Shores,
Cæsars harte to me, Du'll thou Cæsus now
Lipse in with me into this angry Flood,
And swim to yonder Point? Upon the word,
Accorded as I was, I plunged in,
And bad him follow: so indeed he did.
The Torment wasr, and we did buffet it
With ludy Sinewes, throwing it aside,
And stemming it with hearts of Controvercie.
But ere we could arriue the Point propos'd,
Cæusr elude, Helpe me Cæsar, or I srike.
I as Aureus, our great Ancestor,
Did descend the Flumes of Troy, upon his shoulder
The old Aureus (as reare) from the waues of Tyber
Did I the tyred Cæsar: And this Man,
Is now become a God, and Cæsus is
A wretched Creature, and must bend his body,
It Cæsar caretely but nod on him.
He had a Feauer when he was in Spaine,
And when the Fire was on him, I did marke
How he did shake: This true, this God did shake,
His Coward lippes did from their colour flye,
And that same Eye, whose bande doth swre the World,
Did lose his Luffte: I did heare him groane:
I, and that Tongue of his, that bad the Romans
Marke him, and write his Speeches in their Booke,
Also, it cried, Give me some dranke Ttiusus.)
To finde our foules differable Graues.

Some,

"What should he in that Cæsar?
Why should that name be founded more then yours?
When could they say (till now) that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide Walkes incapsomt but one man?
Now is Rome indeed, and Rome enough
When there is but one man.
Olyou and I, have heard our Fathers say,
There was a Truce once, that would haue brooke'd
The eternal Duell to keepe his State in Rome,
As easily as a King.

"That you do loute me, I am nothing jealous:
What you would worke me too, I haue some syme:
How I haue thought of this, and of these times
I shall recount hereafter.
For this present,
I would not so (withe love I might intreat you)
Be any further mou'd:
What you haue said,
I will consider what you have to say
I will with patience heare, and finde a time
Both meete to heare, and answere such high things.
Till then, my Noble Friend, chew upon this:
Brutus had rather be a Villager,
Then to repute himselfe a Sonne of Rome
Vnder those hard Conditions, as this time
Is like to lay upon vs.

Cæs. I am glad that my weak words
Huue strucke but this much shew of fire from Brutus,

End Cæsar and his Traine.

But Cæsar is returning.

Cæs. As they pause by,
Plucke Cæs. by the Sleeue,
And he will (after his fowre faction) tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to day.

Brut. I will do so: but looke you Cæs.
The angry spott doth glow on Cæs. brow,
And all the reft, like a childish waine
Cæs.henous's Cheeks are pale, and Cicer
Lookes with such Ferret, and such ficy eyes;
As we haue seene him in the Capitol

The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

If I were Brama now, and he were Caius, He should not humor me. I will this Night, In several Hands, in at his Windows throw, As if they came from several Citizens, Writings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely Caesar Ambition shall be glanced at. And after this let Caesar feast him sure, For we shall make him, or worse days endure.

Exit.

Thunder, and Lightning. Enter Caius, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Caius: brought you Caesar home? Why are you so melancholy, and why stare you so?

Caius. A common flame, you know him well by sight, Heid vp his left Hand, which did first and burne like a sun with his right hand: and yet his Hand, Not being of fire, resoind'd uncoold. Besides, he's not once put vp my Sword, Against the Capitol I met a Lyon, Who gaz'd upon me, and was surly by, Without annoyng me. And there were drawne Upon a heap, a hundred gallant Women, Transformed with their tears, who wore, they say, Men, all in fire, walk'd vp and downe the street. And yesternight the Bird of Night did sit, Even at Noon, ey is, on the Market place, Howving, and fluttering. When those Prodigies Doe so commonly meet, let men not say, These are their Reasons, they are Natural: For if these be, they are monstrous things. Yet the Cicero, that in those lines, They point vp.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange dispursed time: But men may continue things after their fashion, Cleanse from the purpose of the things themselves. Comes Caesar to the Capitol to morrow? Caius. He doth: for he did bid安东尼 Send word to you, he would be there to morrow. Caius. Good-night then, Caius: This disturbed Skie is not to walke in.

Caius. Farewell Cicero.

Enter Caius.

Caius. Who's there?

Caius. A Roman.

Caius. Caius, by your Voyce.

Caius. Your Face is good.

Caius. What Night is this?

Caius. A very pleasing Night to honest men.

Caius. Who ever knew the Heavens reconcile so?

Caius. Thofe that have knowne the Earth so full of faults.
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

What Rubbish, and what Offish? when it seizes
i or the base matter, to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar. But oh Griefe,
Where haft thou led me? I (perhaps) speake this Before a willing Bond-man: then I know
My anfwer must be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Caft. You speake to Caft, and to such a man,
That is no hearing Tell-tale. Hold, my Hand;
Be fafetious for redtelle of all thefes Griefes,
And I will fet this foot of mine as faire,
As who goes farthefh.

Caft. There's a Bargaine made.
Now know you, Caft, I have mould already
Some certaine of the Nobleft minded Romans
To vnder-goe, with me, an Enterprize,
Of Honorable dangerous confefion;
And I do know by this, they flaye for me
In Pompey's Porch: for now this fearefull Night,
There is no flire, or walking in the streets;
And the Complexion of the Element
Is Favour, like the Worke we have in hand,
Molt bloodie, ferie, and moft terrible.

Enter Cinna,

Caft. Stand close a while, for heroic comes one in haste.

Caft. 'Tis Cinna, I doe know him by his Gate,
He is a friend. Cinna, where haft thou to?

Cinna. To finde out you: Who's that, Metellus Cymbcr?

Caft. No, it is Caft, one incorpore
To our Attempts. Am I not fay'd for, Cinna?

Cinna. I am glad on't.

What a fearefull Night is this?
There's two or three of vs have flowne strange fights.

Caft. Am I not fay'd for? tell me.

Cinna. Yes, you are. O Caft,
If you could but winne the Noble Brutus
To our party—

Caft. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this Paper,
And looke you lay it in the Pretors Chyare,
Where Brutus may but finde it; and throw this
In at his Window; fet this vp with Waxe
Vpon old Brutus Statue: all this done,
Repaine to Pompey Dorch, where you fhall finde vs,
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cinna. All, but Metellus Cymbcr, and hee's gone
To fecke you at your house. Well, I will his,
And fo biffere these Paper as you laide me.

Caft. That done, prepare to Pompey Theafer.

Exit Cinna,

Come Caft, you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Vpon the next encounter, yelds him ours.

Caft. O, the first high in all the Popes beares
And that which would appeare Ocefus vpon vs,
His Countenance, like richcft Alcbyne,
Will change to Verrne, and to Worthneffe.

Caft. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,
You haue right well conceited: let vs goe,
For it is aftr Midnight, and ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him.

Exit.
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Brutus in his Orchard.

Brut. What Lucius, ho?

I cannot, by the progresse of the Starres,
Give guesse how nere to day.-Lucius, I say?
I would it were my fault to sleepe so soundly.
When Lucius, when? awake, I say: what Lucius?

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Calld you, my Lord?

Brut. Get me a Taper in my Study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my Lord.

Brut. It must be by his death: and form my part,
I know no perfon all caufe, to prunse at him;
But for the general, He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question?
It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder,
And that cruases warie walking: Crownne him that,
And then I grante we put a Sting in him,
That at his will he may doe danger with.

Th'abufe of Greatnesse, is, when it dis-joynes
Remorse from Power: And to speake truth of Caesar,
I have not knowne, when his Affaytions sway'd
More then his Reason. But th's a common proofe,
That Lowlyneffe is young Ambitions Ladder,
Whereeto the Climber vpward turns his Face:
But when he once attaines the vpmost Round,
He then into the Ladder turns his Backe,
Looks in the Clouds, forming the base degrees
By which he did ascended: so Caesar may;
Then leaft he may prevent. And since the Quarrell
Will breake no colour, for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is augmented,
Would runne to threate, and these extremeties:
And therefore thinkes him as a Serpents egg,
Which hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous;
And kill him in the shell.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. The Taper burneth in your Closter, Sir;
Searching the Window fort, a Flint, I found
This Paper, thus feed vp, and I am sure
It did not lye there when I went to Bed:
Gives him the Letter.

Brut. Get you to Bed againe, it is not day:
Is not to morrow (Boy) the first of March?
Luc. I know not, Sir.

Brut. Looke in the Calender, and bring me word.
Luc. I will, Sir.

Brut. The exhalations, whizzing in the ayre,
Give so much light, that I may read by them.

Open the Letter, and read it.

Brutus thou sleepe'st; awake, and fee thy selfe:
Shall Remorse, speaks, stricks, redresse:
Brutus, thou sleepe'st; awake:
Such inflations have beene often drops,
Where I haue tooke them vp:
Shall Remorse, This must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one mans armes? What Rome?
My Ancestors did from the fireettes of Rome
The Tarques drive, when he was cal'd a King,
Speakes, stricks, redresse. Am I entreated
To speake, and strike? O Rome, I make thee promife,
If the redresse will follow, thou receiuen
Thy full Petition at the hand of Brutus.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wafht fifteene dayes.

Brut. Tis good. Go to the Gate, somebody knocks:
Since Caesar first did whet me against Caesar,
I have not leapt.
Betweene the acting of a dreadfull thing,
And the first motion, all the tumult is:
Like a Phantome, or a hideous Dreame:
The Genius, and the mortar Instrumets
Are then in counsell; and the state of a man,
Like to a little Kingdom, sufferers then
The nature of an Inurrection.

Enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, tis your Brother Caius at the Door,
Who dath define to fee you.

Brut. Is he alone?

Luc. No, Sir, there are mee with him;

Brut. Doe you know them?

Luc. No, Sir, these Hats are plackt about their Eares,
And halfe their Faces buried in their Cloakes,
That by no means I may discouer them,
By any marke of fauour.

Brut. Let 'em enter:
They are the Fashion. O Conspiracie,
Shall not thou to these thy dangrous Browes by Night,
When eues are most free? O then by day
Where wilt thou finde a Cature darke enough,
To make thy monstrovs Village? Seek none Conspiracie,
Hide it in Smiles, and Affaullion:
For if thou path thy natvie semblance on.
Not Erebis it selfe were durne enough,
To hide thee from preuention.

Enter the Conspirators, Caius, Cale, Petry:
Cassius, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Caius. I think we are too bold upon your Rest:
Good morrow Brutus, doe we trouble you?

Brut. I haue bene vp this howre, awake all Night.
Know I these men, that come along with you?
Caius. Yes, every man of them; and no man here
But honores you: and every one doth with,
You had but that opinion of your selfe,
Which every Noble Roman beares of you.
This is Trebonius.

Brut. He is welcome hither.

Caius. This, Decius Brutus.

Brut. He is welcome too.

Caius. This, Cale; this, Cassius; and this, Metellus Cymbel.

Brut. They are all welcome.

What watch'ill Carez doe interpose themselves
Betwixt your Eyes, and Night?

Caius. Shall I entreat a word? They whisper.

Decius. Here lyes the East: doth not the Day break here?

Caius. No.

Cin. O pardon, Sir, it doth: and there grey Lines;
That fret the Clouds, are Meffengers of Day.
Caius. You shall confesse, that you are both decei'd:
Here, as I point my Sword, the Sunne arifes,
Which is a great way growing on the South,

Weigh-
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar. 115

Weighing the youthful Session of the year,
Some two months hence, up higher toward the North
He first presents his fire, and the high East
Stands as the Capitoll, directly here.

Brut. Give me your hands all over, one by one. Caes.
And let us swear our Resolution.

Brut. No, not an Oath: if not the Face of men,
The sufferance of our Soules, the times Abuse;
If these be Motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence, to his idle bed:
So let high-flighted Tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by Lottery. But if these
(As I am faith they do) beare hire enough
To kindle Cowards, and to wheel with valour
The melting Spirits of women. Then Countrymen,
What need we any spurre, but our owne cause.
To pricke vs to redresse? What other Bond,
Then secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? And what other Oath,
Then Honesty to Honesty ingrafted,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it,
Sweare Preists and Cowards, and men Caustulous
Old feeble Carrions, and such suffering Soules
That welcome wrongs: Vnto bad causés, sweare
Such Creatures as men doubt; but do not blame
The even vertue of our Enterprise,
Nor the infuppressible Meare of our Spirits.
To thine, to that, or our, our present Perforance
Did need an Orth. When every drop of blood
That every Roman bears, and Nobly bears
Is guilty of a firstrate Bastarde:
If he do break the smallest Particle
Of any promis that hath passed from him.
Caes. But what of Caesar? Shall we found him?
I think he will stand very strong with vs.
Caes. Let vs not leave him out.

Brut. No, by no means.

Metel. O let us have him, for his Siluer hairs
Will purchase vs a good opinion:
And buy mens voyages, to commend our deeds:
It shall be syl'd, his judgement rul'd our hands,
Our yarths, and wildenesse whatsoever appears;
But all be buried in his excellence.

Brut. O nome him nor; let us not break with him,
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.
Caes. Then leave him out.

Caes. Indeed, he is not fit.

Brut. Shall no man else be toucht, but onely Caesar?
Caes. Caes. dearst well enough: I thinke it is not meet,
Metel. Antony, to well beheard of Caesar;
Should out-line Caesar, we shall finde of him
A thunder'd Containter. And you know, his means
If he imprize them, may well stretch to fare
As to annoy vs all which to prevent,
Let Antony and Caesar fall together.

Brut. Our course will seeme too bloody, Cacus Caesini,
To make a high God, our enemies the Lumbes:
Like Wrauth in death, and Wamy afterwards:
For Antony, is but a Lumb of Caesar.

Let the Seraphins, but not Butchers Cais:
We will hand vp against the spirit of Caesar,
And the spirit of men, there is no blood:
O that we then could come by Caesar Spirit,
And not destroy member Caesar! But (also)
Caesar must bleed for. And gentle Friends,

Let's kill him Boldly, but not Wrathfully:
Let's cause him, as a Dith fit for the Gods,
Not hew him as a Carcasse fit for Hounds:
And let our Hearts, as fable Matters do,
Stirre vp their Servants to an acte of Rage,
And after feme to chide em. This shall make
Our purpose Necessary, and not Enuius.
Which if appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd Purgers, not Murderers,
And for Mark Antony, thinke not of him:
For he can do no more then Caesar Armes,
When Cæsars head is off.
Caes. Yet let me hear him,
For in the ingrafted love he bestes to Caesar,
Brut. Alas, good Caisini, do not thinke of him:
If the love Caesar, all that he can do
Is to himselfe; take thought, and dye for Caesar,
And that were much he should: for he is gien
To sports, to wildefife, and much company.

Trub. There is no seere in him, let him not dye,
For he will lye, and laugh at this hearseafter.

Clocks strike.

Brut. Peace, count the Clocke.
Caes. The Clocke hath fricklen three.

Trub. 'Tis time to part.
Caes. But it is doubfull yet,
Whether Caesar will come forth to do no:
For he is Superstitious growne of late,
Quite from the maine Opinion he held once,
Of Fantasie, of Dreams, and Ceremonies:
It may be, these appareant Prodigies,
The vnaustion'd Terror of this night,
And the perversion of his Angers,
May holde him from the Capitoll to day.

Brut. Neuer feare that; if he be foroued,
I can ore-Bray him: For he louses to hearce,
This Vnconcious may be betray'd with Trees,
And Beares with Glasse, Elephants with Holes;
Lynxes with Toyles, and men with Flatcrers.
But, when I tell him, he hates Flatcrers,
He flys he dyes, being then most flattered.

Let me worke:
For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitoll.
Caes. Nay, we will all of vs, be there to fetch him:
Brut. By the eight house, is that the vtermost?
Caes. Be that the vtermost, and faine not then,
Met. Caius Lepidus doth bear Caesar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey;
I wonder none of you have thought of him.
Brut. Now good Caius Lepidus go along by him;
He love me well, and I have given him Reasons,
Send him but hither, and he will be laden.

Caes. The morning comes vp's:
We will leave you Brutus,
And friends dispense your felues; but all remember
What you have said, and shew your felues true Romans.
Brut. Good friends, andemen, looke fresh and merrily;
Let not our lookes put on our purposes,
But like he is our Roman Actors do,
With vs this Spirit, and vsmaller Constancie,
And so good morrow to your every one.

Exeunt.

Metro Brutus.

The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

A Woman well repor'd : Cæsar's Daughter. Think you, I am no flatterer, then my Sex Being to Father'd, and to Husband'd? Tell me your Counsels, I will not dislose 'em: I have made strong proofs of my Constancie, Giving my felle a voluntary wound Here, in the Thigh: Can I bear that with patience, And not my Husbands Secrets? Or ye Go'd? Render me worthy of this Noble Wife. Knock. Harke, harke, one knockes : Portia go in a while, And by and by thy bosome shall partake The secrets of my Heart. All my engagements, I will continue to thee, All the Charractery of my sad browes: Leave me with hate.

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Lucius, who's that knockes. Luc. Here is a fickle man that would speak with you. Brut. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of. Boy, stand aside, Caius Ligarius, how? Cat. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue. Brut. O what a time have you chose out brave Caius To wear a Kerchief? Would you were not fickle. Cat. I am not fickle, if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of Honor. Brut. Such an exploit haste I in hand Ligarius, Had you a healthfull care to hear off. Cat. By all the Gods that Romans bow before, I heere discard my fickenesse. Soul of Rome, Brave Some, detri'd from Honourable Liones, Thou like an Exorctic, hast coniur'd vp My mortified Spirit. Now bid me runne, And I will frisse with things impossible; Yea get the better of them. What's to do? Brut. A piece of worke, That will make fickle men whole. Cat. But are not some whole, that we must make fickle? Brut. That muft we also. What is it my Caius, I shall unfold to thee, as we are going, To whom it must be done. Cat. See onys of Lambs, And with a shear new-fir'd, I follow you, To do I know not what: but it sufficeth. That Brutus leads me on, Brut. Follow me then.

Thunder & Lightning.

Enter Julius Caesar in his Night-gown.

Cæs.
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

But for your priuate satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.

Cæsar's house is on fire, and your house is on fire.

She dreamt to night, she saw my Statue,
Which like a fountain, with an hundred spouts
Did run pure blood: and many lofty Romans
Came killing, and did the beastly hands in it:
And these doth, apply for warnings and portents,
And euks imminent; and on her knee
Hath bugg'd, that I will stay at home to day.

Deci. This Dreaume is all amisse interpreted,
It was a vision, faire and fortunate:
Your Statute spouting blood in many pipes,
In which to many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies, that from you great Rome shall sucke
Resting blood, and that great men shall preffe
For Tinctoris, Stoneis, Reliques, and Cogninance.
This by Cælurions's Dreaume is signified.
Caf. And this day have you well expounded it,
Deci. Thaue, when you have heard what I can say:
And know it now, the Senate have concluded
To give this day a Great yeare to mee by Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mocke
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
Beake vp the Senate, till another time:
When Cæsar wife shall meeke with better Dreamet.
If Cæsar shille himselfe, shall they not whisper
Loe Cæsar is affaid?
Pardon me Cæsar, for my deere deere love.
To your proceeding, but I tell you this:
And reason to my love is liable.
Caf. How foolish do your fears seeme now Calphurias?
I am as bafe I did yield to them.
Give me my Robe, for I will go,

Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Cæsars, Trebonius, Cynva, and Publius,
And looke where Publius is come to fetch me,
Pub. Good morrow Cæsar.
Caf. Welcome Publius.

What Brutus, are you threed so early too?
Good morrow Cæsars: Cæsars Ligarius,

Cæsar was nece to much your enemy,
As that same Ague which hath made you leave.
What is't a Clocke?

Bra. Cæsar, trash crueken eight.
Caf. I thank you for your pains and curtesie.

Enter Antony.

See, Antony that Rerth long a-nights
Is notwithstanding vp: a Good morrow Antony.

Ant. So to moft Noble Cæsar,
Caf. Bid them prepare within:
I am too blame to be thus waited for.

Now Cyma, now Metellus: what Trebonius,
I have an houres take in store for you:
Remember that you call me to day:
Be meeke me, that I may remember you.

Thrb. Cæsar I will: and to mee will I be,
That your beft Friends shall with I had bene further,
Caf. Good Friend's go in, and taste some wine with me.
And we (like Friends) will straight way go together.

Bra. That every like is not the same, O Cæsar,
The heart of Brutus cannot seeme to vnder.

Cæsar, beware of Brutus, take heed of Cæsars: come we not
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Thy Louer, Artemidorus.

Thee will I stand, till Caesar pacifie along.
And as a Sulien will I grieve thee this:
My heart lamentes, that Vercue cannot live.
Out of the teetl of Emulation.
If thou reade this, O Caesar, thou mayest live;
If not, the Fates with Traitors do conspire.
Exit. Enter Petricia and Lucius.

Par. I pray thee, Boy, run to the Senate-house, Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why doest thou stay? Luc. To know my errand Madam,
Par. I would have had thee there and here again.
Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there:
O Contagion, be strong upon my side,
Set a huge Mountaine sweene my Heart and Tongue:
I have a mans mind, but a woman might:
What Caesar doth, what Sun doth preffe to him.
Heaske Boy, what noile is that? Luc. I hear none Madam.
Par. Prythee, lift well:
I heard a busliing Rumor like a Fray,
And the winde brings it from the Capitol.
Looe, Sooth Madam, I heare nothing.
Enter the Senators.
Par. Come hither Fellow, which way hast thou bin?
South. At mine owne house, good Lady.
Par. What is a clocke?
South. About the ninth hour Lady,
Par. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?
South. Madam not yet, I go to take my fland,
To see him passe on to the Capitol.
Par. Thou hast some fuitive to Caesar, hast thou not?
South. That I base Lady, if it will please Caesar
To be so good to Caesar, as to heare me:
I shall beseech him to befriended himselfe.
Par. Why knowst thou any harasse'st intended to:
ward him?
South. None that I know will be,
 Much that I fear may chance:
Good morrow to you: here the freeter is narrow:
The strong that follows Caesar at the heede,
Of Senators, of Praetors, common Sutors,
Will crowd a feeble man (almost) to death:
He get me to a place more voyde, and there
Spake to great Caesar as he comes along.
Exit. Par. I must go in:
What are now weake a thing
The heart of woman is? O Brutus,
The heauen speeke thee in thine enterprise.
Sure the Boy heard me: Bruteus hath a fuite
That Caesar will not grant. O, I grow faint:
Run Lucius, and commend me to my Lord.

Say I am merry; Come to me againe,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee. Exeunt

Aelius Tertius.

Enter Caesar, Brutus, Cinna, Mark, Decius, Metellus, Tribonius, Cymne, Antony, Lepidus, Artemidorus, Fabius, and the Southegre.

Caes. The Ides of March are come.
South. If I Caesar, but not gone.
Art. Halie Caesar! Read this Schedule.
Deci. Tribonius doth not give you to cere-read
(At your best leasure) this his humble suite.
Art. O Caesar, read mine writ: for mine is a suite.
That touches Caesar nether. Read it great Caesar.
Caes. What touches you your felfe, shall be last Sen'd:
Art. Delay not Caesar, read it infull.
Caes. What, is the fellow mad?
Par. Sirs, is it not.
Cassi. What, vrgie you your Petitions in the street?
Come to the Capitol.
Pepul. I wish you your enterprise to day may thrive,
Cassi. What enterprise Pepulius?
Popp. Fare you well.
Bra. What said Pepulius Lena?
Cassi. He wish'd to day our enterprise might thrive:
I fear our purpose is discover'd:
Bra. Look to how he makes to Caesar: mark him.
Cassi. Caesars be so faire, for we feare precaution,
Brutus what shall be done? If this be knowne,
Pepulius or Caesar never shall turne backe,
For I will thy selfe.
Bra. Cassius be constant:
Pepulius Lena speak'st not of our purporses,
For looke he smilies, and Caesar doth not change.
Cassi. Tribunius knowes his time: for look you Brutus,
He drawes Mark Antony out of the way.
Deci. Where is Metellus Cumber, let him go,
And presently preferre his fuite to Caesar.
Bra. He is adrest: preferre neere, and second him.
Cini. Caesar are the first that reares your hand.
Art. Are we all ready? What is now smifie,
That Caesar and his Senate must redresse?
Met. Most hugh, most mighty, and most puissant Caisar
Metellus Cumber throwes before thy Seate
An humble heart.
Caes. I must prefer thee Cymbur:
These coucheings, and these lowly courtesies
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turne pre-Ordinance, and inft Decree;
Into the lane of Children. Be not fond.
To think that Caesar bears such Rebell blood
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth Fools, I mean sweet words,
Low-crooked-curtsies, and base Spaniel fawning:
Thy Brother by decree is banished.
If thou dost bend, and prays, and fawne for him,
I spurn thee like a Cure out of my way:
Know, Caesar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will be satisfied.
Met. Is there no voyage more worthy than mine own,

726
Then walked we forth, even to the Marketplace, And waiving our red Weapons o’re our heads, Let’s all cry Peace, Freedom, and Liberty. Cæsar. Stoop then, and waft. How many Ages hence Shall this our lofty Scene be acted o’er, In Scare vnborne, and Accents yet unknown? Brutus. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport, That now on Pompeys Bafis dye along, No wortlier then the dust? Cæsar. So oft as that shall be, So often shall the knot of us be cleft’d, The Men that gave their Country liberty, Dec. What, shall we forth? Cæsar. Let every man away. Brutus shall leaue, and we will grace his heele With the most boldheit,and best hearts of Rome. Enter a Servant. Brut. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony. Serv. Thus Brutus did my Master bid me kneele; Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall downe, And being prostrate, thus he bad me say: Brutus is Noble, Wife, Vaillant, and Honest! Cæfar was Mighty, Bold, Royall, and Louing: Say, I loue Brutus, and I honour him; Say, I fear’d Cæsar, honour’d him, and lou’d him; If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony May safely come to him, and be recou’d How Cæsar hath defir’d to dye in death, Mark Antony, that false Cæsar, THE most was well As well as Brutus living; but will follow The Fortunes and Affaires of Noble Brutus, The Thorough the hazards of this vnsett State, With all true Faith. So sayes my Master Antony. Brut. Thy Master is a Wife and Vaillant Roman, I never thought him worke: Tell him, fo pleased come into this place He shall be faulty’d: and by my Honor Depart without’d. Serv. He fetch him presently. Exit Servant. Brut. I know that we shall have him well to Friend, Cæsar. I wish we may: But yet have I minde That leaueth him much: and my misguing still Falleth firely to the purpose. Enter Antony. Brut. Here heere comes Antony: Welcome Mark Antony, Ant. O mighty Cæsar! Do’st thou dye so lowe? Are all thy Conquests, Glories, Triumphs, Spoiles, Shrunke to this little Measure? Fare thee well. I know not Gentlemen what you intend, Who else must be let blood, who else is ranke: If my selfe there is, house to fit, As Cæsars deaths heare; nor no Instrument Of haste that worth, as those your Swords; made rich With the most Noble bloody of all this World. I do beeche yee, if you bear me hard, Now, while your puipd hands doe reeve and smokes, Fulfill your pleasures. Let a thousand yeares, I shall not finde my selfe to get up againe. No place will please me so, no meane of death. As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off, The Choice and Master Spirits of this Age. Brut. O Antony! Begge not your death of vs! Though now we must appeare bloody and cruel, As by our hands, and this our preient Acte You use we do: Yet see you but our hands,
And this, the bleeding butcher he have done:
Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful:
And pity to the general wrong, of Rome,
As fire doth from a drouth, to purify points.
Thus aye this deed on Caesar. For you part,
To you, our Swords have leaved points Mark Antony:
Our Armes in strength of mirth, and our Hearts
Of Brothers tempest, do receive you in,
With all kindcontext, good thoughts, and reverence.
Coffi. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's,
In the disposing of new Dignities:
Dost. Cans be patient, till we have appear'd
The Multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then, we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Caesar when I took him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your Wifedome:
I let each man tender me his bloody hand.
I tell them this, for all I flake with you;
Next Caius Coffins do I take your hand;
Now Decius Brutus yours; now yours Metellus;
Yours Cicero; and my valiant Catel, yours;
Though left, not least in love, yours good Trebonius,
Gentlemen all: Alass, what shall I say,
My credence stands on such slippery ground,
That each of two had wrong you may,
Either a Coward, or a Flatterer.
That I did love thee Caesar, O'tis true:
If then thy Spirit looke vnpon vs now,
Shall it not greece thee dearer then thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy Foes?
Mold Noble, in the presence of thy Qurtie,
He's not so many eyes, as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they streame forth thy blood,
It would become me better, then to close
In tearmes of Friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me Julius, here's no'thou bay'd d'vace Har,
Here's not'thou fall, and here's thy Hunters stand
Sign'd in thy Spoyle, and Crim'd in thy Leethe,
Of Caius Coffins with the Fire your mouth,
And this indeed, O World, the Hart of thee,
How like a Deere, slain by many Princes,
Doft thou hate me by?

Coffi. Mark Antony.

Ant. Pardon me Caius Coffins:
The Enemies of Caesar, shall say this:
Then, in a Friend, it is said Molefit
Coffi. I blame you not for praising Caesar so,
But what compact mean you to have with vs?
Will you be prick'd in number of our Friends,
Or flall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I rooke your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point, by looking downe on Caesar,
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why, and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.

Brut. Or else were this a false Spectacle:
Our Resolutions are so full of good regard,
That were you Antony, the Sonne of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I feake,
And an more, I may produce his body to the Market-place,
And in the Pulpit as becomes a Friend,
Speak in the Order of his Funerals.

Brutus. You shall Mark Antony.
Coffi. Brutus, a word with you:
You know not what you do; do not content
That Antony speak in his Funerals:
Know you how much these people may be mould
By that which he will utter.

Brutus. By your pardon:
I will my selfe into the Pulpit first,
And thus the reason of our Cæsar's death,
What Antony shall speake, I will profess
He speakes by time, and by permission:
And that we are contented Cæsar then,
Hast all true Riters, and lawfull Ceremonies,
It shall advantage more, then do vs wrong.
Coffi. I know not what may fall, I like it not.

Brutus. Mark Antony, here take you Cæsar's body:
You shall not in your Funerals speak blame vs,
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar,
And bid you don't by our perswasion;
Ese shall you not have any hand at all
About his Funeral. And you shall speake
In the same Pulpit where I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so:
I do defire no more.

Brutus. Prepare the body then, and follow us.

Emperor.

O pardon me, thou bleeding piece of Earth:
That I am mecke and gentle with these Butchers.
Thou art the Roofes of the Nobles man
That ever liued in the Title of Times.
Woe to the hand that fed this costly Blood,
Our thys wounds, now do I prophesie,
(Which like doth diame, another doth do to their Ruby lips,
To begge the voice and vterance of my Tongue)
A-Carte shall light upon the limbes of men,
Domefickie Fury, and fierce Guiltifie,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be in vfe,
And dreadful Obiects to familiar,
That Mothers shall not name them, when they behold
Their Infants quarter'd with the hands of Warre:
All pitty choak'd with custome of fell deeds,
And Cæsars Spirit ranging for Revenge,
With Air by his fide, come hot from Hell,
Shall in these Confiere, with a Monarkes voyce,
Cry hauncck, and let flip the Dogges of Warre,
That the faire decease, shall find little Boze the earth
With Cariion men, groaning for Burial.

Enter Otho's Servant.

You fente Otho's Cæsar, do you not?

Sert. I do Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome,
Sert. He did receive his Letters, and is comming,
And some fay to you by word of mouth——
O Cæsar!

Ant. Thy heart is bigge: get thee a part and weepe:
Pasion I fee is catching from mine eyes,
Seeing those Beards of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is that the Master comming?

Sert. He lies to night within feuen Leagues of Rome,

Ant. Pull backes with speedes,
And tell him what I fince, I chanc'd
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Otho yet,
He hence, and tell him so. Yet day a while,
Enter Brutus and goes into the Palace, and Caesar with the Plebeians.

Ple. We will be satisfied; let vs be satisfied.
Brut. Then follow me, and give me Audience friends.
Caesar go you into the other stirs, and part the Numbers:
Those that will hear me speake, let 'em stay here;
Those that will follow Caesar, go with him,
And publike Reafons shall be rendred
Of Caesar's death.
1. Ple. I will heare Brutus speake.
2. I will heare Caesar, and compare their Reafons,
Wherewith we freely we hear them rendred.
3. The Noble Brutus is ascended Silence.
Brut. Be patient till the last.
Romans, Country-men, and Louers, hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may heare. Belieue me for mine Honor, and have repect to mine Honor, that you may beleue. Confiue me in your Wifdom, and awake your放, that you may the better judge. If there bee any in this Assemblie, any deere Friend of Caesar, to him I say, that Caesar love to Caesar, was no leffe then his. If then, that Friend demand, why Brutus rofe against Caesar, this is my anfwer: Not that I lou'd Caesar leffe, but that I lou'd Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were fliuing, and dye all States; then that Caesar were dead, to live all Free-men? As Caesar lou'd mee, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoyce in it; as he was valiant, I honour him: But, as he was ambitious, I fly him. There is Tares, for his Lion Joy, for his Fortune; Honor, for his Valour; and Death, for his Ambition. Who is heere fo bale, that would be a Bondman? If any, speake for him, he haue offended. Who is heere fo rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speake for him he haue offended. Who is heere fo wile, that will not love his Country? If any, speake for him he haue offended. I paufe for a Reply.
All. None Brutus, none.
Brutus. Then none have I offended. I haue done no more to Caesar, then you shall do to Brutus. The Quarter of his death, is in all the Capitol: his Glory not extinguished, wherein he was worthy; nor his Offences confec'd, for which he suffered death.

Enter Mark Antony, with Caesar's body.

Here comes his Body, moun'd by Mark Antony, who though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the beneft of his dying, a place in the Commonwealth, as which of you shall not. With this I depart, that as I flewe my heart here, for the good of Rome, I haue the fame Dogger for my felte, when it pleafe my Country to need my death.
All. Long Brutus, long, long.
1. Bring him with Triumph home vnto his house.
2. Gave him a Statue with his Anceffors.
3. Let him be Caesar.
4. Caesar better parts.

Shall be Crown'd in Brutus.
1. We'll bring him to his Hoftie, With Showits and Clamors.
2. Peace, silence, Brutus speaks.
1. Peace ho.
Brutus. Good Countrymen, let me depart alone, And (not my fake) fly heere with Antony. Do grace to Caesar's Corpses, and grace his Speech Tending to Caesar's Glories, which Mark Antony (By our permiffion) is allow'd to make. I do intreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony haue spoke.

Exit.

1. Stay ho, and let vs heare Mark Antony,
2. Let him go vp into the publike Chaire,
We'll heare him: Noble Antony go vp.
Ant. For Brutus fake, I am beholding to you.
4. What does he say of Brutus?
2. He fayes, not Brutus fake He finds himfelfe beholding to vs all.
4. Were there both he fpake no barne of Brutus heere?
1. This Caesar was a Tyrant.
3. Nay that's certaine:
Were beft that Rome is rid of him,
2. Peace, let vs heare what Antony can fay.
Ant. You gentle Romans.
All. Peace ho, let vs heare him.
Ant. If Romans, Country-men, lend me your ears:
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him:
The euell that men do, lies after them,
The good is oftenerd with their bones,
So let it be with Caesar. The Noble Brutus,
Hath told you Caesar was ambitious;
If his were lo, it was a generous Fault,
And generously, haft Caesar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus, and the reft
(Fare Brutus is an Honourable man,
So are they all, all Honourable men)
Come I to speake in Caesar's Funerall.
He was my Friend, faithfull, and iuft to me;
But Brutus fayes, he was ambitious,
And Brutus is an Honourable man.
He hath brought many Captures home to Rome,
Where Romiflmen, and all the generall Coffins fill:
Did this in Caesar leme ambitious?
When that the poore haue cry'd, Caesar hath wept:
Ambition should be made of ftemer fluffe,
Yet Brutus fayes, he was ambitious:
And Brutus is an Honourable man.
You all did fée, that on the Lomperall,
I thrie pretendid him a Kingly Crowne,
Which he did ftirrie refuse. Was this ambition?
Yet Brutus fayes, he was ambitious:
And fure he is an Honourable man.
I speake not to difproove what Brutus fpoke,
But heere I am, to speake what I do know;
You all did loue him once, not without caufe,
What caufe with-holds you then, to mourne for him?
Judgement! thou are fled to bruife Beifs,
And Men have loft their Reason. Beare with me,
My heart is in the Coffin there with Caesar,
And I must pafs on, till it come backe to me.
1. Me thinkes there is much reftor in his fayings:
2. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Caesar's ha's had great wrong. (his place)
3. Ha's bee Matters? Heere there will a worse come in

1 4. Mark
The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar.

4. Mark'd ye his words? he would not take $ Crown,
Therefore 'tis certain, he was not Ambitious.
1. If it be found so, some will desire abide it.
2. Poore fool, his eyes are red as fire with weeping,
3. Poor Grief, and Caesar wrong'd him:
4. Now marke him, he begins againe to speake.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Caesar might Have flood against the World: Now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence,
O Matters! If I were dispos'd to write
Your hearts and minds to Mutiny and Rage,
I would, to Brute, and Caesar wrong:
Who (you all know) are Honorable men,
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong my selfe and you,
Then I will wrong such Honourable men:
Beware, a Parchment, with the Seal of Caesar,
I found it in his Closet, 'tis his Will:
Let but the Commons hear this Testament:
(Which pardon me) I do not meane to read,
And they would goe and kisse dead Cæser wounds,
And dip their Napkins in his Sacred Blood;
Yes, begge a haire of him for Memory,
And dying, mention it within their Willes,
Bequeathing it as a rich Legacy
Into their Issue.

Wee, we had the Will, read it is Mark Antony.

All. The Will the Will; we will heare Cæsar Will.
Ant. Have patience gentle Friends, I must not read it,
It is not meete you know how Cæsar loul'd you:
You are not Wood, you are not Stones, but men:
And being men, hearing the Will of Cæsar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad:
I thought you knew what you were Heirs,
For if you should, O what would come of it?

Read the Will, we'll heare it Antony:
You shall read vs the Will, Cæsar Will.
Ant. Will you be Patient? Will you stay a while?
I haue o'er-shit my felte to tell you of it,
I feare I wrong the Honourable men,
Whose Daggers haue stabb'd Cæsar: I do feare it.

4. They were Traitors: Honourable men.
All. The Will, the Testament,
2. They were Villaines, Murderers: the Will, read the Will.
Ant. You will compell me then to read the Will:
Then make a Ring about the Corps of Cæsar,
And let me shew you him that made the Will:
Shall I defend? And will you gue me leave?
All. Come down.
2. Defend.
3. You shall have issue.
4. A Ring, fland round.
1. Stand from the Hearse, stand from the Body.
2. Roome for Antony, most Noble Antony.

Ant. Nay pritty not to vpon me, fland farre off.
All. Stand backe: roome, heare backe.
Ant. If you haue teares, prepare to flie them now.
You all do know this Mantle, I remember
The first time ever Cæsar put it on,
'Twas on a Summer's Evening in his Tent,
That day he overcame the Nevy.
Looke, in this place ran Cæfnis Daggers through:
See what a rare the enominous Cæsars made;
Through this, the wel-beloued Brutus stabb'd,
And as he pluck'd his cursed Steele away:

Mark how the blood of Cæsar followd it,
As rushing out of doores, to be scold'd
If Brutus to vnnkindly knock'd door no:
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsars Angel.
Now, O you God, a Nobler man in Rome then Brutus,
This was the most vnnkindly cut of all.
For when the Noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong then Traitors arme,
Quire vanquish'd him then burst his Mighty heart,
And in his Mantle, muffling vp his face,
Even at the Bafe of Pompeii Statue
(Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.
What o a fall was there, my Countrymen?
Then Land you, and all of vs fell downe,
Will it bloody Treafon flourish'd over vs.
O now you weep, and I perceive you feel
The dint of pitty: There are gracious droppes.
Kinde Soules, what weep you when you but behold
Our Cæsars Vein exced'd woundes? Looke you heere,
Here is Hisfelfe, mark'd as you see with Traitors.

1. O pittious speakebale!
2. O Noble Cæsar!
3. O wouful day!
4. O Traitors, Villaines!
1. O most bloody fight!
2. We will be reveng'd: Revenge.

About, feake, burnt, fire, kill, fly,
Let not a Traitor live.
1. Peace there, heare the Noble Antony,
2. We'll heare him, we'll follow him, we'll dy with him.

Ant. Good Friends, sweet Friends, let me not bite
To such a fadisme of Blood of Mutiny:
They that have done this Deede, are honourable.
What private greyes they have, alas I know not,
That made them do it: They are Wise, and Honourable,
And will no doubt with Reafons answer you.
I come not (Friends) to feale away your hearts,
I am no Orator, as Brutus is;
But (as you know me all) a plaine blunt man
That love my Friend, and, and that they know full well,
That gave me publique leasse to speake of him:
For I have neyther writ nor words, nor worth,
Adion, nor Venerator, nor the power of Speech,
To thrice mens Blood. I onely speake right on:
I tell you that, which you your felues do know,
Shew you sweet Cæsars wounds, poor poor durn mouths
And bid them speake for me: But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle vp your Spirites, and put a Tongue
In every Wound of Cæsar, that should move
The Hanes of Rome, to rife and Mutiny.

All. Weel Mutiny.
1. Weel I burne the house of Brutus.
3. Weel that we come, feake the Conspirators.

Ant. Yet heare me Countrymen, yet heare me speake
All. Peace ho, heare Antony, most Noble Antony.
Ant. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what:
Wherein hath Cæsar thus defer'd your loves?
Alas you know not, I must tell you then:
You haue forgot the Will I told you of.
All. Weel, the will of Cæsars, and heare the Will,
Ant. Here is the Will, and vnder Cæsars Seal.
To eery Roman Citizen he gieus,
To eery free man, feueny free Drachmaes.
Enter Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus.

ANT. These men then shall die, their names are prick'd. Oles. Your Brother too must dy; content you Lepidus? Lep. I do content. Oles. Prick him down Antony. Lep. Upon condition Publican shall not live, who is your Sisters' sonne, Mark Antony. Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I dam him, but Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house. Fetch the Will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in Legacies. Lep. What shall I finde you here? Oles. Or heere, or at the Capitol. Exit Lepidus. Ant. This is a flight vnamerable man, Meet to be fone on Errands in fit The three-fold World divid'd, he should fend One of the three to have it. Oles. So you thought him, And took his voyce who should be prick'd to dye In our blacke Sentence and Proscription. Ant. Olesanius, I have fene more dayes then you, And though we lay thee Honours on this man, To safe our felues of divers floudous loads, He shall but bear them, as the Afe bears Gold, To groane and fweat under the Burthen, Either fed or driven, as we point the way: And hauing brought our Treasure, where we will, Then take we downe his Load, and turne him off (Like to the empty Afe) to shake his ears, And graze in Commons. Oles. You may do your will: But he's a tried, and valiant Souledier. Ant. So is my Horfe Octavius, and for that I do appoint him Store of Pow'r, It is a Creature that I teach to fight, To winde, to stop, to run directly on: His corporall Motion, gouerd by my Spirit, And in some taffe, is Lepidus but to: He must be taught, and trained, and bid go forth: A barren Spirited Fellow; one that feeds On Obiechts, Arts, and Inventions, Which out of fe, and flat'de by other men Begin his fation. Do not talk of him, But as a property: and now Octavius, Little great things, Brutus and Caifar Are leerying Pow'rs; We must straight make head: Therefore let our Alliance be combind, Our belfe Fronds made, our means stretch, And let vs presently go fit in Counsell, How couete matters may be belfe disco'd, And open Perils furell anfwered. Oles. Let vs do so: for we are at the Stake.

Ant. Enter

Enter Et BAAS.

And This is a flight vnamerable man, Meet to be fone on Errands in fit The three-fold World divid'd, he should fend One of the three to have it.

And
Drunken Enter Brutus, Lucullus, and the Army. Titinius and Pindarus meet them.

Brut. Stand ho.

Luc. Gist the word ho, and stand.

Brut. What now? Lucullus, in Caffius' name?

Luc. He's at hand, and Pindarus is come.

To do you satisfaction from his Master.

Brut. He greets you well. Your Master Pindarus

In his own change, or by ill Officers,

Hast given me some worthy cause to wish

Things done, undone: But if he be at hand

I shall be satisfied.

Par. I do not doubt.

But that my Noble Master will appeare

Such as he, is full of regard, and Honour.

Brut. He is not doubted. A word Lucullus

How he receiv'd you: let me be resolvd.

Luc. With courtesie, and with respect enough,

But not with such familiar Incivilitie.

Nor with such free and friendly Conference.

As he hath us'd of old.

Brut. Thou hast descri'd

A hot Friend, cooling: Euer note Lucullus,

When Loue begins to ticken and decay

Wit this enforced Cerimony.

There are no tricks, in plaine and simple Faith:

But hollow men, like Horses hot at hand,

Make gallant shew, and promise of their Mettle.

But when they should endure the bloody Spercre,

They fall their Credits, and like deceitfull Iades

Sink in the Triall. Comes his Army on?

Lucull. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:

The greater part, the Horie in general

Are come with Caffius.

Enter Caffius and his Powers.

Brut. Heracle, he is arriv'd:

March gently on to meete him.

Caff. Stand ho.

Brut. Stand ho, speakes the word along.

Stand.

Stand.

Stand.

Caff. Most Noble Brother, you have done me wrong.

Brut. Judge me you Gods; wrong I mine Enemies?

And not to, how should I wrong a Brother.

Caff. Brutus, this fober forme of yours, hides wrongs,

And when you do them—

Brut. Caffius, be content,

SPEAKING your griefes furtily, I do know you well.

Before the eyes of both our Armies here

(Which should perceive nothing but Loue from vs)

Let vs not wrangle. Bid them move away:

This is not Tame Caffius enlarges your Greetes,

And I will give you Audience.

Caff. Pindarus,

Bid our Commanders leade their Charges off

A little from this ground.

Brut. Lucullus, do you the like, and let no man

Come to our Tent, till we have done our Conference.

Exeunt Lucullus and Titinius guard our doore.

Caff. When Caesar had, he durst not this have mould'd

Brut. Peace, peace, you durst not to have tempted him.

Caff. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this

You have condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella

For taking Bribes hereof the Sardians:

Wherein my Letters, praying on his side,

Because I knew the man was slighted off.

Brut. You wrong'd you self to write in such a cafe.

Caff. In such a time as this, it is not meet

That every nice offence should beare his Comment.

Brut. Let me tell you Caffius, you your selfe,

Are much condemn'd to have an itching Palme,

To fell, and Mast your Offices for Gold

To Vndersteaers.

Caff. I, an itching Palme?

You know that you are Brutus that speakes this,

Or by the Gods, this speech were elle your laft.

Brut. The name of Caffius Honors this corruption,

And Chastife the doth therefore hide his head.

Caff. Chastisement?

Brut. Remember March, the Isles of March remeber:

Did not great Lucullus bleed for Justice fake?

What Villaine touch'd his body, that did flaye,

And not for Justice? What Shall one of Vs,

That thucke the Formost man of all this World,

But for supporting Robbers: shall we now,

Commune our fingers, with base Bribes?

And fell the empty spacie of our large Honors

For so much traff, as may be grasped thus?

I had rather be a Dogge, and bay the Moone,

Then such a Roman.

Caff. Brutus, baite not me,

Be not induc'd: you forget your selfe

To hedge me in. I am a Soullier, I,

Older in practice, Abler then your selfe

To make Conditions.

Brut. Go too: you are not Caffius.

Caff. I am.

Brut. I say, you are not.

Caff. Vrge me no more, I shall forget my selfe:

Have mine eye upon your health: Tempt me no farther.

Brut. Away flight man.

Caff. It's possible?

Brut. Hear me, for I will speake.

Must I give way, and room to your raft Choller?

Shall I be frighted, when a Madman flies?

Caff. O ye Gods, ye Gods, Must I endure all this?

Brut. All this! I more: Fret till your proud hart break.

Go thow his Slaves how Chollerick you are,

And make your Bondmen tremble. Must I borue?

Must I obserue you? Must I fland and crouch

Under your Telfe Humour? By the Gods,

You shall diggell the Venom of your Spleene

Though it do Split you. For, from this day forth,

I wil ye for my Mirth, yea for my Laughter

When you are Wafplin.

Caff. Is it come to this?

Brut. You say, you are a better Soullier:

Let it appear for: make you your vaunting true,

Under your Telfe Humour? By the Gods,

I shall be glad to learne of Noble men,

Caff. You wrong me every way:

You wrong me Brutus:

I saide, an Eldier Soullier, not a Better.

Did I say Better?

Brut. If you did, I care not.

Caff. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not this haue mould'd

Brut. Peace, peace, you durst not to have tempted him.

Caff.
Enter a Post.

Post. Let me go in to see the Generals,
There is some grudge betwixt 'em, 'tis not meete
They be alone,

Luc. You shall not come to them.

Post. Nothing but death shall slay me.

Cæs. How now? What's the matter?

Post. For shame you General; what do you mean?

Luc. And be friends, as two such men should bee,
For I have seen more yeeres I live since then yeet.

Cæs. Haha, how wildly doth this Cynicke ride?

Brut. Get you hence hence: Sawcey fellow, hence.

Cæs. Know with him Brutus; his is that fashion.

Brut. He knowes his humor, when he knowes his time;
What should the Wares do with these ligging Foules?

Companion, hence.

Cæs. Away, away be gone. Exit Post.

Luc. Lucullus and Titinius bid the Commanders
Prepare to lodge their Companies to night.

Cæs. And come your felues, & bring Messalas with you
Immediately to vs.

Luc. Lucius, a bottle of Wine.

Cæs. I did not thinke you could have bin so angry.

Brut. O Cæsars, I am sick of many greefs.

Cæs. Of your Philosophy you make no vfe,
If you give place to accidental cuits.

Brut. No man bears forrow better. Portia is dead.

Cæs. Hail Portia?

Brut. She is dead.

Cæs. How lowly doth I killing, when I croft you so?

O importable, and touching losse!

Upon what sickness?

Brut. Impatienc of my absence,
And greefe, that yong Ollanius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong: For with her death
That tyrings come. With this the fell distract,
And (her Attendants absent) swallow'd fire.

Cæs. And dy'd so?

Brut. Even so.

Cæs. O ye immortal Gods!

Enter Boy with Wine and Tapers.

Boy. Speak no more of her: Give me a bowle of wine.

In this I bury all kindnesse Cæsius.

Drinks.

Cæs. My heart is thirly for that Noble pledge,
Fill Lucius, till the Wine ore-forwell the Cup;
I cannot drink so much of Brutus love.

Enter Titinius and Messala.

Brutus. Come in Titinius;
Welcome good Messala:
Now sit we cloze about this Taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cæs. Portia, art thou gone?

Brut. No more I pray you.

Messala, I have here receiv'd Letters,
That yong Ollanius, and Mark Antony
Come downe upon vs with a mighty powre;
Bending their Expedition toward Philippi. II 3
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Early to morrow will we rife, and hence.

Enter Lucius.

Brut. Lucius my Gowne: farewell good Abellio, Good night Titinius: Noble, Noble Cassius, Good night, and good repose.

Caff. O my deere Brother:
This is the last ambition of the night:
Neuer come such diuifion betwene our foules:
Let it not bestray.

Enter Lucius with the Gowne.

Brut. Every thing is well.

Caff. Good night my Lord.

Brut. Good night good Brother.

Tit. Brightly good night, Lord Brutus.

Brut. Farewell every one.

Give me the Gowne. Where is thy Instrument?
Luc. Here in the Tent.

Brut. What, thou speakest drowfly?

Poor base I blame the not, thou art yet watch'd,
Call Claudius, and some other of my men,
Ile then them fife is dead, and by frange manner.

Enter Vardou, and Claudius.

Vard. Calls my Lord?

Brut. I pray you ftir, lye in my Tent and fleep,
It may be I fhall raffe you by and by
On bufineffe to my Brother Caffius.

Vard. So pafs you, we will fand,
And watch your paffage.

Brut. I will it no, haue it fo: Lye downe good ftirr,
It may be I fhall otherwife bethinke me.

Lucius. Here's the booke I fough't for fo:
I put it in the pocket of my Gowne.

Luc. I was fare my Lordship did not give it me.

Brut. Beare with me good Boy, I am much forgetfull.

Caff. I will haue hold here two of them, becaufe eyes a-white,
And touch thy Instrument a fraine or two.

Luc. I my Lord, an't pafs you, please
Brut. It does my Boy?

If trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty Sir.

Brut. I fhould not urge thy duty paff thy might,
I fhould not urge thy duties

Luc. I have repented my Lord already.

Brut. It was well done, and thou shalt fleep againe:
I will not hold thee long. If I do live,
I will be good to thee.

Musick, and a Song.

This is a fleepy Tune: O Murtherous flumber!
Layeth thou thy Laiden Maftre upon my Boy,
That playes thee Mistleke? Gentle Knowe good night:
I will not do thee fo much wrong to wake thee
If thou do'ft nod, thou break'ft thy Instrument,
Ite take it from thee, and (good Boy) good night.

Let me fee, let me fee; is not the Leafe turn'd downe
Where I left reading? Herein is it I thinkke.

Enter the Ghost of Cæfar.

How ill this Tape is wouned. Sir, who comes here?
I thinke it is the wondrful fecret of mine eyes
That fpeares this mifftrous Apparition.
It comes upon me: Art thou any thing?
Are thou hone God, some Angell, or some Devil,
That mak'ft my blood cold, and my heart to flare?

Speak to me, what thou art,

Ghost. Thy eftill Spirit Brutus?

Brut. Why corn'lt thou?
Enter Otho, Antony, and their Army.

Otho. Now Antony, our hopes are answered. You said the Enemy would not come down, but keep the Hilles and upper Regions. It is true not so: their batalles are at hand. They mean to warne vs at Philippi here:

Ant. Answering before we do demand of them.

But let them go, and I know Wherefore they do it: They could be content To visit other places, and come down With fearfull branye; thynking by this face To fasten in our thoughts that they have Courage; But is not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you Generals, The Enemy comes on gallant thus: Their bloody signe of Battell is hung out, And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Otho, lead ye your Battale fistly on Upon the left hand of the even Field, Otho. Upon the right hand I keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you crose me in this exigent.

Otho. I do not crose you; but I will do so. March.

Enter Brutus, Caius, and their Army.

Brut. They stand, and would have parley.

Caius. Stand still, we must out and talk.

Otho. Mark Antony, shall we give signe of Battall?

Ant. No Caius, we will answer on their Charge.
The Tragedie of Julius Caesar.

Who to Philippi here came for to: This Morning are they fled away, and gone, And in their fleets, do Raunas, Crowes, and Kites Fly oer our heads, and downward looke on vs. As we were tickely prey, their fhips fowes fume A Canopy moft fata, under which Our Army lies, ready to gue vp the Ghost. Mefia. Beleeue not fo. Caffi. But beleue it partly, For I am freth of spirit, and relou'd To meete all perils, very confantly. Brut. Even to Lucullus. Caffi. Now moft Noble Brutus, The Gods to day fand friendly, that we may Lose in peace, leade on our dayes to age. But since the affayres of men refs still incertaine, Let's rea son with the worst that may befal. If we do lofe this Buttle, then is this The very laft time we fhall speake together: What are you then determined to do? Brut. Even by the rule of that Philosophy, By which I did blame Cato, for the death Which he did giue himfelle, I know not how: But I do finde it Cowardely, and vile, For fear of what might fall, fo to prevent The time of life, arming my felle with patience, To fly the prouenice of some high Powers, That gouerne us belowe. Caffi. Then, if we looe this Battale, You are contented to be led in Triumph Thorow the streets of Rome. Brut. No Caffi no: Thinkne not thou Noble Romane, That our Brutus will go bound to Rome, He bares too great a minde, But this fame day Must end that worke, the Idee of March begun, And whether we fhall meete againe, I know not therefore our everealiting farewell take: For euer, and for euer, farewell Caffi: If we do meete againe, why we fhall fmile; If not, why then this parting was well made. Caffi. For euer, and for euer, farewell Brutus: If we meete againe, were'll fmile indeede: If not, tis true, this parting was well made. Brut. Why then laide on. O that a man might know The end of this dayes buifeine, ere it come: But it fuffeth, that the day will end, And then the end is knowne. Come ho,away. Excuent. Alarum. Enter Brutus and Mefia. Brut. Ride, ride Mefia, ride and glue these Billies Vnto the Legions, on the other side. Lord Alarum. Let them fet on at once: for I perceiue But cold deamano in Oletus wing: And foding, that giues them the ouerthrow: Ride, ride, Mefia, let them all come downe. Excuent Alarum. Enter Caffi: and Titinius. Caffi. O looke Titinius, looke, the Villaines flye: My felfe have to mine owne turn'd Enemy: This Enrigne heere of mine was cunninge backe, I faw the Coward, and did take it from him. Titinius. O Caffi, Brutus gave the word too early,
Cæsars day is set.
The Sunne of Rome is set. Our day is gone,
Clowns, Deues, and Dangers come; our deeds are done:
Mirth of my faceless hath done this deed.
Mesila. Mirth of good faceless hath done this deed.
O stately Error, Melancholy Childe:
Why do you flee from the sweet thoughts of men
The things that are not! O Error some contey'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy byrris,
But kil'f the Mother that engendered thee.
Tit. What Pindarus? Where art thou Pindarus?
Mefia. Stecke him Titinius, whil'st I go to meet
The Noble Brutus, thuffling this report
Into his ears; I may say thuffling it:
For piercing Steele, and Dares intemoned,
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tydings of this fight.
Tit. Hide you Mesila,
And I will seeke for Pindarus the while:
Why didst thou send me forth brave Cæsars?
Did I not meet thy Friends, and did not they Put on my Browes this wreath of Victorie,
And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not heare their Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing.
(Thieves)
But hold thee, take this Garland on thy Brow,
The Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come space,
And see how I regarded Cæsars Cause:
By your issue Gods: This is a Romans part,
Come Cæsars Sword, and finde Titinius hart.

Enter Brutus, Mefila, young Cato,
Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.
Brutus. Where, where Mefila, doth his body lye?
Mefila. Lo! yonder, and Titinius mourning it.
Brutus. Titinius face is upwar'd,
Cato. He is slaine.
Brutus. O Iulius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet,
Thy Spirit walks abroad, and turns out Swords
In our owne proper Eintails.
Mesila. Cato. Brave Titinius,
Looke where he hath not crown'd dead Cæsar.
Brutus. Are yet two Romans living such as thee?
The laft of all the Romans, fat thee well:
It is impossible, that euer Rome
Should breed thy fellow. Friends I owe mo teares
To this dead man, then you shall fee me pay.
I shall finde time, Cæsars: I shall finde time.
Come therefore, and to Tharsus send his body,
His Funerals shall not be in our Campe,
Leaft it discomfort vs. Lucilliens come,
And come yong Cato, let vs to the Field,
Labio and Spainio let our Batallies on:
'Tis three a clockes, and Romans yets eare nights,
We shall try Fortune as a fecond fight.

Enter.
Alarum. Enter Brutus, Mefila, Cato, Lucilliens, and Flaminio.
Cato. What Eaftard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaime my name about the Field.
I am the Soune of Marcus Cato, hone.
A Foe to Tyrants, and my Countries Friend.
I am the Soune of Marcus Cato, hone.
Enter Souldiers, and fight.
And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, 1.

Brutus to my Countrie Friend: Know me for Brutus.
Luc. O yong and Noble Cato, art thou downe?
Why now thou dyest, as bravely as Titinius,
And may it be honour'd, being Cato's Sonne.
Sold. Yeld, or thou dyest.
Luc. Onely I yeld to dye:
There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight:
Kill Brutus, and be honoure'd in his death.
Sold. We will not: a Noble Prisoner.
Cry, Fly, fly, my Lord, there is no bearing here.

Strat. Farewell to you, and you, and you Volumnius.

Strat. Thou hast bid him all this while asleep:

Farewell to thee, to Strat. Countrymen: My heart doth joy, that yet in all my life, I found no man, but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this looking day More then Otianus, and Mark Antony,

By this vile Conquest shall attaine vnto,

So fare you well at once, for Brutus tongue hath almost ended his lust History: Night hangs upon mine eyes, my Bones would rest,

That hauie but laboured, to attaine this houre.

Alarum. Cry within, Fly, fly, fly.

Cly. Fly my Lord, flye.

Brut. Hence: I will follow:

I prithee Strat, stay thou by thy Lord,

Thou art a Fellow of a good respect:

Thy life hath had some smash of Honour in it,

Hold then my Sword, and turne away thy face,

While I do run vp on it. Wilt thou Strat?

Strat. Give me your hand first, Fare you wel my Lord.

Brut. Farewell good Strat. — Cesar, now be still, I kill'd not thee with halfe so good a will.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Antony, Otianius, Meffala, Lucullus, and the Army.

Meff. What man is that?
THE TRAGEDIE OF
MACBETH.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three witches.

1. Where shall we three meet again? In Thunder, Lightning, or in Raine? 2. When the Hurley-burley's done, When the Brawl's lost and worn. 3. That will be ere the set of Sunne. Where shall we meet? Enter, Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter King, Malcom, Dunsinane, Lenox. With attendants, meeting a bleeding Captaine.

King. What bloody man is that? he can report, As seemeth by his plight, of the Result The new els state.

Capt. This is the Serjeant, Who like a good and hardie Souldier fought. ’Gainst thy Captaine: Haile brave friend; Say to the King the knowledge of the Skye, As thou dirst telle us. The multiplying Villanies of Nature One (worne upon him) from the Westering Isles Of Kernes and Cawdor, and all the races. And Fortune on his dismal Querry smiling, Showed like a Rebelis Wheresoever he looked. For brave Macbeth (well he durst that Name) Did saving Fortune, with his brandishd Steele, Which smak'd with bloody execution. (Like Valours Munto) cut d out his pallage, Till he felle the Stone. Which ne'er at soke hands, nor far retrieu'd to him, Till he vesseal's him from the Naive toth'Chops; And fished his Head upon our Battelshirts.

King. 'O valiant Cousin, worthy Gentleman. Cap. As whence the Sunne gins his reflection, Shipwrecking Stormes, and dirstfull Thunders: So from that Spring, whence comfort seem'd to come, Discouer'd swell'd: Marke King of Scotland, marke, No sooner Julluce had, with Valour arm'd, Compelled shewe slipping Kernes to trueth their heales, But the Norwaiian Lord, Vnsmiring vantage, With furfufh Armes, and new supplies of men, Began a fresh afult. King. Distray'd not this our Captaines, Macbeth and Banquo? Cap. Yes, as Sparrows,Eagles; Or the Hare, the Lyon: If I say looth, I must report they were As Cannons ouer-charg'd with double cracks, So they doubly redoubled breakes upon the Fee: Except they meant to bathe in rolling Wounds, Or memorize another Golgotha, I cannot tell: but I am faint, My Gashes cry for helpe.

King. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds, They smock of Honor both: One get him Surgeons.

Enter Ross and Angus. Who comes here?

Ross. The worthy Thane of Ross, Lenox. What a waffe Lockes through his eyes? So should he looke, that feemes to speake things strange. Ross. God save the King. King. Whence canst thou, worthy Thane? Ross. From Fife, great King, Where the Norwaiian Banners bowe the Skie, And fame our people cold, Norway himselfe, with terrible numbers, Afflicted by that most dillayd Traror, The Thane of Cawdor, beame a dismal Confident till thar Bellows Bridgewone, lapse in products, Confronted him with false-comparisons, Point against Point, rebellous Arme against Arme, Curing his laudable spirit: and to conclude, The Victorie fell on vs. King. Great hoppinice. Ross. That now Swains the Norwaiian King, Causes composition: Nor would we delign him but all of his men, Till he disburset, at Saint Cuth's yneh, Ten thouand Dollars, to our generall use.
Scena Tertia.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1. Where hath thou beene, Sister?
2. Killing Swine.
3. Sister, where thou?
1. A Slay's Wife had Chestnuts in her Lappe, And mournes, and mourches, and mournes:
Gue me, quoth I.
Aroyn the, Witch, the rumped-fayng Rongon cryes.
Her Husband's to Aippo gone, Master o'th Tiger:
But in a Sycce Ile thither sayle,
And like a Rat without a vayle,
Ile Doe, Ile doe, and Ile doe.
2. He gue thee a Windre.
3. Th'art kinde.
3. And I another.
1. I my selfe have all the other,
And the very Ports they blow,
All the Quarters that they know,
I' th' ship-mans Card.
Ile dreynke him driye as Hay:
Sleepes small yether Night nor Day
Hang upon his Pent-house Lid:
He shall liue a man forbad;
Weare Seiuingnts,nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle,peake, and pine:
Though his Bacte cannot be loft,
Yet it shall be Tempelt-will.
Looke what I haue.
2. Shew me, shew me.
1. Here I have a Points Thumbe,
Wrack, as homeward he did come.
Drammon.
3. A Drumme, a Drumme:
Macbeth death come.
All. The weyward Sibirs, hand in hand,
Peeters of the Sea and Land,
Thus doe goe, about, about,
Thrice to shine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice againe, to make vp nine,
Peace, the Charme's wound vp.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So soule and faire a day I haue not seen.
Banoò. How farre is't call'd to Soria? What are these,
So wither'd, and so wilde in their attyre,
That looke not like th'inhabitants o'th Earth,
And yet are one? Live you, or are you aught
That man may question? you seeme to understand me,
Eyet it once her choppie finger laying
Upon her skinnie Lippe: you should be Women,
And yet your Beards forbid me to interprette
That you are so.

Macb. Speakke if you can: what are you?
3. All hail Macbeth, hail to thee Thane of Glamis.
2. All hail Macbeth, hail to thee Thane of Cawdor.
2. All hail Macbeth, that shall be King hereafter...
'Bang, Good Sir, why do you flatter, and seeme to fear
Things that doe sound to faire? I' th name of truth
Are ye faint-heart, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye speake? My Noble Partner
You greet with present Grace, and great prediction
Of Noble having, and of Royal happye,
That he fenes wraps withall: to me you speake not.
If you can looke into the Seedes of Time,
And say, which Graine will grow, and which will not,
Speake then to me, who other begge,not fear
Your favour, nor your hate.

1. Hayle.
2. Hayle.
3. Hayle.
3. Not so happy, yet much happye.
3. Thou shalt get Kings, though thou be none:
So all hail Macbeth, and Banquo.
1. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail.
Macb. Stay you impatient Speakers, tell me more:
By Smells death, I know I am Thane of Glamis,
But how, of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor flues
A propuer Gentleman: And to be King,
Stands not within the prospect of belles,
No more then to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this strange Intelligence, or why
Upon this blasted Heath you stop our way
With such Prophetlike greeting.

Speake, I charge you.
Witches answer.
Banq. The Earth hath bubbles, as the Water ha's,
And these are of them: whither are they vanil'd?
Macb. Into the Ayre: and what scene'd corporall,
Melted, as breath into the Windre.
Would they had stay'd.
Banq. Were such things here, as we doe speake about?
Or hauing we eaten on the inffame Root,
That takes the Reaen Prisoner?
Macb. Your Children shall be Kings.
Banq. You shall be King.
Macb. And Thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?
Banq. Toth'false-same tune, and words, who's here?

Enter Reffe and Angus.

Reffe. The King hath happily receiv'd Macbeth,
The news of thy success; and when he teades
Thy pernall Venture in the Rebels fight,
His Wonders and his Prayse doe contend,
Which should be thine,or his: send'd with that,
In viewing o're the left o'th'false-same day,
He finde thee in the stout Norweyan Ranks,
Nothing stead of what thy selfe did make
Strange Images of death, as thick as Tale
Can posse with posse, and every one did bear
Thy prayses in his Kingdomes great defence,
And pow'r'd them downe before him.
Aung. We are sent,
To guise thee from our Royal Master thanks,
Onely to harrold thee into his fight,
Not pay thee.
Reffe. And for an earneft of a greater Honor,
He bad me, from him, call the Thane of Cawdor:
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

In which addition, hate most worthy Than,
For it is thine.

Bang. What can the Deuill speake true?

Macb. The Thame of Cawdor lies:
Why do you dresse me in borrowed Robes?

Ang. Who was the Thame, lies yet,
But under heauie judgement beares that Life,
Which he deteues too loofe.

Whether he was combind with those of Norway,
Or did lyne the Rebell with hidden helpe,
And ventge 1 or that with he labourd
In his Countreyes wracke, I know not:
But Treasons Capitall, confeds’d, and prou’d,
Hate ouerthrowne him.

Macb. Glamys, and Thace of Cawdor:
The grettest is behinde. Thanks for your paines,
Don you not hope your Children shall be Kings,
When those that gave the Thame of Cawdor some,
Thace his life to them.

Bang. That trusted none,
Might yet enkinde you into the Crowne,
Besides the Thame of Cawdor, but its strange:
And ofentimes, to winne vs to our haine,
The Instruments of Darknesse tell vs Truths,
Winn’s with honest Trifles, to betray’s
In dearefull consequence.

Confus, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two Trifles are told,
As happy Prologue’s to the swelling Act
Of the Imperial Thame. I thank you Gentlemen:
This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.

If ill, why hath it guen me carefull of successe,
Commencing in a Truth? I am Thame of Cawdor.
If good, why do I yeeld to that suggestion,
Whose horrid Image doth vnhke my Hear.
And make my feared Horrour knock at my Ribbes,
Against the vie of Nature? Present Fears
Are leafe then horrible Imaginings:
My Thought, whose Morther yet but fantasically,
Shakes to my single State of Man,
That Function is ’mother’d in surmise,
And nothing is, but what is not.

Bang. Look how our Partner’s rapt.

Macb. If Chance may have me King,
Why Chance may Crowne me,
Without my futre.

Bang. New Honor’s come vpon him
Like our strange Garments, clese not to their mould,
But with the aid of vide.

Macb. Come what come may,
Time, and the House, run through the roughest Day.
Bang. Worthy Macbeth, wee saye upon your ley-
ture.

Macb. Give me your favour:
My dull Braine was wronght with things forgotten.
Kinde Gentlemen, your paines are registred,
Where every day I turne the Leaf,
To reade them.

Let vs toward the King: thineke vpon
What hath chanc’d, and at more time,
The Interim having weigh’d it, let vs speake
Our free Hearts to each other.

Bang. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then enough:
Come friends.

Scena Quarta.

Flourish. Enter King, Lenox, Malcolm,
Dounblaine, and Attendants.

King. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Or are those in Commission yet return’d?

Ang. My Liege, they are not yet come back.
But I have spoke with one that saw him die:
Who did report, that very frankly he destroy’d his Treasons, implor’d your Highness Pardon,
And set forth a deep Remonstrance:
Nothing in his Life became him,
Like the leaning it. Hee dy’d:
As one that had beene studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow’d,
As ’were a carelesse Trifle.

King. There’s no Art,
To finde the Minder construction in the Face.
He was a Gentleman, on whom I built
An absolute Trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.
O worthy Co. the King.
The finnes of my Ingratitude even now
Was heare on me. Thou art so farre before,
That twiceth Wing of Reconcempse is low.
To ouertake thee. Woul’d thou hast its ife defau’d,
That the proportion both of thanks, and payment,
Might have beene mine; surely I haue left to say,
More is thy due, than more then all can pay,

Macb. The feruce, and the loyalite love,
In doing it, payes it selfe.
Your Highness part, is to receive our Duties:
And our Duties are to your Throne, and State,
Children, and Servants; which doe but what they should,
By doing every thing safe toward your Lone
And Honor.

King. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That haft not lefte defau’d, nor must be knowne
No leafe to have done so: Let me entold thee,
And hold thee to my Heart.

Bang. There if I grow,
The Harneft is your owne.

King. My penteous Joys,
Wannet in fullene, seek to hide themseles
In drops of sorrow. Sonnes, Kinfinds, thanes,
And you whose place are the nearest, know,
We will establishe our Eftate vpon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter,
The Prince of Cumberland; which Honor muft
Not vnaacompanied, vneckt him emely,
Yet figures of Noblenesse, like Stars, shall shine
On all Accomplisht: From hence to Enveres,
And binde vs further to you.

Macb. The Reis is Labor, which is not vned for you:
Ile be my Self the Herberger, and make joyfull
The hearing of my Wife, with you approacth:
So handly take my leave.

King. My worthy Cawdor.

Macb. The Prince of Cadberland, that is a Rep.
On which I must fall downe, or els direuage;
Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth's wife alone with a Letter.

Lady. They met me in the way of successe: and I have learn'd by the perfect report, they have more in them, than mortal knowledge. When I burn'm in desire to question them further, they made themselves away, not where they came. Is it not the clock?

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glares, worthy Cawdor.

Macb. My dear Calfe, Loue,

Duncan comes here to Night.

Lady. And when goes hence?

Macb. To morrow, as he purposeth.

Lady. O newer,

Shall Sunne that Morrow see,

Your Face, my Thane, is as a Booke, where men May read strange matters, to beguile the time.

Looks like the time, beare welcome in your Eye,

Your Hand, your Tongue looks like th'innocent flowers,

But be the Serpent under it. He's that comming,

Must be provided for: and you shall put

This Nights great Buteffee into my dispatch,

Which shall to all our Nights, and Days to come,

Give loyely fourestag enwy, and Masterdome.

Macb. We will speake further,

Lady. Oney looke up clear:

To alter frust, euer is to face:

Leave all the rest to me.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Holger, and Torchet. Enter King, Malcolm,

Duncan, Banquo, Lenox, Mactuff,

Rafe, Angus, and Ascendants.

King. This Castle hath a pleasant seat,

The syre nimibly and sweetly recommends its selfe

Vnto our gentle fences.

Torchet. This Guest of Summer,

The Temple-baunting Baitet does approue,

By his louds Maisonty, that the Heaven's breath

Smells wooringly here: no lusty fiery,

Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantage, but this Bird

Hath made his pendat Bed, and procerus Cradle,

Where they must breed, and haunt: I have obserued

The syre is delicate.

Enter Lady,

King. See, see our honord Hostess:

The Lute that followes vs, sometimse is our trouble,

Which still we thankes vs Loue. Herein I teach you,

How you shall bid God-eyd vs for your paines,

And thankes vs for your trouble.

Lady. All our servise,

In every point twice done, and then done double,

Were puste, and single Buteffee to content

Against these Honors deep and broad,

Wherewith your Majestie loads out House:

For those of old, and the late Dignities,

Heap'd vp to them, we ref your Ermittes.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

King. Where's the Thane of Cawdor? We court him at the heels, and had a purpose To be his Parterye: But he rides well, And his great Loue (that is as his Spurre) hath holpe him To his home before vs: Fairse and Noble Holifee We are your gent to night, La. Your Seyants ever, Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs in compe, To make their Audit at your Highness pleasure, Still to returne your owne. King. Give me your hands: Conduct me to mine Hoft we love him highly, And shall continue, our Graces towards him, By your heste Holifee. Exeunt

Scena Septima.

His-hyres. Torchets. Enter a Seruer, and divers Servantes moles, Dippers and Seruantes over the Stage. They enter. Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well, It was done quickly: It's the Hill's Afflication Could stemell vp the Confession, and catch With his furcace, Successe: but this blow Might be the be all, and the end all. Here, But here, upon this Banker and Schoole of time, We'd unpe the life to come. But in these Caves, We will have judgement here, that we but teach Blindly Injunctions, which being taught, returne To plague th'Inuentur. This earth-haunded Justice Commend's th'Ingredience of our poyson'd Challice To our owne lips, He's here in double trut, First, as I am his Kinsman, and his Subject, Strong both against the Deed: Then, as his Hoof, Who should aignant his Motherer flut the doore, Not bear the knife my selfe, Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his Faculties to meeke; hath bin So eere in his great Office, that his Vertues Will pleade like Angels. Trumpet-congu'd against The depe damnation of his taking off: And Pitty, like a naked New-born-Babe, Striding the blafs, or Heavens Cherubin, hor'd Upon the sightfull Carriers of the Ayre, Shall blow the hor, dee'd in every one, That cares shall drowne the winde. I have no Spurre To pricke the sides of my intent, but onely Vaulting Ambition, which ore-leapes it selfe, And falls on th'other, Enter Lady. How now? What News? La. He has almoost fipt: why have you left the chamber? Mac. Hath he ask'd for me? La. Know you not, he's? Mac. We will proceed no further in this Business: He hath Honour'd me of late, and I have bought Golden Opinions from all sorts of people, Which would be worse now in their newest glose, Not caft aside so soon. La. Was the hope drunke, Wherein you drest your heart? Hath it lepton since? And wakes it now to looke fo green, and pale, At what it did fo freely? From this time, Such an account thy love. Art thou assur'd To be the fame in thine owne Ach, and Valour, As thou art in defire? Would't thou have that Which thou euest at the Ornament of Life, And liue a Coward in thine owne Endeeme? Letting I dare not, wait upon I would, Like the poore Cat in't Addage, Macb. Prythee peace: I dare do all that may become a man, Who dares no more, is none. La. What Bealt was't then That made you break this Enterprize to me? When you durr'd do it, then you were a man: And to be more then what you were, you Would be to much more the man. Not time, not place Did then adhere, and yet you would make both: They haue made themselves, and that their finelle now Do's wannake you. I haue green Sucke, and know How tender 'his to love the Babe that mielkes me, I would, while it was Iying in my Face, Have pluckt my Nipple from his Bonelle Gummies, And dafht the Brains out, had I so swore As you haue done to this. Macb. If we should fail? Lady. We fail? But rear your courage to the ficking place, And we'lle not foyle: when Duncan is asleep, (Whereto the rather shall his dydes hard Journey Soundly incite him) his two Chambers laines Will I with Wine, and Waife, to conuince, That Memorie, the Warder of the Braine, Shall be a Tune, and the Reciet of Reason A Lymebeck onlye: when in Swinsh sleephe; Their drenched Natures lyes in a Death, What cannot you and I perfome upon This unguarded Duncan? What not put upon His ignipgne Officers? who shall bear the guilt Of our great quell. Macb. Bring forth Men-Children onely: For thy vaunted Merle should compose Nothing but Males. Will it not be receiv'd, When we have mark'd with blood those sleepie two Of his owne Chamber, and vs'd their very Daggers, That they have don't? Lady. Who dares receive it other? As we shall make our Griefes and Clamor tore, Vpon his Death? Macb. I am distrest, and bend vp Each corporall Agent to this recevable Fear, A way, and mock the time with fairest show, Falte Facenault hide what the falfe Heart doth know. Exeunt

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Banque, and Fleance, with a Torch before him. Ban. How goes the Night, Boy? Fleance. The Moone is downe: I haue not heard the Clock. Ban. And she goes downe at Twelve. Fleance. I take't, it's later, Sir. Ban. Hold, take my Sword; There's Husbandsry in Heauen, Their Candles are all oue: take thee that too. min 2

I. vi. 20—II. i. 5

748
Enter Macbeth, and a Sermon with a Torch.

Give me my Sword: who's there?

Macb. A Friend.

Banq. What Sir, not yet at rest? the King's a bed.

He hath beene in vnusual Pleasure,
And sent forth great Largesse to your Offices,
This Diamond he grettes your Wife withall,
By the name of most kind Holfellse,
And that vp in inaccessible content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defea,
Which else should free hause wroght.

Banq. All's well.

I dreamt last Night of the three veyward Sifters:
To you they haue shew'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:

You can not invent an hour to freue,
We would spend it in some words upon that Buisenelle,
If you would grant the time.

Banq. At your kind'st leasure.

Macb. If you shall cluse to my content,
When 'tis, it shall make Honor for you.

Banq. So I vlofe none,

In seeking to augment it, but still keepe
My Botome fraunch'd, and Allegrance cleare,
I shall be counsayld.

Macb. Good repose the while.

Banq. Thanks Sir: the like to you. Exit Banquo.

Macb. Goe bid thy Mistrefle, when my drinkes is ready,
She strike vp vnpon the Bell. Get thee to bed. Exit.

Is this a Dagger which I see before me,
The Handie toward my Hand? Comme, let me clush thee.
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Arts thou not faltall Vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A Dagger of the Mind, a false Creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppresst Braine?

I see thee yet, in forme as palpable,
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'lt me the way that I was going,
And such an Instrument I was to vse.

Mine Eyes are made the Goole's o'th'other Senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;

And on thy Blade, and Durgdon, Gouts of Blood,
Which was not so before. There's no tuch thing:

It is the bloody Balnifelse, which informes
Thus to mine Eyes. Now o't the one halfe World
Nature feemes dead, and wicked Dreames abuse
The Curtain'd Sleepe: Witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecate Offerings: and with'ther Murther,
Altru'd by his Centennell, the Wolfe,
Whole howle's his Watch, thus with his fleshly pace,
With Tartuous tantalizing sides, towards his diuine
Motes like a Ghost. Thou howeare and hame-set Earth
Hearse not my steps, which they may walke, yet fear,
Thy very fumes prate of my where-about,
And take the greeneest tother from the time,
Which now issueth with it. Whiles I threat, he lutes:
Words to the heat of deeders too cold breath giues.

A Bell rings.

Scene Secunda.

Enter Lady.

La. That which hath made the drunk, hath made me bold;
What hath quench'd them, hath giuen me fire.

Hearke; peace it was the Owle that thriek'd,
The fastall Bell-man, which giues the item't good-night,
He is about it, the Doores are open:
And the surfeited Grommes doe mack their charge
With Snores. I have drugg'd their Polettes,
That Death and Nature doe contend about them,
Whether they lie, or dye.

Exit Macbeth.

Macb. Who's there? what hast thou?

Lady. Alack, I am afraid they have awak'd,
And his not done with attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds vs: hearke! I lay'd their Daggers ready,
He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled
My Father as he slept, I had don't.

My Husband?

Macb. I have done the deed:
Didst thou not heare a noyse?

Lady. I heard the Owle schreame, and the Cricket cry.
Did not you speake?

Macb. When?

Lady. Now.

Macb. As I defended?

Lady. I.

Macb. Hearke, who lyes in the second Chamber?

Lady. Donabane.

Macb. This is a forry fight.

Lady. A foule thick thought, to say a forry fight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleepe,

And one cry'd Murther, that they did wake each other:
I finad, and heard them: But they did say their Prayers,
And adiref them againe to sleepe.

Lady. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cry'd God biffes vs, and Amen the other,
As they had teene me with these Hangmans hands:
Lifffing their fearse, I could not say Amen,
When they did say God biffes vs.

Lady. Consider it not to deepe layer.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounc Amen?

I had most need of Blifling, and Amen fluck in my throat.

La. These deeds must not be Blifling.

After these ways: to, it will make vs mad.

Macb. Me thought I heard a voyce cry, Sleep no more:

Macb. Sleep, the innocent Sleepe,
Sleepe that knits vp the taweful Sireue of Care,

The death of each dayes Life,fore Labors Bath,
Blame of hurt Minde, great Natures second Courte,
Chief enjoyment in Life's Peaft.

Lady. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cry'd, Sleepe no more to all to the House:

Macb. Shall Sleepe no more: Macbeth shall sleepe no more.

Lady. Who was it, that thus cry'd? Why worthy Thores,
You doe vnbend your Noble freeth, to thinke
So brave-likly of things. Goe get some Water,
Enter Macduff, and Lenox.

Macb. Was't in late, friend, ere you went to Bed, That you did lye so late?

Port. Faith Sir, we were carousing till the second Cock: And Drink, Sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macb. What three things doth Drink provoker of?

Lecherie, Sir, it provokes, and vapours: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drink may be said to be an Equivoocator with Lecherie; it makes him, and it mutes him; it lets him on, and it takes him off: it persuades him, and dis-heartens him; makes him fland, and not stand too: in conclusion, equivoicates him in a sleepe, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.

Macb. I believe, Drink eke thee the Lye last Night. Port. That did, Sir, the very Throes on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and (I think) being too strong for him, he rode vp my Legges sometyme, yet, I made a Shift to call him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. Is thy Master fasting? Our knocking has awak'd him: here he comes.

Lenox. Good morrow, Noble Sir.

Macb. Good morrow both.

Macb. Is the King retiring worthy Than? Not yet.

Macb. He did command me to call timely on him, I have almost dipp'd the house.

Macb. I bring you to him.

Macb. I know this is a joiefull trouble to you: But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in, Playsicks pains: This is the Doone.

Macb. I make so bold as to call, for tis my limited service.

Enter Macduff.

Lenox. Goes the King hence to day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint so.

Lenox. The Night has been veruly: Where we lie, our Chimneys were blowne downe, And (as they say) lamentings heard ib'th'Ayre; Strange Schreemes of Death, And Pophecying, with Accents terrible, Of dyre Combustion, and confud's Events, New hatch'd toth' woful time.

The obicise Bird clamar'd the late-long Night, Some say, the Earth was feruous, And did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough Night.

Lenox. My young remembrance cannot paralle A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.

Macb. O horror, horror, horror, Tongue nor Heart cannot conceive, nor name thee.

Macb. and Lenox. What's the matter?

Macb. Confusion now hath made his Master-peece: Mort sacrilegious Murther hath broke ope The Lords anonyted Temple, and stole thence The Life o' th' Building.

Macb. What is't you say, the Life?

Lenox. Mean you this Macduff?

Macb. Approch the Chamber, and destroy your fight

With a new Gorgon, Does not bid me speake:

Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed: if a man were Porter of Hell Gate, he should have old turning the Key. Knock, Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there? he's name of Selkirk? Here's a Farmer, that hang'd himselfe on the expectation of Plentie: Come in time, have Napkins enow about you, here you'll sweat for't. Knock, Knock, knock, Knock. Who's there in th'other Devils Name? Faith here's an Equivoocator, that can fellare in both the Scales against either Scale, who committs Treafon enough for Gods sake, yet could not equivocate to Heaven: oh come in, Equivoocator. Knock, Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there? Faith here's an English Taylor come hither, for freeling out of a French Hove: Come in Taylor, here you may roff your Goose. Knock, Knock, Knock. Never as quiet: What are you? but this place is too cold for Hell. He Devils Porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all Professions, that goe the Primitive way to the everlasting Bonfire. Knock, Knock, Knock, Knock. Anon anon, I pray you remember the Porter.

Enter Macduff, and Lenox.

Macb. Was't in late, friend, ere you went to Bed, That you did lie so late?

Port. Faith Sir, we were carousing till the second Cock: And Drink, Sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macb. What three things doth Drink especially provoke?

Lecherie, Sir, it provokes, and vapours: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drink may be said to be an Equivoocator with Lecherie: it makes him, and it mutes him: it lets him on, and it takes him off: it persuades him, and dis-heartens him: makes him stand, and not stand too: in conclusion, equivoicates him in a sleepe, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.

Macb. I believe, Drink eke thee the Lye last Night. Port. That did, Sir, the very Throes on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and (I think) being too strong for him, he rode up my Legges sometyme, yet, I made a Shift to call him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. Is thy Master fasting? Our knocking has awak'd him: here he comes.

Lenox. Good morrow, Noble Sir.

Macb. Good morrow both.

Macb. Is the King retiring worthy Than? Not yet.

Macb. He did command me to call timely on him, I have almost dipp'd the house.

Macb. I bring you to him.

Macb. I know this is a joyful full trouble to you: But yet 'tis one.

Macb. The labour we delight in, Playsicks pains: This is the Doone.

Macb. I make so bold as to call, for 'tis my limited service.

Enter Macduff.

Lenox. Goes the King hence to day?

Macb. He does: he did appoint so.

Lenox. The Night has been veruly: Where we lie, our Chimneys were blowne downe, And (as they say) lamentings heard ib'th'Ayre; Strange Schreemes of Death, And Pophecying, with Accents terrible, Of dyre Combustion, and confused Events, New hatch'd toth' woful time.

The obicise Bird clamar'd the late-long Night, Some say, the Earth was feruous, And did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough Night.

Lenox. My young remembrance cannot paralle A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.

Macb. O horror, horror, horror, Tongue nor Heart cannot conceive, nor name thee.

Macb. and Lenox. What's the matter?

Macb. Confusion now hath made his Master-piece: Mort sacrilegious Murther hath broke ope The Lords anonyted Temple, and stole thence The Life o' th' Building.

Macb. What is't you say, the Life?

Lenox. Mean you this Macduff?

Macb. Approch the Chamber, and destroy your fight

With a new Gorgon, Does not bid me speake:
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

See, and then speake your selues: awake, awake,
Except Macbeth and Lenox.
Ring the Alarum Bell: Morther, and Treason,
Banquo, and Dunsheid: Make me awake,
Shake off this Downey slepe, Deaths counterfeit,
And look on Death it seeth: vvp, vvp, and fee.
The great Dounnes Image: Make me awake, Banquo,
As from your Graves rise vp, and walke like Sprights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell,
Bell rings. Enter Lady.

Lady. What's this Dunsheid?
That such a hideous Trumpeter calls to parle
The sleepers of the House? speake, speake.

Macb. O gentle Lady,
Tis not for you to hear what I can speake:
The repetition in a Womans eare,
Would murder us as it fell.

Enter Lenox, Banquo, Our Royall Masters murther'd.

Lady. O, we, alas:
What, in our House?
Ban. Too cruelly, any where.
Deare Duff, I prittyee contradict tiny selfe,
And say, it is not so.

Enter Macbeth, Lenox, and Riff.

Macb. Had I but dy'd an hour before this chance,
I had hy'd a blessed time: so from this instant,
There's nothing serious in Mortalitie:
All is but Toyes: Renowne and Grace is dead,
The Wine of Life is drawne, and the more Lees
Is left this Vat, to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Dunsheid.

Duns. What is smittt?

Macb. You are, and do not know:
The Spring, the Head, the Fountaines of your Blood
Is stopp'd, the very Source of it is stopp'd.

Macb. Your Royall Father's murther'd;

Lady. O by whom?

Lenox. Thofe of his Chamber, as it seem'd, had don't:
Their Hands and Faces were all bloodg'd with blood,
So were their Daggers, which vnwip'd, we found
Upon their Pillowes: they stand'd, and were disdain'd,
No mans Life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O yet I doe repent me of my furie,
That I did kill them.

Lady. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, tempest, & furious,
Loyal, and Neutral, in a moment? No man:
Th' expedition of my violent Loute
Out-turn the pawner, Reafon. Here by Duncan,
His Silver shiny, lade'd with his Golden Blood,
And his gaff'd Stabes, look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Ruines wastfull entrance: there the Murderers,
Greed'd in the Colours of their Trade; their Daggers
Uncommonly bleeched with gore; who could restrain
That had a heart to lour; and in that heart,
Courage, to make'ss loose knowne?

Lady. Help me hence, ban.

Macb. Loose to the Lady.

Macb. Why do we hold our tongues,
That most may chyme this argument for ours?

Duns. What should be spoken here,
Where our Fate hid in an augure hole,
May rush, and seene vs? Let's away,
Our Taxes are not yet brew'd.

Mel. No, nor our stronge Sorrow
Upon the foot of Motion.

Lenox. Looke to the Lady:
And when we have our naked Failities hid,
That suffer in Exposure: let vs mee,
And question this mort bloody piece of worke,
To know it further: Fearers and Ipacleps shake vs:
In the great Hand of God I stand, and thence,
Against the vindrul'd pretence, I fight.
Of Treasonous Mallice.

Macb. And so doe I,
All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And mee the Hall together.

All. Well contented.

Macb. What will you doe?
Let's not conform with them:
To shew an unfeit Sorrow, is an Office
Which the faile mans do's caffe.
To England.

All. To Ireland, I:

Our seperated fortune shall keepe us both the safer:
Where we are, there's Daggers in mens Smiles;
The neere in blood, the nearer blood.

Macb. This motherous Shaft that's fluer,
Hath not yet lightside, and our selfs way,
Is to avoid the syne. Therefore to Horfe,
And let vs not be dainty of leave-taking,
But fly away: there's a warrant in that Theft,
Which indic's its selfe, when there's no mercie left.

Enter.

Scene Quarta.

Enter Riff, with an Old man.

Old man. Three score and ten I can remember well,
Within the Volume of which Time, I have seen
Hours dreafaul, and things strange; but this fore Night
Hath tir'd former knowings.

Riff. Ha, good Father,
Those seem the Heavenly, as toucht with mans Aft,
That threaten our bloody Stage; by this Clock 'tis Day,
And yet darkes Night straies, lest the traunding Lampes
Let's Nights pretencione, or the Days Shane,
That Darkefle does the face of Earth intombes,
When living Light should kilfe it.

Old man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed theses done: On Tuesday last,
A Faucon courting in her pride of place,
Was by a Mowing Owle hawk'd at, and kill'd.

Riff. And Duncan Hues.

(A thing most strange, and certaine)
Beautecous, and sure, the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wilde in nature, broke their fells, flung out,
Contending 'gainst Obedience, as they would Make Warre with Mankind.

Old man. 'Tis fast, they cut each other.

Riff. They did so:
To themazement of mine eyes that look'd ypon't.

Enter Macduff.

Here comes the good Macduff.

How goes the world Sir, now?

Macb. Why say you not?

Ross. It's known who did this more then bloody deed?

Macb. Tho' that Macbeth hath slice.

Ross. Alas the day,

What good could they pretend?

Macb. They were inbrowned,

Macdufe, and Donalbaine the Kings two Sons

Are stone away and fled, which puts upon them

Substitution of the deed,

Ross. 'Gainst Nature still,

Thistlelike Ambition, that will raen vp

Thine owne lives meanes: Then 'tis most like,

The Sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macb. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone

To be infefted.

Ross. Where is Duncan body?

Macb. Carried to Colmekill,

The Sacred Stone-houte of his Predecessors,

And Guardian of their Bones.

Ross. Will you to Scone?

Macb. No Coffin, Ile to Fire.

Ross. Well, I will thither.

Macb. Will may you see things well done there:

Adieu. Leave our old Robes six eather then our new.

Ross. Farewell, Father.
Old M. Gods heny go with you, and with those

That would make good of bad, and Friends of Foes.

Exit come.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Know, that it was lie, in the times past,
Which held you fo under fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent selfs,
That now I made good to you, in our last conference,
Past in probation with you:
How you were borne in hand, how croft:
The Instruments: who wrought with them:
And all things else, that might
To halfe a Soule, and to a Notion craz'd:-- Say, Thus did Banquo,
1. Macb. You made it knowne to vs.
Macb. I did so:
And went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting.

Do you finde your patience so predominant,
In your nature, that you can let this goe?
Are you so Godpelf'd, to pray for this good man,
And for hisrique, whose humane hand
Hath bown'd you to the Graue, and begg'dd
Yours for ever?
1. Macb. We are men, my Liege,
Macb. In the Catalogue ye goe for men,
As Hounds, and G'es'hounds, Mungrrels, Spaniels,Cures,
Showghers, Water, Rugs, and Demy-Wolves are clipt
All by the Name of Dogs: the valued file
Distinguiheth the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The populous-keeper, the Hunter, every one
According to the gift, which bounteous Nature
Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the Bill,
That writes them all alike: and fo of men.
Now, if you have a faction in the file,
Not 'tis worst rank of Manhood, say't,
And I will put that Buinefle in your Bufomes,
Whose execution takes your Enemie off,
Grapples you to the heart, and loue of vs,
Who weare our Health but fickly in his Life,
Which in his Death were perfec.
2. Macb. I am one, my Liege,
Whom the vyle Blowes and Buffets of the World
Hath fo incens'd, that I am reckelesse what I doe,
To fipght the World.
1. Macb. And as much as,
So weare with Diffafters, rigg'd with Fortune,
This I would fett my Life on any Chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.
Macb. Both of you know Banquo was your Enemie.
Macb. True, my Lord.
Macb. So is he mine: and in fuch bloody distance,
That every minute of his being, thrills
Against my neer'd of Life: and though I could
With bare feet'd power fweepe him from my flight,
And bid my will auoicht it yet I must not,
For certaine friends that are both his, and mine,
Whose loues I may not drop, but waple his fall,
Whoe my felfe fluck downe: and thence it is,
That I to your affiance doe make loue,
Marking the Buinefle from the common Eye,
For fumdry weightie Reasons.
2. Macb. We shall, my Lord,
What you command vs.
1. Macb. Though our Lives--
Macb. Your Spirituall flame through you,
Within this hour, at mott,
I will aduife you where to plant your pelfes,
Acquaint you with the perfeft Spy o'th'time,
The moment on't, fo't must be done to Night,
And someting from the Palaces: alyways thought,
That I require a clearefscfie, and with him,
To leave no Ruhs nor Botches in the Worke:
F.SELECT, his Sonne, that keeps him company,
Whose abience is no leffe materiall to me,
Then is his Fathers, must embrace the fare
Of that darke hour: reloue your felves apart,
He come to you anon.

Macb. We are resolu'd, my Lord,
Macb. Ile call upon you straightly: abide within,
It is concluded: Banquo, thy Soules flight,
If it finde Heauen, must finde it out to Night. Exeunt.

---

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macbeths Lady, and a Servant.

Lady. Is Banquo gone from Court?
Servant. 1. Madame, but returns againe to Night.
Lady. Say to the King, I would attend his letyure,
For a few words.
Servant. Madame, I will.
Exit.

Lady. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our defire is got without content:
'Tis safer, to be that which we defrving,
Then by deftruction dwell in doublifult joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my Lord, why do you kepe alone?
Of fortyfeth Fancies your Companions making;
Wring fuch Thoughts, which should indeed haue dy'd
With them they thynke on: things without all remedie
Should be without regarding: what's done, is done,
Macb. We haue fcorch'd the Snake, nor kill'd it:
Shue'te clofe, and be her felfe, whilefle our poore Mallice
Remaines in danger of her former Toothe,
But let the frame of things dif-faty,
Both the Worlds fofter,
Ere we can rate our Meatle in fraie, and ftepe
In the afillation of thefe terrible Dreames,
That fmake vs Nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gynaue our peace, hauent feene to peace,
Then on the torture of the Minde to lye
In retfelte extrafe.

Duncan is in his Graue.

After Lives fitfull Feuer, he fleeps well,
Trea'ton ha's done his work, nor Steele, nor Payfon,
Mallice done: que, foraine Leuite, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady. Come on:
Gentle my Lord, sleeke o're your rugged Lookes,
Be bright and louiall among your Guests to Night.

Serv. So shall I Lave, and fo I pray you be:
Let your remembrance appeale to Banquo,
Prefent him Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
We fafe the while, that we re must lave
Our Honors in thefe flattering Dreames,
And make our Faces Vizard to our Hearts,
Disguifing what they are.

Lady. You must issue this.

Macb. O,full of Scorpions is my Minde,deare Wife:
 Thou know if, that Banquo and his Euerloues.

Lady. But Scene Tertia.

Enter three Marsters.

1. But who did bid thee sojourn with us?
2. Macbeth.
3. He needeth not our mistrust, since he delivers our Offices, and what we have to do, to the direction just.

1. Then hand with vs.
2. These are not the Weits, which I promised to arrive with.
3. They are late Travellers, that we have met with.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, with a Torch.

1. A Light, a Light.
2. Tis he.

Ban. This is a Horse.
Ban. O, Treacherie!
Flye good Fleance, flye, flye, flye.
Thou mayst retrench, O Slave!
3. Who did strike out the Light?
4. Was't not the way?
5. The Sonne is fled.
6. We have lost.

Exeunt.

Macbeth. You know your owne degrees, sit downe:
There's left the hearty welcome.
Ban. Thankes to your Majestie.
Macbeth. Our tels will mingle with Society,
And on the humble Altar:
Our Holffeske keeps her State, but in that time
We will require her welcome.

La. Pronounce it for me Sir, to all our Friends,
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Enter first Macbeth.

Macbeth. See they encounter thee with their harts thanks
Both sides are even: here lie flit'th mid'flf,
Belarge in mirth, anon we'll drink a Measure
The Table round. There's blood upon thy face.

Mrs. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macbeth. 'Tis better thee without, then he within.
Is he dress'd?
Mrs. My Lord his threat is o'th' Court,
Macbeth. Thou art the best of th'Cut-throats,
Yet he's good that did the like for Fleace.
If thou didst it, thou art the Non-parell.

Mrs. Most Royall Sir.
Fleace is scap'd.

Macbeth. Then comes my Fit againe:
I had else beene perfect;
Whole as the Marble, founded as the Rocke,
As broad, and general, as the chang'g Ayre:
But now I am cabined, confined, bound in
To favour doubts, and feates.
Banquo's safe?
Mrs. I, my good Lord: safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trench'd gaffes on his head;
The least a Death to Nature.

Macbeth. Thankes for that:
There the groome Serpent lies, the worme that's fled
Hath Nature that in time will Venom breed,
No teeth for th'premre.
But when we're gone to morrow
We'll hear our elses again.

Exit Murderer.

Lady. My Royall Lord,
You do not giue the Cheere, the Feast is fold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making:
'Tis guen, with welcome: to feede were bell at home:
From thence, the savce to meate is Ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it.

Enter the Glove of Banquo, and sit in Macbeths place.

Macbeth. Sweet Remembrancer,
Now good digestion wait on Appetite,
And health on both.

Lenox. May't please your Highness se.
Macbeth. Here had we now our Countries Honor,roofd,
Were the grace 'd person of our Banquo present:
Who, may I rather challenge for vnkindneff,
Then pittry for Mischance.

Reff. His absence (Sir)
Layes blame vpon his promife. Plead your Highneff
To grace vs with your Royall Company?
Macb. The Table's full.
Len. Here's a place refer'd Sir,
Macb. Where?
Len. Here's your good Lord.

What is't that moves your Highness now?
Macb. Which of you have done this?
Len. What, my good Lord?
Macb. Thou canst not say I did: never brake
Thy gossip locks at me.

Ruff. Gentlemen rise, his Highness is not well.

Lady. Sir worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus,
And hath become from his youth. Pray you keep Seat,
The first is momentary, upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his Passion;
Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?

Macb. I, and a bold one, that dare looke on that
Which might appall the Diuell.

La. O proper suffle:

This is the very painting of your fear:
This is the Ayre-drawne-Dagger which you faid Led you to Duncan. O, these false and flares (Imposers to true fear) would well become
A womans story, at a Wivers fire
Authoriz'd by her Grandam's false felie,
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You look'd but on a flooile.

Macb. Prythee see there,
Behold, looke, looke, how you fay;
Why what care I, if thou canst not, fpeak too.
If Charnell houfes, and our Graves muft fend
Those that we bury, backe: our Monuments
Shall be the Maves of Kytes.

Macb. If I stand heere, I faw him.

La. Ficior frame.

Macb. Blood hath bene fired ere now, 'tis olden time
Ere humane Statute purg'd the gentle Wesel:
I, and ifce, Murtheres have bene perform'd
Too terrible for the care. The times has bene,
That when the Braine was catt, the man would dye,
And there an end: But now they rise againe
With twenty morbill murtherers on their crowns;
And push vs from our flooiles. This is more strange
Then fuch a murther is.

La. My worthy Lord
Your Noble Friends do lacke you.

Macb. I do forget:
Do not name me my moft worthy Friends,
I have a strange infirmity, that is nothing
To tho'fe that know me. Come, Joue and health to all,
Then let it downe: Give me some Wine, fill full:
Enter Cluff.

I drink to the generall joy of the whole Table,
And to our dear Lord: I send Dunsge, whom we mince,
Would he were here: to all, and him we threfh,
And all to all.

La. Our dute, and the pledge.

Macb. Amust, & quaff my finge: by the earth hide thee;
Those bones are marble: but thy blood is cold:
Thou had no speculation in thofe eyes
Which thou didst glare with.

La. Thinks of this good Cluff?

But the thing of Cuffome: To no other,
One in the pale of the day of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Ruflian Bear,
The arm'd Rhinoceros, or the Hircan Tiger,
Take any fhape but that, and my firne Nereus
Shall never tremble. Or be alie again,
And dare me to the Defart with thys Sword:
If trembling I inhabit then, protrct me
The Baby of a Girl. Hence horifible shadow,
You mock by heroifme. Why fo, being gone:
I am a man againe: pray you be still.

La. You have displac'd the mirth,
Broke the good meeting, with moft admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can fuch things be,
And overmen ce like a Summers Cloud,
Without our fpecial wonder? You make me ftrange.
Even to the disposition that I owne,
When now I thinke you can behold fuch fhings,
And keep the natural Rubie of your Chérek:
When mine is blanch'd with ftrease.

Ruff. What fighs, my Lord?

La. I pray you fpake not; he growes worfe & worfe.
Quaffion enraiges him: at once, goodnight.
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night, and better health.

Attend his Maffey.

La. A kihde goodnight to all.

Macb. It will have blood they fay:
Blood will have Blood:

Stones hauue beene knowne to moue, & Trees to fpeak:
Angeues, and underftoold Relations, haue
By Maggot Pyes, & Choffets & Rookes brought forth
The Secret man of Blood. What is the night

La. Almost at odde with morning, which is which

Macb. How fay'ls thou that Macbeth denies his perfon
At our great bidding.

La. Did you fend to him Sir?

Macb. I feare it by the way: But I will fend:
There's not one of them but in his houfe
I keepe a Seruant Feed. I will to morrow
(And beimes I will, to the weyward Sifters),
More fhall they fpeeke; for now I am bent to know
By the worft meanes, the worft, for mine owne good,
All caufes flall glue way. I am in blood
Strept in fo faire, that fhould I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go ore:
Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,
Which muft be aile, eie they may be found.

La. You lacke the feafon of all Natur,leep.

Macb. Come, we ce to leape: My strangé & filifuife
Is the initiare fcarce, that wants hard vfe:
We are yet but yong indeed.

Exeunt.

Scene Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Watchers meeting.

Hec.

1. Why how now Hecat, you looke angerly?

Hec. Have I not reason (ieldam's) as you are?

Sawry, and one-bold, how did you dare
To trade, and traffique with Macbeth,
In Riddles, and Affaires of death;

And

III. iv. 46—III. v. 5

The Tragedie of Macbeth.

And I the Misriss of your Charmes,
The cloe contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
O shew the glory of our Art?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath bane but for a wayward Sceane,
Spightfull, and wrathfull, who (as others do) Loves for his owne ends, ne for you.
But make amends now: Get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me this Morning: thither he
Will come, to know his Definite.
Your Veffels, and your Spells provide,
Your Charmes, and every thing beside;
I am for th' Ayre: This night he spend
Vnto a dimilall, and a Faddall end.
Great businesse must be wrought ere None.
Upon the Corner of the Moon
There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound,
He catch it ere it come to ground;
And that did if'd by Magick flightes,
Shall raise such Artificial Sprights
As by the Strength of their Illusion,
Shall draw him on to his Confusion.
He shall spurne Fate, some Death, and bere
His hopes' bone Wifedom,Grace, and Fear.
And you all know, Security
Is Mortals cheefe Enemy.

Maciel, and a Song.

There is no incantation, no artificer's song,
But the voice of Nature, that to every ear doth bring
The fitness of things. So let us transport
Our thoughts to heaven, and there begin.

Enter Lenox, and another Lord.

Lenox. My former Speeches,
Have but your thoughts
Which can interpret farther: One is I say
Things have bin frangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pittied of Macbeth: marry he was dead;
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late,
Whom you may say (if ye please ye) Fiean: kill'd,
For Fianus Bed: Men must not walke too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Macduff, and for Donalbain
To kill their gracious Father: Damned Fact,
How it did grewe Macbeth: Did he not straight
In piouse rage, the two delinquents cease,
That were the Slaves of drunk and thrall's of sleepe
Was not that Nobly done? 1, and wisely too:
For 'twould have anger'd any hearts alue
To hear the man dema'st: So that I say,
He ha's borne all thing well, and I do think,
That had he Duncan's Sonnes under his Key,
(As, and pleasa Heauen shall not) they should finde
What twere to kill a Father: So shoul Fiean.
But peace; for from broad words, and canse he say'd
His preference at the Tyrants Feat: I hear
Macduff lives in digrace, Sir, can you tell

Where he befoles him selfe?

Lord. The Sonnes of Duncan
(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Lives in the Englifh Court, and is recey'd
Of the most Prince Edward, with fuch grace,
That the malcontente of Fortune, nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
Is gone, to pray the Holy King, upon his ayd
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the helpe of thefe (with him above)
To rais the Workes we may againe
Give to our Tables meat, sleepe to our Nights;
Free from our Feasts, and Banquets bloody knyves
Do faull full Henmps, and receiue free Honors,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath to exasperate their King, that he Prepares for some attempt of warre.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute Sir, not I
The cloudy Message turns me his backe,
And hums; as who should say, you'll use the time
That clogs me with this Answer.

Lenox. And that well might
Adulfe him to a Caution, t, hold what distance
His wifehood can provide. Some holy Angell
Fly to the Court of England, and unfold
His Message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May moore returne to this our suffering Country,
Under a hand occurs'd.

Lord. He fend my Prayers with him.

Aelius Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the three Witches.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Thrice the brinded Cat hath mew'd.
2 Thrice, and once the Hedge-Pigge whin'd.
3 Harpier cries, 'tis time, 'tis time,
1 Round about the Cauldron go;
2 In the powyland Entrails throw
3 Toast, that under cold stone,
1 Days and Nights, he's thirty one:
2 Swelterd Venom sleepeing got,
3 Boyle thou first 'tis charmed pot.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burne, and Cauldron bubble.
2 Fillers of a Penny Snake,
3 In the Cauldron Boyle and Bake:
1 Eye of Newt, and Toe of Frog,
2 Wool of Bat, and Tongue of Dogge:
3 Aiders Forke, and Blinde-wormes Sting
4 Lizards legge, and Howletts wing:
5 For a Charme of powrefull trouble,
6 Like a Hell-breath, Boyle and bubble.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble,
Fire burne, and Cauldron bubble.
2 Scale of Dragon, Tooth of Wolfe,
3 Witches Mummeey, Mur, and Gulfe
Of the rain'd del Sea starke
1 Roots of Henlocke, digg'd to the Duke:
2 Lister of Blaspheming Jew,
3 Gall of Goaste, and Slippes of Yew,
4 Sluer'd in the Moones Eclipse.
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Nofe of Turke, and Tartars lips:
Finger of Birth-strangled Babe,
Dicit-deduct by a Drab,
Make the Crewe-well thick and lub.
Add thee therto a Tigers Chawdran,
For ch'Inp Regiment of our Cowdran.
All. Double, double, toyle and trouble,
Fire burne, and Cowdran bubble.
2. Coote it with a Baboones blood,
Then the Cullame be finite and good.

Enter Hecat, and the other three Witches.

Hec. O well done: I commend your paces,
And every one shall share with games:
And now about the Cowdrungion.
Like Eues and Fairies in a King,
Inchanting all that you put in.

1. Appar. and a Song.
Blacky Spirits, &c.

2. By the pricking of my Thunburs,
Something wicked this way comes:
Open Lockers, who ever knockes.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now you secret, black, & midnight Hags?
What is't you do?
All. A deed without a name.

Math. I comme you, by that which you Professe,
Though you wyngue the WIndes, and let them flys:
Against the Churches: Though the yeuty WInds
Confound and swallowl Navigation vp.
Though bladeled Come be leaped, & Trees blowne downe,
Though Cotters topple on their Waders heads:
Though Pallees, and Pyramids do uphe
Their heads, to their Foundations: Though the creature
Of Natures Earnest, tumble slanting, that,
Euen till depluction ticken: Answer me
To what I like you:
1. Speak.
2. Demand.
3. We'll answer.
1. Say, if'th had it rather heare it from our mouths,
Or from our Mather.
2. Macb. Call'em: let me see'em.
1. Powre in Some blood, that hath eaten
Hernine Farrow: Greae that's sweaten
From the Murderes Gibber, throw
Into the Flame,
All. Come high or low:
Thy Selfe and Office deathly shou.

Macb. Tell me, thou knonwinge power.
1. He knowes thy thought:
I heare his speche, but say thou ought.
2. Appr. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth:
Beare Macbeth, Beware Macbeth!

Macb. What can it be, that for thy good caution, thanks
That last hoplyr have awight, but one word more.
1. He shall not be commanded: here's another
More potent then the last.

2. Appr. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth,
Had I thre eares, I'd hear thee.

3. Appr. Be bloody, bold, and resolute:

Laugh to scorne
The power of man: for none of woman borne
Shall harme Macbeth.

Defends.

Mac. Then line Macbeth, what need I feare of thee?
But yet: He make affianse: double faire,
And take a Brand of Fate; thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted Feme, it lies;
And fleer in sight of Thunders:

Thunder.

3 Apprappar, a Childi. Crowned, with a Tace in his hand.

What is this, that rife like the issue of a King,
And weare upon his Baby-brow, the round
And top of soueraignty?

All. Liften, but speake not too.

3 Appr. Be Lyon mated, proud, and take no care:
Who chaies, who feer, or where Confutters are.
Macbeth shall never vanquish be'd, vnfull
Great Byrman wood, to high Dunsmine Hill
Shall come against him.

Defends.

Mac. That will neuer bee:
Who can impresse the forfeit, but the Tree
Vanifie his earth-bound Root? Sure houndements good:
Rebellions dead, life never till the Wood
Of Byrman rile, and our high head's Macbeth
Shall like the Earle of Nature pay his breath
To tane, and mortall Calthune, Yetti Hart
Throbs to knowe one thing: Tell me, if your Art
Can tell so much: Shall Banquo's soldier ever
Reigne in this Kingdom?

All. Seeke to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied. Denye me this,
And an eternal Curse fall on you: Let me know!

Why finkes that Calthune & what mute is this: Hubjes
1. Shew.
2. Shew.
3. Shew.

All. Shew his Eyes, and gresse his Hat,
Come like shadowes, to depart.

A shew of eight Kings, and Banquo's left with a glasse in his hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the Spirit of Banquo: Down:
Thy Croome do's feare mine Eye-balls. And thy bellie
Then other Gold-bound-brow, is like the fift:
A third, a like the former. Filthy Tryster.
Why do you show me this? — A fourth! Staty eies!
What will the Line stretch nout o'the cracke of Doniome?

Another yet? A feame! He seene more:
And yet the eight appeares, who beares a glasse,
Which fiewes me many more: and some I see,
That two-fold Bellar, and treble Scepters carry.

Horrible fight: Now I see'ts true,
For the Blood-boler'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at thhem for his. What is this so?

1. Sir, all this is soe. But why
Stands Macbeth thus amazelly?
Come Sifters, cheere weyv his spirtys,
And fwhel the beit of our delights,
Ile Charme the Ayre to give a sound,
While you performe your Antique round:
That this great King may kindly say,
Our duties, did his welcome pay.

Alaske!

Macb. Where are they? Gone?
Let this pernious houre,
Stand aye accurrd in the Kalender.
Come in, without there.

Lenox. What's your Graces will.

Mark.
Mack. Saw you the Weyard Sisters?
Len. No, my Lord.
Mack. Came they not by you?
Len. No indeed, my Lord.
Mack. Infected be the Ayre wherein they ride,
And damn'd all that trust them. I did hear
The gallopping of Horses. Who was't came by?
Len. Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word:
Macduff is fled to England.
Mack. Fled to England?
Len. I, my good Lord,
Mack. Then, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits:
The light's hue purpote neuer is of e'ere alone
Vul'telle the deed go with it. From this moment,
The very fyllings of my heart shall be
The fyllings of my hand. And even now
To Crown my thoughts with Act; be it thought & done:
The Castle of Mac'duff, I will surprise,
Singe upon Fire; give to the edge steel'd Sword
His Wife, his Babes, and all unfortunate Souls
That trace him in his Line. No taxing like a Fool,
This deed I do, before this purpos't coole,
But no more fights. Where are these Gentlemen?
Come bring me where they are.

Scene Secunda.

Enter Maitdun's Wife, her Son, and Ruffe.

Maitdun. What had he done, to make him fly the Land?
Ruffe. You must have patience, Madam.
Maitdun. He had none:
His flight was malicious: when our Actions do not,
Our fears do make us Traitors.
Ruffe. You know not
Whether it was his wife's do, or his fear.
Wife. Wifdom? to leave his wife, to leave his Babes,
His Manion, and his Titles; in a place
From whence himselfe do's flye? He loues vs not,
He wants the naturall touch. For the poore Wren
(Tho'f the most dimnitude of Birds) will fight,
Her young ones in her Nest, against the Owle:
All is the Fear, and nothing is the Love;
As little is the Wilderome, where the Right
So runnes against all reason.
Ruffe. My deereft Coze,
I pray you scoole ye your felfe. But for your Husband,
He is Noble, Wife, judicious, and beat knowes
The fities of this Seafon. I dare not speake much further,
But cruelly are the times, when we are Traitors
And do not know our felves: when we hold Rumor
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But loate upon a wilde and violent Sea
Each way, and moue. I take my leave of you:
Shall not be long but Ille be heete againe:
Things at the worst will ceafe, or elle climbbe upward,
To what they were before. My pretty Cofine,
Befling upon you.
Wife. Father'd be it.
And yet hee's Father-Jeffe,
Ruffe. I am so much a Fool, shou'd I stay longer,
It would be my difgrace, and your discomfort,
I take my leave at once.

Exit Ruffe.

Wife. Sirra, your Fathers dead,
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As Birds do Mother.
Wife. What with Wormes, and Flies?
Son. With what I get I mean, and to do they.
Wife. Poor鸟,
Thou'lt never Peare the Net, nor Lime,
The Pitfall, nor the Gin.
Son. Why should I Mother?
Poore Birds they are not fet for:
My Father is not dead for all your paying.
Wife. Yes, he is dead:
How will thou do for a Father?
Son. Nay how will you do for a Husband?
Wife. Why I can buy meteartv at any Marke't;
Son. Then you'll by 'em to fell againe.
Wife. Thou speakst it well, thy wit,
And yet I faith wist not enough for thee.
Son. Wast my Father a Traitor, Mother?
Wife. I, that he was.
Son. What is a Traitor?
Wife. Why one that sweares, and lyes.
Son. And be all Traitors, that do so.
Wife. Every one that do's so, is a Traitor,
And must be hang'd.
Son. And muft they all be hang'd, that swear and ly?
Wife. Every one.
Son. Who muft hang them:
Wife. Why, the honett men,
Son. Then the Liar and Swearer's Fools: for there are Liar's and Swearer's know; to beate the honett men, and hang up them.
Wife. Now God helpe thee, poore Monkie;
But how wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd wepe for him: if you would not, it were a good figue, that I should quickly
haue a new Father.
Wife. Poore prattcr, how thou talkst?

Enter Speakers.

M. Bleffe you faire Dame, I am not to you known, Though in your state of Honor I am perfect;
I doubt some danger do's approache you necesserly.
If you will take a homely mans advice,
Be not found heere: Hence with your little ones
To flight you thus. Me thinkes I am too launge:
To do worke to you, were fell Cruelty,
Which is too me your person. Haueen preferue you,
I dare abide no longer.

Exit M.

Wife. Whether Should I flye?
I haue done no harme. But I remember now
I am in this earthlie world: where to do harme,
Is often laudable, to do good sometyme
Accounted dangerous folly. Why then ( alas)
Do I put vp that worme'nly defence,
To say I have done no harme?
What are these faccs?

Enter Murtherers.

M. Where is your Husband?
W. I hope in no place so vnscantified,
Where luch a thou may'lt find him.
M. He's a Traitor.
Son. Thou ly'st thou licens, and Villaine.
M. What you Eggs?
Yong fry of Treachery?
Son. He he's kill'd me Mother,
Run away I pray you.

Exit crying Murther.

N. n.
Scena Tertia.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mac. Let vs seek out some defolate flaine, & there Weepe our fed bolomes empty.

Mac. Let vs rather
Hold fast the mortall Sword: and like good men, E-tribute our downfall Birthdome: each new, Morn, New Wuldoxes howle, new Orphans cry, new orowes Strike heauen on the face, that it refounds As it is felt with Scotland, and yeld out Like Sylable of Doulour.

Mac. What, I beleue, Ile waile;
What know, beleue; and what I can redresse, As I shall finde the time to friend: I will, What you haue spoke, it may be to perochance.

This Tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues, Was once thought honost: you issue lould him well, He hath not touch'd you yet. I am yong, but something You may difterence of him through me, and wisdome To offer vp a weak, poor innocent Lambe

Mac. I am not treacherous.

Mac. But Macbeth is,
A good and vertuous Nature may recolle.
In an Imperiall charge. But I shall crave your pardon: That which you are, my thoughts cannot transport; A rage of bright ill, though the brightill fell.

Though all things foule, would wear the brows of grace Yet Grace muft still looke so.

Mac. I have lost my Hopes.

Mac. Perchance euen there Where I did finde my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you Wife, and Child? Those precious Motives, those strong knots of Loue, Without leave-taking. I pravy you, Let not my jesolies, be your Di柟honors,

But mine owne Safeties: you may be rightly juft,

What euer I shall thinke.

Mac. Bleed, bleed poore Country,
Great Tyrany, lay thou thy bas fis face,

For goodnelfe dare not check thee: wear thy wrongs,
The Tule, is afeard. Far thee well, Lord, I would not be the Villaine that thou thinke't, For the whole Space that's in the Tyrants Graffe,
And the rich Eail to boor.

Mac. Be not offended:

I speake not as in absolute fear of you:

I think our Country finkes beneath the yoke,

It weepes, it bleeds, and each new day a gaff
Is added to her wounds. I thinke withall,

There would be hands uplifted in my right:

And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly shoulldons. But for all this,
When I haue made vp the Tyrants head,
Or weare on my Sword yet my poor Country,

That shal have more vices then it had before,
More loffer, and more bloody ways then euer!

Mac. What should he be?

Mac. It is my felfe I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of Vice so grafted,
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

These Eulius shoule repeate it vpon thy telle, Hast banish'd me from Scotland. O my Breff, Thy hope ends here.

Macb. Macb. off this Noble Passion.
Child of integritie, hast from my soule, Wip'd the blacke Scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts To thy good Truth, and Honor. Diadumene Macb., By many of these traitres, hast forgott to win me Into his power: and modest Wifedom pleasses me From over-credulous haif: but God above Deale betweene thee and me; for even now I put my felie to thy Direction, and Vnspakke mine owne defection. Here he abuseth The sins, and blames I lade vpon my selie, For strangers to my Nature. I am yet Unknowen to Woman, neuer was forfoorne, Scarceley hee couered what was mine owne. At no time broke my Faith, would not betray The Deuils to his fellow, and delight No selie in truth then late, My first selie speaking This was vpon my felie. What I am truly Of thine, and my poore Countries to command: Whither indeed, before they heare approach Old Seruand with ten thousand warlike men Already at a point, was settin g forth: Now weel together, and the chance of goodnesse Be like our warrantt Quarrell. Why are you silent? Macb. Such welcome, and welcome things at once 'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Macb. Well, more anon. Comes the King forth I pray you?

D. Sir: there are a crew of wretched Souls that thy his Cure: their malady commences The great assay of Art. But at his couch, Such fanciety hath Heaven givin his hand, They presently amend. Exit.

Macb. I thinke you Doctor.

Macb. What's the Difcase he meanes at?

Macb. 'Tis call'd the Euil.

A most myrricous worke in this good King, Which often since my heere remains in England, I haue seene him do: How he sollicites heaven Hymselfe bell knowes: but strangely visiteth People. All twincend Vicious, pittifull to the eye, The meere dispaire of Surgery, he cures, Hanging a golden flambe about their neckes, Put on with holy Prayers, and his spoken To the succeeding Royalty he lesues The healing Benediction. With this strange vertue, He hath a heauenly gospe of Prophete, And fondly Blessings hang about his Throne, That speake him full of Grace.

Enter Roife.

Macb. See who comes here.

Macb. My Countryman: but yet I know him nor.

Macb. My ever gentle Cozen, welcome hither.

Macb. I know him now. Good God betimes remove The meanes that makes vs Strangers.

Roife. Sir, Amen.

Macb. Stands Scotland where it is did?

Roife. Alas poor Countrie, Almoast afford to know it selie. It cannot Be call'd our Mother, but our Grave; where nothing But who knowes nothing, is once seene to smile: Where figures, and groomes, and strains that rent the ayre Are made, not mark'd: Where violent sorrow setemes A Moderne extasie. The Deadmans voice.

Is there scarce ask'd for who, and good mens lites Expire before the Flowers in their Capps, Dying, or else they ficken.

Macb. Oh Relation, too nice, and yet too true.

Mac. What's the weakest grief?

Roife. That of an hours age, doth hitle the speaker, Each minute remes a new one.

Macb. How do my Wife?

Roife. Why well.

Macb. And all my Children?

Roife. Well too.

Macb. The Tyrant has not baster'd at their peace?

Roife. No, they were wel at peace, when I did deale 'em.

Macb. Be not a naggard of your speech: How goes it?

Roife. When I came hither to transport the Tydings Which I haue heaulily borne, there ran a Rumour Of many worthy fellowes, that were our, Which was to my believe witness the rather, For that I saw the Tyrans Pow'r a-four.

Now is the time of helpes: your eye in Scotland Would create Soldiers, make our women fight, To dothe their dire distresse.

Macb. Be't your comfort We are comming thither: Gresham England hath Lente vs good Seyward, and ten thousand men, An elder, and a better Souldiers, none That Christendom giues out.

Roife. Would I coulde answer

This comfort with the like. But I haue words That would be how'ld out in the defect ayre, Where hearing should not latch them.

Macb. What concerne they, The generall caufe, or is it a Fee-griefe Due to some finge breath?

Roife. No minde that's honest But in it shares some wor, though the maine part Pertaines to you alone.

Macb. If it be mine Kepes it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Roife. Let not your cares dispise my tongue for ever, Which shall possifie them with the heaviest found That ever yet they heard.

Macb. Hum: I grife at it.

Roife. Your Caffle is surpriz'd: your Wife, and Babes Sanguely slaughter'd: To relate the manner Were on the Quarry of the mother'd Deere To add the death of you.

Macb. Mercifull Heaven:

What man, ne'te pull your hat upon your brows: Give sorrow words; the griefe that do's not speake, Whispers the o're-drught heart, and buds it breaks.

Macb. My Children too?

Ro. Wife, Children, Servants, all that could be found.

Macb. And I must be from thence? My wife kill'd too?

Roife. I haue saide.

Macb. Be comforted.

Let's make vs Meditines of our great Reuenge, To cure this deadly griefe.

Macb. He ha's no Children. All my pretty ones? Did you say All? Oh Hell-Kite All?

What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Damme At one fell swoope?

Macb. Dispute it like a man.

Macb. I shall do so.

IV. iii. 112—219

755
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

But I must also feel it as a man; I cannot but remember each thing we were there were most precious to me. But heaven look on, and would not take their part? Sinful Macduf.

They were all flocked for thee: Naught that I am, not for my own demerits, but for mine. Bell laugh'd on their looks: Heaven tell them now.

Meth. Be this the Whiffstone of your sword, let grief convert to anger. Blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macle. 0! I could play the woman with mine eyes, and Braggart with my tongue. But gentle Heavens, cut short all interference! Front to Front, bring thou this Fiend of Scotland, and my selfe. Within my Sword's length set him, if he escape heaven forgive him too.

Meth. This time goes marvel.

Come goe we to the king, our Power is ready, our lacke is nothing but our lease. Macbeth is ripe for shanking, and the Powers above. Put on their Instruments: Receive what cheere you may, the Night is long, that never finds the Day.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doller of Physickes, and a Yarning Gentlewoman.

Doll. I have too Nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it first last walk'd?

Gen. Since his Maiestie went into the Field, I have seen his rite from her bed, throw her Night-Gown vp-pon her, volsche her Cloths, take forth paper, fold it, write vp-pon't, read it, afterwards Secure it, and again returne to bed; yet all this while in a mott fast sleepe.

Doll. A great perturbation in Nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watch't. In this lunabry agitacion, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what (at any time) have you heard her say?

Gen. That Sir, which I will not report after her.

Doll. You may to me, and'tis not a meeet you should.

Gen. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witness to confine my speech.

Enter Lady, with a Taper. Do you, here she comes: This is her very gate, and upon her life fast asleep she oberte her, hand cloe.

Doll. How came she by that light? Why is this light I see by? What is this light by? When is this light by? Why is this light by? What is this light by?

Gen. That's strange by her: she has light by her continually, it is her command.

Doll. You see her eyes are open. Gen. But their fente are shut.

Doll. What is it she do's now?

Gen. Look how she moves her hands.

Doll. It is an action she would do with her, to see if she was waking her hands: I have knowen her continue in this a quarter of an houre.

Lat. Ye here is her spot.

Doll. Had she, she speaks, I will set downe what comes from her, to last the remembrance the more strongly.

Act. One: Why then 1s time to do's? He is mearly fwe, my Lord, fie, my Lord, fie, a Sinful, and affrighted, what weare we fear? who knows it, when more can call our patience to the tempt? yet who would have thought the olde man to have had so much blood in him?

Doll. Do you mark it that?

Lady. The Thanke of Fife, had a wife; where is she now? What will these hands ne be cleaner? No more other of my Lord, no more other: you marne all with this flan-ting.

Doll. Go too, go too:

You have knowne what you should not. Gen. She's spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heauen knows what the he's knowne.

Lady. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the per- fumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh.

Doll. What a sigh is there? The hart is forely charg'd.

Gen. I would not have such a heart in my botomne, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doll. Well, well, well.

Gen. Play God it be sir.

Doll. This disease is beyond my practise: yet I have now knowen those which have walked in their sleep, who have dyed boldy in their beds.

Lady. Wail your hands, put on your Night-Gowne, look not pale: I tell you yet againe Bawmge's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doll. Even so?

Lady. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate: Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done, cannot be vndone. To bed, to bed.

Exit Lady.

Doll. Will she go now to bed?

Doll. Do you think she will?

Doll. False whisperings are abroad: unnatural deeds Do breed unnatural troubles: infused minds To their depe pillowes will discharge their Secrets: More needs the Duke, then the Physician: God, God forgive us all. Look after her, Remove from her the meanes of all annoyance, And full keep eyes upon her: So goodnight, My minde she is mated, and amaz'd my fitts. I think, but dare not speake.

Gen. Good night my good Doctor.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Dram and Colours. Enter Menteath, Catane, Angus, Lenox, Soldiers.

Menteath. The English powre is neere, led on by Malcolm, His Vnkle Syward, and the good Macduf.

Reuenge burne in them: for their deere caules Would to the bleeding, and the grim Alarme Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Neere Byrnan wood.

Shall we well meet them, this way are they comming. Cawth. Who knows it Donalbain be with his brother? Les. For certain Sir he is not: I have a File Of all the Genery; there is Syward Sonne, And many youthfull youths, that even now Protest their first of Manhood. Menteath. What do's the Tyrant.

Cawth. Great Dunfranc he strongly Fortifies: Some say he's mad; Others, that leffer hate him, Do call it valiant Fury, but for certaine.

IV. iii. 220—V. ii. 14

756
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
Within the belt of Rule.

Ang. Now do's he feel
His secret Murthers sticking on his hands,
Now minutely Revolts upbraid his Faith-breath:
That he commands, more uyly in command,
Nothing in loue: Now do's he feel his Title
Hang loose about him, like a Giants Robe
Upon a dwarfish Theife.

Mon. Who then shall blame
His pester'd Sentencs to recoyle, and start,
When all that is within him, do's condemnme
It selfe, for being there.

Col. Well, march we on,
To give Obedience, where 'is truly ow'd:
Meet we the Med'cine of the sckily Wesle,
And with him poure we in our Countries purge,
Each drop of vs.

I'mow. Or to much as it needes,
To dews the Soveraigne Flower, and drowne the Weeds:
Make we our March towards Birman.

Exeunt Marching.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more Reports. Let them flye all:
Till Dunsinane wood remoue so Dunfeane,
I cannot point with Fear. What's the Boy Malcolme?
Was he not borne of woman? The Spirits that know
All mortall Consequences, have pronounc'd me thus:
Fear not Macbeth, no man that's borne of woman
Shall eare have power upon thee. Then flye safe Thanes,
And mingle with the English Epitores,
The minde I flye by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never fage with doubt, nor shake with fare.

Enter Servant.

The diewl dames thee blacke, thou cream-fac'd Loone:
Where go'th thou that Goose-looke.

Ser. There is ten thousand.

Macb. Goe pickly thy face, and over-cord thy fare
Thou Lilly-livered Boy. What Soldiers, Pach?
Death of thy Soulše, those Limmen cheeks of shine
Are Counsalours to fear. What Soldiers Whay face.

Ser. The English Force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. Scena, I am sick at hart,
When I behold: Scena, I say, this path
Will cheere me euer, or discheere me now.
I have lu'd long enough: my way of life
Is faine into the Sear, the yellow Leafe,
And that which shoul accompayy Old-Age,
As Honor, Loue, Obedience, Troopes of Friends,
I must not luoke to have: but in their need,
Curies, not lowd but deep, Mouth-honor, breath
Which the poore hearte would faine deny, and dare not.

Scena.

Enter Scena.

Scy. What's your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What Newes more?

Scy. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported.

Macb. Ile fight, till from my bones, my Reth be hacket.

Give me my Armor.

Scy. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll let it on.

Send out your Horfes, shire the Country round,
Hang thro' that tale of Fear. Give me mine Armor:
How do's your Patient, Doctor?

Dell. Not to sickie my Lord,
As he is troubled with thicke-comming Fancies
That keepe her from her reft,

Macb. Cure of that:
Can't then not Minister to a minde disfess'd,
Plucke from the Memory a rooted Sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the Braine,
And with some sweet Obligious Antidote
Cleanse the trift boosome, of that perillous fluffe
Which weights upon the heart?

Dell. Therein the Patient
Muff minister to himselfe,

Macb. Throw Physick to the Dogs, I'll none of it.
Come, put mine Armour on: give me my Staffe:
Scena, lend our Doctor, the Thanes eye from me:
Come sir, dispatch. If thou could'tt Doctor, cast
The Water of my Land, finde her Disease,
And purge it to a found and priuate Health,
I would applaud thee to the very Echo,
That shoul applaud againe. Pull of fay,
What Rubarb, Cyme, or what Purgatie drugg
Would dower thee English hence: hear'thy of them?

Dell. I say good Lord: your Royall Preparation
Makes vs beare sometbing.

Macb. Bring it after me:
I will not be afraid of Death and Bane,
Till Birman Forreitt come to Dunfinane.

Dell. Were I from Dunfinane away, and cleere,
Profit againe should hardly draw me heere.

Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Drum and Colours. Enter Malcolm, Seyward, Macduffe, Seyward's Sonne, Mentes, Cathnes, Angus, and Soldiers Marching.

Mal. Cofins, I hope the dayes are neere at hand
That Chambers will beSafe.

Mon. We doubt it nothing.

Sym. What wood is this before vs?

Mon. The wood of Birmane.

Mal. Let erery Soildier hew him downe a Bough,
And beare'th before him, thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our Host, and make discouery
Err in report of vs.

Sald. It shall be done.

Sym. We learne no other, but the confident Tyrant Keeps still in Dunfinane:and will induce
Our setting downe befor.'

Mal. 'Tis his maine hope:
For where there is advantage to be gienen
Both more and leffe have gien him the Reuolt,
And none ferue with him, but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absintent too.

Macd. Let our last Censures
Attend the true event, and put we on

Industrious
The Tragedie of Macbeth.

Indulgent Souldiership.

The time approaches,
That will with wits decision make vs know
What we shall say we have, and wheri mostly,
Thoughts to sustaine, these visibles hopes sedate,
But certaine illuse, its soaks must arbitrare,
Towards which, advance the warre.  Execut marching

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, & Souldiers, with Drum and Colours.

Macb. Hang out our Banners on the outward walls,
The Cry is full, they come: our Calles strenght
Will laugh a Stedge to stone: Here be let them lye,
Till Famines and the Ague case them vp:
Were they not forced with those that should be ours,
We might have met them darefull, beared to beare,
And bestre them backward home.  What is that noyle?

A Cry within of Women.

Sey.  It is the cry of women, my good Lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the tale of Peares:
The time he's beene, my sences would have cool'd
To hear a Night-shriekte, and my Fole of harr
Would at a dimmallest Treatise rowze, and fire
As life were in't.  I have fuppt with harrors,
Dierenesse familiar to my launtered thoughts:
Cannot once flatter me.  Wherefore was that cry?

Sey.  The Queene (my Lord) is dead.

Macb. She should have dy'd her selfe sooner;
There would have beene a time for such a word:
To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow,
Creepes in this ppace from day to day,
To the last Syllable of Recorded time:
And all our yesterdays, hauelighted Foolies
The way to daffy death.  Out, out, breefe Candle,
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poore Player,
That fruits and fruts his house upon the Stage,
And then's heard no more.  It is a Tale Told by an Idiot, full of sound and fury Signifying nothing.  Enter a Messenger.

Thou cust to vite thy Tongue: thy Story quickly.

Mes. Gracious my Lord, I should report that which I tay I say,
But know not how to do't.

Macb. Well, say fur.

Mes. As I did stand my watch upon the Hill
I look'd toward Byrnanze, and anon me thought
The Wood began to mooge.

Macb. Lyar, and Sland.  Mes. Let me endure your wrath, it beno't fo:
Within this three Mies may you see it comming,
I tay, a mowing Grove.

Macb. If thou speakest a falde,
Upon the next Tree shall thou hang aile
Till Famines cling thee: if thy speech be toooth,
Thou seest a worous wood for me as much.
I pull in Revolution, and begin
To doubt the Equivocation of the Fiend,
That lies as truth.  Fear not, till Brynanze Wood
Do come to Dunfnanze, and now a Wood

Scena Sexta.

Drumme and Colours,
Enter Malcolm, Seyward, Macduff, and their Army, with Bawges.

Mal. Now near enough:
Your leasy Skreenes throw downe,
And flsh like those you are You (worthy Vnkle)
Shall with my Cofn your right Noble Sone
Lead our first Battell.  Worthy Macdouf, and wee Shall take upon's what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Sey.  Fare you well:
Do we but finde the Tyrants power to night,
Let be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our Trumpets speake, give the all breath
Those clamorous Harbingers of Blood, & Death.  Execut
Alarums continued.

Scena Septima.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tay me to a stake, I cannot flye,
But Bear-like I must fight the course.  What's he
That was not borne of Woman? Such a one
Am I to feare, or none.

Enter young Seyward.

T. Sey.  What is thy name?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to heare it.

T. Sey.  Not; though thou call'd thy selfe a hoarse name
Then any is in hell.

Macb. My name is Macbeth.

T. Sey. The duller himeselfe could not pronounce a Title
More hatefull to mine ear.

Macb. No: nor more fearfull.

T. Sey. Thou yet abhorne Tyrant, with my Sword
He proue the lyke thou speake it.

Fight, and young Seyward flaint.

Macb. Thou wast borne of woman;
But Swords I finde at, Weapons laugh to come,
Brandish'd by mans that's of a Woman borne.

Exit Alarums.  Enter Macduff.

Macb. That way the noife is: Tyrant threw thy face,
If thou beest flaine, and with no itokes of mine,
My Wife and Childrens Ghofts will haume thee still:
I cannot strike at wretched Kernes, whose arms
Are hy'd to beare their Swordes; either thou Macbeth,
Or else my Sword with ap wabarterd edge
I fhate againe wondsed.  There thou shalldt be
By this great clatter, one of greatest note

Scenes

V. iv. 17—V. vii. 21

758
The Tragedy of Macbeth.

Scene vii..Enter Fighting, and Macbeth falling.

Retreat and flourish. Enter with Drums and Colours, Malcolm, Seyward, Ross, Thane of Cawdor, Soldiers.

Mal. I would the Friend at mine, were safe arriv'd.

Say. Some must go off: and yet by these I see,

So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble Sonne.

Ross. Your loss my Lord, he's paid a sovereign debt,

He only liv'd but till he was a man,

The which no Footer had his Prowesse confirm'd,

In the withershrinking Station where he fought,

But like a man he dy'd.

Say. Then he is dead?

Ross. And brought off the field: your cause of sorrow

Must not be mear'd by his worth, for then

It hath no end.

Say. Had he his horse before?

Ross. I, on the Front.

Say. Why then, God's Soldier be he:

Had he as many Sonnes, as I have haires,

Which I would not with them to a fairer death:

And so his Knell is knoll'd.

"Mal. He's worth more sorrow,

And that he spend for him.

Say. He's worth no more,

They saw he pair'd well, and paid his score,

And so God be with him. Here comes neuer comfort.

Enter Macduff, with Macbeth's head.

Mal. Haile King, for tho' you are

Beshold where hands

Th' Whispers curst head: the time is free;

I see thee compass with thy Kingdoms Pearsle,

That speake my fulation in their minds:

Whole voyces I do know slwed with mine.

Haile King of Scotland.

Al. Haile King of Scotland.

"Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,

Before we reckon with your general loves,

And make vs even with you. My Thanes and Kinsmen

Henceforth be Esquires, the first that ever Scotland

In such an honor nam'd: What's more to do,

Which would be planted newly with the time,

As calling home our exiled Friends abroad,

That fled the Snares of watchfull Tyranny,

Producing forth the cruel Ministers

Of this dead Butcher, and his Friends like Queene;

Who, as 'tis thought by selfe and violent hands,

Tooke off her life. This and what needfull else

That call's upon us, by the Grace of Grace,

We will performe in measure, time, and place;

So thanks to all at once, and to each one,

Whom we invite, to see vs Crown'd at Scone.

Flourish. Eventually Omnia.

FINIS.

V. vii. 22—104

759
Enter Barnardoo and Francisco two Centinels.

Barnardoo.

He's there?

Fran. Nay answere me: Stand & unfold your self.

Bar. Long live the King. Francisco?

Fran. He.

Fran. You come most carefully to your house.

Bar. 'Tis now 11 o'clock, get thee to bed Francisco.

Fran. For this rest eft much thankes: 'tis bitter cold, and I am fickle at heart.

Bar. Have you had quiet Guard?

Fran. Not a Mouse stirring.

Bar. Well, good night. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the Ruals of my Watch, bid them make halt.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I thinke I here them. Stand: who's there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And Leige-men to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O farwell honest Soldier, who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Barnardoo, he's my place: give you goodnight.

Exit Fran.

Bar. Say, what is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Bar. Welcome Horatio, welcome good Marcellus.

Mar. What, that's this thing appear'd againe to night, Barnardoo? These scene nothing.

Mar. Horatio saies, tis but our Fantast.

And will not let believe take hold of him
Touching this dreameful night, twice scene of vs,
Therefore I have intrested him along
With vs, to watch the minutes of this Night.
That if a strange Apparition come,
He may approve our eyes, and speake to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Bar. Sit downe a while,
And let us once againe affaile your cares,
That are so fortified against our Story,
What we two Nights have scene.

Hor. Well, if we downe,
And let vs hear Barnardoo speak of this.

Barn. In the night of all,
When yond fame Starre that's Westward from the Pole
Had made his course tillume that part of Heauen

Where now it burnes, Marcellus and my selfs,
The Bell then beating one.

Mar. Peace, break thee of to:

Enter the Ghost.

Looke where it comes againe.

Bar. In the fame figure, like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a Schollor, speake to it Horatio.

Bar. Lookes it not like the King? Marke it Horatio.

Hor. Moit like: It harrowes me with fear & wonder.

Bar. It would be spoke too.

Mar. Question it Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that visitst this time of night,
Together with these Faire and Warlike forme
In which the Maudely of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march: By Heaven I charge thee speake.

Mar. It is offended.

Bar. See, it fliakes away.

Hor. Stay! speake; speake: I Charge thee speake.

Exit the Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Bar. How now Horatio? You tremble & look pale:
Is not this something more than Fantastick?

What thinke you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this beleue
Without the feasible and true auouch
Of mine owne eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King?

Hor. As thou art to thy selfe,
Such was the very Armour he had on,
When he ambitious Norwegen combated:
So frown'd he once, when in an angry parle
He smot the felidged Polishe on the lee,
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and inat at this deade house,
With Martiall falke, heath he gone by our Watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not:
But in the grifice and scope of my Opinion,
This bodes some strange erup'tion to our State,

Mar. Good now fit downe, & tell me what you knowe.
Why this strange fable and most obfcurant Watch,
So nightly toyes the McBedit of the Land,
And why such dayly Call of Brazon Cannon
And Foraigne Mart for Implementes of warre:

Why iuch impress of Ship-wrights, whole fore Taske
Do's not dissip the Sunday from the weckle,
What might be toward, that this sweate balf
Doth make the Night joyant-Labourer with the day:

Who is't that can informe me?

Hor. That can I,

As
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

At last the whisper goes o'er: Our last King, Whole image even but now appears't'o vs, Was (as you know) by Fortinbras of Norway, (Therto prick'd on by a most emoluate Pride) Da'd to the Cominate. In which, our Valiant Hamlet, (For to this side of our knowledge he turn'd him) Did say this Fortinbras: who by a Seal'd Compact, Well ratified by Law, and Heraldrick, Did forfee (with his life) all those his Lands Which he could decently, to the Conqueror; Against the which, a Moisty competent Was gaged by our King: which bad return'd To the Inheritance of Fortinbras, Hail'd him Vanquisher, as by the same Conract And carriage of the Article design'd, His fall to Hamlet. Now sit, young Fortinbras, Of unimproved Mettle, hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there, Shirk'd up a hill of Landlike Resolves, For Foodie and Diet, to some Enterprise That hath a summer's in't: which is no other (And it doth well appeare unto our State) But to recover of vs by strong hand Andereous Compellative, those foresaid Lands So by his Father left: and this (I take it) is the certaine Minone of our Preparations, The Source of this our Watch, and the cheefe head Of this poft-hall, and Romage in the I and, Enter Ghost against. But far, behol'd the Sea, where it cometh in; He croffe it, though it blast me. Stay illusion: If thou hast any found, or vie of Voyce, Speake to me. If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do safe, and grace to me; speake to me, If thou art priuate to thy Countries Fate (Which haply foreknowing may avoide) Oh speake, Or, if thou haft vp-looked in thy life Extordred Treasure in the wombe of Earth, (For which, they say, thou Spirits oft walke in death) Speake of it. Stay, and speake. Stop it Morceius.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my Portizan? Hor. Do, it will not rand. Barn. Tis here. Hor. Tis here. Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so Malefickal To offer it the shew of Violence, For it is as the Ayre, invulnerable, And our paine blowes, malicious Maccary. Barn. It was about to speake, when the Cocke crew.
Hor. And then he flatt'd, like a giddy thing Upon a fairefull Sunnyness, I have heard, The Cocke that is the Trumpet to the day, Doth with his lofty and shoutling Throat Awake the God of Days: and at his warning, Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Ayre, Th'extravagant, and erring Spirit, eyes To his Conine. And of the truth heerein, This present Object made probacion.

Mar. It fail'd on the crowing of the Cocke, Some Gyes, that ever' one gaine that Seafon comes Wherein our Saisous Birth is celebrated, The Bird of Dawning fingeth all night long: And then (they say) no Spirit can walke abroad, The nights are wholeme, then no Planets strike, No Fairies talkes, nor Witch hath power to charm:

So hallow'd, and so gracious in the time.
Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it. But looke, the Morre in Ruffet mantle clad, Walkes or the dew of you high Esme's Hill, Breske we our Watch vp, and by my advice Let us impart what we have fome to night Vnto young Hamlet. For upon my life, This Spirit dumb to vs, will speake to him: Do you content we shall acquaint him with it, As needfull in our Looses, fitting our Duty?

Mar. Let do't I pray, and I this morning know Where we shall finde him most conveniently. Exeunt.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

You told vs of some suite, What is’t Lauret?
You cannot speake of Reaon to the Dave,
And loose your voyce. What would it thou beg Lauret?
That shall not be my Offer, nor thy asking?
The Head is not more Native to the Dutch,
The Hand more Instrumental to the Mouth,
Then is the Throne of Denmark to thy Father.
What wouldst thou have Lauret?
Laura. Dread my Lord,
Your leave and favour to resume to France:
For absence, though willingly I came to Denmark
To shew my duty in your Coronation,
Yet now I cannot confide, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend against France,
And bow them to your gracious leisure and pardon.
King. Have you your Fathers leave?
What lays Pallemon?
Pole. He hath my Lord;
I do beseech you give him leave to go.
King. Take thy faire hour Lauret, time be thine,
And thy beft graces spend it at thy will;
But now my Cohn Hamlet, and say Sonne?
Ham. A little more then kin, and leste then kinde.
King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you?
Ham. Not to my Lord, I am too much of t’Sun.
Queen. Good Hamlet call thy thrifty colour on,
And let thine eye looke like a Friend on Denmark.
Do not for ease with thy weilded eyes
Seeke thy Noble Father in the dust,
Thou know’st it is common, all that live must dye,
Passing through Nature, to Eternity.
Ham. I madam, it is common.
Queen. It it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee,
How Seems Madam? Nay it is: I know not Seene;
’Tis not alone my Fridge Ophelia (good Mother)
Nor Colloquy betwixt the Celsome Blake,
Nor weathy sufforation of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful Rine in the Eye,
Nor the defecled armouer of the Village,
Together with all Forms, Moods, fwer of Griefe,
That can denote me truly. These indeed Seene;
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that Which, which passeth show;
These, but the Trapping, and the Suittes of woe.
Ham. Thus forest and commendable
In your Nature, Hamlet,
To disgrace the mourning duties to your Father:
But you must know, your Father left a Father,
That Father left, left his, and the Sunnuer bound
In flill Obligation, for some terme
To do obsequious Sorrow. But to perfeuer
In obblinate Goodebole, is a course
Of impious hubbonnette. ’Tis vonmrous greefe,
It shownes a will much incensed to Heaven,
A Heart of Fury, a Minds impatient.
An understanding simple, and vncheeld:
For, what we knew must be, and is as common
As any that vulgar thing to fence,
Why should we in our percuthe Opposition
Take it to heart? I fy, it is a fault to Hexen,
A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature,
To Rest a moft abad, vnreconcilable
The gentle death of Fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first Coarse, till he that dyed to day,
This must befo. We pray you throw to earth
This vnpreauling woe, and thinke of vs
As of a Father; For let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our Throne,
And with no less Nobility of Loue,
That this and which death of Father beares his Sonne,
Do I impart towards you. For your merit
In going backe to Schoole in Wittenberg,
It is most rerogarde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend to you remaining
Heesse in the chere and comfort of our Eye,
Our cheefeck Courtier Cofin, and our Sonne.
Que. Let not thy Mother lose her Prayers Hamlet:
I pritty three day with you, go not to Wittenberg.
Ham. I shall in all my wit
Obey you Madam;
King. Why is this a loving, and a faire Reply,
Be as our Fille in Denmarke. Madam come,
This gentle and vnforcd accord of Hamlet
Sits malling to my heart; in grace whereof,
No locond health that Denmark drankes to day,
But the great Cannon to the Clouds shall telle,
And the Kings Rouse, the Heueners shall brave againe, Resphaking earthly Thunder. Come away.
Exeunt
court Hamlets.
Ham. Oh that this too so teld Fieith, would melt,
Thaw, and refolute it felle into a Dew:
Or that the Enterlaffing had not flect
His Canno‘n gaineft Selfe-laughter. O God, O God!
How weary, fea, flat, and unprofitable
Seemes to me all the viues of this world?
Fie cm’t. Oh fie, fie, fie: an vnweeded Garden
That grows to Seed: Things rank, and groffe in Nature
Poffleffe it meerely. That it should come to this:
But two months dead: Nay, not too much; oot two,
So excellent a King, that was to this
Hypérion to a Satyre: following to my Mother,
That he might not become the Windes of Heaven
Vflte her face too roughly. Heauen and Earth
Mull I remember: why she would hang on him,
As if increafe of Appetit had growne
By what it fed on; and yet within a month?
Let me not think it’s: Frailty, thy name is woman.
A little Monbe, or ere those fieces were old,
With whic the she followed my poor Fathers body
Like Nickes, all teares. Why the, even the.
(0 Heaven! A heart that wants diffourse of Reason
Would have morn’d longer) married with mine Venkle,
My Fathers Brother: but no more like my Father,
Then I to Hercules. Within a Moneth?
Ere yet the fale of moft vnrighteous Tears
Had left the flifhing of her gaulted eyes,
She married. O moft wicked fpred, to poet
With fuch dextery to freehous sheets:
It is not, nor it cannot come to good.
But breake my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Hamlet, Barnard, and Marcella.

Hor. Haile to your Lordship.
Ham. I am glad to fee you well:
Horatius, or I do forget my felle.
Hor. The fame my Lord,
And your poor Servant ever,
Ham. Sir my good friend,
Ill change that name with you:
And what make you from Wittenberg Horatius?
Hold you the watch to Night?
Bath. We doe my Lord.
Ham. From top to toe? Bath. My Lord, from head to foot.
Ham. Then law you not his face? Hor. Oyes, my Lord, he wore his Beauer vp.
Ham. What, looks he frowningly? Hor. A countenance more in sorrow then in anger.
Ham. Pale, or red?
Hor. Nay very pale. Ham. And fixt his eyes upon you? Hor. Moit contantly. Ham. I would I had beene there. Hor. It would haue much amaz'd you. Ham. Very like, very like: flaid it long? (dread.) Hor. While one with moderate haft might tell a hun-
Acl. Longer, longer. Hor. Not when I law't.
Ham. His Beard was grifly? no.
Hor. It was, as I haue feene is in his life,
A Sable Siluer'd.
Ham. He watch to Night; perchance 'twill wake a-
Hor. I warrant you it will.
Ham. If it affume my noble Fathers pertion,
He speake to it, though Hef it felle should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you haue hither conceald this fìght;
Let it bee treble in your fìlence still:
And whatfoever el's fhall hap to night,
Give it an underfanding but no tongue;
I will require your loues; so, fare yew well.
Vpon the Platfrome twixt eluen and twelue,
I'll wife you.
Acl. Our duty to your Honour, Exeunt.
Ham. Your loue, as mine to you: farewell.
My Fathers Spirit in Armes? All is not well:
I doubt some foule play; would the Night were come;
Till then fit till my foule; foule deeds will rife,
Though all the earth oweigh them to mem'ries. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.
Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; Farewell:
And Sifter, as the Winds give Benefite,
And Convey in affiatants doe not flepe,
But let me heare from you. Ophel. Doe you doubt that?
Laer. For Hamlet, and the writing of his favours,
Hold it a fassion and a toy in Bloud;
A Violet in the youth of Primity Nature;
Froward, not permanent; fwer not laffing
The Appliance of a minute? No more.
Ophel. No more but fo. Laer. Think it no more:
For nature creffant does not grow alone,
In thenes and Bulke: but as his Temple waxes,
The inward seruice of the MInde and Soule
Grows wide withall. Perhaps he loues you now,
And now no foyle nor cauterl droth befmerce
The vertue of his fere: but you must feare

The Tragedie of Hamlet.

His greatnesse weigh'd, his will is not his own; For hee himselfe is subiect to his Birth; Hee may not, as usuall persons doe, Carese for himselfe; for, on his choyce depends The fanciiy and health of the weale State, And therefore must his choyce be circumfer'd With the wyse waye and yelding of that Body, Whereof heis the Head, Then if he failes he knowes, It fits your wifedome so farre to beleue it; As he in his peculiar Seft and force May giue his faying deede: which is no further, Then the maie voyce of Denmarke goes withall, Then weigh what lotts your Honour may sustaine, If with too credent cause you lift his Songs; Or lase your Hears; or your chaff Treasure open To his unmastrfied importunity. Fearce it Ophelia, fearce it my dear Sifter, And keepe within the reare of your Affection; Out of the fhot and danger of Defire, The charient Maid is Prodigall enough, If theu make her beauty to the Moone: Virtue it seel fapes not calloumous broaker, The Canker Galll's, the Infants of the Spring, Too ofte before the buttions be difclo'd, And in the Mome and liquid dew of Youth, Contagious blamfections are moft imminent, Be wary then, belt safety lies in feare; Youth toit to felle rebels, though none elle neere.

Ophe. I shall th'effedt of this good Leflon keepe, As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother Doe not as some vngracious Paffors doe, Showe me the eper and thorny way to Heaven; Whilft like a puff and reeleffe Libertine Himfelfe, the Primrofe path of dalliance treads, And realest not his owne reade.

Lear. Oh, fearce me not.

Enter Polonius, I fay too long: but here my Father comes: A double bleffing is a doule grace; Occasion smilies upon a fecd levee.

Pel. Yet heere Lartres! Aboord,aboord for fhem, The wynde fits in the fhouder of your faie, And you are fraid for there: my bleffing with you; And thefe few Precepts in thy memory, See thou Character. Give thy thoughts no tongue, Nor any vnproportion'd thouht his Aft: Be thou familiar: but by no meanes vulgar; The friends thou haft, and their adoption ride, Grapple them to thy Soule, with hoopes of Steele: But doe not dull thy palme, with entertainment Of each vnwatch'd, vnfriend'd Comrade. Beware Of entrance to a quarrell: but being in, Bear't that oppofed may beware of thee. Give euyi man thine ear: but few thy voyce: Take each mans confence: but reuer thy judgement: Confify thy habitt as thy purife can buy; But not expert in fancy: rich, not gawdly; For the Appearall oft proclaims the man, And they prace of the best ranck and fixation, Are of a moft tacit and generous chift in that. Neither a borrower, nor a lender be; For honeft oats both haife and friend: And borrowing did the age of Husbandry. This above all: to thine owne toffe belongeth; And it muft not follow, as the Night to the Day, Thou canst not then be lafe to my man.

Farewell: my bleffing feaion this in thee,

Lear. Moft humbly doe I take my leave, my Lord. Polon. The time invites you, goe, your fervants tend.

Lear. Farewel Ophelia, and remember well What I haue faid to you.

Ophe. Tis in my memory lockt,

And you your felfe shall kepe the key of it.

Lear. Farewell.

Polon. What if Ophelia he hath faid to you?

Ophe. So pleafe you, somthing touching the L. Hamlet.

Polon. Marry, we'lle bethought: Tis told me he hath very oft of late Gien private time to you, and you yourfelfe Haue of your audience beene moft free and bounteous. If it be fo, as to tis put on me; And that in waye of caution: I muft tell you, You doe not underande your felfe so cleerely, As it behoves my Daughter, and your Honour. What is betwixt you, give me vp the truth.

Ophe. He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders Of his affecion to me.

Polon. Marry Ie teach you; thinke your selfe a Baby, That you have tane his tenders for true pay, Which are not flarling. Tender your selfe more dearely; Or not to cracke the wynde of the poore Phrafe, Roaming it thus, you'll tendre me a faole.

Ophe. My Lord, he hath importun'd me with love, In honourable fashion.

Polon. I fashion you may call it, go too, go too. Ophe. And hath gien countenance to his speech, My Lord, with all the rowes of Heauen.

Polon. I Springes to catch Woodcocks. I doe know When the Blond burnes, how Prodigall the Soule Gies the tongue vvores: thee blazes, Daughter, Giesing more light then heat: extent in both, Even in their promise, as it is a making; You muft not take for fire. For this time Daughter, Be somewhat ftraner of your Maiden prefence; Set your entremets at a higher rate, Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet, Beleue no more in him, that is young, And with a larger tethere he may walk, Then may be gien you. In few, Ophelia, Do not beleue his vwores; for they are Brokers, Not of the eye, which their Invenments fhew: But meree implorators of vnoly Sutes, Breathing like fancifted and pioue bondes, The better to beguile. This is for all: I would not, in plain femeines, from this time forth, Haue you fo flander any moment pleurese, As to give worde or talke with the Lord Hamlet: Looke too, I charge you; come your wayes.

Ophe. I shall obay my Lord. "Exeunt."
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

What does this mean, my Lord? (rueful.)

Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his keepers waflets and the swaggering vvpinig rectes, and as he deines his draughts of Remph downe, the kettle Drarn and Trumpets thus bay out the triumph of his Pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. I marry it; and to my mind, though I am not heere, and to the manner boine: It is a Custom more honoured in the breach than the observance.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. Look ye my Law, it comes.

Ham. Angels and Manifests of Grace defend vs: Be thou a Spirit of health, as Goblin dammed, living with these eyes from Heaven, or blastis from Hell, Be thy events wicked or charitible, thou com'st in such a questionable shape. That I will speake to thee, I call thee Hamlet, King, Father, Royall Dane: Oh, oh, answer me; let me not burn in ignorance, but tell why thy Canoniz'd bones Hassed in death, hast burnt their cenoms, why the Sepulchre wherein we saw thee quietly earst, was up'd that ponderous and Marble Iawes, to call thee vp again? What may this mean? That thou dead Crosse again in compleat fleecle, Reuks thus the glamps of the Moone, Making Night hidious? And we foules of Nature, so horridly to loose our disposition, With thoughts beyond these, eac hes of our Soules, Say, why is this? wherefore? What should we doe?

Hor. I spoke it not to thee.

Ham. Looks with what courteous action It weaves you to a more removed ground: But doe not goe with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speake; then will I follow it.

Hor. Doest not my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the seare? I do not set my life at a pin's fig: And for my Soule, what, can it doe to that? Being a thing immortal as it selfe: It waues me forth against, I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it com't you toward the Iload my Lord? Or to the hazzard Sunne of the Cliffs, That beates o'the base into the Sea, And there affumes some other horrid forme, Which might depriue your Sovereignty of Reacon, And draw you into some eten fithe of it?

Ham. It waues me still: I'll goe on, I'll follow thee.

Hor. You shall not goe my Lord.

Ham. Hold off your hand, I'll not goe. Hor. Be well, you shall not goe.

Ham. My free cries out, and makes each petty Artire in this body, As hardly as the Nemian Lions nere: Still am I called? Vnhand me Gentlemen: By Heaven, I'll make a Ghost of him that lets me: I'll fly away, goe on, I'll follow thee.

Enter Ghost & Hamlet.

Ham. He were desperate with imagination.

Hor. Let's follow, 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Ham. Haue after, to what ill use will this come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the State of Denmarke.

Ham. Heaven will direct it.

Ham. Where wilt thou lead me? speak; I go no fur: Go. Make me

Ham. I will, thy Mother is almost come, When I to sulphures and tormenting Flames Multi stender vp my felle.

Ham. A poore Ghost.

Go. Pity me not, but lend thy severe hearing.

To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.

Go. So shalt thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Go. I am thy Fathers Spirit.

Doom'd for a certaine termne to wake the night; And for the day confined to fast in Fiers, Till the foule crimes done in my daies of Nature Are burnt and pur'd away? But that I am forbid To tell the secret of my Princ's Head, I could a Tale woeful, whose lightest word Would harrow vp thy soul, freeze thy young blood, Make thy two eyes like Stars, start from their Spheres, Thy knotty and combined locks to part, And each particular hair to stand an end, Like Quilles upon the festuell Perpettine: But this eternal blam'd must not be To cares of flesh and blood, hit Hamlet, oh no, If thou didst ever thy dear Father love.

Ham. On Heaven.

Go. Reuenge his saufe and most unnaturall Murther.

Ham. Must they?

Go. Murther most foulfoul, as in the belf it is; But this most foulfoul, strange, and unnaturall.

Ham. Haue, haue thou to know it,

That with wings as forst In meditation, or the thoughts of Love, May swepe to my Revenge.

Go. I finde thee apt,

And dullest shoul'd I unhone thee then the fat weede That roots it selfe in easte, on Leah Whore, Would it thou not fire in this. Now Hamlet heare: It's given out, that sleeping in mine Orchard, A Serpent flung me: I the whole ease of Denmarke, Is by a forged pr hộef of my death

Randy about: But know thou Noble youth, the Serpent did fling thy Fathers life, Now weares his Croune.

Ham. Of my Propheticke soule: mine Uncle?

Go. I that inceuluous, that adulterate Beast With witchcraft of his witch, hath Traitorous guifs, Oi wicked Witt and Gifts, that have the power So to reduce? Ven to this shamefull Luft The will of my most formyng magistrates: O thou wick'd, what a falling off was there, I from me, whose love was of that dignity, That it went hand in hand, even with the Todi I made to him in marriage: and to decline Upon a wretch, whose Natural gifts were none To those of mine. But Vertue, as it never shall be mused, Though Ewennesse croucin a hope of Heauen: So Luft, though to a radiant Angel linkt, Will late it selfe in a Celestiall fire, and prey on Garbage.

The Tragedie of Hamlet.

But oftentimes I lent the Mornings Ayre;
Briefe let me be: Sleeping within mine Orchard,
My coumbine always in the afternoone;
Vpon my secre hiding ryde Vnto the steke
With ioyce of euered Hebenon in a Viol,
And in the Porches of mine eares did poure
That supious Diffculty, whose whole effect
Holds such an enmy with blood of Man,
That fits vnt as a Quecke-flyter it courses through
The natural Gates and Allies of the Body;
And with a foame vigour it doth posset
And curd, like Ayre dropings into Milke,
The thin and wholome blood: so did mine;
And a strong must: Tenter bak'd aboute,
Mad Lazat-like, with wilde and loathsome craft;
All my fronds Body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a Brothers hand,
Of Life, of Crowne, and Queene at once dispatch;
Cut of even in the Blissfull of my Sinne,
Vahouzzed, disappointed, vnmanled,
No reckoning made, but bent to my account,
With all my soules feeders on my head;
Oh horrible Oh horrible, most horrible:
If shou haft nature in thee beare it not;
Let no the Reiall Bed of Denmark be
A Couch for Luxury and damned Incest,
But howsoever thou practisst this Aë,
Taint not thy mind: nor let thy Soule contribe
Against thy Mother ought, leave her to heauen;
And to those Thomers that in her bosome lodge,
To prickke and fling her. Fare thee well at once;
The Gloss-worme throws the Martine to be parte,
And gins to pyle his worstfeather free.
Ade,ade, Hamlet : remember me. Exeunt.
HowOh all you hell of heauen! Oh Earth what els?
And shall I couple Hells? Oh flie: hold my heart;
And you my braines, grow not in stature Old;
But beare me foolishly vp: Remember thee;
I, thou poore Ghost, while memory holds a parte
In this disfreted Globe: Remember thee?
Yes, from the Table of my Memory,
Ile wipe away all truulloud Fond Records,
All sawes of Books, all formes, all pictures past,
That youth and obseruption copied there;
And thy Commandment alone shall live
Within the Bookes and Volume of my braine,
Vnrmed with baster matter; yet, yes, yet, by Heauen:
Oh most pernicious woman!
Oh Villaine, Villaine, smiling damned Villaine!
My Table, my Table; meet it is let it downe,
That one may mery, and smile and be a Villaine;
At least I am sure it may be to Denmark;
So Vnckle there you are: now to my word;
It is: Adieu, Adieu, Remember mee: I bave sworn't.
Hor. & Marcellus. My Lord, my Lord,
Enter Horace and Marcellus.

Hor. Heauen fetch him.

Mar. So be it.

Hor. Ill, high, ho, my Lord.

Ham. Helle, helle, boy come bird, come.

Mar. How will my whole Lord?

Hor. What newes, my Lord?

Ham. Oh wonderfull!

Hor. Good my Lord tell it.

Ham. No you treacle.

Hor. Not I, my Lord, by Heauen.

Mar. Nor I, my Lord. (think it)

Ham. How say you then, would heart of man once
But yow'd be secre.

Both. 1. by Heau'n, my Lord.

Ham. There's nere a villaine dwelling in all Denmark
But he an arraigned knowne.

Hon. There needs no Ghost my Lord, come from the Graue, to tell vs this.

Ham. Why right, you are i'th' right;
And so, without more circumference at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands, and part:
You, as my busines and defires shall point you:
For every man ha's businesse and defire,
such as it is: and for mine owne paerc paars.
Looke you, Ie goe praye.

Hor. These are but wild and hurling words, my Lord.

Ham. I'm sorry they offend you heartily:
Yet faith heartily.

Hor. There's no offence i' my Lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is my Lord,
And much to stirre knowne.

You, for your desire to know what is betwixt vs,
Of reminister as you may. And now good friends,
As you are Friends, Schapers and Soldiers.
Give me one poore request.

Hor. What's in my Lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to night.

Both. My Lord we will not.

Ham. Nay, but yow't.

Hor. Infaith my Lord, I t.

Mar. Not I my Lord; in faith.

Ham. Vpon my sword.

Hor. We hold.

Ham. Indeed, upon your sword indeed.

Gho. Sware.

Gho. Takes under the Stage.

Ham. Ah ha boy, ay shew thou so. Art thou there truce
A penny? Come one you here this fellow in the litteredge
Content to swore.

Hor. Propose the oath my Lord.

Ham. Never sware of this that you have seene,
Sware by my sword.

Gho. Sware.

Ham. Hic & qui? Then we'll shift for grounds,
Come with Gentlemen,
And lay your hands agane upon my sword,
Never to spake of this that you have heard:
Sware by my sword.

Gho. Sware.

Ham. Well said old Mole, can't work i' th' ground so
A worthy Primer, once more remoue good friends.

Hor. Oh day and night, but this is wondrous strange.

Ham. And therefore as a stranger gueu it welcome.
There are more things in Heauen and Earth, Horace,
Then are dreamt of in our Philosophy. But come,
Here as before, neuer so helpe you mercy,
How strange or odde so ere I beare my selfe;
(As I perchance hereafter shall think me
To put an Antick disposition on.)
That you at such time seeing me, never shall
With times encumbred this, or thus, head shake;
Or by pronouncing of some daubful Pharse;
As well, we know, or we could and if we would,
Or if we lift to spake; or there be and if there might,
Or such ambiguous saying out to note,
The Tragedy of Hamlet.

That you know ought of me; this not to do: So grace and mercy at your most neede help you: Swear.

God, Sware.

Ham. Roth, reft perturbed Spirits: so Gentlemen, With all my love I do commend me to you; And whose to pere a man as Hamlet is, May doe express his love and friendings to you, God willing shall not lacke: I have gone as far, And tell your fingers on your lipes I pray; The time is out of toyes: Oh cursed night, That ever I was born to see it right, Nay, some lets goe together. Exit.

Actus Secondus.

Enter Polonius and Reynold.

Polon. Give him his money, and these notes Reynolds.

Reynol. I will my Lord.

Polon. You shall doe merits wisely: good Reynolds,
Before you write him you make inquiry Of this behaviour.

Reynol. My Lord, I did intend it.

Polon. Marry, well said; Very well said. Looke you Sir,
Enquire me what these Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and whom he means; and where they keep;
What company, at what expence; and finding
By this inconformity and drift of question,
That they do not know my sones: Come you more nearer;
Then your particular demands will touch it,
Take you ane thence some distinct knowledge of him,
And thus I know his father and his friends,
And in part him. Doe you make this Reynolds.

Reynol. I, very well my Lord.

Polon. And in part him, but you may stay not well;
Brief the bee I mean, hee very wise;
Added to dil and for; and there put on him
What forgeryes you please: marry, none for ranke,
As may distinguish him: take heed of this:
But Sir, such wanton, wild, and visual slips,
As are Complications noted and knowne
To youth and liberty.

Reynol. As gaining my Lord.

Polon. I, or thinking, fenc ing, sweating,
Quelling, drubbing. You may goe to faire.

Reynol. My Lord, that would dis Hondre me.

Polon. Faith no, as you may seson it to the charge;
You must not put another scandal on him,
That hee is open to Inconctinents;
That's not my meaning: but breath his faults so quaintly,
That they may seeme the stains of liberty;
The flath and out-breake of a fiery mind,
A fauguer in unclaim'd bloud of general assault,
Reynol. But my good Lord.

Polon. Wherefore should you doe this?

Reynol. My Lord, I would know that.

Polon. Marry Sir, here's my drift,
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these flight fulleys on your Sonne,
As twente a thing a little fowl'd: working: (found,
Mark you your party in continuance: him you would
Having such scenes: In the premonitory crimes,

The youth you breath of guilty, be affraid: He cloths with you in this consequence:
Good sir, or so, or friend, or Gentleman.

According to the Plat or and the Additions.

Or man and country.

Reynol. Very good my Lord.

Polon. And then Sir does he this?
He does; what was I about to say?
I was about to say taming: where did I leave?

Reynol. At cloths in the consequence:
At friend, or so, and Gentleman.

Polon. At cloths in the consequence, I marry,
He cloths with you thus: I know the Gentleman,
I saw him yesterday, or rather day:
Or then, or then, with such a mouth and as you say,
There was he gaining, there of rooke in's Round;
There falling out at Temes: then praunch,
I saw him enter such a house of tale;
Celeste, a Brothell: or so forth. See you now;
Your baits of surffood, takes this Cape of truth;
And thus doe we of wifedome and of reach
With wintlefeath, and with safeties of Bias.
By indirections finde directions out:
So by my former lecture and advice
Shall you my Sonne you have me,be you not?

Reynol. My Lord I have.

Polon. God buy you, fare you well.

Reynol. Good my Lord.

Polon. Observe his inclination in your felfe.

Reynol. I shall my Lord.

Polon. And lech him plye his Musick.

Reynol. Well, my Lord. Exit.

Enter Ophelios.

Polon. Farewell:

How now Ophelios, what's the matter?

Ophel. Alas my Lord, I have beene so affrighted.

Polon. With what, in the name of Heaven?

Ophel. My Lord, as I was fowling in my Chamber,
Lord Hamlet with his doubles all vibred,
No hat upon his head, his focking feould,
Vagfettled, and downe glu'd to his Ankle,
Pale at his firit, his knees knocking one another,
And with a fooke fo pithous in purport,
As if he had beene looke out of hell,
To speake of horrors: he comes before me.

Polon. Mad for thy Love?

Ophel. My Lord, I do not know; but truly I doe feare it.

Polon. What said he?

Ophel. He took me by the wrif't, and held mee hard:
Then goes he to the length of all his armes;
And with his other hand thus o're his brow,
He falls to such perfull of my face,
As he would draw it. Long tid he for,
At laft, a little shaking of mine Arme:
And thrice his head thus wasing up and downes;
He rais'd a high, so piitious and profound,
That is did leame to stand I Lord.

And end his being. That done, he lets mee goe,
And with his hand over his shoulders turned;
He seem'd to finde his way without his eyes,
For out adores he went without their helpes;
And to the last, bend'd their light on me.

Polon. Goe with me, I will goe seeke the King,
This is the very extremity of Love,
Whole violent property foredoes it felse.

And
And leads the will to desperate Undertakings,
As oft as any passion under Heaven,
That does afflict our Natures. I am forlorn,
What have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No my good Lord: but as you did command,
I did repel his Letters, and deny'd
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am forlorn that with better speed and judgement
I had not quoted him. I feare he did but thrive,
And meant to wracke thee: but beflrew my jealousy;
I seeme it is as proper to our Age,
To set beyond our tiews in our Opinions,
As it is common for the younger fort
To lacke discretion. Come, go we to the King,
This must be knowne, w' being kept clofe might move
More griefe to hide, then hate to utter loose.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guilden
flerne Counts.

King. Welcome deere Rosencrantz and Guilden
flerne Counts.

Moreovert, that we much did long to fee you,
The neede we have to vfe you, did provoke
Our haste sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation: I call it,
Since not th'exterior, nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should bee
More then his Fathers death, that thus hath put him
So match from th'understanding of lunells,
I cannot deeme of. I entertain you both,
That being of young days brought up with him:
And since to Neighbour'd to his youth, and humour,
That you vschsafe your self here in our Court
Some little time: so by your Companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather
So much as from Occasions you may glean,
That open'd lies within our remeide.

Q. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you,
And sure Lam, two men there are not lusing
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To shew vs so much Genteel, and good wills,
As to expend your time with vs a-while,
For the supply and proffit of our Hope,
Your Veneration shall receive such thanks
As is a Kings remembrance.

Ros. Both your Majesties
Might by the Southerne power you have of vs,
Put your dread pleasures, more into Command
Than to Entertain.

God. We both obey,
And here give vs your tione, in the full bent,
To lay our Strakes freely at your feete,
To be considrable.

Page. Thanks, Please your Majesties.

Q. Two Throners, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenfere.

And I beleefe your praeity to vs
My too much changed Sonne.
Go home of ye,
And bring the Gentleman where Hamlet is,
God. Heuens made our presence and our praeities
Pleasant and helpful to him.

Exit.

In the Lobby.

\textbf{Qy.} So he's his indeed.

\textbf{Pol.} At such a time he loose my Daughter to him, Be you and I behinde an Array then, Marke the encounter: If he lose her not, And be not from his reason falne thereon; Let me be no Afflante for a State, And keepe a Farse and Caster.

\textbf{King.} We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a Book.

\textbf{Qy.} But looke where saldy the poore wretch Comes reading.

\textbf{Pol.} Away I do beseach you, both away, he heard him presently.

\textbf{Exit King & Queen.}

\textbf{Qy.} niece indeed.

\textbf{Pol.} Do you know me, my Lord?

\textbf{Ham.} Excellent, excellent well: ye are a Fishmonger.

\textbf{Pol.} Not I say Lord.

\textbf{Ham.} Then I would you were so honest a man.

\textbf{Pol.} Honest, my Lord?

\textbf{Ham.} If to be honest as this world goes, is to bee one man pick'd out of two thousand.

\textbf{Pol.} That's very true, my Lord.

\textbf{Ham.} For if the Sunne breed Magnets in a dead doge, being a good King:

\textbf{Qy.} Have you a daughter?

\textbf{Pol.} I have my Lord.

\textbf{Ham.} Let her not walk in the Sunne: Conception is a blessing, but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend lacks too.

\textbf{Pol.} How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter; yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a Fishmonger: he is late gone, faire gone: and truly in my youth, I suffered much extremity for love: very necte this: to speake to him againe: What do you read my Lord?

\textbf{Ham.} Words, words, words.

\textbf{Pol.} What is the matter, my Lord?

\textbf{Ham.} Betweene who?

\textbf{Pol.} I mean the matter you mean, my Lord.

\textbf{Ham.} Sanders Sir: for the Saryana ielue fals here: that old men haue gray Beards: that their faces are wrinkled: that their eyes purging thicker Amber, or Plume-seeing Gumme: and that they have a plentiful Locke: : Wit, together with weake i Hammer: All which Sir, though I might povertly, and potently believe: yet I holde it not Heneful to have it thus set downe: For you your selfe Sir, should be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

\textbf{Pol.} Though thisbe madneffe, Yet there is Method in't: will you walke

\textbf{Qy.} Out of the ayre my Lord?

\textbf{Ham.} Into my Grave.

\textbf{Pol.} Indeed this is out o'lid Ayre:

\textbf{Qy.} How pregnant (sometimes)his Replies are?

\textbf{Ham.} A happyneffe, That often Madneffe hits on, Which Reacon and Samtie could not So poulently be delivered of.

\textbf{Pol.} I will leave him,

\textbf{Qy.} And sodainely construe the memere of meeting

\textbf{Ham.} Betweene him, and my daughter.

\textbf{Qy.} My Honourable Lord, I will most humbly

\textbf{Pol.} Take my leave of you.
Ham. You cannot Sir take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withal, except my life, my life.

Ford. Fare you well my Lord.

Ham. The tedious old foole.

Ford. You goe to seeke my Lord Hamlet; there hee is.

Enter Rosencranz and Guildensterne.

Ros. God tace you Sir.

Guild. Mine honour'd Lord?

Ros. My most deare Lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends? How do'ft thou

Guildensterne? Oh, Rosencranz; good Lad's: How doe ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent Children of the earth,

Guild. Happy, in that we are not out-happy: on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Sooles of her Shoos?

Ros. Neither my Lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waate, or in the middle of her favours?

Guild. Faith, her privates, we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? Oh, most true; she is a Strumpet. Whateuer the newes?

Ros. None my Lord, but that the Worlds grown ho'nest.

Ham. Then is Doomsday neere: But your newes is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you my good friends, deferred at the hands of Fortune, that he sends you to Prifon hither?

Guild. Prifon, my Lord?

Ham. Denmark's a Prison.

Ros. Then is the World one.

Ham. A goodly one, in which there are many Con-fines, Wards, and Dangeraus; Denmark being one oth' worst.

Ros. We thinke not so to my Lord.

Ham. Why then tis none to you? for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it fo: to me it is a prifon.

Ros. Why then your Ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your minde.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count my selfe a King of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guild. Which dreams indeed are Ambition: for the very substanct of the Ambitious, is meereely the Shadow of a Dreame.

Ham. A dreame it selfe is but a Shadow.

Ros. Turely, and I hold Ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadowes Shadow.

Ham. Then are our Beggers bodies, and our Monarches and out-fireshet Heroes the Beggers Shadowes: shall wee to th' Court: for, by my lea I cannot reason.

Ros. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No further matter. I will not for you with the rest of my tenants; for to speake to you like an honest man: I am most dreadfully attended; but in the beauteous waye of friendship, What make you at Elfinower?

Ros. To visit your Lord, no other occasion.

Ham. Begger than I am I am even more in thanke; but I thanke you: and thence deare friends my thanks are too due a halflegeny; were you not fent for? Is it your owne inclining? Is it a fuch visitation? Come, deald fully with me: come, come, my speake.

Guild. What should we say my Lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to the purpose you were sent for; and there is a kinde confeffion in your looks, which your modellies have not craft enough to color, I know the good King & Queene have sent for you.

Ros. To what end my Lord?

Ham. That you must teach me: but let me conjure you by the rights of our fellowship, by the confonancy of our youth, by the Obligation of our enter-prized love, and by what more dear, a better proposer could charge you withall; be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Ros. What say you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you: if you lose me hold not off.

Guild. My Lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why: so shall my anticipation present your discovery of your serfice to the King and Queene. moult no feather, I have of late, but wherefore I know not, left all my mirth, forgone all custom of exer- cise; and indeed, it goes so heavenly with my disposition that this godly frame the Earth, seems to me a fler- rill Promotany; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre, locke you, this brave ore-hanging, this Maiestical Rooffe, fretted with golden fire: why, it appears no other thing to me, then a soule and pestifent congregation of vapours. What a piece of worke is a man! how Noble in Reason? how infinite in facrity? in forme and mowing how express and admirable? in Action, how like an Angel? in apprehension, how like a God? the beauty of the world, the Parragon of Animals; and yet to me, what is this Quincefence of Dull? Man delights not me; no, nor Woman neither; through your finding you seeme to say fo.

Ros. My Lord, there was no such stuffe in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my Lord, if you delight not in Man, what Lenton entertainment the Players shall receive from you. wee coateth them on the way, and hither are they coming to offer you Service.

Ham. He that plays the King shall be welcome; his Maelhly shall have Tribute of mee: the aduenturous Knight shall vie his Foyle and Targe: the Lour shall not figh graci, the humorus man shall end his part in peace: the Cloone shall make to laugh whole lunge are tickled a'th' fere: and the Lady fhal say her minde freely: or the blanke Verfe fhal haf't for: what Players are they?

Ros. Even tho'fe you were wont to take delight in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chances it they traualle their residence both in reputation and profit was better both ways.

Ros. I think their Inhibition comes by the meanes of the Innomation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the City? Are they so follow'd?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rufily?

Ros. Nay, their deadeauer keepes in the wonded peace; But there is Sir an ayrie of Children, little Yales, that eye out on the top of question; and are moft tyrannically cleft for': these are now the falfashion, and be rated the common Stages (to they call them) that many westing Hapines, are affraide of Good's quiets, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What are they Children? Who maintains 'em? How are they cected? Will they pursue the Quality no longer then they can sing? Will they not stay afterwards if they should grow themselves to common Players (as it is like most if their meanings are not better) their Writers do them wrong, to make them excil in against their owne Succession.

Rofin. Faith there he's beene much to do on both sides: and the Nation holds it no time, to tarme them to Contreouerse. There was a while, no many bod for argument, vntele the Poet and the Player went to Cusses in the Question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Gat. Oh there's beene much throwing about of Brains.

Ham. Do the Boyes carry it away?

Role. I that they do by my Lord, Hercules & his load too.

Ham. It is not strange: for mine Vnkle is King of Denmarke, and those that would make moves at him while my Father lived: give twenty, forty, an hundred Ducates a piece, for his picture in Little. There is something in this more then Naturally, if Philosophy could find it out.

Enter Polonius.

Ham. There are the Players.

Gat. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elgovernor: your hands, come: The apperance of Welcome, is Fashion and Ceremony. Let me comply with you in the Garbe, left my Extent to the Players (which I tell you must shew fairly outward) should more appeare like entertainment then yours. You are welcome: but my Vnkle Father, and Aunt Mother are decight'd.

Gat. In what may I deere Lord?

Ham. I am bound North, North-West: when the Wind is Southely, I know a Hawke from a Hafialw.

Enter Polonius.

Pof. Well be with you Gentlemen.

Ham. Hearke you Guilderflere, and you too: at each ear a hearer: that great Bay you fee there, is not yet out of his quawhing clouts.

Pof. Happines his second time come to them: for they say an old man is twice a childe.

Ham. I will Prophese. Hee comes to tell me of the Players. Mark it, you say right Sir: for a Monday morr: was 2o. to 21.

Pof. My Lord, I have Newes to tell you.

Ham. My Lord, I have Newes to tell you, When Roffin an Actor in Rome—

Pof. The Actors are come hither my Lord,

Ham. Burze, Burze.

Pof. Vpon mine Honor.

Ham. Then can each Actor on his Affe—

Pof. Ham. O Iephis Judge of Israel, what a Treasure hadst thou?

Pof. What a Treasure had he, my Lord?

Ham. Why one Fair Daughter, and no more,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

So as a painted Tyrant Pyrrhus stood,
And like a Newtroll to his will and matter, did nothing.
But as we often fee against some Groome,
A silence in the Heauens, the Racke fland still,
The bold winde speechlesse, and the Orbe below.
As hauing at death: Anoon the dreadfull Thunder
Doth rend the Region. So after Pyrrhus pause,
A roveld Vengeance sets him new a-workes;
And neither did the Cyclops hammers fall.
On Mars his Armes, forg'd for proofe Eterne.
With Ieffe remoti then Pyrrhus bleeding sword
Now tallies on Friasam.
Out, out, thou Strumpet-Fortune, all you Gods,
In general Synod take away her power:
Breake all the Spokes and Fallies from her wheele,
And boule the round Naue downe the hill of Heauen,
As low as to the Friends.

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to th' Barbars, with your beard, Prythee say one: He's for a Ligge, or a tale of Baudry, or hee slips. Say on; come to Eclecta.

1. Play. But who, O who, had seen the inobled Queen.

Ham. The inobled Queen?

Pol. That's good: Inobled Queen is good.

1. Play. Run bare-foot vp and downe,

Threatening the flame
With Difon Rheume: A clout about that head,
Where is the Diadem good, and for a Robe
About her necke and all ore-teened I sees,
A blanket in th'Ataru offear caught vp.
Who this had seene, with tongue in Venome sleepe'd,
'Gainst Fortunes State, would Freslon have pronounc'd? But if the Gods themselves did feer her then,
When the two Pyrrhus make mischievous sport
In musing with his Sword the Husband's Limbes,
The infaute Burlel of Clamour that shee made
(Valefit things morall more than not all)
Would haue made michtle the Burning eyes of Heauen,
And passion in the Gods.

Pol. Looke where he ha's not turn'd his colour, and ha's teares in his eyes. Pray you no more.

Ham. 'Tis well, Ile haue thee speake out the rest.

Good my Lord, will you see the Players will be-flowt? Do you haue, let them be well aud'd: for they are the Abstraction and brefee Chronicals of the time.
After your death, you were better haue a good Epitaph, then their ill report while you lived.

Pol. My Lord, I wil vse them according to their de-far.

Ham. Gods bodykins man, better. We euerie man after his death, and who should fepehe whipping: we them after your own Honor and Diugny. The lefle they defence, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come in.

Ham. Follow him Friends: wee'ld haue a play to morrow.

Disdoin here be my old Friends, can you play the murder of Gammie?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. Wee'ld haue a to morrow night. You could for a need dayly a speeche of some dozen or sixeteene lines, which I would let downe, and infite in't? Could ye not?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that Lord, and looke you more him not. My good Friends, Ile leaue you til night you are welcome to Elsenower.

Pol. Good my Lord.

Ham. Ile, God buye ye: Now I am alone.
Oh what a Rogue and Peleant Buestem I?
Is it not monstrous that this Player beare,
But in a Fasion, in a dreame of Passion.
Could force his soule so to his whole concit,
That from her working, all his visage wand'd;
Tears in his eyes, distraction in his Aspect,
A broken voyce, and his whole Function sulking
With Formes, to his Concit? And all for nothing:
For Eclecta?

What's Eclecta to him, or he to Eclecta?
That he should weep for her? What would be doe,
Had he the Mottie and the Cte for passion
That I have? He would drown the Stage with tears,
And cleare the general care with horrid speech;
Make mad the guilty, and spale the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze Indeed,
The very fucility of Eyes and Eares Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled Raffle, speak
Like Iohn a dreames, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing: No, not for a King,
Upon whole property, and most dere life,
A damned deteas was made. Am I a Coward?
Who calls me Villaine? breaks my pare-a-croffe?
Pluckes off my Beard, and blowes it in my Face
I will see me by't! God! I will see the Lye t's Throat,
At depe to the Lungs? Who does me this?
Ha! Why I should take it for it cannot be,
But I am Pigeon-Lier'd, and lacke Gall
To make Opposition bitter, or ere this,
I should have fatted all the Region Xites
With this Stoves Offal, blonely, a Bawdy Villaine.
Romelfiffe, feverous, Licherrous, Ladds Villaine!
Oh Vengeance!
Who's what an Abre am I? I fear, this is most braue,
That I, the Sonne of the Deere murthered,
Promp't to my Revenge by Heauen, and Hell,
Muli (like a Where) vnpacke my heart with words,
And fall a curing like a very Drab,
A Scollin Eye vnp'n; Foh. About my Braine.
I have heard, that guilty Creatures fasting at a Play,
Have by the very running of the Scene,
Boste frauke to the foule, that prentitily
They have proclaimed their Mensions.
For Myther, thought I haue no tongue, will speake
With most myraculous Organ. Ie haue these Players,
Play somthing I ke the murder of my Father,
Before mine Yoke. Ie obserue his lookes,
He rent him to the quick: Iife but blinch.
I know my eare. The Spirit that I haue seene
May be the Dunt, and the Diut hath power
T'sulme ascending rape, yea and perhaps
Out of my Weskelle, and my Melancholy,
As he is very potent with such Spirits,
Abules me to damme it. Ie haue grondes
More Retrace then this: The Play's the thing,
Wherein Ile catch the Conference of the King.

Exit Enter King, Queens, Politian, Ophelion, Ret
Uncorner, Gadirbem, and Lords.

King. And can you by no drift of circumstance
Get from him why he puts on this Confusion:
Grating to hardly all his days of quiet

With
With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.

Oph. This does confel he feels himfelf diftract,
But from what caufe he will by no /means fpake.

Act. Nor do we finde him forward to be founded,
But with a crafty Madneffe keeps aloofe;
When we would bring him on to feene Confifion
Of his true State.

Oph. Did he receive you well?

Oph. Moft like a Gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his refolution.

Oph. Niggard of queftion, but of our demands
Moft free in his reply.

Guil. Did you diflaff him to any pallime?

Oph. Madam, it is fell out, that certaine Players
We are fraught on the way: of these we told him,
And there did feeme in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: They are about the Court,
And (as I think) they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true:

Oph. And he befeech'd me to intreate your Maieffies
To hear, and fee the matter.

King. With all my heart, and it flack much content me
To bear him to incline. Good Gentleman,
Guide him a further degree, and direct his purpose on
To thefe delights.

Oph. We thall my lord. Exeunt.

King. Sweet Gerrard's leafe vs, too,
For we have clofeely rent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may there
Affront Ophelia. Her Father, and my lefe(lawfull fpirits)
Will to b. threat our felues, that fearing vnfeene
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him as he is behaund,
If he be filled of his love, or no,
That thus he fufes for.

Oph. I fhall obey you,
And you my part Ophelia, I do with
That your good Beauties be the happy caufe
Of Hamlet's wildefce: so fmall I hope your Vertues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your Honors.

Oph. Madam, I with it may.

Pol. Ophelia, walke you hiee. Gracious fo pleafe ye
We will beftow our felues: Readie on this bookes,
That few of fuch an exercife may colour
Your loueniffe. We are oft too blame in this,
'Tis too much proud, that with Devotions vรงge,
And pious Adion, we do favage
The diuell himfelfe;

King. O'tis true:

How in a laft that speech dech gue my Confidence?
The Havens Cheefe bemoad with planting Art
Is not more vtigle to the mung that helps it,
Then is my dace, to my most painted word.
Oh beast fturth!

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Quefion:
Whether 'tis Nobler in the minde to suffer
The Slings and Arrows of our courfeg Fortune,
Or to take Arms againft a Sea of troubles,
And by oppothing end them: to dye, to fpake
No more; and by a fpake, to fiepe
The Heart-sake, and the thousand Natural hooke

That Fiefl is heere too? 'Tis a commification
Devoutly to be with'd. To dye to fpake.
To fpake, perchance to Dreames; I, there's the rub:
For in that fpake of death, where dreams may come,
When we have fhuffle'd off this mortal coil,
Must gue vs pawfe. There's the reftep
That makes Cramity of fo long life:
For who would bear the Whips and Scornes of time,
The Oppreffors wrong, the poore mans Comually,
The pangs of difpir'd Lour, the Lawes delay,
The infolence of Office, and the Spurnes
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he hanfele might his Honours make
With a bare Bothkin! Who would then Pardies beare
To grin and fweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of somethings after death,
The undervoyed Countrey, from whole Borne
No Traveller returns, Pursels the will,
And makes us rather beare thofe illes we have,
Then flye to others that we know nor of.
Thus Confiance does make Cawards of vs all,
And thus the Nature hew of Revolution
Is fchekd offe, with the pairlraft of Thought,
And enterizes of great pith and moment,
With this regard their Currents turne away,
And lose the name of Athon. Soft you now,
The faire Ophelia? Nymph, in thy Orizons
Be all my ifnes rememdered.

Oph. Good my Lord,
How does your Honor for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you well, well.

Oph. My Lord, I have Renned brains of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver,
I pray you now, receive them.

Ham. No, no, I neuer gue you ought.

Oph. My honor'd Lord, I know right well you did,
And with them words of fo sweet breath comfor'd,
As made the things more rich, then perfume left;
Take thefs againe, for to the Noble minde
Rich gifts was yore, when gues proue vnkinde.

There my Lord.

Ham. Ha! ha! Are you honeft?

Oph. My Lord.

Ham. Are you faire?

Oph. What meanes your Lordchip?

Ham. That if you be honeft and faire, your Honesty
Should adme no discourse to your Beautie.

Oph. Could Beautie my Lord, have better Comerce
Then you? Honesty?

Ham. I trulie: for the power of Beautie, will sooner transforme Honofie from what it is, to a flawe, then the force of Honofie can translate Beautie into his likenesse.
This was Sometime a Paradox, but now the time gues it
proife, I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed my Lord, you made me beleaue so.

Ham. You should not have beleaved me. For verue cannot fo increacalare our old Ifkes, but we shall elilh offe. I loued you not.

Oph. I was the more deceive.

Ham. Get thee to a Nunnerie. Why wouldst thou be a breeder of Sinners? I saw my felfe indifferent honeft, but yet I could cable me of fuch things, that it were bette my Mother had not borne me. I am very proud, recuelful, Ambitious, with more offences at my behide, then I have thoughts to put them in imagination, to gue them shape, or tune to sette them in. What shoulst fuch

Wherein his Branes still bresting, put him thus
From sauciness of himselfe. What think you of it?

Pol. It shall do well. But yet do I beleve
This Oraison and Commencement of this speech
Spring from negligence loose. How now Ophelia?

Ham. Speak it. I pray you, and pronounce it to you trippingly on the Tongue! But if you should, as many of your Players do, blunter how the Towns-Gait and make the Words appear as if they did not know the Words, nor do not the Ayres too much on your hand thus, but we'll all gently, for we be the very Torrent, Tempest, and (as I may say) the Whole-wind of Pallas, you must acquire and begat a Temperance that may give it Smoothness. Or it extends more to the Soul, to see aособtions, Pery-wigged Fellow, severe a Pell-otio on to tatters, to verie ragges, to light the cares of the Groundlings; who (for the most part) are capable of nothing, but inexplicable durne flavues, & noke it could have lost a Fellow whippe for a trodden Ternagant: it is out. Horns: Sir. Pray you shun it.

Player. I warrant your Honor.

Ham. Be not too near every body: but yor owne
To feed & cleath thee. Why shold the poor be flatter'd?
No, let the Clandest tongue, like abord pompe,
And crooke the pregnant Hinges of the knee,
Where thift may follow fainting? Doth thou hear,
Since my deere Soul was Midst of my cheyrie,
And could of men daffing title, her election
Hath seal'd thee for her selfe. For thou hall bene
As one in suffering, all, that fift her nothing.
A mean that Fortunes busses, and Rewards
Hath time with equal Thibles. And bide are those,
Whose brain and Judgement are so well controuled,
That they are not a pipe for Extremes fingers.
To bound what flitst the pests. Give me that men,
That is not Pasioned State, and I will waste him
In my hearts Cost. I am in my Heart of heart,
As I do triste, Something in man of this.
There is a Play tonight before the King.
One Scene of it cometh to the Constantance
Would I have told thee, of my Father's death.
I prysthe, when theen felthe, at one-foot,
Even with the verti Commen with my Soule
Oblesone mune Volke: It is occul'd, guils,
Do not it felthe volkenn in one speech.
It is a damned Ghoile that we have found.
And my Imagination are as foulis
As Vunctus Smythe. Give me needful note,
For I mine eyes will riute to his Face.
And after we will both our Judgments tayne,
To cenure of his seeming.
Hara. Well my Lord.
I fine steele oughts the whilome this Play: Playing.
And logs detecting, I will pay the least.

Enter King, Queene, Pelican, Ophe.
Flyre, Sibyl, &c.

King. They are comming to the Play: I must be idle.
Get you a place.

Ham. How fares our Caffa Hand?

Ham. Excellent Youth, of the Camelus mystifie: I tate the Ayre promis-cram'd: if you can't seet Capons in.

Ham. I tis nothing with this utter Hamlet, these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now my Lord, you plaid once
Purturying, you lay?

Polon. That I did my Lord, and was accounted a good Actor.

Ham. And what did you enq.?

Pol. I did enq. Jesus Caesar, I was kill'd. In Capitol:
Bristus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a bruite part of him, to kill so Capitol a Caffe there. Be the Players ready?

Pol. In, my Lord, they lay upon your patience.

Ham. Come hither my good Hamlet, fit by me.

Ham. No good Mother, herebe Mettle more atroce.

Pol. Oh no, do you marke that?

Ham. Ladie, shall I lye in your Lap?

Ophe. To my Lord.

Ham. I mean, my Head upon your Lap?

Ophe. To my Lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant Country matters?

Ophe. I think neithe, my Lord.

Ham. That's a faire sight to ly between Maids legs

Ophe. What is my Lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Ophe. You are merry, my Lord?

Ham. Who I?

Ophe. I my Lord.

Ham. Oh God, your onely ligge-maker: what shoul a man do, but be merry. For looke you how cheerfully my Mother lookes, and my Father dyed within two Houres.

Ophe. Nay, this twice two moneths, my Lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then let the Dueel were blacke,
For he have a suite of Sables. Oh Heauen! dye two moneths ago, and not forgotten yet. Then there's hope, a great man Memore, my one-line his life hafe a yeare:
But bylynde he must buckle Churches then: er elle shall beare that not shirking on; with the Hoby-horfe, whose Epanhish, For o, for o, the Hoby-horfe is forgot.

Hoby-horfe. The dambe dore enters.

Enter a King and Queene, very laughes; the Queen embracing him. Sic blest, and makes hew of hew fitness unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head of her neck.
Loves him daune upon a Bank of Flowers. She feeding him a sleepe, leaves him. Aon comes in a Fellow, takes off his Capone, if first, and proues perfon in the King comes, and Exit. The Queene removes, finds the King died, and makes a speenfull Aiton. The Poehyfer, with some two or three Alotes comes in againe, seeming to lenome with her.
The dead body is carried away: Th: Poehyfer Wastes the Queene withGift: she seines loud and unsquillling awake,
but in the end, accept his fone.

Ophe. What means this, my Lord?

Ham. Marry this is Mischke Melscho, that means Milicbeee.

Ophe. Delike this fles importa the Argument of the Play?

Ham. We shall know by those Fellows: the Players cannot becone crawfell, they'll tell all.

Ophe. Will they tell vs what this show meanes?

Ham. I, or any fow that you'll shew him. But not you allom'd to shew, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Ophe. You are taught you are nought, he marke the Play.

Enter Prologue.

For us, and for our Tragedie,
There standing to your Clum外ie:
We beg your hearing Patience.

Ham. Is this a Prologue, or the Poeme of a Ring?

Ophe. To briterie my Lord.

Ham. As Women love.

Enter King and his Queene.

King. Full three times shalt thou Phebus cast gon round,
Neptunes gate Wath, and Telloh Obred ground:
And thou Jornahs in Monsew with borrowed greceme,
About the World haue times eleu crime tres,
Since looke our hearts, and Afmen did out hands
Vinte eeuvalut, in natt爔e freche bandes.

Pop. So many iournies may the Sunne and Moone
Make a vigne court of, ere loxe be done.
But were it the day of this, I like of late,
So farre from cleere, and from thy tromes flat,
That I difftruf you: yet though I difftruf,
Discomfort you (my Lord) it nothing mut:
For womens face and loye, holds quantitie,

Ham. What is my Lord?
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

In neither ought, or in extremity:
Now what my love is, prove'st hath made you know,
And as my love is fitz'd, my face is so.

King. Faith! I must leave thee, love, and shortly too:
My operant Powers my Functions leave to do:
And thou that livest in this faire world behinde,
Hast still, beyond, and, haply, one as kind.

For Husband fist then...

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. O, confound the reft!
Such love, must needs be Treston in my brest:
In second Husband, let me be, as first,
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. Worm wood, Wormwood.

Ham. The influence that second marriage mov'd,
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love.
A second time, I kill my Husband dead,
When second Husband kiss'd time in Bed.

King. I do believe you. Think what now you speak:
But what you do determine, oft we broke:
Purpose is but the flame to Memory,
Of violent Birth, but poore validitie:

Which now like true vartie fklicks on the Tree,
But fall vnshak'en, when they mumble bee,
Most necessarie tip, that we forget,
To pay our lefles, what to our lefles is delit:

What to our lefles in passion we profess,
The paffion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of other Greefe or toy,

Their owne emneters with theirselves deftoy:

Where joy must Reults, Greefe doth melt lament:

Greefe inyes, joy greeves on flemter accident,
This world is not for eye, nor is't not ftrange
That even our Loves should with our Fortunes change.
For it's a question life vs yet to prove,
Whether Love lead Fortune, or the Fortune Love.
The great man downe, you make his fumanres fliret,
The poore aduanced makes Friends of Enemies:
And theefe both Love on Fortune rend,
For who not needs, that fhe never lacke a Fren:
And who in want a hollow Fren doth try,
Directly fesoms him his Enemy.

But orderly to end, where I began,
Our Walls and Faces do fo contrary run,
That our Devices f.Call are counterwoame,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our owne.

So thinke I thou wilt no fcond Husband wed.
But die thy thoughts, when thy late Lord is dead,
Sed. Nor Earth to give me food, nor Heaven light,
Spy on, and reject it from me and night:
Each apperece that blantes the face of toy,
Meet what I would have well, and it deftoy.

Both here, and hence, purchafe me laffing life,
If once a W. Widow, ever the Wife.

Ham. Haply he fhould break it now.

King. This deeply twernes:

Sed. Come, let us enter a while,
My wife is your selfe, and feme I would beguile
The habit of my body,
No frates, make thy braine,
Shakes

Another come with a braine betweene vs twain,
Exit.

Ham. Madam, owle I like you this Play?
Shakes. On, The I apprehended much to much I thinkes.
Face. O, but I kepe her word.

King. Have you heard the Argument, is there no Of-Recently?

Ham. No, no, they do but iert, peyson in iert, no Offence i'th world.

King. What do you call the Play?

Ham. The Moule-trap; Marry how? Tripically:

This Play is the Image of a murder done in Vienna: Gomauge is the Dukes name, his wife Baptifea: you shall fee soon: this is an Irish piece of worke: But what o'tho?
Your Majestie, and wee that have free foules, it touches us not: let the gild iade winchour writers are vangun.

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus nephew to the King.

Ophie. You are a good Chorus, my Lord,
Ham. I could interpret between you and your love:
If I could see the Puppets dallying.

Ophie. You are keene my Lord, you are henece.
Ham. It would call you a greene, to take off my edge.

Ophie. Still better and worse.

Ham. So you must一边 Husbands.

Begin Murderer. Box, leave thy damnable Face, and begin. Come, the crooking. Reston doth bellow for Revenge.

Lucus. Thoughts blacke, hands ept,
Drages fit, and Time agreeing:

Considerate fation, else no Creature feiting:
Thus mixture ranke, of Midnight Weeds collected,
With Heaces Ben, three blasted, three infected,
Thy natural Magicks, and dire propertie,
On whomfoeuer life, viepe immediately.

Poyse the payson in his eyes.

Ham. He payson him i'th Garden for his elfes:
His name, Gomauge: the Story is extant and writ in choyce Italian. You shall see how the Marthcer get the line of Gomauge's wife.

Ophie. The King riles.

Ham. What, frighted with fale fire?
Q. How facies my Lord?

Ophie. Give o' the Play.

King. Give me some Light. Away.

Extant.

Ham. Why lest the stracken Dreve go wepe,
The Hart anggled play:

For some and in this, while some more sleepe;
So runnes the world away.

Would not this Sir, and a Forreft of Feathers, if the reft of my Fortunes some Turke with me, with two Provinciiall Roles on my rau'd Shoves, get me a Fellowship in a crie of Players fit.

Ham. Half a Fierce.

Ham. A whole one I,
For thou doft know: Oh Dauen deere,
This Realme dismasted was of love himselfe,
And now reignes here.

A verie verie Piacke.

Ham. You might haue Rim'd.

Ham. Oh good Herat. He take the Ghost word for a thousand pecey mind. Did i' th'Hear?
Ham. Venie will my Lord.

Ham. Vpon the talke of the paysoning?
Ham. I did verie well note him.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenfrence.

Ham. Oh, ha! Come some Mufick. Come ye Recorder;
For if the King like not the Camdrie,
Why then brike he likes it not perdie.
Come some Mufick.

Could Gound my Lord, youch safe me a word with you.

Ham.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Sir, a whole History.

Guild. The King, sir.

Ham. If truth, what of him?

Guild. Is in his retirement, marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink sir?

Guild. No my Lord, rather with cholער.

Ham. Your wife done should they be more settled, to figure this to his Doctor: for me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plague him into further more Choller.

Guild. Good my Lord put your discourse into some frame, and then to wildly from my affayre.

Ham. I am tame Sir, pronounce.

Guild. Nay, good my Lord, this courtesie is not of the right breed. It it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your Mothers commandments: if not your pardon, and my returne shall be the end of my Business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guild What, my Lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wits distilled. But sir, such answers as I can make, you shall command: or rather you say, my Mother: the fore no more but to the matter. My Minister you say.

Ref. Then thus fire syes: your behavior hath stroke her into amusement, and admiration.

Ham. Oh wonderfull Sunne, that can so astonish a Mother. But is there no regall at the heels of this Mothers admiration?

Ref. She desires to speake with you in her Cloister, are you going to bed.

Ham. We will obey, were the seven times our Mother.

Have you any farther Trade with us?

Ref. My Lord, you onceoblige me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ref. Good my Lord, what is your cause of different? You do so freely bare the doore of your owne Liberty, if you deny your greeves to your Friend.

Ham. Sir I lacke Advancement.

Ref. How can that be, when you have the voyage of the King himselfe, for your Succeedion in Denmark?

Ham. I, but while the grass growes, the Proverb is something mushy.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me fee, to withdraw with you, why do you go about to recover the winde of mee, as if you would drive me into a toyle?

Guild. O my Lord, if my Duty be too bold, my love is too vnmanerly.

Ham. I do not well under that and that. Will you play upon this Pipe?

Guild. My Lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guild. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseach you.

Guild. I know no touch of it, my Lord.

Ham. Tis as easie as lying; gonne these Venitges with your finger and thumbe, blow it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most excellent Muficke.

Looke you, these are the stopes.

Guild. But hence, this can command to any vterance of harmony, I hate not the skill.

Ham. Why looke you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me; you would play upon me; you would seeme to know my flops; you would pluck out the heart of my Mylerie; you would found mee from my lowest Note, to the top of my Compasse; and there is much Muficke, excellent Voice, in this little Organe, yet cannot you make it. Why do you thinke, that I am easier to bee plaid on, then a Pippet Call me what Instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. God bleed you Sir.

Enter Polonius.

Polon. My Lord, the Queene would speak with you, and prentely.

Ham. Do you see that Clown? that's almost in shape like a Camell.

Polon. By'ld! Mifle, and it is like a Camell indeed.

Ham. Me thinkes it is like a Waswell.

Polon. It is back'd like a Waswell.

Ham. Or like a Whale?

Polon. Verie like a Whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my Mother, by and by: They foole me to the top of my bint. I will come by and by.

Polon. I will say fo.

Ham. By and by is, eysi said. Leave me Friends: This is now the very witching time of night, When Churchyards yawn, and Hell it selfe breathe out Contagion to this world. New could I drink hot blood, And do such bitter Business as the day Would quike to looke on. Sett now to, my Mother: Oh Heare, looke not thy Nourse; I wish not ever The Scale of Aro, enter this time bfore: Let me be cruel, not vnmanerly, I will speake Daggers to her; Ture vie none: My Tongue and Soule in this be Hypocrises. How in my words for formerly be shent: To gue them Scales, never my Soule concett.

Enter King, Reformation, and Guildinserce.

King. I like ham not, not standes it safe with vs, To let his madnisse range. Therefore prepare you, I your Commision forthwith with dispatch, And he to England shall along with you: To the terms of our estate, maye not endure Hazard so dangerous as doth hourly grow. Out of his Lunacies.

Guild. We will our felues provide: Make boile and Religious feare is it To kepe those many many bouses safe That pride and feede upon your Maiestie.

Ref. The sngle.

And peculiar life is bound With all the strength and Armour of the mind, To kepe it felle foom noyance: but much more, That Spirit, upone whose spirit depends and refits The lives of many, the sake of Maiestie Dies not alone, but like a Guife doth draw What's necer, with it. It is a mastie wheel Fixt on the Sommut of the highest Mount, To whose hight Spokes, ten thousand letter things Are mortiz'd and adioyn'd: which when it falles, Each small annexment, petitie consequencce Is left to the boytous Ruine. Never alone Did the King tighe, but with a general groane.

King. Arm ye, I pray you to this speedie Voyage; For we will betters put upon this feare.

Which
When he is drunke asleep: or in his Rage, He or in his infeetuous pleasure of his bed, At gaming, in seeing, or about some silly That he’s no relief of Saluation in’t, Then trip him, that his heeles may kicke at Heaven, And that his Soule may be as damnd and blacke As Hell, where it goes. My Mother says, This Phylficke but prolongs thy sickly dayes.  Exit. King. My words fly vp, my thoughts remain below, Words without thoughts, neuer to Heaven go. Exit.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight.

Look ye lay home to him, Tell him your pranks have been too broad to bear with, And that your Grace hath seene, and knowe to be, Much heare, and him. Ile silence me e’ene here: Pray you be round with him.

Ham. Within. Mother, mother, mother,

Oh. Ile warrant you, Ieare me not.

Withdraw, I hope Iearing comming.

Exit. Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now Mother, what’s the matter?

Qu. Hamlet, thou hast thy Father much offended,

Ham. Mother, you have my Father much offended. Qu. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you prizeth with an idle tongue.

Qu. Why how now Hamlet?

Ham. What’s the matter now?

Qu. Haue you forgett me?

Ham. No by the Rood, not so: You are the Queene, your Husbands Brothers wife, But would you were not so. You are my Mother. Qu. Nay, then let me trothe to you that can speake.

Ham. Come, come, and let you downe, you shall not budge:

You go not till I let you vp a glasse, Where you may see the innot all part of you?

Qu. What wilt thou do? wilt not me murder thee?

Help, help, help.

Pol. What how help, help, help,

Ham. How now, a Mad dead for a Ducate, dead.

Pol. Oh, I am thy Mother.

Qu. Of me, what haft thou done?

Ham. Nay I know not, is it the King?

Qu. Oh what a rash, and bloody deed is this?

Ham. A bloody deed, almost as bad good Mother, As kill a King, and marry with his Brother.

Qu. As kill a King?

Ham. I laby, it was my word.

They were dead, vs, intruding foole farewell, I took thee right for thy Bitters, take thy Fortune, I thought it to be too buffe, is some danger.

Leane wighting of your hands, peace, fit you downe, And let me wring your heart, for so I shall It be made of penetrable stuffe; It damnd Cuilbome have not braund it so, There are people and bulwarke against Senes. Qu. What have I done, that thou darit wag thy tong, In noile so rude against me?

Ham. Such an Aet

That blurs the grace and blush of Moderhie, Casts Virtue Hapostacy, takes off the Rose From the faire forehead of an innocent louse, And makes a bliffer there. Makes marriage voweas

As idle as Durers Othes. Oh such a deed,

As
The Tragedy of Hamlet.

As from the body of Contraction plucks The very soul, and sweete Religion makes A rapifdife of words. Heaven face doth glow, Yet this folidity and compound fame, With trifull village as against the doome, Is thought-keke at the set.

Qu. Aye me; what ait, that roares so loud, & thunders in the Index.

Ham. Lookke hereupon this Picture, and on this, The counterfeft prefentment of two Brothers: See what a grace was feated on his Brow, Hypertions curls, the front of Ioue himsfife, An eye like Mars, to threaten or command A Station, like the Herald Mercury New lighted on a heaven-killing hill: A Combinacion, and a forme indeed, Where every God did seeme to fet his Seale, To giusse the whole affurance of a man. This was your Husband. Lookke you now what follows. Here is your Husband, like a Milden'd eare Blaffing his wholofm breath. Have you eyes? Could you on this faire Mountaine leave to feed, And batten on this Moore? Ha? Have you eyes? You cannot call it Loue: For at your age, The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble, And waftes upon the Judgement: and what Judgement Would step from this, to this? That what dwell was't, That thus hath coufined at his handom-blinde? O Shame! where is thy Blufh? Rebellionfull Hell, If you can't mutine in a Matrons bones, To flaming youth, let Venture be as waxe, And melt in her owne fire. Proclamation no shame, When the compulfive Ardue gives the charge, Since Froul felfe, as a dyeely doth burne, As heaflon panders Will.

Qu. O Hamlet, speake no more. Thou turm' mine eyes into my very soule, And there I fee fuchs blacke and grained spots, As will not leave their Tine.

Ham. Nay, but to live In the ranke weat of an enfeamed bed, Stew'd in Corruption; honing and making love Once the nofty Sye. Qu. O, Speake to me no more; These words like Daggers enter in mine eare.

No more fweet Hamlet.

Ham. A Murderer, and a Villaine: A Slave, that is not twenitie pat the thyhe Of your precedent Lord. A Vice of Kings, A Curspur of the Empire and the Rite. That from a fphere the precious Diadem folle, And put in his Pocket.

Qu. No more.

Enter Gloucester.

Ham. A King of fiefdes and pachers. Sene me; and houre o'te me with your wings You heavenly Guards. What would your gracious figure? Qu. Alas he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy Sonne to chide, That lapp's in Time and Patron, less go by This important {election of your dread command? Oh say.

Glo. Do not forgets this Vifitation Is but to whe ther alfoft blunted purpose, But looke, Amazement on the Mother fits; O ftep between her, and her fighting Soule, Conceit in weakest bodies, strongest wrokes.

Speak to her Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you Lady? Qu. Also, how is't with you? That you bend your eye on vacant, And with their corporall eye do hold discouere. Forth at your eyes, your spirits wildeely pepe, And as the sleeping Soldiours in th'Altarome, Your bedded hair, like life in excrement, Start vp, and stand an end. Oh gentle Sonne; Upon the heart and flame of thy distemper Sprinkle coule patience. Whereon do you looke?

Ham. On him, on him: look you how pale he glares, His forme and faufe conioy'd, preching to ftones, Would make them capable. Do not looke unto me, Leaft with this piteous action you converte, My ferene effects: then what I haue to do, Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood.

Qu. To who do you speake this? Ham. Do you feen nothing there? Qu. Nothing at all, yet all that is I fee. Ham. Nor did you nothing heare? Qu. No, nothing but our feloes.

Ham. Why look you there: looke how it stears away:

My Father in his habite, as he lued, Looke where he goes even now out at the Portall. Exit. Qu. This is the very eonyage of your Braine, This bodifiif Creation extasie is very cunning in

Ham. Extasie? My Pufle as yours doth temperately keep time, And makes as healthfull Muchcke, it is not madneffe That I haue vitered; bring me to the Left And I the matter will re-word: which madneffe Would gamboll from. Mother,for Ioue of Grace, Lay not a flattering Vifion to your face, That not your trefteffe, but my madneffe speaks: It will but skin and flme the Vicious place, Whilft ranke Corruption mining all within, Infects vnleone. Confesse your felfe to Heauen, Repent what's paft, auoyd what is to come, And do not flrend the Composft or the Weedes, To make them ranke. Forgue me this my Vertue, For in the paffeffe of this purifie times,

Vertue is felle, of Vice must pafdon Begy, You coure, and woe for loose to do him good.

Qu. Oh Hamlet, Thou haft cleft my heart in twaine.

Ham. O throw away the worfer part of if, And luce the purer with the other halfe. Good night, but go not to mine Vnkes bed, Aflume a Vertue, if you haue it not, refraine to tighe, And that shall lend a kinde of eafineffe To the next abstinence. Once more goodnight, And when you are defirous to be bleffe, Ile blesling begge of you. For this fame Lord, I do repent: but heauen hath plead's it fo, To punifh me with this, and this with me, That I muft be their Scourge and Minifie. I will befrow him, and will anfwere well The death I gave him: to againe, good night; I muft be cruel, one may be kinde, Thus bad begins and worfe remains behind.

Qu. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this by no meanes that I bid you do; Let the blunt King temp you againe to bed, Pinch Wanton on your cheeke, call you his Moufe, And let him for a pair of recchie knifes,
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

To let them know both what we meane to do,
And what's vnintime done. Oh come away,
My soule is full of discord and dismay.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely flow'd.
Gentlemen within, Hamlet, Lord Hamlet.
Ham. What noise? Who calls on Hamlet?
Ohheere they come. Enter Ros and Guildenfemre.
Re. What have you done my Lord with the dead body?
Ham. Compound it with dust, whereto 'tis kinne.
Rosn. Tell vs where 'tis that we may take it thence,
And beare to it the Chappell.
Ham. Do not beleue it.
Rosn. Beleue what?
Ham. That I can keepe your counsell, and not mine owne. Befide, to be demanded of a Spundge, what replication should be made by the Sonne of a King. Rosn. Take you me for a Spundge, my Lord?
Ham. I fir, that fokes up the Kings Countenance, his Rewards, his Authoritie (but fuch Officers do the King) benturce in the end. He keeps them like an Ape in the corner of his law, first mouth'd to be last swallowed, when he needs what you have gaurd'd, it is but fqueezing you, and Spundge you shall be dry againe.
Rosn. I vnderstand you not my Lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: a knauff speech sleepes in a foole's ear.
Rosn. My Lord, you must tell vs where the body is, and po watch vs to the King.
Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King is a thing —
Guil. A thing my Lord?
Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him, hide Fox, and all after.

Enter King.

King. I have sent to fecke him, and to find the bodie How dangerous it is that this man goes to slee.
Yet must not we put the strong Law on him: He's louted of the disrated multitude, Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes: And where 'tis so, th'Offenders scourge is weigh'd But never the offence: to bear all smooth, and even, This foaraire lending him away, must seeme Delicate past, defac'd desperate grown, By deferves an appliance to be relieved, Or not at. II. Exeunt Refractors.

How now? What hath befalne? Rosn. Where the dead body is below'd my Lord, We cannot get from him. King. But where is he? Rosn. Without my Lord's guardned to know your pleasure.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenfemre.

King. Now Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At Supper. King. At Supper? Where? Ham. Not where he eate, but where he is eaten, a certaine comoncation of worms are eate him. Your worm is your onely Emperor for diet. We fat all creatures efe to fat vs, and we fat our felle for Magnors. Your fa King, and your leane Beggar is but variable service to differ, but to one Table that's the end.

Ham. What doth thou meane by this?
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go a Progresse through the guts of a Begger.
King. Where is Polonius?
Ham. In heaven, send thither to see, If your Messenger finde him not there, seek him in th'other place your lice : but indeed, if you finde him not this moneth, you shall nose him as you go vp the flaires into the Lobby.
King. Go seek him there.
Ham. He will flay till ye come. K. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especiall safety
Which we do tender, as we dearly greeue
For that which thou haft done, must tend thee hence
With more Quickeletter. Therefore prepare thy telle,
The Barke is ready, and the wind at helpe,
The Affronts send, and every thing at brest
For England.
Ham. For England?
King. I, Hamlet.
Ham. Good.
King. So is it, if thou knewst our purpose.
Ham. I fees Cherusbi that see's him : but come, for England. Farewell deere Mother.
King. Thy loving Father, Hamlet. Hamlet. My Moter : Father and Mother is man and wife : man & wife is one fleth, and so my mother. Come,
King. Follow him at footo,
Tempt him with speed afoord:
Dely not, he haue him hence to night.
Away, for every thing is Seall'd and done
That else lesnes on th'Affaire, pray you make haft.
And England, if my love thou holdst a ought,
Asmy great power thereof may giue thee sense,
Since yet thy Ciaetice looks rood and red
After the Danish Sword, and thy free swe
Payes homage to vs; thou maist not coldly set
Our Soueraigne Proceeffe, which imports at full
By Letters conturion to that effect.
The prent death of Hamlet, Doit England;
For like the Heficke in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me: Till I know its done,
How ere my happes, my loyes were ne're begun. Exit.
Enter Fortinbras with an Armie.
Fort. Go Capitaine, from me greet the Daniake King,
Tell him that by his lictore, Fortinbras
Claims the conueneyce of a promis'd March
Ouer his Kingdome. You know the Rendeousse;
If that his Maiestie would ought with vs,
We shall expresse our dutie in his eye,
And let him know so.
Cap. I will not, my Lord.
Fort. Go safely on. Exit. Enter Queen and Horatio.
Qu. I will not speake with her.
Hor. She is important, indeed distræft, her moode will needs be pittied.
Qu. What would she haue?
Hor. She speakes much of her Father; fakes the heares
There's tricks i'th world, and hers, and bents her heart,
Spurnes auniously at Strawes, speakes things in doubt,
That carry but haife fene: Her speach is nothing,
Yet the unshap'd vife of it doth move
The heares to CollecUon, they ayme at it,
And boste the words vp fit to their owne thoughts;
Which as her winker, and nods, and gestures yeld them,
Indeed would make one think she there would be thought,
Though nothing fire, yet much unhappily.
Qu. Were good th'e were spoken with,
For she may drefw dangerous conicurcts
In til breeding minds. Let her come in.
To my fike foule (as finances true Natiure is)
Which toy fennes Prologue, to some great amiss,
So full of Artifice isaulous is guilt,
It spill's its telle, in fearing to be spilt,
Enter Ophelia disfretted.
Ophe. Where is the beauteous Majestie of Denmark.
Qu. How now Ophelia?
Ophe. How should I your true love know from another one?
By his Cockle hat and plaffe, and his Sandal boote.
Qu. Alas sweet Lady: what imports this Song?
Ophe. Say you! Nay pray you marke,
He is dead and gone Lady, he is dead and gone,
As his head a gras-frense Turve, at his heetes a stone.
Enter King.
Qu. Nay but Ophelia?
Ophe. Pray you marke.
Whise it Shew'd as the Mountain Sour.
Qu. Alas, looke here my Lord.
Ophe. Larded with sweet flowers:
Which beft to the grace did not go,
With true-lone flowers.
King. How do ye, pretty Lady?
Ophe. Well, God did you. They say the Owle was
A Bakers daughter, Lord, wec know what we are, but Know not what we may be. God be at your Table.
King. Conceit upon her Father.
Ophe. Pray you let's haue no words of this; but when they take you what it meanes, say you this:
To morrow is S. Valentines day, all in the morning betime,
And I a Maid at your Windows, to bee your Valentine.
Then up herse: if don't this cloaster, & doup the chamber dore,
Let in the Maid, that out a Maid, never depart not more.
King. Pretty Ophelia.
Ophe. Indeed? Is without an oath ile make an end out.
By gie, and by S. Charity,
Alacke, and fie for shame:
Tong men vill doo't; if they come too's,
By Cocke they are too blame.
Quoth this before you rememb'red me
To promis'd me to night:
So would I be done by your Serene,
And how had'nt she come to my bed.
King. How long hath the bin this?
Ophe. I hope all well will be. We must bee pestient, but I cannot choose but weep, to thinke they shou'd lay him i'th cold ground: My brother shall knowe of it,
And so I thinke you for your good counsell. Come, my King. Follow her clofe,
Give her good wasch I pray you greefe;
Oh this is the poiyon of deepre greefe, it springes
All from her Fathers death. Oh Gertrude, Gertrude,
When sorrowes comes, they come not single spies,
But in Battailises. First, her Father Iaine.
Next your Sonne gone, and he moft violent Author
Of his owne iufl remote: the people muddie,
Thiche and vose his home in their thoughts, and whispers
For good Polonius death; and we have done but greatly
In hugger mugger to interce him. Poor Ophelia
Divid'd from her felfe, and her faire Judgement,
Enter a Messenger.

Qu. Alacke, what noyse is this?

King. Where are my Switzers?

Let them guard the doore. What is the matter?

Mef. Save your selfe, my Lord.

The Ocean (ouer-peering of his Life)
Estes not the Flats with more impetuous haste
Then young Laertes, in a Riourous head,
Ore-beares your Officers, the rabble call him Lord,
And as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, Cussume not knowne,
The Ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry who is who? Laertes shall be King.
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
Laertes shall be King, Laertes King.

Qu. How cheerfully on the fable Tragedy they cry,
Oh this is Counter you falle Danifh Dogges.

Noise within, Enter Laertes.

King. The doores are broke.

Laer. Where is the King, sir? Stand you all without.

All. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you give me leave.

All. We will, we will.

Laer. I thank you: Keep the doore.

Oh thou Wile King, give me my Father.

Qu. Calmy good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood, that calmes
Proclames me Baflard:
Cries Cuckold to my Father, brands the Harlot
Even here betweene the chaste unmanched brow
Of my true Mother.

King. What is the cause Laertes,
That thy Rebellion lookes so Gyans-like?
Let him go Gertrude. Do not fence our person:
There's fuch Diuinity doth hedges a King,
That Trefon can but pecepe to what it would,
Acts little of his will. Tell me Laertes,
Why thou art thus Intent? Let him go Gertrude.

Speak man.

Laer. Where's my Father?

King. Dead.

Qu. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fell.

Laer. How came he dead? He not be Tugg'd with.
To helle Allegence: Vowes, to the blackest dwell.
CONFsence and Grace, to the profoundest Pit.
I do Damnation to this point I stand,
That both the worlds I glue to negligence,
Let come what comes soley Ile be reun'd
Most throughly for my Father.

King. Whoshallplayyou?

Laer. My Will, not all the world,
And for my meanes, Ile husband them so well,
They shall goe farre with little.

King. Good Laertes.

If you desire to know the certaintie
Of your deere Fathers death, if wits in your revenge,
That Sool-flake you will draw both Friend and Foe,
Winner and Looser.

Laer. None but his Enemies.

King. Will you know them then,

Laer. To his good Friends, thus wide Ile open my Armes:
And like the kinde Life rend'ring Politician,
Repait them with my blood.

King. Why now you speake
Like a good Childe, and a true Gentleman.
That I am guiltiffe of your Fathers death,
And am most sensible in greefe for it,
It shall as lenell to your Judgement pierce
As day do's to your eye.

Noise within. Let her come in.

Enter Ophelia.

Laer. How now? what noise is that?
Oh heate drive vp my Brains, tears seven times fall,
Burne out the Sence and Vertue of mine eye.

By Heaven, thy madness shall be payed by weight,
Till our Scale turnes the beame. Oh Rofe of May,
Dear Maid, kinde Sifter, sweet Ophelie:
Oh Heaven, it's possibl, a yong Maids wis,
Should be as mortall as an old mans life.

Nature is fine in Loue, and where 's his ficte,
It lends some precious instance of it selfe
After the thing it loues.

Ophel. They bore him bare faced on the Beer,

By you now, now, bay now:

And on his grave raine many tears.

Are you well my Duen?

Laer. Had it shouthe wits, and didn't perswade Reuenge,
it could not moue thys.

Ophel. You must finge downe a downe,

And you call him a downe. Oh, how the wheele becomes it? It
Is the falle Steward that stole his masters daughter.

Laer. This nothings more then matter.

Ophel. There's Roemary, that's for Remembrance.

Pray loue remember: and there is Pacientie,
That's for Thoughts.

Ophel. A document in madeffe, thoughts & remembrance fitt.

Ophel. There's Fenell for you, and Columbines: ther's Rew for you, and here's some for me. Wee may call it
Herbe-Grace & Sundays: Oh you muitt weare your Rew with a difference. There's a Daylie, I would give you some Violets, but they wither'd all when my Father dyed:

They lay, he made a good end;

For loving sweete Robin is all my ser.

Laer. Thought, and Affliction, Passion, Hell it selfe:
She turns to Favour, and to prettinece.

Ophel. And will be no same age:

And well he not come againe:

No who he is, I do not think with,

He never comes againe:

His Beard as white as Snow,

All Flowers in his hand:

How to give, he is gone, and we cast away more,

Ophel. And of all Christian Soules, I pray God.

God buy ye.

Exeunt Ophel.

Laer. Do you see this you Gods?

King. Laertes. I must common with your grace,

Or you deny me right: go but apart,

Make
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

On exeunt To Ktr.glj

They finde vs touch'd, we will our Kingdome glue,
Our Crowne, our Life, and all that we call Ours
To you in satisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to vs,
And we shall joyfully labour with your sole.
To give it due content.

Lear. Let this be so:
His meanes of death, his obscure buriall;
No Tophee, Sword, nor Hatchetments o're his bones,
No Noble rites, nor formal lent ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from Heaven to Earth,
That I must call in question.

King. So you shall;
And where'the offence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me.

Enter Horatio with an Attendant.

Hor. What are they that would speake with me?
Ser. Saylors fir, they say they haue Letters for you.
Hor. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I shoulde be greted, as from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Saylors.

Say. God bleffe you Sir.
Hor. Let him bleffe thee too.
Say. Hee shal Sir, and please him. There is a Letter for you Sir: It comes from th' Ambassadors that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it.

Enter the Letter.

Horatio. When they shall haue seere what they see there, give these letters Follows some meanes to the King: They have Letters for him. Ere we were two daies old at Sea, a Pryate of very Warlike appointment gane vs Close. Finding our shippe so flow of Saile, we put on a compiled Valoure. In the Grapple, I boarded them: On the instant they got clear of our Ships, so alone became their Prisioner. They have dealt with me, like The meanes of Mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to die a good term for them. Let the King haue the Letters I haue sent, and spare thou to me with as much hart as thou wouldst for death. I have words to speake in thy ear, will make thee dumb, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Master.
Those good Follows will bring thee where I am. Roffincrance and Guilldenferme, hold their course for England. Of them
I have much to tell thee, Farewell.

He that show himselfe thing, Hamlet,
Come, I will give you way for thee your Letters,
And doe the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your confidence my acquaintance seall,
And you must put me in your heart for Friend,
Sith you haue heard, and with a knowing care,
That he which hath your Noble Father slaine,
Preserv'd my life.

Lear. It well appeares. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these festes;
So crimefull, and so Capitol in Nature,
As by your Safety, Whilome all things else,
You mainly were there'd vp?

King. O for two speciell Reasons,
Which may to you (perhaps) seeme much unfinnowed,
And yet to me they are strong. The Queen his Mother,
Lives almoft by his looke: and for my selfe,
My Venture or my Plague, be it either which,
She's so conuncluate to my life and soule;
That as the Starre moveth not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motive,
Why to a publique count I might not go,
Is the great love the generally generator bear me,
Who dipting all his Fruits in their affection,
Would like the Spring that trencheth Wood to Stone,
Convert his Glyes to Grace. So that my Arrows
Too lightly timbered for so loud a Wind,
Would have return'd to my Bow againe,
And not where I had arm'd them.

Lear. And so haue I A Noble Father left,
A Sifter drawn into desperate tearmes,
Who was't prais'd may goe backe againe
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perfection. But my revenge will come.

King. Breake not your fpeeple for that,
You might not chinke,
That we are made ofuffles, so flat and dull,
That we can let our Beadle be chinke with danger,
And chinke it patime. You shortly shall heare more,
I hau'd your Father, and we lose our Selve,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine——

Enter a Meffenger.

How now? What News?
Ser. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Maistry, this to the Queene.

King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?

Ser. Saylors my Lord they say, I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudia, he receiv'd them.

King. Laertes you shall haue them:

Laertes vs.

Exit Meffenger.

High and Mights, you shall know I was shewed on your Kinges: To narrow ends l I begge him to fee you: Kindly Exit. When shall I shall asking your Father (I vouches) recom to see the decay of my Endome and a for grave wresse.

Hamlet.

What should this mean? Are all the rest come backe?
Or is it some abufe? Or no such thing?

Lear. Know you the hand?

Kin. Tis Hamlet's Character, naked and in a Post script here he fayes alone: Can you soule me it?

Lear. I'm left in it my Lord; but let him come,
It warmes the very ficknesse in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth;
Thus did he dea。 thau.

Kin. If it be to Laertes, as how should I take it?
How other wise will you be ruled by me?

Lear. If you'll not o'rerule me to a peace.

Kin. To thine owne peace: if he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage, and that he means
No more to understande; I will worke him
To an exployt now ripe in my Device,
Vnder the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wido of blame shall breath,
But eache his Mother shall extenuate the prouice,
And call it accident: Some two Monthes hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy,
I was me my selfe and fain was against the French,
And they ran well on Horsebackes but this Gallant

Had
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Sest,
And so fuch wondrous doing brought his Horfe,
As had he borne encorspt and demy-Natur'd
With the braue Beafi,fo faze he paft my thought,
That I'm forger of Shapes and trickes,
Come short of what he did.

Laur. A Norman was't?

Kin. A Norman.

Laur. Upon my life Lancourn.

Kin. The very fame.

Laur. I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed,
And female of all our Nation.

Kin. Hee mad confusion of you,
And gatte you such a Masterly report,
For Art and exercised in your defence;
And for your Rapier most especially,
That he cryed our would be a fight indeed,
If one could match you Sir. This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his Envy,
That he could nothing doe but with and begge,
Your fomaine comming one to play with him;
Now out of this.

Laur. Why out of this, my Lord?

Kin. Laertes was your Father deare to you?

Or are you like the painting of a favor,
A face without a heart?

Laur. Why ask you this?

Kin. Not that I think you did not love your Father,
But that I know Love is begun by Time:
And that I fee in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the sparke and fire of it;

Hamlet comes backe : what would you undertake,
To show your felle your Fathers fomne indeed,
More then in words?

Laur. To cut his throat in’s Church.

Kin. No place indeed should murder Sancturize;
Revenge should have no bounds ; but good Laertes,
Will you doe this, keepe close within your Chamber,
Hamlet return’d, thall know you are come home;
Wee I put on these shall praise your excellence,
And fete a double varnish on the fame.
The Frenchman gave you, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your head, he being remiffe,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not procure the Foiles? So that with eafe,
Or with a little fluffing, you may choose
A Sword unblevid, and in a paffe of praction,
Requit him for your Father.

Laur. I will doe,
And for that purpofe Ie annoint my Sword:
I bought an Violion of a Mountebanke
So mortall, but Ie dpte a knife in it,
Where it draws blood, no Cataplafme fo rare,
Collected from all Simplex that have Vertue
Vnder the Moone, can faue the thing from death,
That is but scratcht withall: 1le touch my point,
With this contegion, that if I call him flightly,
I may be death.

Kin. Let’s further think of this,
Weigh what convenience both of time and means
May fity vs to the fpife, if this fhould falle;
And that our drift looke through our bad performance,
’Twere better not affay; therefore this Procfe
Should have a backe or fccend, that might hold,
If this fhould blift in proofe: Soft, let me fee
We’ll make a folenn wager on your comming,

I ha’t: when in your mouontion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouws more violent to the end,
And that he calls for drinke; He have prepar’d him
A Chalice for the none, whereon but fipping,
If he by chance escape your venom’d fluck,
Our purpofe may hold there ; how sweet Queene.

Enter Queen.

Queen. One woof doth tread upon anothers heele,
So faft they follow; your sisters down’d Laertes.

Laur. Down’d! O where?

Queen. There is a Willow grows alant a Brooke,
That fhowes his hone leaves in the glibfe streame:
There with fantasfick Garlands did the come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Dayfier, and long Purples,
That liberal Shepheardes give a groffer name;
But our cold Maids doe dead Mens Fingers call them:
There on the pendante boughes, her Coronet weeds
Clambringe to hang; an envious fluer broke
When downe the weedy Tophier, and her felle,
Fell in the weeping Brooke, her clothfes fired wide,
And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her vp,
Which time she chaunted fnaclches of old tuner,
As one incapable of her owne diftrefle,
Or like a creature Nattive, and infudled
Vnto that Element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with her drinke,
Pull’d the poor wretch from her necludious buy,
To muddy death.

Laur. Alas then, is the down’d?

Queen. Down’d, down’d.

Laur. Too much of water haft thou poor Ophec,
And therefore I forbid thy teares; but yet
It is our tricke, Nature her cutomme holds,
Let flame fay what it will; when there are gone
The woman will be out: Adie my Lord,
I have a fpeech of fire, that faine would blaze,
But that this folly doubts it.

Exit.

Kin. Let’s follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to doe to calme his rage?
Now feare I this will give it flart againe;
Therefore let’s follow,

Exeunt.

Enter two Clerics.

Cleon. Is the to bee buried in Christian buriall, that wilfull feekes her owne faliution?

Other. I tell thee the is, and therefore make her Grave fraight, the Crouner hath taken her, and finds it Chris-

Cleon. How can that be, unleffe she drowned her felle in her owne defence?

Other. Why’s tie found.

Cleon. It must be So offendis, it cannot bee elle: for here he lies the points; If I drowned my felle wittlingly, it ar-

Other. An Adt; and an Adt hath three branches. It is an Adt to doe and to performance argall the down’d her felle wittlingly.

Other. Nay but heare you Goodman Deluer.

Cleon. Give me leaure; heere lies the water good;
here hands the man good: If the man goe to this water and drown his felle, it is he will he, he goes markes you that? But if the water come to him & drowned him, hee drownes not himfelle. Argall, hee that is not guilty of his owne death, shortens not his owne life.

Other. But is this law?

Cleo. I marry it's, Crowners Quefli Law.
Enter Hamlet and Horatio a fort off.

Clown. Cudgell thy braines no more about it: for thy dull Afe will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say, a Graue-maker; the Hautes that he makes, lasts till Doomsday: go, get thee to Vanyplace and flie me a floupe of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did love shallowne,
I thought it was very fowre:
To coverd! O the time for my behove,
O me thought there was nothing worse.

Ham. Ha's this fellow no feeling of his businesse, that he fings as Graue-making?

Hor. Custome hath made it in him a property of ex.

finelle.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little Impleth hath the daintier finge.

Clowne sings.

The Age with his fleeting steps
Hath caught me in his clutch;
And both flipp'd me into the Lord,
As if I had never beene such.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could finge once: how the knave tolwles it to th' ground, as if it were Cajus Jaw-Bone, that did the first murther: It might be the Patec of a Politician which this Afe o'th Office; now that could circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Couturier, which could fay, Good Morn-row sweet Lord: how doft thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord such a one, that prais'd my Lord such a ones Horfe, when he meant to begge it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why e'en so: and now my Lady Wormes, Chapieale, and knockt about the Mozart with a Sextons Spade; here's fine Resolution, if wee had the tricke to fee't. Did th' bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at Loggetts with'em? mine ake to think on't.

Clowne sings.

A Pichaxe and a Spade, a Spade,
For an armadillo-Sheet:
O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
For such a Ghost in meats.

Ham. There's another: why might not that bee the Scull of of a Lawyer? where bee his Quillities now? his Quilleness his Cafes? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doth he fuffer this rude knave now to knocke him about the Scone with a dirty Shovel, and will not tell him of his AShion of Battery? hurt. This fellow might bee'time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoveries: is this the fine of his Fines, and the recoverie of his Recoveries, to have his fine Paste full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchases, and double ones too, then the length and breadth of a pair of Indentures? the very Conveyances of his Lands will hardly lyce in this Boxe: and must the Inheritor himselfe have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a ioe more, my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skinnes?

Hor. I, my Lord, and of Calue-skinnes too.

Ham. They are Sheepe and Calues that seek out affuance in that. I will speake to this fellow: whom Graue this Sir?

Clo. Mine Sirs:

O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
For such a Ghost in meats.

Ham. I thinke it be thine indeed for thou liest in't.

Clo. You liye out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not liye in't; and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou doft lye in't, to be in't and fay 'tis thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quicke, therefore thou lyest.

Clo. 'Tis a quickely liye Sir, 'twill away again from me to morrow.

Ham. What man doft thou digge it for?

Clo. For no man Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a woman Sir; but reft her Soule, fire's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knaue is? we must speake by the Cardes, or equitacion will endo'ss: by the Lord Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it, the Age is growne so picked, that the toe of the Peasant comes so neere the heele of our Courtier, hee galls his Knie. How long ha'ft thou beene a Graue-maker?

Clo. Of all the days i'th'yeare, I came too'th that day that our flat King Hamlet o'recame Fortunbrat.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: It was the very day, that young Hamlet was borne, bee that was mad, and sent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he sent into England?

Clo. Why, because he was mad; he shall recoller his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.
Ham. Why?

Cla. Twill not be seene in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Cla. Very strangely they say.

Ham. How strangely?

Cla. Fairly eene with looing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Cla. Why here in Denmark: I have bin fixtenee here, man and Boy thirty years.

Ham. How long wild a man lie'th earth ere he rot?

Cla. Ifaith, he be not rotten before he die (as we have many pokey Cofires now saides, that will fceare hold the laying in) he will lay you some eighte, or nine yeares. A Tanner will lift you nine yeares.

Ham. Why he be, more then another?

Cla. Why sir, his hide is fo tan'd with his Trade, that he will keepe out water a great while. And your water, is a faire Decayer of your horfon dead body. Herea Scull nowthis Scull, has laten in the earth three & twenty years.

Ham. Whole is it?

Cla. A whorfon mad Fellowes it was; What doe you thinke it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Cla. A pellentie on him for a mad Rogue, a pou'd a Flaggon of Reath on my head once. This same Scull Sir, this same Scull was, Tawicky Scull, the Kings Jefter.

Ham. This?

Cla. E'ene that.

Ham. Let me seee. Alas poor Tawick, I knew him Ho- ratius, a fellow of infinite tell, of most excellent lancy, he hath borne me on his backe a thousand times: And how abhoredd my Imaginasyion is, my gorge rifes at it. Heree hung those lips, that I have kist! I know not how oft, Where be your libes now? Your Gymbals? Your Songs? Your flances of Merriment that were wont to set the Table on a Rure? No one now to mock your ownffecting? Quite chopplaine? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thicke, to this favoure fife come. Make her laugh at that: prythee Horace telle me one thing.

Ham. What's that my Lord?

Ham. Doft thou think Alexander lookt o'this fathion of'th earth?

Her. E'ene fo.

Ham. And finelit fo? Puh.

Her. E'ene fo, my Lord,

Ham. To what bafe vifs we may returne Horatius. Why may not Imagination trace the Noble dut of A- lexander, till he find it dopping a binghole.

Her. Twere to consider: to curiously to consider fo.

Ham. No faith, not ait. But to follow him thether with modellie enough, & likelihoode to lead it; as thus. Alexander died: Alexander was buried: Alexander returneth into dut; the dut is earth, of earth make Lome; and why of that Lome (whereo he was conver ted) might they not flipp a Beere-brutell? Imperially Cofine, dead and turnt it clay, Might they a bide to keep the winde away. Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a Wall, expell the winters law. But foif, but soif, adia, heree comes the King.

Enter King, Queene, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attantants.

The Queene, the Countrees. Who is that they follow,

And with such mistimed rites? This doth betoken, The Cofire they follow, did with disparate land, Fore do it owne life: two fame Effate.

Couch we a while, and mark.

Laer. What Cerimony else?

Ham. That I haue Laertes, a very Noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What Cerimony else?

Priest. Her Obfiques have bin as faire large'd, As we have warrant, her death was doubfull; But that great Command, o'we's-iawe the order, She should in ground unfanctified have lodg'd, Till the laft Trumpet. For charitable prayr, Sharers, Flints, and Peeblees, should be thow wone on her. Yet here she is allowed her Virgin Rites,

Her Maidens fervements, and the bringing home Of Bell and Buriall.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done:

We should prophace the sorcell of the dead, To finge fage Requiem, and fuch reft to her

As to peace-paied Soules.

Laer. Lay her til' earth, And from her faire and wpolluted feth, May Violets spring. I tell thee(Chairith Priest)

A Muffling Angell fhall my Sitter be,

When thou lieft howling?

Ham. What, the faire Efpelia?

Queen. Sweets, to the fweet farewell.

I hop'd thou fhould ft bin haue my Hamletes wife:

I thought thy Buree-bed to have deckt( SWEET Maid) And not thine fhould't be graue.

Laer. Oh terribble 200r,

Fall ten times trebble, on that curfed head Whole wicked deed, thy most Ingeniousfence

Depruf thee of. Hold off the earth a while,

Till I have caugh her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the grave.

Now pile thy dut, upon the quicke, and dead,

Till of this flat a Mountainre you have made,

To o'er a top old Fellow, or the skyth head

Of new Olympas.

Ham. What is he, whose griefes

Bearst such an Emphafis? whose phrase of Sorrow

Coniure the wandring Starses, and makes them fland

Like wonder'd wounded heers? This is 1

Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The deuil take thy foule,

Ham. Thou pratt it not weyl,

I prysee thee take thy fingers from my throat,

Sthou art not Spleenious, and raft,

Yet haue I fomething in me dangerous,

Which let thy witsfe feare. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them founder.

Qu. Hamlet, Hamlet.

Gow. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him upon this Theme,

Vntill my eiefhit will no longer wag.

Qu. Oh my Sonne, what Theme?

Ham. I haue Ophelia, forthe thousand Brothers

Could not with all that there quantitie of Love

Make yp my fume. What wilt thou do for her?

King. Oh he is mad Laertes,

Qu. For love of Godforbear him.

Ham. Com she more what thoult do.er

Woot wappe? Woots fight? Woots no feate thy selfe?

Woots drinke yp effe, eafe a Crocodile?
The Tragedie of Hamlet.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

Ofr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very feouldy, as 'twere, cannot tell how; but my Lord, his Maiesty bad me signifie to you, that he's laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.

Ofr. Nay, in good faith, for mine ease in good faith: Sir, you are as ignorant of what excellence Ladies are at his command.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Ofr. Rapiere and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.

Ofr. The first King's was'd with him: fixe Barbary Horses, against the which he impond as I take it, fixe French Rapiers and Pistards, with their Alliances, as Gardie-Hangers of fixe; three of the Carriages in Anhath are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilt, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?

Ofr. The Carriages Sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would bee more Germaine to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our sides; I would it might be Hangers till then; but on fixe Barbary Horses against fixe French Swords: their Alliances, and three liberal conveyed Carriages, that's the French but against the Danish; why is this impond as you call it?

Ofr. The King Sir, hath laid his in a dozen puffs between you and him; he'll not exceed you three hits; he hath one tew-teve for mine, and that would come to immediate tryall, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Audience.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Ofr. I mean my Lord, the opposition of your person in tryall,

Ham. Sir, I will walke here in the Hall; if it please his Maiesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me: let the Foiles bee brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpos: I will win for him as I can: if not, he gaineth nothing but my thanks and the odd's hits. Shall I redelive you an' so?

Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Ofr. I commend my duty to your Lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours; he does well to carry it himselfe; there are no tongues else for a tongue.

Ofr. This Rampaging runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Complice with his Dugge before he sucke't it: this had he and mine more of the same Beauty that I know the drossie age does ordinarily get the time of the time, and outward habite of encounter, a kind of yeasty collection, which carrieth them through & through the most fond and winnowed opinions and doe but blast them to their tryalls; the Bubbles are out.

Ham. You will lose this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I doe not think so, since he went into France, I have beene in coninual practice; I shall winne at the odd's: but thou wouldest not think how all here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Ham. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but fair, but it is such a kind of gaining as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Ham. If your minde do like any thing, obey, I will foremost their reprise hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we define August; there is special providence in the fall of a sparrow: If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it be not to come, it will be never: if it be not now, yet will it come the readiness is all, since no man has aught of what he leaves. What's to be done, or is to be done?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with Foiles, and Gunneike, a Table and Flagon of Wine in it.

Ham. Come Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me. Ham. Give me your pardon Sir, I've done you wrong, but pardon't as you are a Gentleman.

This presence knowes, and you must needs have heard how I am punished With fore distraction? What have I done That might your nature honoure, and exception? Raguely awake, I here proclaim was madneffe: What's Hamlet wrong'd? Laertes? Neues Hamlet. If Hamlet from himselfe be tane away: And when he's not himselle, do's wrong Laertes, Then hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it: Who does it then? His Madneffe? If it be so, Hamlet is of the Faction that is wrong'd, of his Madneffe. Enter Hamlet Enemy, Sir, in this Audience, Let my disclaiming from a purpose call, Free me so farre in your most generous thoughts, that I have shot mine Arrow o'the house, And hurt my Mother.

Lear. I am satisfied in Nature, Wherein I once in this cafe should fire me most Tomny Reuenge. But in my terms of Honor I stand aloofe, and will no reconcilement, Till by some elder Masters of knowne Honor, I have a vioyc, and president of peace To kepe my name wapored, But till that time, I do receive your offer'd love like lord, And will not wrong it.

Ham. Take it freely, and will this Brothers wager frankly play. Give us the Foiles: Come on. Lear. Come one forth me, Ham. Ile be your Foile Laertes, in mine ignorance, Your Skill shall like a Starre in' th' darkest night, Stick feerey off indeed.

Lear. You mocke me Sir. Ham. No by this hand, King. Give them the Foiles young Officers, Confien hamlet, you know the wager. Ham. Very well my Lord, Your Grace hath laiste the oddes a' th' weaker side. King. I do not feare it, I have lesse you both: but since he is better'd, we have therefore oddes. Lear. This is too heavy, Let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well, These Foiles have all a length, Prepare to play. Officers, I my good Lord. King. Set me the Steopes of wine upon that Table: If Hamlet give the first, or second hit, Or quit in answer of the third exchange, Let all the Battlements their Ordemance fire, The King flal drink to Hamlet better breath, And in the Cup an union fluid he throw Richer then that, which foure successefull Kings In Denmarkes Crowne have wonne.
The Tragedie of Hamlet.

All. Treson, Treson.

King. O yet defend me Friends, I am but hurt. Ham. Here thou inceftuous, murdrous, Damned Dane, Drink off this Potion: Is thy Vision here? Follow my Mother. King Dyes. Lear. He is fully feard, It is a poysdon tempeid by himselfe: Exchange forguenelle with mee, Noble Hamlet; Mine and my fathers death come not upon thee, Nor thine onme. Ham. Heauen make thee free of it, I follow thee. I am dead Horatio, wretched Queene deceiv. You that looke pale, and tremble at this chance, That are but Mutes or audience to this acte: Had I but time (as this fell Sergeant death Is frick'd in his Arreth) oh I could tell you. But let it be: Horatio, I am dead, Thou lye, report me and my caufes right To the unconfed. Hor. Never beleeue it. I am more an Antike Roman then a Dane: Here's yet some Liquor left. Ham. As that a man, give me the Cup. Let go, by Heaven I haue't; Oh good Horatio, what a wounded name, (things flanding thus vnknowne) shall loose behind me. If thou didst euer hold me in thy heart, Abstinence from felicite awhile, And in this harfle world draw thy breath in paine, To tell my Storie, March o'farre off, and shu't within. What warlike noyse is this? Enter Ofrick. Ofr. Yong Fortuibras, with conquest come fr6 Poland To th' Ambassadors of England giues this warlike velly. Ham. OI dye Horatio: The potent poysdon quite o're crevices my spirit, I cannot live to heer the Newes from England, But I do prophesie s'the'dlous lights On Fortuibras, he bate my dying voyce, So tell him with the occurreants more and more, Which have solicited. The reft is silence, O, o, o, Dyes Hora. Now crack a Noble Heart: Goodnight sweet Prince, And flights of Angels sing thee to thy rest, Why do the Drumme come hither?

Enter Fortuibras and English Ambassadores with Drumme, Colours and Attendants. Forto. Where is this fight? Hora. What is it ye would see; If ought of we, or wonder, cesse your search. For, His quarry cries on hauccke. Oh proud death, What traff is toward thine eternall Cell, That thou so many Princes, at a shooe, So bloodily hath trooke. Amb. The fight is diilmall, And our affairs from England come too late, The ears are feneleffe that should give vs hearing, To tell him his commandement is fulfifrd, That
That Remembrance and Guiltiefleere are dead:
Where should we have our thankes?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
I had it th'abilitie of life to thank you:
He never gau command'ment for their death.
But since to lump upon this bloodie question,
You from the Polake wares, and you from England
Are here arriv'd. Give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view,
And let me speake to th'yet unknowing world,
How these things came about. So shall you heare
Of carnall, bloudie, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgments, carnall slaughters
Of death's put on by cunning, and forc'd cause,
And in this viplion; purposes misphotoke,
Faine on the Inventors heads. All this can I Truly deliver.

For. Let vs haft to heare it,
And call the Noblest to the Audience.
For me, with forrow, I embrace my Fortune,
I haue some Rites of memory in this Kingdome,

FINIS.
We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters feveral Dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The Princes, France & Burgundy, Great Rivals in our yongell daughters love, Long in our Conquest, have made their amorous foitoun, And hereat are to be aver'd. Tell me my daughters (Since now we will dwell as both of Rule, Interf of Territorie, Care of State) Which of you hall we lay doth love vs moft, That we, our largest bonnie may extend Where Nature doth with merit challenge. Gentrell, Our eldste borne, speake firft. Goe, Sir, I loue you more then word can weild f matter, Defer then eye-fight, space, and libetie, Beyond what can be vemed, rich ex rar e, No leffe then life, with grace, health, beauty, honor: As much as Childe ere lou'd, or Father found. A love that makes breath poore, and speech vvisible, Beyond all manner of so much I loue you, Cor. What shall Cordelia speake? Loue, and be silent. Lear. Of all thee bounds eftens from this line, to this, With Holodeic and Roftell, and with Champaign rich'd With plenteous Rivers, and wide-skirted Meares We make thee Lady. To thine and Alfarne fites Be this perpetuall. What fayes our second Daughter? Our deareft Regan, wife of Cornwall? Reg. I am made of that felfe-matle as my Siffer, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart, I find the names my very deede of loue: Only the comes too short, that I profefse My felfe an enemy to all other loyes, Which the most precious square of feme prefefte, And finde I am lone felicitate In your deere Highfille loue. Cor. Then poore Cordelia, And yet no fo. since I am sure my loue's More ponderous then my tongue. Lear. To thee, and thine hereditarie euer, Remine this ample childe of our faire Kingdome, No leffe in space, validitie, and pleafure Then that confeder'd in Gentrell. Now our Joy, Although our left and left: to whose yong loue? The Rimes of France, and Molke of Burgundie, Strike to be intereſt. What can you say, to draw A third, more opulent then your Siffer is speake? Cor. Nothing my Lord. Lear. Nothing?
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Cor. Nothing.
Lear. Nothing will come of nothing; speak again.
Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heare
My heart into my mouth. I love your Majesty
According to my bond, no more nor leffe.
Lear. How, how, how Cordelia? Mend your speech a little,
Least you may marr your Fortunes.
Cor. Good my Lord,
You have begot me, bred me, you'd me,
I returne those duties backe as are right due,
Obey you, Love you, and most Honour you.
Why have my Sisters Husbunds, if they say
They love you all? Happily when I shall wed,
That Lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Hale my love with him, half my Care, and Dutie,
Sure I shall never marry like my Sisters.
Lear. But doth thy heart with this?
Cor. I my good Lord.
Lear. So young, and fo vntender?
Cor. So young my Lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be so, thy truth then be thy dowre:
For by the sacred radiance of the Sunne,
The miferies of Heretus and the night:
By all the operation of the O. best
Bringer, and grace to be,
Heere I deuiteme all my Paternall care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation meffes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my boosome
Be as well neighbour'd, paitied, and releau'd,
As thou, my fonner Lady, and my daunger.
Kent. Good my Lorde.
Lear. Peace Kent,
Come not betweene the Dragon and his wrath,
I lou'd her moff, and thought to let my reft
On her kind nursey. Hence and avoide my fight:
So be my grace my peace, as here I giue
Her Fathers heart from her; call France, who flirees
Call Burgundy, Corinna, and Albania,
With my two Daughters Dowres, digeft the third,
Let prude, which fhe caft plaineffe, marry her:
I doe inuoyt you looyntly with my power,
Preheminence, and all the large effeets
That troope with Maiesty Our felfe by Monthly courfe,
With reuerence of an hundred Knights,
By you to be ftuffled, fellow our shade
Make with you by due turne, only we ftill retaine
The name, and all the addition to a King: the Sway,
Reuenue. Execution of the reft,
Beloved Sonnes be yours, which to confirme,
This Coronet part betweene you.
Kent. Royall Lear,
When I have cure bound'd as my King,
Loud as my Father, as my Mother follow'd,
as my great Patron thought on in my prayers,
I. The bow is bent & drawn, make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the forke innate
The region of my heart, be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad, what woul'd thou do old man?
Think it thou that thouft flall have dreaft to speake,
When power to Batteries bowes?
To plainefe honour's bound,
When Maiesty falls to folly, refuse thy flate,
And in thy beft consideration checke
This hideous raftreell, anfwered my life, my judgement:
Thy yongelf Daughter doth not lose the leaf,
Nor are thole empty hearted, whom low founds
Reuerbe no hollowne.
Lear. Kent, on thy life no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as pawn
To wage againft thine enemies, nere faire to loose it,
Thy safety being motie.
Lear. Out of my fight,
Kent. See better Lear, and let me flill remaine
The true blanke of thine eye.
Kent. Now by Apollo,
Lent. Now by Apollo, King
Thou sweateft thy Gods in vain.
Lear. O Vaffall! Miferant.
Kent. Kill thy Phylfion, and thy fee beflove
Upon the foule dircate, revoke thy guilt,
Or while I can vent clamour from my throat,
Ile tell thee thou doft euell.
Lear. Heare me recrants, on thine allegiance hear me;
That thou haft fraught to make us breake our vowels,
Which we durft never yet; and with drain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentences, and our power,
Wth, by our owne worth, nor our place can heare;
Our potencte made good, take thy reward,
Fine dyces we do allot thee for prouision,
To shield thee from dangers of the world,
And on the fxt to tune thy hated backe
Upon our kingdome; if on the tenth day following,
Thy banifhit trunke be found in our Dominions,
The moment is thy death, away. By Impoer,
This fhall be the end of his life.
Kent. Fare thee well King, six thou wilt appeare,
Freedome liues hence, and banishment is here;
The Gods to their deere flieter take thee Maid,
That ftrifhly think'l, and haft mostightly faid:
And your large speeches, may your deeds approue,
That good effeets may spring from words of loue:
Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all aew,
Hee flape his old courfe, in a Countrey new.
Exit.

Flourish. Enter Glofter with France, and Burgundy, Assistants.

Cor. Heere's France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord.
Lear. My Lord of Burgundy.
We ftill adhreddle to vert gou who with this King
Hath raifd for our Daughter; what in the leaff
Will you require in present Dowre with her,
Or ceafe your queft of loue?
Bur. Moft Royall Maitriff, I crave no more then hath your Highneffe offer'd,
Nor will you render leffe?
Lear. Right Noble Bur.
When the was deare to vs, we did hold her fo,
But now her price is fallen: Sir thefe the flants,
If ought within that little feeming subfance,
Or all of it with our difpleasure price'd,
And nothing more may fiily like your Grace,
She's there, and the is yours.
Bur. I know no anwer.
Lear. Will you this more intimates the owes,
Unfriendes, we new adopted to our harte,
Dow'd with our curfe, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her or leave her.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Bar. Pardon me Royal Sir,
Election makes none vp in such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir, for by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth. But you great Kings,
I would not from your love make such a fray,
To match you where I hate, therefore be ye such you
Taust your liking a more worthy war,
Then on a wretch whom Nature is almost acknowledge her.
Fra. This is so strange now,
That the same even but strange, may ye object.
The argument of your praise hume of your age,
The best, the deerst, flood in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dissolute
So many folds of favour: her offence
Must be of such venomous degree,
That monsters is: Or your force-vouch thee affection
Fall into taint, which to beleev other
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Should never plant in me.

Car. I yet beliefe your Malefie.
If or I want it, a glint and eylie Att.
To speake and purpose not, since what I will intend,
He do's before I speake, that you make knowne
It is no vicious blot, mutter, or foulencelfe,
Nor vncheale adition or disfigurend loop
That hath deprived me of your Grace and favour,
But even for want of that, for which I am richer,
A full solicitng eye, and such a songe,
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
It hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou had it
Not beene born, then not have pleas'd me better.
Fra. Is it but this? A tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history vnspoke
That it intend to do any Lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the Lady? Loue's not loue
When it is minglesed with regards, that founds
Alasoe from thine point, will you haue her?
She is herselfe a Dowrie.

Bar. Royal King,
Give but that portion which your selfe propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Dowrie of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing, I have famous, I am firme.

Fra. I am sorry then you have to lovt a Father,
That you must loose a husband.

Car. Peace be with Burgundy,
Since that respect and Fortunes are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

Fra. Farewell Cordelia, that are most rich being poore,
Most choise forsaken, and most lovd defpis'd,
There and thy virtues here I feze upon,
Be it lawful I take vp what's eas't away.
Gods, Gods! Tis strange, that from their colds' neglect
My Loue should kindle to enam'lt respect.

Thy dowrellie Daughter King, shewen to my chance,
Is Queen of vs, of ours, and our faire France:
Not all the Dukes of wasth Burgundy,
Can buy this vnprice'd precious Maid of me.
Bid them farewell Cordelia, though wnhinder,
Then looffet here a better where to finde.

Lear. Thou haft her France, let her be thine, for we Have no such Daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers againe, therefore be gone,
Without our Grace, our Loue, our Benison:

Come Noble Burgundy, Howdye, Exeunt.
Fra. Bid farewell to your Siflers.

Car. The jewels of our Father, with what's in our Cordelia leaves you, I know you what you are,
And like a Sifter am most loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Loue well our Father:
To your profess'd bosome I commit him,
But yet alas, I stand within his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farewell to you both.

Regn. Prefereth not vs our dutie.

Gen. Let your speedy
Be to content your Lord, who haft receiv'd you
At Fortunes almes, you have obedience shewed,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Car. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides,
Who covers faults, at last with frame desides:
Well may you prosper.

Gen. Sifter, it is not litle I haue to say,
Of what most nearly appertaines to vs both,
I think our Father will henceto night. (with vs.

Reg. That's mott certaine, and with you: next month

Gen. You see how full of changes his ages, the obferuation we have made of it hath beene little he alwayes lou'd our Sifter most, and with what poore judgment he hath now call her off, appeares too grossely.

Reg. Tis the imperfectness of his age, yet he hath used but slanderly known him selfe.

Gen. The best and soundest of his time hath bin but rath, then must we looke from his age, to recumbe not-one the imperfectness of long ingreded condition, but therewith all the wroury way, wardneffe, that inisme and choicerie yeares bring with them,

Reg. Such wondrous starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gen. There is further complement of issue-taking betwixtne France and him, pray you let vs sit together, if our Father carry authority with such disposition as he beares, this last surrender of his will but offend vs.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gen. We must do something, and th' heste. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Balfard.

Balf. Thou Nature art my Goddes, to thy Law,
My servitors are bound, wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of Extinction, and permit
The curiosphy of Nations, to deprive me?
For that I am some twelve, or fourteen Moonshines
Leg of a Brother? Why Balfard? Wherefore bale?
When my Dimensions are so well compait,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true
As honest Macauns sirie? Why brand they vs
With Bafe? With bales Baritadie? Balse, Balse?
Who in the lushe health of Nature, take
More composition, and fierce qualitie.
Then dotl within a dull flate virid bed
Goe to th'creating a whole tribe of Fops,
Gott twaassets a sleepe, and wake? Well then,
Legitmate Edgar, I must haue your land,
Our Fathers loue, to the Balfard Edmund,
As to th'legittimate: fine word: Legitmate.

99 3. Well

The Tragedie of King Lear.

Well, my Legitimiue, if this Letter speed,
And my Intention thrite, Edmund the bale
Shall it be't Legitimation; I grow, I prosper
Now Gods, stand vp for Baldats.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banished them; and France in choller parted?
And the King gone to night? Preferbles his power,
Confident to exhibition? All this done
Vpon the gud? Edmund, how now? What news?
Baff. So please your Lordship, none.
Glo. Why do earnestly feke you to put vp y Letter?
Baff. I know no newes, my Lord.
Glo. What Papers were you reading?
Baff. Nothing, my Lord.
Glo. No? what needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your Pocket? The quality of nothing, hath not Such need tohide it sable. Let's see: come, if it be nothing,
I shall not neede Specchales.

Baff. I beechech you Sir, pardon mee; it is a Letter from my Brother, that I have not all ore-read; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your ore-looking.

Glo. Give me the Letter, Sir.
Baff. I shall offend, either to detain, or give it:
The Contents, as in part I vnderstand them,
Are too blame.

Glo. Let's see let's see.
Baff. I hope for his Trueoffs justification, hee wrote this but as an effay, or taste of my Virtue.

Glo reads. This palace, and reuerence of Age, may make the word better to the lefe of our times; keepes our Fortunes from us till our eldest cometh relish them. I begin to finde a and fast bondage, in the oppression of aged tyrannies, was stranger not as it hath power, but as it is suffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may bucke more. If your Father would store pellin it made him, ye shall know I have his Reuerence for cue, and love the becloud of your Brother.

should enjoy halfe his Reuenue: my Sonne Edgar, had bee
a hand to write this? A heart and braine to breede it in?
When came you to this? Who brought it?
Baff. It was not brought mee, my Lord; there's the cumming off. I found it throwne in at the Cauent of my

Glo. You know the character to be your Brothers?
Baff. If the matter were good my Lord, I durnt swear it were his; but in respect of that, I would faine think it were not.

Glo. It is his.
Baff. It is his hand, my Lord: but I hope his heart is not in the Contests.

Glo. Has he never before founded you in this business?
Baff. Never my Lord: But have heard him oft main-tain't it to be fit, that Sonnes at perfect age, and Fathers death'd, the Father should bee as Ward to the Son, and the Same manage his Reuenue,

Glo. O Villain, villain: his very opinion in the Letter. Abhorred Villain; vnracall'd, detested, brutish Villain: would the burchett; Go forra, feke him; he approv'd him. Abhorrible Villain, where is he?
Baff. I do not well know my L. If he shall please you to subject your indignation against my Brother, til you can decompose him better tellnony of his intent, you shold not a certainty cause where, if you violently proceed against him, making his purpose, it would make a great pauciation in your owne Honor, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawe downe my life for him, that he hath wrack this to feke my afection to you, Hector, & to no other piece of censure.

Glo. Think you so?
Baff. If your Honor do ge it mete, I will place you where you shall hear vs conforme of this, and by an Autocoulus assurance have yors satisfaction, and that without any further delay, then this very Evening.

Glo. He cannot bee such a Moniler, Edmund; feke him out: wintre me into him, I pray you, frame the Backfinefe after your owne wisdome, I would vaffitate my selfe, to be in a due resolution.
Baff. I will feke him Sir, prefently: country the Backfinefe as I shall find means, and acquaint you withall.

Glo. These late Eclipses in the Sun and Moone portend no good to vs: though the wisdome of Nature can repose thon, and thus, yet Nature finds it selfe seoure'd by the frequent effects. Lowe cooles, friendship falls off, Brothers divide, in Cities, mistaties in Countries; discord, in Pallaces, Trasfon; and the Bond crack'd, twist Soules and hathe of Faith. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's Son against Father, the Kings fale from by as of Nature, there's Father against Child. We have seen the heft of our time. Machinations, hollownesse, traacherie, and all versus disorders follow vs disquietly to our Granes. Find out this Villain, Edmund, it shall loate thee nothing, do it carelessly: and the Noble & true-bred
Heart of the World, I hope, will have his offence hoonestly,
Tis a strange, Edger.

Baff. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are fick in fortune, often the surfe of our own beaviour, we make guilty of our disfiers, the Sun, the Moone, and Starres, as if we were villains, negatice,
Fouses by heavenly compulsion, Knaves, Thieves, and Traachers by Spherical predominace, Duaks, Ly-ars, and Abiturers by an inforded obedience of Uranian influence; and all the we are emin in, by a donot thunning on. An admisable eusse of Whare-matter-man, to lay his Gollifh, disputation on the charge of a Starre,
My Father compounded with my mother vnder the Dragon star, and my Naturall was under Virga Maior, so that it follows, I am strong, and Exelserous, I should have but that I am, had the mindfulle Starre in the Fummant trammeld on my left hand.

Edgar. Pat: he comes like the Catastrophe of the old Comedy:
My Cue is villainous Melancholly, with a lighke Tew
O'beedam. — O these Eclipses do porthein these diusions. Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now Brother Edmund, what feticion contemplation are you in?
Baff. I am thinking Brother of a predicion I read this other day, what should follow these Eclipses.

Edg. Do you busie you selle with that?
Baff. I promis you, the efects he writes of, succeed whappily.

When faw you my Father left?

Edg. The night gone by.

Baff. Spake you with him?

Edg. I, two houres together.

Baff. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, nor countenace?

Edg. None at all.

Baff. Benthink your selle wherein you may have offended him: and at my entey for bare his presence, until some little time hath quailfified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant to ragest in him, that with the mischief of your person, it would fearfully slay.

_Edg._ Some Villain hath done me gross.

_Edm._ That's my fear, I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes over; and as I stay, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fully bring you to hear my Lord speaks: pray ye goe, there's my key; if you do here abroad, goe arm'd.

_Edg._ Arm'd, Brother?

_Edm._ Brother, I advise you to thetell, I am no honest man, if heer be any good meaning toward you; you have told you what I have feene, and heard: But faintly, Nothing like the image, and horror of it, pray you away.

_Edg._ Shall I hear from you anon?

_Edm._ I do feere you in this businesse: A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble, Whose nature is to farse from doing harms, That he is euept none; on whose foolish benefice My praetices ride easy: I see the businesse.

_Lear._ Let me, if not by birth, have land's by wit, All with me's mee, that I can fatisfon fit.

[Exeunt.]

_Scena Tertia._

_Enter Gonerill, and Steward._

_Gon._ Did my Father strike my Gentleman for chiding of his Poole?

_St._ I Madam.

_Gon._ By day and night, he wrongs me, every howre
He flashes into one groffe crime, or other,
That feels at all on me: I heare not endures it.
His Knights grow riotous, and Wanton vpbrides vs
On every strife. When he retires from hunting,
I will not speake with him, say I flacke,
If you come flacke of former servises,
You shall do well, the fault of it Ile anfwer.

_St._ He's comming Madam, I heare him.

_Gon._ Put on what eveyragine negligence you please,
You and your Fellowes: I'd have it come to queefion;
If he diflates it, leem him to my Sister,
Whose mind and mine I know in that are one,
Remember what I have faid.

_St._ Well Madam.

_Gon._ And let his Knights have colder looks amonge you: what grows of it no matter, aduise your fellows so, Ile write straight to my Sister to hold my courfes repre for pace of dinner.

[Exeunt.]

_Scena Quarta._

_Enter Kent._

_Kent._ If but as will I forthe accents borrow,
That can my speech defeue, my good intent
May carry through it felt to that full issue
For which I rais'd my lifetife. Now bandit Kent,
If thou canst ferue where thou doft stand condem'd,
So may it come, thy Mafter whom thou lou'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

_House within. Enter Lear and Attendants._

_Lear._ Let me not flay a lot for dinner, goe it scandy, bow now, what art thou?

_Kent._ A man Sir.

_Lear._ What doft thou professe? What would't thou with vs?

_Kent._ I do professe to be no leeffe then I seemeje; ferve him truely that will put me in truft, to love him that is honest, to concerne with him that is wife and faies little, to feare judgement, to fight when I cannot choose, and to care no fiith.

_Lear._ What art thou?

_Kent._ A very honest hearted Fellow, and as poore as the King.

_Lear._ If thou be't as poore for a subject, as he's for a King, thou art poore enough. What would's thou?

_Kent._ Servise.

_Lear._ Who would's thou ferve?

_Kent._ You, Sir.

_Lear._ Do't thou know me fellow?

_Kent._ No Sir but you have that in your countenance, which I would faine call Mafter.

_Lear._ What's that?

_Kent._ Authority.

_Lear._ What servises canst thou do?

_Kent._ I can keepe honest counfaile, ride, run, make a curious tale in telling it, and deliuer a plaine meffege bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualifieed in, and the beft of me, is Diligence.

_Lear._ How old art thou?

_Kent._ Not fo young Sir to loue a woman for finging, nor so old to date on her for any thing. I have yeares on my backe forty eight.

_Lear._ Follow me, thou shalt ferue me, if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner ho, dine: where's my houre of my Poole? Go you and call my Poole houre. You go Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

_Enter Steward._

_St._ So pleafe you.

_Lear._ What faires the Fellow there? Call the Clumpole backe: what's my Poole? Ho, I thinke the world's afleepe, how now? Where's that Mungrell?

_Knigh._ He fies my Lord, your Daughters is not well.

_Lear._ Why came not the flauce backe to me when I call'd him?

_Knigh._ Sir, he anfwered me in the roundeft manner, he would not.

_Lear._ He would not?

_Knight._ My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my judgement your Highnesse is not entertained with that Ceremonious afftrction as you were wont, there's a great abatement of kindnesse appears as well in the generall dependants, as in the Duke himselfe after, and your Daughter.

_Lear._ Has Saith thou so?

_Knight._ I defeech you pardon me my Lord, if I be mißtaken, for my duty cannot be filent, when I thinke your Highnesse wrong'd.

_Lear._ Thou but rememberd me of mine owtne Conception, I have perceiv'd a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blame on mine owne jealous curiofitie, then as a very pretence and purpote of your kindnesse; I will looke further into't: but where's my Poole? I have not fene him this two daies.

_Knight._ Since my young Ladies going into France

_Sir._

795
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Lear, No Lad, reach me.

Footl. Nuncleke, give me an egg, and ilke giue thee two Crownes.

Lear. Whate two Crownes shal they be

Footl. Why after I have cut the egges'th'middles and exte the meate, the two Crownes of the egges: when thou clouett thy Crownes'th'middle, and gait away both part, then hast thou t'half thine Affe. on the backe o'th' dust, thou hadst it little wit in thy bald crowne: when thou gait thy golden one away; if I speake like my selfe, in this, let him be whipt that fost findes it is.

Footles had nere leffe grace in a yere, For witsicha are crowne sopifth, And know not how their wits to weare, Their manners are so spiff.

Le. When were you wont to be so full of Songs insta?

Footl. I haue vised it Nuncleke, ere since thou mad'st thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gait them the rod, and put't hame thine owne breeches, then they For fadence joy did wepe,

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a King should play bo-pocpe,

And goe the Foole among.

Pre'thy Nuncleke keepes a Schoolemaister that can teach thy Foole to lie, I would taine learn to lie.

Lear. And you lie first, weel I have you whipt.

Footl. I maruell why thou and thy daughters are, they'll haue me whips for speaking true: thou'll haue me whipt for lying, and sometimes I am whipt for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing then a foole, and yet I would not be the Nuncleke, thou haist pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing i'th'middle here comes one of the parings.

Enter Corinth.

Lear. How now Daughter: what makes that Frontlet one? You are too much of late i'th'crowne.

Footl. Thou shalt a pretty fellow when thou hast no need to care for her dreaming, now thou art an O without a figure, I am better than thou art now, I am a Foole, thou art nothing. Yes forsooth I will hold my tongue, so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

Mum, mum, he that keepes it not cruel, not crum, Weary of all, she'll want none. That's a sheald Pecfod.

Gus. Not only Sir this, your all-lycend Foole, But other of your infensible custome Do hourly Carpe and Quarrel breaking forth In ranke, and not to be endur'd i'st Sir. I had thought by making this well knowne vnto you, To haue tound a false rede tele, but now growyest fetall By what your felle too late base spoke and done, That you prooc't this course, and put it on By your allowance, whoch if thou should, the fault Woul not yape cencur, nor the redelites frepe, Which in the tender of a wholesome weale, Mighty in their working do you that offence, Which else were flame, then necessitie Will call di[.street proceeding.

Footl. For you know Nuncleke, the Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckoo so long, that's it had his bit off by it young, so out went the Candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our Daughter?

Footl. (dome)

Gus. I would you would make vs of your good wife- (Whereof I know you are fraught), and put away These dispositions, which of late transport you From what you rightly are.

Footl. May
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Foot. May not an Allie know, when the Cart draws the Horse?

Lear. Whose cuppage I love thee.

Foot. Do's any here be knowe me?

This is not Lear.

Do's Lear walke thus? Speaketh thus? Where are his cies?

Either his Notion weakes, his Discontents

Are Lenthargied. Ha! Walking? Is't notlo?

Who is that can tell me who I am?

Foot. Lear's shadow.

Lear. Your name, faire Gentlewoman?

Gen. This admiration Sir, is much o'th'avour.

Of either your new prankes. I do beseech you

To understand my purposes aight:

As you are Old, and Reuerent, should be Wife.

Here do you keepe a hundred Knights and Squires,

Men so disorder'd, to debaull'd, and bold;

That this our Court infected with their manner,

Shewes like a monstrous Lice; Epidemical and Lute

Makes it more like a Taxence, or a Brothell,

Then a gradall Pallete. The blame it felfe doth speake

For infallimento. Be thent defir'd

By her, that elle will take the thing the begger,

A little to diquityrity your Traine,

And the remanuerthat still still depend,

To be such men as may before your Age,

Which know themselves, and you.

Lear. Darkniffe, and Direct,

Saddel my horse: call my Traine together,

Degenereate Balfard, ile not trouble thee;

Yet hate I Left a daughter.

Gen. You flinke my people, and your disorder'd rable, make Semants of their Betteres.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Wait, that soul iter report's:

Is it your will, speake Sir? Prepare my Horset.

Ingatind the Marble-breded Fiend,

More hideous when thou saw'st thine in a Child,

Then the Sea-monster.

Alb. Pray Sir be patient.

Lear. Despatch Kite, thou leyst.

My Traine are men of choice, and rarest parts,

That all particular men know,

And in the most exact and support,

The worshipps of their name. O most small fault

How vely didst thou in Cordelia th'new?

Which like an Engine, wrenches my frame of Nature

From the first place: drew from my heart all love,

And added to the gall. O Lear. Lear, Lear!

Beate at this gate that let thy Folly in,

And thy deere Judgement out. Go, go, my people.

Alb. My Lord, I am guiltlefe, as I am ignorant

Of what hath mouted you.

Lear. It may be fo, my Lord.

Heare Nature, heare deere Goddesse, heare:

Suspend thy purpose, if thou didt it intend

To make this Creature fruitfull:

Into her Wombe comme direcdty,

Drive vp in her the Organs of increas,

And from her derogate body, never springing

A Babe to honor her. If the imite reeme,

Create her childe of Spleene, that it may live

And be a smartt dissipin't entomer to her.

Let it flame wrinkles in her brow of youth,

With cadent Tares free Channels in her cheeks.

Turne all her Mothers paines, and benefic.

To laughter, and contempt: That the may feele,

How sharper then a Serpents tooth is

To have a thanklesse Childre. Away, away.

Exit. A. B. Now Gods that we adore,

Where of cometh this?

Gen. Neuer affayly fyr felfe to know more of it:

But let his disposition hauie that scope

As doage giuen it.

Exit Lear.

Lear. What fiftie of my Followers at a clap?

Within a fortnight?

A. B. What's the matter, Sir?

Lear. Ile teele thee:

Life and death, I am aham'd

That thou haile power to make my manhood thus,

That these hot tears, which breake me perforce

Should make them worshipp them,

Blates and Faggots ypon thee:

Thventent woundings of a Fathers care

Pierce euerie fense about thee. Old fond eyes

Bwwepe this caufe againe, Ile pluckle ye out,

And cast you with the waters that you looke

To temper Clay. Ha! Let it be fo.

I haue another daughter,

Who I am sure is kindle and comfortable:

When the full heart hearre this of thee, with her nails

Shel' fleazy Wolusith wisge. Thou finall finde,

That Ile resume the shape which thou dott thinke

I have cast off for euer.

Exit.

Gen. Do you marke that?

A. B. I cannot be fo partiall Govern,

To the great lime I beare you.

Gen. Pray you conuerst. What Ofswald, hea?

You Sir, more Knasse then Foute, after your Master.

Foot. Nunkle Lear, Nunkle Lear,

Tarry, take the Foute with thee:

A Fox, when one has caught her,

And such a Daughter,

Should faire to the Slaughter,

If my Cap would buy a Halter,

So the Foute followes after.

Gen. This man hath had good Counfell,

A hundred Knights?

'Tis politike, and fafe to let him kepe

Arpoint a hundred Knights : yes, that on euerie dreame,

Each buzz, each fancie, each complaint, disslike,

He may engender his doare with their powers,

And hooe our loues in mercie. Ofswald, I say.

A. B. Weil, you may faree too faree.

Gen. Siffer then trufft too fairre;

Let me still take away the harme I faree,

Not faree still to be taken. I know his heart,

What he hath vter'd I haue wrijt my Siffer:

If the sustaine him, and his hundred Knights

When I haue shewed thy th'vntiendelle.

Enter Steward.

How now Ofswald?

What have you wrijt that Letter to my Siffer?

Stew. I Madam,

Gen. Take you some company, and away to herte,

Inform me full of my particulars faree,

And thereto addde such reasons of your owne,

As may concapt it more. Get you gone.

And
And hasten your return; no, no, my Lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet render pardon
Your are much more at task for want of wisdom,
Then prais'd for harmless mildness.

Exeunt Dra. What. I.

Now s; Exit.

Enter Kent, Gentleman, and Poole.

Kent. I will not sleep my Lord, till I have delivered your Letter.

Poole. It's a mans braines were in his heels, were not in danger of knyes?

Kent. I will not sleep my Lord, till I have delivered your Letter.

Enter.

Poole. Then I prythee be merry, thy whal shall not go

Kent. Hah, hah, hah.

Poole. Shall see thy other Daughter will vie the kind-ly, for though she's as like this, as a Crabbe's like an Apple; I can tell what I can tell.

Kent. I did her wrong.

Poole. Can't tell how an Oyster makes his shell?

Kent. No.

Poole. Why to keep one eyes of either side's note, that was a man cannot fail be, he may fly into.

Kent. I did her wrong.

Poole. Can't tell how an Oyster makes his shell?

Kent. No.

Poole. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snake's ha's a houfe.

Kent. Why?

Poole. Why to put's head in, not to glue it o wyly to his daughters, and leave his horses without a cafe.

Kent. I will forget my Nature, so kind a father? Be my Hoofes ready?

Poole. Thy fiffes are gone about 'em; the reason why the ffeen Stares are no mo then feen, is a pretty reason.

Kent. Because they are no thong.

Poole. Ye intended, thou wouldst make a good Poole.

Kent. Tack't again perfocer; Monfter Ingratitude!

Poole. (To Kent.) Thou wast my Poole Nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Kent. How's that?

Poole. Thou shouldn't have been old, till thou hadst bin wife.

Kent. O for me not to be mad, nor mad sweet Heauen; keepen in temper, I would not be mad. How now are the Hoofes ready?

Poole. Ready my Lord.

Kent. Come Boy.

Fool. She that's a Maid now, & laughts at my departure,
Shall not be a Maid long, vulgar things be cut shorter.

Enter Edgar, and Cornwall generally.

Edgar. Saute the Count.

Cornwall. And your Sirs, I have bin
With your Father, and Iouen him notice
That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Ducheffe
Will be here with him this night.

Edgar. How comes it that

Cornwall. Nay I know not, you have heard of the newes a- broad, I mean the whisper'd ones, for they are yet but ear whispering arguments.

Edgar. No: pray you what are they?

Cornwall. Have you heard of no likely Wares toward,
'Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall, and Albany?

Edgar. Not a word.

Cornwall. You may do them in time,

Exit Edgar.

Edgar. The Duke be here no so late? The better bell.

This weasus a false perfocer into my businesse,
My Father ha'll guard to take my Brother,
And I have one thing of a quecrue question
Which I must all, Brieferneffe, and Fortune work.

Enter Edgar.

Edgar. Brother, a word, dicsens Brother I say,
My Father wrote to me, but I'm out there;
Intelligence is given where you are not;
You have now the good aucthorap of this night,
Have you not spoke on the Duke of Cornwall?
Here's comming father, now'll this night, this battle,
And Regan with him, have you nothing laid
Upon his parte to paint the Duke of Albany?

Edgar. Aduse you selle.

Edgar. I am sure on't, nor a word.

Edgar. I have my Father comming, pardon me:
In cunning, I must draw my Sword upon you:
Draw, feme to defend your felle,
Now quit you well.

Yeed, come before my Father, Light horse here, fly Brother, Torches, Torches, to fatewell.

Exit Edgar.

Edgar. Some blood drawn on me, would beger opinion
Of my more fierce entourage. I have scene drunkards
Do more then this in sport; Father, Father,
Stop, stop, no helpes?

Enter Glosfer, and Servants with Torches.

Glosfer. Now Edmund, where's the villain?

Edgar. Here Floyd be in the dark, his sharp Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charmes, convining the Moone
To fand auspicious Misriss.

Glosfer. But where is he?

Edgar. Lucke Sir, I bleed.

Glosfer. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edgar. Find this way Sir, when by no means he could.

Glosfer. Pursue him, hogo after. By no means what, what?

Edgar. Periswo me to the murder of your Lordship,
But that I told him the revenging God,
Gaunt Patricides did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and strong a bond
The child was bound to th' Father; Sir in fine,
Seeing how filthy opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in full motion
With his prepared sword, he charged home
My vapored body, lach'd, & mine arm;
And when he saw my bell alarum'd spirits
Bold in the quartile rights, to'd to th' counter
Or whether galled by the neyle I made,
Full sodainely he fled.

Glo. Let him fly fare;
Nor in this land shall he remaine uncaught
And found; dispatch the Noble Duke my Master,
My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his authoritie I will proclamie it,
That he which finds him, shall defend our thanks,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the stake:
He that conceals him death.

Baff. When I disswaded him from his intent,
And bound him right to do it, with cruel speech
I threatened' to discover him, he repelled,
Thou reprovinge Bardfast, dost thou thank,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposall
Of any truth, vertue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what should I deny,
(As this I would, though thou didst produce
My very Character) I'd turne it all
To thy tuggeon, plot, and damned practise:
And thou must make a dalland of the world,
If they not thought the profit of my death
Were very pregnant and potent all spirits
To make thee fecke it.

Glo. O strange and faulch Villaine,
Would he deny his Letter, father? Have
Harkke, the Duke Trumpet'st, I know not what he comest;
All Ports I barre, the villaine shall not sepe,
The Duke shall grant me that; besides, his picture
I will lend fafere and neere, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him, and of my land,
(Loyall and natural Boy) He worke the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Corneswell, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now my Noble friend, since I came hither
(Which I can call but now), I have heard frangenele.
Reg. If he be true, all vengeance comes too short.
Which can pursueth offendr's, how dost my Lord?
Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.
Reg. What, did my Father Godsonne seek your life?
He whom my Father nam'd, your Edgara?
Glo. O Lady, Lady, shame would have it hid.
Reg. Was he not companion with the doughty Knights
That tender'd upon my Father?
Glo. No, not Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.
Baff. Yes Madam, he was of that confort.
Reg. No mannerly then, though he were ill affected,
'Tis they have put him on the old mans death,
To have trepence and waist of his Revenues:
I have this present evening from my Sifter
Besse well informed of them, and with such cautions,
That if they come to foistorne at my house,
He be not there.
Cor. Nor I assure thee, Rege.

Edmund, I hear that you have shewne your Father
A Child-like Office.

Baff. It was my duty Sir.
Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd
This hunt you see, fituizng to apprehend him.
Cor. 'Tis he purpose, her father's death,
Glo. I my good Lord.
Cor. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harme, make your owne purpose,
How in my strength you pleas't: for you Edmund,
Whole vertue and obedience doth this infant;
So much commend it selfe, you shall be ours,
Nature's of such deepke truth, we shall much need:
You we first hence on.

Baff. I shall ferue you Sir truly, how ever else.
Glo. For him I thank ye Grace.
Cor. You know not why we came to visit you?
Reg. Thus out of feation, shedding darke ey'd night,
Occasions Noble Giufr, of some prize,
Wherein we must haue vie of your aduice.
Our Father he hath writ, to hath our Sifter,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answrere from our home: the general Meffengers
From hence attend dispatch, our good old Friend,
Lay comfortes to your boforme, and befow
Your needfull counsel to our business,
Which caues the infant vie.
Glo. I ferue you Madam,
Your Grace's are right welcome. Exeunt. Flower.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward generally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, Friend, art of this house?
Kent. I. Stew. Where may we fet our horses?
Kent. I'll stand here.
Stew. Prithee, if thou knowest, let me tell.
Kent. I love thee not.
Stew. Why then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipin's Purse, I would make thee care for me.
Stew. Why don't thou wise me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow I know thee.
Stew. What do'st thou know me for?
Kent. A Knave, a Rascal, an eater of broken meates, a
Bafe, proud, shallow, beggerly, three-futed-hundred
Pound, filthy wooffed-flocking knave, a
London-taking, whereon gaffe-going superfiericeful
Fincke Rogue, one Trunke-inheriting base, one
That wouldn't be a Bawd in way of good service, and art
Nothing but the composition of a Knave, Begger, Coward,
Pander, and the Sonne and Heire of a Mungirl Bitch,
One whom I will bette into clamours whining, if thou
deny't the least farble of thy addition.
Stew. Why, what a monsfrous Fellow art thou, thus to rale on one, that is neither knowne of thee, nor knowes thee?
Kent. What a brazen-faced Varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me? Is it two dayes since I trippt thy heels, and bearst thee before the King? Draw you tongue, for
The Tragedy of King Lear.

For though it be night, yet the Moone shineth, He makes a pop'out Moonshine of you, you whorecon Culyenly
Batter-monger, draw.

Stew. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw you Rafehall, you come with Letters against the King, and take Vaniadie the puppers part, against the Royalty of her Father; draw you Rogue, or He so carabado your thanks, draw you Rafehall, come your wiles;

Sir. Help, ho, murther, helpe.

Kent. Strike you flawe, stand rogue, stand you next

Stew. Help'ho, murther, murther.

Enter Sffard, Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Sermant.

Tab. How now, what's the matter? Part.

Kent. With your goodman Boy, if you please, come, He feather, you, come on you Master.

Glo. Weapons? Armes? what's the matter here?

Car. Keep peace upon your lives, he dies that strikes against, what is the matter?

Reg. The Messengers from our Sister, and the King;

Car. What is your difference, speak?

Stew. I am fierce in breath my Lord;

Kent. Strike me as Maruell, you have to behold your valour, you cowardly Rafehall, nature discloes in thee: Taylor made thee.

Car. Thou art a strange fellow, a Taylor make a man?

Kent. A Taylor Sir, a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had bin but two yeares o'trade.

Car. Speak ye now, how grew your quarrel?

Sir. This ancient Ruffian Sir, whose life I have so'at of his grey-beard.

Kent. Thou whorcon Zed, thou weneceffary letter: my Lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this un-boutted villain into monster, and daube the wall of a lake with him. Spare my grey-beard, you wastale?

Car. Peace sirrah,

You basely know, know you no reuence?

Kent. Yes Sir, but anger hath a priviledge,

Car. Why are thou angrie?

Kent. That such a flate as this should wear a Sword, Who weares no honesty: such smiling rogues as thefe,

Like Rats oft bite the holly cords a twaine,

Which are t'untrance, t'unloafe: smooth ev'ry paffion

That in the natures of their Lords rebel,

Being oile to fire, snow to the colder moodes,

Reuerce, affime, and turne their Halcon bakes

With every gall, and wasy of their Matters,

Knowing naught (like dogges) but following:

A plaque upon your Epitaphe village,

Snoile your my speeches, as I were a Foole.

Glo. If I had you upon Sarum Plaine,

I'd drive you: cackling hame to Commet.

Car. What art thou mad old Fellow?

Glo. How fell you out, say that?

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,

Then I, and such a knave.

Car. Why dost thou call him Knave?

What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance like me not.

Car. No more perchance do's mine, nor his, nor her;

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plaine,

I have seen better faces in my time,

Then stands on any shoulder that I see

Before me, at this instant.

Car. This is some Fellow,

Who having been bred for blunderer, doth affect

A saucy touch, and constrains the garb

Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter he,

An honest mind and plaine, he must speake truth,

And they will take it, if not, he's plaine.

These kind of Knaves I know, which in this plainefl

Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends,

Then twenty fyll, bucking obfervers,

That fretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity,

Vnder th'allowance of your great afept,

Whofe influence like the wreath of radiant fire

On flicking Phaeton front.

Car. What mean you by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you commend so much. I know Sir, I am not flatterer, he that build you in a plaine accent, was a plaine Knave, which for my part I will not be, though I should win your difpleasure to entreat me too.

Car. What was th'offence you gave him?

Stew. I never gave him any:

It pleat the King his Master very late

To be taken up in this mixture of contention,

When he compact, and fatterer his difpleasure

Tript me behind being done, unifted, sail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of Man,

That wronged him, got proxies of the King,

For him attempting, who was felf-jubbed,

And in the fliffment of this dead exploit,

Draw on me here againe.

Kent. None of thefe Rogues, and Cowards

But Axas is there Foole.

Car. Fetch forth the Stocks?

You rubbourne ancient Knave, you recourte Braggart,

We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:

Call not your Stocks for me, I serve the King.

On whose employment I was sent to you,

You shall doe small respect, show not bold malice

Against the Grace, and Person of my Master,

Stocking his Messinger.

Car. Fetch forth the Stocks;

As I have life and Honour, there shall he fit till Noone.

Reg. Tell noone till night my Lord, and all night too.

Kent. Why Madam, if you were your Fathers dog,

You should not we me.

Car. Sir, being his Knave, I will,

Stock'd brought out.

Car. This is a Fellow of the felle fame colour,

Our Sifter speaks of. Come, bring away the Stocks.

Glo. Let me be ftech your Grace, not to do fo,

The King his Master, needs must take it ill

That he so lightly valued in his Messinger,

Should have him thus restrained.

Car. He affireth that.

Reg. My Sifter may receive it much more woffe,

To haue her Gentleman abus'd, affaited.

Car. Come my Lord, away.

Exeunt.

Glo. I am forsy for thee friend, tis the Duke pleasure,

Whose diophileon all the world well knowes:

Will not be rub'd or flarp'd, Ite entreat for thee.

Kent. Pray do not Sir. I have watch'd and travailed hard,

Some time I flall flie out, the rest Ile whistle:

A good mans fortune may grow out at heales;
KENT. By Joves, I swear it.

LEAR. They durst not do't;

They could not, would not do't: 'tis worse than murder,
To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Refuse me with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st defend, or they impose this outrage,
Comming from vs.

KENT. My Lord, when at their home
I did commend your Highness Letters to them,
Ere I was ril'en from the place, that Bawdew
My dutie kneeling, came there & seeking Poffe,
Stood in his halfe, halfe breakehalle, painting forth
From Coventhis Mistri, filutations;
Deluder'd Letters spight of intermission,
Which pefidently they read; on those contents
They fummon'd vp their meiney, straight tooke Horse,
Conmanded me to follow, and attend
The teroupe of their answer, gave me cold looks,
And neglecting herethe the other Meffengers,
Whose welcome I perceiv'd had poison'd mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Dipart'd to fawcy against your Highniffe,
Having more man then wish about me,draw;
He rais'd the house, with loud and coward cries,
Your Sonne and Daughter found this treafupworth
The fame which here it suffers. (way,

Foole. Winters not gone yet, if the wild Geese fly that

Fathersthat wasare rage, do make their Children blind,

But Fathers that bearz bagsz shall see their children kind.

Fortune that arrant who euer turns the key toothpoor,

But for all this thou fhalt have as many Dolors for thy

Daughterz as thou canst tell in a yeare.

LEAR. Oh how this Mother twets vp toward my heart!

Half a poft, downe thou climing sorrow,

Thy Elements below where is this Daughters?

KENT. With the exile Sir, here within.

LEAR. Follow me not, fay here.

GEN. Made you no more offence,

But what you speake of?

KENT. None:

How chance the the King comes with fo small a number?

Foole. And thou hadst bene fer 1th'Stockes for that question, thou'dt well defcrue'd it.

KENT. Why Foole?

Foole. Weel fete thee to school to an Ant, to teach there theer's no labouring 1th' winter. All that follow their no es are led by their eyes, but blinde men, and there's not a nofe among twenty, but can smell him that's finking;

let go thy hold, when a greaawhelle runs downe a hill, left he breake thy necke with following. But the great one that goes vpward, let him draweth after:

where a ws man giues thee better counfell giue me mine

againe, I would haue nonebut knawe follow it, since a Foole giues it,

That Sir, whish furnes and feakes fo gaine,

And follow wes but for forme;

Will packe, when it begins to raise,

And leave thee in the storme.

But I will rarify, the Foole will flay,

And let the wifesman fife:

The knawe turns Foole that runnes away,

The Foole no knawe perdie.

Enter Lear and Gloucester.

LEAR. Where leamt'you this Foole?

Foole. Not 1th'Stockes Foole.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Reg. O Sir, you are old,
Natural in your stands on the very Verge
Of his confine; you should be rul'd, and led
By some discretion, that doth correct your state
Better then you your selfe: therefore I pray you,
That to my Sister, you do make returne,
Say you have wrong'd her.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but marke how this becomes the house?
Deere daughter, I confesse that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I begge,
That you would sake me Rayment, Bed, and Food.

Reg. And concluding, no more: these are unrighteous tricks:
Returne you to my Sister.

Lear. Neuer Regan?
She hath abated me of half my Traine;
Look'd blacke upon me, strowke me with her Tongue
Molt Serpent-like, upon the very Heart.
All the flor'd Vengeance of Heauen, fall
On her ingratitude full top: thinke her yong bones
You taking Armes, with Lantenelle.

Cor. Eye for Eye,
Le. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding Flames
Into her scor'full eyes: Inflit her Beauty,
You Fen-fick'd Pugges, drawne by the powfull Sunne,
To fall, and blifter.

Reg. O the biled Gods!
So say I with on me, when the rath moodes is on.

Lear. No Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:
Thy tender-hurted Nature shal not gue
Thai o're to haftsmene: Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burne. 'Tis not in thee
To gudge my pleasures, to cut off my Traine,
To bardy-shifly words, to feast my fates,
To minde not, to confine my Image.

Reg. Against my comming in. Thou better know'd
The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood,
Effects of Curfe, chief of Gratitute:
Thy hate o'th' Kingdome hast thou not forgot,
In whom I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good Sir, to what purpose. Tucket within.

Lear. Who putt my men in Stouke's?
Enter Steward.

Cor. What Trumpet's that? Regan. I know my Sisiter,
That she would soone be heere. Is your Lady come?
Lear. This is a Swale, whose eafe borrow'd pride
Dowels in the fieldy grace of her heeles followes.
Our Vast, frommen fight.

Cor. What mens the Grace of your Wit,
Enter Corin.

Lear. Who fetch my's Servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know on.

Who comes here? O Heaucms !
If you doe loue men, if your sweet sway
Allow Obedience; if you your flues are old,
Make it your caufe. Send downe, and do your part.
Are not thou learn'd to vsue vpon this Beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?
Com. Why not by th' hand Sist? How haue I offended?
All's not offence that indifferenc findes,
And dotage termes fo.

Lear. O fides, you are too tough!

Will you yet hold my Soke?

Regan. How came my man's Stouke's?
Cor. I set him there, Sir: but his owne Disorders
Defe'red.
The Tragedy of King Lear.

395

And thou art twice her Least.

Ken. Ha'ray on my Lord.

What need you fine and twenty? Ten? Or five?

To follow it a house, where twice so many

Have a command to send you?

Ken. What need one?

Ken. O reason not the need: our basest Beggar:

Are in the poorest thing superfluous,

 Allow not Nature, more then Nature needs.

Most life is cheaper than a Lady;

If only to go warme were gorgeous,

Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,

Which fearfully keeps thee warme, but for treasoned:

You Heaters; give me that patience; patience I need,

You see me heere (you Gods) a poore old man,

As full of griefes as age, wretched in both,

Lift be you that flatters those Daughter's sheers

Against their Father, foole me not too much,

To beare it calmly touch me with Noble anger,

And yet not womens weapons water drops,

Staine my manly cheeke.

No you! unnatural! Hags,

I will hauie such revenges on you both,

That all the world shall —— I will do such things,

What they are yet; I know not, but they shallbe

The terror of the earth you thinke, I wepse,

No, Ile not wepe, I have full caues of weeping.

Storms and Tempes?

But this heart shall break into a hundred thousand flames

Or else I wepe; O Poole, I shall go mad.

Exeunt.

Corn. Lee vs withdraw, 'swill be a Storme,

Reg. This hooke is little, the old man sae people,

Cannot be well blow'd.

Gen. Tis his owne blame heath put himselfe in oure

And mustneeds taffe his folly.

Reg. For his particular, he receiue him gladly,

But not one follower.

Gen. So am I purposed, Where is my Lord of Glesmer?

Enter Glesmer

Gles. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd.

Gen. The King is in high rage.

Corn. Whether is he going?

Glos. He calls to Horse, but will I know not whether.

Corn. 'Tis beft to give him way, he leads himselfe.

Gen. My Lord, entice him by no meanes to fly.

Glos. Alack the night comes on, and the high windes

Do severely ruffle, for many Miles about

There's scarce a Bath.

Reg. O Sir, to willfull men,

The injuries that they themeselves procure,

Must be their Scheele-Mafters: thus vp your doore.

He is attended with a desperate crane,

And what they may incite him too, being apt,

To have his carcasus? wisse done bides faire.

Corn. Shut vp your doore my Lord, 'tis a wilfull night,

My Regan counsels well: come out our Horse: Exeunt.

Acutus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storm Hill. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, severally.

Ken. Who's there besides faule weather?

Gen. One minded like the weather, most raquely.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

KENT. Know you: Where's the King?

FOOL. He that has a house to put his head in, has a good Head-piece:

The Cordpiece that will house, before the head has any;

The Head, and he shall Lowe: so Beggars many many.

The man? makes his Toe, what he his Hatt hold make,

Shall of a Corne cry wen, and turne his sleepe to wak.

For there was never yet faire woman, but fine made mouths in a glasse.

Enter Kent.

LEAR. No, I will be the pattern of all patience.

I will say nothing.

KENT. Who's there?

FOOL. Marry here's Grace, and a Cordpiece, that's a Wifeman, and a Foole.

KENT. Alas Sir are you here? Things that love night,

Loue not such nights as these: The wrathfull Skiers.

Gallow the very wanderers of the darke

And make them keep their Caeus: Since I was man,

Such ftreets of Fire, such bufls of horrid Thunders,

Such groanes of roaring WInde, and Raine, I neuer

Remember to haue beraht. Man! Nature cannot carry

That Affliction, nor the fear.

LEAR. Let the great Goddess

That kepe this dreadful pedder of our heads,

Find out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,

That half within thee indulged Crimes

Vnwhipt of Justice. Hide thee, thou bloody hand;

Thou Periufd, and thou Sinerul of Vercue

That are incessant. Captible, too pecces flake

That under courtes, and convenient seeming

He's past'd on many life. Close peat-yt gasts,

Rue your concealing Continents, and cry

Thee dreadful Summone's grace. I am a man,

More smit'd against, then finning.

KENT. Alaske, base-headed?

Gracious my Lord, hard by here is a Howell,

Some kindship will it lend you? grant the Temper

Repyle you there, while to this hard howse,

(How much harder then the stones whereof'tis rais'd,

Which earn but now, demanding after you,

Den'y me to come in) returne, and force

Their scant'd custodie.

LEAR. My wits begin to turne,

Come on my boy. How do all my boy? Art cold?

I am cold my felle. Where is this howse, my Fellow?

The Art of our Nevellies is strange,

And can make vile things precious.Come, your Howel;

Poor Foole, and Knaue, I have one part in my heart

That's farrs yest for thee.

FOO. He that has and a little-syne wit,

Wish heigh-ho, the Winde and the Raine,

Muff make content with his Fortune sit,

Though the Raine it raineth every day.

LE. True Boy: Come bring vs to this Honour. Enter.

FOO. This is a brere night to coole a Currizan:

Ie speake a Prophete ere i go:

When Priests are more in word, then matter;

When Brewers maste their Malt with water;

When Nobles are their Taylors Tutors,

No Heretiques burn'd, but wenchas Suzors;

When every Cale in Law, is fight;

No Squire in debt, nor no poor Knight;

When Slanders do not live in Tongues;

Nor Cut-purfs come not to thongs;

When Vlurers tell their Gold th Field,
To shut me out? Pour on, I will endure:
In such a night as this? O Regain, Jerniel,
Your old kind Father, whose frank heart gave all,
O that way madness lies, let me shun that:
No more of that,
Kent. Good my Lord enter here.
Lear. Prythee go in thy selfe, setke shine owne ease,
This temptall will not give me leasse to ponder
On things would hurt me more, but Ile goe in,
In Boy, goe first. You houselesse pooretie,
Nay get thee in; liye praye, and then Ile sleepe.
Poore naked wretches, wherefoere you are
That bide the pething of this pittillesse Iorme,
How shal your Housle-flesse heads and vusted sides,
Your Iup'd, and window'd rangestraffe defend you
From feasions such as thefe? O Ile have tane
Too little care of this: Take Thyfickes, Pompe, Expoft thyselfe to feele what wretches feel,
That thou mayft shake the superflu to them,
And fhew the Heauens more soft.

Enter Edgar and Foole.

Edg. Fathom, and falf, Fathom and half; poore Tom.
Foole. Come not in here: Numule, here's a spirit, heepe me, heepe me,
Kent. Give me thy hand, who's there?
Foole. A spirit, a spirit, he fayes his name's poore
Tom.
Kent. What art thou that doft gruntle there? i'th' flaw? Come forth.
Edg. Away, the foule Fiend followes me, through thee large Hauhtome blowe the winds. Hamh, goe to thy bed and warme thee.
Lear. Did'st thou give all to thy Daughters? And art thou come to this?
Edgar. Who gives any thing to poore Tom? Whom the foule fiend hath filled with Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirle-Poole, o're Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives under his Pillow, and Halters in his Pfe, fet Rats-bane by his Porridge, made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Bay trottling Horse, our foule fiend Bridges, to coufe his owne shadow for a Traitor, Rifhe thy fine Wits, Toms cold. O do, do, do, do, do, bliffe thee from Whirle, Whinders, Starre-blasting, and taking, do poore Tom some charitie, whom the foule Fiend wise. There could I haufe him now, and there, and there again, and there.
Stor me
Lear. Ha's his Daughters brought him to this paffe?
Could'st thou faue nothing? Would it thou guee 'em all?
Foole. Nay, he refer'd a Blanket, elle we had bin all flaund.
Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous Syre
Hang fixed of remnes faultes, light on thy Daughters.
Kent. He hath no Daughters Sir.
Lear. Death Traitor, nothing could have subuid
To such a lowrieffe, but his vnderkind Daughters. (Nature
Is it the fafhion, that dicarded Fathers,
Should have thus little mercy on their fiells;
Judicious punishment, 'twas this fiell begot
Those Pheince Daughters.
Edgar. Pohock fay on Pillcock hill, slow slow, loo loo.
Foole. This cold night will tame vs all to Foole, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed o'the foule Fiend, obey thy Parents, keep thee words Justitce, sweate not, commit not.
with mans sworne Spouse; let noth thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What bough thu bin?

Edg. A Servaungeth! Proud in heart, and mind; that could my harte, wore Gloutes in my cap; lend the Luft of my Midstren heart, and did the eile of darkeuisse with her. swore as many Oathes, as 13ake words, & broke them in the sweet face of Heaven. One, that slept in the continuing of Luft, and walk'd it done. Wine loud! I derely, Duce detrally; and in Woman, out-Paramour'd the Turk. Felte of heart, light of eye, bloody of hand; Hug in cloth, Foxe in flesh; Wolf in greedinesse, Dog in madness. Lyon in erypr. Let not the creeking of hooves, Nor the rustling of Silkes, betray the poorse heart to woman. Keppe thy foote out of Bodhels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy pen from Lenders Bookes, and defye the foile Foue. Still through the Hauhouse bluswes the cold winde: Suyes soon, mon, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Sejfe: let him trot by.'

Lear. Thou were better in a Crane, than to endure with thy vnconcer'd body, this extremitie of the Skies. Is man no more then this? Confider him well. Thou ow't the Womne no Silke; the Beast, no Hide; the Sheep, no Wooll; the Cat, no perfume. Ha! Here's three ons are sophisiticated, Thou art the thing istelle; vnaconno-dicated man, is no more but a poore, base, fordcn Animali as thou art. Off, off you Lendings: Come, un-button here.

Enter Gloucester, with a Torch.

Foole. Prtythee Nuncke be contented, 'tis a naughtie night to swimme in. Now a little fire in a wilde Field, were like an old Lether's heart, a small spark, all the rest
on's body, cold: Looks, heere comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foule Flufferburgh, he begins at Curlew, and walkes at first Coche: Hee gues the Web and the Pin, fueint the eye, and makes the Hare-limpe; Mildewes the white Whale, and barts the poore Creature of earth.

Swithold stood thrice the old,
He met the Night-Mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her a light, and her truth-plain,
And arraign thee Witch, arraign thee.

Kent. How fares your Grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What's in you fecke?
Glou. Are you there? Your Names?

Edg. Poor Tom, thatastes the swimming Frog, the Tood, the Tod-pole, the wall-Ne, and the water that in the fuite of his heart, when the Foule Fiend rages, eats Cow-dung for Salters; swallows the old Rat, and the dutch-Dogge; drinks the green Mane of the flanding
Poole, who is whipt from Tythling to Tythling, and Flocke, gush'd, and impurd'd; who last three Suits to his backe, fire flintes to his body:

Horse to ride, and weapon to weare;
But, Mice, and Rats, and fuch finall Disease,
Haste bin Tom's food, for seven long yeares;

Beware my follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou Fiend,
Glou. What? hast your Grace no better company?

Edg. The Prince of Darkenne is a Gentleman Made
he's cold, and Glou,
Glou. Our flesh and blood, my Lord, is growne so vilde, that it durst have what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold.

Glou. Go with me thence my duty cannot suffer

Toby in all your daughters hard commands:
Though their Injunction be to barre your doores,
And let this Tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet haue I ventured to come secke you out,
And bring you where both fire, and food is ready.

Lear. If first hee telleth with this Philosopher,
What is the cause of Thunier?

Kent. Good my Lord take his offert,
Go into th'houfe.

Lear. Ill take a word with this same learned Thelian:
What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the Fiend, and to kill Verainne.

Lear. Let me aske you one word in private.

Kent. Impropны me once more to goe my Lord,
His wiss begin't venetile.

Glou. Canst thou blame him?

Storm still
His Daughters secke his death: Ah, that good Kent,
He fast it would be thus: poore banish't man:
Thou layfeth the King groves mad, I tell thee Friend
I am almost mad my selfe. I had a Sonne,
Now out-law'd from my blood: he fought my life
But lately: very late: I lou'd him (Friend)
No Father his Sonne deere to tell the,
The greene eels craze'd my wits. What a night's this?
I do bresech your grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, Sir:

Noble Philosopher, your company.

Lear. Tom's a cold.

Glou. In fellow there, into th'House; keep the warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my Philosopher.

Kent. Good my Lord, fool of him:
Let him take the Fellow.

Glou. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirra, come on: go along with vs.

Lear. Come, good Athenian,

Glou. No words, no words, hush,

Edg. Child be Rawland to the darke Tower came,
His word was still, fie, foue, and fume,
I smell the blood of a Britifhman.

Exeunt

Scene Quinta.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Ball. How my Lord, I may be enconced, that Nature thus gues way to Loyalty, something faint to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your Brothers eulill disposition made him secke his death: but a prouoking meritt a woake by a reprouable badneffe in himselfe.

Ball. How rauulous is my fortune, that I must repent to be ruff? This is the letter which hee spake of; which approveth him an inteligent partie to the advantage of France. O Heauens! that this Treason were not;
or not I the detector.

Corn. Go with me to the Dutchess.

Ball. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you hau'e mighty businesse in hand,

Corn.
Enter Kent, and Gloucester.

Kent. This becometh me better than the open air; take it thankfully: I will preface the comfort, with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Exit Kent.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Fool.

Edg. What art thou? Serjeant, or Fool?

Fool. Nay, I am a company, but thou dost wish to have a Gentleman; or, a Yeoman. Look, here is Lear; here is a Yeoman, that he's a Gentleman to his Son; for he's a small Yeoman that sees his Son a Gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come hewing in upon 'em.

Edg. Blest such fine wits.

Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now That you do oft have bestowed to retain me? My tears begin to take this part so much, They move my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogsge, and all; Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart see; they bark at me.

Edg. Tom, will you throw your head at them? Assay me you Currus, be thy mouth or white or yellow: The tooth that poysons if it bite: Muff, Grey-hound, Mongrel, Grin, Hound or Spaniel, Brach, or Hym: Or Bobtail right, or Trouble tail, Tom will make him weep and wail, For with thunder thus he may: Dogs leaps the hatch, and all are fled, Do, do, do, do: seize, seize, march to Wakes and Fayres, And Market Townes: poor Tom thy horse is dry.

Lear. Then let them Anatomize Regan: See what breeds about her heart, Is there any caue in Nature that make these hard-hearts. You see, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say they are Perun; but let them see chang'd.

Enter Gloucester.

Kent. Now good my Lord, I lye here, and rest awhile. Weary, for I will not have to Supper till morning.

Fool. And I go to bed at noon.

Kent. Come hither Friend; Where is the King my Master? Here Sir, but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Good friend, I prithee take him in thy arms; I have one-hour a plot of death upon him: There is a Letter ready, lay him in, And drive toward Dover friend, where thou shalt meete Both welcome, and protection. Take vp thy Mallet, I thowt should't daily be a man of housed life With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loffe. Take vp, take vp, And follow me, that will to some provision Glue thee quicke conduct. Come, come, away.

Exeunt.
The Tragedy of King Lear.

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come sir.

What Letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth.
Corn. And what comfortable base have you with the Traitors, late foot in the Kingdom?
Reg. To whose hands you have sent the Lunastick King: Speake.
Glou. I have a Letter gueffingly set downe
Which came from one that's of a newtall heart,
And not from one oppos'd.
Corn. Chasting.
Reg. And faile.
Corn. Where hast thou sent the King?
Glou. To Dover.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Was't thou not charg'd at periul.
Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.
Glou. I am tyed to th' Stake,
And I must stand the Coule.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Glou. Because I would not see thy cruel Nails
Pluck out his poore old eyes: nor thy fierce Sitter,
In his Annointed fleth, stick his fbonre phangs:
The Sue, with such a force as his base head,
In full-blacke-night inudd'r, would have buery'd up
And quenched the Stilled fires;
The p(er)n, and ftrand heart, he holpe the Henes to raise.
If Woules had as thy Gace how! that fierce time,
Thou should'st haue saied, good Porter turre the Key;
All Cruellcs effe subfierbe: but I fhall fee
The wnged Vengeance overtake such Children.
Corn. Sees that thou newers. Fellowes hold ? Chaire,
Upon thefe eyes of thine, Ile fee thy foot.
Glou. He that will thinke to live, till he be old,
Give me some helpe. — O cruel! O you Gods,
Reg. One fide will mocke another: Th'other too,
Corn. If you fee vengeance;
Sor. Hold your hand, my Lord;
I haue fer'd you ever since I was a Childde:
But better fervice haue I never done you,
Then now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dogge! for I was bid wear a hearte upon your chin,
I'd make it as this guzelle. What do you mean?
Corn. My Villaine?
Sor. Nay then come on, and take the chaffe of anger.
Reg. Give me thy Sword. A peazant stand vp thus?
Killer him.
Sor. Oh I am flaine: my Lord, you have one eye left
To fee some mitche fel on him. Oh.
Corn. Left is fee more precipit: our vilde gelly:
Where is thy lefter now?
Glou. All daile and comforterite?
Where's my Sonne Edmund?
Edmund, entendle all the spakkes of Nature
To eate this horrid food.
Reg. Our treacherous Villaine,
Thou call on him, that hatres thee. It was he
That made the oucreture of thy Traefors vs:
Who is too good to pity thee.
Glou. O my Follies! then edgar was ab'd,
Kinde Gods, forgive me that, and prosper him.
Reg. Go thrult him out as gares, and let him smell
His way to Dover.

Enter Glou.

How'st my Lord? How looks you?

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and knowne to be contemnd,' Then full contemnd and flatter'd, to be wolft:
The lowest, and mean deified thing of Fortune,
Stands fill in eiperance, liues not in leaves.
The lamentable change is from the beft,
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unsubstantiall aye that I embrace:
The Wretch that thou haue blowne vnto the worft,
Owes nothing to thy blasts.

Enter Glouster and an Oldman.

But who comes here? My Father poorly led?
World, World, O world! O
But that thy strange mutations make vs hate thee,
Life would not yeeld to age.

Oldm. O my good Lord, I have bene your Tenant,
And your Fathers Tenant, these foure yeares yeares.

Glou. Away, get thee away: good Friend be gone,
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee, they may hurt.

Oldm. You cannot see your way.
Glou. I haue no way, and therefore want no eyes:
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft tis seen,
Our meanes secure vs, and our meere defects
Prove our Commodities. Oh deere Sonne Edgar,
The food of thy sholders Fathers wreath:
Mig! I buche to fee thee in my touch,
I'say I had eyes againe,

Oldm. How now? who's there?

Edg. O Gods! Who is't can say I am at the worst?
I am worse then ere I was.

Old. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Sorrow. And worse I may be yet: the worst is not,
So then you can say this is the worst.

Oldm. Fellow, where goest thou?
Glou. Is it a Beggar-man?

Oldm. Madman, and beggar too,
Glou. He has some reason, else he could not be.

I'th'last nights flame, I such a fellow saw;
Which made me thinke a Man, a Worme. My Sonne
Came then into my minde, and yet my minde
Was then scarce Friends with him.

I haue heard more since:
As Flies to wanton Boyes, are we to th'Gods,
They kill vs for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?
Bad is the Trade that muff play Fool for sorrow,
Ang'ring it self, and others. Blesse thee Matter.
Glou. Is that the naked Fellow?
Oldm. I, my Lord.

Glou. Get thee away; I for my sake
Thou wilt ore-take vs hence a mile or twaine:
I'th'way toward Douer, do it for ancient love,
And bring some courting for this naked Soule,
Which Ile intreate to leade me,

Old. Alacke fit, he is mad.

808
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Glum. 'Tis the times plague, When Madmen lead the blind: Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure: About the reef, be gone,

Olden. Ile bring him the bell Parrell that I have Come on, what will,

Exit

Glum. Sirrah, asked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a cold. I cannot do it further.

Glum. Come hither fellow.

Edg. And yet I must:

Blest thy sweete eyes, they bleede.

Glum. Know'th thou the way to Doeuer?

Edg. Both thyle, and gate; Horseway, and foot-path; poor Tom hath bin feard' out of his good wits. Blesse thee great mans sonne, from the foule fire.

Glum. Here take this paste, whome the heavens plagues Have hambled to all strokes; that I am witched

Makes thee the happier: Heavens desire to fill;

Let the superfhun, and Luft-diered man,

That doth ordaine thy, that will not see

Because he do's not seele, seele thy powre quickly:

So distribution should vuo ono excelle,

And each man have enough. Dost thou know Doeuer?

Glum. 1 Master.

Glum. There is a Cliffe, whose high and binding heald

Looks fealessly in the confined Deeple:

Bring me but to the very brimme of it,

And Ile repayre the misery thou don't bare

With something rich about me: from that place,

I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy armes;

Poor Tom shall leade thee.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Guemtrill, Baffard, and Steward.

Gue. Welcome my Lord. I rememb my mild husband

Not met vs on the way. Now, where's your Matter?

Stew. Madam within, but neuer man so chang'd:

I told him of the Army that was Landed:

He smil'd at it. I told him you were coming,

His answer was, the worle. Of Glosters Treachery,

And of the Ioyall Service of his Sonne

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me Soth,

And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:

What mott he should dislike, steene pleasant to him:

What like, offensive.

Gue. Then shall you go no further,

It is the Cowills terror of his spirit

That dare not under take: Hes not feel wrongs

Which eye him to an answer; our wishes on the way.

May prove effect. Backe Edmond to my Brother,

Haffen his Muslers, and conduct his powres.

I must change names at home, and give the Diuise

Into my Husbands bands. This truflie Servans

Shall passe betweene vs: ere long you are like to heare

(If you dare venture in your owne behaile)

A Mistrelfes command. Warre this; spare speech,

Decline your head. This kiffe, if it do speake

Would stretch thy Spirits wp into the ayre:

Conceive, and face thee well.

Baff. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gue. My molt deere Gloster.

Oh, the difference of man, and man,
To thee a Womans seruices are due,
My Foulle vfurpse my body.

Stew. Madam, here come's my Lord.

Enter Albany.

Gue. I have beene worth the whistle.

Alb. Oh Generill,

You are not worth the dust which the rude winde
Blows in your face.

Gue. Mikel-Luer'd man,

That beare a checke for blowes, a head for wrongs,
Who hath not in thy browes an eye-discerning

Thine Honor, from thy suffering.

Alb. See thy telle shut:

Proper defamite femes not in the Fied
So horrid as in woman.

Gue. Oh vaine Foulc,

Enter a Messinger.

Mes. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Cornwalls dead,

Slaine by his Servants, going to put out

The other eye of Gloufter,

Alb. Gloufters eye.

Mes. A Servant that he bred, thilke'd with remorse,

Opposed against the ait: bending his Sword

To his great Matter, who, threat-en'd

Flew on him, and amongt' them fell'd him dead,

But not without that harmeufull stroke, which since

Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This showes you are above

You sufferes, that threw our nether crimes
So speedily can venge. But (Poor Gloster)

Lest he hit other eye?

Mes. Both, both, my Lord.

This Letter Madam, craves a speedy answer:

'Tis from your Siter.

Gue. One way I like this well,

But theing middaw, and my Gloufter with her,

May all the building in my farte plucke

Vpon my hatefull life. Another way

The Newes is not so tart. He read, and answer.

Alb. Where was his Sonne,

When they did take his eyes?

Mes. Come with my Lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mes. No my good Lord, I met him backe againe.

Alb. Knowes he the wicked meanes?

Mes. I my good Lord; twas he inform'd against him

And quitt the house on purpose, that their punishment

Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloufter, I live

To shanke thee for the late thou shewed't the King,

And to reuenge thine eyes. Come hither Friend,

Tell me what more thou know'st.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Corneille, Gentlemans,

And Guardsmen.

Cor. Alacke, as he why he was met even now

As mad as the xere Sea, finging aloud,

Crowned with tanke Fenier, and fawre weards,

With Hardokes, Henlocke, Nettles, Cucko Boweres,

Darnell

IV. i. 46—IV. iv. 4
The Tragedie of King Lear.

Darnell, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining Coire. A Century fend forth,
Search every Ace in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. What can mans wife done
In the restoring his bereaved Senfe; he that helps him,
Take all my outward worth.

Gent. There is means Madam:
Our softer Nurse of Nature, is repose,
The which he lackes: that to prooueke in him
Are many Simples operatire, whose power
Will close the eye of Anguish.

Cord. All blest Secrecy,
All you vnpublisht Vertues of the earth
Spring with my teares; be sydant, and remissive
In the Goodmans desires: seeke, seeke for him,
Leaft his yongourd rage, disfigure the life
That wants the means to leade it.

Enter Meffeger.

Meff. Newes Madam,
The Britifh Powres are marching hitherward.
Cor. 'Tis knowne before. Our preparation stands
In expectation of them. O deere Father,
It is thy businesse that I go about: Therefore great France
My mourning, and importun'd teares hath pitied:
No bloune Ambition doth our Armes incite,
Edgar. Horrible Steepe.

Herske, do you heare the Sea?

Glam. No truly.

Edg. Why then your other Senfes grow imperfect
By your eyes anguifh.

Glam. So may it be indeed.

Me thinks thy voyce is alter'd, and thou speakest
In better phrase, and matter then thou didst.

Edg. Yare much decres'd: In nothing am I chang'd
But in my Gournements.

Glam. Me thinkes y'are better spoked.

Edg. Come on Sir,
Here's the place: Stand still: how fitely
And drie thine, to caft one eyes to low,
The Crowes and Coughers, that wing the midway ayre
Shew forth to gratifie his Breede. Half way downe
Hangs one that gait es Spanire: dreadfull Trade:
Me thinks he comes no bigger then his head.
The Fishermen, that walk'd o' the seacoast
Appearre like Mice: and yond small Anchoring Baie,
Duminif'd to her Cocke: her Cocke, a Busy
Almost too small for flight. The murmuring Surge,
That on that numbred idle Pebble chafes
Cannot be heard so high. He looke no more,
Left his braine tune, and the deficient flight
Tolpe downe headlong.

Glam. Seet me where you stand,

Edg. Give me your hand

You are now within a foote of the extreme Verge:
For all beneath the Moone would not leape vppright.

Glam. Let go my hand:
Here Friend another passe: in it, a Jewell
Well worth a poore mans raking. Faytises, and Gods
Partake with thine. God, thou further off,
Bid me farewel, and let me heare thee going.

Edg. Now fare ye well, good Sir.

Glam. With all my heart.

Edg. Why do I trille thus with his dispaire,
Is done to cure it.

Glam. O you mighty Gods!

This would I do renounce, and in your fights

Shake

Scena Quinta.

Enter Gloucester, and Edgar.

Glam. When shall I come to the top of that fame hill?

Edg. You do climbe vp it now. Look how we labou.

Glam. Me thinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible Steepe.

Herske, do you heare the Sea?

Glam. No truly.

Edg. Why then your other Senfes grow imperfect
By your eyes anguifh.

810
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrell with your great oppositely wills,
My inoff, and loathed part of Nature should Burne it selfe out. If Edgar live, O bleffe him:
Now Fellow, fate thee well.
Edg. O God, Sir, face me,
And yet I know no how conceit may rub
The Trayson of life, when life is fell.
Yeelds to the Heft. Had he bin where he thought,
By this had thought bin pull. Alas, or dead?
Ho, you Sir! Friend, hearse you Sir, speake:
Thus might he packe indeed: yet he resists.
What are you Sir?
Glou. Away, and let me dye.
Edg. Had it thou beene ought
But Gouernce, Feathers, Aye,
(Being manyathome downe precipitating)
Thou di'st hubber'd like an Egge: but thou do'st breath:
Halt haue suffinance, blest if not, speake it, part found,
Ten Mails at each, make not the altitude
With so much height, tenderly fell,
Thy life's a Myrracle. Speake yet againe.
Glou. But hau'st I live, or not?
Edg. From the dread Sonnet of this Chalke Bourne
Looke vp a height, the thrall-gord'd Lette to fare
Cannot be scene, or heard: Do but looke vp.
Glou. Alacke, I haue no eyes:
Is sweet Odeon deprive what benefit
To end it felie by death? I was yet to come comfort,
When milery could beguile the Tyranruse,
And frustrate his proud will.
Edg. G纽e me your arme.
Vp, so: How is't? Feele you your Legges? You stand.
Glou. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all frangersse.
Vp in the crowne o'th'Child. What thing was that
Which parted from you?
Glou. A poore unfortune Beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below me, what I thought eyes
Were two full Monnes: the baid a thousand Notes,
Hornet wark'd, and I wandred like the enrag'd Sea;
It was some Fiend! Therefore thou happy Father,
Thinkes the more Object Gods, who do make them Honors
Of mens Imposibilitie, have preferred thee.
Glou. I do remember now: henceforth I bee
Affliction, till do thy selfe ou't.
Enough, enough, and dye. That thing you speake of,
I took it for a man: often'would say
The Fiend, the Fiend, he led me to that place.
Edg. Beare free and lasting thoughts.
Enter Lear.

But who comes here?
The fater fine will ne'te accommodate
His Master thus.
Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himselfe.
Edg. O the tide-piercing fight!
Lear. Nature's above Art, in that respect. There's your Prestis-money. That fellow handles his bow like a Crow-keeper: draw mee at Cloathsiers yard. Looke, looke, a Mouse: peace, peace, this piece of toastad Cheefe will do't. There's my Gaudle, I proue it on a Gyam, Bring vp the browne Billes. O well Bourne Bird: I'll thy close it. Dhole, Hewgh. Glue the word.

Edg. Sweet Maritain.
The Tragedie of King Lear.

The bountie, and the bennizor of Heaven
To boot, and boot.

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclai'm'd pize: most happy
That eyelee head of thone, was first fram'd fteeth
To raise my fortunes. Thou old, unhappy Traitor,
Directly thy flat ignorance, I say, the number:
The Sword is out
That mutt deftroy thee.

Glos. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough too't.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Perzon,
Daf't thou support a publish'd Traitor? Hence,
Leali that th'infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. I'll go his arme.

Edg. Chilt not let go Ziz,
Without further cation.

Stew. Let go Stew, or thou dy'ft.

Edg. Good Gentleman goe your gate, and let poore volke paffe: and shud ha' bin 'zaggerd out of my life, t'would not ha' bin so long as'tis, by a vornight. Nay, come not nere th' old man: keep it out the voyce, or sey styther your Couffard, or my bellow be the busier, chilt be pleane with you,

Stew. Our Dunghill.

Edg. Chilt picke your teeth Ziz: come, no matter wor your voyntes.

Stew. Slue than ha'll blisse me: Villain, take my purpe;
if euer thou wilt chrit, bury my brde,
And gue the Letters which thou gott it about me,
To Edmund Earl of Gloucester: seek thee out
Vpon the English party. Oh vntimely death, death,
I know thee well. A servicable Villaine,
As dourous to the vices of thy Midiris, As a bernel would defir,

Glos. What, is he dead?

Edg. So, and it is done.

Glos. Why, this was not
Let vs see:

Leae gentle ware, and manners: blance vs on't
To know our enemies no nyes, werip their hearts,
Their Papers is more lawfull.

Read the Letters.

Edg. To our receivall names be reserched. Ten tane motion opportunities to cut them off: if your will want some, and place will be frsonably offer'd. There is nothing done. If he returne the Conqueror, than are the Prisoner, and his bed:
Gloufster, from the lasted warmth whereof, destines me, and supply the place for your Labour.

Tour (strife, A swell) would figure, effbona-nume veteran, Gonerill,
Ophungiufied of Womans will,
A plot upon her venituous Husband life,
And the exchange my brother! her in the lands
Thee Iereake vp, the poifie unchang'd
Of montherous Letchers and in the marrie time,
With this vagnaceous paper fhake the fight
Of the dead's privy crowne: take: for him 'tis well;
That of thy death, and basningele, I can tell.

Glos. The King is mad:
How flite is my wilde tene
That I hand vp, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge Sorowes? Better I were deftraft,
So should my thoughts be feuer'd from my griefes,
Dream of arre off.

And wers, by wrong imaginations loue
The Tragedie of King Lear

Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Gentlemen.

Cor. O thou good Kent!

KENT. How shall I live and work
To match thy goodness?

My life will be too short,
And servy me like a slave.

KENT. To be acknowledged Madam is ore pa'd.

All my reports go with the modest truth,
Not more, not less, but so.

Cor. Be better suited,

These weeder are memories of those worser hours:
I tryther put them off.

KENT. Pardon deere Madam,

Yet be to knowne thronets my make intent,
My boone make it,that you know me not,
Till time: and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't sfo my good Lord;

How do's the King?

Gent. Madam sleepes fill.

Cor. O you kind Gods!

Cure this great breath in his abused Nature,
Till'rend and iarring fenes, O winde vp,
Of this child changed Father.

Gent. So please your Maiestie,

That we may wake the King, he hath slept long?
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and procede
I thinke part of your owne will: is he array'd?

Enter Lear in a rage caused by Servants.

Gen. I Madam: in the hauteur of sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.
Be by good Madam when we do awake him,
I doubt of his Temperance.

Cor. O my deere Father, restoration hang
Thy medicine on my lippes, and let this kisse
Repair those violent harms, that my two Sisters
Have in thy Resurrection made.

Kent. Kind deere Princes.

Cor. Had you not bins their Father, these white flakes
Did challenge pity of them. Was this a face
To be oppo'd against the iarring winder?
Many Enemies dogges, though he had hit me,
Should have frost that might against my fire,
And was't thou faine (poore Father)
To howl thee with Swineand Rogues forlornes,
In short, and musty straw! Alleck, Alleck,
Tis wonder that thy life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, speake to him.

Gent. Madam do you, 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my Royall Lord?

How fares your Maiestie?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' th' grave,
Thou art a Soule in blisse, but I am bound

Upon a wheel of fire, that mine owne teares
Do scan'd like molten Lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit I know, where did you dye?

Cor. Still, still, faire Mier.

Lear. He's faire awake,

Let him alon a while.

Lear. Whose haue I bin?

Where am I? Faire day light?

I am mightily abus'd, I should en' dye with pity
To see another thus. I know not what to say:
I will not sweare these are my hands: let's see
I feel this pin prickes, would I were affli'd
Of my condition.

Cor. O lookes you upon Sir,

And hold your hand in Benediction o're me,
You must not kneele.

Lear. Pray do not mocke me:

I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourefooted and upward,
Not an hour more, not leafe:
And to sole plainly,

I thee am not in my perfect mind.

Me thinkes I should know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubfull: For I am mainly ignorant
What place this is and all the skill I haue
Remembers not these garments: nor I know not
Where I did lodge last night: Do not laugh at me,
For(as I am a man) I think this lady
To be my childe Cordelia.

Lear. And so I am: I am.

Lear. Be your care not?

Yet faith: I pray weep not,

If you have poyson for me, I will drink it:
I know you do not love me, for your Sisters
Have (as I do remember) done me wrong,
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your owne Kingdom Sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the great rage
You see is kill'd in himselfe:desire him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further settling.

Cor. Will please your Highnesse walke?

Lear. You must bear with me:

Pray you now forget, and forgive,
I am old and foolish.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drumme and Lantern Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Servitors.

Edm. Know of the Duke if his last purpose hold,
Or whether since he is advis'd by ought
To change the course, he's full of alteration,
And self-exposing, bring his constant pleasure.

Reg. Our Sisters man is certainly mislaid,

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted Madam.

Reg. Now sweet Lord,
The Tragedy of King Lear.

Shall never see his pardon: for my state,
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum with guns. Enter with Drumme and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and Souldiers, over the Stage, and Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Gloster.

Edg. Heere Fashers, take the shadow of this Tree
For your good baist: pray that the right may thrive:
If ever I returne to you againe,
I leaue you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you Sir,

Enter Alarum and Retreat within.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Away old man, quie the hand, away:
King Lear hath lost he and his Daughter sane,
Give me thy hand: Come on.

Glo. No further Sir, a man may not entrench here.

Edg. What in all thoughts against?

Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their comming hither,
Ripenesse is all come on.

Glo. And that's true too.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in compasse with Drumme and Colours, Edmund Lear, and Cordelia, as proffers, Souldiers, Captain.

Edm. Some Officers take them away: good guard,
Vntill their greater pleasures shalbe knowne
That are to entertaine them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who with best meaning have incur'd the wrong:
For thee oppressed King I am call'd downe,
My felle could eare out-frowne false Fortunes frowne.
Shall we not see their Daughters, and their Sifters?

Lear. No, no, no no: come let's away to pritont,
We two alone will sing like Birds in that Cage:
When thou dost ask me bleeding, I'll kneel downe
And ask of thee forgiveness: So weep I, I weep,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At glided Butterflies: and here (poore Roguer)
Take of Court newes, and wee'll take with them too,
Who haue, and who haue not; who's in, who's out;
And take vpou's the mystery of things,
As if we were Gods spies: And wee'll weare out
In a wall'd prison, packs and feales of great ones,
That ebe and lowe by th' Moone.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Vpon such sacrifaces my Cordelia,
The Gods themselves throw Incense.
Hast thou caught thee?
He that parts vs, shall bring 2 Brand from Heauen,
And fire vs hence, like Foxes: wipe thine eyes,
The good yeares shall dewe them, flie and fall,
Enter Antony, Generell, Reg. in Sadders.

Alb. Sir, you have found no to stay your valorous armes.
And Fortune led you well: you have the Captains
Who were the opposites of this stately strike:
I do require them of you to see them,
As we shall find their meritises, and our safety
May equally determine.

Buft. Sir, I thought it fit,
To send the old and miserable King to some retention,
Whose age had Charnes in it, whose Title more,
To allure the common before on his fide,
And turn our impreff. Laurens in our eies
Which do command them. With him I fent the Queen:
My reason all the fame, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your Seffion.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this Ware,
Not as a Brother.

Reg. That's as we left to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have bin demanded
Ere you had spoke fo faire, He led our Powers,
Bore the Commission of my place and person.
The which immediatly may well stand vp,
And call it felfe your Brother.

Gun. Not fo hot:
In his owne grace he doth extalt himfelfe,
More then in your addition.

Reg. In my right,
By me infell'd, he compeares the bell.

Alb. That were the moff, if he should hand you.
Reg. Letters do off prove Prophets.
Gun. Holy, holy,
That eye that told you fo, Jock'd but a ignorant.

Reg. Lady I am not well, else I fhould anfwerce
From a full flowing flowmac. Generall,
Take thine my Souldiers, prifoners, patrimony,
Dispofe of them, of me, the wall is thinne
Wittnefe the world, that I create the heere
My Lord, and Mafter.

Gun. Meane you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.

Buft. Nor in thine Lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the Drum strike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet, hearc reason: Edmund, I arrefte thee
On all Treafon; and in thy arrefte,
This giudied Serpent: for thy claim'd faire Strifes,
I bare it in the intercell of my wife,
'Tis fixe is sub-contract to this Lord,
And I her husband contradict thy Baner.

Buft. If you will marry, make your loues to me,
My Lady is belifeke.

Gun. An enterlude.

Alb. Thou art armed Glifter,
I let the Trumpet found:
If none appear to prove upon thy perfon,
Thy lécyounus, mannifet, and many Treafons,
There is my pledge: he make to on thy heart.
Let I fuit bread, thou art in nothing elle
Then I have here proclaim'd thee,

Reg. Sicke, O sick.

Gun. If not, let her erne true medicine.

Buft. There's my exchange, what in the world lies
That names me Traiuer, william-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dare approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintaine
My truth and honor firmly.

Enter a Herald.

Truth to thy hinge vertue, for thy Souldiers
All leud in my name, have in my name
Tooke their discharge.

Reg. My fickness growes upon me.
Alb. She's not well, convey her to my Tent.
Come hither Herald, let the Trumpet found,
And read out this. A Trumpet founds.

Herald reads.

If any man of qualitie or degree, within the lift of the Army, will maintaine upon Edmund, suppos'd Earl of Glifter, that he is a manfull Traiuer, let him appeare by the thond found of the Trumpet: be he bold in his defence,

Herald. Again.

Reg. Again.

Alb. Trumpet answers within.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Aske him his purpofe, why he appeares
Upon this Call o'th Trumpet.

Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality, and why you answer
This present Summons?

Edg. Know my name is left
By Treafons tooth; bare-grownne, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Adverfary
I came to cope.

Alb. Which is that Adverfary?
Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Glo-

Buft. Himselfe, what fault thou to him t

Edg. Draw thy Sword,
That if my speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy armes may do thee Justice, here is mine:
Behold it is my priuledge,
The priuledge of mine Honours,
My owne hand and my prefent. I profef,
Maugre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,
Defpite thy victor-Sword, and the new Fortune,
Thy valor, and thy heart, thou art a Traiuer:
Falle to thy Gods, thy Brother, and thy Father,
Conspirant gainst this high illusrious Prince.
And from the extremell upward of thy head,
To the diftant and dust below thy floors,
The Tragedie of King Lear.

A most Toad, spotted Traitor, Say thou no,
This Sword, this arms, and my bell spirits are bent
To prone upon thy heart, where I speak,
Thou lyest.

Boft. In wifdomdo I should ask thy name,
But if we lay out-side looke to faire and Wilike,
And that thy tongue (some say) of breacking breathes,
What safe, and nicely I might well delay,
By rule of Knight-hood, I disdain and spurne:
Backe do I tolfe these Treasons to thy head,
With the hell-hated Lye, ore-whelme thy heart,
Which for they yet gane by, and fearely bruife,
This Sword of mine shall guile them intente, famil
Where they shall refle for ever. Trumpers speake.

Alarums. Lights.

A2. This is the prattyle Ciffer,
By the law of Warr, thou wast not bound to answer
An unknowe oppositione thou art not vanquish't, do,
But codec, and begaude.

A1. Shut your mouth Dame,
Or with this paper shall I fliep it: hold Sir,
Thou worske then any name, read thine owne cull:
No tearing Lady, I perceive you know it.

Gen. Say if I do, the Laws are mine not thine,
Who can strаinge me not's.

Exi.

A1. Most monstrous! O, know'st thou this paper?

Boft. Ask me not what I know.

A2. Go after her, she's the desperate, gouerne her.

Boft. What you have charg'd me with,
That haue I done,
And more must more, the time will bring it out.
'Tis past, and so I am: But what art thou,
That haue this Fortune on me? If thou'rt Noble,
I do forgo thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity:
I am no less in blood then thou art Edmond,
If more, the more th'o' haft wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar and thy Fathers Sonne,
The Gods are just, and of our pleasan't vices
Make instruments to plague vs:

The darke and visous place where thee he got,
Cost him his eyes.

Boft. Th'haft spoken right, 'tis true,
The Wheel is come full circle, I am here.

A2. Me thought thy very gate did prophesie
A Roayl Noblenesse: I must embrace thee,
Let forrow plac my heart, feuer I
Did hate thee, or thy Father.

Edg. Worthy Prince I know'st.

A2. Where haue you hid yourselle?
How haue you knowne the milities of your Father?

Edg. By nurng them your Lord. Lifi a brefte tale,
And when this told, O that my heart would burst.

The bloody proclamation to escape
This follow'd me so neere, (O our liues sweetneffe,
That we the paine of death would hourly dye,
Rather then die at once.) taught me to shift
Into a mad-man rage, I assume a feamble
That very Dogges disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my Father with his bleeding Rings,

Enter Lear to Coast in his armor.

The Tragedie of King Lear.

Enter Lear and Cordelia in his armor.

Lear. Howlie, howlie, hostyle: O your are men of flones,
Had I your tongues and eyes, Ill'd wve them to,
That Heauents vauls shou'd grack: she's gone for ever.
I know when one is dead, and when one liues,
She's dead as earth: Lend me a Looking-glass,
If that her breath will miss or staine the stone,
Why then the lyes,
Kent. Is this the promis’ed end?
Edg. Or image of that horror.
Alb. Fall and cease.
Lear. This feather flits, the lyes: if it be so,
It is a chance which do’s redeeme all sorrowes
Ther eu’er I have felt.
Kent. O my good Master,
Lear. Prythee away.
Edg. Tis Noble Kent your Friend.
Lear. A plague vpon you Murderers, Traitors all,
I might have laud her, now she’s gone for euer:
Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha!
What is’t thou saist? Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman,
I kill’d the Slave that was a hanging thee.
Kent. Tis true (my Lords) she did.
Lear. Did I not follow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting Faulcon
I would haue made him skip: I am old now,
And these same crostles spoile me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o’might, He tell you straignt.
Kent. If Fortune brag of two, she lou’d and haue,
One of them we behold.
Lear. This is a dull sight, are you not Kent?
Kent. The fame: you Seruant Kent,
Where is your Seruant Caufé?
Lear. He’s a good fellow. I can tell you that,
H)e strike and quickly to, he’s dead and rotten.
Kent. No my good Lord, I am the very man.
Lear. He fee that straignt.
Kent. That from your fift of difference and decay,
Have follow’d your fad fteps.
Lear. Your are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no manelle;
All’s cheerlesse, darke, and deadly,
Your elderst Daughters have fore-done themfelves,
And desperatly are dead.
Lear. I fo I thinke.
Alb. He knowes not what he faies, and vaine is it
That we present vs to him.

Enter a Messenger.

Edg. Very bootleffe.
Alb. That’s but a trifle here.
You lords and Noble Friends, know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be applie’d. For vs we will refigue,
During the life of this old Matter
To him our absolute power, vnto your rights,
With boote, and such addition as your Honoures
Hauue more then merited. All Friends shall Taffe the wages of their vertues, and all foes
The cup of their defraunings: O fee, fee.
Lear. And my poore Foolie is hang’d: no, no life?
Why should a Dog, a Horse, a Rat have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou’lt come no more,
Neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer, neuer.
Pray you vndo this Button. Thanke you Sir,
Do you fee this? Looke on her? Looke her lips,
Looke there, looke there.

Edg. He laimes, my Lord, my Lord.
Kent. Breakes heart, I prye thee breake.
Edg. Looke vp my Lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost, O let him paffe he hates him,
That would vpon the wracke of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is goon indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur’d fo long,
He but whipt his life.
Alb. Beare them from hence, our present businesse
Is generall woe: Friends of my soule, you twaine,
Rule in this Realm, and the gor’d state sustaine.
Kent. I haue a journey Sir, shortly to go,
My Matter calls me, I muft not fay no.

Edg. The weight of this fad time we must obey,
Speak what we fee, nor what we ought to fay:
The oldes hath borne noff, we that are yong,
Shall neuer fee fo much, nor live fo long.

Evenes with a dead March.

FINIS.
Enter Iago, and Lodovico.

Lodovico.

Enter tell me, I take it much unkindly
That (dating on his owne obloquious bondage)
Wears out his time soe much like his Master's life,
For neither but Provender, & when he's old Caffee'd d.
Whip me fuch I know not. Others there are
Who trust in Fortune, and visages of Darte,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselues,
And throwing but flowers of Seruice on their Lords
Do. w'ell thrive by them.

And when they have lin'd their Costes
Doe themselves Homage.

These Fellowes have forme soule,
And lends a one do I professe my selfe. For (Sir)
Let us as sure as you are Rhodes.
Were I the Moore, I would not be Iago :
In following him, I fit not but a y teile.
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and dutie,
But turning Io, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward Action doth demonstrate
The native act, and figure of my heart
In Complexion honest, it's not long after
But will wear my heart upon my fleec
For Dowers to pe. keat : I am not what I am.

Red. What's all Fortune do's the Thicks-lips o'we.
Hie can carry't thus?

Iago. Call up her Father:
Rowlistem, make after him, poyson his delight,
Proclaim him in the Streets. Incense her kinne
And though he in a fertile Gypsye dwell,
Plague him with Fliers, though that his Joy be Joy,
Yet throw such chances of vasion on't,
As it may lose some colour.

Red. Here is her Fathers house, Ile call aloud.
Iago. Day, why, like tennous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by Night and Negligence) the Fire
Is spat in popular Cotties.

Iago. Awake them, what hoa, Brachantis, Theues, Theues,
Look to your house, your daughter, and your Bagg,
Theues, Theues.

Era. Above. What is the reason of this terrible
Summons? What is the matter there?

Red. Signior is all your family within?

Iago. Are thy Doores lock'd?

Era. Why? Wherefore ask you this?

Iago. Sir, ye'are rob'd, for shame put on your Gowne,
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul
Even now, now, very now, an old blacke: Rain
Is tapping your white Ewe. Anse, anse,
Awake the hoarish Curteyrs with the Bell,
Or else the deevil will make a Grand-tire of you.
Anse I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits?
Bra. Most reverend Signor, do you know my voice?
Bra. Not I: what are you?
Rod. My name is Rodrigo.
Bra. The warrier welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores:
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madness
(Being full of Sperre, and dipp'ring daughters)
Vpon mulitious knoate, doll thou come
To start my quest.

Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.
Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirits and my place have in their power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Pardoner good Sir.
Bra. What, sofficient thou wilt of Robbing?
This is Venice: my house is not a Grange.
Rod. Most gracie Tribunis,
In simple and pure foule, I come to you.

I say: you are one of those that will not tare God,
If the deevil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are Rufianes, you have your Daughter sent here, with a Barbary horse, you have your Nephews in good remembrance, you have Couriers for Couriers:
and Gemmis for Gemmis.

Bra. What prophane wretch art thou?
I say: I am one Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beall with two Deckers.
Bra. Thou art a Villaine.

Lgo. You are a Senator.
Bra. This thou shalt answer. I know thee Rodrigo.
Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beleeech you
If be your pleasure, and most wifhe content,
(As partly I finde it) that your faire Daughter,
At this oddt Euen and dull watch of the night
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knawe of common hire, a Gaudeler,
To the grosse clapes of a Lascivious Moore;
If this be knowne to you, and your Allowance,
We then have done you bold, and Gaine wrongs.
But if you know not this, my Mannets tell me,
We have your wrong reborne. Do not beleeech
That from the fence of all Civilitie.
I thus would play and trifle with your Reuerey,
Your Daughter (if you have not given her leave)
I say again, hath made a grosse rechall,
Tying her Duece, Beattie, Wir, and Fortunes.
In an extravagant, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where fast by sake, the selle.
If she be in her Chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the office of the State
For thus defiling you.

Bra. Strike on the Tender, hoas;
Give me a Taper: call vp all my people,
This Actonc is not well with my liege,
Belate of it opprestes me alreadie.

Light, I fa, light.

Lag. Farewell: for I must leave you.
It feethes not mee, nor wholeome to my place
To be produced, (as if I say, I shall,)
Against the Moore, For I do know the State,
(How ever this may gall him with some checke)
Cannot with patience call him. For he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus Waters,
(Which even now flounders in Adjet for their foules)
Another of his I adome, they have none,
To lead their Businesse. In which regard,
Though I do chance as I do hell ames,
Yet, for necessite of present life,
I must shew out a Flag, and tigne of Lame,
(Which is indeed but tigne), that you shall surely find him
Lead to the Sagacity the raied: search,
And there will be with him. So farewell.

Enter Brabanctio, with Servants and Torchets.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone the is,
And what's to come of my deplight time,
Is naught but bitterness. Now Rodrigo,
Where drest thou fee her? (Oh whanple Gicle)
With the Moore fast there? (Who would be a Father?)
How drest thou know 'twas she? (Oh she deceaves)
What saul the to you? Get more Tapers.
Raise all my Kindred. Are they married think you?

Rod. Truly I think they are.

Bra. Oh Heaven! how got the out?
Oh tresson of the blood.

Lag. Fathers, and hence trust not your Daughters minds,
By what you see them at. Is there not chance,
By which the property of Youth, and Maihood
May be abut? Have you not read Rodrigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes Sir: I have indeed.

Bra. Call vp my Brother: oh would you had her,
Some one way, some another. Do you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please
To get good Guard, and go along with me.
Bra. Play you lead on. At every house ke call,
(I may command and moast) get Weapons (hos)
And raise some special Officers of night:
On good Rodrigo, I will defyure your paines.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, Acdendants, with Torchets.

Ia. Though in the trade of Warre I have flaine men,
Yet do I hold it very floufe of th'other confidence
To do no content of Murder: I lacke iniquite
Sometine to do me feruice. None, or ten times
I had thought you thace yeck'd him here under the Ribbes.
Othello. This better as it is.

Lag. Nay but he prated,
And spoke such furrow, and proucking terms
Against your Honor, that with the little godlince I have
I did full hard forbear him. But I pray you Sir,
Are you full married? Be affault of this,
That the Magnifico is much belou'd,
And hath in his effect a voice vertuall
As double as the Dukes: He will diuoure you,
Or put upon you, what reflaint or greenece.
The Tragedie of Othello

The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will give him Cable.

Other. Let him do his spight;
My Services, which I have done the Signior
Shall on my life and soul be reck'n.
'Tis yet to know,
What when I know, that boasting is an Honour,
I shall profoundgate. I fetch my life and being,
From Men of Royall Seige. And my demerits
May speake (unboasted) to as proud a Fortune
As this that I have reach'd. For know Iago,
But that I loue the gentle Disdaimers,
I would not my unboasted free condition
Put into Circumstropion, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But looke, what Lights come yond?

Enter Cassio, with Torches.

Iago. Those are the raised Father, and his Friends:
You were best go in.

Other. Not I: I must be found.
My Father, my Tyle, and my perfell Soule
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Jove, I think no.

Other. The seruants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?

The goodniffe of the Night vpon you (Friends)
What is the News?
Cassio. The Duke do's greet you (Generall)
And he requires your haste, Post-haste appearance,
Even on the infallent,
Othello. What is the matter, think you?

Cassio. Something from Cyprus, as I may divin:
It is a businesse of some heate. The Gallies
Have sent a dozen frequent Messengers
This very night, as one another heates,
And many of the Queens, rau'd and mes
Are at the Duke's already. You have but hotly call'd for,
When being not as your Lodging to be found,
The Senate hath sent about three teuerall Quells,
To tender you out.

Othello. Tis well I am found by you:
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And one with you.

Cassio. Auncient, what makes he here?
Iago. Faith, he to night hath boarded a Land Corract,
If it prove lawful prize, he made for ever.

Cassio. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cassio. To who?

Iago. Marry to — — Come Capitaine, will you go?
Othello. Haste with you.

Cassio. Here come some other Troope to seeke for you.

Enter Brabazon, Roderigo, with Officers, and Torches.

Iago. It is Brabazon. General be aduis'd,
He comes to bad intent.

Othello. Halls, stand there.

Roderigo. Signior, it is the Moore.

Duke. Downe with him, Thesefe.

Othello. Keep up your bright Swords, for therewith will raff them. Good Signior, you shall more command with yaxes, then with your Weapons.

Duke. Oh thou foule Thesefe.

Where hast thou bowd my Daughter?
Dann'd as thou art, thou hast enchant'd her

For he refere me to all things of fene,
(If she in Chains of Magick were not bound)
Whether a Maid, to render, Faire, and Happie,
So opposite to Marriage, that the flound.
The weakly curdled Desirings of our Nation,
Would ever haue (tencurres a general mocks)
Run from her Guardsage to the footie before,
Of such a thing as thou! to feare, not to delight?
Judge me the world, if she is not grosse in fene,
That thou haue practis'd on her with foule Charmes,
Abus'd her delicate Youth, with Drugs or Minerals,
That weakens Motion. He haue dispuited on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking;
I therefore apprehend and do attack thee,
For an abuser of the World, a practizer
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant;
Lay hold upon him, if he do search,
Subdue him, at his peril.

Other. Hold your hands
Both you of my inclining, and the reft.
Were it my Cue to fight, I should haue knowne it
Without a Prompter. Whether will you that I goe
To anwerve this your charge?

Duke. To Prifon, till ft time
Of L.'s, and course of directed Session
Call thee to anwerve.

Othello. What if I do obey?
How may the Duke be therewith faith'd,
Whose Messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present businesse of the State,
To bring me to him.

Duke. Tis true must worthy Signior,
The Dukes in Counsell, and your Noble felle,
I finde it fene for.

In this time of the nighte! Bring him away;
Mines not an idle Caufe. The Duke himfelfe,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but fende this wrong, as 't were their owne:
For if such Actions may have paffage free,
Bond-flasses, and Papins shall our Statuten be.

Scene Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duke. Theres no composition in this News,
That giveth them Credite.

1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportionately;
My Letters fay, a Hundred and tenen Gallies.

2. Duke. And mine two Hundred;
But though they jump on not a fuit accompt,
(As in these Cales where the ame reports,
'1s oft with difference) yet do they all confine.

2. Sen. And mine two Hundred.
A Turkifh Fleece, and bearing up to Cyprus.

3. Duke. Nay, it is possible enongh to judgemen;
I do not to leave me in the Error,
But theaine Article I do approye
In feafe long fene.

Officer. A Messenger from the Gallies.

Duke. Now! What's the business?

Sailor. The Turkish Preparation makes for Rhodes,
So was I bid report here to the State,
By Signior Antonio.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1. Sen. This cannot be
By no affay of reason. This a Pageant
To keepe in false gaze, when we consider
The importancie of Cyprus to the Turks,
And let our forces againe but understand,
That it is more concernes the Turk when Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such Warlike brace;
But altogether lackes the solitudes
Thus he Write from vs.
If we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so venusfull,
To leave that laste, which concernes him first.
Neglecting an attempt of eale, and gaining
To wake, and wadge a danger proficite.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence he's not for Rhodes.
Officer. Here is more News.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomanes, Reuerend and Gracious,
Seeing with due course toward the Ile of Rhodes,
Have there injoyned them with an after Fiere.

1. Sen. So I thought: how many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirteene Saile: and now they do re-stire
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposse toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trulifie and most Valiant Seniour,
With his free dutie, recommends you thus,
And prays you to beleue him.

Duke. 'Tis certaine then for Cyprus:
Marcus Luccifer is not he in Towne?

2. Sen. He's now in Florence.

Mess. Write, Write, the Isole.
To him, Daff, Polli, hafti, dupatch.

1. Sen. Here comes Trabanti, and the Valiant Moore,
The Tragedie of Othello

How I did think in this faire Ladies loose,
And the in me,

Duke. Say it Othello.

Oth. Her Father lou'd me, oft invited me:
Still question'd me the Storie of my life,
From yeare to yeare: the Bastale, Sieges, Fortune,
That I have past,
I ran it through, even from my boyish daies,
To'ry very moment that he bad mett it,
Wherein I spoke of most diftastfull things:
Of mowing Accidents by Flood and Field,
Of haire-breadth feapes: 'twas imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the Inffolent Foe,
And fold to flauery. Of my redemption thence,
And presence in my Travellours historie,
Wherein of Amars vift, and Defarts idie,
Rough Quarries, Rocks, Hills, whose head touch heauen,
It was my hint to speake. Such was my Procefe,
And of the Cambals that each others eare,
The Astrographer, and men whose heades
Grew beneath their shoulders. Thelie things to heare,
Would Desdenous friendly incline
But fill the house Affairs would draw her hence:
Which euer as she cou'd with haste dispatch,
She'd come againe, and with a gentle care
Detoure vp my discourse. Which I obseruing,
Tooke once a plant house, and found good meanes
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate,+
Wherein by parcelz had fomething heard,
But not infilliously: I did confent,
And often did beguile her other teares,
When I did speake of some diftrefffull stroke
That my youth suffer'd: My Storie being done,
She gaue me for my pains a worlde of killes:
She swore in faith 'twas strange: 'twas paffing strange,
"Twas pitiful: 'twas wondrous pitiful.
She with'd the fea had not heard it: yet the with'd
That Jesuuen had made her such a man. She thank'd me,
And bad me, if I had a Friend that lou'd her,
I shou'd but teach him how to tell my Story,
And that would woouer. Upon this hint I spake,
She lou'd me for the dangers I had put,
And I lou'd her, that she did pity them.
This onely is the witch-craft I have w'd.
Here comes the Ladie: Let her witneffe it.

Enter Desdenous, Iago, Attendants.

Duke. I thinke this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantus, take vp this mangled matter at the beft:
Men do their broken Weapons rather vie,
Then their bare hands.

I. I pray you heare her speake?
If the confesse that she was halfe the woorer,
Defftruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither gentle Miftris,
Do you perceive in all this Noble Companie,
Where moff you owe obedience?
Dif. My Noble Ladie, I do perceive heere a dividned daie.
To you I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do leave me,
How to repect you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am hither to your Daughter. But heere's my Husband d;
And to much dutie, as my Mother the w'd

To you, preferring you before her Father:
So much I challenge, that I may professe
Due to the Moore my Lord.

I. Bra. God be with you: I have done.
Please it your Grace, on to the State Affaires.
I had rather to adopt a Child, then get it.
Come hither Moore;
I dare give thee that with all my heart,
Which but thou haft already, with all my heart
I would keepe from thee. For your fave (Iewell)
I am glad at foule, I have no other Child,
For they ecape would teach me Tiranne.
To hang clogges on them. I have done my Lord.

Duke. Let me speake like your felle:
And like a Sermont, Which as a griece, or feep may help thefe Lovers.
When remedies are paft, the griefes are ended
By seing the worlde, which late on hopes depended.
To mourne a Mischeefe that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischeefere.
What cannot be profred, when Fortune takes:
Patience, her Injury a mocky fakes.
The robd that fmilts, fteals something from the Thife,
He robs himfelfe, that spends a bootefull griece.

II. Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus vs beguile,
We loofe it not fo long as we can smile:
He beares the Sentence well, that nothing beares,
But the free comfort which from thence he heares.
But he beares both the Sentence, and the forrow,
That to pray griece, hurt of poore Patience bearre.
These Sentences, to Sugar, or to Gall,
Being strong on both fides, are Equinocall.
But words are words, I neuer yet did heare
That the bruized heart was pier'd through the cares.
I humbly beeche you proceed to th Affaires of State.

Duke. The Turk with a moft miglary Prepartion incourts Othello, the Fortitude of the place is brill knowne to you. And though we have there a Subfti-tuate of moft allowed efficiencie; yet opinning, a more fouveraine Miftris of Effets, throwes a more later voice on you; you must therefore be content to fludder
the grife of your new Fortunes, with this more rub-bore, and boyous expedition.

Oth. The Tirant Coftome, most Graue Senators,
Hath made the fmyny and Steele Coach of Warre
My thrice-druen bed of Downe. I doigne
A Naturall and prompt Alacartie,
I finde in hardneffe: and do undertake
This preuent Warres against the Ottamiter.
Most humbly therefore bending to your State,
I crave fits disposition for my Wife,
Due reference of Place, and Exhibition,
With fuch Accomadation and befici
As lesuils with her breeding.

Duke. Why at her Fathers?
I. Bra. I will not haue it fo.

Oth. Nor I.

Dif. Nor would I therside,
To put my Father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eyes. Most Gracious Duke,
To my vnflowing, lend your prosperous care,
And let me finde a Charter in your voice
To affift my simpleneffe.

Duke. What would you Desdenous?

Dif. That I loue the Moore, to live with him,
My downrighte violent, and frorne of Fortunes,

May
May trumpet to the world. My hear'ts subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord; I saw Othello's <element> in his mind.
And to his Honours and his valiant parts,
Did I my foule and Fortunes conferstrate.
So that (deere Lord,) if I be left behind
A Moth of Peace and he go to the Warre,
The Rites for why I love him, are benefic:
And I a heautie internal support
By his deere abstinence. Let me go with him.

Other. Let her have your voice.

Vouch with me Heauen, I therefore beg is not
To plese the pallate of my Appetite;
Nor to comply with heat the yong affected
In my elufcent, and proper satisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her minde:
And Heauen defend your good foules, that you think
I will your serious and great businesse scant.
Where I am with me. No, when light wing'd Toys
Of feather'd Cupid, feele with wanton dulcet
My speculatation, and I'd instruct:
That my Disports corrupt, and taint my businesse:
Let Hauhe-wues make a Skillet of my Helm,
And all indignes, and bale adversaries,
Make head against my Effimation.

Duke. Be't as you shall privately determine,
Either for her flay, or going to Affaire civils hath:
And speed must answr it.

Sen. You must away to night.

Othe. With all my hearts.

Duke. At nine to'mrrow morning, here we'll meet againe.

Othello, leave some Officer behind
An't befall our Congrission bring to you:
And such things else of quality and respect
As dost import you.

Othe. So pleasure your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conueniency I affigne my wife.
With what elle needful, your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.

Good night to every one. And Noble Signior,
If Verone no delighet Beautiful lacke,
Your Son-in-law is faire more Faire then Blacke.

Sen. Adieu brave Moor; ye Defdemona well.

Bra. Loue to your (Moor's) thou hall hailies to see:
She he's de'cided his Father, and may thee,
Exit.

Duke. My life upon her faith. Honest Iago,
My Defdemona must I leave to thee.
I prye thee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come Defdemona, I haste but an houre
Of Love, of wordely matter, and direction
To spend with thee. We must obey the the time. Exit.

Iago. What faith thou Nobleg heart?
Red. What will I do, think'lt thou?
Iago. Why go to bed and sleepe.
Red. I will incomodiously drown my selfe.
Iago. If thou do't, I shall neuer love thee after. Why thou silly Gentleman?

Red. It is ylleness to sleepe, when to sleepe is torment:
And then haste we prescription to dye, when death is our Physon.

Iago. Oh villainous! I should look'd upon the world
For foure times sevene years, and since I could disinguish

Betwixt a Benefit, and an Intune: I never found man that Knew how to love himselfe. Ere I would say, I would Drown my selfe for the love of a Gyneye Hen, I would Change my Humanity with a Baboon.

Red. What should I do? I confesse it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my verust to amend it.

Iago. Verste? A figge, 'tis in our selves that we are Thus on this. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which,
Our Wills are Gardeners. So that if we will plant Nestles, or Iowe Lettuce; Set Hifope, and weede vp Times: Supply it with one gener of Heerbes, or distate it with many: either to hauue it sterral with idlenesse, or marrad
With Industry, why the power, and Conspicqeous au-uthority of this lie in our Wills. If the brane of our lines had not one Scale of Reason, to poise another of Sensualtie, the blood, and bafenie of our Nature would conduic to most propritious Conclusions. But we hauze
Reason to coole our raging Motions, our carreall Stings, or unbitten Lufs: whereof I take this, that you call Loue, to be a Sred, or Seyen.

Red. It cannot be.

Iago. It is meerly a Luft of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drown thy selfe? Drown
Cas, and blind Puppies. I haue, profess me thy Friend,
And I confesse me knat to thy defieruing, with Cables of perdurable toughneffe. I could never better feed thee then now. Put Money in thy purse; follow thee the Warres, dye thy favour, with an unfur'd Beard. I say put Money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Defdemona should continue her love to the Moore. Put Money in thy purse; nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou first fee an antswerable Sequestration, but put Money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills; fill thy purse with Money.
The Food that to him now is as delicious at Locusts, shall to him shortly, as bitter as Colequeintida. She must change for youth; when she is satur'd with his body
She will find the errors of her choice. Therefore, put Money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damme thy selfe, do it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the Money thou canst. If Sandanconne, and a freaze now, betwixt an erring Bithman, and super fulbe Venetian be not too hard for my wits, and all the Tribe of hell, thou shall enjoy her: therefore make Money: a pos of drowing thy selfe, its clean out of the way. Seekethuor rather to be hang'd in Compassing thy joy, then to be drown'd, and goe without her.

Rede. Will thou be fill'd to my hopes, if I depend on thee?

Iago. Thou art fure of me. Go make Money: I have thou told me often, and I re-tell thee againe, and againe:
I hate the Moore. My caue is hearted; thine hath no lesse reafon. Let vs be conjunctive in our revenge, against him. If thou canst Cuckold him, thou doth thy selfe a pleasure, me a sper. There are many Events in the World of Time, which will be deliered. Truitef, go, provide thy Money. We will have more of this to morrow. Adieu.

Red. Where shall we meete to'morrow?

Iago. At my Lodging.

Red. Ilc be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go too, farewell. Do you hear? Redirige!

Red. Ile fell all my Land.

Iago. Thus I trust to make my Foole, my pursu.

For I mine owne gain'd knowledge should prophane,
I 11 would time expend with such Sapse,

But
The Tragedie of Othello

For I have freu'd him, and the man commands
Like a full Soldier. Let's stay the Sea-fide (hos)
As well to see the Vefell that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the Maine, and th' Enoial blew,
An indiff'nent regard.

Enter Caffio.

Caffio. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike Ile,
That to approve the Moore: Oh let the Heauens
Glue him defence against the Elements,
For I have loft him on a dangerous Sea.

Mon. Is he well ship'd?

Caffio. His Bark is stoutly Timber'd, and his Pylot
Of verie expert, and approu'd Allowance;
Therefore my hope's (not tterfed to death)
Stand in bold Cure.

Within. A Sails, a Sails, a Sails.

Caffio. What note?

Gent. The Towne is empty; on the brow o' th' Sea
Stand watches of People; and they cry, a Sails.
Caffio. My hopes do sh ape him for the Gouernor.
Gent. They do discharge their Shot of Courticref,
Our Friends at leaft.

Caffio. I pray you Sir, go forth,
And guve vs truth who 'tis that is arriu'd.

Mon. I shall.

Exit. Mon. But good Lieutenant, is your General wiu'd?
Caffio. Most fortunately: he hath arriu'd a Maid
That paragous description, and wide Fame:
One that excels the graces of Blazoning pens,
And in th' effentiall Veffil of Creation,
Do's tyre the Ingenues.

Enter Gentleman,

Enter Gentleman,

How now? Who ha's put an?

Gent. 'Tis one $$e, Anceiic to the Generall.
Caffio. He's had most favourable, and happy speed:
Tempeft's themselves, high Seas, and bowing windes,
The garter'd Breakes, and Congregated Sands,
Trattors enfrap'd, to enconage the guiltille Steele,
As haung fence of Beautie, do omit
Their mortal Nature, lettig goe safely
The Diuine Difemona.

Mon. What is the?

Caffio. She that I speake of:

Our great Captains Captaine,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iafe,
Whole footing heere anticipates our thoughts,
A Seniotics speed. Great Joue, Othello guard,
And swell his Sails with thine owne powerfull breallly,
That he may belle this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make loutes quicke patts in Difemona Armes,
Gie renew'd fire to our extincted Spirits.

Enter Difemona, Iafe, Roigoria, and Aemilia.
Oh behold,
The Riches of the Ship is come on shore:
You men of Cyprus, let haue your knees,
Haile to thee Ladi, and the grace of Heauen,
Before, behind thee, and on euery hand
Enwheele thoe round.

Def. I thank you, Vailant Caffio,
What ty-dings can you tell of my Lord?

Caffio.
Caf. He is not yet arriv'd, nor know I ought
But that 's well, and will be shortly here.

Def. Oh, but I fear;
How shall you company?

Caf. The great Contention of Sea, and Skies
Pained our Fellowship. But heart's ease, a Safety.

Withins. A Safety, a Safety.

Gen. They give this greeting to the Cittadell:
This like wise is a Friend.

Caf. See for the Neives:
Good Ancient, you are welcome, Welcome Misfits:
Let is not gaine your patience (good Lage)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding,
That gives me this bold shew of Currende.

Lage. Sir, would she give you so much of her lippe,
As of her tongue the olde bothelows on me,
You would have enough.

Def. Alas : she has no speech.

Lage. Infaith too much:
I find it still, when I have leave to speepe.
Marry before your Ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Caf. You have such cause to say so.

Lage. Come on, come on; you are Pictures out of door.
Bells in your Parlours : Wilde-Cars in your Kitchens:
Saints in your Injuries: Dues being offended:
Players in your Hufwiferie, and Hufwifes in your Beds.

Def. Oh, fie upon thee, Slanderer.

Caf. Nay, it is true; else I am a Turk,
You must to play, and go to bed to worke.

Amul. You shall not write my praise.

Lage. No, let me not.

Def. What would it write of me, if thou shouldest praise me?

Lage. Oh, gentle Lady, do not put me too, t.
For I am nothing, so far critical.

Def. Come on, aay.

There's one gone to the Harbour?

Lage. I Madam.

Def. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise,
Coom how would't thou praise me?

Lage. I am about it, but indeed my invention comes from my pate, as Birdyme do's from Freere, it placeth out Braineis and all. But my Maffe labours, and thus the is deliber'd.

If he be fair, and wife faire is not, and wit,
The ones for wise, the other others is.

Def. Well prais'd.

How if she be Blacke and Witty ?

Lage. If she be Blacke and therfore have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blacker off set.

Def. Worse, and worse.

Emul. How If Faire, and Foolish st.

Lage. She never yet was foolish that was faire.
For even her folly helps her to her Faire.

Def. These are old fond Paradox, to make Fooleis laugh ithe Aloehope, What miserable praise hath thou for her that's Foulie, and Foolish.

Lage. There is none so faire and foolish thereto,
But doth finde pranks which faire, and wise ones do.

Def. Oh heavy ignorancy: thou praiest the worst best. But what praiest couldst thou behove on a defetering woman indeed? One, that in the authorithy of her merit, did jubly put on the vouch of soe malice it selfe.

Jago. She that was euer faire, and euer proue,
Had Tongue at will, and yet was never loud:
Never lackt Gold, and yet never gie,
Kied from her wish, and yet fai'd not \\nymay.
She that being abolive, and euer in her way,
Bade her wrong flay, and her defieture fice.
She that in silence never was so frail,
To change the Gods,head for the Salmons tale.
She that could think, and men's defile her mind,
See Suitors following, and not looks behinde:
She was a night, (if ever such nights were)
Def. To do what ?

Jago. To strike Fools, and chronicle small Beere.

Defe. Oh moot lame and impotent conclusion,
Do not learn'd of him. Emauja, though be bethy husband,
How say you (Cafia) is he not a moost prophane, and lib-berall Counsellor?

Cafia. He speaks home (Madam) you may eballish him more in the Soullidier, then in the Scholette.

Lage. He takes her by the paleme : I, well said, whist per.
With as little a web as this, will I enlace as great a Fly as Caffe, I simile upon her: do : I will give thee in thine owne Courtship. You say true, 'tis to indeed.
If such tricks as these shref you out of your Loustermatrie, it had bene better you had not kis'd your three fingers so oft, which now againe you are most apt to prai the Sir, in. Very good : well kis'd, and excellent Certi-
s: 'tis so indeed. Yet againe, your fingers to your lippe's
Would they were Clutter-pipes for your fake.

The Moore I know his Trumpet.

Cafia, 'Tis truely so.

Def. Let's meete him, and recite him.

Caffe. Lue, where he comes.

Enter Otho's

Oth. Omy faire Warrior.

Def. My deere Otho,

Oth. It gives me wonder great ac my content
To see you here soe close me.

Oh my Soules Ioy:
If after eyue Tempes,come such Calmes,
May the winde blowe, till they have wak'en death:
And let the labouring Barke clime hills of Seas
Olympia high: and duck againe as low,
As he'lls from Heaven, if it were now to dye,
'Twere now to be most happy. For I scarce,
My Soulke bath her content soe absolute,
That not another comfort like to this,
Succeedes in unknowne Fate.

Def. The Heauens forbid
But that our Lones
And Comforts should encrease
Euen as our desire do grow.

Oth. Amein to that (sweet Powers)
I cannot speake enough of this content,
It stoppes me here: it is too much of Ioy.
And this, and this the greatest discords be
That e're our hearts shall make.

Jago. Oh you are well tun'd now : But I set downe the pegg: that makeis this Musick, as bonnet as I.

Oth.
The Tragedie of Othello

Otho. Come; let us to the Castle.

Newes (Friends) our Warses are done:
The Furies are drown'd.

How is my old acquaintance of this Life?
(Hony) you shall be well deford in Cyprus,
I have found great love among it them. Oh my Sweet! I prattle out of fashion, and I doate in mine owne comfort. I prethee, good

Jago. Go to the Bay, and disburse m'y Coysters,

Bring thou the Master to the Cittadell,
He is a good one, and his worthy selfe

Do's challenge much respect.

Come Dissemble, once more well met at Cyprus.

Exit Othello and Dissemble.

Jago. Do thou meet me presently at the Harbour.

Come thinke, if thou be't Valiant, (as they say bas men being in Looke, have then a Nobilitie in their Natures, more then is nature to them) lift me: the Lieutenant to night watches on the Court of Guard. First, I must tell thee this: Dissemble, is directly in love with him.

Jago. Lay thy finger thus: and let thy foule be instructed. Make me with what violence the first loud the Moore, but for bragging, and telling her fantastically lies. To lose him all for prating, let not thy dethes heart thainke it. Her eye must be fed. And what delight shall she have to looke on the diuell? When the Blood is made dulle with the Act of Sport, there should be a game to enuaine it, and to give Satety a fresh appetite.

Loutincelle in favour, sympathy in yeares, Manners, and beauties; all which the Moore is defeque in. Now for want of these requir'd Conveniences, her delicate tenderness will finde it selfe abuse, begin to bene the:

gorge, dulleth and abhorre the Moore, very Nature will infirct her in it, and compel her to some second choice.

Now Sir, this granted (as it is a most pregnant and unfordiscord) who hands to eminence in the degree of this Fortune, as Caflio's: a knave very valorous; no further conscionsable, then in putting on the meere forme of Cuill, and Humane seeming, for the better compose of his fault, and most hidden loose Affection. Why none, who none: A flipper, and subtle knaue, a finder of occasion: that he's an eye can flame, and counterfeit Advantages, though true Advantage never pretend it felte,

A dulleth knaue besides, the knaue is baseborne,younger:
and hath all those requisites in him, that fully and greene minds looke after. A pestilent compleat knaue, and the woman hath found him already.

Red. I cannot believe in that, she's full of most blest'd condition.

Jago. Blest's diggester. The Wine she drinks is made of grapes. If there had beene blest, there would never have lou'd the Moore. Blest's paddling. Didst thou not see her paddling with the pale of his hand? Didst not make this?

Red. Yet, that I did: but that was but cureefae.

Jago. Thee here by this hand: an index, and obscure prologue to the History of Lufl and Soule Thoughts.
They met so near with their lippes, that their breaths emorat'd together. Villanous thoughts, Adleague, when these nauseable stinkes to marshall the way, hard at hand comes the Master, and made çerçeve, this incorporate conclusion: Pith. But Sir, be you not false, by me. I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: for the Command. He lay'st upon you. Coffis knowes you not: He not be faire from you. Do you finde some occasion to anger Coffis, either by speaking too loud, or manifesting his discipline, or from what other cause you please, which the time shall more favorably minify.

Red. Well.

Jago. Sir, he's rafl, and very Godtree to Choller; and happily may strike at you, prouoke him that he may:
for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to Mutiny.
Whole qualification shall come into no true taffe againe, but by the displating of Coffis. So shall you have a short journey to your deere, by the means I shall then have to preferre them. And the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prospetitie.

Red. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Jago. I warrant thee. Meete me by and by at the Cittadell, I must fetch his Necesaries a Shore, Farewell.

Red. Adiest.

Jago. That Coffis loses her, I do well beleive:

That she loses him, 's apt, and of great Credit.
The Moore (how be't that I endure him not)
Is of a continall, loving Noble Nature,
And I care thinking, he'll prove to Dissemble
A most dearer husband. Now I do loose her too,
Not one of absolute Lufl, (though peradventure
I stand accomptant for as great a fin)
But partly led to dyet my Reuenge,
For that I do feu'st the luftie Moore
Hath leap'd into my Seste. The thought whereof,
Doth (like a poiyolous Mineral) draw my Inwardes:
And nothing can, or shall content my Soule.

Then am eu'd with him, wife, for wif.

Orviving for yet that I put the Moore,
Adiust into a Lascivie too strong.

This judgmeten cannot cure. Which thing to do,
If this pote the Truth of Venice, whom I trace
For his queit hunting, hand the putting on,
I helue our Michael Coffis on the hip,
Abuse him to the Moore, in the right garbe
(For I fear Coffis with my Night-Cape too)
Make the Moore thaine me, lose me, and reward me
For making him egregiously an Afe,
And praflishing upon his peace, and quiet,
Euen to madneffe. 'Tis heere: but yet conf'd,
Knauseries plaine face, is neuer fece, till y'd.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello's, Herald with a Proclamation.

Herald. It is Othello's pleasure, our Noble and Valiant Generall. That vpon certaine tydings now arry'd, imp orting the more perdition of the Turkis Fleece every man put himselfe into Triumph. Some to daunce, some to make Bonfires, each man, to what Sport and Recres his addition leads him. For besides these benefi-tiall Newes, it is the Celebration of his Nuptrials. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All officers are open, & there is full libertie of Feasting from this

II. i. 204—II. ii. 11

Enter Iago.

Iago, hath direction what to do.

But notwithstanding with my personal eye
Will I look to:

Otho. Iago, is most honest:

Michael, goodnight. To morrow with your earliest,

Let me have speech with you. Come my deere Loue,

The purchase made, the frutes are to enioy,

That profit's yet to come twene me, and you.

Goodnight.

Enter Iago.

Iago. Welcome Iago: we must to the Watch.

Iago. Not this hour Lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten o'clocke. Our General caft vs thus early for the loue of his Deference: Who lets us not therefore blame:

beast not yet made wanton the night withher:

and she is prompt for Ione.

Iago. She's a most exquisite Lady.

Iago. And Ile warrant her, full of Game.

Iago. Indeed she is a great fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has!

Methinks it founds a party to provocation.

Iago. An iust and good eye.

And yet I think them right modest.

Iago. And when the speaker,

is it not an Alarum to Ione?

Iago. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well: happy to their Sheetes. Come Lieutenant, I have a hint of a brace of Cypris Gallants, that would faine have a measure to the health of blacke Othello.

Iago. Not to night, good Iago, I have very poore, and unhappie Brains for drinking. I could well with Curtelle would invent some other Custome of entertainment.

Iago. Oh, oh, they are our Friends: but one Cup, Ile drink for you.

Iago. I have drunk but one Cup to night, and that was crafted qualified too: and behold what inustion it makes here, I am infortunat in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakeene with any more.

Iago. What man? This is a night of Reuels, the Gallants defire it.

Iago. Where are they?

Iago. Here, at the doore: I pray you call them in.

Iago. He do's, but it dislikes me.

Iago. If I can talke but one Cup upon him

With that which he hath drank to night alreadie,

He be as full of Quarrel, and offence

As my young Malthog dogge.

Now my good Fool, Sir Tullip,

Whom Loue hath turn'd almost the wrong side out,

To Deference hath to night Carrows'd. Potations, postle-deepes, and he's too watch.

Three elle of Cypris Noble swelling Spirites,

(That hold their Honours in a wary distance,

The very Elements of this Warlike Isle)

Have I to night flux'd, and with flowing Cups,

And they Watch too.

Now 'mongst this Flocke of drunkards

Am I put to our Coffee in some Action

That may offend the Iles. But here they come.

Enter Coffee, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If Consequence do but approve my dreame,

My Boaste fails freely, both with winde and Streame.

Iago. Tore heauen, they have given me a rowle already.

Mon. Good-faith a little one: not pass a pint, as I am a Souldier.

Iago. Some Wine has.

And let me the Cannaon clinke clinks:

And let me the Cannaon clinke,

A Souldier's a man of his life: but a fain,

Why then let a Souldier drink.

Some Wine Boyes.

Iago. Fore I heauen: an excellent Song.

Iago. I learned it in England: where indeed they are most potent in Potting, Your Dane, your Germaine, and your swag-belly'd Hollander, (drink ho) are nothing to your English.

Coffee. Is your Englishmen so exquisit in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinkes you with facilitie, your Dane dead drunk: He sweates not to overthrow your Almaine.

He gives your Hollander a vomit, ere. the next

Postle can be fill'd.

Iago. To the health of our General.

Mon. I am for it, Lieutenant: and Ile de you Justice.

King Stephen was and a worthy Peer,

His Ieounce call him but a Crowne,

He held them Six pece all to dere,

With that he call the Tub Nanjie.

He was a night of high Reveue,

and than art hath a low degree;

'Tis Pride that pull the Country downe,

And taketh and a Clangue about there.

Some Wine ho.

Coffee. Why this is a more exquisite Song then the other.

Iago. Will you heare it again?

Coffee. No: for I find him to be unworthy of his Place, that do's those things. Well: heaunt to all: and there be foules must be fainst, and there be foules must not be fainst.

Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Coffee. For mine owne part, no offence to the General,

nor any man of quality: I hope to be fainst.

Iago. And do I too Lieutenant.

Coffee. I (but by your leave) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be fainst before the Ancient. Let's have no more of this: let's to our Affaires. Forge vs our times: Gentlemen let's looke to our bunine. Do not thinks Gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunk;

now I can stand well enough, and I speake well enough,

Gent. Excellent well.

Coffee. Why very well then: you must not think then,

that I am drunk.

Exit.

The Tragedy of Othello

The one as long as the other, "Tis pittie of him:
I fear the truth Othello put him in,
On some odder time of his immitic
Will shake this Island.

Othello. But is he often thus?

Iago. "Tis evermore his prologue to his sleep;
He's to the Horologe a double Set.
If Drink rooke not his Cradle.

Othello. It were well.
The Generall were put in mind of it
Perhaps he fees it not; or his good nature
Prives the vertue that appears in Coffin,
And lookes not on his coils: it is not this true

Enter Rodrigo.

Iago. How now Rodrigo?

I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.

Men. And 'tis great pity, that the Noble Moore
Should hazard such a Place, as his owne Second
With one of an ingraft Infinitic
It were an honest Action, to say so
To the Moore.

Iago. Nor I, for this faire Island,
I do looke Coffin well: and would do much
To cure him of this coil. But he whoke what noife?

Enter Coffin pursuing Rodrigo.

Men. What's the matter Lieutenant?

Iago. A Knaggen teach me my dutie? He beate the Knag into a Twiggen-Bottle.

Rod. Brate me?

Iago. Doft thou prate, Rogue?

Men. Nay, good Lieutenant:

I pray you Sir, hold your hand.

Coffin. Let me go (Sir)

Oth. Fie, no: you're the Mæzzard.

Men. Come, come; you're drunk.

Coffin. Drunken.

Iago. Away I say; go out and cry a Muticin.

Nay good Lieutenant, Alas Gentlemen:
Help hea[h. Lieutenant. Sir Munten:
Helpe Matters. Here's a goodly Watch indeed.
Who's that which rings the Bell? Displa hoax:
The Towne will rife. Fie fie, Lieutenant,
You be asham'd for euer.

Enter Othello and Attendants.

Othello. What's the matter here?

Men. I blerted still, I am hurt to this death. He dies.

Oth. Hold for your life.

Iago. Hold hoa: Lieutenant, Sir Montano, Gentlemen:
Hau't you forgot all place of senfe and dutie?

Hold. The Generall speaks to you: hold for flame.

Oth. Why how now hoa? From whence eneth this flame?

Are we turn'd Turks? and to our felues that doth
Which Heaven hath forbid the Ostomates?
For Christian flame, put by this barbarous Brawle
He hath this near, because for his owne rage,
Hold's his soule lighter. He dies vpon his Motion.

Silence that dreadfull Bell, it frightes the Isle,

From her propriety. What is the matter, Matters?

Honest Iago that lookest dead with greeing,
Speake: who began this? On thy lone I charge thee?

Iago. I do not know I reads all, but now, even now.
In quarter: and in termes like Bride, and Groome
Denyting them for Bed; and then, but now:
(As some Planet had unvitied men)

Swords out, and tilting one at others breasts,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speake
Any beginning to this percuif odde.
And would, in Action glorious, I had left
Thoe legges, that brought me to a part of it,
Othello. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot?

Iago. I pray you pardon me, I cannot speake.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be chiel:
The granitic and Marble of your youth
The world hath noted. And your name is great
In mouths of wiseft Censure. What's the matter
That you vnlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? Give me answer to it.

Men. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer Iago, can informe you,
While I spare speech which something now offends me.
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me, that's said, or done since this night,
Valethe selfe-charite be sometimes a vice,
And to defend our selues, it be a sume
When violence affiies vs.

Othello. Now by Heaven, I had been in my safer Guides to rule,
And passion (having among my bell judgement collie)
Affairs to lead the way. If I once flir,
Or do but lift this Arme, the beff of you
Shall foke in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foule Rout began: Who set it on,
And he that is approvd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall foke me. What in a Towne of warre,
Yet wide, the peoples heare it fume-full of ear,
To Manage private, and dontlche Quarrell?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of safest,
Tis monftrous: Iago, who begon?

Men. If partially Aih'd, or league in office,
Thou doll delute more, or leffe then Truth
Thou art no Soullier.

Iago. Touch me not no more,
I had rather have this tongue cut out of my mouth,
Then it should do offence to Michael Coffin.
Yet I perfwade my felle, so ferke the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This it is Generall;
Montano and my felle being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for helpe,
And Coffin following him with determin'd Sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this Gentleman,
Stepps into Coffin, and corrects his paufe;
My felle, she crying Fellow did purifie,
Left by his lamoure (as it fell to out)
The Towne might fall in fright. He,(Swift of foote)
Out-ran my purpose: and I return'd thererather
For that I heard the clinke, and fall of Swords,
And Coffin high in oath: Which till to night
I never might (say before. When I came backe
(For this was btree) I found them clofe together
At Blow, and thuff, even as againe they were
When you your felle did part them.
More of this matter cannot I report,
But Men are Men: The bell sometime forgets,
Though Coffin did some little wrong to him,
As in rage drinke those that with them beft,
Yet surely Coffin I beleue receiued
From him that red, some strange Indignities,
Which patience could not paffe.
Iago. Come, come: good wine, is a good familiar Creature, if it be well said: I'll examine no more against it.
And good Lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.

Cassio. I have well approved it, Sir. I drunk?

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at a time thus. I tell you what you shall do: Our General's Wife, is now the General. I may say so, in this respect, for that he hath denoived, and given up his livery to the Contemplation, mark'd and deumeament of her parts and Graces. Confess your false freely to her. Importune her help to put you in your place again. She is of to free, to kindle, to apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds at a vice in her goodnature, to do more than she is required, This broken joynt between you, and her husband, entreat her to splinter. And my Fortunes against any lay worth naming, this cracker of your love, shall grow foment, then it was before.

Cassio. You adjure me well.

Iago. I protest in the sincerity of Loue, and honest kindness.

Cassio. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning, I will beseech the various Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desirous of my Fortunes if they check me.

Iago. You are in the right; good night Lieutenant, I must to the Watch.

Cassio. Good night, honest Iago.

Enter Cassio.
will bee, I shall have so much experience for my pains: And so, with no money at all, and little more Wit, return again to Venice.

Lago. How poor are they that have not Patience? What wound did euer heal but by degrees? Thou knowst well I work by Wit, and not by Witchcraft And Wit depends on dilatory time.

Don't go not well? Caffio hath beaten thee, And thou by that false hurt hast eather'd Caffio: Though other things grow faire against the Sun, Yet Fruits that blossome first, will first be ripe: Content thy self, a while. Intermittis' Morning.

Two things are to do:

My Wife must move for Caffio to her Mistis: I'll let her on my selfe, a while, to draw the Moor apart, And bring him unprune, when he may Caffio finde Solenting his wife?: that's the way:

Dull not Decease, by coldnesse, and delay. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Caffio, Musicians, and Clowns.

Caffio, Masters, play here, I will content your paines, Something that's briefes: and bid goodmorow General.

Clown. Why Masters, have your Instrument bins in Naples, that they speake rich? Note thus?

Mast. How sir? how?

Clown. Are the? I pray you, winde Instruments?

Mast. I marry are they sir.

Clown. Oh,thereby hangs a tale.

Mast. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clown. Marry sir, by many a winde Instrument that I know. But Masters, here's money for your Musick, that he delires you for loues false to make no more noise with it.

Mast. We'll sir, we will not.

Clown. If you have any Musicke that may not be heard, tooe againe. But (as they say) to hear Musicke, the General doth not generally care.

Mast. We have none fach, sir.

Clown. Then put vp your Pipes in your bagge, for he away: Go'vaman into sayer, away. Exit Mus. Caffio. Doth thou heare me, mine honest Friend?

Clown. No, I hear not your honest Friend:

I heare you.

Caffio. Prithee keepe vp thy Quillets, that's a poore piece of Gold for thee: is the gentlewoman that attends the General be flattering, tell her, there's one Caffio enter-treats her a little favoure of Speech. What thou doest this?

Clown. She is flattering sir; she will flatter bither, I shall seeme to notice unto her. Exit Clown.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not bin a bed then?

Caffio. Why no: the day had broke before we parted, I have made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife:

My iddle to her is, that she will to vertuous Desdemona

Procure me some accesse. Inago. He send her to you presently: And Ile devise a meane to draw the Moor Out of the way, that your consuetude and business May be more free.

Caffio. I humbly thank you for's. I never knew A Florentine more kind, and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emilia. Good morrow (good Lieutenant) I am forrie For your displeasure: but all will fare be well.

The General and his wife are talking of it, And she speakes for you fluent. The Moore replies, That he you hurt is of great Fame in Cyprus, And great Affinities: and that in wholsome Wisdoms He might not but refuse you: But he protests he loves you And needs no other Suitor, but his likenings. To bring you in againe, Caffio. Yet I beleech you,

If you think fit, or that it may be done,

Give me advantage of some briefe Discourse With,Desdemona alone.

Iago. Pray you come in:

I will beflow you where you shall haue time,

To speake your business freely.

Caffio. I am much bound to you.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Othello. These Letters give (Iago) to the Pylot,

And by him do my duties to the Senate:

That done, I will be walking on the Workes,

Repire there to meet,

Iago. Well, my good Lord, Ile doo's.

Othello. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we fe't?

General. We'll write upon your Lordship.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Desdemona, Caffio, and Emilia.

Desdemona. Be thou affraid (good Caffio) I will do All my abilities in thy behalfe.

Emilia. Good Madam do:

I warrant it greene, my Husband, As it the caufe were his.

Desdemona. Oh that's an honest Fellow, Do not doubt Caffio

But I will haue my Lord, and you againe

As friended as you were,

Caffio. Bounteous Madam,

What ever shall become of Michael Caffio, He's neuer any thing but your true Servant.

Desdemona. I know't: I thank you: you do love my Lord: You have knowne him long, and you well affraid

He shall in strangefome land no farther off, Then in a politique distance.

Caffio. I, but Lady, That policie may either last for long, Or fred upon such nice and waterish diet,

Or breede it skife to out of Circumstances,

That I being absent, and my place supply'd,

My General will forget my Louse, and Service.

Desdemona. Do not doubt it before Emilia here.
"Tis as I should entreat you were your Ghoses,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or kepe you wame,
Or fuc to you, to do a peculiar profit
To your owne perfon. Nay, when I have a suite
Wherein I meane to touch your Loue indeed, it shall be full of pozer, and dificult weight,
And leave it to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I do bedef thee, grant me this,
To fucue me bit a little to my fale.
Oth. Farewell my Defdemone, lie come to thee atit.
Def. Aemilia come; be as you fancies teach you:
What ere you be, I am obedient.
Evit. Oth. Excellent3 writh. Perdition catch my Soule
But I do love thee there and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come againe,
Iagos. My Noble Lord,
Oth. What doth thou fay, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Caffio
When the woode my Lady, know of your loue?
Oth. He did, from frict to latt:
Why doft thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my Thoughts,
No further harne,
Oth. Why of thy thoughts, Iago?
Iago. I did not thinke he had but acquainted with his.
Oth. Oyes, and went betweene vs very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed indeed. Discomfort thou ought in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my Lord?
Iago. My Lord, for ought I know.
Oth. What doft thou think?
Iago. Thinke, my Lord?
Oth. Think, my Lord? Alas, thou excit'st me;
Art there were but one Manfer in thy thought.
Too hideous to be fiewne. Thou doft mean something I heard thee fay even now, thou likeft it not, that
When Caffio left my wife, What didit not like?
And when I told thee, he was of my Counfaile,
Of any whole courfe of wooing; thou criedst, Indeede.
And didst not contrive, and purie thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst it that up mery Braine.
Some horrible Conceite. If thou doft love me,
Shew me thy thought.
Iag. My Lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I thinke thou doft?
And for I know thou art full of Loue, and Honelfe,
And weight it thy words before thou gult it them breath,
Therefore thele flrops of Loue, fright me the more:
For fuch things in a fale didst all Kroue.
Are tricke of Cuffone: But in a man that's iufi,
They are cleaf dilations, working from the heart,
That Pafion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Caffio,
I dare be knowne, I thinke that he is honest.
Oth. I thinke to too.
Iagos. Men should be what they feeme,
Or those that be not, would they might feeme none.
Oth. Certaine, men should be what they feeme.
Iago. Why then I thinke Caffios an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this?
Ipraythee fpeak to me, as to thy thinking,
As thou doft ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts

The Tragedie of Othello

I. I am glad of this: For now I shall have reason To show thou Louise and Duty that I bear you With franklin spirit. Therefore (as I am bound) Receive it from me. I speake not yet of profit : Looke to thy wife, obserue her well with Caisie, Weare her eyes, thus: not Jealous, nor Secure: I would not have your free, and Noble Nature, Out of false Bounty, be absu'd: Looke too's: I know our Country dispositions well: In Venice, they doe: Heaven see the pranks They dare not shew their Husbands. Their best Conference, Is not to leave't vodone, but kept vnknowne. Oth. Doth thou say so? Iago. She did deceu's her Father, marrying you, And when the seem'd to shewe, and feare your lookers, She loud them most. Oth. And so she did. Iago. Why go too then? Shee that so young could give out such a Seeming To feele her fathers eyes vp, close as Oakes, He thought she was Witchcraft. But I am much too blame: I hustily do have the hope of your pardon For too much louing you. Oth. I am bound to thee forever. Iago. I fee this hath a little daft'd your Spirit. Oth. Not a jot, not a jot. Iago. Trust me, I feare it has: I hope you will consider what is spoke Comes from your Loue, But I do set y'are more would: I am to pray you, not to firaine my speech To groffer issues, nor to larger reach, Then to Sufpicion. Oth. I will not. I go. Should you do so (my Lord) My speeche should fall into such wids fruitesse, We thought you must not. C's for any worthy Friend: Mr. Lord. I fee you're min'd. Oth. No, not much mind'd: I do not thinke but Deception's honest. Iago. Loug her this so, And long hooe you to thinke so. Iago. And yet this Nature string from it selfe. Iago. I, there's the point: As (to be build w'th you) Not to affect many proposed Matches Of her owne close, Complexion, and Degree, Whereo we see in all things, Nature tendes: Foh, one may sinel in such, a will most tande, Foule diuisions, Thoughts vnnatural, But (pardone me) I do not in polition Diffludely speak of her, though I may feare Her will, recyling to her better judgement, May fall to match you with her Country formes, And happily repent. Oth. Farewell, farewell: If more thou dost perceu, let me know more: See thy wed's to obstiue. I leave me Iago. Iago. My Lord, I take my leave. Oriel. Why did I marry? This honset Creature (doubtlesse) Sees, and knows more, much more then he vnoels.
the Moor of Venice.

Iago. My Lord, I would I might interest your Honor To teach this thing no farther: Leave it to time, Although'tis past that Coffin haue his Place; For he doe fill it up with great Ability: Yet if you please, to him off a while: You shall by that perceive him, and his means: Not of your Lady Traine his Entertainment With any strong, or vehement importunity. Much will be scene in that: I mean the time, Let me be thought too busie in my fears, (As warym, so I have to fear am) And hold her free, I do beseech your Honor.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave.

Oth. This Fellow's of exceeding honesty, And knows all Quantities with a just Spirit Of humane dealing. If I do prate her Haggard, Though her effects were my dear brute-hearts, I'd whistle her off, and let her downe the wind To play at Fortune. Haply, for I am blanke, And have not those infallible parts of Conversation That Chambers has: O for I am declin'd Into the vale of yeares (yet that's not much) She's gone. I am abs't, and my releafe Must be to loath her. Oh Curse of Marriage! That we can call these delicate Creatures ours, And not their Appetites? I had rather be a Toad, And live upon the vapour of a Dungeon, Then keep a corner in the thing I love. For others' sakes. Yet 'tis the plague to Great-ones, Prerogat'v'd at they leffe then the Baie, 'Tis deh'v'da vanishable, like death: Euen then, this jark'd, plague is saved to vs, When we do quicke. Looke where the corners:

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Iago. If she be false, Heauen mock't it false: He not beleue't.

Def. How now, my deere Othello?

Your dinner, and the generous Officers

By you imputed, do extend your presence.

Oth. I am too blame.

Def. Why do you speake so faintly?

Are you not well?

Oth. I haue a paine upon my Forehead, here.

Def. Why that's with watching, 'twill away again.

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour

It will be well.

Oth. Your Napkin is too little:

Let it alone: Come, lie go in with you.

Exit.

Def. I am very sorry that you are not well.

Emil. I am glad I haue this Napkin: This was her first remembrance from the Moor, My wayward Husband hath a hundred times Wood'd me to steale it. But shee los't the Token, (For he com'd her, shee should ever keep it) That she keeps evermore about her, To kife, and talk too. Haue the worke done out, And then what he will doe with it,

Enter Emilia, not I.

I see nothing, but to please his Fanf'rie.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now? What do you hear alone?

Emil. Do not you chide: I have a thing for you.

Iago. You have a thing for me?

It is a common thing.

Emil. I ha'.

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. Oh, is it so? what will you give me now

For that same Handskerchief.

Iago. What Handskerchief?

Emil. What Handskerchief?

Why that the Moor first gave to Desdemona, That which so often you did bid me feale.

Iago. Half floing it from her?

Emil. No, but the let it drop by negligence, And to th'advantage, I being heere, took't vp:

Looke, heere 'tis.

Iago. A good wench, give it me.

Emil. What will you do with't, that you have bene so earnest to have me drie it?

Iago. Why, what is that to you?

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,

Guit me a taste. Poor Lady, shee'll run mad When the shall lack it.

Iago. Be not so downe on't: I have vie for it. Go, leave me.

Exit.

Iago. I will in Coffin's Lodging loue this Napkin, And let him finde it. Triflers light as ayre, Are to the liealous, confimations strong, As proffers of holy Writ. This may do something. The Moor already changes with my payson; Dangerous conferences, are in their Natures payson, Which at the first are feake found to disfate: But with a little arte upon the blood, Burne like the Mines of Sibipurpose, I did pay so.

Enter Othello.

Look who he comes: Not Poppy, nor Mandragora, Not all the bride head Syrrops of the world Shall ever medicine the to that sweete sleepe Which shee own'd yet yesterday.

Oh, ha, ha, false to mee?

Iago. Why how now General? No more of that.

Emil. Auant, be gone: Thou haue lett me on the Racke:

I swear 'tis better to be much abs'd.

Then but to know a little.

Iago. How now, my Lord?

Oh. What feares haue you, in these lone hours of Luft? I faw not, thought not: it haue not me:

I flet the next night well, fed well, was free, and merry,

I found not Coffin's kiffes on her Lippes:

He that is robb'd, not wanting what is unloane,

Let him not know't, and he not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am forry to hear this;

Oh. I ha use happy, if the general Campe,

Pyrones and all, had tailest her sweet Body;

So I had nothing knowne. Oh now, for ever

Farewel the Tranquill mind; farewell Content;

Farewel the plumed Troopes, and the bigge Warres,

That makes Ambition, Vertue! Oh farewell,

Farewel the neigheb Nees, and the thrill Trumpe,

The Spirit-thirruning Drum, th'Ear-piercing Fife,

The Ravell Banner, and all Qualitie.

Pride, Pompe, and Circumstance of glorious Warre:

And O you mortal Engines, whole rude thowses

Th'immortal honesty dread Clamours, counterfeit,

Farewel: Othello's Occupation's gone,

Iago. Is't possible my Lord?

Oh. Villaine, be sure thou proue my Looke Whore;

Be sure of it: Give me the Oculturproofs,

Or
As if he plucks up knives by the roots,
That grew upon my lippes, laid his Leg on my Thigh,
And ligh, and kife, and then cry surd Farce,
That guide thee to the Moore.

Oh, O monstros! monstros!

Oth. Nay, this was but his Dreame.

Oh. But this denoted a fore-gone conclusion,
Tis a threwd doubt, though it be but a Dreame,
Oth. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oh. He teare her all to pceces.

Oth. Nay yet be wife; yet we see nothing done,
She may be honest yet: Tell me but this,
Have you not sometimes seene a Handkerchiefe
Spotted with Strawberries, in your wifes hand?
Oh. I gave her such a one: 'twas my first gift.
Oth. I know not that: but such a Handkerchiefe
(I am sure it was your wifes) did I to day
See Caffo wipe his Beard with.

Oh. If it be that,

Oth. If it be that, or any, it was hers.

It speakes against her with the other proofs.

Othel. O that the Slave had forty thousand liues:
One too pone, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I see tis true. Looke here Otho.
All my lond lone thus do I blow to Heauen. 'Tis gone.
Arise blacke vengeance, from the hOLLOW Hell,
Yield vp (O Loue) thy Crowne, and heerst Throne
To tyrannous Hate. Swell boosome with thy fraught,
For its of Apfitckes tongues.

Oth. Yet be content.

Oh. Oh blood, blood, blood.

Oth. Patience I say: your minde may change.

Oth. Neuer Otho. Like to the Ponticke Sea,
Whole Ite Current, and compelline courfe,
Neit keeps tettering eble, but keeps due on
To the Proponticke, and the Hellepont:
Even to my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall you take backe, noes the humble Loue
Till that a capable, and wide Reuenge
Swallow them vp.
Now by yond Marble Heauen
In the due reverence of a Sacred vow,
I here engage my words.

Oth. Do not rife yet:

Winnifte you ever-burning Lights above,
Your Elements, that clip vp round about,
Winnifte that heere I say doth give vp
The execution of his will, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Otho's Service. Let him command,
And to obey shall be inremore,
What bloody buiftkee ever.

Oh. I greet thy loue,
Not with vane thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the infant puthe too't.
Within these three days let me heare thee say,
That Caffo's not Stoore.

Oth. My Friend is dead:
'Tis done at your Reqveilt.
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her lend Me:
Damn her, damn her, damn her.

Come goe with me a part, I will withdraw
To furnish me with some swift means of death.
For the faire Duell.
Now art thou my Lieutenant.

Oth. I am your owne for ever.
Scena Quarta.

Enter Desdemona, Æmilia, and Clown.

Desd. Do you know Sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Clown. I dare not say he lies any where.

Desd. Why man?

Clown. He's a Soldier, and for me to say a Souldier lies, 'tis hubbing.

Desd. Go too: where lodges he?

Clown. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I ly.

Desd. Can anything be made of this?

Clown. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here, or he lies there, were only in mine own thought.

Desd. Can you ensure him out? and be edited by report?

Clown. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Questions, and by them answer.

Desd. Seek him, bid him come hither; tell him, I have more thy Lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clown. To do this, is within the compass of mans Wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit (s).

Desd. Where should I loose the Handkerchief, Æmilia?

Æm. I know not Madam.

Desd. Bide me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of Curiosities. And but my Noble Moore

Is true of mine, and made of such baseness,

As jealous Creatures are; it is enough

To put him to ill-thinking.

Æm. Is he not jealous?

Desd. Who, he? I think he the Sun where he was borne,

Drav all such hunters from him.

Æm. Looke where he comes. Enter Othello.

Desd. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be Call'd to him. How is't with you, my Lord?

Oth. Well my good Lady. Oh hardship to dissemble!

How do you, Desdemona?

Desd. Well, my good Lord, Oth. Give me your hand.

This hand is moist my Lady,

Desd. It hath felt no age, nor knowne no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fulness and liberal heart: Hot, hot, and mewet. This hand of yours requires A sequester from Liberty: Fasting, and Prayer,

Muck Caution, Excess of studious,

For here's a yong, and swearing Duelli here;

That commonly rebels: 'Tis a good hand,

A franke one.

Desd. You may (indeed) say so;

For 'twas that hand that gav' me heart.

Oth. A liberal hand. The cants of old-gaunt hands:

But our new Heraldry is bands, not hearts.

Desd. I cannot speak of this.

Come, now your promise.

Oth. What promise, Chuckle?

Desd. I haue sent to bid Cassio come speake with you.

Oth. I have a fair and sorry Rhewme offends me:

Lend me thy Handkerchief.
Def. How now (good Caffio) what's the newes with you?

Caffio. Madam, my former suite, I do berecefe you, That by your vertuous meanes, I may againe
Exit, and be a member of your hourse,
Whom I, with all the Office of my heart
Intirely honour, I woul not be delaying
If my effence, he of fuch most kindle,
That nor my Service past, nor present Sorrowes,
Nor purpos'd meint in futurity,
Can roante me into his houre againe,
But to know fo, must be my benefite:
So fhall I cloathing in a torce content,
And shut my felfe vp in some other course
To Fortunes Almez.

Def. Alas (thrice-gente Caffio)
My Aduocation is not now in Tone;
My Lord, is not my Lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in Favour, as in Humour alter'd.
So helpe me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my life,
And may it not within the blanke of his displeasure
For my free speech. You muft whilte be patient:
What I can do, I will; and more I will
Then for my felfe, I dare. Let that be fince you.

Iago. Is my Lord angry?

Caffio. He went hence but now:
And certainly in strange vnquiets.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have learne the Cannon
When it hath blowne his Ranks into the Ayre,
And like the Duell from his very Arme
Puff'd his owne Brother: And is he angry?
Something of moment then: I will go meet him,
There's matter inti'nded, iffe be angry.

Def. I prysythe do fo. Something of care of State,
Either from Venice, or some what's call'd profite
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus, to him,
Hath purchas'd his other Spirit: and in such cases,
Men: Naturae are angle with inferiour things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even fo.
For let our finger ske, and it endues
Our other healthfull members, even to a fene.
Of paine. Nay, we must think men are not Gods,
Not of them selves: for such obedience
As for the Bridail. Benthrow me much,
Amilias, I was (vnderhande Warrior, as I am).
An auing his vnkindnesse with my foute:
But now I finde, I had fuborn'd the Wifnfee,
And he's Indited fall ery.

Amilas. Pray heauen it bee
State matters, as you thinke, and no Concepcion,
Nor no Jealous Toy, concerning you.
Def. Alas the day, I never gave him cause.

Amilas. But Jealous soules will not be anwer'd fo;
They are not ever jealous for the caufe,
But jealous, for they're Jealous, it's a Monfter
Beprer upon it, bere me on it felle.

Def. Heaven keeps the Monfter from Othello's mind.

Amilas. Lady, Amen.

Iago. I will go see him. Caffio, walke here about:
If I the finne him fit, I muft move your fute,
And teake to effect it to my vtiternost.

Caffio. I humbly thank you Ladyship.

Enter Iago. Exeunt. "Sacrific" (Friend Caffio.)

The Tragedie of Othello

Coffio. What make you from home?
How is't with you, my moft faire Bianca?
Indeed (sweet Loue) I was comming to your loue.

Iago. And I was going to your Lodging, Caffio.

What keepes a weeke away? Seven daies, and Nights?
Eight horse eight hours? And Lones absent howres
More tedious then the Diall, eight fcore times?
Oh weasy reek'ning.

Coffio. Vardon me Bianca:
I have this while with leaden thoughts brende preft,
But I shall in a more continuance
Strike off this fcorce of abience, Sweet Bianca.

Take me this worke out.

Bianca. Oh Caffio, whence came this?
This is some Token from a newer Friend,
To the felft-Abience; now I feel a Caufe:
It's come to this? Well, well.

Coffio. Go too, woman:

Throw your vile gellies in the Diuels teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now,
That this is from some Miftis, some remembrance;
No good tryste Bianca.

Iago. Why, who's it?

Coffio. I know not neither:

I found it in my Chamber,
I like the worke well; Ere it be demanded
(As like enough it will) I would have it copp'd:
Take it, and don't, and trauce me for this time.

Iago. Leave you not Wherefore?

Coffio. I do attend heere on the Generalr,
And thinke it no addition, nor my wish
To have him fee me woman'd.

Iago. Why, I pray you?

Coffio. Not that I loue you not.

Iago. But that you do not loue me.

Iago. Do you bring me on the way a little;
And fry, if I shall fee you faunee at night?

Coffio. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend heere: But I fee you faunee.

Iago. 'Tis very good: I must be circumftance'd.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Iago. Will you thinke to?

Oth. Thanks to, Iago?

Iago. What, an hife private?

Oth. An what shall I do?

Iago. Or to be naked with her Friend in bed,
And loue, or mors, not meaning your harme?

Oth. Naked in bed (Iago) and not meaning harme?
It is hypocrisie against the Diuell:
They that meane veruously, and yet do fo.
The Diuell their veruene temptes, and they tempt Heauen,
Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a venal slip:
But if I give my wife a Handsketch.

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then 'tis hers (my Lord) and being hers,
She may (I thinke) be-low't on any man.

Oth. She is Proceedre of her house too:

May the glue that?

Iago.
1. Enter Othello. His honor is an essence that's not scene,

They have it very off, that have it not.

But for the Handkerchief.

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:

Thou saidst (oh, it comes on my memory,

As doth the Raven o'er the infected house,

Bawling to all) she had my Handkerchief.

Iago. What of that?

Oth. That's as good now.

Iago. What if I had said? had she done you wrong?

Or, heard him say (as Knowes be such abroad,

Whoaung by their own inopportune fault,

Or voluntary dosage of some Miftris,

Convinced or supply'd them cannot chuse

But must mobk.)

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well salfin,

No more then he's vnweigh.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Why, that he did: I know not what he did.

Oth. What? What?

Iago. Lord, Iago.

Oth. With her?

Oth. I ye with her? lye on her? We say lye on her,

When they be lye-her. Lye with her: that's fullsome:

Handkerchief's Confessions: Handkerchief. To conset

And be hang'd. For his labour. First, to be hang'd,

And then to confess: I tremble at nature. Would not heave her selfe in such shadowing passion, without some

Instruct. It is not words that flakles me thus, (pith)

Notes, Eares, and Lippes: it's possible. Confesse that Handkerchief: O durst. Fall in a Trance.

Iago. Wotke on,

My Medecine workes. Thus credulous Foole is caught,

And many worthy, and chaff Dames euen thus.

(All guiltie)mete reproach: what hoa? My Lord?

My Lord, I say: Orbello.

Enter Caffio.

How now Caffio?

Caff. What's the matter?

Iago. My Lord is taken into an Epiftopie,

This his second Fit: he had one yesterday.

Oth. Rub him about the Temples.

Iago. The Exhagere must hate his quiet course:

If not, he foames at mouth: and by and by

Breakes out of fagace madnife. Look, he flutters,

Do, you would have your felde a little while,

He will recover freights: when he is gone,

I would on great occasion, speak with you.

How is it General? Have you not houre your head?

Oth. Dint thou mocke me?

Iago. I mocke you not, by Heaven.

Would you would bear your fortune like a Man.

Oth. A Horrid man's a Monfter, and a Beaf.

Iago. That's man a Beaf then in a populous Citty,

And many a sinnil Monifter.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good Sir, be a man:

Think evey bearded fellow that's but poak'd

May draw with you. There's Millions now alive,

That nightly lye in theirt's wronproper beds,

Which they dare fwearce peculiar. Your cafe is better.

Oh, 'tis the fpghts of hell, the Fiends Arch-mock,

To lop a wanton in a secure Couch;

And to suppole her caft. No, let me know,

And knowing what I am, I know what the fialbe.

Oth. Oh, thou art wife: 'tis certaine.

Iago. Stand you a white apart,

Confine your felfe but in a patient Lif,

While? if you were heere, o're-whelmed with your grief.

A paifion most refulting fuch a man

Caffio came hither. I lifted him away,

And layd good futes upon your Extacie,

But him anon returne: and heere fpeak with me.

The which he promis'd. Do but encaue your felfe,

And make the Fleets, the Gybes, and notable Scornes

That dwell in every Region of his face.

For I will make him tell the Tale anew;

Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when

He hath, and is againe to cope your wife.

I fay, but make his efufere: marry Patience,

Or I shall fay we're all in all in Spretice,

And nothing of a man.

Oth. Do't it, Iago.

Iago. I will be found moft cunning in my Patience:

But (doft thou heare) moft bloody.

Iago. That's not smile,

But yet keepe time in all: will you withdraw?

Now will I question Caffio of Biaua,

A Hufwife that by felling her defires

Buys her felle bred, and Cloath. It is a Creature

That dores on Caffio, (as 'tis the Stumpes plague

To be-gue many, and be be-gueld by one)

He, when he heares of her, cannot refrain

From the excede of Laughere. Heere he comes.

Enter Caffio.

As he shall smile, Orbello shall go mad:

And his vnbook'd leoloue muft confufe

Poore Caffio's finer, geftures, and light behaviours

Quite in the wrong. How do you Lieutenant?

Caff. The worlde, that you give me the addition,

Who e'entuem kills me.

Iago. Play Different well, and you are fure on't.

Now, if this Suiit lay in Biaua/ dover,

How quickly should you speed?

Caff. Alas poore Caffio.

Oth. Look he how he laughe already.

Iago. I never knew woman loue man fo.

Caff. Alas poore Rogue, I thinkinde the loues me.

Oth. Now he denies it fairly: and laughes it out.

Iago. Do you affur?

Oth. Now he importunes him

To tell it, e're he goe too, well fai'd, well fai'd.

Iago. She gites it out, that you shall marry her.

Do you intend it?

Caff. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Do ye triumph, Romaine? do you triumph?

Caff. I marry. What? A coftome sprythee bead,

Some Chaste to my wit, do not think it

So unwholeome. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. So, so, so, so they laugh, that winnes.

Iago. Why the cry goes, that you marry her.

Caff. Sprythee fay true.

Iago. I am a very Villaine elfe.

Oth. Have you cnro'd me? Well, Well.

Caff. This is the Monkeys owne giving out:

Sheis perfwaded I will marry her

Out of her owne loue & flaucery,not out of my prouife.

Oth.
The Tragedie of Othello

Oth. If you are to fond over her iniqiiity: give her patent to offend, for if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chelp her into Meffes: Cuckold me?

Oth. Oh, 'tis foule in her.

Oth. With mine Officers?

Oth. That's foule.

Oth. Get me some poiyon, Iago, this night. He not expostulate with her: shew her body and beaute improve my mind against this night Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poiyon, fling her in her bed. Even the bed fiue hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good.

The lattice of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And, Caflio, let me be your understayer: You shall hear more by midnights.

Enter Lodowiec, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Oth. Excellent good: When I trump't: is that fame?

Iago, I warrant something from Venice, This Lodowiec come, comes from the Duke.

Ser. Our wife's with him.

Oth. With all my heart Sir.

Lod. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice greet you.

Iago. I kill the Instrument of their pleasures.

Des. And what's the news, good cozen Lodowiec?

Iago. I am very glad to let you Signor:

We come to you.

Lod. I thank you: how do's Lieutenant Caflio?

Iago. Lieue Sir.

Def. Cozen, there's faire betweene him, & my Lord,

An vankind breach: but you shall make all well.

O be. Are you turk or turkne?

Def. My Lord.

Oth. This rule you not to do, as you will —

Lod. He did not call, he's but in the paper,

Is there occasion too, my Lord, and Caflio?

Def. A molt unhappy one: I would do much

Tattone them for the hon. I lease to Caflio.

Oth. Fear, and brattertelle.

Iago. My Lord?

Des. Are you so trie?

Def. What is he angry?

Lod. May be the letter mou'd him.

For as I thinke, they do command him home,

Deputing Caflio in his Gouernement.

Def. I trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Oth. My Lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Def. Why sweete Othello?

Oth. Driett.

Def. I have not deferd this.

Oth. My Lord, this would not be beleeued in Venice,

Though I should swears I sawt. Th he very much,

Make her amends: she weeter.

Oth. Oh, shew it me, dwell:

If that the Earth could teeme with woman tears,

Each drop the falls, would prove a Crocodile:

Out of my sight.

Def. I will not stay to offend you.

Lod. I timely obedient Lady:

I do beteach your Lordship call her backe.
Enter Orbella and Amelita.

Orbe. You have seen nothing then?
Amelit. No, I did not hear nothin, nether did falspe.
Orbe. Yet, you have seen a lady and a onether.
Amelit. But then in I saw no joyce: and then I heared, Ech, fylable that breath made up between them.
Orbe. What? Did they never whisper?
Amelit. Neuer my Lord.
Orbe. Nor send you one oth'way?
Amelit. Neuer.
Orbe. To fetch her Fan, her Gloves, her Mask no no?
Amelit. Neuer my Lord. (thing?)
Orbe. That's strange.
Amelit. My Lord) do yow, she is honest.
Lay downe my Soule at frak: if you think other, Remove your thought. It doth abuse your bosome.
If any wretch have put this in your head, Let Heauen requite it with the Serpents turese.

For it the be not honeff, chaff, and true,
There's no man happy. The pureft of their Wives
Is foole as Slander.
Orbe. Bid he come hither: go.
Exit Amelita.
She takes enough: yet she's a pimple Bauld
That cannot say as much. This is a fabulous Whore:
A Cloffe Lock and Key of Villanous Secrets,
And yet the le kneele, and pray: I have seen her do't.

Exit Dafnius and Amelita.

Orbe. My Lord, what is your will?
Orbe. Pray you Chucks come hither.
Def. What is your pleasure?
Orbe. Let me fee your eyes looke in my face.
Def. What horrible Faeitie's this?
Orbe. Some of your Function Miltris:
Leave Proceranes alone, and thu the doores:
Cough or cry benv, if any bold come:
Your Mystery, your Mystery: May dispatch, Exit Amelita.
Def. Upon my kneel, what doth your speech import?
I understand a Fury in your words.
Def. Why? What art thou?
Def. Your wife my Lord: your true and loyall wife.
Orbe. Come fware it: by thy life, faft, being like one of these, the dullis themselfs should fear to ceaze there. Therefore be doubly damnd's: fware thou art hoff.
Def. Heauen doth truely know it.
Orbe, Heauen truely knowes, that thou art safe, as hel.
Def. To whom my Lord?
With whom? How am I safe?
Orbe. Ah Desfamay, away, away, away.
Def. Alas the heavy day: why do you wepe?
Am I the motive of these tears my Lord?
It happily you my Father do fware,
An Instrument of this your calling backe,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have left him,
I have left him too.
Orbe. Had pleasa'd Heauen,
To try me with Affiction, bad they rain'd
All kind of Sore, and Shames on my bare-head:
Stee'd me in pouertie to the very eppes.
Guin to Captuittie, me, and my vметt hopes,
I shold have found in some place of my Soule
A drop of patience. But also, to make me
The fixed Figure for the time of Scoone,
To point his bow, and moving finger as.
Yet could I beare that too well, very well:
But there where I have garned vp my heart,
Where either I must be, or beare to liffe,
The Fontaine from the which my current runnes,
Or else dries vp: to be dicsarded thence,
Or keepe it as a Cettene, for soule Tended
To knot and gender in. Turne thy complusion there:
Patience, thou young, and Reife-dip'd Cherubin,
I heere looke grims as hell.
Def. I hope my Noble Lord effectes me honest.
Orbe. Oh Las Sommer Fyes are in the Snumbles,
That quicken even with blowing, Oh thou wead:
Who art so lonely faire, and smell it so fweete,
That the Sowne akes at tise,
Would thou had it neuer bin borne.
Def. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?
Orbe. Was this faire Paper? This most goodly Booke
Made to write Whore vpone? What committed,
The Tragedie of Othello

Commit ? Oh, thou publicke Commoner, I should make very Forges of my chekkes, That would to Cymbals burne vp Modefle, Did I but speake thy deedes. What committed ?

Heauen floppes the Nofe at it, and the Moone winkes : The bady winde that kiffes us all metes, Is huff'd within the hollow Myne of Earth And will not heat'. What committed ?

Def. By Heauen you do me wrong. Oth. Are not you a Strumpet? Def. No, as I am a Carfian.

If you prefere this vefell for my Lord, From any other foule volantfull touch Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a Whore? Def. No, as I shall be faid. Oth. Its poftible ?

Def. Oh Heauen forgive vs. Oth. I cry you mercy then.

I tooke you for that cunning Whore of Venice, That married with Othello. You Mafris, Enter Emilia.

That hauie the office oppofite to Saint Peter, And keeps the gate of hell. You, you : I you. We hauie done out of your father's money for your paines: If you turne the key, and keepe our countaie, Exit. Emilia. As I do this Gentleman conceiue ?

How do you Madam ? how do you my good Lady? Def. Faith, half a fleepe.

Emilies. Good Madam, What's the matter with my Lord ?

Def. With who ?

Emilies. Why with my Lord Madam ?

Def. Who is thy Lord ?

Emilies. He that is yours, sweet Lady. Def. I haue none : do not talke to me Emilies, I cannot wepe nor anfweres haue I none, But what should go by water. Prythee to night, Lay on my beddy wedding ftreets,remember, And call thy husband hither.

Emilies. Here's a change indeed. Exit. Def. Tis meete I should be vs'd fo : very meete. How haue I bin behau'd, that he might flake The smallft opinion on my leafe kniue vie ?

Enter Iago, and Emilia. Iago. What is your pleasure Madam ? How do you ?

Def. I cannot tell: thofe that do teach yong Babes Do it with gentle means, and eafe tasks. He might have chid me fo : for in good faith I am a Child to chiding.

Iago. What is the matter Lady ?

Emilies. Alas (Iago) my Lord hath to be who'd her, Thrownfuch diuipagh, and heavy teares upon her That true heart cannot bare it.

Def. Am I that name Iago ?

Iago. What name (fair Lady) ?

Def. Such as the fayd my Lord did fay I was.

Emilies. He call'd her whose a Beggar in his drinke : Could not haue laid fuch teares upon his falier.

Iago. Why did he fo ?

Def. I do not know : I am sure I am none fuch.

Iago. Do not wepe, do not wepe: alas the day.

Emilies. Hath the forfooke fo many Noble Matches? Her Father? And her Country? And her Friends ?

To be call'd Whore? Would it not make one wepe ?

Def. It is my wretched Fortune. Iago. Befrew him not:

How comes this Trickle upon him?

Def. Nay, Heauen doth know.

AEMILIES. I will be hang'd, if some eremium Villaine, Some base and infinuation Rogue, Some cogging, coozening Slave, to get some Office, Hauie not deus'd this Slander : I will be hang'd Steele. Iago. Pie, there is no fuch man: it is impoffible, Def. If any fuch there be, Heauen pardon him.

Emilies. A halter pardon him?

And hell gnaw his bones.

Why should he call her Whore ?

Who keepes her companie ?

What Place ? What Time ?

What Forme? What likelyhood ?

The Moore's abus'd by some moft villainous Knawe, Some base notorious Knawe, some fcamy Fellow.

Oh Heauens, that fuch companions thoud't vnfoild, And put in every honest hand a whip

To lath the Rafeails naked through the world,

Even from the East to th'Welt.

Iago. Speak within doore.

Oh to pve vp thefome fuch Squier he was That turn'd your wit to the feamy-fide without.

And made you to fufpfe我对 with other Moore.

Iago. You are a Poole : go too.

Def. Alas Iago, What fhall I do to win my Lord againe ?

Good Friend, go to him : for by this light of Heaven, I know not how I lof't him. Here I kneele : If I am wille to gainf't his Love,

Either in difcourse of thought, or auctual deed, Or that mine Eyes, mine Eares, or any Sence

Delighted them; or any other Forme.

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,

And ever will,(thоugh he do shake me off

To begerly duencouer) Looke him direly,

Comfort forthwaere me. Vnder mined may do much,

And vnder mined may defeat my life,

If never say my Love. I cannot say Whore,

I do's abhorre me now : I fpeak the word,

To do the Act, that might the addition exreme,

Or that the worlds Maffe of Vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you be content : 'tis but his humour.

The buftifles of the State do's him offence.

Enter Rodrigo.

How now Rodrigo ?

Rod. I do not finde

That thoue fliall忉ily with me.

Iago. What in the contrarie ?

Rod. Enter Rodrigo.

Every day thou dafts me with some deuife

Iago, and rathcr, as it semes to me now, keep't from me all commencement, then fupplie me with the leaft advantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perfwade'd to put vp in peace, what already I have foofily fuffered.

Iago. Will you hear me Rodrigo ?

Rod. 1
the Moor of Venice.

And hell gnaw his bones,—
Performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Roderigo. With naught but truth: I have wafted my felse out of my meane. The levell you have from me to delute Desdemona, would holle have corrupted a Vortisit. You have told me the hast receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sodane respect, and acquaintance, but I finde none.

Iago. Well go: very well.

Rodrigo. Very well go: I cannot go too, (man) nor tis not very well. Nay I think it is fecury: and begin to find my felle fop in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rodrigo. Tis not very well: I will make my felle knowne to Desdemona. If she will returne me my levell, I will gue over my Sitt, and repent my unlawful follynation. Hoot, affure your selfe, I will lecke satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have faith now.

Rodrigo. I: and found nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee: and euen from this instante do build on thee a better opinion then ever before: give me thy hand Rodrigo. Thou hast taken against me a most iniquit emotion: but yet I protest I have dealt most directly in thy Affaire.

Rodrigo. It hath not appeard.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeard: and your sufpiration is not without wit and judgement. But Rodrigo, if thou haft that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to belewe now then ever (I meane purpose, Courage, and Valour) this night shew it, if then the next night following enow not Desdemona, take me from this world with Treacherys to TruceEngineers for my life.

Rodrigo. Well: what is it? Is it within, reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is effectfull Commination come from Venice to depute Coffin in Othello's place.

Rodrigo. Is that true? Why then Othello and Desdemona returne againe to Venice.

Iago. Oft nights my men goe into Mauritania and taketh away with him the faire Desdemona, vntill his abode be lingred heere by some accidents. Where in one can so determine, as the removing of Coffin.

Rodrigo. How do you mean removing him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place, knockes on the grates of his prifon, I will be neere to second your Attempes, and the shall fall betweene vs, Come, stand not so smaad as it, but go along with me: I will shew you such a necesarie in this deauen, that you shall finde your felle bound to put it on him. It is now high fupper time: and the night groves to wait, About it.

Rodrigo. I will have further reason for this, Iago. And you shall finde satisfi'd.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you Sir, trouble your selfe no further.

Oth. Oh pardon me: I will doe me good to walk.

Lodovico. Madam, good night: I humbly thank you.

Lady Emilia. Def. Your Honour is most welcome.

Othello. Get you to bed on this instant, I will be return'd forthwith; deuide your Attempes there: look'd be done.

Def. I will my Lord.

Emilia. How goes it now? He lookes sorer then he did.

Def. He lives he will returne contentment, And hath commanded me to go to bed, And bid me to deuide you.

Emilia. Deuide me.

Def. It was his bidding: therefore good Emilia, Give me my nightly wearing and attire.

We must not now displease him.

Emilia. I, would you had never seen him.

Def. So would not I, my love doth appease him, That even his flhuborne eye doth check, his browes, (Prythee w-p win with true grace and fame)

Emilia. I have, laid those Sheetes you bad me on the bed.

Def. All's one good Father, how forthi are our minds?

If I do die before, pryshee throw'd me

In one of these same Sheetes.

Emilia. Come, come: you talk,

Def. My Mother had a Maid call'd Bobbrowe, She was in love: and he by loud's proud a went, And durst not heke her. She had a Song of Willschagh, An old thing'twas; but it expect'd her Fortune, And she dy'd finging it: That song to night, Will not go from my mind: I have much to do, But to go hang my head all at one fierce

And sing it like poore Bobbrowe: pryshee dispatch.

Emilia. Shall I follow your Night's govene?

Def. No, vs pin me here,

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emilia. A very handome man.

Def. He speaks well,

Emilia. I know a Lady in Venice would have walk'd barefoot to Palethone for a touch of his neither lip.

Def. The poore wretched one being by a Scaremore tree, Sing a greene Willschagh,

Her hand on her bosome her head on her knee,

Sing Willschagh, Willschagh, Willschagh,

The freshe Streamer ran by her, and unweares her moans,

Sing'g Willschagh, etc.

Her fair times fell from her, and frendes the same,

Sing Willschagh, etc.

(ly by there)

Sing Willschagh, Willschagh, Willschagh,

If they be high thee: he come soon

Sing all a greene Willschagh must be my Garbek,

Let no body blame him, his fervor I approve.

(Nay that's not next, Ha!ke, who's that knocks?)

Emilia. It's the wind.

Def. I call dny Lone wife Lone: but what said he then?

Sing Willschagh, etc.

If I court my woman, you should touch with none men.

The Tragedie of Othello

So get thee gone, good night; mine eyes do itch:
Dost that base bede weeping?

Amil. This nighty here, not there.

Def. I have heard it said fo, O these Men, these men!
Do it thou in confidence thinke(tell me Amilis)
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In the most grosse kindes?

Amil. There be some such, no question.

Def. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Amil. Why, would not you?

Def. No by this Heavenly light.

Amil. Nor I neither, by this Heavenly light:
I might do't as well I chuse.

Def. Wouldst thou then do such a deed for all the world?

Amil. The world's a huge thing:
It is a great price, for a small vive.

Def. Intoth thinke thou wouldst not.

Amil. Why, why, the wrong is but a wrong in't world;
And having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Def. I do not thinke there is any such woman.

Amil. Yet, a dozen; and as many to'th'piantage, as would fence the world they plaid for.

But I do thinke it is their Husbands faults
If Wives do fall (Say, that they flacke their duties,
And poure our Treasures into foraign laps;
Throwing reftaint upon vs: Or say they flrike vs,
Or scan't our former having in delight)

Why we have gaules: and though we have some Grace,
Yet hauie we some Reuenge. Let Husbands know,
Their wives have feene like them: They fee, and smell,
And haue their Palats both for sweet, and fowre,
As Husbands hauie. What is it that they do,
When they change vs for others? Is it Spottes
I thinke it is: and doth Affection breed in?
I think it doth. Is't Frauly that thus eres?
It is too. And hauie not we Affections?
Defires for Sport? and Frauly, as men hauie?
Then let them vs vs well: else let them know,
The illes we do, their illes intrud us vs.

Def. Good night, good night:
Hear me fuch, fice lond,
Not to picke bad, from bad, but by bad, mend. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Scene Prima.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here,早点 beside this Barke,
Straight will he come:
Weare thy good Spier bare, and put it home:
Quickie, quicke, feate nothing; I be at thy Elbow,
It may be, or it mayes vs, thinke on that,
And fex moller fate thy Resolution.
And cannot make away.

Iago. Oh treacherous Villains:

What are you there? Come in, and give some help.

Roderigo. Oh help me there.

Cassio. That's one of them.

Iago. Oh mad rous'd Slave! O Villains!

Roderigo. O damn'd Iago! O infamous Doggie:

Iago. Will men be bloody Thieves?

Where be these bloody Thieves?

How silent is this Towne? Has, mother, mother.

What may you be? Are you of good, or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove vs, praise vs.

Iago. Signior Lodovico.

Lod. He Sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy: here's Cassio hurt by Villains.

Othello. Cassio?

Iago. How's his Brother?

Cassio. My Legge is cut in two.

Iago. Marry beaten for God:

Light Gentleman, Ile bin't it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter here? Who is't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is't that cry'd?

Iago. Oh my deere Cassio.

My sweet Cassio: Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.

Iago. O notable Strumpet. Cassio, may you suf'pet?

Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cassio. No.

Gra. I am sorry to finde you thus;

I have beene to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a Garter. So—- Oh for a Chair

To bear him easely hence.

Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suf'pet this Truth

To be a party in this Injurie.

Patientence awhile, good Cassio. Come, come;

Lend me a Light: I know we this face, or no;

Alas my Friend, and my deere Countryman

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he Sir: Did you know him?

Gra. Know him? I.

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentle pardon;

These bloody accidents must excuse my Manners,

That I neglected you.

Gra. I am glad so fee you.

Gra. Roderigo?

Iago. He, lie, 'tis he:

Oh that's well said, the Chaire.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence,

He fetch the General's Surgeon. For you Mr. Miftis,

Save you your labour. He that lies flame here (Cassio)

Was my deere Friend. What malice was between you?

Cassio. None in the world: nor do I know the man?

Iago. What look ye pale? Oh bear him o'th'Ayre

Stay you good Gentlemen. Look ye pale, Miftis?

Do you perceive the gauinette of her eye?

Nay, if you fear, we shall bear more anon.

But bid her well: I pray you looke upon her;

Do you see Gentlemen? Nay, guiltinesse will speake

Though tongues were out of use.

Emili. Alas, what is the matter?

What is the matter, Husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here in bet on the darke

By Roderigo, and Fellowes that are lay'd:

He's bloo'd fluid, and Rodrigo quite dead.

Emili. Alas good Gentleman: alas good Cassio.

Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Psyche Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he slept to night.

What, do you take at that?

Bian. He sips at my houle, but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O this he I charge you go with me.

Emili. Oh, he sips on thee Strumpet.

Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honest,

As you that thus abuse me.

Emili. As it is Ee upon thee.

Iago. Kinde Gentlemen:

Let's go see poor Cassio dead.

Come Mistris, you must tell's another Tale.

Emilia, run you to the Citadell,

And tell my Lord: Pardone of all this, happ'd

Will you go on store? This is the night

That either makes me, or forsoothes me quiet.

Exeunt

Scene Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desdemona in her bed.

Othello. 'Tis the Caifc, it is the Caifc (my Soule)

Let me not name it to you, you chaste Starres,

It is the Caifc. Yet Ie not shed her blood,

Nor fear that whiter skin of hers, then Snow,

And smooth as Monumental Alabaster:

Yet shee must dye, elle shee'll betray more men:

Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:

If I quench thee, thou flaming Minifter,

I can againe thy former light restore,

Should I repent me. But once put out thy Light,

Thou cur'ning inacting of not meeting Nature,

I know not where is that Promethea waist

That can thy Light re-Lume.

When I have pluck'd thy Rohe,

I cannot give it vital growth againe,

It needs must wither. Hee smelt thee on the Tree.

Oh Bundy breath, that doth almost pervert

Lustre to break her Sword. One more, one more:

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,

And lose thee after. One more, and that's the last,

So sweet, was he so fastall. I must wepe,

But they are cruelly Tares: This sorrow's heavenly,

It strike, where it doth love. She weakes.

Desdemona. Who's there? Othello?

Othello. Desdemona.

Desdemona. Who's there?

Othello. Will you come to bed, my Lord?

Othello. Have you prair'd to night, Desdemona?

Desdemona. I am sorry.

Othello. If you behinke your selfe of any Crime

Vnreconcil'd as yet to Heauen, and Grace,

Solicite for it straight.

Desdemona. Alacke, my Lord,

What may you more by that?

Othello. Well, do it, and be breew, I will walke by:

I would not kill thy unparesed Spirit,

No, Heauen for-fend! I would not kill thy Soule.

Desdemona. Take you of killing?

Othello. I, I do.

Desdemona. Then Heauen have mercy on me.
My Lord, my Lord.

Oth. What noise is this? Not death, nor yet quite dead?
I am that cruel, am yet mercifull,
I would not have thee linger in thy paine.
So, so.

Emil.within. What ho? my Lord, my Lord?
Oth. Who's there?

Emil. Oh good my Lord, I would speake to word with you,
Oth. Yes! 'Tis 'Emilis: by and by. She's dead,
'Tis like she comes to speake of Cassio's death:
The noise was high. Hah, no more musing?
Still as the Graue. Shall she come in? Ver' good?
I think she spares againe. No, what's bett to do?
If she come in, these faire speake to my wife:
My wife, my wife: what wife? I have no wife.
Oh inexpressible! Oh heavy hourse!
Me thinkes, it should be now a huge Eclipse!
Of Sunne, and Moone; and that affrighted Globe
Did yawne at Alteration.

Emil. I do beseech you
That I may speake with you. Oh good my Lord,
Oth. I had forgot thee: rob comes 'Emilis.
Soft, by and by, let me the Curtaine draw,
Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

Enter 'Emilis.

Emil. Oh my good Lord, yonders foule Murthers done.
Oth. What now?

Emil. But now, my Lord.
Oth. It is the very error of the Moone,
She comes more neerer Earth then she was wont,
And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my Lord, hath kill'd
A young Venetian, call'd Rodrigo.
Oth. Rodrigo kill'd? and Cassio kill'd?

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd,
Oth. Nor Cassio kill'd? Then Murther's out of tune,
And sweete Revenge grows white.

Emil. Of falsly, falsly murder'd.

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?
Oth. That? What?

Emil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice.
Help, helpe hoa, helpe, Oh Ladi speake againe,
Sweete Dofamens, oh sweete Mifris, speake.

Emil. A guildliffe death, I dye.

Emil. Oh who hath done this deed?

Emil. No body: I my selfe, farewell:
Commend me to my kinde Lord: oh farewell.

Oth. Why, how should she be murdered?

Emil. Alas! who knows?
Oth. You heare her say but selfe, it was not I.

Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She's like a Liar gone to burning hell,

Was I that kill'd her.

Emil. On the more Angell fife, and you the blacker Diuell.

Oth. She turn'd to fally: and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost thee help her, and thou art a diuell.
Oth. She was falle as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to speake
That she was falle. Oh fhe was heavenly true.

Oth. Cassio did top her: Ask thy husband else.
O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell:
But that I did proceed upon iust grounds
To this extremity. Thy Husband knew it all.
Em. Villany, villany; villany:
I think you s'ee, I think: I s'ee: O Villany:
I thought so then: I'll kill my felte for greefe.
O villany! villany!

Iago. What, are you mad?
I charge you get you home.
Em. Good Gentleman, let me have leave to speake:
'Tis proper I obey him; but not now:
Peachance Iago, I will not goe home.

Oth. Oh, oh, oh.
Em. Nay, lay thee downe and roare:
For thou haft kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That e'er did lift vp eye.

Oth. Oh, she was baw'de;
I dare did know you Violante, there lies your Neece,
Who breath (indeed) these hands have newly stopp'd:
I know this acte fhewes hurrible and grim.

Gra. Poore Desdem:
I am glad my Father's dead,
Thy Macht was mortall to him: and pure greefe
Shall to his thred turne in woe: Did he live now,
This fight would make him do a desperate tyme:
Yes, cuft his breaste: Angell from his hide,
And fall to Reprobcation.

Oth. 'Tis pitifull: but yet Iago knows
That she with Coffee, hath the Acte of fhame
A tround thousand times committed. Coffee confett it,
And she did granlfe his amorous works:
With that reconnize and plaque of Love
Which firft gau her: I gue in his band:
It was a Handkerchief, an Antient Token
My Father gave my Mother.
Em. On Heaven! oh heavenly Powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Em. 'Twill out, 'twill out, I peace?
No, I will speake a liberall as the North:
Let Heaven, and Men, and Duels, let them all:
All, all, eir shame against me, yet Ile speake.

Iago. Be wife, and get you home.
Em. I will not,
Gra. Fye, your Sword upon a Woman.
Em. Oh thou dull Moore,
That Handkerchief thou speakeft of
Founc'd by Fortune, and did gue my Husband:
For often, with a felane carnifhife,
(More then indeed belong'd to such a Trifle)
He begg'd of me, to fleale.'

Iago. Villanous Whore.
- Em. She gie t: Coffee No, alas I found it,
And I did gue my Husband.
Iago. Fie, fie,

Em. By Heaven I do not, I do not Gentlemen:
Obumbr'd with Coxcombe, what shoule such a Foolie
Do with fo good a wife?

Oth. Are there no stones in Heaven,
But what furies for the Thunder?

Pecious Villane.

Gra. The Woman fallest,
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.
Em. I, I, oh lay me by my Misfris side,
Gra. Hee's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious Villain: take you this weapon
Which I haue recover'd from the Moore:
Come guard the doore without, let him not paffe,
But kill him rather. Hee after that fame villain,
For 'tis a damned Slave.
Oth. I am not valiant neither: But even Pamine whisper get my Sword, But why should Honor out-live Honesty? Let it go all.

Emin. What did thy Song sound Lady? Hearken, canst thou hear me? I will play the Swan, And dye in Musicks: Willing, willing, willing. Moore, she was chaste! She should be, cruel! Moore, So come my Soule to light, and Spake true: So speaking as I think, alas, I dye.

Oth. I have another weapon in this Chamber, It was a Sword of Spaine, the Ice brookes temper: Oh here it is: Vakie! I must come forth. Gris. If thou attemptst, it will cut thee deepe. Thou hast no weapon, and perfume mull safer. Oth. Look e in upon me then, and Spake with me, Or na ked as I am? I will assault thee.

Gris. What is the matter? Othel. Behold, I have a weapon: A better never did it selfe Suffolk. Von a Soldiers Thigh, I haue seene the day, That with this little Arme, and this good Sword, I have made my way through more impediments Than any weary times does your flap? But (oh waske boat) Who can controll his Fate? This not so now. Be not affraid, though you do see me weapon'd: Hereis is my Journeys end, hereis but my butt And very Sea-marke of my vtmost Saile. Do you go backe dlilmaid? This is soott fear: Man but a Ruth against Othelos breeth, And he retires. Where should Othello go? Now how doft thou looke now? Oh All, Sturr'd Oke, Pale as thy Smoake: when we shall merte at compass, This looke of thine will hurle my Soule from Heauen, And Friends will match at it. Cold, cold, my Girle! Even like thy Chastity. O curfcd, curst Slaine! Whip me ye Diuels, From the possession of this Heauenly fight: Blow me about in winds, cast me in Sulphure, Wash me in steep-downe gulles of Liquid fire. Oh Deftecmen! dead Deftecmen: dead. Oh, oh!

Enter Lodovice, Caffio, Montano, and Iago, with Officers.

Lod. Where is this rash, and most unfortunate man? Oth. That's he that was Othello; heere I am. Lod. Where is that Viper? Bring the Villains forth. Oth. Look downe towards his feet; but that's a Fable, If that thou be'st a Diuell, I cannot kill thee. Lod. Wrench his Sword from him. Iago. I blest Sir, but not kill'd. Othel. I am not forsy neither, I'll haue thee lye: For in my fenye, 'tis hoppiness to die. Lod. Oh thou Othello, that was once so good, I'lme in the prattife of a curst Slaine, What shall be failed to thee. Oth. Why any thing? An honourable Murderer, if you will: For nought I did in hate, but all in Honour. Lod. This wretched part confest his Villany: Did you and he confent in Caffio's death. Oth. 1. Caf. Deere General, I never gaus yet eafe. Oth. I do believe it, and take your pardon: Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Diuell,

Why he hath thus enfla'd my Soule and Body.

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know: From this time forth, I never will speake word. Lod. What? not to speake?

Gris. Torments will ope your lips. Oth. Well, thou dost beft. Lod. Sir, You shall understand what hath befallen, (Which, as I think, you knowe) here is a Letter Found in the pocket of the thaine Roderigo, And here another, the one of them imports The death of Caffio, to be undertooke

By Roderigo. Oth. O Villainne! Caffio. Moot Heathenish, and most groffe. Lod. Now, here's another discontenter paper Found in his pocket too: and that it femeas Roderigo mean't thence sent this damned villainne: But that (beelke) Iago in the interim Came in, and staff'd him.

Oth. Oh thou presumtious Catiff: How came you (Caffio) by that Handkerchief That was my wives?

Caffio. I found it in my Chamber: And he himselfe confess it but euen now, That there he drpt it for a special purpose, Which wrought to his defire.

Othel. O Fools,foole,foole! Caffio. There is besides, in Roderigo's Letter, How he vpbrides Iago, that he made him Braue me vpon the Watch: whereon it came That I was eait: and euen but now he spake (After long, feeming dead) Iago hurt him, Iago lest him on.

Lod. You must forsake this roome, and goe with vs: Your Power, and your Command is taken off, And Caffio rules in Cyprus. For this Slaue, If there be any cumping Cruelie, That can torment him much, and hold him long, It shall be his. You shall close Prisone ref, Till that the Nature of your fault be knowne To the Venetian State. Come, bring away. Oth. Soft you; a word o two before you goe: I have done the State some service, and they know: No more of that. I pray you in your Letters, When you spill theses vnlaikly deeds relate, Speake of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate, Nor let downe ought in malice. Then mutt you speake, Of one that could not widely, but too well: Ofone, not easilly Laxious, but being wrought, Perplexed in the extreme: Of one, whose hand (Like the blis fuldon) threw a Pearle away Riche then all his Tribe; Of one, whose subdu'd Eyes, Albeit vn-yed to the melting moode, Drops tears as fast as the Arabian Trees Their Medicinable gymnne. Set you downe this: And say besides, that in Aleppo once, Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turke Beate a Venetian, and trad'ed the State, I tooke by th'throat the circumcised Dogge, And iomace him, thus.

Lod. Oh bloody period.

Iago. All that is spoke, is mar't'd.

Lod. I kniפט, ere I kill'd thee: No way but this, Killing my felle, to dye upon a kisse.

Dy'd. Caffio.

THE TRAGEDY OF
Anthonie, and Cleopatra.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

excite.

Philo.

Nay, but this dottage of our Generals
One-Bowes the measure; those his goodly eyes
That o'the Files and Musters of the 'Warre,
Haue glo'd with plased Mars:
Now bend, bow, turne
The Office and Devotion of their view
Vpon a Famine Prince. His Captains heart,
Which in the stouffers of great Fights hath buff
The Buckles on his breef, reneges all temper,
And is become the Bellowes and the Fan
To coote a Gypset Luff.

Flourish. Enter Anthony, Cleopatra her Ladies, the Trams with Elmesz sounding her.

Look where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
(The triple Pillar of the world) transform'd
Into a Strumpet Poole. Behold and see.
Cle. It be Lour indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's beggary in the loue that can be reckon'd
Cle. Ile let a boome how farre to be belou'd.
Ant. Thee must thoue needes finde out new Heauen,
new Earth,

Enter a Messenger.

Msf. News from my good Lord from Rome.
Ant. Gratien me, the Summe,
Cle. Nay hear them Anthony.

Cleopatras perseverance is angry: Or who knows,
If the fierce-bearded Caesar have not tent
His pow'rfull Mandate to you: Do this, or this;
Take in that Kingdome, and Infranchifie that
Perform't, or cife we danna thee.
Ant. How, my Lord?
Cle. Prehactice Nay, and moile like:
You must not stay here longer, your dismission
Is com from Cesar, therfore here is Anthony
Where's Felinus Processor? (Cesar I would say) both?
Call in the Messengers: As I am Egypt's Queene,
Thou blindl eff Anthony, and that blood of thine
Is Cesar homages elle to thy cheeke paies frame,
When blindl eff'd Felinus scolda, The Messengers.
Ant. Let Rome in Tyber mels, and the wide Arch
Of the raing'd Empire fall: Here is my space,
Kingdoms are clay: Our dungie earth alike

Feeds Beast as Man; the Noblenesse of life
Is to do thus: when such a mutual paire,
And such a raine can dore', in which I binde
One paine of punishment, the world so werte
We stand vp Petrelffe.

Cle. Excellent fallhood:
Why did he marry Felina, and not love her?
Cle. Leave the Foolc I am not. Anthony will be himselfe.
Ant. But his'd by Cleopatra.

Now for the love of Lour, and her fate hauens,
Let's not confound the time with Conters lust.
Till he's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleaure now. What sport to night?
Cle. Hear the Ambassadors.

Ant. Eye wrangling Quene:
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh.
To weepes: who every passion fully flames.
To make it selle (in Thee)jlare, and admir'd.
No Messengers but thine, and all alone, to night.
We'l wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queene,
Lastnight you did defait: Speake not to vs.

Exit with the Trams.

Dem. Is Cesar with Anthony priz'd to flight?
Philo. Sir sometime when he is not Anthony,
He comes too short of that great Property
Which fil should go with Anthony.

Dem. I am full forry, that he approves the common
Lyar who thus speakes of him at Rome; but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Reft you happy.

Exit.

Enter Enterabbus, Lampadius, Spacheiyr, Rannius, Lucilius,
Chatsham, Ivar, Mundian the Eunuch, and Alexus.

Char. L Alexus, sweet Alexus, most any thing Alexus, almost most absolute Alexus, where's the Soothayer that you prast't so to't? Quene? Oh that I knewe this Husband, which you say, must change his Hones with Garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer.
Sooth. Your will?
Char. Is this the Man? Is't you that know things?
Sooth. In Natures infinete bookes of Secrecie, a little I can read.

Alex. Shew him your hand.
Emb. Bring in the Banker quickly: Wine enough,

Cleop.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleopatra's health to drink.
Char. Good sir, give me good Fortune.
South. I shall make not, but foresee.
Char. Pray then, foresee me one.
South. You shall by farre fairer then you are.
Char. He means in flesh.
Ives. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid.
Akex. Vex not his presence, be attentive.
Char. Halt.
South. You shall be more beloued, then beloued.
Char. I had rather heate my Lister with drinking.
Alex. Nay, heare him.
Char. Good now fome excellent Fortune: Let mee be married to three Kings in a forenoon, and Widdlow them all: Let me have a Childe at fifty, to whom Hered of Jewry may do Homage. Find me to marrie me with Olima and Caesar, and companion me with my Miftres.
South. You shall owe the Lady whom you serue.
Char. Oh excellent, I owe long life better then Figs.
South. You have curses and proued a safer former fortune, then that which is to approach.
Char. Then behike my Children oul:s I have no names: Pr’ythee how many Boyes and Wunches mufl: I have, the ytter of your wifhes had a wombo, & fore-tell every wish, a Million.
Char. Our Foolie, I forgue thee for a Witch.
Alex. You think none but your fweets are prouit to your wifhes.
Char. Nay come, tell Ives here.
Alex. We’l know all our Fortunes.
South. Mine, and moft of our Fortunes to night, shall be drunke to bed.
Ives. There’s a Palme prefages Chaliftiy, if nothing els.
Char. Ene as the o’er-flowing Nylus prefages Fa-mine.
Ives. Go you wilde Bedfellow you cannot Soothsay.
Char. Nay, if an oyl Palme been not a fruitfull Prog-nostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Pr’ythee tell her but a worke day Fortune.
South. Your Fortunes are alike.
Ives. But how, but how, give me particulars.
South. I have faid.
Ives. Am I not an inch of Fortune better then thee?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of Fortune better then I where would you choose it.
Ives. Not in my Husband’s nufe.
Char. Our worser thoughts Heaven mend.
Alexis. Come, his Fortune, his Fortune.
Ives. Let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I befooke thee, and let her dye too, and give him a worfe, and let worfe follow worfe, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his graue, fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Isis hear me this Prayer, though thou denie me a matter of more weight: good Isis I befooke thee.
Ives. Amen, I deere Goddesse, heare that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to fee a handfome man loofe Wh’d, so is it a deadly sorrow, to behold a foule Knaue vncool’d: Therefore deere Isis keep decorum, and Fortune him accordingly.
Char. Amen.
Alex. Lo now, if they lay in ther hands to make mee a Cuckold, they would make themselves Whores, but they’d dlo’t.

Enter Cleopatra.

Emph, Hulfe, here comes Anthony.

Char. Not he, the Queene.
Cleo. Save you, my Lord.
Emph. No Lady.
Cleo. Was he not here?
Char. No Madam.
Cleo. He was dispon’d in mirch, but on the sodaine
A Romane thought hath throoke him.
Emph. Madam.
Cleo. Seeke him, and bring him hither: what’s Alexia?
Alex. Here at your fervice.
My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony, with a Messenger.

Cleo. We will not looke upon him:

Exit Messenger.

Mes. Fulnath thy Wife,
First came into the Field.
Ant. Against my Brother Lucius?
Mes. I: but none that Ware had end;
And the times shere
Made friends of them, joyning their force ‘gainst Caesar’
Whole better issue in the warre from Italy,
Vpon the first encounter draw them.
Ant. Well, what worft.
Mes. The Nature of bad newes infets the Teller,
Ant. When it concerne the Fool or Coward: On.
Things that are past, are done, with me. ’Tis thus;
Who tells me true, though in his Tale lye death,
I hear him as he flatter’d.
Mes. Let us (this is flite newes)
Hath with his Parthian Force
Extended Afia: from Ephrathis his conquering
Banne slooke, from Syria to Lydia,
And to Ionis, whilst—
Ant. Anthony thou wouldst fly.
Mes. Oh my Lord.
Ant. Speake to me home,
Mince not the gen’rall tongue, name
Cleopatra as the he is call’d in Rome:
Rale thou in Fulnath’s phrase, and taunt my faults
With such full Licente, as both Truth and Malice
Have power to veters. Oh then we bring forth weeds,
When our quicke winde’s lye still, and our illes told vs
Is as our eating: fare thee well awhile.
Mes. At your Noble pleasure.
Exit Messenger.

Enter another Messenger.

Ant. From Scio how the newes? Speake there.
1. Mes. The man from Scio,
Is there such an one?
2. Mes. He flyes upon your will,
Ant. Let him appear:
These strong Egyptian Petteres I must break,
Or loose my selfe in dosage.

Enter another Messenger with a Letter.

What are you?
3. Mes. Fulnath thy wife is dead.
Ant. Where dyed she.
Mes. In Scio, her length of sickness.
With what elfe more ferious,
Immorteth thee to know, this beares.
Ant. Forbear me.
There’s a great Spirit gone, thus did I desire it:
What our contemps doth often lust from vs,

I. ii. 14—132.

The Tragedie of

We wish it ours anigne. The present pleasure,
By resolution lowering, does become
The opposite of it selfe: the's good being gon,
The hande could plucke her backe, that shou'd her on.
I must from this enchanting Queene brake off,
Ten thousand harms, more then the ill I know
My idlenesse doth now engage.

Enter Eubalus.

How now Eubalus?

Emo. What's your pleasure, Sir?

Amb. I must with haste from hence.

Emo. Why then we will all our Women, We see how mortal an unkindnesse is to them, if suffer our de-pariture, cleath the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Emo. Under a compliing occasion, let women die,
It were pritt, to call them away for nothing, though betweene the want a great cause, they should be esteem nothing. Cleopatra catching but the least noyle of this, dies instantly: I have seen her dyce twenty times upon faster poorer moment: I do think there is matter withal, which commeth frome looking a cite upon her, the bath such a certainty in dying.

Ant. She is a cunning past masst thought.

Emo. AtikeSirno, her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure Love. We cannot call her winds and waters, fitches and teares: They are greater harmes and Tempells then Almanackes can report. This cannot be cunning in her, it is to, she makes a flower of Raine
as well as flone.

Ant. Would had none sette her.

Emo. Ob, Sir, you had then left were a wonderfull piece of worke, which not to have bene bled without,
would have discredited your Trauze.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Emo. Sir.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Emo. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Emo. Why, for, give the Gods a thankfull Sacrifice:
when it pleaseth them. Desires to take the wife of a man from him, sheeves to make the storrs of the earth comf forting therein: that when older Robes are used with out, there are numberes to make new. If there were no more Women but you, then had you proceeded in, and the cafe to be lampoon: This greelle is crowned with Conflu
ation, your old Smurke is brings forth a New Peticoate, and indeed the sexes was in Ontario, that should water its sorrow.

Ant. The butchery to the bath broached in the Starre,
Cannot endue my abstinence.

Emo. And the businesse you have broached,heere can be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your sode.

Ant. No more light Answeres:

Let our Officers
I true notice what we purpose. I shall breake
The cause of our Expedition to the Queene,
And set her love in part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more vrgent reaches
Do strongly speake to vs: but the Letters too
Of many our countuing Friends in Rome,
Petition vs at home. Sextus Pompeius
Have gitten the dare to Cesar, and commands
The Empire of the Sea. Our flippery people,
Whole Loue is now link'd to the defuerer,
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Cleo.  I would I had thy inches, thou shouldst know.
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant.  Hear me Queen:
The strong necessity of Time, commands
Our Serenity a while: but my full heart
Remains in vie with you. Our Italy,
Shines o'er with chaste Swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome,
Equality of two Dominecker forces,
Breed furious passion: The hated grownes to strength
Are newly grown to Loue: The condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his Fathers Honor, creepes space
Into the hearts of such, as hate not thwarted
Upon the present state, whose Numbers threaten,
And queeness feame grown feke of reli, would purge
By sive a desperate change: My more particular,
And that which most with you should see my going,
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo.  Though age from folly could not give me freedom
It does from childishnesse. Can Fulvia dye?

Ant.  She's dead my Queen.

Cleo.  O most false Loue! Where
But where the Sacred Villous thou shouldst fill
With sorrowfull water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiue'd will be.

Ant.  Quarel no more, but bee prepar'd to know
The purpose I beare: which see, or craie,
As you shall giue that advice. By the fire
That quickens Nylus flame, I go from hence
Thy Soullard, Servant, making Peace or Warre,
As thou affects.

Cleo.  Can my Lace, Charmian come,
But, if it be, I am quickly ill, and well,
So Antony loves.

Cleo.  Let me your precious Queen forbeare,
And giue true evidence to his Loue, which stands
An honourable Triall.

Cleo.  So Fulvia told me.
I prystche turns side, and weep for her,
Then bid adiew to me, and lay the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one Scene
Of excellent resembling, and let it Locke
Like perfect Honor.

Ant.  You'll heat my blood no more?

Cleo.  You can do better yet: but this is meeetly.

Ant.  Now by Sword.

Cleo.  And Target. Still he mends;
But this is not the beft. Loue prystche Charmian,
How this Hereculan Roman do's become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant.  He leave you Lady,

Cleo.  Courteous Lord, one word:
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lou'd, but there's not it:
That you know well, something it is I would:
Oh, my Obligation is a very Anthony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant.  But that your Royalty
Holds I dencesse your subje, I should take you
For I dencesse it selfe.

Cleo.  'Tis working Labour,
To beare such I dencesse so necere the heart
As Cleopatra this. But Sir, forgive me,

Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you. Your Honor calles you hence,
Therefore be desse to my unsitteed Folly,
And all the Gods go with you. Upon your Sword
Sir Lawrell victorie, and smooth successe
Be threw before your feate.

Ant.  Let's go.

Cleo.  Come: Our Yperation so abides and flite,
That shou reciding heere, goes yet with mee;
And I hence fleeting, heere remaine with thee.

Away.

Enter Octavius reading a Letter, Lepidus,
And their Traine.

Cof.  You may see Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It's not Caesar Natural vice, to hate
One great Competitor. From Alexandria
This is the newes: He fifies, drinkes, and waffes
The Lampes of right Iconuell: Is not more manlike
Then Cleopatra? nor the Queen of Parthia
More Womanly then he. Hardly gave audience
Or wouldest to judge who he had Partners. You
Shall finde there a man, who is the fiftit of all faults,
That all men follow.

Lep.  I must not thinke
There are, euls now to darken all his goodnesse:
His faults in him, see the Spots of Heauen,
More fferie by nights Blacknesse; Herediarie,
Rather then putrifiche: what he cannot change,
Then what he chooseth.

Cof.  You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is not
Amisit to tumble on the bed of Parthia,
To give a Kingdome for a Mirth, to fit
And keep the turne of Tipling with a Slaue,
To reclee the streets at noone, and fland the Buffet
With knaves that feroes of Leparte: Say this became him
(As his companion and he rare indeed, Whom these thinges I cannot blinter) yet must Anthony
No way excite his foyses, when we do brace
So great weight in his lightenesse, If he'd be
His vacanice with his Voluptuoufesse,
Full furtis, and the drittelle of his bones.
Call on him for's. But to confound fuch time,
That drums him from tots, and speakes as loud
As his owne State, and does, tis to be ebid:
As we rare Boyes, who being nature in knowledge,
Pawne their experience to their prefent pleasure,
And fo rebell to judgement.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep.  Heere's more newes.

Mef.  Thys biddings have bene done, & eucte house
Moft Noble Cesar, flialt flaube hauve report
How 's abroad. Pompey is strong at Sea,
And it appeares, he is belou'd of thowe
That only have heard Cesar: to the Ports
The difcontente reparie, and mens reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cof.  I shoule have knowne no leffe,
In rift bin taught vs from the primall rage
That which he was wis, woul he were:
And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lou'd, till he's worth loue,
Comes fear'd, by being lack'd. This common bodie,
Like to a Vagabond Flagge upon the Straine.

To rot it fife with motion.

Mef. Cefar. I bring thee word, Monarkes and Men, famous Pyrates
Makes the Sea fure them, which they care and wound
With keels of every kinde. Many hot inrudes
They make in Italy, the Borders Maritime.
Ladys, to the houfe, and flush ymth recall;
No Vefcel can prepe fuch: but, 'tis as fome
Takent as fene: for Pompeys name strikes more
Then could his Warre refifted.

Cefar, Anthony,
Leafe thy laftruous Vaffaires. When thou once
Was beaten from Medalia, where thou flew'd Herlow, and Parke Confult, at thy heale
Did Famine follow, whom thou fought'rt againft,
(Though daintily brought vp) with patience more
Then Sauages could fuffer. Thou did't drink
The flate of Horles, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beafs would cough at. Thy pallace did daine
The roughell Berry, on the ruddell Hedge,
Yet, like the Stagge, when Snow the Paffe fueets,
The barks of Trees thou broud's. On the Alpets,
It is reported thou did't eat strange fheen,
Which fome did dye to looke on: And all this
(If wounds shine Honor that I speak it now)
Was borne fo like a Soldier, that thine cheeke
So much as I ask'd not.

Cefar. Let his pitty of him.

Cefar. Cefar. Let thy flames quickly
Drive him to Rome, 'tis time we twaine
Did shew our felues if't the field, and to that end
Affemble me immediate counfell, Pompey
Thrilles in our Idlenesse.

Lep. To morrow Cefar,
I shall be furnifh'd to informe you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To bring this prefent time.

Cafar. Till which encounter, it is my busines fo late.Farwell.
Lep. Farwell my Lord, what you shall know mean time
Offitures abroad, I shall befeech you Sir
To let me be paraker.

Cefar. Doubt not sir, I knew it for my Bond. Extent
Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, & Marian.
Cleo. Charmian.
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha, give me to drinke Maudragorn.
Char. Why Madam?
Cleo. That I might sleepe out this great gap of time:

My Anthony is away.

Char. You thinke of him too much.
Cleo. O 'tis Treafton.
Char. Madam, I muft not fo.
Cleo. Thou, Eunuch Marian?
Mar. What's your Highnesse plaifeure?
Cleo. Not now to hear thee fing, I take no plaifeure
In ought an Eunuch ha's: Tis well for thee,
That being vntemper'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fife forth of Egypt: Halt thou Affecions?
Mar. Yes gracious Madam.
Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Notin deed Madam, for I can do nothing
But what in deede is honest to be done:
Yet haue I fierce Affecions, and thinke
What Vefens did with Mars.

Cleo. Oh Charmian:
Where thinke't thou he is now? Stands he, or fits he?

O: does he walk? Or is he on his Horfe?
On happy horfe to bear the weight of Ambition!
Do bravingly Horfe, for wof't thou whom thou mount'st,
The demy Atlas of this Earth, the Arme
And Burget of men. He's speaking now,
Or mumurating, where's my Serpent of old Nyle,
(Thus trumpeteth this) Now I feede thy life
With moft delicious poyson. Thinke on me
That am with Phebus amorous pinches blakke,
And wrinkled deepie in time. Broad-fronted Cefar,
When thou was't here about the ground, I was
A morfell for a Monarke: and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow,
The would he author his Age{tland dye
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexus from Cefar.

Alex. Soueraigne of Egypt, hail.
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Anthony?
Yet coming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Fing'rs gilded thee.
How goes it with my brave Mark Anthony?
Alex. Last thing he did (deere Qu ene)
He left the Ift of many doublet kifles
This Orient Pearle. His speech flieces in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear mutt plucke it thence.

Alex. Good Friend, quoth he:
'St the firrter Roman to great Egypte tends
This treasure in thy owne heart, as in my toe.
To mend the petty pretent, I will prece
Her opulent Throne, with Kingdomes. All the Eeft, (Say thou) shall call her Mini't. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steede,
Who neigh'd to hys, that what I would have spoke,
Was bealely dume by him.
Cleo. What would he author his fit, or merry?
Alex. I like to the time of y'other, between J extremes
Of hot and cold, he was not fad nor merrie.
Cleo. Oh well diuided disposition: Note him,
Note him good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him,
He was not sad, for he would shewe on thofe
That make their lookes by his. He was not merrie,
With his teeth to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his foyn, but betweene both,
Honhauently mingle? Bee'th thou sad, or merrie,
The vidence of either thee becomes,
So do'ts no mans effe. Mer'it thou my Pofts?
Alex. I Madam, twenty feuerall Meiffengers.
Why do you fend to thicke?
Cleo. Who's borne that day, when I forget to fend to thee Affection, shall dye a Beggar. Inke and paper Charmian.
Welcome my good Alexus. Did I Charmian, eer louse Cefar in?
Char. Oh that braue Cefar!
Cleo. Be chock'd with fuch another Emphait.
Say the braue Ambition.
Char. The valiant Cefar.
Cleo. By this, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cefar Parago magazine:
My man of men.
Char. By your moft gracious pardon,
I fingu but after you.
Cleo. My Sallad dayes,
When I was greene in judgement, cold in blood.
To fay, as I faie then. But come, away,
Get me Inke and Paper.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Enter Eobardsus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Embarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to interest your Captaine
To solace and gentle speech.

Ends. I shall interest him
To answer like himselfe: if Cesar move him,
Let Anthony looke out Cesar head,
And speake as lowd as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were i the weare of Anthony's Beard,
I would not have't to day.

Lep. This is not a time for pracie Romacking.

Ends. Every time ferues for the matter that is then borne in.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Ends. Nor if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion: but pray you satre
No Embers vp. Here comes the Noble Anthony.

Enter Anthony and Ventidius.

Ends. And youndest Cesar.

Enter Cesar, Meccenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we comporte well here, to Parthia:

Hearke Ventidius.

Cesar. I do not know Meccenas, sakte Agrippa.

Lep. Noble Friends:

That which combin'd was most great, and yet not
A least renown'd manate; What's amisse,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our trinitall difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then Noble Partners,
The rather for I earnestly behoof,
Touch you the fewest points with sweeteest teastes,
Nor cuttethelfe grow to th'matter.

Ant. Art so well:

Were we before our Amities, and to fight,
I should do thus.

Flourish.

Cesar. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cesar. Sit.

Ant. Sit sir.

Cesar. Nay then.

Ant. I learne, you take things ill, which are not so:
Or being concecon you not.

Cesar. I must be taught: if or for nothing, or a little, I Should say my selfe offended, and with you
Chieflly i'th'world. More taught at, that I should Once name you derogestly: when to found your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt Cesar, what was't to you?

Cesar. No more then my reliding heere at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt; yet if you there
Did praetise on my State, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, praetis'd?

Cesar. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befall me. Your Wife and Brother
Made warres vpnone, and their constellatation
Was Theame for you, you were the word of warre.

Ant. You do mislike your busines, my Brother never Did urge me in his Aet: I did inquire it,
And have my Learning from fome true reports
That drew their swords with you, did he not rather Differed my authority with yours,
And make the warres alike against my remarke,
Having alike your cause. Of this, my Letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quartrell,
As mater whole you haste to make it, Let's

I. v. 77—II. i. 57

853
I must not be with this,
Cæsar. You praise your selfe, by laying defects of judgement to me, that you patch vp your excuses.

Asth. Not so, not so: I know you could not lacke. Am certaine on't, Very needfult of this thought, that I Your Pardoner in the caufe: against which he fought, Could not with graceful eyes attend those: Wares Which freed my owne peace. As for my wife, I would you had her spirit, in such another, The third world is yours, which with a Snufle, You may pace eafe, but not such a wife.

Endem. Would we had all such wives, that the men might goe to Wares with the women.

Asth. So much unrewardable, her Garboilles (Cæsar) Made our other impiacens: which not wanting Shreddeffe of policie to: I shewing great, Did you too much difquar, for that you muft,

But I should not help it.

Cæsar. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you Did pocket vp my Letters: and with taunts Did give my Minifie out of audience.

Asth. So he fell upon me, ere admist, then:
Three Kings I had not yet feafed, and did want
Of what I was i'th'morning: but next day
I told him of my selfe, which was as much
As to have askt him pardon. Let that Fellow
Benatching of our blisse: if we contend
Out of our question wipe him.

Cæsar. You have broken the Article of your oath, whereby you still must have a tongue to charge me with.

Asth. No Lep. Whose let him speake,
The Honour is Sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I stick it: but on Cæsar,
The Article of your oath.

Cæsar. To send me Arms, and side when I required them, the which you both desired.

Asth. Negled him rather;
And then when powerfull hours had bound me vp
From mine owne knowledge, as nearely as I may, He play the penitent to you. But mine honestly,
Shall not make poore my greatneffe, nor my power
Worke without it. Truth is, that Emerus,
To haue me out of Egypt, made Wares here, For which my selfe, the ignorant messenger,
So farre ake pardon, as behoves mine Honour
To fleape in his a cafe.

Lep. Tis Noble spoken.

Met. If it might please you to enforce no further
The griefes betweene you: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present needs,
Speak to atone you.

Lep. Worthy spoken Mecenas.
Endem. Or if you borrow one another Louise for the inquit, you may when you heare no more words of Pompey, resume it against: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Asth. Thou art a Souther, easily speak no more.

Endem. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Asth. You wrong this presence, therefore speak no more.

Endem. Go too then: your Confederacy done.

Cæsar. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for't cannot be,

We shall remaine in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet if I knew,
What he hope the world hold: vnto thrust from edge to edge
Art'thould: I would performe it.

Asth. Give me leave Cæsar.

Cæsar. Speake Agrippa.

Asth. Thou hast a Sitter by the Mothers side, admitt'd
Otho: a Great Mark Anthony is now a widower.

Cæsar Say not, say Agrippa: Cheaper heard you, your peace were not defaced of rashneffe.

Asth. I am not married Cæsar: let me have Agrippa further speake.

Asth. To hold you in perpetuall smilke,
To make you Brothers, and to keepe your hearts
With an vn-flipping knot, take Anthony,
Otho: to his wife: whole beauty claims
Not worse a husband then the best of men: whose Vertue, and whose greatnesse, speake
That which none else can vue, by this marriage,
All little fables which now sence great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would be no thing. Truth's would be rules,
Where now balle tales be truth's her loue to both,
Would each to praise, and all loues to both.

Drew after her. I pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a fluided not a present thought,
By duty hummfrd.

Asth. Will Cæsar speake?

Cæsar. Not till he hears how Anthony is toucht,
With what is spoke already.

Asth. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say Agrippa be it,
To make this good?

Cæsar. The power of Cæsar,
And his power, as Otho.

Asth. May I neuer
(To this good purpose, that so fairely floweres)
Desire of impediments: let me haue thy hand
Furthe this lettre of Grace: and from this house,
The hearts of Brothers gouernce in our Loues,
And sowe our great Deligges.

Cæsar. There's my hand:
A Sitter I bequeath you, whom no Brotheah
Did euer love to deereley. Let her live
To gynne our Kingdomes, and our hearts, and neuer
I lie off our Loues againe,

Lep. Happily, &c.

Asth. I did not think to draw my Sword:gainst Pompey,
For he hath laid strange countereftes, and great
Of late upon me. I must thatke him onely,
Least my remembrance, suffer ill report:
At thele of that, defe him.

Lep. Finite calvis sua,
Of vs maist Pompey preciouly be fought,
Or she seekes our vs.

Asth. Where les he?

Cæsar. About the Mount-Medita.

Asth. What is his strength by laud?

Cæsar. Great, and encreaseth:
But by Sea he is an absolute Muster.

Asth. So is the Fame.

We would had spoke together. Haft we for it,
Yet hee be seekes in Attains, dispatch we
The bussell we haue takke.

Cæsar. With most gladneffe,
And do invite you to my Sitters view,
Anthony and Cleopatra

Whether straight I lead you.

Anth. Let vs Lepidus not lack ye your company.

Nob. Anthony, not fickle-nesse you shouldt desirance me.

Enter. Welcome from Egypt Sir.

Cn. Halfe the heart of Cajar, worthy Myns, my honourable Friend Agrippa.

Agri. Good Entebarus.

Cn. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested: you telld, we had y't at Epyght.

Ent. Sir, we did fleape day out of countenance: and made the night light with drinking.

Cn. Eight Wide-Boreis rolled whole at a break-fall: and but twelve persons there. Is this true?

Ent. This was but as a fly by an Eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of Feast, which is worthily decerpted noting.

Cn. She's a most triumphant Lady, if report bequeat to her.

Ent. When the first met Mark Anthony, the puff vp his heart upon the River of Sicerus.

Agri. These five appear'd indeed; or my reporter desir'd well for her.

Cn. I will tell you.

The Barge she sit in, like a burnish'd Throne

Borne on the water: the Pope was beaten Gold,

Purple the Solis: and so perfumed that

The Winder were Love-ickes.

With them the Owers were Silkes,

Which to the time of Flutes stopt stroke, and made

The water which they beate, to flow faster;

As smorous of their strokes. For her owne person,

It begger'd all description: she did ly

In her Pamilion, clad of Gold; of Toffe,

O't perusing that Venus, where we fee

The fance out worke Nature. On each side her,

Stood pretty Dimpled Boyes, like smiling Cupids,

With divers coulours & Epicures whose winde did firme,

To glowe the delicate checkes which they did coole,

And what they vsid did.

Agri. Oh rare for Anthony,

Ent. Her Gentlewoman, like the Nerides,

So many Mermaids tended her list Eyes,

And made their brads adorning. At the Helm,

A seeming Mermaid fleeter: The Silken Tackle,

Swell with the touched of those flower-bond hands,

That yarely frame the office. From the Barge

A strange insubficient perfume hits the fense

Of the adjacent Whales. The City call

Her people out upon her: and Anthony

Enbrong'd th' Market-place, did sit alone,

Whilling to th'ayre which but for vacanctie,

Had gone to gaze on Cleopater coo,

And made a gap in Nature.

Agri. Rare Egyptian.

Ent. Upon her landing, Anthony sent to her,

Invited her to Supper: she replyed,

It shouldt be better, he became her guest:

Which the entreated, our Courteous Anthony,

Whom were the word of no woman hard to speake,

Being bade in lacrosse o'the gos to the Feast;

And for his ordinary, paise his heart;

For what his eyes ere onely.

Agri. Royal Wench.

She made great Cajar lay his Sword to bed,

He ploughed her, and the crops.

Ent. I saw her once

Hop forty Paces through the publicke streate,

And having loft her breath, she spoke, and passed,

That five did make for her perfection.

And breathlesse powre breath forth.

Cn. Now Anthony, must leave her vastly,

Ent. Neuer he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custome falle

Her infinite variety: other women cloy,

The appetites they feede, but the makes hungry,

Where most she satisfies. For vildest thing,

Become themselves in her, that the holy Priestes

Blesse her, when thet is Riggh.

Cn. If Beauty, Wigedome, Modesty, can sent le

The heart of Anthony: Olytus is

A blessed Lottery to him.

Agri. Let vs go. Good Entebarus, make your selfe my guest, whilfst you abide here.

Cn. Humbly Sir I thank you.

Enter. Anthony, Caesar, Olytia between them.

Anth. The world, and my great office, will

Sometimes deuise me from your bosome.

Olyt. All which time, before the Gods my knee shall bwayne my prayers to them for you.

Anth. Goodnight Sir. My Olytia

Read not my Stenophore in the world report:

I have not kep my square, but that to come

Shall all be done by'tHrule:good night deere Lady:

Cn. Good night Sir.

Cn. Good night.

Ent. Enter Sothfater.

Anth. Now firstrate you do with your selfe in Egypt?

Soth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither.

Anth. If you, your counsell, reason?

Soth. I fee in it my motion shue it not in my tongue,

But yet hie you to Egypt again.

Anth. Say to me, whole Fortunes shall rise higher

Cajar or mine?

Soth. Cajar. Therefore (oh Anthony)Say not by his side

Thy Demon that thy spirit which keeps thee is

Noble, Courageous, high unmatchable,

Where Cajar is not. But more him, by Angel

Become a feare: as being to powr'd, therefore

Make space enough betwene you.

Anth. Speake this no more.

Soth. To none but thee no more but: when to thee,

If thou do not play with him at any game,

Thou art sure to loose: And of that Naturlall lacke,

He beare thee gainst the odds. Thy Lutter thicken;

When he finnes by: i'tay again, thy spirit

It all affraid to gourme thee neere him:

But he alway's ti Noble.

Anth. Get thee gone:

Say to Pentigrius I would speake with him.

Ps. He shall to Parthia, be it Ars or hap,

He hath spoken true. The very Dice obey him,

And in our spoere my better cunning finne,

Vnder his chauce, doe draw lots he speares,

His Cocks do winne the Battale, fill of mine,

When it is all to raught: and his Quaites euer

Breste mine (in hoop) at odd's. I will to Egypt:

Anth.
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I'Mt East my pleasure lies. Oh come Ventigius,

Enter Ventigius.

You must to Parthis, your Commissions ready:
Follow me, and rescue me.

Enter Lepidus, Messinius, and Agrrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your felues no further: pray you hasten your Generals after.

Exit. Sir, Mark Anthony, will e'ene but kiffe Ollania, and weele follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your Southiers dreffe,
Which will become you both: Farewell.

Mess. We shall: as I conceive the journey, beat
Mount before you Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter, my purposes do draw me much about, you'll win two dayes upon me.

End. Sir good success.

Lep. Farewell.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some Musickie: Musickie, moody foode of thy that trade in Loue,

Omens. The Musickie ho.

Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billards: come Charmian.

Charm. My arme is tore, bell play with Starden.

Cleop. As well a woman with an Eunuch plaide,
as with a woman. Come you'll play with me Sir?

Mard. As well as I can Madam.

Cleo. And when good will is shewed,
Then't come to short.

The Aflor may please pardon, 1le none now,
Give me mine Angle, werce toth'luere there
My Musickie playing farre off. I will betray
Tawny fine fifters, my bended hooke shall pierce
Their flamy jawes: and as I draw them vp,
Ile thonke them entry one an Anthony,
And say ah huy are caught.

Charm. Twas mery when you wager'd on your Angling, when your dier did hang a salt fish on his hooke which he with frequencie drew vp.

Cleo. That time! Oh times:
I taught him out of patience: and that night
I hauget him into patience, and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drink him to his bed:
Then put my Tires, and Mantles on him,whilst
I wore his Sword Phillipian. Oh from Italie,

Enter a Messinger.

Ramine thou thy fruiteful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have bin barren.

Mef. Madam, Madam,

Cleo. Anthony's dead,
If thou say to Villaine, thou kilst thy Misfes:
Be well and free, thou say from yeild a
There is Gold, and heree
My blowe well vnto thine hand that Kings
Have lipt, and rembled huffing.

Mef. Full Madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why there's more Gold,
But farre, make me vie
To say, the dead are well: bring it to that.
The Gold I give thee, will I melt and peau
Downe thy ill stinking throne.

Mef. Good Madam hear me.

Cleo. Well, go too I will:
But there's no goodnesse in thy face if Anthony
Be free and healthfull; so rare a favoure
To trumpet such good tidings. I wont well,
Though should come like a Pachie crownd'd with Snakes,
Not like a formall man,

Mef. Wilt please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'at:
Yet if thou say Anthony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Caesar, or not Captive to him,
He fet the in a shower of Gold, and haile
Rich Pearles upon thee.

Mef. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mef. And Friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Th'art an honfent man,

Mef. Caesar, and he, are greater Friends then euer,
Make thee a Fortune from me.

Mef. But yet Madam.

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does play
The good precedence, fit upon but yet,
But yet is as a Laylors to bring foot
Some monfrous Malesfactor. Pray thee Friend,
Powre out the packe of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together: he's friends with Caesar,
In the heat of the day, and so they too,

Mef. Free Madam, no: I made no such report,
He's bound unto Ollania.

Cleo. For what good turne?

Mef. For the bell turne it bed.

Cleo. I am pale Charmian.

Mef. Madam, he's married to Ollania.

Cleo. The most infectuous Pelagene upon thee.

Mef. Good Madam patience.

Cleo. What say you?

Hence horrible Villaine, or Ile spume thine eyes
Like balls before me: 1le vnhaire thy head,
She hates him vp and downe.

Thou shalt be whipt with Wyer, and strew'd in brine,
Smirning in lingering pickle.

Mef. Grazious Madam,

Cleo. I that do bring the newes, made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a Province I will gue thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou hadst
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage,
And I will boost thee with what guilt beside Thy modeflex can begge.

Mef. He's married Madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast had too long.

Mef. Nay then 1le runne:
What meane you Madam, I have made no fault.
Exit. Char. Good Madam, keep ye thine selfe within you felle,
The man is innocuous.

Cleo. Some Innocents scape not the thunderbolt:
Mets Egypt into Nyle: and kindly creatures
Turne all to Serpents. Call the Salve againe,
Though I am mad, I will not bylye him.

Char. He is afraid to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him,
These hands do lacke Nobility, that they strike
A meaner then my selfe; since I my selfe
I haue given my selfe the canke.

Enter Sir.

Cleo. To bring bad newes: gite to a gracious Messinge.

Exeunt.
An hundred of ditties, but lest ill tydings tell
They selves, when they be told.
Mef. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worser than I do,
If thou again fay yes.
Mef. He's married Madam.
Cleo. The Gods confound thee,
Dost thou hold there still?
Mef. Should I be Madam?
Cleo. Oh, I would thou didst:
So halfe my Egypt were submerg'd and made
A Caffer for fcal'd Snake: Go get thee hence,
I had th' Soullcif in thy face to me,
Thou would'lt appeare most vgly: He is married?
Mef. I crave your Highnefs pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Mef. Take no offence, that I would not offend you,
To punnifh me for what you make me do,
Seemes much receiued, he's married to Olaiuna.
Cleo. Oh that his fault should make a knowke of thee,
That art not what that farte of: Get thee hence,
The Marchandize which thou haft brought from Rome
Are all too deere for me:
Lye they vpon thy hand, and be vn-done by em.
Cleo. Good your Highnefs patience.
Cleo. In praying, Anthony, I have defpif'd Cafar.
Cleo. Many times Madam.
Cleo. I am pay'd for't now: lead me from hence,
I faint, oh Traf, Charman, it's no matter.
Go to the Fellow, good Alexia bid him
Report the feature of Olaiuna: her yeres,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her haire. Bring me word quickly,
Let him for ever go, let him not Charman,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other ways a Mars. Bid you Alexia
Bring me word, how toll the is: pity me Charman,
But do not speake to me. Lead me to my Chamber.

Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter Pompey, at our dance with Drum and Trum-put at another Cafar, London, Anthony, Exhorhlt, Mar-
Cena, Agrippa, Menus with Soldiers Marching.
Pom. Your Heritages I have, so houe you mine:
And we shall take before we fight.
Cafar, Mofl meete that fift we come to words,
And therefore hate we
Our written purpofes before we fent,
Which if thou haft confidered, let it know,
If tw'yle vpe thy difcontented Sword,
And carry backe to Cicelie much tall youth,
That eall must perifh here.
Pom. To you all three,
The Senators alone of this great world,
Chiefk Faktors for the Gods. I do not know,
Wherefore my Father should reuenge want,
Having a Sonne and Friend, fineinue Cafar,
Who at Philippis the good Trajan glorified,
There fawe you labouring for him. What was't
That mot'd pales Cafar to confpire? And what Made all-honor'd, honeft, Romaine Trajan,
With the arm'd reff, Courtiers of beautious freedome,
To drench the Capitoll, but that they would
Have one man but a man, and that his it
Hath made me rigge my Nauie. At whose burchen,
The anger'd Ocean fomere, with which I meet

To scourge things grattitude, that delightfull Rome:
Caff on my Noble Father.
Pom. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canst not fare vs Pompey with thy fables,
Weele speake with thee at Sea. At land thou know'st
How much we do re-count thee.
Pom. At Land indeed
Thou doft ore count me of my Fathers house:
But since the Cuckoo builds not for himfelfe,
Romaine it's as thou maffit.
Lepi. Be pleas'd to tell vs,
(For this is from the preffent how you take)
The offers we have lent you.
Pom. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be entreat too,
But waight what it is worth embrac'd
Pom. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune.

Of Cicelie, Sardina: and I muft
Rid all the Sea of Pilots. Then, to fend
Measure of Wheate to Rome: this greed vpon,
To part with vnhaftt edges, and beare backe.
Our Targets undinted.

Omeus. That's our offer.
Pom. Know then when I came before you heere,
A man prepa'd
To take this offer. But Mark Anthony,
Put me to some impatience: though I loose:
The praise of it by telling. You muft know
When Cafar and your Brother were at bloueto,
Your Mother came to Cicelie, and did fade
Her welcome Friendly.

Ant. I have heard it: Pompey,
And am well fuddled for a liberal sorts thanks,
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not thinke Sir, to have met you heere,
Ant. The beds th' Esat are soft, and thanks to you,
That cail'd me timetlier then my purpose hither:
For I have grnt by t.
Pom. Since I saw you laft, there's a change vpon you.
Pom. Well, I know not,
What counts hathius Fortune call'd upon my face,
But in my bosome flall the nearer come,
To make my heart her vallat.
Lep. Well met here.
Pom. I hope to Lepidius, thus we are agreed:
I trace our composiion may be written
And seal'd betwenee vs,
Pom. That's the next to do.
Pom. Weele with each other, ere we part, and let's
Draw lots who shall begin.
Ant. That will I Pompey.
Pompey. No Anthony take the lot: but firft or laft, your fine Egyptian cookef shall have the fame, I have heard that intimo Cafar, grove fat with fealing there,
Ant. You have heard much.
Pam. I have faire meaning Sir.
Ant. And faire words to them.
Pom. Then do much have I heard,
And I have heard Appolatedes carri'd
Ens. No more that he did fo.
Pam. What I pray you!
Ens. A certaine Queene to Cafar in a Matris.
Pom. I know thee now, how far' thou Shooldit?
Ens. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceiue

Four.
The Tragedie of

Mufick players.
Enter two or three Servants with a Banquet.

1. Here they be men: some o’t’thir Plants are ill rooted already, the least wind t’th’world will blow them downe.
2. Lepidus is high Conford.
3. They have made him drinke Almes drinkke.
4. As they pinch one another by the disposition, hee cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreatie, and himselfe to th’drinke.
5. But it raiseth the greatest warre betwixt him & his dieretion.
6. Why this it is to have a name in great mens Fellowship: I had as liue have a Reede that will doe me
sorcell, as a Pantizan I could not heare.
7. To be call’d in a huge Sphere, and not to be seene to moue in: the holes where eyes should bee, which pitifully disorder the cheeks.

A Sermon souded.
Enter Caesar, Anthony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Assenais,
Enbarbus, Menas, with other Captaines.

Ant. Thus do they Sir: they take the flow o’th’Nyle
By certayne scales in th’Pyramid: they know
By’th’height, the bottomes, or the meanes: If earth
Or Foison follow, the higher Nilus swells,
The more it promisses: as it ebbs, the Steedman
Upon the flame and Ooze scatters his grains,
And shortly comes to Harref.
Lep. Y’hau’strange Serpents there?
Ant. I Lepidus,
Lep. Your Serpent of Egypt, is lured now of your mud
by the operation of your Sun: so is your Crocodile.
Ant. They are so.
Pomp. Sir, and some Wine: A health to Lepidus.
Lep. I am not so well as I should be:
but I neede one.
Lep. Not till you have flept: I feare me you’ll bee in till then.
Lep. Nay certainly, I haue heard the Platoniasts Pyra-mists are very goodly things: without contradistion I haue heard that.

Menas. Pompey, a word.
Pomp. Say in mine ear, what is’t.
Men. Foriste thy feate I do behelth thee Captaine,
And haue me speake a word.
Pomp. Forbear me till anon.
Whispers in’t Ear.
This Wine for Lepidus.
Lep. What manner o’tthing is your Crocodile?
Ant. It is sha’d fir like it selfe, and it is as byoad as it hath breadth; it is suff fo high as it is, and moues with it owne organs. It lines by that which nourisheth it, and the Elements once out of it, it Transmigrates.
Lep. What colour is it of?
Ant. Of owne colour too.
Lep. ’Tis a strange Serpent.
Ant. ’Tis so, and the teares of it are wet.
Caf. Will this description satisfy him?
Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, elfe he is a very Epicure.
Pomp. Go hang Sir, hang: tell me of that Away.
Do as I bid you, Where’s this Cup I call’d for?
Men. If for the sake of Messis thou wilt haue mee,
Rise from thy lioole.

Pom. I think it's mad: the matter?

Men. I have ever held my cap off in thy Fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast fent' me with much faith: what's else to say? Be joystick Lord's,

Ant. These Quisce-fands Lipokus.

Keep off, them for you finke.

Men. Wilt thou be Jod of all the world?

Pom. What faith thou?

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world?

That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, and though thou thinke me poor, I am the man will gine thee all the world.

Pom. Hail thou drunk well.

Men. No Pompey, I have kept me from the cup,

Thou art if thou don't be, the earthly June!

What are the Ocean pales, or skie incloudy,

Men, if thou woul'st ha'.

Pom. Show me which way?

Men. These three World-thiers, these Competitors

Are in thy vellell. Let me cut the Cable,

And when we are put off, fall to their threates:

All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldn't have done,

And not have spoken. In me' vis villianie,

In thee, it had bin good feruice: thou must know,

'Tis not my proff that does lead mine Honour:

Mine Honour it, Repent that erst thy tongue,

Hast to beraide thine acte. Being done unknowne,

I should have found it afterwards well done,

But must condemned it now, defect, and drink.

Men. For this, I neuer follow

Thy paud Fortune's more,

Who seeks and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,

Shall never finde it more.

Pom. This health to Lipokus.

Ant. Beare him's shore,

He pledge it for him Pompy.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menus.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's strong Fellow Menus.

Men. Why?

Eno. A beares the third part of the world man: feete not

Men. The third part, then he's drunk: would it were all, that it might go on wheeles.

Eno. Drink thou: eneare the Reede.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feast.

Ant. It ripen's towards it: strike the Vellell hers.

Here's to Cesar.

Cesar. I could well forbear's, it's monitory labour

when I wash my braine, and it grow fouler.

Ant. Be a Child o'thim.

Cesar. Poffeffe it, He make answer: but I had rather fall from all, four dayes, then drink to much in one.

Evad. Ha my brave Emperour, shall we daunce now the Egyptian Backenals, and celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha' good Soildier.

Men. I have ever held my cap off, till that the conquering Wine hath steep't our felts,

In soft and delicate Leath.

Eno. All take his neds:

Make battery to our estes with the loud Musick.

The while, Ile place you, then the Boy shall sing.

The holding every man shall brase as loud,

As his strong sides can volly.

Musickes Players.

Endobarbus places them hand in hand.

The Song.

Come thou Monarch of the Vine,

Plume but Bacchus, with shone eye's;

In thy Easter Cup be drown'd,

With thy Grapes our hearts be Crown'd.

Cup o'the world go round,

Cup o'the world go round.

Cesar. What would you more?

Pompy goodnight. Good Brother

Let me requiest you of our greater buisneffe

Prowes at this Interrest. Genttle Lords let's part,

You fee we hauw burnt our chekkes. Strong Endobar is weaker then the Wine, and mine owne tongue

Spleet's what it speaks; the wild difguife hath almost

Antickes vs all. What needs more words? goodnight.

Good Anthony your hand.

Pom. Ile try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall Sir give you your hand.

Pom. Oh Anthony you have my Father boufe.

But what, we are Friends?

Come downe into the Beare.

Eno. Take heed you fall not Menus: He not on shore,

No to my Cabin: these Drummes,

These Trumpes Fistes: what

Let Nepunet heare, we bid aloud farewell

To these great followes. Sound the pipes and be long'd found out.

Sound the Flutts with Drummes.

Cesar. Hoo saies there's my Cae.

Men. Hoa, Noble Captaine, come.

Enter Octavians as it were in triumph, the dead body of Paco-

rus borne before him.

Pom. Now daring Parthia are thou stroke, and now

Pleased Fortune does of Marcus Csefina death

Make me reussenr. Beare the Kings Sonnes body,

Before our Army thy Paco's Oades,

Pales this for Marcus Csefina.

Romaine. Noble Octavians,

Whil it yet with Parthian blood thy Sword is warme,

The Fugitive Paprinas follow, Spoilt through Media,

Mafopotamia, and the shifters, whether

The routed filr. So thy grand Captaine Anthony

Shall set thee on triumphant Charlottes, and Put Gzardons on thy head.

Pom. Oh Silbus, Silbus,

I have done enough. Allow place note well

May make too geie anact. For leanse this Silbus,

Better to leave wondone, then by our deed

Acquire too high a Fame, when him we lettes away,

Cesar and Anthony have ever wome

More in their officers, then perfon. Soiffne

One of my place in Syria, his Lieutenant,

For quicke accumulation of renowne,

Which the chieftay'd by th'minute, left his favour.

Who does P'rin Warte more then his Captaine can,

Becomes his Captaines Captaine : and Ambrion

(Thcallaurs would rather makes choice of Ioffe)

Then gaine, which darkens him.

I could do more to do Ambrosian good,

But would offend him. And in his offence,
Should my performance perih.
Rem. Thou hast Veniendum that, without the which a
Souldier and his Sword grants scarce distinction: thou

Enter Agrippa at one door, Eubalbus at another.
Agri. What are the Brothers parched?
Eno. They have dispaiched with Pompey: he is gone.
Th. Three are scaling, Ollania weepes.

To part from Rome: Cesar is sad, and Lepidus.
Since Pompey's fall, as Menas saies, is troubled.
With the Greene-Sicknefe.

Agri. Tis a Noble Lepidus:
Eno. A very fine one: oh, how he loues Cesar.
Cle. Nay but how delicte he adores Mark Anthony.
Cle. Cesar? why he's the Jupiter of men.
Ant. What's Anthony, the God of Jupiter?
Eno. Spake you of Cesar? how, the non-parrell?
Cle. Oh Anthony, oh thou Arabian Bird!
Eno. Would you praise Cesar, lay Cefarino no further.
Agri. Indeed he pleyd them both with excellent praises.
Eno. But he loues Cesar better, yet he loues Anthony:

Hoo,Hearts,Tongues,Figures,
Scriber,Bards,Poets,cannot
Thinke speake,call,write,fing, number : hoo,
His loue to Anthony. But as for Cesar,
Kneele downe,kneele downe wonder,
Agri. Both he loues.
Eno. They are his Shards, and he their Beete,for:
This is to hoise: Adieu,Noble Agrippa.
Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewell.

Enter Cesar, Anthony, Lepidus, and Ollania.
Ansto. No further Sir.
Cefar. You take from me a great part of my felpe:
Vie me well in'. Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest Band
Shall paffe on thy approoue: most Noble Anthony,
Let not the piece of Verue which is fett
Betwixt vs, as the Cyment of our loue
To keep it builded, be the Ramme to batter
The Forfrefs of it: for better might we
Haue lou'd without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherefit.
Ant. Make me not offended, in your diuaff.
Cefar. I hate fad.
Ant. You shall not finde,
Though you be therein curious, the left caufe
For what you seeme to feare, so the Gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans ferue your ends:
We will heare part.
Cefar. Farewell my deereel Sister, fare thee well,
The Elements be kind to thee, and make
Thr' spirits all of comfort: fare thee well.
Cle. My Nobe Brothers
Anth. The April's in her eyes, it is Loomes spring,
And there the flowers to bring it on: be cheeffull.

Ollia. Sir, looke well to my Husbandes house:
Cefar. What Ollania?
Ollia. Ite tell you in your earse.
Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart informe her tougue.
The Swannes downe feather
That flands upon the Swell at the full of Tide:
And neither way incline.
Eno. Will Cefar weep?
Cefar. He's a cloud in face.
Eno. He were the worfe for that were he a Horfe, so is he being a man.
Agri. Why Enobarbus:
When Anthony found Iulius Cefar dead,
He cried almoft to roaring: and he wept,
When at Phillippi he found Brotons flame.
Eno. That yeareinde, he was troubled with a rheume,
What willingly he did confound, he wail'd,
Beleev't still I weep too.
Cefar. No sweet Ollania,
You shall heare from me still: the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.
Cle. Come Sir, come,
Ile wipe the Larmes in thy streng'the loue,
Looke here I haue you, thus I let you go,
And give you to the Gods.
Cefar. Adieu, be happy.
Lep. Let all the number of the Stares giue light
To thy faire way.
Cefar. Farewell, farewell.
Kelf: Ollania.
Ansto. Farewell., Trumpets sound.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Ira, and Alexan.
Cleo. Where is the Fellow?
Alex. Half afeard to come.
Cleo. Go too, go too: Come hither Sir.
Enter the Messenger as before.
Alex. Good Maiieife: Hirond of Jury dare not looke
Upon you, but when you are well pleas'd.
Cleo. That Hirond head, ile haue: but how? When Anthony is gone, through whom I might command it:
Come thou nearer.
Mef. Most gracious Maiieife.
Cleo. Didst thou behold Ollania?
Mef. I dread Queene.
Cleo. Where?
Mef. Madam in Rome, I lookt her in the face:
And saw her led between her Brother, and Mark Anthony.
Cleo. Is she the aallie as me?
Mef. She is not Madam.
Cleo. Didst heare her speake?
Is the skill tongu'd or low?
Mef. Madam, I heard her speake, she is low voic'd.
Cleo. That's not so good: he cannot like her long.
Char. Like her? Oh Is't so impossible.
Cleo. This is to Charmian: dull of tongue, & dwarfish
What Maiieife is in her gare,remember
If e'er thou lookst on Maiieife.
Mef. She creeps her motion, & her flation are as one.
She shews a body, rather then a life,
A Statue,then a Breathe.
Cleo. Is this certain?
Mef. Or I have no obseruance.
Cleo. This in Egypt cannot make better nose.
Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiue,
There's nothing in her yet.
The Fellow he's good judgment.
Char. Excellent.
Cles. Gushe! at her years, I perceive.
Miss. Madam, she was a widgeon.
Miss. And I do think she's thritie.
Cles. Beast thou her face in mood! he's long or round?
Miss. Round, even to faultinefle.
Cles. For the most part too, they are foolish that are so. Her hair's what colour?
Miss. Browne Madam: and her forehead
As low as she would, it is.
Cles. There's Gold for thee,
Thou must not take my former flaremefle
I will employ thee back again: I finde thee
Molt fit for buffinefe. Go make thee ready.
Our Letters are prepar'd,
Char. A proper man.
Cles. Indeed he is: I repent me much
That I harried him. Why me think's he by him,
This Creature's no fuch thing.
Char. Nothing Madam.
Cles. The man hath feene fome Maifie, and should know.
Char. Hath he feene Maielfe: if ye elfe defend: and fering you fo long.
Cles. I have one thing more to take him yet good
Charmian: but ye no touch, thou fhalt bring him to me
Where I will write:all may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you Madam.
Ent. Anthony and Cleopatra.
Ant. Nay, my favors not only that,
That were excufable: and that thousands more
Of fensible import, but he hath way'd
Now Wares' gainst Pompey. Made his will, and read it,
To publicke care, spoke frankly of me,
When perfine he could not
But pay me teares of Honour: cold and ficly
Ventanted then moft narrow meafe of finne:
When the beft hint was given him: he not lookt,
Or did it from his teeth.
Otho. Oh my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you must beleue,
Stomacke not all. A more whifpoye Lady,
If this defiilion chance, be freely betwene
Praying for both parts:
The good God will mooke me prefently,
When I shal pray: Oh bife my Lord, and Husband,
Vnde that prayer, by crying out as loud,
Oh bife my Brother. Husband winne, w inne Brother,
Prayes, and differe ye the prayer, me midway
Twist these extreames at all.
Ant. Gibral Otho.
Let your bell loue draw to that point which feeks
Belt to prefent it: if I loufe mine Honour,
I loufe my felfe better: I was not your
Then your to branch ifte. But as you requested,
Your felfe fhall go betwene, the, the means time Lady,
I reafe the preparation of a Ware
Shall fire your Brother, make your fooncft halfe,
So your defires are yours.
Oth. Thanks to my Lord.
The loife of power make me moft weake, moft weake,
You recollifher; Wares' twixt you twaine would be,
As if the world fhould cleare, and that flaine men
Should loader up the Rift.

Amb. When it appeares to you where this begins,
Tune your displeafure that way: for our faults;
Can neuer be fo equal, that your love
Can equally mowe with them. Provide your going,
Choose your owne company, and command what coft
Your heart he's mind too.

Enter Emarbus, and Eros.

Eno. How now Friend Eros?
Eno. That's strange News evne come Sir.
Eros. What man?
Eno. Caesar & Lepidus have made warres upon Pompey,
Eno. This is old, what is the successe?
Eros. Caesar having made vice of him in the warres gainst Pompey: prefently deeme him rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action, and not refilling here, accolles him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey. Upon his owne appeale feres him, to the poor thirtic is vp, till death enlarghe his Confire.
Eno. Then would you both a parte of chapsome no, and throw between them all the food thou haft, they'll grinde the other. Where's Anthony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden thus, and fumres
The ruth that lies before him. Cries Froole Lepidus,
And threats the threat of that his Officer,
That murdered Pompey.
Eno. Our great Naules rig'd,
Eros. For Italy and Caesar, more Domition,
My Lord dictates you presently: my Newes
I might have told hearer re.
Eros. Twill not myght, but let it bebring me to Anthony.
Eno. Come Sir,

Enter Agrrippa, Mettem, and Caesar.

Caf. Contemning Rome he's done all this & more,
In Alexandre: here's the manner of it:
11th Market-place: a Tribunall fliuer'd,
Cleopatra and himfelfe in Chaires of Gold
Were publickly enter'd: at the feft, fit
Cafarion whom they call my Fathers Sonne,
And all the vpland flue, that their Luft.
Since then hath made betweene them, Vnto her,
He gave the Habitation of Egypt, made her
Oldeuer Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute Queene.

Mce. This in the publick eye?
Cafar. I fommon their place, where they exercife,
His Sonnes better profe: the King of Kings,
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander. To Ptolemy he affign'd, Syria, Silicia, and Phecina: the
In Thablishments of the Godsfixe life
That day appeare, and oft before gau audience,
As it's reported to,
Mce. Let Rome be thus inform'd.

Agri. Who quare with his infolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him,
Mce. The people knows it,
And hau now reu'ced his accufations.
Agri. Who does he accufe?
Cafar. Caesar, and that hauing in Cicilie
Succes Pompeius' spoil'd, we had not rated him
In part for this. Then does he say, he fent me
Some flippering ip究nd. Lately, he fects
That Lepidus of the Triumpheare, shou'd be depof'd,
And being that, we detain all his Reuenue,
Agri. Sir this shou'd be anfw'nd.
Cafar. 'Tis done already, and the Meflenger gone:
I have told him Lepidus was grewne too cruel,

That
In his abominations, tunes you off,
And gives his potent Regimen to a Trull
That noytis it against vs.
Ollc. Is it so fin?
Cleo. Moft certain Sifler welcome: pray you
Beater knowne to patience. My dece’d Sifer. Elegunt
Enter Cleopatra, and Eubedaume.
Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eue. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou haft forspoke my being in these warres,
And say’lt it is not fit.
Eue. Well: is it, is it.
Cleo. If not, demounce’d against vs, why should not we be there in person,
Eue. Well, I could reply: if we should fereus with Horfe and Mares together, the Horfe were mcrely loft:
the Mares would bare a Souldier and his Horfe.
Cleo. What’st thou say?
Eue. Your prefence needs must puzzle Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his Braine, from’s time,
What should not they be Ipard. He is already
Traduc’d for Leity, and this laid in Rome,
That Pluturnus an Eunuch, and your Maides
Mannage this warre.
Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues not
That speake against vs. A Charge we bear’reth Warre,
And as the prefent of my Kingdone will Advance thee there for a man. Speake not againſt it,
I will not play behinde.

Enter Anthony and Comidus.
Eno. Nay I have done here, comes the Emperor.
Ant. Is it not strange Comidus,
That from Tarce tum, and Brandufium,
He could fo quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Trime. You have heard not (Sweet?)
Cleo. Celebrity is never more admitt’d,
Then by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have weel become’d the best of men
To caunt at platcuche. Comifying wee
Will fight with him by Sea.
Cleo. By Sea, what the?
Cam. Why, why, why?”
Ant. For that he dares venture.
Eueb. So hard my Lord, I daunt him to fingle fight,
Cam. I, and to wage this Battel at Paphalia,
Where Cofar fought with Pompey. But this offers
Which issue not for his vantage, he fkales off,
And so fhould you.
Eueb. Your Shippen are not well man’d,
Your Mariners are Militer, Reapers, people
Infolent by Swift Imprefe, In Cofar Pleece,
Are thofe, that often have againſt Pompey fought,
Their Shippen are yare, yours heavy: no disgrace
Shall you for refining him at Sea,
Being prepar’d for Land,
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.
Eno. Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away
Your Marion’ses are Militer, Reapers, people
Infolent by Swift Imprefe, In Cofar Pleece,
Are thofe, that often have againſt Pompey fought,
Their Shippen are yare, yours heavy: no disgrace
Shall you for refining him at Sea,
Being prepar’d for Land,
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.
Eno. You fhould obferue to your caufes, Sir,
Your Marion’s are Militer, Reapers, people
To refcourage the enemy, by Land,
Diftraits your Armiye, who doubts moft confit
Of Warre-mark’d: for men, leave executed
Your own renomated knowledge, quite forgoe
The way which promifes advantage, and
Give up your felte meerly to change and hazard,
From firme Security.
Ant. He fight at Sea.
Cleo.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Ces. I have fifty Sailes, Ces. far better.
Ant. Our out plus of shipping will we burne,
And with the rest full maint, from the head of an Action
Beate'sh approching Ces. But if we fail,
We then can't set Land. Enter a Messenger.
Thy business?
Ant. The Newses true, my Lord, he is decried,
Ces.far's taken Torino.
Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible
Strange, that his power should be. Camillus.
Our five Legions there stand bold by Land,
And our twelve thousand Horse. We'll to our ship,
Away my fallen.
Enter a Soldier.
How now worthy Souther?
Soult. Oh Noble Emperor, do not fight by Sea,
Truth not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This Sword, and shew my Wounds; let the Egyptians
And the Phcenicians go a ducker: we've
Have'd to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.
Ant. Well, well, away.exit Ant. Cloe, &c. End. Soult. By Hercules I think I'm not right.
Cam. Souther thou art: but his whole action grooves
Not in the power not: so our Leaders lead,
And we are Womans men.
Soult. You keepe by Land the Legions and the Horse whale, do you not?
Ven. Marcus Osboius, Marcus Iunius,
Publicius, and Cæsar, for Sea:
But we keepe whole by Land. This speede of Cesars
Carries beyond beleefe.
Soult. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions,
As beyond all sper.
Cam. Who's this Lieutenant, heare you? Soult. They say, one Taurus.
Cam. Well, I know the man.
Enter a Messenger.
Mefs. The Emperor calls Camillus.
Cam. With Newes the times wit Labour,
And throwes forth each minute, tume. exit
Enter Cesafor with his Army, marching.
Cesar. Taurus?
Taur. My Lord.
Cesar. Strike notice by Land.
Keepes whole, prouoke not Bataile
Till we have done at Sea. Do not exceed
The Prefcrib of this Scourge: Our fortune yses
Upon this lamente.
Enter Anthony and Euborbus.
Ant Set we our Squadrions on yond side oth'Hill,
In eye of Cesar's bataile, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And so proced accordingly.
exit
Camillus Marcheth with his Land Army one way the flange, and Taurus the Lieutenant of Cesars the other way
After their going in, we heard the noise of a Sea fight.
Alarum. Enter Euborbus and Scævola.
Eub. Naught, naught, I naught, I can behold no longer:
Themselves, the Egyptian Admiral,
With all their sixty lyne, and turne the Rudder:
To see, mine eyes are blasted.
Enter Scævola.
Scæv. Gods, & Gods! how all the world rung them!
End. What's thy passion? Scæv. The greatest Cael of the world, is left
With very ignorance, we have kil'd away
Kingsdomes, and Provinces.
End. How appears the Fight? Scæv. On our side, like the Token'd Peffilence,
Where death is sure. Youribauded Nage of Egypt,
(Whom Leproso to take) with midst oth'fight,
When vantage like a payre of Twinses appear'd
Both as the name, or rather ou the elder;
(Th' Breeze upon her) like a Cow in lone,
Horfe, Sailes, and Ryes.
End. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did ficken at the fight, and could not Induce a further view.
Scæv. She once being loosed,
The Noble ruine of her Majestie, Anthony,
Clapst on his Sea-wing, and (like a diving Mallard)
Leaving the Fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an Action of such flame;
Experience, Man-hood, Honor, no't be're
Did violate to it selfe.
Eub. Alacke, alacke.
End. Enter Camillus.
End. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And stakes most lamenterly. Had our General
Bin what he knew himselfe, it had gone well:
Oh his ha's giv'en example for our flight,
Most grofully by his owne.
Eub. Is your thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeed.
Cam. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.
Scæv. Take the tow.
And there I will attend what further comes.
Camil. To Cesar will I render
My Legions and my Horse, fire Kings already
Shew me the way of yielding.
End. He yet follow.
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reason
Sits in the winde against me.
Enter Anthony with Attendants.
Ant. Harkke, the Land bids me tred no more ypon's,
It is a sham'd to bear me, Friends, come hither,
I am to lated in the world, that I
Haue lost my way for euer. I haue a Shipp,
I laden with Gold, take it, divide it thyse,
And make your peace with Cesar.
End. Fly! Fly! Ne'ere think
Of me.
Ant. I haue folde my selfe, and have instructed cowards
To runne, and threw their shoulder. Friends be gone,
I haue my selfe resolu'd upon a courfe,
Which has no neede of you. Be gone,
My Treasures in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I followed that I blush to looke upon,
My very hairs do mutiny: for the white
Reprose the browne for rathmeifie, and them they
For fear, and dotting. Friends be gone, you shall Hawe Letters from me to some Friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you look not sad,
Nor make replyes of loathmeifie, take the hint
Which my dispaire proclames. Let them be left
Which leaves it selfe, to the Sea-fide straight way;
I will poulde you of that ship and Treasure.
The Tragedie of

Fortune, and J adon.

That his pluckt, when hisher

Fortune of many Moonees gone by.

Cesar. Approach, and speake.

Amb. Such as I am, I come from Anthony:

This was of late as petry to his ends,

As is the Moon—dew on the Mericke leafe

To his grand Sea.

Ces. Bee'to, declare thine office.

Amb. Lord of his Fortunes he flares thee, and Requires to live in Egypt, which not granted

He Leffons his Requesst, and to thee fues

To let him breath between the Heavens and Earth

A private man in Athens: this for him.

Negg, Cleopatra does confesse thine Greatnesse,

Submits her to thy might, and of thee cruates

The Circle of the Ptolemies for her heyres,

Now hazarded to thy Grace.

Ces. For Anthony,

I have no eares to his requist. The Queene,

Of Audience, nor Defire shall fail, to thine

From Egypt drive her all-disgraced Friend,

One of his life Not there. This ill fure perfome,

She ball not sue vnderad. So to them both,

Amb. Fortune pursueth thee.

Cef. Bring him through the Bands:

To try the Eloquence, now 'tis time, dispatch,

From Anthony winne Cleopatra, promise

And in our Nace, what he requireth, add more

From these Invention, offers. Women are not

In their left Fortunes strange; but want will perique

The hee ne'er touch'd Vellit. Try thy cunning Tuesday,

Make thine owne Edict for thy paines, which we Will answer as a Law.

Thik. Cefar, I go.

Cefar. Observe how Anthony becomes his flaw,

And what thou thinke this his very words speaks

In every power this moues.

Thik. Cefar, I shall.

Enter Cleopatra, Enoblasus, Charmian, & Iras.

Ces. What shall we do, Enoblasus?

Enob. Thinkes, and dye.

Ces. Is Anthony, or we in fault for this?

Enob. Anthony only, that would make his will

Lord of his Reason. What though you fied,

From that great face of Warre, whose feet all ranges

Frighted such where? Why should he follow?

The sick of his Affection should not then

Haue micht his Captam-ship, at such a poite.

When half to halfe the world oppossed, he being

The mered question? This was a flame no lefe

Then was his lofe, to course your flying Faggets,

And leave his Navy gazing.

Ces. Prayt the peace.

Enter the Ambassadoer, with Anthony.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Amb. I my Lord, I am.

Ant. The Queene shall then have courtesye,

So she will yeeld vs vp.

Amb. He says so.

Ant. Let her know, To the Boy Cefar lend thi

grized head, and he will fill thy wishes to the brimne,

With Principallers.

Ces. That head my Lord?

Enter Cesafs, Agrippa, and Dolabella, with others.

Ces. Let him appeare that's come from Anthony.

Know you him.
Anthony and Cleopatra.

Ant. To him again, tell him he wears the Rose Of youth upon him: from which, the world should note Something particular: His Coine, Ships, Legions, May be a Cowards, whose Ministers would presume Under the face of a Child, as foone As his Command of Caesar. I dare him therefore To lay his gay Companions a-part, And answer me the declin'd, Sword against Sword, Our feltes alone: Hee write it: Follow mee.

Eno. Yes like enough: Why bate I did Caesar will Violate his happiness; and be Stag'd to the how Against a Sworder: I think my judgements are A parcel of their Fortunes, and things outward Do draw the inward quality after them. To suffer all alike, that he should dreame, Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his empiusfet; Caesar thou hast subdod thine Judgement too.

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. A Messenger from Caesar.

Cleo. What is the more Ceremony? See my Women, Against the blonwne Raye may they flap their nose, That kno'd it into the Buds. Admit him firr.

Eno. Mine honestly, and I, beginne to square, The Loyalty well held to Foole, does make Our Faith mee rejoyce: yet be that can endure To follow with Allegiance a false Lord, Does conquer him that did his Master conquer, And earns a place i'th' Stormy.

Enter Thibes.

Cleo. Caesar will.

Thib. Fare heare it part.

Cleo. None but Friends: say boldly.

Thib. So haply see they Friends to Anthony.

Eno. He noe, as many (Sir) as Caesar has: Or wherupon? if Caesar has.

Thib. Will please to be his Friend: For vs you know, Whoe full he is, we, and that is Caesar.

Thib. So: Thus then thou molten renown'd, Caesar interets, Not to consider in what cafe thou standst:

Further then he is Caesar.

Cleo. Go on right Royall.

Thib. He knows your honours, your grace, as you embrace not Anthony.

As you did loose, but as you feared him.

Cleo. Oh.

Thib. The scare's upon your Honor, therefore he Does pitty, as constrained blemishes,

Not as deareful.

Cleo. He is a God, And knows what is most right. Mine Honour

Was not yeilded, but conquerd mee.

Eno. To be fare of that, I will ask Anthony.

Sir, sir, thou art too leiske

That we must leave thee to the flinking, for Thy deereft quit thee.

Exit Eno.

Thib. Shall I say to Caesar,

When you requite them, for he partly beggs

To be defir'd to give. It much would please him, That of his Fortunes you should make a flaffe

To leave upon. But it would warme his spirits

To hearre from you had left Anthony,

And put your fife under his throwd, the vainful Land.

Cleo. What is your name? (lord.)

Thib. My name is Thibes.

Cleo. Moll kinde Meffenger,

Say to great Caesar this in disputation,
The Tragedie of

A halter'd necke, which do's the Hangman thanke,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Servant with Thidias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.

Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a Pardon?

Ser. He did ask fav'ur.

Ant. If that thy Father live, let him repent
Thou was't not made his daughter, and be thou forrie
To follow Cæsar in his Triumph, since
Thou hast bin whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Feauer thee,
Shake thou to loose on'. Get thee backe to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: looke thou fay
He makes me angry with him. For he seems
Proud and displeasaunt, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry:
And at this time most eafe'tis to do's:
When my good Stars, that were my former guides
Have empty left their Orbes, and thet their Fires
Into th'Abusin of hell. If he mislike,
My speech, and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis Boundan, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like to quit me. Vige it thou:
Hence with thy spirits, be gone.

Exit Thidias.

Ant. Haue you done that yet?

Ant. Alacke out Terrene Moone is now Eclipse,
And it portends alone the fall of Anthony.

Cleo. I must flay his time?

Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that yses his points?

Cleo. Not know my yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah (Deere) I'll be so,
From my cold heart let Haueen ingender hate,
And payson it in the fourte, and the first flone
Drop in my necke: as it determines so
Diffoyle my life, the next Caesarian smile,
Till by degrees the memory of my wombe,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the disdaining of this pelleted aorme,
Lye grumbleffe, till the Fites and Graves of Nyle
Haue buried them for prey.

Ant. I am satisfied:
Cæsar sitts downe in Alexandria, where
I will oppo'ce his Pace. Our force by Land,
Hath Nobly held, our feuer'd Nathe too
Haue knit againe, and Fleece, threatning most Sea-like.
Where haft thou bin my heart? Dost thou heart Lady?
From the Field I shall returne once more
To kisse th'irs Lips, I will appeare in Blood,
And my Sword, will earne our Chronicle,
There's hope in'tyet.

Cleo. That's my brave Lord.

Ant. I will be trebble-finened, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine houses
Were terse and lucky, men did rancone luses
Of me for lefts: But now, I lie for teeth,
And tend to darken all that flipp me. Come,
Let's haue one other gawdy night; Call to me
All my fad Captaines, fill our Bawles once more:
Let's mocke the midnight Bell.

Cleo. It is my Birth-day,
I had thought I haue held it poore. But since my Lord
Is Anthony againe, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.
Enter a Company of Soldiers.

The Tragedie of

Cesar. Say I am none of thine.

Cesar. What sayst thou?

Cesar. Sir, he is with Cesar.

Cesar. Sir, his Cheefe and Treasure he has not with him.

Cesar. Is he gone?

Cesar. Must certaine.

Cesar. Go, fetch his Treasure after, do it.

Cesar. Detaine no loner I charge thee, write to him; (I will subscribe) gentle friends, and greetings;

Cesar. Say, that I with he never finde more cause

Cesar. To change a Master. Oh my Fortunes have

Cesar. Corrupted honest men. Dispatch Endorbus,

Flourish. Enter Agrippa, Cesar, with Endorbus, and Dollabella.

Cesar. Go forth Agrippa, and begin the fight.

Cesar. Our will is Anthony be Cooke alue:

Cesar. Make it so knowne.

Cesar. Agrippa, Cesar, I shall.

Cesar. The time of winter fall peace is neere;

Cesar. Prove this a proprous day, the three nook'd world

Cesar. Shall bare the Ouiue freely.

Enter a Messenger.

MefT. Anthony is come into the Field.

Cesar. Go charge Agrippa, Plant those that haue revolted in the Vant,

Cesar. That Anthony may seem to spend his Pury

Vp in his life. Enter Alexan.

End. Alexan did revolt, and went to winnow on Affairs of Anthony, there did divvwayne

Great Horse to incline his horse to Cesar,

And leave his Mutter Anthony. For this painest,

Cesar hath hang'd him: Caminidim and the rest

That fell away, haue entertainment, but

No honourable truth I haue done ill,

Of which I do accuse my selfe to forely,

That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Cefar.

Sed. Endorbus, Anthony

Hath after thee sent all thy Treacher, with

His Bounty oute-pluss. The Meffenger

Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now

Vnoading of his Mules.

End. I give it you.

Sed. Moke not Endorbus,

I tell you true: Beft you laken the bringer

Out of the hoast, I must attend mine Office,

Or would have done my selfe, Your Emperor

Continues Bills loure.

Exit. Sed. I am alone the Villaine of the earth,

And feele I am most. Oh Anthony,

Thou Mine of Bounty, how wouldst thou have pyed

My better seurice, when my turpitude

Thou doft to Crowne with Gold. This blowes my hart,

If swift though he bekeit not: a swifter mane

Shall out-strike thought, but thought will not. I feele

I fight against thee: No I will go fecke

Some Ditch, wherein to dye: the foultit beft fit

My lauten part of life.

Agrippa. Retire, we haue engag'd our felues too farre:

Cesar himselfe has his worke, and our oppresion

Exceeds what we expexted.

Exit.
Enter a Centurie, and his Company, Exeunt as follows.

Cent. If we be not return'd within this hour,
We must return to th' Court of Guard: the night Is fliny, and they say, we shall embarkaze
By this second hour'th' Moone.

1Watch. This last day was a wearied one too's.

Exeunt. Oh bear me witness, night,
2 What man is this?
Stand fast, and draw him:

Exeunt. Be witness to me (O thou blessed Moone).

When men revolted shall upon Record
Reve late full memory: poore Exeunt as did
Before thy face rest.

Cent. Exeunt as?
2 Peace: Hearken further.

Exeunt. Oh Souveraigne Mothers of true Melancholy,
The poisonous dampe of night, dispung'd upon me,
That Life, a very Rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Against the hine and heart'self of my fault,
Which being dres'd with greese, will breake to powder,
And find all soule thoughts. Oh Anthony,
Nobler then my resent is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular,
But let the world rancake me in Regifter,
A Master leauer, and a fugitive;
Oh Anthony, Oh Anthony!
1 Let's speake to him.
Cent. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern thee Ceasar.
2 Let's do so, but he sleepe.

Swoon'd rather, for to bad a Prayer as his
Was never yet for sleepe.

Go we to him.

Awake sir, awake, speake to vs.

Heare you sir?

Cont. The hand of death hath rought him

Drum. aper's off.

Hearke the Drummer demurely wake the sleepeeds.
Let vs hear him to th'o Court of Guard: he is of note:
Our houre is fully out.

2 Come on then, he may recover yet.

Enter Anthony and Scarsus, with their Army.

Ant. Their prevarication is to-day by Sea,
We please them not by Land.

Scar. For both, my Lord.

Ant. I would they'd fight th'o Fire, or th'o Ayre,
We'd fight there too. But this it is, our Foote
Upon the hilles adjoyning to the City
Shall play with vs. Order for Sea is given,
They have put forth the Haven:
Where their appointment we may beft descover,
And looke on their endeavour.

Enter Ceasar, and his Army.

Ces. But being charg'd, we will be full by Land,
Which as I tak't two Shall, for his beft force
Is fent to Mans his Gallies. To the Vale,
And hold our beft advantage.

Anthony aper's off, as at a Sea-fight.

Ant. Yet they are not ioynd:
Where you'nd Finis does stand, I shall discover all.
Ile bring thee word straight, how 'tis like to go.

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's Saties their refts.
The Auguries
Say, they know not, they cannot tell, looke grimly,
And dare not speake their knowledge, Anthony,
Is warning, and directed, and by flares
His tretted Fortune give him hope and feare
Of what he has, and has not.

Enter Anthony.

Ant. All is loft:
This foulde Egyptian hath betrayd me:
My Fleece hath yeeld'd to the Foe, and yender
They cast their Cops vp, and Cenouse together
Like Friends long loft. Triple turn'd V' more, 'tis then
Hailf told me to this Nounce, and my heart
Mak's one	Wares on thee. Bid them all flye:
For when I am reng'd, my Charms,
I have done all. But thou wilt flye, be gone.
Oh Sunne, the wings is flood: I know not how,
Fortune, and Anthony past here, even here
Do we (hake hands? All come to this? The hearts
That pass me let me heele, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do dif-Cunde, melt this sweetes.
On blossomings Ceasar: And this Pine is banke,
That etcetera's them all. Beatray'd I am,
Oh this foulde Soule of Egypt, this gree Charme,
Whose eye lock'd. oh secondly W'le, & called them home:
Whose Before was my Crowner, my chief end,
| Like a right Gypie, hath at falt and loole
| Begn'd me, to the very heart of Joffe.
| What Eras, Eras.

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Ah! Ah!

Cleas. Why is my Lord enray'd against his Loue?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall glue thee thy sepering,
And blemish Ceasar's Triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee vp to the howling Plebeians,
Follow his Chariot, like the greaftest spot
O' all thy Sexe. Modd Meniter-like be thoune
For poor'd Dinamites, for Dinwth, and le.
Patient Olms, plough thy vantage
With her prepared nailes.

'Tis well thar gone,

I'lt be well to live. But better to weare
Thon fell'th into my faire, for one death
Might hear preprehend many. Eras, howa?
The thirt of Mefia is vpme me, teach me
Aside, thou mine Ansestor, thy rage.
Let me lodge Lizias on the howes o' th' Moone,
And with those hands that grasp't the heauieft Club,
Subdue my worcbiefle fale: The Witch shall die,
To the young Roman Boye she hath told me, and I fall
Vnder this plot: She dy'es for t. Eras howa?

Enter Cleopatra, Chairman, Freemen, Maryland.

Cleas. Help me my women: Oh here's more mad
Then Telamon for his Shield, the Boare of Thefaly
Was never to imboft.

Char. To th' Monument, there locke your fale,
And send him word you are dead:

The.
The Soule and Body rite not more in parting,
Then greatnesse going off.

Enter Toth Monument:

Mardian, go tell him I have slaine my felde;
Say, that the leaf I spoke was Anthony, And word it (pynstone) pitilessly. Hence Mardian, And bring me how he takes my des' toth Monument.

Enter Anthony, and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold't me?

Eros. I Noble Lord.

Ant. Sometimes we see a cloud that's Dragonisch,
A vapour sometime, like a Beare or Lyon,
A towred Citraddell, a pendant Becke,
A laked Mountainse, or blew Promontorie
With Trees upon't, that nodle into the world,
And mocke our eyes with Ayrce.

Thou haft seene these Signes,
They are blacke Vepser Pagesent.

Eros. I my Lord.

Ant. That which is now a Horie, even with a thought
The Racke dislimes, and makes it indiffer
As water is in water.

Eros. It does my Lord.

Ant. My good Knave Eros, now thy Captaine is Euen such a body: Here I am Anthony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape (my Knave)
I made these warres for Egypt, and the Queene,
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine:
Which whilfe it was mine, had amnent vnto's;
A Million moe, (now lofe) thee Eros has Fackt Cards with Cefar, and fals plaid my Glory
Unto an Enemies triumph.

Nay, wepe not gentle Eros, there is left vs
Our felues to end our felues.

Enter Mardian,

Oh thy vilde Lady, she has robb'd me of my Sword.

Ant. No Anthony,

My Mistis lou'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled
With thine intirely.

Ant. Hence away Eunuch peace, she hath betraysd me,
And shall dye the death.

Mer. Death of one person, can be paide but once;
And that the ha's disharg'd. What thou would't do
Is done unto thy hand: the leaf I spoke
Was Anthony, not Noble Anthony.

Then in the midd't a tearing grove did breake
The name of Anthony; it was diuided
Betweene her heart, and lips: she rendred lite
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?

Mer. Dead,

Ant. Vainne Eros, the long dayes task is done,
And we must sleepe: That thou depart't hence safe
Does pay thy labour richly: Go, exit Mardian.

Off, placke off,

The feuen-fold shied of Ajax cannot keepe
The battery from my heart. Oh cleave my sides,
Heart, once be stronger then thy Continent,
Cracke thy frail Caff. Apace Eros, apace;
No more a Soldier trunfled pieces go,
You have bin Nobly borne. From me awhile. exit Eros
I will o'er-take thee Cleopatra, and Wepe for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is this turrent: since the Torch is out,
Lye downe and try not farther. Now all labour

Markes what it does: yea, very force entangles
It selfe with strength: Scale then and all is done.

Eros. I come my Queene, Eros? Stay for me.

Where Soules do couch on Flowers, wee stand in hand,
And with our sprightly Port make the Ghostes gaze:
Dido, and her Eros shall want Troopes,
And all the haunt be ours. Come Eros, Eros.

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra dyed,
I haue li'd in such dishonour, that the Gods
Deftell my bafenesse. I, that with my Sword,
Quarter'd the World, and o'ie greene Neptune's backe
With Ships, made Cities, condemne my selfe, to lacke
The Courage of Woman, letse Noble minde
Then flee which by her death, our Cesar tells
I am Conqueror of my selfe. Thou art (worne Eros,
That when the exigent should come, which now
Is come indeed: When I should fee behinde me
Theunequall prosecution of disgrace and horror,
That on my command, thou then would'lt kill me.

Do't, the time is come: Thou firk'll not me,
'Tis Cesar thou destachts. Put colour in thy Checke,
Eros. The Gods with-hold me,
Shall I do that which all the Parthian Darts,
(Though Enemy) loft yzme, and could not.

Ant. Eros,

Would't thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
My Master thus with pleache Armes, binding downe
His couragible necke, his face fub'd
To penetrative flame; whilfe the wheel'd feate
Of Fortunate Cesar drawne before him, branded
His Barentse that ensued.

Eros. I would not see't,

Come: then with for a wound I must be cut'd.

Draw that thy honell Sword, which thou haft worne
Methewful for thy Country.

Eros. Oh give it me.

Ant. When I did aske thee free, swords I not then
To do this when I bad thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent Services are all
But accidents vnpurpos'd, Draw, and come.

Eros. Turne from me then that Noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world liest.

Ant. Eros,

Eros. My sword is drawne.

Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou haft drawne it.

Eros. My deare Master,

My Captaine, and my Emperor. Let me say
Before I strike this bloody stroke, Farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said man, and farewel.

Eros. Farewell great Chief, Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now Eros.

Killst himselfe.

Eros. Why there then?
Thus I do escape the forrow of Anthony's death, '

Ant. Trice-Nobler then my selfe,
Thou teachest me: Oh valiant Eros, what
I should, and thou could'lt not, my Queene and Eros
Huse by their braue infruction got upon me
A Noblestic in Record. But I will bee
A Bride, groome in my death, and run into't
As a Lovers bed. Come then, and Eros,

Eros. My Master dies thy Sholler: to do thus
I learnt of thee How,not dead? Not dead?
The Guard, how? Oh dispatch me.
Enter a Guard.

1. Guard. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my works! will Friends:
Oh make an end of what I have begun,
2: The Starre is fallte.

1. And time is at his Period,
All. alas, and wee.

Ant. Let him that loves me, pithe me lead.

2. Not I.

3. Not I

4. Not any one, cannot.

Descerf. They death and certifie but they followers ity.

This word but the Cesar with this tyding,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Dissembler.

Dis. Where's Anthony?

Des. There Demion enter.

Dem. Let he what then not answer man?

Ant. Art thou there Demion?

Draw thy sword, and grince,

Suffering bribes for death.

Des. Most Absolute Lord:

My Myrth Cesar sent me to thee.

Ant. When didst he find thee?

Dem. Now my Lord.

Ant. Where is the Cesar?

(Exes)

Dem. Look in her Monument she had a Prophecying
Of what hath come to passe for when the bow
(Which never shall be found) you did suspect
She had disposed with Cesar, and that your rage
Would not be pur'th, the fact you would the was dead:
But fearing fate in some night, work, hast lent
Me to proclame the truth, and I am come
I died, too late.

Ant. Ye late good Demion: call my Guard I pray thee.

Des. What's this? the Emperors Guard,
The Guard, who has: Come your Lord calles.

Enter 4, or 5, of the Guard of Anthony.

Ant. Besee me good friends where Cleopatra bides,
'Tis the last sentence that I shall command you,

I woe, woe, we are free you may not use to wear
All your true Followers out.

All. Most heavy day.

Ant. Nay good my Fellowes, do not pleas sharp fate
To grace it with your former woes. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish vp, and we punish it:
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take up vp.
I have leaved you off, carry me noe good Friends,
And haue my thankes for all. Exite bearing Anthony.

Enter Cleopatra, and her Maides alse, with Charitian & Itai.

Cle. Oh Charmion, I will never goe from hence.

Char. Bostoned deere Madam.

Cle. No, I will not:

All strange and terrible things are welcome,
But comfort we disspair: our face of sorrow
Proportion'd to our case, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter Demion.

How now? is he dead?

Dem. His death's upon him, but not dead.
Looke out of his other side your Monument,
His Guard have brought him thinker.

Enter Anthony, and the Guard.

Cle. Oh Sunne,
Burne the greete Sphere thou moult in, darkling plain.
The varying flowre of th' other world.

Oh, Anthony, Anthony
Help me Charmion, help me Demion,
Help me friends.

Below, let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace,

Nor Cesar's Valour hath o're-thrown Anthony,
But Anthony's hath Triumphed on the Sea.

Cle. So it should be,

Then none but Anthony shou'd conquer Anthony,
But woe is so.

Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying alone,
I herte of perfect death a while, until
Of many thousand kifes, the poor last
I lay upon thy lipes.

Cle. I dare not Die,

Desire my Lord pardon: I dare not,
Left he be taken nor off anfimpious now
Or the fall Fortune Cesar, ever shall Be broach'd with me, if Knife, Dugges, Serpents have Edge, fling, or operation. I am safe:

Your Wife Olympe, with her modest eyes,
And thine Conclusion, shall secure to Honour
Desiring upon me: but come, come Anthony,

Help me my women we must draw thee vp?

Affit good Friends.

Ant. Oh quicke, or I am gone.

Cle. Here's sport inside.

How heavy weighes my Lord?

Our strength is all gone into heainiff,
That makes the weight.

Had I great Cesar's power,

The strong wing'd Mercury shoul'd fetch thee vp,
And fix thee by Joves side. Yet come a little
Withers were our Foolis. Oh come, come, come,

They beate Anthony aloft to Cleopatra.

And welcome, welcome.

Dye when thou hast liv'd,

Quicken with kissing: had my lipes thet power,
This would I weare then out.

All. A heavy sight.

Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying,

Give me some Wine, and let me speake a little.

Cle. No, let me speake, and let me ryle to dye,
That the false Hapsifule fortune, breake her Wheel.

Prouck'd by my offence.

Ant. One word (Private Owege)

Of Cesar fet thee your Honour, with thy safety.
Oh, Cle.

They do not goe together.

Ant. Gentle hearse me,

Note about Cesar truth, but Procellius.

Cle. My Revolution, and my hands, Ite truth,

None about Cesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end,

I am not forrow at: but pleasfe you thoughts
In feeding them with thooe my former Fortune
Wherein I liet.

The greatest Prince of all the World,

The No-Me; and do now not bafely dye,

Not Cowardly put off my Helmet to My Countryman a Roman, by a Roman

Visibly vainqueird.

Now my Spiritus is going,

I cannot more.

Cle. Noblest of men, woot ye dye?

Haft thou no care of me, shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is

No better then a Store?  Oh see my women:

The Crowne of eth earth doth melt. My Lord?

Oh wister'd is the Owland of the Wate,

The
The Tragedy of

The Gods rebuke me, but it is Tyding
To wash the eyes of Kings.

Del. And strange it is,
That Nature must compel vs to lament
Our most perfifled deecds.
Mrs. His teints and Honours, wag'd equal with him.
Del. A Rarer spirit never
Did streere humanity: but you Gods will give vs
Some faults to make vs men. Cesar is touch'd.
Mrs. When such a fucceflor's met before him,
He needes must fee himfelf.

Cesar. Oh Anthony,
I have followed thee to this, but we do lauch
Disgraces in our Bodies. I muft perfurce
Have thee one to thee such a declining day,
Or looke on thine: we could not flall together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With teares as Soueraine as the blood of hearts,
That thou my Brother, my Compariter,
In top of all desigins; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Compafion in the front of Ware,
The Arme of mine owne Body, and the Heart
Where mine thoughts did kindle; that our Stares
Vaxted with every, and should divide our equalneffe to this,
Heare me good Friends,
But I will tell you at fome better Season,
The busineff of this man luokeyes out of him,
We hear him what he fayes.

Enter an Egyptian.

Whence are you?

Cesar. Your more Egyptian yet, the Queen my mistiks
Confident in ne, she had her Monument
Of thy intents, defires, informaftion,
That the preparedly may frame her felfe
Toweth way then for'te too.

Cesar. But her haue good heart,
She loome shall know ca. by fame of ours,
How honourable, and how kindly Wee
Determine for her. For Cesar cannot fume to be vengent
Egypt. So the Gods preleuce thee.

Exit.

Cesar. Come bid us Præcinct. Go and fay
We purpose here no firame: guee what her comforts
The quality of her paffion shall require;
Left in her greatneffe, by some mortall Stroke
She doe defece vs. For her life in Rome,
Would be entale in our Triumph: Go,
And with your speciall bring vs what she fayes,
And how you finde of her.

Pro. Cesar I tall.

Exit Præcinctus.

Cesar. Gallus, go you along: where's Dolabella, to fece, Præcinctus?

All. Dolabella.

Cesar. Let him alone: for I remember now
How hee's implac'd: he fhall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you fhall fee
Who hardly I was drawne into this Ware,
How small and gentle I proceeded all
In all my Writings. Go with me, and fee
What I can fume in this.

Exit.

Enter Cleopatra, Chrifman, Iris, and Madam.

Cleo. My defeftion does begin to make
A better life; its pathy to be Cesar;
Not being Fortune, heres but Fortunes knave,
A minimiter of her will: and is a great

To
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shocks accusers, and bolts vp change;
Which sleeps, and never palstares more the dung,
The beggars Nurse, and Cesar.

Ent. Priscillianus.

Pro. Cesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt,
And bids thee truly on what faire demands
Thou meanst to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What is thy name?

Pro. My name is Priscillianus.

Cleo. Anthony

Did tell me of you, bid me trust you, but
I do not greatly care to be deceived
That have my selfe in trust. If your Master
Would have a Queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That Myselfe to keep deceptious, would,
Not hfe begge his Kingdom: The prince
To guide me conquer Egypt for my Sake,
And he goes too much of mine owne, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. He of good cheere:

Cleo. Some honest man, a Princeely hand, scarce perishing,
Make your full relevance freely to my Lord,
Who is so full of Grace, that it flows over
On all that needs. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependance, and you shall finde
A Conqueror that will pray in syde for kindness,
Where he for grace is kisst too.

Cleo. Pray you tell me,

In his Fortunee Vastall, and I find him
The Greatest he has got. Thou sincerely
A Doctrine of Obedience, and would gladly
Looke him thin Face.

Pro. This is report (deere Lady)
Haue content, for how your plight is pisted
Of him that could do.

Pro. You see how falsely she may be surpriz'd:
Guard her still. Cesar come,

Pro. Royal Queen.

Cleo. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queene.
Cleo. Queene, queene, good hands.

Pro. Hold worthy lady, hold:

Doest not your selfe such wrong, who are in this
Relieuer, but not betraid.

Cleo. What of death too that ridis our dogs of linguish

Pro. Cleopatra, do not abuse my Masters bounty, by T'wondring of your selfe: Let the World see
His Nobleffe well a stead, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou Death?

Come hither come; Come, come, and take Queene
Worth myn Babes and Beggers.

Pro. Oh temperance Lady,

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no more. Ie do not drinke for,
I'll eate, and if i may, more; For my plane,
He et heeple neither. This unworlde house Ie ruine,
Do Cesar what hee caa. Knowledge, that I
Will not veste punish'd at your Masters Court,
Nor one be stachlid with the lober Master.
Of dull Ophilia. Still they thougt me vp,
And thou the true of the seeming Vaniatorie.
Ooffendin1 Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt,
He et heeple neither. Let the World see
Let me flake-meak'd, and let the water-Elites
Blow me into abhorring: rather make
My Countries high pyramids my Gibbets,
And hang me vp in Chains.

Pro. You do extend
Thee thoughts of horror further then you shall Find caufe in Cesar.

Ent. Priscillianus.

Dol. Priscillianus,
What thou hast done, thy Master Cesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the Queene,
Ie take her to my Guard.

Pro. So Delaballa.
It shall content me best: Be gentle to her,
To Cesar I will speake, wsha you shall please,
If you'll employ me to him.

Ent. Priscillianus.

Cleo. Say, I would dye.

Dol. Most Noble Empresse, you have heard of me.

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Affurledly you know me.

Cleo. No matter for, what I have heard or knowne:
You laugh when Boys or Women tell their Dreames,
It's not your tricke?

Dol. I understand not, Madam.

Cleo. I dreamt there was an Emperor Anthony,
Oh such another Queene, that I might see
But such another man.

Dol. It might pleaste ye.

Cleo. His face was as the Heauens, and therein flucke
A Sunne and Moone, which kept their course, & lighted
The little o' the Earth.

Dol. Most Sereneigne Creature.

Cleo. His legges behind the Ocean his reade armes
Crested he would: his voyce was propretured
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to Friends:
But when he meant to quall, and thake the Orbe,
He was as raging Thunder. For his Beautie,
There was no winter in't. An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by rapting: His delights
Were Dolphin-like, they throw'd his backe about
The Element they liid in: in his Linery
Wals'd Crownes and Crownest: Realms & Islands were
As plates dropt from his pocke.

Dol. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Thinkye you there was, or might be such a man
As this I dreampt of?

Dol. Gentle Madam, no.

Cleo. You Eyle vp to the hearing of the Gods:
But if there be, no rue we were once such.
It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants fluide
To in strange forms with fancie, yet imagination
An Anthony were Natures peace, against Fancie, Condemning shadlowes quite.

Dol. Heere me, good Madam,
Your loffe is as your selfe, great; and you bere the
As answering to the weight, would I might never Oe take purr'dlie face, esie: But I do feele
By the rebound of yours, a griefe that fittes
My very heart at once.

Cleo. I thank you for:

Know you what Cesar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what, I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay pray you sir.

Dol. Though he be Honourable.

Cleo. Hee I leade methem in Triumph.

Dol. Madam he you, I know's.

Flourish.

Ent. Priscillianus, Cesar, Gallus, Macedon, and others of his Traine.

All. Make way there Cesar.

Cesar.
Cæsar. Which is the Queen of Egypt.

Dido. It is the Emperor Madam.

Cleo. kneel to.

Cæsar. Arise, you shall not kneel: I pray you rise, rise Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the Gods will have it thus, and Matter and my Lord I must obey.

Cæsar. Take you no hard thoughts, The Record of what injuries you did, though written in our fleth, we shall remember as things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole Sir o' th' World, I cannot project mine own estate so well to make it clear, but do confess I have Bene laden with like frailties, which before have often shamed our Sex.

Cæsar. Cleopatra know, we will extenuate rather then informe: If you apply your selfe to our intents, which towards you are most gentle, you shall finde a benefit in this change: but if you seek To lay on me a Cruelty, by taking

An honester course, you shall balace your selfe of my good purposes, and put your children To that destruction which I do guard them from. If thereon you relye. He take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world this yours, & we your Scutcheons, and your signes of Conquest still Haue under your protection, and make your pleasure. Here is your good Lord, Cæsar. You shall adjure me in all his Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the breefe: of Money, Plate, & Jewels I am possesse of, is exactly valued, not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

Seleucus. Here Madam,

Cleo. This is my Treasurer, let him speake (my Lord) upon his perill, that I haue refer'd To my selfe nothing. Speake the truth Seleucus.

Seleucus. Madam, I had rather feele my lippes, then to my perill speake that which is not.

Cæsar. What have I kept backe.

Seleucus. Enough to purchase what you have made known

Cæsar. Nay blufh not Cleopatra, I approve Your Wifdomde in the dede.

Cleo. See Cæsar. Oh here, How the things are fall'd: Mine will now be yours, and should we drugg fates, yours would be mine, the ingratitude of this Seleucus, doth Even make me wilde. Oh, Slue, of no more truth Then love that's hy'd: What goest thou backe, I shall Go backe I warrant thee: but let each shine eyes Though they had wings. Slue, Slue-de-lies, Villian, Dog. O rarest tale.

Cæsar. Good Queene, let vs interest you.

Cleo. O Cæsar, what a woundinge frame is this, that thou vouchasfing here to visite me. doing the Honour of thy Lordinnesse To one to mecke, that mine owne Servant should Parcell the summe of my digraces, by Addition of his Emory. Say (good Cæsar) That I some Lady truffles have refer'd, Immoment toyes, things of such Dignitie As we got moste moderne Friends withall, and lay Some Nomber taken I have kept apart

For Romans and Ottomans, to induce Their mediation, must I be unfolded With one that I have bred: The Gods: it emites me Beneath the fall I haue. Prythee go hence, or I shall thaw the Cyderes of my spirits.

Through th' Affees of my chance: We't thou a man, Thou would'lt haue mercy on me.

Cæsar. Forbear Seleucia.

Cleo. Be it known, that we the greatest are mis-thought For things that others doe: and when we fall, We answer others merit, in our name. Are therefore to be pitted.

Cæsar. Cleopatra. Not what you have refer'd, nor what acknowledge'd
Put we'th Roll of Conquest: still bee'ts yours, Betlow it at your pleasure, and believe

Cæsar no Merchand, to make prize with you Of things that Merchants fold. Therefore be cheerd, Make not your thoughts your prisons: No deere Queen, For we intend to do dispoze you, as Your felle shall gua vs counsel: Feede, and sleepe: Our care and pitty is to much upon you, Exeunt Cæsar, and his Traine.

Cleo. He words me Gylles, he words me, That I should not be Noble to my selfe, But beark thee Charmander.

Iras. Finsh good Lady, the bright day is done, and we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hesper is againe, I have spake already, and it is prov'd, Go put it to the hafe.

Char. Madam, I will, Enter Dalibella.

Dido. Where's the Queene?

Char. Behold fir.

Enter. Dalibella.

Dido. Madam, as thereto (worne by your command (Which my love makes Religion to obey)

I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria intends his journey, and within three dayes, Your wish your Children will be fende before, Make your belife of this. I have perform'd Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cleo. Dalibella, I shall remaine your debtor.

Dido. Your Servant.

Cleo. Adieu good Queene, I must attend on Cæsar, Exit Cæsar. Farewell, and thankes.

Now Iras, what think'lt thou? Thou, an Egyptian Pupper shall be thewine In Rome as well as: I Mechanick Slues With greese Aprons, Rules, and Hammers shall Vpflit vs to the view, in their thickes breathes, Rank of grasse dyers shall be enclouded, And fore'd to drinke their vapour.

Ir. The Gods forbid.

Cleo. Nay, to's moste certaine Iras: fawtie Litters Will catch as vs like Strumpets, and foul Bars Ballads vs out a Time. The quice Comedians Extemporally will slape vs, and present Our Alexandriean Revell: Anthony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall fee Some squeaking Cleopatra Boy my great effe I'llpophurse of a Whore.

Ir. O the good Gods!

Cleo. Nay that's certaine.

Ir. Icne other feet? for I am sure mine Nails Are stronger then mine eyes.

Cleo.
Clot. Why that's the way to foole their preparation, and to conquer their most absurd intents.

Exit Charmian.

Now Noble Charmian, we'th dispatch indeed.

And when thou hast done this char, He gie the cloath To play till Doomsday: bring out Crowne, and all.

A noise within.

Wherefore, this noise?

Enter a Guardian.

Guard. Here's a rural Fellow, That will not be deny'd by your Highness presence, He brings you Figges.

Clot. Let him come in.

Exit Guardian.

What poore an Instrument.

May do a Noble deed: He brings me liberty:

My Resolution's cou'd, and I have nothing Of woman in me: Now from head to foote I am Marble constant: I now the fleeting Moone No Place is of mine.

Enter Guardian, and Cleon.

Guard. This is the oon.

Cleon. Avoid, and leave him.

Exit Guardian.

Haft thou the pretty worme of Nylus there, That killes and panes not?

Cleon. Truly! I haue him: but I would not be the partie that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortall: those that doe dye of it, doe feldeome or sooner recover.

Cleon. Remember'th thou any that haue dyed on't?

Cleon. Very many, men and women too. I heard of them no longer then yesterday, a very honest woman, but something given to lye, as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty, how she dyed of the biting of it, what name she felt. Truly, she makes a very good report of this worme: but he that will beleue all that they say, will neuer be saved by halfe that they do: but this is most fallable, the Worme's an odde Worme.

Cleon. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clot. I wish you all joy of the Worme.

Cleon. Farewell.

Clot. You must think this (looke you,) that the Worme will do his kinde.

Cleon. I, farewell.

Cleon. I looke you, the Worme is not to bee trusted, but in the keeping of wise people: for indeed, there is no goodmse in the Worme.

Clea. Take thee no care, it shall be heeded.

Cleon. Very good; give it nothing I pray you for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleon. Will you eate me?

Cleon. You must not thinke I am so simple, but I know the diuell himselfe will not eate a woman: I know, that a woman is a dith for the Gods, if the diuell dreffe her not. But truly, these fame whosoever diuels doe the Gods great harme in their women: for in every tenne that they make, the diuels mære fie.

Cleon. Will you eate me.

Cleon. Yes for food: I wish you oth' worme. Exit Cleon. Give me my Robe; put on my Crowne, I have Immortall longings in me. Now no more The iuyce of Egypte Graspe shall moat this lip. Yere, yere, good Ira: quickie: Me thinke's I heare

Anthony. rtine I see him rowsfe himselfe To prase my Noble A.ss, I heare him nock

The lucke of Cefar, which the Gods gue men To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come: Now to that name, my Courage proue my Title, I am Fire, and Ayre, my other Elements I gue to bafker life. So have you done?

Come then, and take the left warmth of my Lippes. Farewell kinde Charmian, Ira, long farewell. Have I the Aitpicke in my lippes? Doft fall?

If thou, and Nature can so gently pare, The stroke of death is a Louers pinch, Which hurts, and is def't.d. Doft thou lye still?

If thou canst vanifie, thou canst vie the world, It is not worth leave-taking.

Cleo. Diffolue thicke cloath, & Raine, that I may say The Gods themselfes do weep.

Cleo. This proves me bafe: If the fist meete the Curled Anthony, He'll make demand of her, and spend that kisse Which is my heaven to have. Come thou mortal wretch, With thy sharpe teeth this knot intrinisicke, Of life at once vnye: Poor venomous Foole, Be angry, and dispers. Oh could'th thou speake, That I might heare thee call great Cesar Aye, unpolicy'd, Cleon. Oh Eaterne Saree.

Clot. Peace, peace, Doft thou not see my Baby at my breast, That fuckles the Nurse sleepe.

Cleo. O breake! O breake! Cleon. As sweet as Ethme, as softlyt as Ayre, as gentle, O Anthony! Nay I will take thee too.

What should I say?

Dyer. Cleon. In this wilde World? So faire thee well.

Now boast thee Death, in thy poefion lye's A Lasse reparallel'd. Downie Windows cloze, And golden Plocebus, neuer be beheld Of eyes against so Royall: your Crownes away, Ile mend it, and then play.

Ente the Guardian rafling on, and Delubilla. 1. Guard. Where's the Queene?

Cleo. Speake fofly, wake her not.

1 Caesar hath fent

Cleo. Too low a Meffenger.

Oh come space, dispatch, I partly feel thee.

1 Approach hou, All's not well: Caesar's begild.

2 There's Delubilla's fent from Cesar: call him.

1 What worke is heere Charmian?

Cleo. Is this well done?

Cleo. It is well done, and fiting for a Princeffe

Defendeoffo many Royall Kings, Ah Souldier, Cleon. Charmian dy's.

Enter Delubilla.

Del. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

Del. Cesar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this: Thy felle art comming To fee perfom'd the dreaded A.ss which thou So sought't to hinder.

Enter Cesar and all his Trainee, marching.

All. A way there, a way for Cesar.

Del.
The Tragedie of Anthony and Cleopatra.

Dol. Oh sir, you are too sure an Auguster.
That you did tell, is done.
Cesar. Beausell as she laff,
She herself did at our purpose, and being Royall,
Took her own way: the manner of their death,
I do not see them bleed.
Dol. Who was last with them?
1 Guard. A gentle Countryman, that brought her Tigre.
This was his Baskets.
Cesar. Pippin'd then.
2 Guard. Oh Caesar:
This Claudiam I did but now, as flood and Spake:
I found her tripping up the Diderum;
On her dead Misfits tremblingly the flood,
And on the Border drope.
Cesar. Oh Noble weakness:
If they had swallowed poison, 't would appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Anthony
In her strong toy of Grace.
Dol. Here's on her brest,
There is a vent of Blood, and something blowne,
The like is on her Arme.
1 Guard. This is an Alpikes trode,
And these Figge-leaves have flame upon them, such
As the Alpikes leaves upon the Canes of Nyle.
Cesar. Most probable
This is the dyed: for her Physician tells mee
She hath partial de conclusions infinite
Of safe ways to dye. Take up her bed,
And bear her Women from the Monument,
She shall be buried by her Anthony.
No Ghost upon the earth shall clip it
A payre so famous: high events as these Strike those that make them: and their Story is
No life in piny, then his Glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army shall
In solemn mew, attend this Funerall,
And then to Rome. Come Dostabella, see
High Order, in this great Solennity. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.
Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. On do not meet a man but Frowne. Our bloods no more obey the Heavens: Then our Courtiers: Still seems, as do the Kings.

2. Gent. But what's the matter?

1. His daughter, and the heiress of a kynghome (whom He dayd) to his ward (for Sonne, a Widow That late be married) his rh in her selfe. Vnto a poore but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded, Her Husband banifh'd; the imprison'd, all Is outward forrow, though I thinke the King Be touch'd at very heart.

2. None but the King?

1. He that hath left her too: so is the Queen, That most deare the March. But not a Courtier, Although they wear their faces to the best Of the Kings looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowle at.

2. And why so?

1. He that hath mis'd the Princess, is a thing Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her, (I meane, that he is a noble man, And therefore banifh'd) is a Creature, such, As to trot the Regions of the Earth For one, his like: there would be something failing In him, that should compare. I do not thinke, So faire an Outward, and such fluxe Within Endowes a man, but he.

2. You speake him faire.

1. I do extend him (Sir) within himselfe, Crush him together, rather then vnfold His mesure duly.

2. What's his name, and Birth?

1. I cannot delue him to the roote: His Father Was cal'd Silvius, who did joyn his Honor Against the Romanes, with Caiusfanum. But had his Titles by Tenetian, whom, He feru'd with Glory, and admiurd Succeffe: So gain'd the Sur-addition, Lematus. And had (besides this Gentleman in question) Two other Sonnes, who in the Warrs of'th' time Dy'de with their Swords in hand. For which, their Father The old, and fond of them, rote them, such sorrow That ne quit Beang; and his gentle Lady

Bigge of this Gentleman (our Theame) deceas As he was borne. The Kynge he takes the Babe To his protection, call him Pofhumus Leuanus, Breeds him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber, Puts to him all the Learninges that his time Could make him the reciever of, which he tooke As we do ase, fail as 'twas misinftert, And'in's Spring, became a Harueft. Lit'd in Court (Which rase is to do) most prais'd, most loft'd, A sample to the young; to the more Mature, A glasse that feared them: and to the greater, A Childre that guided Dutards. To his Mitris, (For whom he now is banifh'd) her owne price Proclaims how the eftem'd him; and his Virtue By her elect'd may be truely read, what kind of man he is.

2. I honor him, even out of your report.

But pray you tell me, is the sole childe to'th' King?

1. His onely childe: He had two Sonner (if this be worth your hearing, Marke it) the eldes of them, at three yeares old 'Th'worthing cloathes, the other from their Nursery Were stolne, and to this house, no gheeze in knowledge Which way they went.

2. How long is this ago?

1. Some twenty yeares.

2. That a Kings Children should be so conuey'd, So fackly guarded, and the search so fow. That could not trace them.

1. Howsoeuer, 'tis strange,

Or that the negligence may well be laught'd at?

Yet is it true Sir?

2. I do well beleue you.

1. We must forbeare. Here comes the Gentleman, The Queene, and Princess.

Exeunt

Enter the Queene, Pofhumus, and Imogen.

Qe. No, be sliar'd you shall not finde me (Daughter) After the fander of molt Step-Mothers, Ennilley'd vato you. You're my Prisoner, but Your Gaoler shall deliuer you the keyes.
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

That locke vp your restraint. For you Pofhumus,
So foon as I can win th'offended King,
I will be knowne your Advocate: marry yet
The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good
You leant vs into his Sentence, with what patience
Your wife & one may informe you.

Poft. 'Tis for your Highnesse,
I will from hence to day.

2. You know the peril:
Ile fetch a tume about the Garden, pitying
The pangs of bard Affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you should not speake together. Exit

Is. O dissembling Curstie! How fine this Tyrant
Can tickle where flie wounds? My deare Husband,
I something feare my Fathers wrath, but nothing
(Always refer'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone,
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes: not comforted to live,
But that there is this I well in the world,
That I may fee again.

Poft. My Queene, my Milflris:
O Lady, weep no more, lease I give cause
To be suspect'd of more tenderness
Then doth become a man. I will remaine
The loyall ft husband, that did e'er plight right.
My refidence in Rome, at one Floreus,
Wife to my Father was a Friend, to me
Knowne but by Letter; thilther write (my Queene)
And with mine eyes, Ite drink the words you fend,
Though Inke be made of Gall. Enter Queene.

Qu. Bebriefe, I pray you:
If the King come, I shall incure, I know not
How much of his displeasure: yet Ile more him
To walk this way: I neuer do him wrong,
But he do's buy my Injuries, to be Friends:
Payes decre for my offences.

Poft. Should we be taking leave
As long a terme as yet we have to live,
The loathneffe to depart, would grow: A dieu,
Ino. Nay,flay a little:
 Were you but rising forth to syre your selfe,
Such hasting is we are too petty. Locke here (Loue)
This Diamond was my Mother's, take it (Heart)
But keepe it till you woo another Wife,
When Ingres is dead.

Poft. How, how? Another?
You gentle Gods,give me but this Iauce,
And leave vp my embracements from a nest,
With bonds of death. Remaine, remaine thou here,
While fente can keepe it on: And live euer, fairest,
As I (my poore felte) did exchange for you
To your so infinite losse; so in our trifles
I fhall winne of you. For my fike wear this,
It is a Manacle of Loue, Ile place it
Upon this payfet Prisoner.

Ino. O the Gods!
When fhall we fee againe?
Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Poft. Alas, the King.

Cym. Thou barfeth thing, suyond hence,from my lights
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy vayne thinneffe, thou dyell, Away,
Thou'rt payton to my blood,
Poft. The Gods proteé the,

And bleffe the good Remainders of the Court:
I am gone.

Ino. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharpe then this.

Cym. O diuoyall thing,
This fhould it not repaye my youth, thou haue not
Ayeares age on mee.

Ino. I beezech you Sir,
Harme not your felle with your vexation,
I am fentiffle of your Wrath; A Touch more rare
Sublores all pang, all fears,
Cym. Paff Crape O Obedienc?
Ino. Paff hope, and in difpiare,that way paff Grace,
Cym. That might'ft haue had
The folfe Sonne of my Queene.

Ino. O blefleth, that I might not: I chose an Eagle,
And did asoay a Purtrocke.

Cym. Thou took't a Beggar, would haue made my Throne, a Seret for balenelle.

Ino. No, I rather added a luftre to it.

Cym. (O thou vile one!

Ino. Sir,
It is your fault that I haue lou'd Pofhumus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: Outer-buies mee
Almoft the fumme he payes.

Cym. What art thou mad?

Ino. Almoft Sir: Heaven reforre me: would I were A Next-heards Daughter, and my Leonceus
Our Neighbour-Shepherds Sonne.
Enter Queene.

Cym. Thou foolish thing:
They were againe together: you haue done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And peneth vp.

Qu. Beezech your patience: Peace
Deere Lady daughtere, peace. Sweet Soueraigne,
Leave vs to our felues, and make your felte fonne comfort
Out of your bell aduice.

Cym. Nay let her languifh
A drop of blood a day, and being aged
Dye of this Folly. Enter Piifante.

Qu. Fye, you must give way:
Here is your Seruant. Hownow Sir? What newes?

Piif. My Lord your Sonne, drew on my Master.

Qu. Hah!
No harme I truft is done?

Piif. There might haue beene,
But that my Master rather plaid, then fough't,
And had no helpe of Anger: they were patt'd
By Gentlemen, at hand.

Qu. I am very glad on't.

Ino. Your Son's my Fathers friend, he takes his part
To draw upon an Exile. Obraue Sir,
I would they were in Affricken both together,
My felle by with a Needle, that I might pricke
The goer backe. Why came you from your Master?

Piif. On his command: he would not suffer mee
To bring him to the Houen: left these Notes
Of what commands I fhould be subject too,
Whent'peas'd you to employe me.

Qu. This hath beene
Your faithfull Seruant: I dare lay mine Honour
He will remaine fo.

Piif. I humbly thank you Highnesse.
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Pray walk a while.
Imo. About some half hour hence,
Pray you speak with me;
You shall (at least) go see my Lord abroad.
For this time leave me.

Exeunt.

Enter Cloten, and two Lords.
Sir, I would advise you to shift a Shirt; the Violence of Action hath made you a Sacrifice; where are you come out, ayre comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.
Clot. If my Shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
How I hurt him?
No fault: not so much at his patience.
Hurt him? His bodie's a passible Carcasse if he bee not hurt. It is a throughfare for Steele if he be not hurt.
His Steele was in debt, it went o'th'Backe-side the Towne.

Clot. The Villain would not stand me.
No, but he fled forward still, toward your face.
Stand you there you have Land enough of your owne: But he added to your hueing, gave you some ground.
As many Inches, as you have Oxeans (Puppets)
Clot. I would they had not come betweene vs.
So would I, till you had mesur'd how long a Foole you were upon the ground.

Clot. And that free should love this Fellow, and resure mee.
If it be a sin to make a true election, the is damn'd.
Sir, as I told you always; her Beauty & her Braine go not together. She's a good signe, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.
She laughs not upon Foolish, least the reflection should hurt her.

Clot. Come, lie to my Chamber: would there had been some hurt done.
I wish not so, unless it had bin the, fall of an Asse, which is no great hurt.

Clot. You go with vs?
I'll attend your Lordship.
Clot. Nay come, let's go together.
2 Well my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, and a Spaniard.
Iach. Believe it Sir, I have seene him in Britaine; hee was then of a Creffent note, expected to prove so woorty, as since he hath beene allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admiration, though the Catalogue of his endowments had bin tabiled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.
Phil. You speake of him when he was leefe unchurch'd, then now hee is, with that which makes him both without, and within.

French. I have seene him in France: wee had very many there, could behold the Sunne, with as fine eyes as hee.
Iach. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her valw, then his owne, words him (I doubt not) a great deale from the matter.
French. And then his banishment.
Iach. 1, and the approbation of those that wepe this lamentable divorce vnder her colours, are wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a Beggar without leath quality. But how comes this to be inquiring with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His Father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I have bin often bound for no leath then my life.

Enter Pelham. Heere cometh the Britaine. Let him be so entertained among you, as futes with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a Stranger of his quality. I beteech you all be better known to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble Friend of mine. Howe Worthy heis, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather then flory him in his owne hearing.

Fren.ch. Sir, we have knowne together in Orleas.
Poff. Since when I have bin debitor to you for courteties, which I will be-ever to pay, and yet pay fell.

Fren.ch. Sir, you o're-rate my poore kindred. I was glad I did atone my countryman and youit had beene pitto you should have beene put together, with so mort-tall a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so flight and trivial a nature.

Poff. By your pardon Sir, I was then a young Traveler, rather than'd to goe even with what I heard, than in more reflection, upon my own experience: but upon my mended judgement (as I offend to say it is mended) my Quarell was not altogether flight.

Fren.ch. Faith yes, to be put to the abritrement of Swords, and by such two, that would by all likeliness have confounded one the other, or have faile both.

Iach. Can we with manners, ask what was the difference?

Fren.ch. Safely, I thinkke, 'twas a contention in pub-

licke, which may (without contradiction) suffer the report, it was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of vs fell in praise of our Country-

Miserfies. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloody affirnation) his to be more Fair, Vertuous, Wife, Chaffe, Contain, Qualifie, and leath appearable then any, the taste of our Ladies in France.

Iach. That Lady is not now living; or this Gentle-mans opinion by this, worne out.

Poff. She holds her Vertue full, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so faire profess her, 'tis ore of Italy.

Poff. Being so faire prou'd as I was in France; I wold abate her nothing, though I profess my selfe her Adorer, not her Friend.

Iach. As faire, and as good: a kind of hand in hand compeence, had beene something too faire, and too good for any Lady in Britaine; if she went before others. I have seen that Diamond of yours out-litters many I have beheld; I could not believe the excelled many: but I have not seene the most precious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Poff. I prais'd her, as I rated her: so do I my Stone.

Iach. What do you esteeme it at?

Poff. More then the world enioyes.

Iach. Either your unparagon'd Miftris is dead, or th'o'ous can't lie but a trifle.

Poff. You are mistaken: the one may be folde or gi-ten, or if there was wealth enough for the purchase, or merite for the guilt. The other is not a thing for sale, and only the grace of the Gods.

Iach. Which the Gods have given you?

Poff. Which by their Graces I will keep.

Jach. You may weare her in title yours: but you know strange Fowle light upon neighbouring Ponds. Your Ring may be folde too, for your brace of prizcapa-

ble Estimances, the one is but faire, and the other Cu-

nial; A cunning Thifie, or a (that way) accomplish'd Counsellor, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Poff. Your Italy contains none fọ accomplisht'd a

Courtier to convince the Honour of my Miftris: if in the holding or losse of time, you term her faire, I do nothing doubt you have store of Thieves, notwithstanding I feare not my Ring.

Poff. Let vs leave here, Gentlemen?

Jach. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy Signior I thanked him, makes no stranger of me, we are familiar at first.

Poff. With five times so much concertation, I shold get ground of your faire Miftris; make her go backe, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Poff. No, no.

Jach. I dare thereupon pawne the myote of my Eflate, to your Ring, which in my opinion ọe-values it more. If you will have it so, I will lay my Confederation, then her Reputation. And to base your offence herein to, I durst attempt it against any Lady in the world.

Poff. You are a great desce abus'd in too bold a perfession, and I doubt not y'are faulting what ụ're worthy of by your Attempt.

Jach. What's that?

Poff. A Repulse though your Attempt (as you call it) declare more, a punishment too.

Poff. Gentlemen enough of this, it came in too fo-

dly, let it sile as it was borne, and I pray you be better acquainted.

Jach. Would I had put my Mistates, and my Neighbors on th'approbation of what I have spoke.

Poff. What Lady would you chuse to affiale?

Jach. Yours, whom in confaience you thinkes stands

so safe, I will lay you ten thousands Ducquets to your Ring, that commend me to the Court where your Lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunitie of a second conference, and I will bring from thence, that Honor of hers, which you imagine so refin'd.

Poff. This is but a custom in your tongue: you beare a greater purpose I hope.

Jach. I am the Matter of my speach, and would under-go what's spoken, I speake.

Poff. Will you? I shall but lend my Diamond till your returne: let there be Coquantes drawne betweene. My Miftris exceeds in goodness, the hugeness of your unworthy thinking. I dare you to this match: here's my Ring.

Phil. I will have it to lay.

Iach. By the Gods it is one: if I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enoy d the destre bodily part of your Miftris:my ten thousand Ducquets are yours, so is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in; Sheer your Jewell, this your Jewell, and my Gold are yours: provided I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Peri. I embrace the Conditions, let us have Articles between us: only thus far you shall answer, if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to vindicate, and against all your Enemy, there is no worth our Debate. If shee remaine valuer, you not making it appear otherwise: for your ill opinion, and if you have made her to her chasity, you shall answer me with your Sword.

Such Your hand, a Command: we will have these things sett downe by lawfull Consent, and through away for Britaine, leafe the Bargaine should catch挛ee, andpromise I will fetch my Gold, and shew two Wagers recorded.

Peri. Agreed.

Fare. Will this hold, thinke you?

Peri. Signior Iachimo will not from it.

Pray let us follow em.

Scene Sexta.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Carthia.

Qu. Whiles ye the device's on ground, Gather about Flora, and about, and make base. Who's he the note of them?

Lady. I Madam.

Queen. Dispatch.

Exit Ladies.

New Master Doctor, have you brought these drugges?

Car. Peruse then your Hughes, I there they are: Madam: But I do clear your Grace, without offence (My Conscience bids me take) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poynant Compounds, Which are the meanezts of a longuishing death: But though low, deadly.

Qu. I wonder, Doctor.

Thou ask'st me such a Question: Have I not bene Thy Pipill longe? Haft thou not learn'd me how To make Perlimes? Dillill? Prefcrue? Yes, so, That our great King's benefic death wooe me off. For my Confessions? Having thus faire proceeded, (Valence thouk'st me dumbish) is't not more That I did amplify my judgement in Other Consequences? I will try the forces Of these thy Compounds, on such Creatures as We cannot worth the hanging (but none humane) To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their AG, and by them gather Those feuercall vsures, and effects. Car. Your Haughtiefl

Shall from this prattice, but make hard your heart: Befides, the feeing these effects will be Both noyous, and infectious.

Qu. O content thee.

Enter Pisa.

Pisa. Here comes a flattering Rascal, upon him Will I first worke: He's for his Master, And enemy to my Sonne. How now Pisaio? Doctor, your servite for this time is ended, Take your owne way.

Car. I do suffice you, Madam, But you shall do no harme.

Qu. Heearthe thee, a word.

Car. I do not like her. She doth thinke she's a Stronge ling'ring poyson: I do know her spirit, And will not trull one of her matise, with A druge of such dam'd Nature. Thofe the ha's, Will stiffeplie and dull the Sente swhile, Which first (perchance) free'prone on Cat's and Dog's; Then afterward vp higher: but there is No danger in what fwayne of death it makes, More then the locking vp the Spirit a time, To be more freely, running. She is soon'd With a maff faille effect: and I, the truer, So to be faire with her from death.

Qu. No further urgent, Doctor, Yet still I fend for thee.

Car. I humbly take my leave.

Qu. Wreaps the full (suffi thou!) Do not thou think in time She will not quench, and let infraductions enter Where Fury now polluteth? Do thou worke: When thou shalt bring me word she loves my Sonne, I'll call thet on the infant, thou art then As great as is thy Master: Greater, for His Fortunes all ye specheless, and his name Is as last gaspe. Returne he cannot, nor Continue where he is: To thinke his being, Is to exchange one misery with another, And every day that continues to say A dayes worke in him. What shuthe thou expext To be dependuer on a thing that lyes? Who cannot be new built, nor ha's no friends So much, as but to prop him? Thou Tak'st it vp Thou know'st not what: But take it for thy labour, It is a thing I made, which hath the King Five times: edg'd and cleft, I do not know What is more Cerdwall. Nay, I prize thee take it, It is an eftrengh of a further good That I mean'd to thee: Tell thy Miftires how The cafe stands with her: doth, as from thy selfe; thinke what a chance thou change it on, but thinke Thou haft thy Miftres well, to boaste my Sonne, Who shall take notice of thee. He move the King To any shape of thy Prefcrue, such As thou'lts define: and then my selfe, I cheerfully, That let thee on to this deeter, an bound To load thee merit richly. Call my women, Exit Pifia. Think on my words. A flie, and constant knave, Not to be shrank'd: the Agent for his Master, And the Remembrance of her, to hold The band-fitt to her Lord, I have given him that, Which if she take, shall quite vnpou thee Of Ledgers for her Sweetie : and which, the after Except she bend her humor, shall be affid' to taste of too.

Enter Pifia, and Ladies.

So, so: Well done, well done: The Violets, Cowslippers, and the Prime-Roses, Bear to my Closet; Fare thee well, Pifia. Think on my words. Exit Qu. and Ladies.

Pifia. And shall I do: But when to my good Lord, I proue vntre, He chooseth my selfe: there's all Ie do for you. Exit.
Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father estrail, and a Stepmame false,
A Foolish Suitor to a Wedded Lady,
That dasheth Husband and mistid: O thou Husband,
My supremae Crowne of griefe, and those repeated
Vexations of it. Had I bin Theefe-frone,
As my two Brothers happy; but most miserable.
Is the defires that glorious! Biffed be thefho
How meanes be ore, that have their honest wills,
Which feations comfort. Who may this be? Eye.

Exit Pisanio, and Imbotho.

Pifca. Madam a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.

Iach. Changye you, Madam: The Worthy Leonaus is in safety,
And greetes your Highnesse dlearly.

Imo. Thanks good Sir,
You're kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of doore, most rich:
If she be furnished with a mind to rare
She is alone th' Arabin-Bird; and I
Have lof't the wager. Boldness be my Friend:
Arms me Audacity from head to foote,
Or take the Parthian I shall flying fight,
Rather directly fly.

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Noblest war, to whose kindness I am most infinate sted. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your tricht.

Still I read aloud.
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warn'd by th'eff, and rale it thankfully.
You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I.
Faute words to bid you, and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks fairest Lady:
What, are you mad? Hath Nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted Arch, and the rich Crop
Of sea and land, which can diftinguifh twinkle
Those three orbs above, and the fword Stones
Upon the number'd Beef, and can we not Partition make with Speicles to precious
Twinkle faire, and foulde? I

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be th'eye: for Ape, and Monkeys
Twinkle two fuch she, who would chafe this way, and Contemne with mowers the other. Nor th'judgment:
For Idiots in this cafe of favour, would
Be wisely defign'd: Nor th'Appetite.
Slavery to fuch neare Excellence, oppo'd
Should make defire vomit emptineffe,
Not fo allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter tow?

Iach. The Cloyed will:
That fature yet vnufafified defire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running; Rauning fift the Lambe,
Longs after for the Garbage.

Imo. What, dere Sir,
Thus rap you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks Madam: well: Beleefeth you Sir,
Define my Hap a Subje, where I did leave him,
He's strange and preefhit.

Pifca. I was going Sir,
To give him welcome.

Imo. Contempe well my Lord?
His health beter? you?

Iach. Well, Madam,
Imo. Is he fiper'd to mirth? I hope he is,

Iach. Exceeding pleasant: none a stranger there,
So merry, and fo gamefome: he is call'd
The Britaine Reueller.

Imo. When he was here
He did chance to fadneffe, and oft times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him fade.
There is a Frenchman his Companion, one
An eminent Monfaire, that it feemes much loues
A Gallian-Gife at home. He furnaces
The thicke fighes from him; while the idly Britaine,
(Your Lord I mean) fannoys from his free lungs Seris oh,
Can my fides hold, to think that man who knows
By Hiiftory Report, or his owne prove.
What woman is, yet who the cannot choose
But muff bewill's free hours languifh:
For affured bonage?

Imo. Will my Lord fay so?

Iach. Madam, with his eyes in flood, with laughe.
It is a Recreation to be by
And he he mocke the Frenchman:
But Hauem's knowe some men are much too blame.

Imo. Not I hope.

Iach. Not he.
But yet Haue'n's bounty towards him, might
Be vid more thankyfull. In himfelfe tis much;
In you which I account his by you all Talents.
Which if I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity you.

Imo. What do you pitty Sir?

Iach. Two Creatures hearely.

Imo. Am I one Sir?

Imo. You looke on me: what wrack difcerne in you
Deferves your pitty?

Iach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiamt Sun, and Solace
I'm Dugged over by a Snuffe.

Imo. I pray you Sir,
Deliver with more openneffe your anwercs
To my demands. Why do you pitty me?

Iach. That others do,
(If I was about to lye) none your — but
It is an office of the Gods to revenge it,
Not mine to speake on.

Imo. You do feeme to know
Something of me, or what concerns me? pray you
Since doubtings things go ill, often hurts more
Then to be sure they do. For Certainties
Either are palter remedies; or timely knowing,
The remedy then bastes. Discouer to me
What both you ftore and flap.

Iach. Had I this checcke
To bathe my Lips upon this hand, whose touch
(Whose every touch) would force the Feathers foule
To th'oth of loyalty. This obiect, which Takes prifoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fiering it once by heere, should I (dame'd then)

Sturt
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Sauuer with lippes as common as the flyres
That mount the Capitol: Toyne grippes, with hands
Made hard with hourly fallhood (Iaffood as
With labour) then by peeping in an eye
Safe and ilustrious as the smoke light
That's fed with thinking Tallow: it were sic
That all the plagues of Hell should at on tyme
Encounter such resolv.

Imo. My Lord, I fear
Has forgot Buttrall.

Lact. And himselfe, not I
Inclined to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggary of his change: but 'tis your Graces
That from my mutt Confession, to my tongue,
Charmes this report out.

Imo. Let me heare no more.

Lact. O dearer Soule: your Caufe doth strike my hart
With pitty, that doth make me fiek. A Lady
So faire, and fenten to an Emperie
Would make the great/l King double, to be partner'd
With Thomboyes hy'd, with that felle exhibition
Which your owne Coiffers yeild: with dites'd ventures
That play with all Infirmities for Gold,
Which rottenne faire can tend Nature.
Such boy'duffie
As well might poiyon Poyfon. Bereueng'd,
Or the that bore you, was no Queene, and you
Reape from your great Stecke.

Imo. Reueng'd.

Lact. How should I be reueng'd? If this be true,
(As I have fuch a Heart, that both mine eares
Mouf not in hafe abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reueng'd?

Lact. Should he make me
Lye like Diana's Priift, bewrayd cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable rampes
In your delight, upon your parte: reuenge it.
I dedicate my felle to your sweet pleasure,
More Noble then that tunnagates to your bed,
And will continue falt to your Affection,
Still clofe, as fere.

Imo. What hoes, Pfajnus?

Lact. Let me my fervice tender on your lippes.

Imo. Away. I do condemne mine eares, that haue
So long attended thee. If thou wert Honourable Thou would hau' jeold told this tale for Vertue, not
For such an end thou feek'lt, as make, as strange:
Thou wrong'ft a Gentleman, who is as faire
From thy report, as thou from Honor: and Solicites herre a Lady, that did disdaines
The, and the Diuell alike.

Lact. What hoes, Pfajnus? The King my Father fhall be made acquainted
Of thy Affaults if he stilll thinkes it fit,
Afavay Stranger in his Court, to Mart
As in a Romish Stew, and to expound
His beaullty minde to vs: he hath a Courr
He little cares for, and a Daughter, who
He not repleceth at all. What hoes, Pfajnus?

Lact. O happy Leonaut I may fay,
The credit that thy Lady hath of thee
Deferves thy trayt, and thy most perfect goodneffe
Her affur'd credit. Blesfed line you long,
A Lady to the wortheft firs, that ever
Country call'd this; and you his Mifbris, onely
For the most wortheft fit. Give me your pardon,
I have toke this to know if your Affiance
Were deeply rooted, and fhall make your Lord,
That which he is, new o're: And he is one
The treueft manner'd: such a holy Witch,
That he enchanteth Societies into him:
Halfe all men hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Lact. He fits among men, like a defended God;
He hath a kind of Honor lets him off,
More then a mortall feeming. Be not angrie
(Moft, me your Princeffe) that I have auentur'd
To try your taking of a falf report, which hath Honour'd with confimation your greatest judgement,
In the election of a Sir, fo rare,
Which you know, cannot erre. The loue I beare him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the Gods made you
(VNhile all others) chaffelefte. Pray your pardon.

Imo. All's well Sir:

Take my powre ith Court for yours.

Lact. My humble thankes: I had almoft forgot
To reprez your Grace, but in a small requeft,
And yet of moment too, for it concernes:
Your Lord, my felfe, and other Noble Friends
Are partners in the busiuenffe.

Imo. Pray what is't?

Lact. Some dozen Romanes of vs, and your Lord
(The beft Feather of our wing ftuare mingled fummes
To buy a Pretent for the Emperor:
Which if the Fadour for the reft) have done
In France: *his Plate of rare deuice, and Jewels
Of rich, and exquisit forme, their valeues great,
And I am something curious, being strange
To have them in fafe Howage: May it please you
To take them in protection.

Imo. Willingly:

And pawnne mine Honor for their safety, since
My Lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my Bed-chamber.

Lact. They are in a Trunke
Attended by me: I will make bold
To send them to you, onely for this night:
I muft go to morrow.

Imo. O no, no.

Lact. Yes: I beeche thee: or I fhall forft my word
By lengthning my returne. From Gallia,
I croft the Seas on purpose, and on promise
To fee your Grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to morrow.

Lact. O I muft Madam.

Therefore I fhall beeche you, if you pleafe
To greet your Lord with writing, don't to night,
I have out-flood my time, which is mattiall
To th'ender of our Pretent.

Imo. I will write:

Send your Trunke to me, it fhall safe be kept,
And truly yeelded you; you're very welcome, Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there euer man had fuch lucke? when I kill'd the Lache upon the wall, to bee his away? I had a hundred pound on't: and the hifton Jacke-an-Apes.
must take me vp for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oathes of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1. What got he by that? you have broke his pate with your Bowie.

2. This wit had bin like him that broke it: it would have run all out.

CLOT. What a Gentleman is disposed to swear so is but for any flutters by to distrall his clothes. Ha?

2. No my Lord; nor creep the ears of them.

CLOT. Wherfore dog? I gave his satisfaction? would he had been one of my Rank.

2. To have sent it I'd like a Fodle.

CLOT. I can no more act more at any thing in this world: a pox on't! had rather be so Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the Queen my Mother, every thing. Stae his belly his fall of Fighting, as I cannot say and downe as like a Cock, that no body can match.

1. You are Cocke and Cepon too, and you crow Cock, with your ceminbe.

CLOT. Sayeth thou?

2. It is not fit your Lordship should undertake every Controversie, that you gie offence too.

CLOT. No, I know that but it is't I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2. It is fit for your Lordship only.

CLOT. Why so I say.

1. Did you heere of a Stranger that's come to Court night?

2. A Stranger, and I not know out?

1. There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought one of Leonatus Friends.

CLOT, Leonatus? A buffett Raffael; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?

1. One of your Lordships Pages.

CLOT. Is it. so I went to looke upon him? Is there no description?

2. You cannot derogate my Lord.

CLOT. Not easilie I think.

2. You are a Fodle gaunted, therefore your Illnes being too light do not derogate.

CLOT. Come, He goe to this Italian: what I have left to day at Bowies, He wanne to night of him. Come i' go.

Enter, That such a wanton Duell as is his Mother Should yield the world this Affe: A woman, that Bears all downe with her Braine, and this her Sonne, Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And loose eightene, Alas proue Princesse, Thou dignes Imagin', what thou endur'st, But a Father they lift Stee dampe gauz'd, A Mother hourly apprizing glass: A Woone, More hateful then the foule expulsion is Of sky deere Husband. Than that horrid Aet Of the duell, he'd make the Heavens hold firme The walls of stycke vaner Honour, Keep whan'k'd That Temple by fide mind, that thou maist stand Tenoy the bion'd Lord and this great Land.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imagin, in her Bed, and a Lady,

1. Whose sheere? My woman: Helena?

2. Please you madam.

1. What house is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, Madam.

1. I have read three hours then:

Mine eyes are awake,
Fold down the leaf, where I have left; to bed,
Take not away the Taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four the clock,
I prythee call me: Sleepeth haze'd me wholly.
To you; protection I commend me, Gods,
From Faysties, and the Tempeters of the night,
Guard me befeech yee.

SLEEPER.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clauses, and Lords.

1. Your Lordship in the most patient man in life, the most coldfet that ever turn'd vp Alec.

2. It would make any man cold to loose.

1. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your Lordship; You are not hol, and furious when you winne.
Winning will put any man into courage: if I could get this foolish image, I should have gold enough: it is almost morning, it is not:

1. Day, my Lord.

Clot. I would this Musick would come: I am adjured to give her Musick a morning, they say it will penetrate.

Enter Adonis.

Come on, tune: I will penetrate her with your fingering; so I will try with tongue too; if none will do, let her examine, but he'll have to ease. First, a very excellent good conceited thing; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her consider.

SONG.

Harke, harke, the Larks at Heaven's gates sing, and Phoebus gives airs,

His Steeds to water at those Springs on chaste追随 flowers they sees,

And mingle Mary-buds to open their Golden eyes

With every thing that pretty is, my Lady sweet arise:

Arise, arise.

So, get you gone; if this pen trance, I will consider your Musick the better: if not do, it is a voice in her ears which Horfe-hairs, and Calouse-guts, nor the voice of vnpuaded Eunuch to boot, can never amed.

Enter Cymbeline, and Queen.

2. Heere comes the King.

Clot. I am glad I was vp so late, for that's the reason I was vp fo early. In my choofe but take this Service I have done, fatherly. Good morrow to your Maievity, and to my gracious Mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our flern daughter, Will she not forth?

Clot. I have affay'd her with Musickes, but the vouch-fates no notice.

Enter The Exile of her Minion too new, She hath not yet forgot him, some more time Mufet wear the print of his remembrance on's, And then she's yours.

Qu. You are most bound to o'th'King, Who let's go by so vantages, that may Preferre you to her daught'r: Frame your felse To orderly solenily, and be reverend. With spinelefe of the fefions: make denials Encafe your Seruices: so feeme, as if You were infidius to do thofe duties which You tender to her: that you in all obey her, Saue when command to your diftinnion tends, And therein you are fenelefe.

Clot. Senfelefe? Not fo,

Mer. So like you (Sir) Ambassadors from Rome; The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy Fellow,

Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: we must receyue him According to the Honor of his Sender, And towards himselfe, his goodnefe fore-spent on vs. We must extend our note: our deere Sonne, When you have gien good morning to your Miftris, Attend the Queene, and vs, we shal have need To employ you towards this Roman,

Come our Queene.

Clot. If he be vp, he speake with her: if not, Let her lyce still, and dreame: by your leve hoa, I know her women are about her: what

Phil. What meanes do you make to him?

Po. Not any: but abuse the change of Time,
Quake in the present winters flate, and with
That warmer dayes would come: In these fear'd hope
I barely gratifie your love; they faying
I must the much your debtor.

Phil. Your very good neffe, and your company,

Lacb. First, her Bed-chamber
(Where I confesse I slept not, but professe
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Taffety of Silke and Siluer, the Story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Sarah for'd above the Bankes, or for
The preff of Busters, or Price. A piece of Worke
Sobrably done, so rich, that it did flriue
In Workemanship, and Value, which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely, and exactly wrought
Since the true life out was——

Post. This is true.
And thus you might have heard of her, by me,
Or by some other.

Lacb. More particular
Must till my knowledge.

Post. So they mutt,
Or do your Honours injury.

Lacb. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-piece
Chatte Disan, baking: neither few I figures
So likely to report themselves: the Carter
Was another Natures preemie, out-weather her,
Motion, and Bread left out.

Post. This is a thing
Which you might form Relation like wise respe,
Being, as it is, much spake of.

Lacb. The Rooffe of the Chamber,
With golden Chelurins is fitted, Her Andiron's
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Siluer, each on one foote standing, nicely
Dependin upon their Branches.

Post. This is her Honor:
Let it be granted you have seen all this (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing faues
The wager you have laid.

Lacb. Then if you can
Be pale, I begge but faue to sake this jewell: See,
And now'tis up against: it must be married
To that your Diamond, I keepe it em.

Post. Tace.

Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Lacb. Sir (I thank you) that
She erip't it from her Arme. I fee her yet:
Her pretty Action, did out-flout her guilt,
And yet entwist it too: she gave it me,
And said, she priz'd it once,

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off
To fent it me.

Lacb. She writes so to you? doth she?

Post. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Here's, take this too,
It is Baffike wro't monumene,
Kille's me to looke out! Let there be no Honor,
Where there is Beauty: Truth, where resemblance: Loue,
Where there's another man. The Vowes of Women,
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Then they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
O, about me more faire.

Phil. Hate patience Sir,
And take your Ring againe,'tis not yet worn:
It may be probable he left it on.

Who knows if one her women, being corrupted
Hath stolen it from her.

Post. Very true,
And so I hope he came by't: back my Ring,
Render to me some corporall signe about her,
More evident then this: for this was holne,

Lacb. By Jupiter, I had it from her Arme.
Post. Heare you, hee sawes: by Jupiter he sawes,
'Tis true, you may keep the Ring; 'tis true: I am sure
She would not loose it, her Attendants are
All sworn, and honourable: they induce to fleace it?
And by a Stranger: No, he hath enjoy'd her,
The Cognitive of her inconceivable
Is this: she hath bought the name of Whore, thus deely
There, take thy hyre, and all the Friends of Hell
Dumpe themselves between you.

Phil. Sir, be patient.
This is not strong enough to be belov'd
Of one perswaded well off.

Post. Neuer talk on't:
She liet bin colored by him.

Lacb. If you seeke
For further satisfying, vnder her Breast
(When worthy her preffing) lies a Mole, right proud
Of that most delicate Lodging. By my life
I kill it, and it giveth pleasant hang, or
To feele againe, though full. You do remember
This staine upon her?

Post. I, and it doth confirm
Another staine, as bigge as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Lacb. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your Archematke,
Never count the Tunes: Once, and a Million.
Lacb. He be sworn.

Post. No hearing:
If you will sweare you have not done't, you lye,
And I will thee, if thou dost not deny
Thou'lt made me Cuckold.

Lacb. He deny nothing.

Post. O that I had her here, to see her Limb-marke.
I will go there and doe't, sir Court, before
Her Father. He do something.

Phil. Quite besides
The government of Patience. You have wonne:
Let's follow him, and perfect the present wrath
He hath against himselfe.

Lacb. With all my heart.

Enter in State, Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords at one door, and at another, Caius, Lucius; and Attendants.

Caius. Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar with you?

Luc. When Augustus Cæsar (who rememberst as yet Lives in mens eyes, and will to Eares and Tongues Be Theame, and bearing euer) was in this Brittain, And Conquer’d it, Cæfar, then Vincible (Famous in Cæser’s prayers, no while leafe Then in his Feats decrying it for him), And his SuceSSION, granted Rome a Tribute, Yereely three thousand pounds; which(by thee) lastely Is left vnderstand’d.

Caius. And to kill the misrule, Shall be so euer.

Caius. There be many Cæsars,
Ere Such another Iulus: Britaine’s a world By it selfe, and we will nothing pay For wearing our owne Notes.

Luc. That opportunity Which then they had to take from’s, to refume We have againe. Remember Sir, my Liege, The Kings your Ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your life, which stands As Neptunes Parke, rib’d, and pal’d in With Oakes vnscalable, and roaring Waters, With Sands that will not bear your Enemies Boates, But bucke them vp to th’ Top-mast. A kinde of Conquest Cæsar made here, but made not here his bragge. Of Came, and Saw, and Outer-came: with flame, (The first that euer toucht’ him) he was carried From off our Coast, twice beaten: and his Shipping (Poore ignorant Baubles) on our terrible Seas Like Egge-flies mou’d upon their Surges, crack’d As easily against our Rockes. For joy whereof, The fair Cæsars, who was once at point (Oh guges Fortune) to make Cæsar’s Sword, Made Lads Tunes with rejoicing, first bright, And Britains arm with Courage.

Caius. Come, there’s no more Tribute to be paid: our Kingdome is stronger then it was at that time: and (as I said) there is no more such Cæsars, other of them may haue crooked Notes, but to owe such shrill arie Armes, none.

Caius. Son, let your Mother end.

Luc. We haue yet many among vs, can give as hard as Cæsaran. I doe not say I am one; but I haue a hand. Why Tribute? Why should we pay Tribute? If Cæsar can hide the Sun from vs with a Blanket, or put the Moon in his pocket, we wil pay him Tribute for light: else Sir, no more Tribute pray you now.

Caius. You must know,
Till the inturious Romans, did extort This Tribute from vs, we were free. Cæsars Ambition,
Which swell’d so much, that it did almost stretch The sides o’th’World, against all colour here.
Did put the yoake vp’s; which to shake off Creates a warlike people, whom we recknow Our felues to be, we do. Say then to Cæsar,
Our Ancestor was that Multimania, which Ordain’d our Lawes, whose helie the Sword of Cæsar Hath too much mangled; whole repayne, and franshice, Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed, The Rome be the more angry, Multimania made our lawes Who was the first of Britaine, which did put His bowres within a golden Crowne, and call’d Himself a King.

Luc. I am Troy Cymbeline,

Ino. Who thy Lord? That is my Lord Levenant?

Oh, learned indeed were that Astronomer
That here he Stares, as his Characters,
I know the future, if you be a good Gods,
Let's what is here contained, tell me of
Of my Lords health, of his content: yet not
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him;
Some griefes are mediocres, that is one of them,
For it doth physick lone, of his content,
All but in that. Good Wox, thy leave; be it
You live, that make these Lockes of comate.

notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Haven: what your.
Your Lord, in one of these letters, you shall. So he wishes all all happiness; that commends to all his Prin, and your respect.

Leonatus Posthumus.

Oh for a Horse with wings: Heart thou Pisanio?
He is: Milford-Haven. Read, and tell me
How fate's this thither? If one of incant affairs
May plod in a week: why may not Glide thither in a day? Then true Pisanio,
Who long, I like me, to see thy Lord: who long, it
(Oh let me bate) but not like me: yet long, it
But in a saine kind. Oh, not like me: for Mine's beyond, beyond: say, and speake thicke

May take off some extremity, which to reade
Would be even morsall to me.

Pis. Please you, ye read,
And you shall finde me (w reckt and mad) a thing
The most disdaine'd of Fortune.

Imogen reads.

the braces of foes; let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunity at Midford Howes. She hath my Letter for the purpose; whereas, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certaine it is done, thou art the Pander to her dissorder, and equally to me despayred.

Pis. What shal I need to draw my Sword, the Paper
Hath cut her throat already? No, 'tis Slander,
Whose edge is sharper then the Sword, whose tongue
One-voices all the Wommes of Nyle, whose breath
Rides on the polling windes, and doth byke
All corners of the World. Kings, Queens, and States,
Maides, Matrons, say the Secrets of the Graue
The vipers Fnander enters. What cheer, Madam?

Ino. Falles to his Bed? What is it to be falles? to

To Iye in watch there, and to thinke on him?
To wepe 'twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge Nature,
To breake it with a fearefull dreame of him,

And cry my felle avike? That's falles'to bed? Is it?

Pisa. Alas good Lady,

Ino. I falles thy Conference without Lachome.
They did'tacuse hour of inconcerne,
Thou then look'dt like a Villaine now; now, I thinkes

Th' elect'd Deere before thee?

Pif. But to win time

To looke to bad employment, in the while

I have consider'd of a courte: good Lady

Hear me with patience.

Ino. Take this tongue weary, speake:

I haue heard I am a Strumpet, and mine ear

Therein false strooke, can take no greater wound,

Nor tent, to bosome that. But speake.

Pif. Then Madam,

I thought you would not backe again.

Ino. Most like,

Bringing me here to kill me.

Pif. Not to neither:

But if I were as wife, as honest, then

My purpose would prove well: it cannot be,

But that my Master is abus'd. Some Villaine,

And fingular in his Art, hath done you both

This cutted maim.

Ino. Some Roman Curtezan?

Pif. No, on my life:

Ile gue but notice you are dead, and send him

Some bloody signe of it. For'tis commanded

I should do: you shall be might at Court,

And that will confirm it.

Ino. Why good Fellow,

What Cal I do while? Where bide? How live?

Or in my life, with your art, when I am

Dead to my Husband?

Pif. If you'll backe to'th Court.

Ino. No Court, no Father, nor no more ado

With that harsh, noble, simple nothing:

That Curtezen, whose Loue, sole hath bene to me

As fast enow as a Siege.

Pif. I know not at Court,

Then not in Britaine must you bide.

Ino. Where then?

Hath Britaine all the Sunne that thines? Day? Night?

Are they not but in Britaine? I'th'worlds Volume

Our Britaine leemes as of it, but not in:

In a great Poole, a Swannes-necke, pthyche thinke

There's leart out of Britaine.

Pif. I am most glad,

Youthinkle of other place: Th'Ambasador,

Lucius the Romeane comes to Miford-Haen:

To morrow. Now, if you could were a minde

Darke, as your Fortune is; and but disguise

That which appareth it felle, must not yet be,

But by felle-dangers, you should trie a courte

Pretty and full of view: yea, happily, wee

The reidence of Pofthumus; so mie (at leaff)

That though his Actions were not visible, yet

Report should render hourly to your ear,

As trimly as hee-moues.

Ino. Oh for such means,

Though pertill to my modelle, not death on't

I would adventure.

Pif. Well then, here's the point:

You must forget to be a Woman: change

Command, into obedience. Feare, and Niceceffe!

(The Handmaids of all Women, or more truly

Woman in pretie felle) into a wag's gift courage,

Ready in gybes, quicke-anwer'd law, and

As quarellous as the Weazel! Nay, you must

Forget that rarest Treasure of your Cheek.

Exploiting it (but oh the harder heart,

Scene Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus farewe and so fare we.
Luc. Thanker, Royall Sir.

My Emperor hath wrote, I aught from hence,
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My Mifters Enemy.

Cym. Our Subjects (Sir)
Will not endure his yoke: and for our selfe
To shew little Sovereignitie then they, mutt needs
Appeare unthoughtfull.

Luc. So Sir: I desire of you
A Convent at Land, to Milford-Hauen.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you,
Cym. My Lords, yu are appointed for that Office:
The due of Honor, in no point omit:
So (aswell) Noble Lucius.
Luc. Your hand, my Lord.
Cym. Sir, the Queen.

Ins. Yet to name the winner. Fare you well.
Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords,
Till he have crost the Seuern. Happiness.

Exeunt Cymbel.

Qn. He goes hence frownowing: but it honours vs
That we have givn him cause.
Cym. 'Tis all the better,
Your vauntant Britains have their wishes in's
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperors
How it goes here. It this vs therefore ripely
Our Chalier, and our Horstmen be in readinesse:
The Powres that he alreadie hath in Galia
Will foone be drawne to head, from whence he moves
His wars for Britaine.
Qn. 'Tis not sleepy business,
But must be look'd too speedily, and strongly.
Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus
Hath made vs forward. But my gentle Queene,
Where is our Daughter? She hath nor appeare'd
Before the Roman, nor to vs hath render'd
The duty of the day. She looks vs like
A thing more made of malice, then of duty,
We have not vs. Call her before vs, for
We have beene too flight in sufferance.
Qn. Royall Sir,
Since the exile of Poffinnsus, most great
Hat her life bin: the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time must do. Besheath your Maitrely,
Forbear severe speeches to her. She's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are stroke;
And strokes death to her.

Enter a Messenger.

Cym. Where is the Sir? How
Can her contemnt be answer'd?
Mst. Please you Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no answer
That will be given to'th'lowd of noise, we make.
Qn. My Lord, when last I went to vist her she
Pray'd me to execute her keeping close,
Whereeto confirm'd by her infermity,
She should that dutie least oppose to you
Which daily she was bound to profess: this
She will'd me to make knowne: but our great Court
Made me too blame in memory.

Cym. Her doones lock'd?
Not scence of late? Grant I see not, that which I Fear, prove falle.

Qn. The Sonne, I fy, follow the King.
Cym. That man of hers, Pifanus, her old Servant
I have not seene these two dayes.
Exit.

Qn. Go lookes after:
Pifanus, thou hast that Land's so for Poffinnsus;
Heareth a Drugge of mine: I pray, his absence

It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is the gone? Haply dispair hath feiz'd her
Or wing'd with ferour of her love, she's owne
To her death'd Poffinnsus: gone the she,
To death, or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good vs of her. She being downes,
I haue the placing of the Britsh Crown.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Sonne?
Cym. 'Tis certaine she is fled:
Go in and cheere the King, he raging, none
Dare come about him.

Qn. All the better: may
This night fore-hall him of the comming day. Exit Qn.
Cym. I love, and hate her: for she's faire and Royall,
And that the hath all country pays more exquisit

Enter Pifanio.

Who is heere? What, are you packing for? Come hither: Ah you precious Pandar, Villaine,
Where is thy Lady? In a word, or elle Thou art straightway with the Fiends.
Pif. Oh, good my Lord.
Cle. Where is thy Lady? Or, by Jupiter, I will not ask again. Cleof Villaine, He have this Secrecy from thy heart, or slip Thy heare to finde it. Is she with Paffumau?
From whose so many weightles of buttenesse, cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.
Pif. Alas, my Lord, How can he se with him? When was the mis'd?
Had in Rome.
Cle. Where is the Sir? Come heree:
No farther haltung: fatifie me home, What is become of her?
Pif. Oh, my all-worthy Lord.
Cle. All-worthy Villaine, Discouer where thy Misfort is, at once, At the next word: no more of worthy Lord: Speake, or thy silence on the infantor, is Thy condemnation, and thy death.
Pif. Then Sir:
This Paper is the historic of my knowledge Touching her flight.
Cle. Let's see: I will pursue her
Even to Angورية Throne.
Pif. In this, or perish.
She's faire enough, and what he learnes by this, May prove his trueth, not her danger.
Cle. Hamb.
Pif. He write to my Lord she's dead: Oh Imagen, Safe mayl thou wander, safe returne azen.
Cler. Sirs, is this Letter true?
Pif. Sirs, I think.
Cler. It is Paffumau hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a Villain, but do me true service ynder. go shofe Implementions when I should cause to se the thee with a serious industry, that is, what villany force I bid thee do to performe it, directly and truly, I would think thee an henchman: thou should'st neither want my meanes for thy releace, nor my voyces for thy preferre.
Pif. Well, my good Lord,
Cler. Wilt thou ferue mee? For since patientlie and confiante thou hast ducce to the bare Fortune of that Beggar Paffumau, thou canst not in the course of gratuity, but be a diligent follower of mine, Wilt thou ferue mee?
Pif. Sir, I will
Cler. Give mee thy hand, here's my purse, Haft any of thy late Masters Garments in thy possession?
Pifan. I haue (my Lord) at my Lodging, the same Suite be wore, when he took leave of my Ladie & Mil-treffe.
Cler. The stiff seruice thou doul mee, fetch that Suite
The Tragedy of Gymbeline.

Scena Septima.

Enter Belarius, Guideria, and Armeruga.

Bel. You Poldary hau promis'd Bell Woodman, and Are Master of the Feast: Cadwell, and I Will play the Cooke, and Seannit, 'is our match: The finest of industry would dry, and dye But for the end it workes too. Come, our Romanes Will make what's howly, favour. We are the Can more upon the Flint, when reflux Sloth Fines the Downe-pillow hard. Now peace be here, Poor, hoole house, that keep'thy tile.

Gui. I am thoughly weary.

Ar. I am, weary with toy in, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold in this 'Caue, we'll brouz on that What'll what we have bill'd, be Cook'd.

Bel. Stay, comenom in:

But that it eat our qualities, I should think Heere were a Fairey.

Gui. What's the matter, Sir?

Bel. By Jupiter an Angell: or if not An earthly Parish, Behold Dianenelle
No elder then a Boy.

Enter Images.

Imo. Good masters harms, I come not:

Before I enter'd here, I call'd, and thought To have begg'd, not bought, what I have took: good trade I have fône none, nor would not, though I had round Gold floor'd th'Floor. Here's money for my Meate, I would have left it on the Board, so like As if I had made my Meate; and passed With Prayr's for the Proud'rer.

Gui. Money? Youth.

Ar. All Gold and Silver rather turne to dust, As't is no better reck'd, but of those Who worship durtly Gods.

Imo. I see you're angry:

Know, if you kill me for my faults, I should Have dyd, had I not made it,

Bel. Whether bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haenu.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fedele Sir: I have a Kinsman; who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford, To whom being going, almost shent with hunger, I am false in this offense.

Bel. Prythee (fare youth)

Think we no Charles: nor measure our good min'des By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd, Thi'almost night, you shall have better cheer.

Ere you depait, and thankes to stay, and ease it; Boyes, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,

I should have loved, but be your Groome in honestly: I bid for you, as I do buy,

Ar. It make not my Comfort
He is a man, He love him as any Brother:
And such a welcome as I pledge to him

(After long silence) such is yours. Most welcome:

Be spigot, for you fall among Friends.

Imo. Amongst Friends?

If Brothers: would it had bin so, that they Had bin my Fathers Sonnes, then had my prize Bin leffe, and to more equall ballasting To thee Pophamus.

Bel. He wrings at some distrefe.

Gui. Would I could fee't.

Ar. Or I, what are we do, What paine it cost, what danger: Gods!

Bel. Hearke Boyes.

Imo. Great men

That had a Court no bigger then this Caue,

That did attend themselves, and had the vertue Which then owne Conference fea'd them staying by That nothing-guilt of differing Multitudes Could not out-sperce these twaine. Partion me Gods, I'd change my face to be Companion with them, Since Lemina's fall.

Bel. It shall be so:

Boyes we'll go direc't for our Hunt. Faire youth come in; Dicouer is heavy, fasting: when we have fupp'd Well I manfully demand thee of the Story,

So farre as thou wilt pecke it.

Gui. Pray draw neere.

Ar. The Night to this'Olde, And Munte to th'Lake leffe welcome.

Imo. Thankest Sir.

Ar. I pray draw neere. Exeunt.

Scena Octava.

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the soner of the Emperors Writ;

That since the common men are now in A'den 'Gainst the Panpagnis, and Dalismas, And that the Legions now in Gallia, are Full waeke to undertake our Wares against The faile-side Britains, that we do incite The Gentry to this businesse. He creates Lucrine Pro-Conful: and to you the Tribunes For this immediate Law, he commands His absolute Commission. Long live Cesar.

Tri. Is Lucrine General of the Forces?

2 Sen. I.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those Legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your lettie Must be fopplian: the words of your Commandion Will ey ye to the numbers, and the time Of their dispatch.

Enter Cloten alone.

Clot. I am neere to the place where they should meet,

If Pamina have mapp'd it truly. How fit her Garments

Are they? Why should but Millis who was mad by him that that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (suing reverence of the Word) for 'tis said a Woman firstcoke by fitteth: therein I must play the Workman, I dare speak a her to, for it is not Vainglorie for a to, and his Graffe, to confer in his owne Chamber; I mean, the Lines of my body are as well drawne as his; no leffe young, more strong, not benefis him in Fortunes, be- yond him in the advantage of the time, about him in birth, alike constant in general Iterities, and more re- marketable in fingle Iterities; yet this superficial, Thing line him, in my defight, What Mortalitie or? Foilominus, thy head (which now is growing upon thy shoulders) flall within this house be off, thy Misfits in- forced, thy Garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurne her home to her Father, who may (happily) be a little Angel, to garnere his power of this Cellar, and make them all into my commendations. My Hanke it sped vp safe, out Sword, and to a fore purpofe: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very description of their meeting place and the Fellow datas not deceus me.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Inimy from the Cause.

Bel. You are not with me: Breanne herce in the Cause, Were't come to you after Hunting.

Are we not Brothers?

Ine. So man and man should be, But Clay and Clay, differs in dignitie, Whole does it both alike. I am very fickle, Gu. Go you to Hunt for my brother fogs: but my Mother having power of this Cellar, flall came all into my commendations. My Hanke it sped vp safe, out Sword, and to a fore purpofe: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very description of their meeting place and the Fellow datas not deceive me.

Exit.

Ine. I wish ye sport.

Arni. You height.

Ine. These are kind Creatures.

Gods, what lyes I have heard;

Our Courties fay, all's favage, but at Court;

Experience, or thou difprouit Report,

Th'emporous Sea breed Monfters; for the Difh,

Pourre Tribury Riuites, as sweet Fift:

I am fickle, heart fickle; Pifans,

He now taile of thy Drugg.

Gu. I could not fiire him;

He said he was gentle, but very rude;-

Difiionftly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arni. Thus did he aulwer me: yet faid hircerafter,

I might know more.

Bel. To th'Field, to th'Field:

We'll leave you for this time, go in, and ref.

Arni. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray be not fickle,

For you must be our Huwife.

Ine. Well, or ill,

I am bound to you.

Bel. And thall be euer,

This youth, how defiref, appears he has hard Good Angelors.

Arni. How Angel-like he fings?

Gu. But his neate Cookerie?

Arni. He cut our Roots in Characters,

And saw'n't our Brother, as Ine had bin fickle,

And he his Deter.

Arni. Nably he fakes

A smiling, with a figh; as if the figne

Was that it was, for not being fuch a Smile:

The Smile, mocking the Sigh, that it would flye

From to duuine a Temple, to commix

With winde, that Saylors rale at.

Gu. I do note,

That greene and patience rooted in them both,

Mingle their fpirs together,

Arni. Grow patient,

And let the thinking, Elder (Greene) wintwine

His perithing root, with the evercafeing Vine.

Bel. It is great morning. Come away: Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clot. I cannot finde thee, thee, Runngates, that Villaine

Hath moocked me, I am gire.

Bel. Those Runngates?

Meannes he not vs? I partly know him, his

Cloten, the Some oth't Quene. I fear me some Ambush:

I law him not thefe many yeares, and yet

I know vs he: We are hold in Out-Lawes: Hence.

He is bur one you; and my Brother search

What Companies are neere; pray you away,

Let me alone with him.

Clot. Soft, what are you

That flye me thus? Some Villaine-Mountainers?

I have heard of fuch. What Slawe are thou?

Gu. A thing?

More fualne did I thee, then answering

A Slawe without a knocke.

Clot. Thou art a Robber,

A Law-bracker, a Villaine: yeeld thee Thee.

Gu. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I

An arme as bigge as thine? A heart, as bigge as

Thy words I grant are bigger: for I were not

My Dagger in my mouth, Say what thou arts.
The Tragedy of Gymbeline.

Why I should yield to thee?
Clo. Thou Villaine base,
Know'st not me but by my Cloathes?
Gui. No, nor thy Taylor, Rafeal:
Who is thy Grandfather? He made those cloathes,
Which (as it seemes) make thee.
Clo. Thou precious Villate,
My Taylor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and shank.
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some Foule,
I am loath to beare thee.
Clo. This mutinous Theefe,
Hear my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name?
Gui. Cletus, thou Villaine.
Gui. Cletus, thou double Villainse be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
I would move me sooner.
Clo. To the further fear,
Nay, to thy mere Confusion, thou shalt know
I am Sonne to this Queene.
Gui. If, I am forry I am not seeming
So worthy as thy Birth.
Clo. Art not afraid?
Gui. Tho' that I encountered, tho' I fear the Wife;
At Foules I laugh, nor fear them.
Clo. Dye the death:
When I ha'st a flame with that my proper hand,
I'll make those thro' that use now fled hence.
And on the Gates of Ludi, I cause you your heads,
Yield Rusticke Mountainers, Fight and Execut.
Enter Belarius and Agrigono.
Bel. No Companie's abroad?
Agr. None in the world; you did mistake him sure.
Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,
But Time hath nothing lost'd those lines of Favour
Which then he wore: the nachtes in his voice,
And burth of speaking were as his: I am absolute
This very Cletus.
Agr. In this place we left them;
I with my Brother make good time with him,
You fay he is to fell.
Bel. Being faffe made vp,
I meant to man; he had not apprehension
Of roasting earens: For defall of judgement
Is oft the end of Feare.
Enter Guiderus,
But fee thy Brother.
Gui. This Cletus was a Foule, an empny purfe,
There was no money in't: Not Herceus
Could have knocked it out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I ne'er among this, the Foule had borne
My lead, as I do his.
Bel. What hath thou done?
Gui. I am perficte whatcut off one Cletus head,
Some to the Queene (after his owne report)
Who said me I slasht, Mountainer, and I swore
With his owne flinge hand he'd take vs in,
Laid upon our head, where (thanks the Gods) they grow
And let them on Ludi Towne.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy Father, what have we to loofe,
But that he woulde take our Lives? the Law
Promeets vs vs, then why should we be tender,
I let an argent piece of flesh threat vs?
Play Judge, and Executioner, all himselfe?

For we do feare the Law. What company discouer you abroad?
Bel. No fingle foule
can we felt eye on: but in all faire reason
He mut haue flome Attendants. Though his Honour
Was nothing but mutation, I, and that
From one bad thing to worse: Not Frenzie,
Not absolute madnesse could so farte haue roard
To bring him heere alone: although perhaps
It may be heard at Court, that such as wee
Case heere, hunt heere, are Out-lawers, and in time
May make some stronger head, the which he hearings
(As it is like him) might break out, and fwear
He'll fetch vs in, yet it is not probable
To come alone, either he fo undertaketh,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we feare,
If we do ftrease this Body hath a tale
More perilous then the head,
Agr. Let Ordinance
Come in as the Gods fore-fay it: howsoere,
My Brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no minde
To hunt this day: The Boy Fidelus sickenesse
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. With his owne Sword,
Which he did woue against my throat, I haue tane
His head from him: Ile throw't into the Creeke
Hath, to the Rocke, and let it to the Sea,
And tell the Fishe, here's the Queene Sonne, Cloten,
That's all I reake.
Bel. I fexe 'twill be resound'd:
Would (Poldar) thou had't not done't; though valour
Becomes thee well enough,
Agr. Would I had done't,
So the Revenge alone pursu'd me: Poldare
I loue thee better, yet, but not prude.
Thou haft robb'd me of this deeds: I would Reuenge
That possible infirm might meet, woul deek vs through
And put vs to our answer,
Bel. Well, 'tis done:
Wee thank no more to day, nor feeke for danger:
Where there's no profit I prey eager to our Rocke,
You and Fidele play the Cooke: Ile fay
Th'illy Poldar to retume, and bring him
To dinner prefently,
Gui. Poor fiske Fidelas,
I leve willingly to him, to gaine his colour,
I'll leve a parifh of such Cloten blood,
And praise my felle for charity.
Exit.
Bel. Oh thou Goddeffe,
Thou divine Nature; thou thy felfe thou blaznon't
In these two Princeely Boys: they are as gentle
As Zephyrs blowing bellow the Violets,
Not wagg'ng his sweet head; and yet, as rough
(Their Royal blood enchauf'd as the rud'ft winde),
That by the top doth take the Mountain Pine,
And make him foppe to vs Vale. 'Tis wonder
That an infull efiff looke fhould frame them
To Royalty unrain'd, Honor vnaught,
Civility nor feeke from other value
That wildly growes in them, but yieldeth a reep
As if it had beene fow'd: yet still it's strange
What Cloten being here to vs portends,
Or what his death will bring vs.

Enter Guiderus:
Gui. Where's my Brother?
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

I have oft Clytie Clot-pole downe the streame,
To Emboside her Mother; his Bodie's hollage
For his returne.

Bel. My ingenious Instrument,
(Hearte, Poladure) it founds: but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hearte.
Gus. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gus. What does he mean?
Since death of our dearest Mother.
It did not speak before. All solemne things
Should answer solemne Accidents. The matter?
Triumphes for nothing, and Inventing Toyes.
I solitude for Aspot, and geeziee for Boyes.
Is Cadwal dead?

Enter Abraham, with Image dead, bearing her great Armes.

Bel. Look, heere he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his Armes,
Of what we bewe his for.

Arni. The Bird is dead
That we have made to much on. I had rather
Have slips from sixe yeares of Age, to fast:
To haue cut off my leaping time into a Crutch,
Then have thee cleane.
Gus. Oh sweetest, sayest Lilly:
My Brother weares thee not the one halfe so well,
As when thou grew it thyself.

Bel. Oh Melancholly,
Who euer yet could found thy bottome? Find
The Once, to show what Coast thy longest care
Might'tst sail left habour in. Thou blestest thing,
Joue knowes what man thee might might have made: but I,
Though fed at a feast in Boye, of Melancholy.
How found you him?

Arni. Starte, sayest ye faire,
Thus thinking, as some fly bad tickled stimer,
Not as deathes dart being taugh'd at: his right Cheek
Reposing on a Cushion.
Gus. Where.

Arni. O'hillmore:
His arnes thus leagued, I thought he slept, and put
My clouded Brooch, from of off my feate, whose ruddeness
And my breares too lowd.

Gui. Why ble not steepe?
I fhe be gone, heer I make his Graue, a Bed:
With softeste Fyayles will his Tombe be haunted,
And Worries not come to thee.

Arni. With fayayle Flowers
While't Senzer Sults, and I close here, Fidelis,
He sweeten thy sad grave; thou that speakest not,
The Flower that's like thy face. Pale Primrose, nor
The azur'd Hare'-bell, like thy Veines: nor
The leafe of Eglinante, whom not to flander,
Out-sweetned not thy breath: the Raddocke would
With Charitable bill (Oh bill fore thining:
Those rich-leaved beysters, that let their Fathers Iye
Without a Monument) bring thee all the six.
Yea, and furtl'Moife besides. When Flowers are none
To winter-ground thy Coarse—

Gui. Pray thee have done,
And do not play in Wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protest with admiration, what
Is now due debate. To the grave.

Arni. Say, where shall his lay him?

Gui. By good Emphiles, our Mother.

Arni. Be'ts so:
And let vs (Poladore) though now our voyces
Have got the mannhid cracke, sing him to th'ground
As oonce to our Mother: we like note, and words,
Sawe that Emphiles, must be Fidelis.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I like wepe, and word it with thee;
For Notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than Prieffs, and Phanes that I ye.

Arni. Wee I prake it then.

Bel. Great geoses I see med: dine the Ieffe: For Cadwal
Is yet forgot. He was a Queens Sonne, Boyes,
And thought he came our Enemy, rememere.
He was paid for this: though mean, and mighty rotting
Together haue one daft, yet Reuerence
(Thist Angel of the world) doth make definition
Of place 'tween high, and low. Our Foe was Princely,
And though you tooke his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.

Gui. Pray you fetch him hither,
Then fes body is as good as Aske,
When nether are alive.

Arni. If you go fetch him,
We'll say our Song the whifft: Brother begin.

Gui. Nay Cadwal, we must lay his body to the East,
My Father hath a reason for't.

Arni. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arni. So, begin.

SONG.

Guld. Fear no more the hate of man, (Saw,
Nor the furious Winter's rage,
Though, worldely task be hit,
Home art gun and none thy wages,
Golden Lads, and Gales all must,
As Chomery: Sweeter come to do.

Arni. Fear no more the frencome h'Great,
Then art past the Twains streece,
Cure no more in cloaths and rate,
To thee the Reede is as the Oak:

The Stepper, Learning, Polyester muffs,
All fellow this and come to do.

Guld. Fear no more the Lightning silence,
Arni. Nor th' urden dod Thunderence.

Guld. Fear no Stander, Concease raffs,
Arni. Thou bsft stndel'd Jay and mene.

Both. All Lovers yong, all Lovers muffs,
Confignet thee and come to do.

Guld. No Excefore harms thee,
Arni. Nor warnich craft charme thee.

Guld. Ghost unlaid farkeare thee.
Arni. Nothing shall come thee.

Both. Quiet consumation bea,
And renowned by their guise.

Enter Belarius with the body of Cadwal.

Gui. We have done our obleftes.
Come lay him downe.

Bel. Here's a few Flowers, but 'bout midnight more.
The hearbes that have on them cold dew o'th'night
Are firewings fit't for Graues: upon their Faces.
You were as Flowers, now wither'd; even so
These Herbsetts flail, which we upon you threw.
Come on, away, apart upon our knees:
The ground that gave them fit'st, he's them again:
Their pleasures here are pass, so are their paine.

Exeunt.

SUCCESSFUL TO TH' ROMAN HOST.

LUC., Dreame often so,
And never falle. Soft hos, what truncke is here?
Without his top? The rude speakes, that sometime
It was a wort by building. How? A Page?
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather:
For Nature doth not dare to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the Boyes face.

Cap., Here's alue my Lord.

LUC. He's then instruct'd vs of this body: Young one,
Informes vs of thy Fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded: who is this
That maketh it thy blody Pillow? Or who was he?
That otherwise then noble Nature did?
Hath alter'd that good Pityure? What's thy interest
In this sad racket? How came's? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be werte: This was my Master,
A very valiant Britaine, and a good,
That hereby may finde at it eyes flaine: Alas,
There is no more such Masters: I may wander
From list to Occident, cry out for Service,
Try many, all good: fure truly: never
Fande such another Master.

LUC. Lacke, good youth:
Thou mou'st not lefe with thy claimpling, then
Thy Master in blindeing: say his name, good Friend.
Imo. Richard do Chemp. If I do lye, and do
No harme by it, though the Gods fereste, I hope
They pardon it. Say you Sir?

LUC. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele Sir.

LUC. Thou dost not approve thy felfe the very fames:
Thy Name well fills thy Faith, thy Faith, thy Name:
Wit taketh chance with me? I will not lye
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No lefe belou'd. The Romane Emperors Letters
Sent by a Conflant to me, should not fooner
Then thine owne worth preferre thee: Go with me.

Imo. He follow Sir. But if it, and pleafe the Gods,
I hide my Master from the Flyes, as deep:
As shee poore Pickes can digge: and when
With wild woods-leaves & weeds he shewed his grate
And on it find a Century of prayers
(Such as I can) wise or, Ie wepe, and figh
And leaving to his forces, follow you,
So pleafe you entertain me.

LUC. I good youth,
And rather Father thee, then Master thee: My Friends,
The Boy hath taught vs manely duties: Let vs
Finde out the prettie Diedz-Plot we can,
And make him with our Pikes and Pardians
A Grage: Come, Anne him: Boy he's prefer'd
By thee, to vs, and he shall be inter'd
As Soldiers can. Be cheerefull, wipe thine eyes,
Some Falles are means the happier to arise.

A madmische, of which her life's in danger: Heaven's,
How deeply you at once do touch me: Image,
The great part of my comfort, gone: My Queen
Upon a deeper a bed, and in a time,
When Fearefull Waters point me: Her Sonne gone,
So needfull for this present? It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, Fellow,
Who needs must know her of her departure,
Doft continue to ignorance, we enforce it from thee
By a shame Fortune.

Gif, Sir, my life is yours,
I bably set it at your Will: But for my Misfortune,
I nothing know where these remaines: why gone,
Nor when the purposes return. Beceech your Highnes,
Hold me your loyal Servant,
Lord. Good my Liege,
The day that she was missing, he was here;
I dare be bound he's true, and that performe
All parts of his subiect, lovingly. For Clemen,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will no doubt be found,
Gym. The time is troublesome:
We'll fly you for a season, but our errand is due
Do's yet depend.
Lord. So please your Maiesty,
The Roman Legions, all from Gallia drawne,
Are landed on your Coast, with a supply
Of Romain Gentlemen, by the Senate sent.

Gym. Now for the Countafe of my Son and Queen,
I am amaz'd with matter.
Lord. Good my Liege,
Your preparation can shew no leffe
(ready):
Then what you hare at, Contine, for more you
The want is but to put those Powers in motion,
That long to move.
Gym. I thanke you: let's withdraw
And meete the Time, as it seekes vs. We fear not What can from Italy annoy vs, but
We greene at chancesehe. Away.

That when they hear their Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quartered Fries; has both their eyes
And ears to cloyd importantly as now,
That they will waffe their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Tel. Oh, I am knowne
Of many in the Army: Many yeeres

From my remembrance. And besides, the King
Hath not defer'd my Service, nor your Loutes,
Who finde in my Exile, the want of Breeding;
The certainty of this heard life, I hope of
To have the countare your Cranle promis'd,

Enter Pofthomus, and a Britainne Lord.

Lec. Cam' thy soule from where they made the stand?

Pof. I did. Though you it seemes come from the Fliers.

Lec. Pof. No blame be to you Sir, for all was left,

But that the Heavens fought: the King himselfe

Of his wings defeated, the Army broken,

And but the backes of Britaines seene: all flying

Through a strait Lane, the Enemy full heart'd,

Lolling the Tongue with slaught'ring: having worke

Most bloody and destru'd, but trust toooke downe

Some mortallly, some slilyly caught, some falling

Meetyly through feare, that the strait paffe was damm'd

With deadmen, hurt behinde, and Cowards liuing

To dye with length'ned flame.

Lo. Where was this Lane?

Pof. Clos'd by the battell, dight'd, walled and turp

Which gave a passage to an ancient Soldier

An honeste one I warrant who defend'd

So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,

In doing this for his Country. Athis to the Lane,

He, with two fillings (Lads more like to run

The Country base, then to commit such slaught'ring,

With faces fit for Masques, or ratel fayerer

Then tho' one for preferrouation car'd, or flame)

Made good the papple, cryed to those that fled.

Our Britaines heares dye flying, not our men,

To Dawson flying footes that flye back-wards; fland,

Or we are Romans, and will give you that

Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may saue

But to looke back in frowne; Stand, and their three

These three thousand confident, in acte as many:

For three performes in the file, when all

The reit do nothing. With this word fland, fland,

Accommodated by the Place; more Charming

With their owne Noblenesse, which could haue turn'd

A Diffetse, to a Lance, guided pele lookes;

Part flame, part spirit renew'd, that some turn'd coward

But by example (Oh a fine in Warre,

Damn'd in the first, beginnes) gaue to looke

The way that they did, and to grine like Lyons

Vpon the Pikes o'th Hunters. Then beganne

A Flop t'h Chater; a Retrayer: Anon

A Round, confusion thickes: forthwith they flye

Chickens, the way which they Hope Eagles: Slaves

The fride the Vicous made; and now our Coud's

Like Fragmentes in hand Voyages became.

The life of three days before found the lane (to the lane open)

Of theguarded hearts: heauens, how they would,

Some blame before some dying; some their friends

Oe-borne (its former cause, ten ch'as' by one,)

Are now each one the slaugther-man of twenty:

Thole that would dye, or e'er criff, are growing

The mornall bugs and' the Field.

The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Lord. This was strange chance: A Narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boys.

Poet. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made rather to wonder at the thing, you hear, Then to work any. Will you Rime upon't, And vent it for a Mock'ry Here is one: "This Lane, an Old man, two Boys in Lane, To enter the Britains, near the Rauences here. Lord. Nay, be not angry Sir. Poet. Lacke, to what end? I do not hang his Foe. He be his Friend: he shall do, as he is made to doe, I knew he quickly flye my friendship too. You hope put me into Rime. Lord. Farewell, you're angry. Cym. Valefle a man would marry a Galloven, & beget young Gibbets, I never saw one so pungent. on my Conscience, there are wiser Knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that dye against their will; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one minute, and one minute good: I there were defolation of Galloes and Gallovens: I speake against my present profit, but my will hath a preference int.

Exeunt.

Scene Quarta.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guidon, Arsinagar, Placenio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my side, you, whom the Gods have made Prenters of my Throne: woe is my heart, That the poore Soldier that so richly fought, With whome, sham'd gilded Arms, whole naked bristled Stepte before Targes of proofe, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can finde him, if Our Grace can make him so.

Tel. I never saw Such Noble fury in so poore a Thing; Such precious deeds, in one that promis'd nought But beggary, and poore lookers.

Cym. No tydings of him?

Pife. He hath bin fetch'd among the dead, & living: But no trace of him.

Cym. To my greffe, I am The heyne his Reward, which I will add To you (the Luer, Heart, and Braine of Britaine) By whom (I grant) the lives. This now the time To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Tel. Sir,
In Cambria we are born, and Gentlemen: Further to boast, were neither true, nor modeft, Valefle I aide, we are honeft.

Cym. Bow your knees:

Arsenmy Knights o'th Battell, I create you Companions to our person, and will you With Dignities becoming your effaces.

Enter Cornelius and Luther.

There's buifiefle in these faces: why so sadly Greet you our Viceroy? you look like Romans, And not o' th' Court of Britaine.

Cym. Hayle great King, To soowe your happineffe, I must report The Queen is dead.

Cym. Who worse when a Physitian Would this report become? But I consider, By Medicine lie may be prolong'd, yet death Will feke the Dafture too. How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life, Which (being cruel to the world) concluded Moft cruel to her felfe. What fhe confett, I will report, to please you. Thefe her Women Can trip me; I erre, who with wet cheeke are present when the funnish'd.

Cym. Poetrys fay.

Cor. First, the confett the neuer lou'd you: onely Affected Gracefull got by you: not you: Married your Royalty, was wife to your place: Ahbord'd your perfon.

Cym. She alone knew this: And but the ipeke it dying, I would not Beleeue her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cym. Your daughter, whom the bare in hand to loue With fuft inexactity, the did confett Was as a Scorpion to her fight, whole life (But that her flight preuencted it) she had Tone off by poynion.

Cym. O most delicate Fiend!

Who's can read a Woman? Is there more?

Cym. More Sir, and worse. She did confett she had For you a mortail Mineral, which being tooke,

Should by the minute feele on life, and hing'ring, By inches waive you. In which time, the purpof'd By watching, weeping, tendance, kising, to Orcome you with her faw, and in time (When she had fitted you with her craft, to worke) Her Sons into the hand of the Crowne: But ftallng of her end by his strange absence, Grew flamelleffe desperate, open'd (in defpaft Of Heaven and Men) her purpofes: repeated The emis the hatch'd, were not effect'd: fo Diapaying dyed.

Cym. Heard you all this, her Woman?

Lc. We did, fo pleafe your Highneffe.

Cym. My eyes eie.

We're not in fault, for she was beautiful: Mine eares that hear her flatterry, not my hear, That thought her like her feeming. It had beene viscious To have miftructed her: yet (Oh my Daughter) That it was folly in me, thou myfelf say, And prove it in thy thinking. Heaven mend all.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and other Roman prisoners, Leonatus behind, and Ionecall.

Thou committ'st not Caesar now to Tribute, that The Britaine has rac'd out, though with the loffe Of many a bold one: whose Kinmen have made fine That their good foules may be appeald, with fllaughter Of you their Captures, which our felle have granted, So think of thy expiation.

Lc. Consider Sir, the chance of Waare, the day. Was yours by accident: had it gone with vs, We should not when the blood was cool, have threaten Our Prisoners with the Sword. But since the Gods Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be calld ranforme, let it come I Suffieth, An Roman, with a Roman heart, can fuffer:

Augustus lives to thinke on't: and so much For my peculiar care. This one thing only I will entreate, my Boy (a Britaine borne) Let him be ranforme: Neuer Master had A Page fo kinde, fo duteous, diligent, So tender over his occations, true, So fear, fo Nune-like: let his venge liyone With my requifite, which I'll make bold, your Highneffe Cannot deny: he hath done no Britaine harms, Though he haue fer'd a Roman. Save him (Sir) And have no blood be fide.

Cym. I have lurely seen him:

His fauer is familiar to me: Boy, Thou haft look'd thy felfe into my grace; And art mine owne. I know our why, wherefore, To fay, blue boys: me'thank ye Master, liue; And of the Cymbeline what Boone thou wilt, Fitting my bounty, and thy flate, Ile give it:

Yes,

V. iv. 204 — V. v. 99

908
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

Yea, though thou do demand a Prisoner
The Noblest tack.

Try me, I humbly thank you, Highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee begge my life, good Lad.
And yet I know thou wilt.

Try me. No, no, slacker,
There's other works in hand: see a thing
Better to me, as death; your life, good Master,
Must shuffle for it else.

Luc. The Boy disdains me,
He leaves me; comest thou: briefly dyes their loves,
That place on them the truth of Gyris, and Boyes;
Why stands he so perplex?

Cym. What wouldst thou Boy?
I love thee more, and more; thanke more and more
What's bell to alike. Know 'tis how thou look'st on?
Will such pure love lie? is thy kind thy Friend?

I'm. He is a Roman, more kind to me,
Then I to your Highness, who being born your vassallie
And something nearer,

Cym. Wherfore ey'th him so?

I'm. Ite tell you (Sir) in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. I, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

I'm. Fidele Sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth: my Page
Ibe or thy Master: walk with me; speake freely.
Bel. Is not this Boy return'd from death?

Arm. One Sand another
Not more resembles that sweet Rufe Lad:
Who dyed, and was Fidele: what think'st thou
Gri. The same dead thing alive.
Bel. Peace, peace, see further: the eyes vs not, forbear.
Creatures may be alike: wert he, I am sure
He would have spoke to vs.

Gri. But we see him dead,
Bel. be fient: let's see further.

Pep. It is my Milfirs:
Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

Cym. Come, I shall from our side,
Make thy demand aloud. Sir, speep you forth,
Give answer to this Boy, and do it freely;
Or by our Greamette, and the grace of it
(Which is our Honor) bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from fhalld ness. One speake to him.

I'm. My boone is, that this Gentleman may render
Of whom he had this Ring.

Pep. What's that to him?

Cym. That Diamond upon your Finger, say
How came it yours?

Iac. Thou'dst torture me to cause me speak, that
Which be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How's me?

Iac. I am glad to be conftrain'd to utter that Which torment's me to construe. By Villany
I got this Ringe: 'twas Leonatus Tewell,
Whom thou didst banish; and which more may greeue
A ll did thee: a Noble Sir, not like'd
(there,
Twixt sky and ground. Wh'thous hear'st more my Lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iac. That Paragon, thy daughter,
For whose made my heart drops blood, and my falt spirits
Quail'd to remember. Give me leave, I faint,
My Daughter? what of hirRenew thy strength

I had rather thou should'st live, while Nature will,
Then dye ere I hear more - strenue man, and speake.

Iac. Upon a time, unhappy was the clocke
That strove the hour: it was in Rome, secure
The Mansion where 'twas at a Feast, oh would
Our Viftands had bin poultry'd (or at leaft)
Those which I haut' to head) the good Pusliumus, (Which say's he was too good to be
While ill men were, and was the bell of all
Among who the frefh (of good ones) fitting, falsely,
Hearing vs praise our Loves of Italy
For Beauty, that made barren the swell'd bosst
Of him that bell could speake: for Feature, lamby
The Shrine of Venus, or straight-right Minerva,
Posures, beyond breae Nature. For Condition,
A t'op of all the qualities, that men
Loves woman for, before this booke of Wining,
Fairness, which strikes the eye.

Cym. I land on fire. Come to the matter.

Iac. All too soone I shall.

Villenice would so fit greete quickly. This Pusliumus,
Most like a Noble Lord, in loue, and one
That had a Royall Louer, tooke his hint,
And (not dispairing whom we prais'd, therein
He was as calme as vertue) he began
His Miftus picture, which, by his tongue, being made,
And then a minde put in't, either our brave
Were crack'd of Kitchen-Truller, or his description
Prou'd we vs speaking foce.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iac. Your daughters Chastity, (there is beginnes)
He speake other, as Dian had that dotes,
And the alone, were cold: Whereas, I wretch
Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with him
Pieces of Gold, 'gainst this, whe'n he were Vpon his honour'd finger to attaine
In quicke the place of's bed, and winne this Ring
By her, and mise Adin-ti: the (true Knight)
No leffer of her Honour confident
Then I did truly finde her, fakes this Ring,
And would I, had it beene a Carbuncle
Of Phoebus Wheel; and might so safely, had it
Bin all the worth of Carr: Away to Britaine
Poifie I in this designe: Well may you (Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of thy chaste Daughter, the wide difference
Twixt Amorous, and Villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope not longeing; mine Italian Urane,
Can in your diller Britaine operate
Most wildely: for my vantage excellent;
And to be breetce, my prafich ce presy'd
That I return'd with simular profe enough,
To make the Noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his beleve in her Renowne,
With Tokens thus, and thus suatering notes
Of Chamber-hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh cunning how I got) no other makes
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of Chastity quite crack'd,
I hating 'tane the forsy: Whereupon,
Me thinkes I fee him now.

Pep. I so thou do.

Italian Fiend. Aye me, most cedulous Foole,
For rogue my heart droops blood, and my fake spirits
That's due to all the Villaines psf, in being
To come. Oh gie me Cord, or knife, or poyson,
The Tragedie of Cymbeline.

Some upright Justice. Thou King, tend out For Torturers ingenious: it is I That all th'obloqued thys, amareth amend By worse being worse they, I am Powhwm, That kill'd thy Daughter: Villain-like, I yce, That caus'd a lealier villain than my selfe, A forlorned Theeze to doo. The Temple Of Vertue was the; yes, and the her selfe. Spit, and throw stones, cast myre upon me, For the degrees of thirst to buy me; every villaine Is call'd Powhwm, Beastie, and He, being feele then, was. Oh Imogen! My Queene, my life, my wife; oh Imogen, Imogen, Imogen.

Imo. Peace me my Lord, here is here.
Pol. Shall's he have a play of this? Thou feomfull Page, there lye thy part. Hauz. (Said the gentleman.) He,
Milk's and your Mistis. On my Lord Powhwm, You're not kill'd Imogen till now: helpe, helpe, Maister o'th' Lady.

Crys. Does the world go round?
Pol. How comes thes Huggers on me?
Pol. Wake my Mistis.
Cym. It's to be so, the Gods do mean to strike me To co-k:b with mortallity,
Pol. How fares my Mistis?
Imo. Oh get thee from my sight, Thou gau't me poyson: dangerous Fellow hence, Bread not where Princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen.
Pol. Lady, the Gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if The box I gave thee, was not thought by nice A precious thing, I had it from the Queene.
Cym. New matter still.
Imo. It poyson'd me.
Cym. Oh Gods!
I left out one thing which the Queene comitted, Which much approve her beauty. If Paforis had the given his Mistis that Cofetden
Which I gave him for Cardial, is this end,
As I would ferre a Rat.
Cym. What's this, Caracius?
Carm. The Queene (Sir) 'very off importand me To see, per poyson for her, till prettend, The falsification of her knowledge, oly In killing Creatures wild, as Cats and Daggis Of no occasion. I dreading, that her purpose Was of more danger, did command for her A certaine fluyt, which being tane, would cease The present power of life, but in short time, All Offices of Nature, should againe Do their due Functions. Have you tane of it?
Imo. Much Iliked I did, I was dead.
Bel. My Breyer, there was our errors.
Gar. This is late Fable.
Ind. Why did you throw your wretched Lady forso?
Think that you are upon a Rocke, and now Throw me againe.
Pol. Hang there like fruitst, my soyle, till the Tree dye.
Cym. How now, my Friend? my Child? What, ma'i'lt thou me a dallard in this Art? wilt thou not speake to me?
Imo. Your bittling, Sir.
Bel. Though thou did love this youth, I blame ye not, You had a motiae for't.
Cym. My tears that fall Praye holy-waters on thee, I Imogen, Thy Mothers dead.
Ind. I am sorry for't, my Lord.
Cym. Oh, she was naught: and long of her it was That we meet here so strangely: but her Sonne Is gone, we know not how, nor where.
Pift. My Lord, Now rare is from me, Ile speake truth. Lord Clotis Vpon my Ladies suff'ring, came to me. With his Sword drawne, stood at the mouth, and swore If I discouerc'd not which way the was gone, It was my instant death. By accident, I had a leigned Letter of my Masters Then in my pocket, which directed him To seek he on the Mountains seere to Milford, Where in a forest, at Misters Garments (Which he infect'd from me) away he posles With unheight purpuse, and with oath to violate My Ladies honor, what became of him, I further know not.
Gui. Let me end this Story: I flew him there.
Cym. Marry, the Gods foretend. I would not thy good deeds, shoulde from my lips Plucke a hard sentence: Preferre valiant youth Deny'st againe.
Gui. I haue speake it, and I did it.
Cym. He was a Prince.
Gui. A moff intiull one. The wrongs he did mee Were nothing Prince-like for he did provoke me: With Language that would make me fluer the Sea, If it could to passe to me. I cut off's head, And am right glad he is not standing here To tell this tale of mine.
Cym. I am forrow for thee: By thine owne tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endore our Law: I thought he dead.
Cau. That headless man I thought had bin my Lord Cym. Bide the time, I will take up his Head And take him from our Presence.
Bel. Stay, Sir King, This man is better then the man he flew, As well defende as thy selle, and hath More of thee merited, then a Band of Cluer
Had euer farse for. Let his Armes alone, They were nee better for this usage.
Cym. Why old Soldier:
Wilt thou vndoe the worth thou art alpayd for By saffing of our wrath? How of deficient As good as we?
Ari. In that he speake too farse.
Cym. And thou shalt dye for't.
Bel. We will dye all three, But I will prowe that two one's are as good As I have given out him. My Sonnes, I must For mine owne part, unfoold a dangerous speech, Though happily well for you.
Ari. Your danger's ours.
Gaud. And our good his.
Bel. Haste at it then, by leaue Thou hadst'lt (great King) a Subiect, who Was call'd Belarius.
Cym. What of him? He is a banish'd Traitor.
Bel. He it is, that hath
Allum's this age: indeed a banish'd man.
I know not how, 2 Trains.
Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Nor too hot;
First pay me for the Nursing of thy Sonnes,
And let it be confiscate all, to noone
As I have receyed it.
Cym. Nursing of thy Sonnes?
Bel. I am too blunt, and swet; there's my knee;
Fire I arise, I will preferre my Sonnes,
Then spare not the old Father. Mighty Sir,
These two young Gentlemen that call me Father,
And thinke they are my Sonnes, are none of mine,
They are the suite of your Loyines, my Liege,
And blood of your beggetting.
Cym. How my Liege,
Bel. So sure as you, your Fathers:
Am that Belarius, whom you sometime bath'd:
Your pleasure was my peerce offence, my punishment
It felle, and all my Treson that I suffer'd,
Was all the harme I did. Thse gentle Princes
(For such and to they are) thele twenty yeares
Be thought a play, those Arre they have as!
Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir)
As your Highness knowes: Their Nurse Infantado
(Whom for the Trach I wedded) sole these Children
Upon my bainfifhment I mou'd her too';
Huning recey'd the punishment before
For that which I did then. Bestem for Lyuellite,
Excited me to Treson. Their deere loft,
The Soule of you, twice feit, the more it shad
Vstatoy end of healing them. But gracious Sir,
Here are your Sonnes againe, and I must loole
Two of the sweet Companions in the World,
The beneficence of these covering Heauens
Fall on their heads his deed, for they are worthie
To inlay Heavens with Starres.
Cym. With as much a speech:
The sentence that you these have done is more
Vulnike, then this thou tellst. I told my Children,
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A paye of wortihier Sonnes.
Bel. Be pleas'd awhile;
This Gentleman, whom I call Pelidore,
Most worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This Gentleman, my Cadwal, Arquigne.
Your yonger Prince's Sun, he was lapt
In a most curious Mantle, wroght by thhand
Of his Queene Mother, which for more probacion
I can with ease produce.
Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his recker a Mole, a fangine Starre,
It was a marke of wonder,
2d. This is he,
Who hath remembred, that natural flame:
It was wis’d flames end, in the donation
To be his evidencenow.
Cym. Oh, what sin
A Mistleth to the bough of these? Nest Mallot
Remembrance: Bleff thee, you by me,
That after this strange starting from your Orbe,
You may continue in them now: Oh Imogen,
Thou hast by thy self a Kingdome.
2d. No, my Lord:
I have not two Worlds by't. Oh my gentle Brothers,
Have we thus met? Oh mother say hereafter
But I am trusty speaker. You call'd me Brother
When I was but your Sifer: I you Brothers,
When we were so indeed,
Cym. Did you see mee too?
Aur. I may good Lord.
Gui. And at first meeting lou'd,
Continent do fo, until we thought he dyed.
Cym. By the Quernes Draining the swallow'd
Cym. O ye now innsuch!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment,
Hath to it Circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liu'd you?
And when came you to terme our Romane Captaine?
How past with your Brother? How first them?
What flet you from the Court? And whether thefe?
And your three motions to the Batraile? wish
I know not how much more should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependancs
From chance to chance? But nor the Time, nor Place
Will terme our long Interrogatories. See,
Posthumous Anchors upon Imogen;
And the (like harrefife Lightning) throwes her eye
On thee; her Brother, me; her Mafter hixting
Each obiect with a boy's the Counter-change
Is seuerally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoake the Temple with our Sacrifices.
Thou art my Brother, so we'll haste hold thee ever.
1st. You are my Father too, and did relucetion me:
To free this gracious fess'on.
Cym. All on'y'd
Saucus, to make them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our Comfort.
Imo. My good Master, I will yet do you service.
Luc. Happy be you.
Cym. The forlorn Soullard, that nobly fought
He would have well been com'd that place, and grace'd
The thinkings of a King.
Post. Thou wouldst, and speach'd it:
The Souller that did company thes three in peace befoming; it was a fittern for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he,
Spake Iacques, I had you downe, and might
Have made you full.
Jac. I am downe againe:
But, my fair Soullard, Confession doth make my heart,
As then your force did. Take that life, before you
Which I of often ow'd: but your King falt,
And here the Bracelet of the trufl Princeffe
That ever fower her Faith.
Post. Kneel not to me.
The peace that I have on you, is to spare you:
The manner towards you, to forgive you. Line
And deal with others better.
Cym. Nobly dea'd:
We'll let our Freeneffe of a Sonnie in: Law
Pardon's the word to all.
Ann. You holp es Sir,
As you did meane indeed to be our Brother,
Joy'd are we, that you are.
Cym. Our Sireneou Princes.Good my Lord of Rome
Call forth your Sooth-fayer: As I prpte, the thought
Great Jupiter upon his Eagle back'd
Appeard to me, with other sprightly thieves
Of mine owne Kindred. When I awak'd, I found
This Lobbell on my bofome; whole containing
Is so from fende in hardnesse, that I can
The Tragedy of Cymbeline.

INTRODUCTION TO THE CENSUS

THIS is a first systematic endeavour to ascertain the number and whereabouts of extant original copies of the Shakespeare First Folio,—the volume which constitutes the greatest contribution yet made to English literature. At the same time researches have been pursued with some persistency into the past history and the present condition of surviving copies, and the collected information has been arranged as methodically as the multitudinous details permit. The general numerical result will create widespread surprise. Although shrewd suspicions have long been cherished by experts that the scarcity of the Shakespeare First Folio has been exaggerated, few will anticipate the width of the interval that separates the popular estimate of the volume's rarity from the precise testimony to its existing plenitude, that is here brought together for the first time. The student of the following pages will recognize that henceforth it will not be by the paucity of extant exemplars that the Shakespeare First Folio will be notable in the eyes of bibliographers; it will be remarkable in their sight from the abundance of the copies that survive. Of works of first-rate literary interest, which were produced during the sixteenth or early seventeenth century, whether in England or on the continent of Europe, few can in fact be shown to survive in so many copies of the original edition as does the first collection in folio of Shakespeare's plays. No more than fourteen remain, it will be seen, in an original state of perfection. But as many as 1,56 extant copies, in varying conditions of cleanliness and completeness, are noticed in the accompanying Census. The First Folio edition may fairly be conjectured to have consisted originally of six hundred copies, and at the end of nearly three centuries the surviving number seems to amount to near a third of that originally printed. Most of the extant volumes betray the damaging effects of age, but time has shown a rare forbearance in sparing in whatever state so substantial a proportion of a highly popular first edition of supreme literary worth.

No special precautions seem to have been taken to preserve copies of the book within the first century of its publication. It was widely read, but no exceptional pecuniary value then attached to it. The work was thrice reprinted within little more than sixty years,—in the Second, Third, and Fourth Folios of 1632, 1663-4, and 1685 respectively. Each of these editions was as large as its predecessor, and for a long time no interest seems to have belonged to the First Folio above that belonging to the Second, Third, or Fourth*. Owing to the abundant supply, a Shakespeare Folio copy is now in the Royal Library at Windsor Castle. Prince Rupert's copy is noticed in A Catalogue of all the Books in His Highness Prince Rupert's Library, November, 1677 (British Museum, Sloane MS. 555, f. 4).

* To other first folio editions of the period, Spenser's Works, 1611, Ben Jonson's Works, 1616, and Beaumont and Fletcher's Works, 1647, the like figures probably apply closely, but these volumes were not exposed to the same danger of popularity as the Shakespeare First Folio, and there is nothing surprising about their extant numbers. Among famous books of the later years of the seventeenth century the first edition of Milton's Paradise Lost (1667) seems to have consisted of some 1,500 copies, more than double that of the Shakespeare First Folio. The type was long kept standing, and the original edition was issued at intervals extending over fully two years in small batches with altered title-pages. Most of these issues are still comparatively common, and are more accessible than the First Folio. was in the seventeenth century an unusually common book. Consequently copies of the First Folio were from early days exposed to the devastating agencies of careless handling and rough usage. It is doubtful if the processes of destruction suffered any conscious check for a century and a half, but happily they worked with less ruinous result than average experience would suggest.

The Shakespearean commentator, George Steevens, learnt from the account-books of a seventeenth-century bookseller, which were extant in his day, that the price of a copy amounted on its publication in 1623 to £1. Each of the new editions—the Second, Third, and Fourth Folios—of 1632, 1663–4, and 1687 seems to have been issued at the same price, and for many years the pecuniary value of the First Folio remained on the same level as that of its three successors. None made any substantial advance in price. Towards the end of the seventeenth century, the Third Folio—alone of the four—seems to have risen in value, a rise due to unverified rumours that numerous unsold copies of the edition had been destroyed in the fire of London of 1666. At the auction sale of a library belonging to Benjamin Worsley on May 13, 1678, while a copy of the Second Folio fetched 16s.—four shillings less than the published price,—a copy of the Third fetched £1 8s. 6d.—eight shillings and sixpence in excess. No First Folio was for sale on that occasion. The first record of the sale by auction of a First Folio belongs to the year 1687, when one figured in the sale of a collection of books belonging to Sir William Coventry and the Hon. Henry Coventry, who resided in the Haymarket, London. No details are, however, forthcoming.

In the eighteenth century Shakespeare's works were constantly reprinted and edited, and public interest in the early editions steadily grew. The unique importance of the First Folio was soon recognized, and a demand for copies in excess of the supply gradually developed among scholars and book-collectors. In a London sale-catalogue of 1748, the earliest that has yet been found definitely to mention a First Folio, the volume was described as 'a fine copy, very scarce.' The earliest priced record of a sale of the book at auction belongs to the year 1756, when a copy in the library of Martin Folkes, the lately-deceased President of the Royal Society, was sold for three guineas (this copy is now in the John Rylands Library at Manchester). Ten years later, in 1766, the identical price was realized at the sale of the library of a well-known author, David Mallet. For some time three guineas was regarded as the highest price attainable, and during the same period copies often changed hands for far smaller sums. The leading Shakespearean editors of the epoch, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Lewis Theobald, Edward Capell, Dr. Johnson, George Steevens, and Edmund Malone are known to have acquired on moderate terms one or two copies each for purposes of study. About 1760, Garrick, the great actor, purchased one for £1 16s. of a fashionable bookseller, Thomas Payne, whose shop was at the Mews Gate by Charing Cross (this copy is now at Queen's College, Oxford). But although the tide occasionally ebbed, the price's upward movement was not seriously checked. Beloe states that about 1770 the standard value of 'a fine copy' was five guineas, and that he refused 'at nine guineas a superb copy,' which realized thirteen at Dr. Monro's sale in 1792 (this apparently became afterwards the Grenville copy). In 1787 Dr. Richard Wright's copy 'bound in Russia' brought £10 at a sale by auction. In 1801 fourteen guineas was the sum at which the First Folio in the library of Samuel Ireland, the father of the Shakespearean forger, passed to Dr. Matthew Raine, Head-master of the Charterhouse. But these amounts only represent the lower tendencies of the rising market. In 1790 the action of the Duke of Roxburghe, at the dispersal of the library of John

John Watson Reed, an attorney in Ely Place, inaugurated a higher scale of increase. According to a popular story, the duke at the Watson Reed sale looked on from one end of the room, while a friend bid for him at the other. To the general amazement the bidding rose to what was regarded as the exorbitant sum of twenty guineas. Thereupon the friend passed to the duke a slip of paper containing a warning to discontinue the contest. The duke coolly returned the slip with the added words—

‘Lay on, Macduff!
And d—d be he who first cries “Hold, enough.”’

When the bidding reached £37 14s. the duke was declared victor, and he marched away in triumph, with the volume under his arm. (This copy afterwards became the Chatsworth copy.)

Steevens’s comment on this incident was to the effect that the First Folio had become the most expensive single book in our language? Much followed to corroborate this opinion. A year or two afterwards Payne of the Mews Gate by Charing Cross made over a First Folio to the zealous virtuoso, Constantine Jennings, for no less a sum than seventy guineas. In 1812, when the Duke of Roxburgh’s copy again changed hands at auction, Steevens’s pronouncement was signally confirmed anew. For a second time it scored a record price, then leaping up to £100. But other copies soon outstripped this sum. In 1818 at the Midgeley sale, Thomas Grenville, who subsequently bequeathed his library to the British Museum, paid £121 16s. for a First Folio, and thereby created a new standard. The bibliographer, Dibdin, wrote somewhat prematurely that ‘this was the highest price ever given or likely to be given for the volume?’ Although the amount was not exceeded for thirty-three years, it was quickly approached very closely thrice. For the copy belonging to the actor, John Philip Kemble, James Boswell the younger paid in 1821 £112 0s. 7d., and the same copy passed five years later to Sir John Soane for £105 (it is now in the Soane Museum). In 1827 John Dent’s copy was bought by Henry Perkins, the brewer, for £110 5s. It was not, however, till 1850 that a new advance began. In the interval prices varied from nineteen to fifty-five guineas for many fair copies in which defects had been supplied by facsimile pages or by pages taken from later folios. In 1850 a copy, formerly belonging to Sir John Rennie, which had been bought in at his sale in 1829 for £71 8s., fetched £124. In 1851 James Beaufoy paid £141 10s. for a good copy sold with the library of the Right Hon. Charles Watkin Williams Wynn. Three years later a slight advance was made by James Lenox, a New York collector, who acquired at a London sale for £163 16s. the Lichfield-Baker copy. This was the first occasion on which American competition worked with palpable effect.

All earlier experience was belied at the sale of George Daniel’s copy in July, 1864, when his First Folio was acquired by Miss (now the Baroness) Burdett-Coutts for the then unheard-of sum of £716 2s. So high a price foreshadowed the future, but it was not immediately maintained. A year later the Earl of Crawford acquired a good copy at the Earl of Charlemont’s sale for £455. In July, 1867, Mr. James S. B. Bohn, when cataloguing the Shakespearean books for the sale of the library of George Smith, of 21 Russell Square, London, appended to his description of the First Folio these prophetic words: ‘The difficulty of procuring a perfect copy ... is now so great, and the competition whenever one occurs so strong, that probably what our ancestors deemed dear at £100 will be regarded as cheap at £1,000 by our successors. The prophecy was not immediately realized, and George Smith's very fair copy was bought by the late J. O. Halliwell-Phillipps (apparently for the Earl of Warwick) for no more than £417.

In fact no advance was made on the Daniel price for twenty-seven years, till the extreme end of the nineteenth century. In the interval several reputable copies fetched at auction sums varying between £400 and £600. In 1873 the Dent-Perkins copy was bought by a Manchester bookseller for £185. Next year Sir William Tite's copy was purchased on behalf of an American collector (Mr. Brayton Ives) for £440; in 1882 the Ouvry copy fetched £420; in 1884, when the Earl of Gosford copy brought £470, the Syston Park copy, which went to America, fetched £590; in 1889 the Frederick Perkins copy brought £415. It was in New York in 1891 that the latest scale of increase was inaugurated. At the sale of Mr. Brayton Ives' library there in March, 1891, his copy, formerly the Tite copy, beat the existing record at the sum of £840 (£4,200). This volume now belongs to Mr. W. A. White, of New York. Thenceforth prices mounted rapidly. In June, 1899, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York, acquired privately of a London bookseller a First Folio for more than £1,000. Next month an absolutely new record was publicly achieved by a British buyer, Mr. B. B. MacGeorge, of Glasgow, who paid at Christie's for the Belleroche copy no less than £1,700. This sum has as yet been exceeded only once, and then in a very small degree. In London on July 16, 1901, again at Christie's, the Dormer-Hunter copy was bought by Mr. Bernard Quaritch, junior, for £1,720, which is the highest price that has been reached (this copy is now in New York). These two transactions remain exceptional. A good copy fetched at the Ashburnham sale no more than £185 in 1899, and, although in March, 1902, a moderate copy—belonging to Mr. G. B. Baker-Wilbraham—brought £220, the prices of inferior copies have not averaged during the last ten years more than £200. But £1,000 or £1,100 may at the moment be regarded as the average price for good complete copies, when they are subjected to sale-room competition either in New York or London. At the sale in New York, on March 20, 1900, of the late Augustin Daly's library, his First Folio fetched £1,080 (£5,400), and another in the library of the late Colonel Edward George Hibbert brought £1,070 at Sotheby's on April 12, 1902.

The precise sums at which copies of the First Folio change hands at auctions depend to a large extent on the accidents of sale-room competition. But, generally speaking, the price may be roughly held to be governed by the condition of the copy sold. Few books vary more in this respect. A very small number of copies survive in their original, unsophisticated form, and only one or two are still in the original binding. Time has laid one or more less heavy hand on all but a very few surviving copies; most of them bear sullying marks of age and usage. As a rule the preliminary leaves, especially the fly-leaf containing Ben Jonson's lines on the portrait, the title-page and the last leaf, have been damaged or altogether lost. Not one copy in every twenty that survive retains the original fly-leaf, and only one in every fifteen copies possesses the last leaf and title-page uninjured. Steevens attributes much of the discoloration, that commonly characterizes the book, to the fact that it was a customary possession in country houses during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and was ordinarily kept on the table in the hall at which the household was wont to take its meals. Steevens claimed often to detect scraps of food, especially thin flakes of piecrust, between the leaves of copies that he examined, and assigned many stains to spilt drink.
To obliterate by artifice the injuries that copies of the First Folio suffered, from either age or rough handling, became as early as Steevens’s day the resolute endeavour of booksellers. About 1780 Steevens wrote—

‘Every possible adulteration has of late years been practised in fitting up copies of this book for sale. When leaves have been wanting they have been reprinted with battered types, and foiled into vacancies, without notice of such defects and the remedies applied to them. When the title has been lost, a spurious one has been fabricated, with a blank space left for the head of Shakspere, afterwards added from the second, third, or fourth impression. To conceal these frauds, thick vermilion lines have been usually drawn over the edges of the engravings, which would otherwise have betrayed themselves when let into a supplemental page, however crassly it was lined at the back and discoloured with tobacco-water till it had assumed the true “jaune antique.” Sometimes leaves have been inserted from the Second Folio, and, in a known instance, the entire play of “Cymbeline,” the genuine date at the end of it [1632] having been altered into 1623.’

Since Steevens’s day such practices have become habitual, but as a rule they are frankly acknowledged by booksellers, and few endeavours are made to represent imperfect copies that have been repaired to be in a perfect and original state.

The most difficult and expensive mode of repairing an imperfect copy is to supply its defects with leaves from other originals that are imperfect in different ways. This is now a difficult process, and resort to it is rare. It is more common and easier to depend on the skill of the copyist. Probably the most successful practitioner of the art of repairing, by pen or pencil, defects in damaged copies of the First Folio was John Harris (c. 1790–1872). In youth he was a student at the Royal Academy in London, and he devoted most years of his adult life to copying in exact facsimile, in pen and ink, the typography and engravings of old books. His copies were lithographed on old paper and were largely employed to fill gaps in old volumes. The preliminary leaves,—especially the fly-leaf and portrait-title,—and the last leaf of the First Folio, which are the portions of the volume that are most frequently missing, constantly employed his pen, and in his own day his success in imitating these pages was so great that some experts confessed themselves unable to distinguish between the original leaves and Harris’s facsimiles of them. Other pages, especially at the end of the volume, often engaged his attention. Owing to failing sight Harris retired from business in 1870, but during the preceding half-century his handiwork was introduced into scores of copies of the First Folio. He had several competitors in the field, but during his lifetime he was easily reckoned first in capacity. Some of his successors are held to have shown superior powers, but none seem to have approached Harris in the extent of their operations.

Several defective copies, which have not enjoyed the benefit of Harris’s skill, have been clumsily made up of late years from the facsimile reprint of 1806, or from fragments of Second, Third, or Fourth Folios. In examining copies of the First Folio and in appraising their value, one must consequently bear in mind all the varied artifices of reparation.

More or less imperfect copies of the First Folio were ordinarily kept in stock by the great London booksellers during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. In 1765 the bookseller, Jacob Tonson, made George Steevens a present of a copy—a proof that it was not credited by him with superlative scarcity. Through many years of the eighteenth century a First Folio was always to be acquired at a moderate price of Thomas Payne, the great bookseller of Charing Cross. Thomas Rodd (1763–1822) the elder, and Thomas Rodd the younger (1796–1849), whose shop was in Great Newport Street, dealt largely in the volume. But probably the dealer who handled the greatest number of copies was Joseph Lilly, who was in business in the neighbourhood of Covent Garden for nearly forty years (1831–70). His catalogues occasionally indicate that he had as many as six copies on his shelves at one time, and it is estimated that his transactions covered in all some hundred copies. Five figured in the auction of 1871 which disposed of his stock on his death. Most of Lilly's First Folios were in poor condition, and he was always a large buyer of Harris's facsimiles. He apparently regarded £100 as a good price at which to dispose of a copy. Halliwell-Phillipps, the Shakespearean scholar, who was constantly buying and selling books in the middle of the nineteenth century, seems to have bought and sold some dozen different copies. Lilly's successor, as the leading dealer in the First Folio, was Bernard Quaritch, who was in business in London between 1847 and 1899. As many as fifty copies probably passed through Quaritch's hands. His chief competitors were James Toovey of Piccadilly and Frederick Startridge Ellis of Bond Street. Of late years, few booksellers of repute either in London or New York have failed at one time or another to secure copies for sale.

INTRODUCTION

Several attempts have been made in the past century to determine the number of extant copies of the volume and the names of their present owners, but none of these preceding endeavours have been carried far. The first effort was made by the bibliographer Thomas Frognall Dibdin, who published his results in The Library Companion in 1824. He gave particulars of twenty-six copies, placing three in a first class of perfect exemplars, six in a second class of slightly defective copies, and seventeen in a third class of imperfect copies. He also mentioned fourteen other copies of which he knew by hearsay only.

About 1840 the bookseller Thomas Rodd the younger began a list which he estimated to reach eighty in number, but he died without completing it, and no trace of it survives. In 1852, in 1853, and in 1877, correspondents in Notes and Queries urged, quite independently of one another, the systematic execution of the task, but little came of their suggestions. Henry George Bohn in 1863, in his revised edition of Lowndes's Bibliographical Manual (part viii), cursorily mentioned thirty-nine copies, depending for his knowledge of nearly all on sale-catalogues, dated between 1878 and 1868, with the result that several appear more than once. Allibone, in his Dictionary of English and American Authors (Philadelphia, 1870, vol. iii), reprinted Bohn's entries without corroboration, but vaguely added four. In 1897 Mr. Holcombe Ingleby contributed to Notes and Queries a list of some forty-five copies which he believed to be either in England or America; to that list some ten additions were made by subsequent correspondents to the periodical. Mr. Ingleby's list was manifestly incomplete and was occasionally inaccurate; some of the owners named had parted with their copies, some persons who were credited with ownership of a First Folio possessed one of the later Folios only, while others had never acquired any Shakespeare Folio at all. None the less Mr. Ingleby's remains the completest attempt at a Census which has been published before that which is undertaken here. In America an endeavor to enumerate copies in that country was made in 1874 by the learned librarian of Harvard College, the late Mr. Justin Winsor. He noticed nineteen copies, of which one, assigned to Asbury University, Greencastle, Ind., has proved on further investigation by me to be a late facsimile. Mr. Winsor's results were published in his valuable but little-known Bibliography of Original Quartos and Folios of Shakespeare: with particular reference to copies in America, Boston, 1875, 4to. A later account of First Folios in New York City alone was given by Mr. William H. Fleming in Shakespeareana for March, 1888—a periodical published in Philadelphia. Mr. Fleming described thirteen copies with much munificence.

Most of the copies have changed hands since their publication in 1623 with a frequency, often with a secrecy, and invariably with an absence of detailed records that present serious stumbling-blocks to the bibliographical pedigree-maker. It is rare for extant copies to bear the marks of successive ownership. Only a few declare the name of the present owner's immediate predecessor. Neither book-plates nor inscriptions giving names of former possessors are commonly found in First Folios. The current methods of restoration and re-binding seem to be responsible for the removal of evidence of former ownership. It is consequently seldom that the past history of a copy can be fully recovered. At times notices of the dimensions or of the binding, or of some peculiar typographical feature, which appear in old sale-catalogues or in bibliographical compilations, furnish a clue which enables the investigator to trace the career of a copy backwards for some distance, but in the vast number of cases the restoration to which the copy has been subjected, and the effacement of book-plates and of earlier owners' names, have destroyed all opportunities of identification. The precise recent fortunes of many copies, to which early records attach historical interest, elude research.

Many persons of historical importance are known to have been among the purchasers or early owners of the First Folio soon after its publication, but it is in less than six cases that the pedigree of a copy can be ascertained from the beginning. One copy was acquired in 1623 by the Spanish Ambassador at the English Court, Count Gondomar, and was handed down as an heirloom to his descendants in Spain. It was examined some sixty years ago by the late Señor Gayangos, while in the possession of a representative of the ancient Gondomar family at the Casa del Sol at Valladolid. Gayangos reported that it contained many MS. interpolations in English, often in verse. Although the library at the Casa del Sol to which the volume belonged is stated to be still intact, it is now neglected, and of late years endeavors to find the volume there have proved unsuccessful. Among the copies which figure in this Census, those belonging to the Earl of Ellesmere, to Mr. Francis Alexander Newdigate, M.P., of Arbury, Warwickshire (nephew and heir of Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Newdigate-Newdegate, whose death has taken place while these pages have been passing through the press), and to Mr. E. E. Harcourt Vernon, alone seem to have been from the first in the hands of the family which now possesses them. The copy acquired by Bishop John Cosin in the early years of the seventeenth century was bequeathed by him in 1672 to Durham Cathedral Library, where it still remains. Other very early owners whose First Folios, cited below, were long the property of their descendants, although the owner of the Barberini Palace, Rome, all of whom possess Second Folios only; the Duke of Norfolk and the Earl Fitzwilliam, who have Third Folios only; Lord Hothfield, Sir David Dale, Bart., of Darlington, and the Governors of Leeds Public Library, none of whom possess any early edition, they...
they have now passed into new hands, were Robert Sidney, second Earl of Leicester (now belonging to Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan), Augustine Vincent, the herald, to whom the book was presented by the printer William Jaggard (now belonging to Mr. Coningsby Sibthorp), the first Lord Arundell of Wardour (now belonging to Stonyhurst College), John Hacket, Bishop of Lichfield (now belonging to Paulin Martin, Esq.), Colonel John Lane, of Staffordshire, the protector of Charles II after the battle of Worcester (now belonging to Abel Buckley, Esq.), and Ralph Sheldon, the antiquary and landowner, of Warwickshire (now belonging to the Baroness Burdett-Coutts). The copy now in the library of the Duke of Leeds seems to have belonged to Charles Killigrew, the theatrical manager of Charles II’s reign, and was afterwards successively the property of the dramatist William Congreve, and of the Duke’s ancestress, the second Duchess of Marlborough. It is significant of the serious repute which Shakespeare’s works enjoyed at an early period to learn that two copies, of which the history is distinctly traceable back to the seventeenth century, were originally purchased by nonconformist ministers. The First Folio acquired by Dr. Daniel Williams (c. 1638–1716), the dissenting divine and benefactor of London, still forms part of the library called after him, which he founded and endowed by will in 1711. Another copy of the First Folio, which now belongs to Mr. A. Prescott Baker, of Boston, U.S.A., is reputed to have been the property, more than two hundred years ago, of the far-famed Boston minister, Cotton Mather (1663–1728), and to have reached its present owner through Mather’s descendants. It is probable that Mr. Baker’s copy has had its home in the United States longer than any other, and may be reckoned the oldest inhabitant in the populous and still growing community of American First Folios.

A slightly larger number of extant copies can be traced back to eighteenth-century owners, but only a small proportion of these remain in the possession of their eighteenth-century owners’ descendants. The copy that seems to have belonged to the Duke of Newcastle, the Prime Minister, is still in the library of the present duke, while that formerly in the hands of the first Marquis of Lansdowne is now in a public institution, the London Institution. The copies on which the great commentators of the eighteenth century worked—Sir Thomas Hanmer, Lewis Theobald, Edward Capell, George Steevens, Edmund Malone—are all identifiable among the surviving exemplars, but positive traces are unfortunately lost of the one sold at Dr. Johnson’s sale, in 1785, as well as of that in the library of Dr. Richard Farmer, the writer on ‘Shakespeare’s Learning,’ which was sold (in a somewhat dilapidated state) to Thomas Amyot for £7 in 1798. Luckily Garrick’s copy and Kemsley’s copy, among those belonging to great eighteenth-century actors, are now safely housed in the libraries respectively of Queen’s College, Oxford, and of the Soane Museum, Lincoln’s Inn Fields. But nothing is known of the copy which John Payne Collier reported that he saw in 1869 in Joseph Lilly’s shop, bearing, in old handwriting, the names of Garrick and Mrs. Siddons; it was apparently a gift from the veteran actor to the young actress at the opening of her great career.¹

The libraries of most of the leading collectors of the early nineteenth century have long since been dispersed; and though in numerous instances, as a study of the Census will show, I have ascertained the fortunes of their First Folios by dint of persistent research, I have been baffled more often than I could wish. I am sanguine enough to believe that the copies formerly belonging to the following well-known men of letters or collectors of the nineteenth century figure in the accompanying Census, but my efforts to identify them specifically have not been successful. Happily for the present purpose none of these are reputed to be in first-rate condition. I arrange them in order of the dates of the sales at which they changed hands, and give the description and price from sale-catalogues or from accounts of the sale in newspapers or from bibliographical compilations:

1819. The Marquis of Blandford, of White Knights (imperfect). £18 7s. 6d.
1834. Richard Heber (imperfect). £77 15s. Apparently in the eighteenth century in the library of Basil Pecking, sixth Earl of Denbigh (1719-1800), and sold at the Denbigh sale in 1823 for £89 5s. Purchased by Heber at John Broadley's sale in 1832 for £31.
1840. Bishop Samuel Butler (acquired c.1830, apparently of Thomas Amyot who had kept it for some years, together with a second copy that was formerly in the library of Dr. Richard Farmer); with uncorrected leaf of 'Hamlet,' p. 278 (cf. Malone's Shakespeare, 1821, xxii. pp. 449-50); fly-leaf and title in facsimile, and 'Cymbeline' from Second Folio (cf. Dibdin's Literary Reminiscences, 1836, ii. 966).
1853. Dr. Edward Craven Hawtrey, of Eton (mended). £63.
1860. Lancelot and Henry Holland (size: 12½ in. x 8¾ in.). £91.

1 These copies were all disposed of at public auction. But several copies have been disposed of privately in England during the past few years, and in these instances I have only rarely been able to obtain precise information of their history and condition, and I have been compelled as a rule to leave their present whereabouts undetermined. Some ten years ago the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury Cathedral sold a copy which was long in the Cathedral Library, and the librarian has no information to give me beyond those unsatisfying facts. The Earl of Warwick parted with his First Folio and the rest of his Shakespearean library in 1858. Copies belonging to the late Lord Vernon and to the late Bishop Vertue of Portsmouth were also disposed of privately, the bishop's copy, of which I have fortunately obtained a full description, being sold by him in 1837. I cannot identify these and some other copies of which I have more or less vague intelligence with any of those whose present owners have been in communication with me. I have accordingly entered such imperfectly traced First Folios under separate headings as 'untraced' copies. I have done all I could to avoid duplication of entry in the Census, and have exhausted all available means of research before admitting an 'untraced' First Folio, but it is impossible in so complex an inquiry to counteract every risk of error.

The
INTRODUCTION

The distribution of the one hundred and fifty-six copies, which are noticed in the Census, offers points of interest. One hundred and one may be reckoned to remain in the United Kingdom, fifty may be estimated to be now in the United States of America, three are in the British Colonies, and two at least are known to be on the continent of Europe. All the copies which I have definitely traced in the colonies and on the continent are in public libraries. It is notable that the three colonial copies were recent gifts to colonial public libraries on the part of public-spirited natives of the United Kingdom. The First Folios now in the public libraries of Cape Town and Auckland, New Zealand, were both presented by Sir George Grey, the eminent and patriotic colonial governor, while the one in the Sydney Public Library was presented by Sir Richard Tangye, of the Birmingham firm of engineers. Of the British copies twenty-eight are in public libraries or institutions, and of the American copies nine.

The British Museum and the New York Public Library have now each four copies. The private owner possessing the largest number of copies is Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York, who possesses three,—one of great historic interest. Trinity College, Cambridge, the Birthplace Museum at Stratford-on-Avon, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, and Lord Amherst of Hackney, each have two; but only at Trinity College, Cambridge, and in the Baroness' library are two copies found together in good condition.

The largest dimension of height that is assignable to any of the enumerated copies is \( \frac{13}{4} \) in.; the largest dimension of breadth is \( \frac{8}{4} \) in. Only one copy,—that belonging to Mr. Coningsby Sibthorp,—exactly combines both superlative measurements, but they are nearly approached in the four exemplars belonging respectively to Mr. Pierpont Morgan (No. XXXVII), which measures \( \frac{13}{4} \) in. x \( \frac{8}{4} \) in.; to Mr. Harcourt Vernon, \( \frac{13}{4} \) in. x \( \frac{8}{4} \) in.; to Mr. L. Z. Leiter, of Chicago, \( \frac{13}{4} \) in. x \( \frac{8}{4} \) in. ; and to Mr. F. A. Newdigate, M.P., \( \frac{13}{4} \) in. x \( \frac{8}{4} \) in. There is a sixth copy (belonging to Mr. E. Dwight Church, of Brooklyn) which is \( \frac{13}{4} \) in. tall, although no more than \( \frac{8}{4} \) in. broad. Four other copies reaching the highest limit of breadth,—i.e. \( \frac{8}{4} \) in. (of which one belongs to the Earl of Ellesmere, another belongs to Mr. Jaggard, the Liverpool bookseller, the third is in the Forrest Home, Philadelphia, and the fourth was formerly in the Assay collection at Chicago)—do not measure in height more than \( \frac{13}{4} \) in., \( \frac{13}{4} \) in., \( \frac{12}{4} \) in., and \( \frac{12}{4} \) in. respectively.

Although the present Census records a far larger number of copies than that reached by previous workers in the field, it makes no claim to finality. I believe that I have noticed for the first time nearly a hundred hitherto unrecorded copies, and my success in this direction renders it only too probable that others may yet come to light in previously unsuspected places. Nor, in spite of my efforts after accuracy, can I hope, in a new investigation involving so much difficult detail, always to have achieved it. Such merit as the work possesses is mainly due to the active interest which has been taken in its preparation by owners, Shakespearean scholars, and booksellers in the United Kingdom and the United States, who have rendered me most generous assistance.

1 I print below the actual names of only ninety-eight present owners in England and of thirty-nine in America, but in giving the totals of the copies in the United Kingdom and the United States respectively, I allocate conjecturally fourteen copies which have changed hands in recent years, and whose present owners I have been unable to trace. Five of these untraced copies have long since been in the hands of American collectors, and there is every reason to believe that they remain on American soil. The nine other untraced copies were lately in private libraries in the United Kingdom. From information given me (in a less definite form than I could wish) by London booksellers I infer that at least six of these have now passed to American owners. It will thus be seen how my figures are reached.
assistance. Occasional help has also reached me from librarians or students in Germany and Italy and in the British Colonies. The plan that was adopted at the outset was to forward to persons who, there was reason to believe, might own or have access to a copy of the First Folio, a printed schedule of inquiries, with a request that it should be filled up and returned to me. In only a trifling number of instances did my application fail to elicit the required response, and the correspondence that ensued has been consequently large. Very often information was sent to me spontaneously without any direct application on my part. In many cases owners of copies in England placed them freely at my disposal for purposes of a personal examination. One owner, Mr. R. J. Walker, of St. Paul's School, London, entrusted his copy, which is exceptionally fine, to my own keeping, during most of the period that I have been engaged on the work.

I regret that limits of space prevent me from acknowledging in detail all who have lent a hand to this research, but I feel it incumbent on me to specify some of my helpers. Two citizens of the United States have during the past eighteen months most energetically seconded my endeavours to acquire information about the copies now in America. Miss M. E. Blatchford, of Cambridge, U.S.A., herself the owner of a valuable First Folio, and Mr. W. H. Fleming, of New York, the Shakespearean critic, have devoted themselves to the work with great enthusiasm, and without their co-operation my results, as far as the United States are concerned, must have been far less perfect than they are. Through the good offices of Miss Blatchford, Mrs. Justin Winsor, the widow of the well-known Harvard librarian, presented to me some manuscript notes on the subject made by her husband, as well as the unbound sheets of his Bibliography of original ... Folios of Shakespeare (1895), of which no copy was accessible to me in London. I have also to thank the trustees of the Boston Public Library, and the librarian, Mr. James L. Whitney, for lending me one of the twenty privately printed copies of The Description of the First Folio Edition of the Plays of Shakespeare, now in the Collection of T. P. Barton, New York, 1862. No copy of this rare pamphlet, which narrates all that is known of the interesting Barton copy in the Boston Public Library, was to be found in England, when I undertook this research. At the request of the Boston trustees, as soon as I had finished with the copy which they had kindly lent me, I handed it on their behalf to the trustees of the British Museum.

Minute descriptions of the four First Folios in the New York Public Library were furnished to me by Mr. Victor H. Palsits. Very detailed particulars of the Phoenix copy in Columbia University Library were forwarded by Mr. Charles Alexander Nelson, A.M., the reference librarian. Mr. George Parker Winship, of the John Carter Brown Library, Providence, Mr. L. Z. Leiter, of Chicago, Mr. J. S. Morgan, Mr. Marshall C. Jefferts, and Mr. J. O. Wright, all of New York, have each answered several inquiries. Among my correspondents in England, I am more especially indebted to Sir Edward Maunde Thompson, K.C.B., Director and Principal Librarian of the British Museum, who sent me full accounts of the four copies in his keeping, to Mr. E. B. Nicholson, Bodley's Librarian at Oxford, to Mr. Francis Jenkinson, the Librarian of Cambridge University, to Dr. Aldis Wright, Vice-Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, to the Rev. Dr. Magrath, Provost of Queen's College, Oxford, a Delegate of the Clarendon Press, to Dr. C. L. Shadwell, of Oriel College, Oxford, also a Delegate of the Clarendon Press, and to Mr. R. R. Holmes, the King's Librarian at Windsor. To The Dictionary of National Biography, to Mr. W. Y. Fletcher's English Book Collectors (1902), to Book Prices Current (London, 1887–1901, 15 vols.), and to American Book Prices Current, compiled by Mr. Luther S. Livingston (New York, 1895-1901, 7 vols.), I owe useful memoranda about many past owners and past sales, while Mr. Walter Stanley Graves (son of my friend Mr. R. E. Graves, formerly of the British Museum) and Mr. C. E. Hughes have occasionally supplemented my researches among old sale-catalogues. But to every present owner whose name figures in the accompanying list, and to the chief officers or librarians of all the colleges, public libraries, and institutions, which are mentioned among existing guardians of a First Folio, my thanks are due for the time and trouble they have spent in aiding me to invest this Census with some title to be reckoned an authoritative contribution to Shakespearean bibliography.

THE CENSUS

In classifying the copies I depend for the most part on information supplied by the owners. Forty-three of the copies I have personally examined, but I have collated comparatively few of these without the assistance of the present owners and guardians. I have frequently been able to supplement the information which has been given me with regard to both the condition and history of the copies, either from the results of my own observation, or from descriptions that I have met with in early sale-catalogues and bibliographical works of authority.

I have divided the copies into four main classes according to my knowledge of their general condition. Class I consists of perfect copies, with three subdivisions (A, B, and C), A containing those that are not known to have undergone restoration, and B and C containing respectively those that have been restored in lesser or greater degree. Class II consists of imperfect copies, arranged in three subdivisions (A, B, and C), each indicative of the extent of their imperfections and the manner of supplying them. Class III consists of poor copies, which are arranged in two subdivisions (A and B), dealing respectively with defective and fragmentary exemplars. Class IV consists of copies of which I have not obtained sufficiently detailed descriptions to enable me to allot them to any of the other classes. In each class and subdivision I place, first, public institutions which possess copies, then the names of private owners in alphabetical order, and finally, when occasion demands it, independent 'untraced' copies about which more or less recent and definite information is derivable from various sources, although the names of the present owners have not been furnished to me. Under every heading I distinguish, where circumstances require it, the copies in the United Kingdom from those in the United States, in the British Colonies, and in countries on the continent of Europe. In each entry I give, wherever I can, firstly the size of the copy, secondly its history, and thirdly an account of its condition. To facilitate reference to the Census, I have numbered the entries consecutively throughout.
THE CENSUS

CLASS I (Perfect Copies)

DIVISION A (in good, unrestored condition)

[The United Kingdom: Public Institutions]

Size: 12 5/8 in. x 8 1/6 in. History: apparently sold for £13 15s. at the sale of Dr. John Monro's library in 1792 and bought by Mudgeley. Purchased in 1818 for £121 16s. at Mudgeley's sale by the Right Hon. Thomas Grenville, who bequeathed it, with his library, in 1846 to the British Museum. (Cf. Dibdin's Library Companion, p. 810.) Condition: clean; bound in red morocco by Charles Lewis.

II. LONDON.—LONDON INSTITUTION, FINSBURY CIRCUS. Size: 12 5/6 in. x 8 1/6 in. History: apparently acquired c. 1760 by the Earl of Shelburne, afterwards first Marquis of Lansdowne (d'1807); purchased at the sale of Lord Lansdowne's library in 1806 for London Institution. Condition: good; preliminary leaves re-arranged.

III. CAMBRIDGE.—THE MASTER AND FELLOWS OF TRINITY COLLEGE. Size: 13 in. x 8 1/2 in. History: acquired c. 1700 by Edward Duke, whose name is inserted; subsequently, c. 1720, the property of Edward Capell, who bequeathed it to Trinity College in 1779. Condition: good; untouched by modern binder; last three leaves slightly injured by damp.

IV. CAMBRIDGE.—THE MASTER AND FELLOWS OF TRINITY COLLEGE. Size: 12 5/6 in. x 8 1/2 in. History: acquired c. 1840 by the Rev. William Grylls, of Polaboe Park, Exeter, who bequeathed it to Trinity College in 1863. Condition: re-bound in morocco; the three first and last leaves slightly repaired.

[The United Kingdom: Private Owners]

V. THE BARONESS BURDETT-COUTTS, 1 STRATTON STREET, LONDON. Size: 12 5/6 in. x 8 5/6 in. History: acquired c. 1800 by Daniel Moore, F.S.A., who left it to William H. Booth. Booth bequeathed it to John Gage Rokewode, the antiquary, who sold it c. 1840 to the London bookseller, William Pickering; it was acquired of Pickering by George Daniel in 1841 for £100, and was purchased at Daniel's sale in 1864 by the present owner for £716 2s., the highest price any copy had then reached. (Cf. Dibdin's Library Companion, pp. 809-10.) Condition: very clean; bound by Baumgartner and kept in wooden carved casket, made from a fragment of Herne's Oak in Windsor Park, which was presented to the Baroness by Queen Victoria after the tree fell in 1863.

VI. EARL OF CARYSFORT, ELTON HALL, PETERBOROUGH. Size: 12 5/6 in. x 8 5/6 in. History: acquired c. 1870 by Frederic Ouvry, F.S.A., at sale of whose library in 1882 it was bought for £420 by Bernard Quaritch. Quaritch advertised it for sale in Athenaeum 1888 for £888. Purchased of Quaritch by present owner in 1888. Condition: clean; bound in red morocco by Clarke and Bedford c. 1866; preliminary pages re-arranged.

VII. THE EARL OF CRAWFORD, K.T., HAIGH HALL, LANCASTER. Size: 12 5/6 in. x 8 5/6 in. History: acquired by Earl of Charlemont c. 1820; sold at the sale of that earl's library in August—September, 1855, for £435 to F. S. Ellis, who sold it two months later for £125 to the eighth Earl of Crawford, the present owner's father. Condition: good, despite signs of use; bound in old red morocco; fly-leaf mounted; last figure 3 of date on title in facsimile.
THE CENSUS

VIII. CAPTAIN GEORGE LINDSAY HOLTFORD, C.I.E., M.V.O., DORCHESTER HOUSE, PARK LANE, LONDON. Size: 12\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{1}{4} in. History: possibly the "very fine copy" sold in 1827 at the sale of James Beaton's library for £26 15s. 6d. Purchased c 1840 by Robert Stayner Holford, present owner's father, for £230. Condition: clean throughout; title-page mounted on a guard at the back.

IX. ALFRED HENRY HUTH, ESQ., BIDDESDEN MANOR, ANDOVER. Size: 12\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: purchased c 1792 by Henry Constantine Jennings, a well-known collector (1771-1819), for 70 guineas of Thomas Payne, the bookseller; acquired c 1819 by George Hibbert, of Portland Place, London, at whose sale in 1829 it passed for £85 1s. to John Wilks. In 1847, Wilks sold it for £155 to John Dunn Gardner, at whose sale in 1854 it was purchased by Henry Huth, the present owner's father, for £230. Condition: clean; in 18th century russet leather binding; small portion of margin of the title page.

X. BERNARD BUCHANAN MACGREGOR, ESQ., GLASGOW. Size: 12\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: long in the French family of Belleroche, which settled for a time in England after the revocation of the edict of Nantes. Subsequently owned by a member of the family residing near Brussels; sold by him at Christie's Sale-rooms in London in July, 1899, to present owner for £1,700.

XI. BOSTON.—THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—THE BARTON COLLECTION. Size: 13\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: acquired in 1845 of Thomas Rodd, the London bookseller, for £110, by T. P. Barton, of New York. Bequeathed by Barton to the Boston Public Library in 1876. ( Cf. Description of a copy of the First Folio Edition of Shakespeare, now in the collection of T. P. Barton, New York; 1860—twenty copies printed privately.) Condition: clean, unwashed; bound in red morocco by Charles Lewis for Rodd in 1845; some pages repaired. Rodd told Barton that only three copies—the Grenville copy, the Bridgewater House copy, and the Baroness Burdett-Coutts' Daniel copy—were in superior condition. Two cancelled leaves of 'As You Like It' form part of the volume, and each bears the same erroneous numbering 203-194. Two corrected leaves of 'As You Like It' (pp. 193-4 and 203-4) were inserted by Rodd from another genuine copy in 1845 to accompany the cancelled proofs of these leaves, which alone originally formed part of this copy. (Cf. Nos. XXIX and CII, infra.)

XII. PROPPITENCE, R. I.—JOHN CARTER BROWN LIBRARY. Size: 13\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: acquired c 1870 by Robert Samuel Turner, of London. Privately disposed of by Turner in 1885 to F. S. Ellis, bookseller, of Bond Street, who sold it to Mrs. John Carter Brown, of Providence. Condition: clean; some leaves untrimmed; bound in dull red morocco by Bedford.

XIII. CHARLES SCRIBNER, ESQ., NEW YORK. Size: 13\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: owned c 1860 by the twelfth Lord Dormer, of Grove Park, Warwick, who died 1900, leaving it to his daughter, Mrs. H. G. V. Hunter, of Mawley Hall, Shropshire. Sold at Christie's to Bernard Quaritch, jun., July 16, 1901, for £1,720. Subsequently purchased of Quaritch by present owner. Condition: clean; bound by Bedford; bottom corner of fly-leaf and last three leaves slightly repaired.

XIV. WILLIAM AUGUSTUS WHITE, ESQ., BROOKLYN, NEW YORK. Size: 12\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: acquired by Sir William Tite c 1830. Sold at the Tite sale in 1874 for £440. It subsequently passed to America, where it has been owned successively by Eugene N. Robinson of New York, by Mr. Cooke of Rhode Island, and by Brayton Ives of New York, at the sale of whose library in 1891 it fetched $4,300 (£840). It was acquired by present owner in 1892. [Winsor, No. 11.] Conversion: good; re-bound by Bedford; the preliminary matter does not follow the ordinary arrangement.
CLASS I

Division B (in good condition, but with occasional leaves either supplied from another copy of the First Folio or repaired, i.e. mended, mounted, or inlaid)

[The United Kingdom: Public Institutions]

XV. LONDON.—VICTORIA AND ALBERT MUSEUM, SOUTH KENSINGTON—DYCE AND FORSTER LIBRARY. Size: 12½ in. x 8½ in. History: acquired c 1840 by the Rev. Alexander Dyce, who bequeathed it to the Museum, 1869. Condition: good, but pages much cut down in binding; fly-leaf and title mounted and slightly repaired; some corners of leaves elsewhere repaired.

XVI. LONDON.—TRUSTEES OF THE SIR JOHN SOANE MUSEUM, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS. Size: 11½ in. x 7¾ in., but inlaid in large paper 15 in. x 10 in. History: possibly the property of John Henderson the actor (1747–85), who disposed of an inlaid copy to Isaac Reed the commentator, at whose sale (1807) it fetched £38. The Soane copy was acquired c 1807 by John Philip Kemble the actor, and was sold at Kemble’s sale in 1822 for £112 7s. to James Boswell the younger. Purchased at Boswell’s sale in June, 1825, by JohnBritton, on behalf of Sir John Soane, for £105. Condition: washed white and inlaid; sumptuously bound, with inserted blank leaves at beginning and end, by Mackinlay for Boswell, at a cost of 60 guineas.

XVII. STRATFORD-ON-AVON.—THE TRUSTEES OF SHAKESPEARE’S BIRTHPLACE MUSEUM. Size: 12½ in. x 8½ in. History: acquired c 1830 by Bertram, fourth Earl of Ashburnham; sold with the Ashburnham Library, December 1857, when it was purchased by Sir Arthur Hodgson on behalf of the Birthplace Trustees for £985. Condition: title-page inlaid; last page and one or two others mended.

[The United Kingdom: Private Owners]

XVIII. MARK BEAFOY, ESQ., J.P., 87 SOUTH LAMBETH ROAD, LONDON. Size: 13 in. x 8¾ in. History: the property in the 17th century of the Shakerley family of Cheshire, into which married Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, third baronet; Sir Watkin’s second son, the Right Hon. Charles Watkin Williams Wynn (1773–1850), owned the copy till his death. It was purchased by James Beaufoy, grandfather of present owner, for £141 10s., Feb. 28, 1871. Condition: clean; one leaf ‘King John,’ pp. 11–12, untrimmed; bound c 1780 by Roger Payne, whose detailed invoice is preserved in the volume; six leaves in comedies, pp. 169–180, supplied from another copy and carefully inlaid; fly-leaf and last leaf inlaid.

XIX. ABEL BUCKLEY, ESQ., RYEcroft HALL, NEAR MANCHESTER. Size: 12½ in. x 8½ in. History: apparently purchased c 1660 by Col. John Lane, of Bentley Hall, Staffordshire, Charles II’s protector. Subsequently in possession of Col. Lane’s descendant, Col. John Lane, of King’s Bromley, whose book-place designed by Hogarth is inserted. At sale of the Lane library, in April 1856, it was purchased for £164 17s. by the third Earl of Gosford. The third earl’s son, the present earl, disposed of it to James Toovey, the London bookseller, in 1884 for £470. It was soon afterwards sold through another bookseller to the present owner. Condition: clean throughout; bound in red morocco by Roger Payne; fly-leaf and title mounted; two leaves repaired.

XX. THE BARONESS BURDETT-COUTTS, I STRATTON STREET, LONDON. Size: 12½ in. x 8 in. History: acquired c 1650 by Ralph Sheldon (1623–1684), of Weston Manor House, Long Compton, Warwickshire. At the sale of the Sheldon library at Long Compton in 1781, it was purchased by Mr. King, a bookseller of Moorfields, with two other unnamed books, for £2 4s., somewhat dubious practices being attributed to the bookselling bidders. Condition: fairly clean; old binding re-backed; the arms of the Sheldon family stamped on the sides; fly-leaf re-backed; title-page title-page slightly repaired. A peculiar feature is a mutilated cancelled leaf containing concluding lines of 'Romeo and Juliet' on front and opening lines of 'Troylus' at back; this leaf, half of which has been torn away, precedes a normal leaf afterwards inserted, which supplies prologue of 'Troylus' on the front and opening page of that play at the back. (Cf. No. XXXVII, infra.)

XXI. THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE, K.G., CHATSWORTH, DERBYSHIRE. Size: 13\frac{1}{4} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: at the sale of the library of John Watson Reed, an attorney of Ely Place, Holborn (d. 1750), it was purchased by the great book-collector, the third Duke of Roxburghe, for £3 14s. At the Duke of Roxburghe's sale in 1812 it was bought for £100 by the sixth Duke of Devonshire, cousin of the eighth Duke, the present owner. Condition: fly-leaf guarded; title mended and guarded; portrait on title inlaid. Seven leaves in the tragedies, 'Othello,' pp. 31-1-24, 8-f-in., seem to have been supplied from a shorter original copy; the lower margin of these pages has been extended by the attachment of a strip of paper from \frac{1}{2} inch to an inch in depth. There is the irregular reading on page 333 of Tragedies ('Othello'), 'And hell gnaw Merchant of Venice' has exceptional irregularities.

XXII. EARL HOWE, GOPSALL, LEICESTERSHIRE. Size: 13 in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: acquired c. 1750 by Charles Jennens, the virtuoso and friend of Handel, who in 1773 bequeathed it, with his property at Gopsall, to William Penn Asheton Curzon, ancestor of the present owner. Condition: occasionally stained by water; fly-leaf, title, and preliminary leaves mounted or mended.

XXIII. ALFRED LAW, ESQ., J.P., HONRESFIELD, LITTLEBOROUGH, NEAR MANCHESTER. Size: 12\frac{1}{2} in. x 8\frac{1}{2} in. History: acquired c. 1800 by Frederick Perkins (1780-1860), of Chipstead, Kent, brother of better-known collector Henry Perkins, and like him partner in the brewery of Barclay, Perkins & Co. Purchased by Quaritch on behalf of William Law, present owner's brother, who died 1901, for £415 at sale of Frederick Perkins' library, July 1889. Condition: bound in blue morocco c. 1850; fly-leaf and title mounted; last leaf and few middle leaves slightly repaired.

XXIV. GODFREY LOCKER-LAMPSON, ESQ., ROWFANT, SUSSEX. Size: 13 in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: acquired c. 1870 by present owner's father, Frederick Locker-Lampson. Condition: clean throughout; fly-leaf supplied from another original. (Cf. Frederick Locker-Lampson's My Confidences, 1896, pp. 203-216.) The pagination at the end of 'Midsummer Night's Dream' and the beginning of 'Merchant of Venice' has exceptional irregularities.

XXV. WILLIAM PHELPS, ESQ., J.P., CHESTAL, DURSLEY, GLOUCESTERSHIRE. Size: 12\frac{1}{4} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: acquired c. 1820 by John Delafiel Phelps, of Lincoln's Inn, on whose death in Dec. 1842 it passed to his nephew, William John Phelps, who, dying in Sept. 1881, was succeeded in his property by his nephew, the present owner. Condition: very good; fly-leaf, title, and last leaf repaired.

XXVI. R. J. WALKER, ESQ., ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL, LONDON. Size: 12\frac{1}{4} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: possibly owned by Robert Heathcote c. 1780. Acquired c. 1820 by John Dent, M.P., Leicester, partner in Child's Bank (d. 1826). At sale of Dent's library, the copy sold for £110 5s. to Henry Perkins the brewer (1778-1853). At the sale of Perkins' library, June 1873, it was bought for £38 5s. (lot 837) by Thomas Hayes, bookseller of Manchester, who advertised it at £715 in August 1873. Purchased c. 1873 by present owner's maternal grandfather, Richard Johnson, of Fallowfield, Manchester. Condition: good; well bound in red morocco by Charles Lewis; fly-leaf guarded; title mounted, and rubricated; two last leaves guarded. 'Winter's Tale' wrongly bound between 'Troylus' and 'Coriolanus.'

[The United States of America: Public Institutions]

XXVII. WASHINGTON, D.C.—LIBRARY OF CONGRESS. Size: 12\frac{1}{4} in. x 8\frac{3}{4} in. History: former owners were J. Broadhead (c. 1820, cf. Dibdin's Library Companion, p. 815) and Theodore H. Broadhead, whose book-plate it bears. Purchased at Sotheby's for £210, Dec. 1889, for the Congress Library. Condition: good; few pages mended; fly-leaf and title mounted; leaf in Histories (pp. 121-2) supplied from smaller copy.
XXVIII. NEW YORK.—PUBLIC LIBRARY—LENOX COLLECTION. Size: 12½ in. x 8¼ in. History: owned in 17th century by R. Chapell, whose autograph it bears. Acquired by James Lenox, of New York, c. 1860, and presented to the public with the Lenox library in 1870. [Winsor, No. 9.] Condition: clean; bound by Bedford; fly-leaf and title both genuine but inlaid; a few letters in fly-leaf supplied in Indian ink; margin of last leaf mended.

XXIX. NEW YORK.—PUBLIC LIBRARY—LENOX COLLECTION. Size: 12½ in. x 8¼ in. History: acquired c. 1860 by John Lichfield of London, who described it in the Calendar or Monthly Report of Polite Literature, 1870; afterwards in the library of James Baker of London, at whose sale in May, 1875, it was bought for James Lenox of New York for £165. XXII. E. DWIGHT CHURCH, ESQ., BROOKLYN, NEW YORK. Size: 13¼ in. x 8¼ in. History: having passed through the hands of Bernard Quaritch of London, and Dodd, Mead & Co., booksellers of New York, it became the property of present owner Nov. 28, 1888. Condition: fly-leaf, title (with rubricated border) and two preliminary leaves supplied from smaller original. ‘Troilus and Cressida’ misprinted by binder after ‘Timon of Athens.’

XXXIII. JAMES W. ELLSWORTH, ESQ., NEW YORK. Size: 12½ in. x 8½ in. History: possibly identical with the copy acquired by Samuel Addington, of London, for £360 in 1870, and sold at the sale of Samuel Addington’s library at Sotheby’s in May 1886, to F. S. Ellis for £380; imported from London to New York by Dodd, Mead & Co. in June 1886; acquired by Augustin Daly, the theatrical manager of New York, in 1888. Purchased by present owner at the Daly sale in New York, Mar. 20, 1900, for $8,400 (£1,080). Condition: good; bound by Bedford; fly-leaf inlaid; title and last leaf partly re-bordered; preliminary pages re-arranged.

XXXIV. MRS. GEORGE L. HARRISON, PHILADELPHIA. Size: 13¼ in. x 8½ in. History: purchased of James Toovey, the London bookseller, in 1877 by Mr. C. C. Harrison, now Provost
Provision of Pennsylvania University, for his father, George L. Harrison of Philadelphia, who died in 1885, and whose widow is the present owner. Condition: fly-leaf inlaid; title mounted with inlaid portrait; preliminary leaves and first two leaves of 'Tempest' inlaid and guarded.

XXXVII. J. PIERPONT MORGAN, ESQ., NEW YORK. Size: 1 3/4 in. x 8 1/4 in. History: said to be originally c. 1623 in library of Robert Sidney, second Earl of Leicester (1592-1677). The arms of this nobleman are stamped on cover. Acquired c. 1866 by Leonard Laurie Hartley, and sold at sale of his library, May 3, 1886, to James Toovey, the London bookseller, who carefully restored it. It was purchased by James Toovey's private library by the present owner in 1890. Condition: the original leather binding bears the Earl of Leicester's arms; it was labelled 'Shakespeare Works, 1623,' and had remains of old silk tape strings. Title-page is from another original, and has been introduced into the volume since the Harley sale. (Cf. The Harley Sale Catalogue, 1886.) Fly-leaf which belongs to the copy has been repaired; the leaf containing preface and first page of 'Troilus' is from a smaller original. A cancelled leaf at beginning of Tragedies section, forming an original part of the copy, contains the last lines of 'Romeo and Juliet' on its obverse page (numbered 77 with a signature which is stated to read g g j), and the opening lines of 'Troilus' on the reverse page. (Cf. No. XX supra.) The signs of 'Troilus' differ from those in other copies.

XXXVIII. J. PIERPONT MORGAN, ESQ., NEW YORK. Size: unascertained; said to be 'the smallest copy' known. History: acquired c. 1820 by the Duke of Sussex and sold with his library by auction, Aug. 1845, for £56. Purchased of Quaritch c. 1870 by Robert Lenox Kennedy, of New York. Sold in 1889, with R. L. Kennedy's library, to Lenox Library, New York, but disposed of as duplicate to Theodore Irvine, of Oswego, whose library was acquired by present owner in 1901. [Winsor, No. 10] Condition: title partly in facsimile. Described by the bookseller Rodd in 1845 as 'cut to the quick and otherwise objectionable.' Said in the Duke of Sussex's catalogue to have two leaves torn. Recently reported to be generally sound.

XXXIX. WILLIAM AUGUSTUS READ, ESQ., NEW YORK. Size: 1 1/4 in. x 8 1/2 in. History: apparently bought at a miscellaneous sale at Sotheby's by Messrs. Ellis & Elvey, London, June 1892, for £208. Purchased Oct. 1892 of Messrs. Ellis & Elvey by Mr. Marshall G. Lefferts, of New York. Subsequently sold to Mr. George H. Richmond, bookseller of New York, who disposed of it to present owner. Condition: clean; unwashed; bound by Charles Lewis; fly-leaf inlaid; lower margin of title mended and imprint supplied in facsimile.

[Untraced Copies]

XL. PRESENT OWNER UNTRACED.— THE BAKER-WILBRAHAM COPY. Size: 1 2/5 in. x 8 in. History: acquired c. 1790 by Mrs. Anne Damer, the sculptress and friend of Horace Walpole. Mrs. Damer's book-plate, designed by Agnes Berry 1793, is inserted. Apparently her death in 1828 it passed to Sir Frederick Francis Baker, second baronet, of Lovelton, Totnes, by whose grandson, G. B. Baker-Wilbraham, Esq., it was sold March 20, 1902, at Sotheby's. It was then acquired by Messrs. Pickering & Chatto, booksellers of London, for £620. Condition: somewhat worn; bound by Roger Payne; fly-leaf inlaid and rubbedricated; title mended and mounted; last leaf backed and slightly damaged.

XLIII. NEW YORK—PUBLIC LIBRARY—ASTOR COLLECTION. SIZE: 12½ in. x 8½ in. HISTORY: acquired c 1800 by first Duke of Buckingham (1776–1839) for his library at Stowe. Sold with the Stowe library in Jan. 1849 for £76 to William Astor, of New York, for the collection bequeathed by his father John Jacob Astor (d 1848) to New York Public Library. CONDITION: unwashed; fly-leaf from Second Folio inlaid; first line of title patched up from another copy of First Folio; a few margins patched; Duke of Buckingham’s crest on cover.
CLASS II (Imperfect)

Division A (in good condition, but with a few pages missing, and occasionally other slight defects)

[The United Kingdom: Public Institutions]

Size: 11 3/8 in. x 7 3/8 in. History: acquired c. 1770 for the library of George III and presented to the British Museum with that King's library by George IV in 1823. Condition: occasional stains; generally clean; fly-leaf verses missing; tissue paper pasted over both sides of every leaf; red ink lines ruled at sides of title-page.

XLVI. BLACKBURN. — STONYHURST COLLEGE. Size: 12 3/8 in. x 8 3/8 in. History: possibly acquired c. 1623 by Thomas, second Lord Arundell of Wardour (1586-1643), whose mother was sister of the third Earl of Southampton, Shakespeare's patron. It seems to have descended to Henry Benedict, eleventh Lord Arundell of Wardour, who presented it in 1837 to Stonyhurst College. Condition: good; cut down by binder; bound in russet leather; fly-leaf, and two preliminary leaves ('To the memorie' and 'The Workes') wanting; last leaf repaired in facsimile.

XLVII. DURHAM. — THE CATHEDRAL LIBRARY. Size: 12 3/8 in. x 8 3/8 in. History: acquired by John Cosin, Bishop of Durham, c. 1630, and bequeathed by him to the clergy of his diocese 1672. Condition: good, but well used; re-bound in morocco by Tucker, 1845; fly-leaf missing; title and last leaf mounted.

XLVIII. MANCHESTER. — THE JOHN RYLANDS LIBRARY. Size: 13 3/8 in. x 8 3/8 in. History: acquired c. 1710 by Edward, Lord Leigh, who bequeathed it to Oriel College in 1786. Condition: good. Two leaves (pp. 73-6, sgs. G g g 2) in Tragedies ('Romeo and Juliet') are missing and present a hiatus of 461 lines in text. In complete copies these two leaves are insertions before a regular quire of six leaves (sgs. G g g 2, g g 3).

L. THE MARQUIS OF BATH, LONGLEAT, WILTSHIRE. Size: 12 in. x 8 3/8 in. History: said to have been in possession of the present owner's family from an early date; vaguely mentioned by Dibdin. Condition: very clean; bound by Roger Payne; there are missing the fly-leaf, the preliminary leaf of verses by Diggles and I. M., and that headed 'The Workes,' together with the unnumbered leaf intervening between 'The Second Part of Henry IV' and 'Henry V'; title mended; p. 278 of 'Hamlet' is uncorrected.

II. THE EARL OF ELLESMORE, BRIDGEWATER HOUSE, LONDON. Size: 13 in. x 8½ in. History: this copy was probably purchased on its publication in 1623 by John Egerton, first Earl of Bridgewater, for whose children Milton wrote ‘Arcades’ and ‘Comus.’ It is noticed in the catalogue of the library of the second Earl of Bridgewater (1622–1686) and in the trust created by the last Duke of Bridgewater before his death in 1803. The duke’s trust property is now enjoyed by the present Earl of Ellesmere. Condition: original binding; clean, with some 17th century MS. notes. Two preliminary leaves (‘To the great Variety of Readers,’ and Ben Jonson’s poem ‘To the memory of . . . Shakespeare’) missing. Eight leaves supplied from other shorter copies of the original folio, viz.: ‘The Comedie of Errors,’ pp. 97–100; ‘Much ado about Nothing,’ pp. 105–10; Prologue and first page of ‘Troylus and Cressida,’ two (unnumbered) leaves in the same play with the signatures ℃Ⅱ2 and ℃Ⅲ.

LII. FRANCIS ALEXANDER NEWDIGATE, ESQ. M.P., ARBURY, NUNEATON, WARWICKSHIRE. Size: 13½ in. x 8½ in. History: this copy has been the property of the present owner’s family at least since 1660. An inscription dated June 25, 1660, describes it as belonging to Sir Richard Newdegate, the first baronet of Arbury. It has the book-plate of Sir Richard Newdegate, the fourth baronet, dated 1709, and some words in the handwriting of Sir Richard’s son, Sir Roger Newdegate, the fifth baronet (1729–1806). On the death of Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Newdigate-Newdegate, K.C.B., in August, 1802, this copy passed with the Arbury estates to his nephew, the present owner. Condition: good; re-bound about 1750. Two preliminary leaves (‘To the memorie of the deceased Author’ and ‘The Workes of William Shakespeare’) missing, and a hole burnt in fifth leaf of ‘Troylus and Cressida.’

LV. LONDON.—TRUSTEES OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM [Press-mark C. 39. l. 12]. Size: 12½ in. x 8½ in. History: the property successively of Lewis Theobald (d. 1744), of Dr. Johnson (who owned another copy at his death), and of George Steevens, to whom it was given in 1765 by the publisher and bookseller, Jacob Tonson, and whose autograph it bears. Purchased for
LVI. LONDON. — VICTORIA AND ALBERT MUSEUM, SOUTH KENSINGTON.

Size: 12¾ in. × 8½ in. History: acquired by the collector John Jones, of Piccadilly, c. 1870; bequeathed by him to the Museum in 1881. Condition: fair; fly-leaf, title, and last page in facsimile.

LXIV. OXFORD. — THE PROVOST AND FELLOWS OF QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

Size: 12¾ in. × 8½ in. History: acquired by David Garrick c. 1760 of Thomas Payne, the London bookseller, for £1 15s. Purchased at the sale of Garrick's library on his widow's death in 1823 by Thomas Jolley, F.S.A., for £34 2s. 6d. At the Jolley sale in 1844 it fetched £86. Bought by the present owners c. 1870 through C. J. Stewart, a London bookseller. Both Garrick's and Jolley's book-plates appear in the volume. Described by Dibdin as 'not a fine or perfect copy.' Condition: fair; re-bound in morocco; fly-leaf supplied in Harris facsimile while in Jolley's possession. Title and few other leaves slightly mended.

LXV. OXFORD. — THE WARDEN AND FELLOWS OF WADHAM COLLEGE.

Size: 11¾ in. × 7½ in. History: Jacob Pendrervis was an early owner. LXVI. HIS MAJESTY KING EDWARD VII, WINDSOR CASTLE. Size: 11¾ in. x 7¾ in.; inlaid in large paper 15½ in. x 9½ in. History: acquired £1800 by George, Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV, for his library at Carlton House, which on his death in 1830 became the property of the reigning sovereigns. Condition: clean, but the whole is inlaid; no fly-leaf; the title and last leaf supplied from later folios.

belonged to Sir John's descendants. Frederick Locker-Lampson in My Confidences (1896, pp. 204 sq.) describes the copy and his vain effort to purchase it c. 1876 of its late owner, Sir Henry Dryden (d. 1900), the present owner's brother. Sir Henry figures in Locker-Lampson's somewhat acid narrative as 'Zachary Dene.' Condition: very good; title supplied in photo-lithographic facsimile; fly-leaf genuine though worn.

LXXVI. THE REV. DR. NORMAN MACLEOD FERRERS, D.D., F.R.S., MASTER OF GONVILLE AND CAIUS COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE. Size: 11 3/4 in. x 7 7/8 in. History: contains old autograph of Philippa Smith; acquired by present owner of Willis & Sotherton, Feb 16, 1862. Condition: generally good; fly-leaf and title-page in facsimile.

LXXVII. THE REV. SIR RICHARD FITZHERBERT, BART., TISSINGTON HALL, DERBYSHIRE. Size: 12 in. x 7 7/8 in. History: it contains names of three former owners, viz. J. Tonstall, Joseph Shirgmont, and Thomas Shirgmont. Acquired c. 1780 by Sir William Fitzherbert, first baronet, present owner's grandfather. The book-plate of Sir Henry Fitzherbert, third baronet, present owner's father, is inserted. Condition: soiled; fly-leaf and preliminary leaf containing sub-title 'The Workes, &c.' missing; last leaf supplied in MS.; title and inlaid portrait inserted; other leaves mended.

LXXVIII. LORD GLANUSK, GLANUSK PARK, CRICKHOWELL. Size: 12 3/4 in. x 8 1/2 in. History: apparently acquired in 17th century by the Vaughan family of Trebaried. Gwyn Vaughan of this family married a daughter of William Lucy, Bishop of St. David's (1660–1677), a grandson of the famous Sir Thomas Lucy of Charlecote. The book passed with the Vaughan's house at Trebaried in 1826 to Sir Joseph Bailey, first baronet, grandfather of the present owner. Condition: re-bound and repaired in 1878; fly-leaf and portrait supplied in facsimile; some pages mended.

LXXXIX. THE REV. F. E. HUTCHINSON, TISBURY VICARAGE, SALISBURY. Size: 13 in. x 8 1/4 in. History: apparently in the possession c. 1650 of the Hutchinson family of Owetrethorpe, Northamptonshire, of which Col. John Hutchinson, the parliamentarian, was a member. The copy bears autograph c. 1680 of Col. John Hutchinson's niece Olivera, daughter of her sister and her husband, Charles Cotton the author. (Olivera Cotton married George Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury, and died in 1707). Another of Col. John Hutchinson's nieces, Elizabeth Hutchinson, Olivera Cotton's first cousin, also signed her name c. 1680; she was afterwards successively Countess of Kennedy and Countess of Raglan. The book subsequently c. 1860 passed to a descendant of the Owetrethorpe family, Captain Charles Hutchinson, R.N., the father of the present owner. Condition: fly-leaf, title, all preliminary leaves (save 'To the memorie of the deceased Authour, ' 'The Workes,' and 'The Catalogue'), the two opening leaves of 'The Tempest,' &c., and the last leaf supplied in facsimile.

LXXX. W. G. LACY, ESQ., 52 NORTH SIDE, WANDSWORTH COMMON, S.W. Size: 12 in. x 8 in. History: acquired c. 1880 by Myles Birket Foster, the landscape artist, at whose sale in 1894 it passed to Bernard Quaritch for £35, and thence to the present owner. Condition: clean; bound by Bedford; parts of fly-leaf, title, last leaf, and other leaves in facsimile or mended (cf. Birket Foster's Sale Catalogue, 1894).

LXXXI. SIR EDWIN DURING LAWRENCE, BART., M.P. Size: 12 1/2 in. x 8 3/4 in. History: possibly c. 1800 in the library of Sir Peter Thompson, and sold on its dispersal in 1815 to Messrs. Longman of London for £41; apparently described as on sale by Messrs. Longman in 1821; it has book-plate of William Hartree, of Lewisham, c. 1830. Sold in 1890 at sale of Hartree's library for £115. Subsequently acquired by the present owner. Condition: fairly good; fly-leaf in facsimile; title repaired. At page 333 of Tragedies ('Othello'), the first line has the irregular reading 'And hell gnaw his bones'; cf. Nos. XXI, XCII, and CXIX.

LXXXII. LORD LEIGH, STONELEIGH ABBEY, WARWICKSHIRE. Size: 12 3/4 in. x 8 3/4 in. History: purchased by the present owner's father, Chandos, first Lord Leigh, c. 1832, of Henry George Bohn, the bookseller. Condition: generally clean; fly-leaf in facsimile; title-page made up with inlaid portrait. Pp. i53–6, 237–8 of the Tragedies supplied from another copy and inlaid. Pages of last three pages supplied in facsimile.

LXXXIII. JOHN MURRAY, ESQ., 50 ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON. Size: 12 3/4 in. x 8 3/4 in. History: acquired c. 1800 by Edward Knight, of Portland Place; purchased for £29 18s. 6d. after Knight's death in 1821 by John Murray, the eminent publisher, grandfather of of the present owner. Condition: slightly worn and spotted; bound by Roger Payne; fly-leaf, letterpress of title, and last leaf in facsimile. Some preliminary leaves and two leaves in 'Cymbeline' supplied from Second Folio.

LXXXIV. THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, CLUMBER HOUSE, WORKSOP. Size: 12¾ in. x 8½ in. History: probably acquired c.1740 by Thomas Pelham-Holles, Duke of Newcastle, the Prime Minister. Condition: fly-leaf inlaid; title with inlaid portrait mounted and rubricated; last leaf frayed and mounted; preliminary leaves re-arranged.

LXXXVII. CONINGSBY CHARLES SIBTHORP, ESQ., CANWICK HALL, LINCOLN. Size: 13¼ in. x 8¾ in. History: presented by the printer William Jaggard, on publication in 1643, to Augustine Vincent the herald. There is an inscription in Vincent's autograph on the title to that effect. Vincent's arms are stamped on the upper cover of binding. Apparently acquired by Humphrey Sibthorpe, the present owner's great-grandfather, c.1800. Condition: excellent; the upper cover of the binding stamped with Vincent's arms is in original calf; fly-leaf and last leaf in facsimile; title mended and partly mounted. Last three preliminary leaves, and several leaves elsewhere, supplied from smaller original and mounted.

LXXXVIII. MAJOR-GENERAL FREDERICK EDWARD SOTHEBY, ECTON, NORTH-AMPTONSHIRE. Size: 12½ in. x 7½ in. History: probably purchased by present owner's ancestor, James Sotheby, c.1700, for £1 6s. Condition: good; fly-leaf and another leaf supplied in facsimile.

LXXXIX. MICHAEL TOMKINSON, ESQ., FRANCHE HALL, NEAR KIDDERMINSTER. Size: 12½ in. x 8 in. History: Dibdin in Library Companion, p. 813, apparently mentions this copy as belonging to Roger Wilbraham, Esq., whose library was dispersed by sale in 1829; owned by George Wilbraham c.1830; sold with the library of Roger W. Wilbraham, of Northwich, Cheshire, for £190 in June 1898. Acquired by present owner in 1899. Condition: good; fly-leaf and portrait in facsimile; leaf containing dedication supplied from Second Folio; the words in old writing 'The gift of M. W. Cherrington' cut through by binder.

XC. LORD TWEEDMOUTH, BROOK HOUSE, PARK LANE, LONDON. Size: 12¾ in. x 8½ in. History: acquired c.1850 by Sir Dudley Coutts Marjoribanks, Bart., the first Lord Tweedmouth, the present owner's father. Condition: good; fly-leaf in facsimile; title from another copy partly in facsimile; some preliminary leaves and the last leaf mended.

XCI. E. E. HARcourt VERNON, ESQ., GROVE HALL, RETFORD. Size: 13½ in. x 8¾ in. History: probably acquired c.1640 by Sir Hardolph Wastecyne, first baronet of Heaton Hall, Notts, and on death of the widow of his great-grandson, Sir Hardolph, last baronet (d.1742), passed to the last baronet's great niece and heiress, wife of Col. Anthony Hardolph Eyre (1788-1826), of Grove Hall, Retford. It afterwards devolved on Col. Eyre's daughter and heiress, who married present owner's grandfather, Granville Harcourt Vernon, Esq. (1826—79). Condition: bottom edges much rubbed; preliminary leaf containing the sub-title 'The Workes, &c.' missing; fly-leaf, title, and last leaf in facsimile.

XCII. JOHN CALDWELL, ESQ., PITTSBURG. Size: 12½ in. x 8½ in. History: Acquired c.1830 by Thomas Gaisford, Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, whose book-plate it bears. On sale of Gaisford's library at Sotheby's in April 1889, this copy fetched £198 and passed to the library of of the Oratory at Birmingham. It was bought while at the Oratory by the present owner in Sept. 1899. Condition: fly-leaf in facsimile. The first line of ‘Othello,’ p. 333, is misprinted ‘And hell gnaw his bones’; see Nos. XXI, LXXXI supra, and CXXIX infra.

XCVIII. JOHN BOYD THACHER, ESQ., ALBANY, NEW YORK. Size: 13½ in. x 8½ in. History: formerly the property of Lady Drake; John Lloyd, whose book-plate figured in the copy at one time, was apparently an earlier owner. Acquired by present owner in 1883 by Quaritch, who had advertised it for £300. Condition: good; fly-leaf and letterpress of title in facsimile; original portrait inserted by present owner.

XCIX. ROSS R. WINANS, ESQ., BALTIMORE. Size: 12½ in. x 8 in. History: apparently offered for sale in 1894 for £40 to Ellis & Elvey, London booksellers, with a genuine title which was afterwards transferred to another copy. Acquired by the present owner, July 1899, of Ellis & Elvey. Condition: fly-leaf inlaid; title facsimile.

Size: 12½ in. x 7½ in. History: perhaps formerly in the library of Reginald Cholmondeley, of Condover Hall, Shropshire, which was sold April 1, 1897, when the First Folio was bought by Mr. James Tregaskis, the London bookseller. Sold to present owner by Mr. Tregaskis in March 1899. Condition: fly-leaf, title, and twenty-one other leaves in facsimile.

CXXXVIII. THE ESTATE OF THE LATE ADOLPH SUTRO, SAN FRANCISCO.

CXXXIX. PRESENT OWNER UNTRACED.—THE BURRA COPY.

Size: 12 in. tall. History: acquired by James S. Burra, Esq., of Ashford, Kent, and sold at Sotheby's April 1902. Condition: worn; fly-leaf, title, preliminary leaves, and last leaf in facsimile; many leaves mended and made up.

CXL.
CLASS III

Division B (Fragmentary)

The United Kingdom: Public Institutions

CXL. LONDON.—DULWICH COLLEGE. Size: 12 3/4 in. x 8 3/4 in. History: possibly acquired in 17th century. Condition: much worn and stained; wants fly-leaf, title, preliminary leaves except three, the whole of 'Two Gentlemen,' 'Merry Wives,' 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' 'Twelfth Night,' and 'Winter's Tale,' and all the Tragedies save first half of 'Romeo and Juliet.' The Histories are intact save for two leaves of '2 Henry VI.' (pp. 121-4).

CXLII. LONDON.—REFORM CLUB, PALL MALL. Size: 12 3/4 in. x 8 3/4 in. History: apparently acquired in 17th century by a kinsman of the admiral Robert Blake. It was owned c. 1810 by Robert Blake, M.P., and afterwards by John Day Blake, who left it c. 1860 to his great-nephew, Walter Wren. It was presented by Mr. Wren to the Reform Club, London, Aug. 26, 1883. Condition: re-bound with blank leaves, indicating the missing leaves; wants fly-leaf, title, preliminary leaves except two (Holland's and Digges's verses), the whole of 'Merry Wives,' 'Comedy of Errors,' 'As You Like It,' and many other separate leaves—seventy in all missing.

CXLIII. STRATFORD-ON-AVON.—THE TRUSTEES OF SHAKESPEARE'S BIRTHPLACE. Size: 13 1/4 in. x 8 3/4 in. History: acquired 1820 by Robert Bell Wheler, of Stratford-on-Avon, and bequeathed to present owners by his sister, Miss Anne Wheler, in 1870. Condition: bad; all leaves before p. 31 and many later leaves missing; many surviving pages mutilated; the copy of portrait, engraved by J. Swaine, inserted.

The United Kingdom: Private Owner

CXLIV. SIR EVERARD PHILIP DIGBY PAUNCEFORT-DUNCOMBE, BART., BRICKHILL MANOR, BLETCHLEY. History: acquired 1840 by Philip Pauncefort-Duncombe, Esq., great-great-grandfather of third baronet, the present owner; four leaves in 'Romeo and Juliet' were long missing; two-thirds of the volume were accidentally destroyed by fire at Riviere's bookbinding works in London in 1898. Condition: only 177 leaves preserved in modern binding.

United States of America: Public Institution

The United States of America: Private Owner

CXLVI. THE ESTATE OF THE LATE ADOLPH SUTRO, SAN FRANCISCO. Size: 12 3/4 in. x 8 in. History: acquired 1880 by the late owner. Condition: only twelve plays complete and six defective; the fragments are now bound in eleven separate volumes.
THE CENSUS

CLASS IV

Copies otherwise unclassed owing to lack of full description

[CXLVII. AUGUSTUS EAST MANLEY, ESQ, MANLEY HALL, LICHFIELD. SIZE: 13½ in. x 8½ in. HISTORY: apparently acquired by present owner’s great-grandfather, John Manley, c 1770. Condition: good; leaves cut by binder.

CXLVIII. J. PEARSON & CO. (BOOKSELLERS), LONDON. SIZE: 12½ in. x 7½ in. HISTORY: acquired by private treaty 1901. Condition: good; stated to be perfect throughout.

[CXLIX. SOUTH AFRICA. — SOUTH AFRICAN PUBLIC LIBRARY, CAPE TOWN. SIZE: 12½ in. x 8 in. HISTORY: presented by Sir George Grey in 1861. Condition: clean throughout; last leaf slightly mended.

[CCLI. H. C. FOLGER, ESQ, NEW YORK. HISTORY: apparently purchased in London c. 1880 by the late Norton Q. Pope, of New York, who sold his library in 1895 and died in 1897; subsequently acquired by Robert Hoe, Esq., of New York, and disposed of by him c. 1896 to a New York bookseller, through whom it passed to present owner.

CLII. J. PIERPONT MORGAN, ESQ, NEW YORK. A third copy in the possession of Mr. Morgan is stated by him to be of inferior interest to either of the other two in his library. (See Nos. XXXVII and XXXVIII.)

[CLIII. PRESENT OWNER UNTRACED. — CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL COPY. HISTORY: disposed of by the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury Cathedral, in whose library the copy had been for a long time, c. 1890.

CLIV. PRESENT OWNER UNTRACED. — THE LORD VERNON COPY. SIZE: 13½ in. x 8¼ in. HISTORY: formerly belonging to Lord Vernon; sold c. 1880.

[Untraced Copies]

Copies stated to have been destroyed

CLVII. A copy belonging to Almon W. Griswold, of New York, is stated by Justin Winsor to have been lost in the steamship Arctic, which sank from the effects of a collision on her way from Liverpool to New York on Sept. 27, 1854.

CLVIII. A copy belonging to Mr. J. W. McCagg, of Chicago, is stated by Justin Winsor to have been burnt in the Chicago fire of 1871.

POSTSCRIPT

Information respecting two copies of the First Folio, additional to those noticed in the accompanying Census, has just reached me. Had I learnt of them in time, one of these newly recovered copies would have figured in the Census after No. LXXVIII, the other after No. CXXXIV. I have examined the former copy for myself; an account of the latter has been kindly forwarded by the owners. I append a formal description of each.

CLASS II
Division B

LXXVIII a. MRS. CHARLES HILHOUSE, HARECOMBE, CROWBOROUGH, SUSSEX. Size: 12¼ in. x 8 in. History: owned c 1850 by Benjamin Powys, who bequeathed it in 1876 to Richard Hilhouse, on whose death it passed to his brother Charles, whose widow is the present owner. Condition: fly-leaf inlaid, mounted, and misplaced after title-page; title-page made up from Second Folio, inlaid and mounted; corners of several leaves repaired and text supplied in MS.; 'Troylus and Cressida' bound up after 'Cymbeline'; generally in good condition; re-bound c 1840.

CLASS III
Division A

CXXXIV a. THE MISSES WILLIAMS, LLANDAFF HOUSE, PEMBROKE VALE, CLIFTON, BRISTOL. Size: 12¾ in. x 8¼ in. History: possibly owned originally by John Hoskins, the lawyer (1566–1638), who was the intimate friend of Ben Jonson and Sir Walter Raleigh. From him descended in direct line Thomas Williams, Dean of Llandaff (d 1878), who owned the book and treated it as a family heirloom, leaving it to his daughters, the present owners. The names of 'J. Gurney' and 'J. Harington' appear in the volume. Condition: fly-leaf, some preliminary leaves, and five leaves (including last leaf) of 'Cymbeline' missing. Fragments only of title-page preserved.

October 20, 1902.

SIDNEY LEE.
